There are so many questionable sources from which money comes to the church that exclusion is difficult. Money from the saloon is just as effective for a holy purpose as that received from any source. The Salvation Army has worked wonders with money from all sources. I have seen ladies from the Army enter crowded saloons, pass their War Cries over the bar, receive their nickels, and with a heartfelt "God bless you!" quietly take their departure, conscientious in the belief that great good would be accomplished in the eyes of God with the petty sums received.

J. M. Davies, M. D., Pennsylvania, writes:

Not a cent of it. It is the price of blood and of immortal souls.

P. H. P., Kansas, writes:

God teaches a lesson through Peter's vision of the sheet "knit together at the four corners" and full of all manner of fowl, beasts and creeping things condemned by Peter, but which the Lord commanded him to kill and eat. Take the saloon-keeper's money out of the evil whence it comes, ask God's blessing on the gift and send it on God's mission. God can cleanse his property.

J. C., York, N. Y., writes:

From Deut. 23: 18 we learn that money obtained from some sources is an abomination to the Lord. Will not money made by the sale of liquor, which has brought men's bodies to a drunkard's grave, and their souls to a drunkard's hell, be an abomination to him? If so, it has no place in his house. The question of expediency has no place here, any more than it has in the keeping of the Ten Commandments.

Mrs. P. S., Washington, N. J., writes:

I do not see why the saloon-keeper's gift cannot be accepted for God's work as well as the store-keeper's, the butcher's and the baker's, for he spends his money at all of the above-mentioned places. God can purify all gifts as well as he can purify us for his work.

T. R. Phillips, Maryland, writes:

You might with the same consistency accept money from any evil source, but in so doing you become a party to the traffic, whatever it may be.

Mrs. L. B. Smade, Ohio, writes:

I cannot see that it is any worse to take money from a saloon-keeper than from a church member who rents a building to a saloon-keeper. The silver and gold is the Lord's, and I believe it is right to rescue as much as possible from wrong and put to right use. The saloon is one end of the chain, the breweries and distilleries another, voters who compose the political parties another. Can one end consistently say to the other: We will have none of you?

A. W. S., Springbrook, N. Y., writes:

All these lost souls lie at the feet of our government, who license the saloon. There is the great sin. We take the license money—the root and branch of this corruption. Is it right to take that money? Cleanse the fountain is my theory.

W. N. Fife, Yuba, Mich., writes:

By all means accept it. Do not close the church doors against any one. Who is responsible for the saloon? Do not the people, church members and all, vote for the men who make our laws? Are we careful in the selection of our law-makers? I wage no war against the individual saloon-keeper, but against the profession or business, which the people, in their respective capacity, have made. Purify the fountain, and the stream will be pure. Christ died for all. Keep the door of his church wide open for all.

T. H. C., Unionville, Ia., writes:

No; a thousand times no! God would not receive nor accept it, and why should his church accept it? Let the church read Rev. 2: 14-16. "The friendship of the world is enmity with God" (James 4: 4).

E. J. M., Canandaigua, N. Y., writes:

If it is wrong to accept money from saloon-keepers, would it not be just as wrong to accept it from any of the manufacturers or any of the brewers, or even the men who make the excise laws and grant the licenses to the saloon men, or even the Government, which protects the liquor traffic? The question is very deep, indeed—too deep for me to judge, but God alone can tell where the blame lies. Drink is a curse on our land.

C. R., Chicago, Ill., writes:

I have never found the liquor business to be any help to evangelize the world, but a great hindrance and a destroyer of the human soul. If we accept his gifts, we mean to say his business is all right, and we are partakers of his wrongdoing.

R. V. Taylor, Tennessee, writes:

In public collections all moneys thrown into the Lord's treasury are received without reference to the contributor. The saloon-keeper's family may be members of the church. Shall we reject the wife's contribution because the husband furnishes money for her church purposes? God's ministers are sometimes entertained in the hospitable family of a saloon keeper. In one instance a saloon-keeper, in bidding adieu to his ministerial guest, left a gold coin in the minister's hand as an expression of his pleasure in entertaining him. Would it not have been wrong to reject it?

Mrs. ——, Milford, Mich., writes:

We are building a new church here, and my husband is one of the trustees. It had been his expressed wish that no saloon-keeper would be asked for money, but one day we were exceedingly astonished, grieved and out of all patience to find that our minister's wife had solicited money from a saloon-keeper. Here is only one side to this question. As Dr. Schauffler lately said: "The church, by taking any and every means to raise money to carry on her work, is making herself a laughing stock for the ungodly."

Mrs. Poston, Lysander, Ohio, writes:

Why is not the saloon-keeper's money just as good as any money when Christian men vote for the traffic?

Subscriber, Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

A few years back, the Presbyterian Hospital, in Philadelphia, was offered by the managers of a charity ball, the sum of three thousand dollars; the offer was declined. They would not accept the money from a source which produced evils which they were trying to ameliorate. Their firmness to principle was shortly rewarded by a much larger sum than they had declined.

Since good from evil
Ne'er can take its rise,
Consider well the source
From which you draw supplies.

A. R. Benham, Cortland, N. Y., writes:

It depends on whether or not a saloon-keeper is doing business with a legal license, given by sanction of said church, or not. If with license, then is not his money as sacred to go into the treasury of the Lord as the money paid in by the church that gave this legal license? But if selling without a license, the motive of the donor is probably no worse than that of other adversaries of Christ.

E. C. Cook, Seneca, Me., writes:

Any church that is true to God and human ity will occupy a place of such pronounced antagonism to the saloon that it will never have that question to decide. Donations from saloon-keepers are usually bribes to the church to hold her peace, and not oppose their work; and the church has accepted such bribes till she has largely lost her power, and needs to hear the word of the Lord, "Touch not the unclean thing."

J. R. N., Stroudsburg, Pa., writes:

Accept the saloon-keeper's money. "Every good and perfect gift cometh down from the Father, etc." The devil does not put it into the hearts of his people to give good gifts to God. There is good in every man's heart and God inspires the saloon-keeper to do the first kindly act, as he does every other sinner. To reject the first evidence of good in a sinful man, no matter what his business may be, will have the tendency to harden his heart toward everything that is good, and drive him away from God. He does not look upon the money, but upon the heart. Accept the sinner's money and leave God to judge.

E. E. M., Cedral, S. L. P., Mex., writes:

If all professing Christians who have the right to vote should cast their ballots against the saloon such a question need not be asked, for there would be no saloon-keeper to offer his money to the church.

Dorothy Deane, Detroit, Mich., writes:

Take it! It is the price of ruined souls and broken hearts! Then let it be used to save other souls from ruin and to "bind up the broken-hearted." Take it, and bombard with it the places of hell from which it came! Take it, and if no blessing attends it from its source, let the prayers of the Christian workers sanctify it to its work of mercy!

The following writers say "no":

Peter Dolf, Michigan; Jas. M. Taggart, Ohio; Mrs. Leah Pittam, Nebraska; E. A. Lorbeer, Florida; Dr. D. M. Breaker, S. Carolina; J. N. McClanahan, Iowa; Martha J. Applegate, California; Frank Sawyer, Illinois; M. E. Ross, Nebraska; D. W. Blackburn, Hillsdale, Wis.; Miss J. Dalrymple, Maryland; H. G. Lyons, Kansas; S. H. Miller, Colorado; Mr. and Mrs. Woodworth, Connecticut; Marcus M. Chapin, Kansas; Sarah Freeman, Minnesota; Mrs. Isaac Smith, Wisconsin; Henry T. G. Chapman, New York; John Reed, Maryland; Z. Kingsbury, Maryland; Samuel H. Keagy, Altoona, Pa.

These writers, for reasons similar to those that have been given, say "yes," or advise conditional acceptance.

A "Shut-in," Denver, Colo.; M. A. C., Brownville, Neb.; O. W. Beckett, Illinois; J. T. Hannaford, Arkansas; Joseph L. Racey, Missouri; A. C. McCallum, Minnesota; H. A. Sims, Wisconsin; J. Nipe, Florida; M. E. Orsutt, California; R. W. Bulton, New York; P. C. Cratton, New York; Mrs. N. P. Allen, Maine; C. M. Aherd, Tennessee.

Hundreds of additional letters recently received will be noticed in a forthcoming issue.

A Gift That Blinds the Eyes

H. H. Hawley, California, writes:

"A gift blinds the eyes": but the saloon-keeper's gift not only blinds the eyes of the church to her duty with regard to the liquor traffic, but it also hinders the salvation of the donor by soothing his conscience, or worse, by causing him to despise the church for taking his money. Has he not often been heard to say, "I am as good as they are, they take my money?" And do not other ungodly people say the same thing? The simple truth is, no unconverted person is a fit person to have any part in the sacred fellowship of the Israel of God.

Who Shall Judge the Sinner?

F. L. B., Kingfisher, O. T., writes:

All are sinners. Who shall be qualified to judge the sinner who offers his substance for a good work? Shall the passers of the contribution box close a lid upon it or withhold it from a liquor vendor? Shall they be the judges? Let him who is without sin be the only one to accuse or judge. And there are none such. The second building of the temple was with the money furnished by idolators. The exodus from Egypt was assisted by wealth furnished by pagans. Both were God-inspired, and the ultimate effects blessed. May it not yet be so?

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR.
T. DeWitt Talmage
EDITOR.

The Christian Herald

Subscriptions may commence

Remittances

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Foreign Postage

ico. foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals, before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers.

by tardy renewals.

Change of Date.

Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address.

The Name live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,

Consecrated Wealth

WHEN I read the long list of great charities that the late Cornelius Vanderbilt had befriended during his lifetime, I said to myself, that is the way the old bitterness between labor and capital will be sweetened and the war of ages ended. When the people, who toil with hand and foot and shoulder, see that such practical and humanitarian and Christian uses are made of the large accumulations of our great financiers, the world will say, "Good! the more money a man like that makes, the better." Some men are cranks in their benevolences during life, and at the close of it, through "Last Will and Testament," contribute or bequest money to causes that are of comparative little importance. They got some wheels in their head, and those wheels kept buzzing after death in some absurd enterprises. But Mr. Vanderbilt's donations appeal to the common sense and Christian sentiment of all. He provided for the skilful treatment of those who otherwise would be denied skilful surgery, decreed that all possible mercies brood over forsaken motherhood, helped the blind eye to see and the deaf ear to hear, met the inebriate with inducements to reformation, defended the sailors from the temptations of the port, gave crutches to the crippled, appeased the condition of the incurable, and through churches, toiled for the blissful immortality of a great multitude. No one but God knows the full list of that man's benefactions. The story of his kindnesses will make a rattling in many a money-safe, and a rustling in thousands of blank check books. Writing these words before his heirs have gathered to hear his will read, I dare not prophesy how largely this man has provided for the relief of the suffering, and the education of the ignorant, and the reclamation of the wandering, and the saving of the lost. I would not be at all surprised if the unrolling of that important document would sound like the flapping of a wing of one of the apocalyptic angels. But I am not now speaking of anything that may be post-mortem, but of that which was ante-mortem. There is many a man who has kept his money as long as he could keep it, and then when he had to die he has made some charitable institution his legatee. When death met him he practically said, "Well, if I must, I must, and now, Bible Society, you take so many thousand, and Reformatory Institutions, you take so many thousand." The fact is, that if that man had had four or five stout pockets in his shroud, he would have taken all his wealth with him. It seems that often a donation in a "last will and testament" is merely an attempt to bribe the ferryman of the River Styx to land the man in celestial instead of infernal regions. A skinflint when he leaves this world, he expects to be hailed on the other shore as a George Peabody.

Avarice kills more than war. Most men never get enough. There is great excitement in a chase in the fields and many an old hunter's heart has throbbed at the baying of the hounds; but there is one kind of chase that is exhausting and deathful. Many a man with a large fortune behind him has called up all his past dollars as a pack of hounds, to go out with him and hunt up more dollars before he dies. Hark away! the old hunter and all the hounds! Hotter and hotter the chase. Closer on the track and closer on the track, the old man a little ahead and his dollars following on like a pack of hounds. Now they are coming in at the death, the dollar only a little way ahead, and the old man with pale cheek and panting breath, and shrivelled arm clutches for the dollar just as it turns on its track, and missing it, he still pursues and still pursues, until the enchanted dollar plunges into a hole and burrows deeper down and deeper down until the old hunter with both hands takes hold and claws out the dirt from the embankment, burrowing deeper down until, while he is clutching that last dollar, the embankment breaks and the hunter rolls over into his own grave, while a clap of thunder from a clear sky sounds out, "What shall it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his soul!"

Before It Opens

VERY soon the next presidential campaign will be here. Some of the most disgraceful years in American history have been the years of presidential election. Charges were made against candidates that were never proven. The entire vocabulary of billingsgate and defamation and scurrility was exhausted. The cartoonists killed Horace Greeley while running for the Chief Magistracy. Circulars covered with pictures of coffins, suggesting the deserters that had been ordered shot by Andrew Jackson, were distributed throughout the land to defeat him for the highest office in the gift of the people. Theodore Frelinghuysen, a candidate for the Vice-Presidency, was derided as the long-faced Presbyterian. Abraham Lincoln, candidate for second election, was represented as the filthy story teller and buffoon. Who will ever forget the print that represented James G. Blaine as tattooed with all infamies. Thomas Paine at such a time writes Washington a letter, and publishes it, saying, "Treacherous in all private friendship, and a hypocrite in public morals, the world will be puzzled to know whether we had better call you an apostate or an imposter, and whether you abandoned good morals or never had any." So, in the majority of national elections, pens, and pencils, and engraver's knives, and slanderous tongues have assailed political aspirants. Will it not be well for us to prepare to dam back these waves of scandal and abuse before they get under full sway? At any rate, will it not be a good thing for us to resolve to have nothing to do with either the language or behavior of those who go into such indecent tirade? Of the three or four possible candidates now in sight, no such attack can be appropriate or truthful. In the coming presidential contest, which is sure to be exciting, let us resolve to be suave, and urbane, and Christian.

More Timely Hints About Cuba

As to Learning the Language — Buying Land — Cautions against Glowing Promises — How Good and Bad Soil is Detected printed in Spanish and study it. You will be surprised to find how natural it then comes. Of course as to talking it nobody can learn to talk a foreign language until he is among the people who speak it and who sound the words as they should be sounded. The Duke of Wellington learned Spanish from an Old Testament which he carried with him. One book giving the Gospel of St. John in Spanish and English. The Spanish was good, idiomatic Spanish. With one of those Gospels, learning Spanish than to follow the method of the Duke of Wellington.

R

Now about the land. A correspondent writes me complaining that the reports of the American military commanders, which have been published in the newspapers, have not helped him because they give such a wide variation in values. Gen. J. H. Wilson, the commander in the central province of Santa Clara, recently reported that the value of sugar lands there ranged from three to six dollars an acre, and the tobacco lands from five to fifty dollars an acre. My correspondent complains that this is too indefinite to be of help to him; but General Wilson naturally could not give details, and the variation he reports is simply that between uncultivated land and land highly cultivated.

Another correspondent writes me that he is puzzled because the American officials' reports do not agree in the least with the prospectuses of the land companies. This does not surprise me. The American officials have to deal with sober facts. The land companies, in writing their prospectuses, give a pretty free rein to the imagination. It is the same in Cuba as in the United States. The man who has land to sell naturally paints it in glowing colors, and the company which has land to sell does even more than that. But the American officials do not say that the soil of Cuba is not infinitely rich. They know that it is, but they want to warn American investors against placing too much confidence in the representations of land companies.

If I were buying land in Cuba, from my knowledge of the country I should stick closely to two or three main points. In the first place I should want to know whether there is good drinking water in the neighborhood. Some parts of the island have a supply from deep running creeks. Others have wells which answer every purpose; but there are portions of the island, especially on the north coast, in which the fresh water supply is deficient. Now, the very first thing that I would inquire about would be whether there was fresh water all the year round. And I would want something beyond the mere statement of an irresponsible land company to reassure me on that point.

There is one infallible sign of a rich soil in Cuba. That is the presence of palm trees. These palm trees are themselves a source of wealth to the island. They answer many useful purposes. Wherever they grow in clumps or groves the soil is apt to be good. There are fine stretches of grazing land which lack the palm trees; but an American who does not know much about the country, and is therefore not fitted to judge of its soil, would do better to stick to the regions in which palms are plentiful.

Again, while looking for the palms, I would beware of the mangroves. The mangrove is a bush which grows in salt water soil along the coast. These swamps are naturally not good for anything else, because salt water soil does not produce sweet potatoes, yams, fruits, coffee, sugar, tobacco, corn and the other products which are the agricultural wealth of Cuba. But sometimes, in a tract of land, part of it turns out to be covered with mangroves. So, when a sea front is offered as an inducement, I would want to know first if it is the unproductive soil of the mangrove.

If I were going to buy land in Cuba, I should buy it with the expectation of getting my money back from the products which could be raised upon it, and not from the hopes of big towns springing up in the neighborhood, and thereby increasing the value three or four hundred fold as some of the prospectuses of the land companies promise. There is less chance for "boom" towns in Cuba than there was a few years ago in the West, but the result would be the same. After the boom was over, the land would have no increased value. So many hopes are held out that a small investment in Cuban lands will have an idea that a hard-working American

If he promised me, whether he was an individual or a company of individuals, one hundred or two hundred per cent., I should such great chances of profit for himself. But if he said there was a chance for a fair living and a good return on my investment, I would have more faith in him or his company. But in any event, I would use the same precautions in buying land in Cuba as in the United

CHARLES M. PEPPER.

BRIEF NOTES

The London Sunday School Union is estab-

The death is announced of Professor Bunsen, of Heidelberg, who is said to have been the barracks in Governor's Island, N. Y., was opened

International Committee made the inaugural cent.

An invitation to the Congregational Coun-promised, on behalf of the churches, the most cordial hospitality.

The new Chief of the Winnebago Indians is an Irishman. His Indian name is White Buffalo.

has now been elected chief.

for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. The day

The sewing women of Berlin are rejoicing

Emperor William. He purchased one thousand distributed them among women who were earning a livelihood by their needles.

The American Board has closed its books for the year and finds itself in debt to the sum of were $662,447, making a total of $732,738. The campaign was the work of Rev. W. E. Needham.

deeply intent on the vigorous pictures which he drew to illustrate the truths he was enforcing by

Evangelist Arthur Crane, of Plainfield, N. J., who has been conducting Gospel services in South

North October 12. He is now in Abbeville, where his efforts are being signally blessed. On Septem-

First church, Charleston.

Rev. F. B. Meyer reports having met a man in India who told him of a remarkable incident which occurred under his own observation in Delhi. It was that of the conversion of a young man, his father and his grandfather without contact with any missionary, solely from the reading of one copy of the Bible.

Dr. George Adam Smith, the distinguished Biblical scholar of Glasgow, Scotland, has been invited to become pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Chicago. He is at present Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Exegesis in the Free Church. If he should accept, the General Assembly is likely to have more trouble on its hands.

The average taxation in America has been reckoned as about $8 per head. In an article by M. Pelletan, of the Economist Francais, quoted in one of the late consular reports, the taxes in France

The success of the Zionist movement to recover Palestine for the Jews is predicted by Leon Zolotkoff, who was a delegate to the recent conference at Basle Switzerland. At a meeting of three thousand Jews in Chicago on September 23, Mr. Zolotkoff rendered his report. He said that already turned into gardens and all kinds of vegetables have been grown. Several vineyards have also been put into operation.

Transvaal's War Cloud

TENSION in the relations of Great Britain with the Transvaal approached nearer to the breaking-point during the past week. On the one side, President Kruger withdrew his offer of citizenship to foreigners, who had been in the country for seven years; and, on the other side, Mr. Chamberlain summarily rejected any proposals based on the theory that Transvaal is a sovereign State. He contends that England has never relinquished her claim to suzerainty, which gives her the right to see that justice is done to her citizens in the Transvaal. That claim, the Boers emphatically repudiate, and so a deadlock in the negotiations has been produced, which appears to have no possible solution but war. How serious such a war would be, is evident from the fact that the Orange Free State, which lies between the Transvaal and Cape Colony, has definitely decided to cast in its lot with the Boers. Hitherto the President of that State has urged Mr. Kruger to make concessions which would satisfy the British government; but now that the prospects of war are increased, he has given assurance to the Boers that his country will give them active support. Preparations for the impending conflict are being made on both sides. The British are evidently determined not to repeat the disastrous mistake of 1881, when Sir G. P. Colley and his little force of seven hundred men attempted to hold Majuba Hill against the whole Boer forces. He and his brave troops were annihilated by the Boers, and no attempt was made to restore British prestige. A lesson was learned then, which is bearing fruit now. Men and munitions of war are being poured on a vast scale into South Africa by the British, and the Boers on their side are arming and fortifying their frontiers. A conflict appears inevitable, and so close are the opposing forces and so fierce are the passions aroused on both sides, that a chance shot on either side the frontier may at any moment precipitate it. The situation is all the more deplorable because the questions in dispute are capable of adjustment. Unhappily, arbitration appears in this case to be inapplicable, because the Boers are unwilling to grant the concessions which the British Government regard as the minimum that would be satisfactory. On the one hand, no self-respecting government could permit its citizens to be cheated, oppressed and humiliated as the English citizens have been in the Transvaal. They went there on the explicit assurance of President Kruger that their rights would be protected, that their enterprises would be encouraged and that they would be treated in all respects like the Boer citizens. They invested large sums of money in mining machinery, and they have succeeded in developing the country so that it is now one of the richest of its size in the world. The national treasury, which was bankrupt before their advent, is full to overflowing, yet they are unable to get police protection or the most ordinary sanitary arrangements. Though they outnumber the Boers two to one, and though they pay nine-tenths of the taxes, they are not allowed to have any share in the government, nor any vote in the elections, nor any voice in the disposition of the vast sums they have contributed. It is not surprising that they should ask their government to bring pressure to bear on the Boers to compel them to fulfill the promises under which they settled in the Transvaal. These promises gave them no liberty greater than any intelligent man expects in a civilized state, and it would appear that the Boers might grant the demands made by the foreigners without danger to themselves. On the other hand, the Boers are fearful of losing their independence and are anxious to manage their country without foreign interference. There would, however, have been no objection to their doing so and no discontent if they had kept their promises and dealt righteously with the foreigners who trusted them. That they have not done so is admitted by their best friends, and the present trouble is a penalty on their wrongdoing.

J. H. HOFMEYR, BOER LEADER, CAPE COLONY — MONUMENTS ON BATTLEFIELD OF MAJUBA HILL

In the midst of thee have they dealt by oppression with the stranger (Ezek. 22:7)

Dreyfus Pardoned

Early on the morning of Sept. 20 a carriage drove up near the prison occupied by Captain Dreyfus at Rennes, France. It waited a few minutes and then two men walked to it, entered and were rapidly driven away. They were Dreyfus and his brother Mathieu. They were taken to the railroad station, and traveled thence to Carpentras, where a married sister of Dreyfus has her home. There in retirement the captain is trying to recover his health, which the cruelties practised upon him have seriously undermined. His joy in his freedom was pathetic to witness. For five years he has been a prisoner, never free from close and hostile surveillance. During the greater part of the time he saw nothing but a stretch of sky above the palisade built around his hut. To be free, to see the grass and the trees, to go whither he would without an armed guard at his heels, ready to shoot him at any moment, was a novel experience for him. But the greatest pleasure was the society of his wife and children, who are now restored to him. The bitter drop in his cup of happiness is that he is not vindicated. He owes his freedom to President Loubet, who has pardoned him. To a man conscious of innocence this is a grievous humiliation. It leaves upon him the stigma of being a traitor, which must be hard to bear. He declares that when he has recovered his health he will devote himself to the task of proving his innocence. It may, however, be doubted whether he will get the courts to listen to him. The government, the judges and the army are sick of the case and will be reluctant to reopen it. It was somewhat of a surprise that neither the verdict of the court martial nor the sentence nor the President's pardon caused any of those public disturbances which were predicted. The French people appear to be apathetic on the subject, and a large majority still believe him guilty. On the part of the more intelligent citizens there is, however, a strong conviction of his innocence, and Zola, especially, urges a continued fight until complete vindication is secured. At present it would appear that such a struggle is hopeless, and Dreyfus must be thankful for such relief as he has received from the President.

Saved by a Human Chain

Two boys were saved from death a few days ago on the Palisades, overlooking the Hudson, by a daring act of heroism on the part of two men. A house is being erected on the brow of the Palisades. The six-year-old son of the foreman of the men who are building it, went there with a playmate to see his father. The two boys were cautioned against going too near the edge of the cliff, but they forgot the warning and presently their cries for help reached the workmen's ears. The boys had fallen over, but had landed on a narrow ledge fifteen feet from the top of the cliff. Their position was full of danger, for if they became dizzy they were liable to fall and would be dashed to pieces. The men did not wait to get a ladder or a rope. One of them lay down and twined his legs securely around a large tree. Another crawled cautiously over his companion's body and locked his legs around it. He could then just reach one of the boys and he lifted him up and passed him to other men reaching over to receive him. Then he grasped the other boy and passed him up in the same way. When both boys were safely landed, the lower man climbed back again and pulled his comrade up. Both men were exhausted by the effort, but were highly pleased by their success, and were warmly cheered by all who had seen their daring exploit. Those whose fall has been moral, not physical, are saved in the same way. Men have to go down to them and bring them up by personal effort. Even Christ must humiliate himself and stoop to suffering and shame before he could become a perfect Saviour.

In bringing many sons unto glory to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings (Heb. 2:11)

A Search for Buried Treasure

Claim has been made on the War Department, by the owners of an old mansion in South Carolina, for compensation for damages inflicted by soldiers while in camp last winter. It seems that an old negro told the soldiers a dazzling yarn, full of interesting details, of hidden treasures. They were assured that the former owners of the house, who were very rich, had hidden on the premises, during the civil war, a vast store of gold and silver that had never been found. The house was unoccupied, but contained many articles of value, chiefly on account of their association. The soldiers made expeditions to the old place, sounded the ground for acres around with rods, broke open the house, bored into the walls in hundreds of places, removed bricks from the chimneys, and did $1,000 damage and several hundred dollars worth of hard work, if it had been profitably employed, in trying to verify the negro's fairy tale. But they did not find any hidden treasure. Ministers of the Gospel, who tell men of a heavenly treasure of infinitely greater value, to which they are really entitled, do not find them so ready to listen as were these men to the negro's story. Like the man in the Gospels, they count the treasure in heaven of small account compared with earthly treasure.

Sell all that thou hast and distribute to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven. And when he heard this he was very sorrowful (Luke 18:22).

Latent Habits Revealed

A surgeon in Louisiana relates a remarkable incident in a New Orleans journal. He was sent for by a country practitioner to perform an operation. He found the patient a strikingly handsome elderly man with refined, gentlemanly manners. His wife, who was much younger than he, was much distressed, and entreated to be allowed to remain in the room during the operation. Both the surgeon and the patient, however, objected and she was sent away. "As soon as he took the first few inhalations of chloroform," says the surgeon, "I was sincerely glad she was absent, for he became immediately delirious and struggled furiously. Then, to my intense surprise, he poured out a torrent of hideous profanity. I never listened to anything more brutal and shocking, and he kept it up all the time I plied the knife. After the operation was over and he regained his senses he was as quiet and courtly as ever. Later on I learned that he had been a rough river man in his youth and had obtained his education, made his fortune, and married late in life. It was his constant study to overcome his early habit and he had succeeded until his control over himself was removed by the chloroform. Then his evil habit, so long repressed, reasserted its power." The incident shows how imperishable sin is, and the fearful consequences of once yielding to it. Even after so long an interval in which it had been lying dormant, it became active as soon as the controlling influence was suspended. Every man has need to offer the prayer of the Psalmist:

Create in me a clean heart O God; and renew a right spirit within me (Ps. 51:10.)

Judge me, O God, and plead my cause against an ungodly nation: O deliver me from the deceitful and unjust man (Ps. 43:1)

NEW YORK'S WELCOME TO ADMIRAL DEWEY, THE HERO OF MANILA—THE

The View is from a Point opposite the Fifth Avenue Hotel, and presents the Arch and Grand Avenue of Sculptured Columns in Noble Perspe

T. MILITARY PAGEANT OF 30,000 MEN IN LINE PASSING THE TRIUMPHAL ARCH

Multitude of Spectators massed on either side as the Parade moves past. Admiral Dewey and Mayor Van Wyck are in an open Coach on the left

Admiral Dewey's Welcome

New York Prepares a Magnificent Demonstration in His Honor—The Entire City En Fete—Imposing Land and Naval Parades

WHEN Admiral Dewey, the [illegible] after facing the dangers of the [illegible] pine climate until [illegible] paired, resolved to return to his native land, he doubtless already had some impression of the character of the reception which his patriotic fellow-countrymen were preparing for his arrival. Never has New York gone into such a fever of patriotic exuberance. Public and private buildings were lavishly and beautifully decorated, and bunting and flags were everywhere. Great guns stood ready to roar a deafening welcome to the Olympia and her brave commander and gallant crew, as soon as she was sighted. Surprise and delight were expressed when, on Tuesday morning, Sept. 26, news came that the Olympia had been sighted at 5:49 A.M., off Sandy Hook Lightship, two days ahead of the time of her expected arrival.

The official preparations for the reception of the city's distinguished guest were three-fold, including an official reception, a naval parade and a land parade. At the time when this edition of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD went to press, the programme was as follows:

THURSDAY, Sept. 28. Olympia will enter the harbor and join Rear-Admiral Sampson's North Atlantic squadron at Tompkinsville. Official naval and army calls to be made on Admiral Dewey during the day. Red fire to be burned at night along the New Jersey, Staten Island and Long Island coasts.

FRIDAY, Sept. 29. The day of the great Naval Parade. Led by the Olympia, the warships New York, Indiana, Texas, Massachusetts, Brooklyn, Lancaster, Marietta, Porter, Dupont, [illegible] Ericsson, and a number of torpedo boats and revenue cutters, army transports and hospital ships, constituting the first division, will start at 1 p. m. up the bay and proceed along a fixed course up the Hudson river. The second division or non-naval part of the parade, will consist of a great fleet of steam yachts led by the Corsair and the Erin.

The third division will include a large fleet of excursion boats. On reaching a point opposite Gen. Grant's tomb at Riverside Park on the Hudson, the Olympia will anchor and salute, the Admiral standing on the bridge; meanwhile the other war-ships will anchor south of the Olympia. One of the novel features of the naval parade will be the singing by the Arion and Liederkranz Societies, whose united choir of three hundred voices marshalled as a mighty chorus on the emblematical floats, Peace and Victory, will thus add vocal honors to the general display. The remainder of the procession will then pass the Olympia in review, Admiral Dewey standing on the bridge meanwhile. Then, led by the flagship New York, the fleet will return, the parade disbanding when it reaches a point in the river off Twenty-third street. In the evening there will be a general display of fireworks under official auspices, and illuminations on all the islands, and the Statue of Liberty. The Brooklyn Bridge will be electrically illuminated with the words "Welcome Dewey," in letters each thirty-five feet in height, the two words together being 400 feet in length. These are the largest electrically illuminated letters that have ever been made up to the present time. 8,000 electric lamps are used in this wonderful display on the Bridge alone. The illuminated war-ships will be a beautiful spectacle in the Bay, the night being made brilliant as noon by the thousands of electric lights which dazzle the eye, while the powerful marine search-lights sweep the neighboring shores in all directions.

SATURDAY, Sept. 30, the day of the land parade, opens with the presentation of a loving-cup to Admiral Dewey at the City Hall by the Mayor and other officials. Here the great sea-fighter, whose ears have been accustomed to the roar of cannon and the shrill rattle of rapid-fire guns, listens to the sweet singing of a large band of school children. The Admiral and guests proceed to Riverside Park, and at 11 A.M. the land parade having formed, the procession will start from One Hundred and Twenty-second street, down Riverside Drive to Seventy-second street, Eighth avenue, Fifty-ninth street, and Fifth avenue to Washington Square. Admiral Dewey rides in the principal carriage with Mayor Van Wyck. At Twenty-fourth street, the Admiral, Mayor, and Committees leave the procession and take the places of honor on the reviewing stand, to witness the magnificent pageant of the parade.

Gen. Roe, in charge of the military arrangements, estimates that 30,000 men march in the parade. First come the mounted police, preceding Gen. Roe and aides; then, led by a band, comes the crew of the Olympia, 250 in all; then Admiral Dewey and the Mayor, in a four-horse open carriage, and other guests in open carriages; Admirals Sampson and Schley and 31 officers of the fleet follow, with 2,000 brawny sailors and marines of the North Atlantic squadron marching after; Gov. Roosevelt and staff, with a military escort, come next. Following these are the National Guard, 15,000 strong, the Naval Militia, and a large number of military organizations, representing eighteen other States. A body of veterans of the Spanish-American War, under Col. John Jacob Astor and Major Kieper are next in line, and following these are the Governors of States and other guests in carriages. The parade is expected to last until about 7 P.M., the order of dismissal being given at the Washington Arch, in Washington Square.

The Admiral rests upon Sunday and on Monday leaves for Washington.

Such is the official programme; but it gives only a faint idea of the splendor of the reception which the great metropolis has planned for the hero. For many weeks before the celebration, the work of preparation had been going on, the city having made generous appropriation. Never was New York more beautiful or attractive, with its wealth of decorations than when, thus adorned, it stood ready to greet the nation's hero. From all parts of the surrounding country and even from distant cities, hundreds of thousands of visitors came trooping by train and steamer, until it was estimated that over a million strangers had arrived to mingle in the festivities of the "Dewey Days." Hotels, boarding houses and even private dwellings were crowded with the guests. A centre of attraction was the superb Dewey Triumphal Arch, at the junction of Broadway, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-fourth streets. This is probably the finest and most imposing artistic conception of its kind ever constructed on this side the Atlantic. Its splendid proportions and noble groups of famous naval and military heroes, excite universal admiration. It is shown in the large double-page illustration in this issue, which represents the pageant at the moment of passing under the Arch. In an open carriage in the foreground, the great Admiral can be seen seated alongside of Mayor Van Wyck, the official host. As the cortege drives slowly between the graceful pillars on either side of this grand triumphal arch, it, and passes under the Arch—as noble and imposing in design as any that ever adorned the triumph of a Roman victor—the scene cannot fail to be memorable and historic, and to make a lasting impression upon the minds of the countless multitudes of spectators.

Our Illustrations

As the reception to Admiral Dewey is an event of national interest, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD [illegible] on this occasion to give it due pictorial presentation. Our large double page illustration is the work of able artists, aided by photography, and it is a vivid and faithful representation of the parade at the moment when the enthusiastic thousands in the neighborhood of the Dewey Triumphal Arch are welcoming the victor of Manila Bay.

Through the courtesy of the American Mutoscope and Biograph Company, we are enabled to present, on the first page of this issue, the very latest and most authentic portrait of Admiral Dewey, taken by a representative of that company, with the Admiral's permission, on board the warship Olympia, at Villefranche. During his return from Manila, the Admiral had been greatly annoyed by interviewers and photographers. Especially at the stopping-places along the Mediterranean had he been made the target for snap-shots, and a large army of "camera fiends" had endeavored, by various devices, to secure surreptitious photographs of the Admiral. Those pictures, taken under many disadvantages, were practically worthless.

It was not until the arrangements were made with the Mutoscope Company, with the Admiral's consent, that a satisfactory and life-like portrait was finally secured. It shows the Admiral as he is in reality—a man of strong, yet not unkindly face, with character and individuality marked in every line. It is the real Dewey, whose indomitable courage and cool self-possession, no less than his fine patriotism, his brilliant seamanship and his rare administrative abilities, have made him a nation's idol. And this is now given to the world for the first time on the first page of this issue. The smaller pictures on this page (also by the Mutoscope Company), are two of a series taken with the electrical machine on the Olympia's deck.

Friends of Our Children

The Helpers and the Helped—Results and Promises—The "Good Samaritan"

A [illegible] our Children's Home is over, and [illegible] song and laughter of our little ones, [illegible]

DR. CHRISTIAN E. PETERSEN

[illegible] readers, we are sure, still hold in prayerful, loving thought these children of the [illegible] with us; and will, we know, be glad to share with us acknowledgment and assurance of the good that has been done. The following letters are typical speci[illegible] Proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Mr. C. P. Devare, Supt. of the Abigail Free School and Kindergarten, an excellent charity, well known to our readers, writes:

[illegible] for the great help extended [illegible] of our children a ten days' [illegible] HERALD Children's Home. [illegible] readers to call at our school [illegible] hear them talk, you would feel that your labor and sacrifices had not been in [illegible] ripened into fruit and re[illegible] patient care bestowed upon [illegible] of approval upon that which they have been taught while [illegible] saw and heard only that which was good and true. Rest assured that this work and its [illegible]

One mother writes:

I want to thank you for your kindness to my little girls. The outings were certainly a [illegible] as I was out of work this summer, and the children did not have necessary food, and were run down. I have had a hard struggle [illegible] for this great help of which we were so very much in need.

Among the visitors and friends who have particularly endeared themselves to our little folks this summer must be mentioned the resident physician, Dr. Christian E. Petersen, their "Good Samaritan." The doctor, a graduate of the Long Island Medical College, and formerly House Physician and Surgeon at the King's County Charity Hospital, came up to Nyack to pay a visit, with the intention of staying only a few days, but he became so interested that he practically sacrificed a large private practice among wealthy patrons to give to the Children's Home, absolutely free of charge, the advantage of his skill.

The friends who have helped our children by visit, gift, and prayers have been abundantly remembered at the Home this summer in children's petitions offered there; and we believe that the blessing promised to those who cast their "bread upon the waters" shall be theirs.

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

Our Orphans at Oorfa

Work Among Our Little Armenian Charges Busy Boys and Girls

OUR readers will be particularly interested in these pictures—just received from Oorfa—of our boys and girls there.

Among Oriental cities, Oorfa (anciently called Edessa), seems peculiarly entitled to the prayerful regard of God's people. According to tradition, it was the first city whose king was converted to Christianity: his conversion, following a correspondence with Christ and the apostles. Whether this be legend or truth, it is a fact that Christianity took firm root there at an early date. Oorfa's later troubles are familiar to our readers who succored the persecuted Armenians there, and who readily recall the tragic story of those terrible days, when the people, thinking the sacredness of the place would protect them, sought refuge in the great Armenian church, to which the Kurds, when they came, set fire. Between Moslem guns and Kurdish fire and sword, between five and eight thousand people perished in the Oorfa massacre.

OUR GIRLS MAKING MACARONI

Miss Corinna Shattuck, American missionary and the "heroine of Oorfa," asserting our treaty rights, sheltered and protected hundreds who else had perished, and later began as almoner of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S gifts, the care of multitudes of orphaned little ones. In this work our readers have nobly cooperated, and thus they have a personal interest in these children, our own boys and girls, and their proteges, and they will be pleased to hear of the progress of the work through Miss Shattuck's letter, dated Oorfa, Aug. 22, to the Proprietor of this paper:

Sincere thanks for your letter of June 17, and the check for quarterly pledge of our orphans. But for your generous help long ago, I know not what we could have done. Most of our children are ambitious and studious; some are eager for a course through college, and I shall aid judiciously a worthy few to a start in this direction; but I shall "carry" none of them through college. They will be better men and women for helping themselves. Work of various kinds is regularly carried on by the boys, in addition to which they attend school for morning and afternoon sessions of two hours each. Besides their night work, of stamping, shoemaking and saddlery, our boys have cut the winter stock of wood; they bring the water which comes from a long distance; and during the various repairs and building which gave our more commodious study and dining hall, they did all the carrying of earth and stones. The bringing-in, washing and drying of our wheat for boulgour is their work. The enclosed letter, the copy of one written by Kivore, one of our orphans, to Dertah, another, will interest you. Dertah was with us two years, and while scarcely older than our large boys, and quite their companion, was instructor of a class of younger ones in kerchief-stamping; he is now at home, caring for a family of small relations left destitute. Kivore's letter reveals his circumstances:

"My state is very good; I thank God he placed me here. I hear you are serving as cook, and I am glad you find work. I also cook during our vacation, and receive wages."

Women Builders

Three German women in Chicago, says a Western paper, are building a house. "Doing every bit of the work, from digging and cementing the cellar to making mortar and laying the bricks of the walls." It is such a curious, unusual spectacle that the Elston avenue cars stop at Humboldt avenue to let the passengers get off and watch the women at their strange employment. Mrs. Franz Liebegut is the chief builder, and her assistants are her daughters, Marie and Gustie, aged respectively sixteen and eighteen. They are doing work slowly, it is said, but doing it well, as the building, on a stone foundation, is three brick deep, and no laths are used. The builders are reported as "going about their work with as much unconcern as though building a house weren't any more for women to do than washing clothes or baking bread."

Cecil Rhodes' Sister

Groot Schur, the home of Cecil Rhodes, the man who has been so prominently connected with South African affairs, is a beautiful country seat near Cape Town, and is presided over by his sister, Miss Alice Rhodes. The hospitality of Groot Schur is famous. Some years ago people came and went, staying as long as they pleased. This privilege was much abused, and Mr. Rhodes and his sister put limitations upon it. She and her brother are devoted friends and comrades. She is very English in appearance, being fair and blond, but is a thorough African in her understanding of African statecraft and her knowledge of the country. She is healthy, fearless, fond of outdoor occupations and amusements, and takes long rides, gun at hand, over the veldt and through the bush. In her zoological garden at Groot Schur her collection includes a specimen of nearly every wild animal in South Africa. She is very generous and has many friends among the poor.

A Little Stowaway

Four days out from Liverpool they found him, behind some casks. Only nine years old, he was ragged, friendless, with a beautiful face full of innocence and truth to plead for him. "How came you to steal a passage on this ship?" asked the first mate sternly. "My stepfather put me in. He wasn't able to keep me or pay my way to Halifax, where my aunt lives. I want to go to her." The mate, often deceived by stowaways, doubted the story and believed some of his crew had a hand in the matter. "I will hang you to the yardarm in ten minutes, if you don't tell the truth," he said to frighten the child, and stood with his watch in his hand. Pale, tearful, with not a friend to stand by him, the boy listened to the tick-tick of the swift minutes. "I'll say what he wants me to say," Fear whispered. "Only two minutes to live," cried the mate; "speak the truth and save your life, boy." "May I pray?" asked the child, looking up into the hard man's face. With permission, he knelt and said the Lord's prayer his dead mother had taught him and asked God to take him to heaven. Hardened sailors were sobbing; tears sprang to the mate's eyes, and he caught the boy up in his arms. From that time the little fellow whom nobody owned was everybody's boy. He had made friends and a place for himself through the rich legacy his mother had left him—character and the Lord's prayer.

Hold ye to prayer and truth, laddies,
These be riches the best,
They rust not from youth to old age, laddies,
They shine in the home of the blest.

OUR BOYS AT DINNER

Home Weddings

A QUIET home wedding, conducted informally, may be a very pleasant occasion, especially if the few friends invited are known to one another. It has been my good fortune to attend several such weddings lately, and they have seemed to me in better taste than many grander and more ceremonious affairs. Of course, the marriage service itself is always formal and solemn, as befits one of the most important events in life, but the details may always be safely left to individual choice. If the bride is in white, she should wear white gloves, and the groom's gloves must, in that case, be white also. If she wears a traveling dress, or a pretty gown of silk or wool, suitable for church or calling, she may have pearl colored or gray gloves, and the groom's should correspond with them in hue. I myself dislike to see gloves worn during a marriage service by the contracting parties, and prefer to see that the hands then clasped for life should be ungloved.

It is quite proper, for a small wedding, to dispense with engraved cards of invitation. The bride should then herself write the invitations to the marriage, selecting nice white note paper for the purpose. She may say, "Dear So and So," supplying the name of Aunt, Cousin or Friend, "Will you honor me by your presence at my wedding, on such a day and hour, at such a place. I am to be married to Mr. ——, and we will both be very happy to receive your congratulations then." Or, if she does not like this, see may use any other style agreeable to her. One is sensible, and not singular, who avoids useless expense, and does as one pleases at the time of her marriage, when, if ever, a young woman is entitled to her own sweet will and way.

An English Child on America

Sometimes by the babbling tongue of a child who mispronounces a word he has heard, a happy suggestion is conveyed. Our little English cousins across the water have been talking much about us lately. An English paper tells this:

Little Mary, aged five years, was greatly interested in the story of the Good Samaritan as related by her Sunday School teacher. Upon her return home she gave her mother a vivid account of the selfishness of the priest and the Levite. "But," added she, "by and by a good American came by, and he very soon helped the poor man out of trouble."

Would it not be a blessed thing if we could win and hold among the nations the title of "America, the Good Samaritan."

The Universal Home

The usual large influx of autumnal visitors to New York has been enlarged by the Dewey reception; with houses full and room and board not easy to secure, the stranger of limited means felt more than the ordinary loneliness of the visitor to a great and busy city—where one sees no familiar faces, and streets and customs are puzzling problems. "I am so thankful," a gentle-faced woman was heard to whisper to her neighbor (a stranger, like herself) at a boarding-house table, "for the open churches. I stole into old Trinity to-day, off hurrying, noisy Broadway, and I just knelt down and felt at home in God's house and cried with joy for the pure rest of it." A young woman in the same house returned from evening service at the Church of the Ascension, with flowers in her hand. "Why!" she said, "Wasn't it lovely for them—people I don't know—to put these flowers in my hand. After services are over the ushers give away all the flowers on the altar. There's a sad-eyed girl here, who talks to nobody; I'm going to give her some of my flowers. Thank God for the church that makes home everywhere!"

Our Mission at Cairo

Where Americans Tell the Gospel Story to Egyptian Natives—A Beautiful Christian Work

A BIBLE READING AT THE AMERICAN MISSION, TANTAH, EGYPT

THE energy of Lord Kitchener of Khartoum in the Gordon College undertaking is being fully matched by the American Mission in Egypt, which has just set about the establishment of a school for boys. Hon. Thomas Skelton Harrison, United States Diplomatic Agent and Consul-General at the court of the Khedive, is now in this country, and is exerting himself to bring to the attention of our people the needs and the merits of the American Mission.

The mission-building, adjoining the Esbekieh Garden, stands on ground purchased from the Khedive Ismail. Hundreds of native girls are daily instructed in English, French, Arabic, and the various branches of a common school education. Then the Mission has branch schools throughout Egypt—at Keneh and other places. This institution exists primarily to propagate Christianity throughout Egypt. Its official head is Rev. Wm. Harvey, D.D., who, with his wife, founded it thirty-five years ago. Dr. and Mrs. Harvey have, from that day to this, remained the guiding spirits, and under them they have a band of devoted men and women: Dr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Watson, Dr. and Mrs. John Giffen, Miss Anna Y. Thompson, and others.

The girls' school at Cairo is under the direction of Miss Keil. All the missionaries and teachers are Americans. They are sent out from the United States for a seven-year period, at the end of which they come home on an eighteen months' leave of absence. The remarkable success of the Mission is due to hard work. When a young missionary arrives he puts in five hours a day at Arabic. He is not deemed an accepted member of the staff until he has a perfect mastery of the language.

The church in the mission building at Cairo is very large, and so arranged that half of it can be curtained off, down the centre aisle. This separates the native men from the native women, the latter being completely concealed, in deference to the Egyptian idea in such matters. Arabic services are held every Sunday morning and English services every Sunday afternoon. The large Christian Endeavor Society meets every Sabbath afternoon. Most interesting of all the services is the Thursday evening prayer-meeting, at which Arab men and women, English, Americans, civilians, soldiers crowd into Dr. Harvey's parlor, often barely able to find room, notwithstanding the large size of the apartment and its plethora of chairs and couches. Off in that corner, near the window, sit a half dozen kilted troopers of the Queen's own Cameron Highlanders, their flaming tartans contrasting vividly with the chocolate countenances and tasselled tarbouches of the young Mohammedans near them. Bibles and hymn books are distributed. At half-past eight Dr. Harvey opens the meeting. The young Mohammedans are all attention.

It should not be supposed that the mission is attempting a work of supererogation in its projected school for boys, simply because Lord Kitchener has founded the Gordon College. Viscount Cromer, in his report to Parliament, just issued, quotes Lord Kitchener thus: "The main lines of what, I hope, will be achieved by the college, is to give the most practical, useful education possible to the boys for their future in the Soudan." And to this Viscount Cromer adds: "I ought perhaps to explain that the use of the word college in connection with this institution, is possibly somewhat misleading, inasmuch as it conveys the idea that a more ambitious programme will be adopted than, for the time being, at all events, will be the case." The English, then, are undertaking a boys' school for the Soudan, while the Americans will create a boys' school for Egypt. There can be no overlapping, which is why Viscount Cromer gives the Americans, as well as his own countrymen, all sympathy and encouragement. The late Lady Cromer, indeed, taught a class of girls at the American mission for some years.

"He That Stays Does the Business."

All the world admires "staying power." On this quality success depends. The blood is the best friend the heart has. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best friend the blood ever had; cleanses it of everything, gives perfect health and strength.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Larkin Premiums FREE.

HANDSOME PREMIUMS,
Value $10.00 each, for selling or using $10.00 worth of the

LARKIN SOAPS.

Choice of Writing Desk, Morris Chair, Bookcase, Brass and Steel Bed, Silver Tea Set, Oil Heater, Lamps, Watch, etc.

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL.

Beautifully illustrated booklet free to all who ask. It tells how to earn the Larkin Premiums.

THE LARKIN SOAP MFG. CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

If you contemplate
BUILDING
Send for Catalogue of PLANS containing fifty different designs. Price 50c.
T. W. BAST
Architectural Co.
SEDALIA, MO

It Is a Certainty That Catarrh

can be cured. You will believe it after using a sample of Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure. Mailed free. Address Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 50 Broad St., Blosser Building, Atlanta, Ga.

FREE for 15 DAYS

TO READERS OF THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

300 Instrumental selections for the piano.
350 Songs for all voices with piano accompaniment.

OVER 2200 PAGES.
20 Editors and Special Contributors.

This valuable permanent collection of musical masterpieces can be obtained by those who act promptly at

Less than one-tenth the cost in sheet form.

The most complete and valuable Musical Library ever published.—The Argonaut.

Nothing equal to this and we doubt having in one volume.—Musical Courier. Editor Harper's Bazar.

In a publication, we can recommend.—There's something that will interest all.—The Ledger.

A vocal and instrumental library of rare excellence and comprehensiveness.—The Times.

SIZE OF VOLUME, 9 x 12 INCHES

LIBRARY OF THE ...

WORLD'S BEST MUSIC

New Enlarged Edition of 8 Volumes: 4 Vocal, 4 Instrumental.

Instrumental selections by the greatest composers; melodious, not too difficult, and including popular and operatic melodies, dances, funeral marches, nocturnes, adagios, military pieces, and classic and romantic piano music. The best old and new songs, duets, trios, quartets and choruses upon every subject: Upon friendship, admiration, love, and home; upon absence, sorrow, reminiscence, and revery; upon humor, patriotism, nature, and morality; no hymns, however. 500 portraits and illustrations, over 500 biographies of musicians, and more than 100 new and copyrighted selections by American musicians. The work is planned for cultured homes and sympathetic performers.

[illegible] and	Strauss	Liszt	Rubinstein	Paderewski	Chopin	Wagner
[illegible]	Mozart	Saint-Saens	Balfe	Hadyn	Gounod	Emmett
[illegible]	Beethoven	Gottschalk	Sullivan	Schytte	Handel	Buck represented	Schumann	Grieg	Smith	Bizet	Benedict	Damrosch
[illegible]	Schubert	Chaminade	Bishop	Rameau	Mattei	De Koven
[illegible]	Lover	Bendel	Chwatal	Rachmaninoff	Czibulka	Faure
[illegible]	Moore	Henselt	Cowen	Goldmark	Molloy	Gilbert

IT WILL COST YOU NOTHING To set the Treasury of Music, Art, and Biography into your home: Use the volumes for 15 days. If they are not satisfactory, return them at our expense. If satisfied, make payments as stipulated below.

Special Offer to The Christian Herald Readers.

Send us your application at once, stating which style of binding you prefer, cloth or half leather. We will forward the entire set, charges prepaid. We will allow you 15 days in which to examine this wonderful collection of music. If you are not satisfied, you can return the set at our expense. If satisfactory, you can make your first payment of one dollar, and remit thereafter $1.00 a month for 17 months, if cloth is ordered, making a total payment of $18.00. If you select the half-leather binding, which we recommend, there will be three more monthly payments of $1.00, making a total payment of $21.00. Ten per cent. is deducted for cash payment. We assume all risk. We suggest that you apply at once if you desire to obtain a set of this limited edition. Don't fail to mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Address

ABSOLUTELY NO RISK TO YOU.
WE PAY TRANSPORTATION CHARGES
SEND POSTAL FOR BEAUTIFUL SPECIMEN PAGES.

THE UNIVERSITY SOCIETY,
78 Fifth Avenue, New York.

LADIES! 50,000 Cakes Violette Complexion Soap. FREE!

Send your name and address AT ONCE and receive a full-size cake absolutely FREE. By taking a few orders for our High Grade Soaps, Baking Powder, Extracts, Etc. from friends you can easily earn a TEA, DINNER OR TOILET SET, WATCH, SEWING MACHINE, or 100 other Premiums. No Money Required in advance. We pay freight and ship your premium at once.

The American Importing and Mfg. Co. 31 Walnut St., Cincinnati, O.

Acetylene Gas Generator
FOR LIGHTING
All Homes, Churches, Halls, Stores, etc.
SAVING 50 PER CENT IN COST

Cheaper, Cooler, Better and Safer than Kerosene and preferable to any artificial light. Send for information. ALL Goods GUARANTEED BY

J. B. COLT & CO.,
Dept. 29, 3 West 29th Street, N.Y. City
Chicago Atlanta San Francisco

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE

More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Color greatly improved. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO MOSS GROWING. CLEANING. NO CRUMBLING CRACKING.
THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.,
70-90 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS,
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

PHONOGRAPH RECORDS
MADE BY.... IRA D. SANKEY

"The Ninety and Nine,"
"Where is my Wand'ring Boy,"
"When the Mists Have Rolled Away,"
"Saved by Grace," and others of the famous

MOODY AND SANKEY HYMNS.

Price, $1 per record; $11 per dozen.
Can be HEARD at ALL Phonograph Dealers.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO. 135 FIFTH AVE. NEW YORK.

New England Conservatory of Music

The leading musical institution of America. Founded 1853. Unsurpassed advantages in composition, vocal and instrumental music, and elocution.
George W. Chadwick, Musical Director.
Pupils received at any time. For prospectus address
FRANK W. HALE, General Manager, Boston, Mass.

EASTMAN always secures situations for graduates of Business course. Instruction by mail or in person. No vacations. Expenses low. Typewriting, Penmanship, etc. Send for Catalogue free.
C. G. GAINES, Box 236, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

...IN HIS STEPS...

By Charles M. Sheldon. We will send this wonderful book, bound in paper cover for 15 cents each, or $1.50 per dozen; bound in cloth, 50 cents per copy. Address J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 55 Rose St., New York.

$3.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working for me. People preferred who can furnish their own team. Applicants must furnish satisfactory reference as to character and standing. B. F. Johnson 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

The Silver Anniversary

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union to Celebrate, at Seattle, Wash., the Twenty-fifth Anniversary of its Organization

AMONG the conventions of this fall, one of the most interesting is that to be held on October 20th, at Seattle, Washington, to celebrate the twenty fifth anniversary of the organization of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Delegates are expected from fifty-four different auxiliary States and five Territorial Unions, besides those from the District of Columbia and Hawaii. They will represent the largest Society in the world, ever organized, that is composed exclusively of women and conducted by them. It has a local union in over ten thousand cities and a union in every State and Territory of the country. The delegates from the East with those from Minnesota and other States in that longitude are to assemble in Chicago on Friday evening Oct. 13, where a special white ribbon train will be made up for them and decorated within and without. In this they will be conveyed, without change, to their distant destination. Only one break is to be made on the journey and that out of respect for the religious scruples of the delegates. When the white-ribbon train reaches Fargo, N. D., on Saturday evening Oct. 14, it will be held until after midnight on Sunday, so that there may be no traveling on the Lord's Day.

The First Presbyterian Church of Seattle has been placed at the disposal of the delegates for their meetings, which are to continue until Wednesday, Oct. 25. On Sunday, Oct. 22, special meetings conducted by prominent delegates will be held in various churches of the city, and the assembly will be distributed according to denominational lines. The Union is distinctly Christian, but not denominational, so there will be few churches in Seattle without a representative contingent on that day. During the sessions there will be a morning prayer-meeting every day from eight to nine o'clock, and a conference of departments to follow it every morning. On Friday, the opening day, the President, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens will deliver her annual address, and in the afternoon Mrs. M. S. D. Fry, the Corresponding Secretary, and Mrs. Helen M. Barker, the Treasurer, will read their annual reports. On Friday evening addresses of welcome will be made by the Governor of the State, the Mayor of the city, and representatives of the religious and temperance bodies, to which the orators of the Union will reply. Saturday is to be the grand celebration day, when the events of the quarter century and the triumphs of the Union will be reviewed. On Monday the critical question of the affiliated interests will be discussed, and the subject of The Temple, if not ruled out by the President, will come up for renewed consideration. Tuesday will be devoted to short addresses by delegates on the work of the Union, and topics relating thereto, especially to suggestions of spheres of labor and social movements to which the Union may legitimately lend its powerful aid. Wednesday will be devoted to speaking of the same general character, but less formally. The speakers of Tuesday having been required to state the subjects of their addresses in advance and to be prepared with elaborate presentation of them. Wednesday's speakers will have more liberty and may be expected to review the proceedings of the convention and relieve over-burdened minds of opinions which seem important to the speakers, if not to the Convention. One important duty to be performed at the business meeting will be the election of delegates to the convention of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which will be held in Edinburgh, Scotland, in June next. Special arrangements have been made for musical harmony. The Juanita Glee Club of twelve young ladies will be on the white ribbon train to enliven the journey with their famous songs, and on arrival at Seattle, Mrs. Boole, president of the New York, W. C. T. U., will take charge of the musical arrangements, and will have on hand a chorus of five hundred trained voices from Seattle and the neighborhood to render convention songs. This is the first time Seattle has entertained a national convention, and the city has shown its appreciation of the honor by voting $500 for the expenses, and the citizens have manifested their hospitality by raising $1,500 more.

The President of the Union, whose portrait appears on this page, is Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens. She is a native of Maine, and has been identified with the movement since 1875. In that year the State W. C. T. U. was founded, and Mrs. Stevens was elected Treasurer. Her energy and devotion to the cause were so conspicuous that, three years later, when the office of President fell vacant, she was elected and has been unanimously re-elected every year since. She was also prominent in the national organization and on the death of Miss Frances E. Willard, Mrs. Stevens, who had been for many years her chosen friend and colleague, became her successor as President of the National W. C. T. U. Mrs. M. S. D. Fry, the Corresponding Secretary, was born at Burlington, Ohio, and is the wife of a Methodist Episcopal minister. She has occupied several important offices in the educational world, and a few years ago was made Professor of English Literature in the University of Minnesota. In 1894 she became President of the W. C. T. U. of that State, and last year was elected Corresponding Secretary in the National organization. Miss Anna A. Gordon, the Vice-President, has been familiar with the work almost from the beginning. She was private secretary to Miss Frances E. Willard, during that lady's long career of service, and was her constant companion and fellow-laborer. Miss Willard appointed her her literary executor, and she undertook the work of preparing her biography.

MISS ANNA A. GORDON, VICE-PRES. MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, PRES. MRS. M. S. D. FRY, COR. SEC.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

WOULD you rather buy lamp-chimneys, one a week the year round, or one that lasts till some accident breaks it?

Tough glass, Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass," almost never break from heat, not one in a hundred.

Where can you get it? and what does it cost?

Your dealer knows where and how much. It costs more than common glass; and may be, he thinks tough glass isn't good for his business.

Our "Index" describes all lamps and their proper chimneys. With it you can always order the right size and shape of chimney for any lamp. We mail it FREE to any one who writes for it.

Address MACBETH, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Profitable Employment

We want a good agent in every town to secure subscribers to

The Ladies' Home Journal
AND
The Saturday Evening Post

You can make good wages and share in the $18,000 to be distributed among the best agents at the end of the season.

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

8,025,454 cattle, sheep and hogs purchased in 1898

Swift's Premium Hams and Breakfast Bacon have been awarded highest honors at international exhibitions

Silver Leaf Lard
Jersey Butterine
Beef Extract and Cotosuet

are other choice specialties, made in sanitary workrooms under United States Government Inspection

Swift and Company
Chicago Kansas City Omaha
St. Louis St. Joseph St. Paul

THE AMERICAN MESSENGER.

REV. T. L. CUYLER, D.D.

An Illustrated Religious Monthly 25c. a Year

The "American Messenger" is a unique paper. No other fills its place. Founded in 1842 to meet the demand for a high-class non sectarian religious paper at a price within the reach of all, it has fulfilled its purpose so well that to-day no other paper of its class compares with it in circulation and influence. Among our contributors are:

Rev. Dr. T. L. Cuyler, Rev. Dr. Frances E. Clark, Rev. Gerard B. F. Hallock, D.D., Rev. Oliver A. Kingsbury, Rev. H. T. Miller, Rev. W. C. Stiles, Frank H. Sweet, Hezekiah Butterworth, W. Edgar Simpson, Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson, Mrs. Julia MacNair Wright, Cora S. Day, Mrs. E. P. Allan, Mabel Gifford, Julia H. Johnston, Anna B. Warner, Mrs. Jane Ellis Joy, Alma J. Noble,

And many others. During the coming year, Miss WARNER's story "Fresh Air" will be completed. This will be followed by a charming short story, "The Shale Pickers," by Mr. W. EDGAR SIMPSON.

"Philip Desmond," a serial of absorbing interest, by Cora S. Day, begins in November, '99, and another new serial will be begun in the early fall of 1900.

Valuable features are, the Christian Life, Christian Effort, The Family Circle, the Sunday School Lesson, Miscellany, Poems, Short Stories, etc., in every issue.

THE CHILD JESUS IN THE TEMPLE.

Free! If you subscribe now, we will send you the MESSENGER free from the time your subscription is received to Jan. 1, 1900, including Thanksgiving and Christmas Numbers; and, if you send five cents additional, for packing and shipping, we will also send, free, a copy of HOFMANN'S famous painting, "The Child Jesus in the Temple," on a fine paper, ready to frame. This picture is made by a photographic process which adds the exquisite beauty of expression in the original painting, and would be an ornament in any home, and the greatest helpfulness to Christian children.

19 x 24 Inches in Size,

Price of picture alone, 25c.

AMERICAN MESSENGER, Department 5, 150 Nassau Street, NEW YORK.

FOLLOWING ··· AFTER JESUS

By DWIGHT L. MOODY*

Christ in the House

MARK 2:1. If Christ is in the house, your neighbors will soon know it.

V. 3. Four men thought it worth while to bring one man to Christ

V. 4. They thought it more important to get to Christ than to have an orderly meeting.

V. 5. Christ saw not their "perseverance" or "ingenuity," but their "faith."

Christ's coming awakens hope, effort: brings pardon, power; calls forth praise.

V. 6. A new religion provoked opposition. Formality versus Will of God.

V. 17. Christ, the Great Physician. How do we know when people are sick in mind? in body? in soul? What is the medicine? Prisons, hospitals, etc. Who are sick in soul? Isa. 1:6; I. John 1:7.

Ch. 4:5. Devils prayed and Jesus answered. A wicked man prayed and Jesus answered. A believing woman prayed, and Jesus answered. All asked for something, and all got it. Three very bad cases—devils, disease, death—beyond the reach of man (for man had tried and failed), cured by Christ. Note the testimony of the evil spirit to Christ: saw him afar off: ran and worshiped: confessed his divinity: dreaded his indignation.

V. 2. Satan as a master is bad: his work worse: his wages worst of all.

Christ the Physician

Ch. 4:22. It was his daughter's trouble that drove the ruler to Jesus.

Ch. 5:23. "My daughter lieth at the point of death: I pray thee, come and lay thy hands on her that she may be healed: and she shall live." A short prayer, and to the point.

V. 35. "Thy daughter is dead." A great part of the business of preachers to-day is to contradict this statement. Thy daughter, thy son, is not dead. Instead of ceasing to pray, be more urgent and earnest than ever.

Ch. 6:20. "Herod feared John . . . and did many things." Had he feared God, he would have done everything. Herod was once a hopeful case (Mark 12:34), but the sin of adultery kept him back. It was the price of his soul.

Christ the Teacher

Ch. 6:31. "Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest awhile." There is progress in a Christian's life when he may not seem to be going ahead. Like a canal-boat in a lock, when it stands still but is rising all the time.

V. 37. "Give ye them to eat." Christ uses us and our resources.

V. 41. "Christ gave them to his disciples to set before them." Go and distribute.

Ch. 7:24. "He could not be hid." As it is with the head, so it is with the members. Matt. 5:14.

V. 29. The Syrophœnician woman did what the lawyers and scribes could not do—she entangled Jesus.

Ch. 8:34. You cannot follow after Jesus, until you have first come to him.

V. 36. He who sins for profit shall not profit by his sins.

V. 38. We are most ashamed of Jesus when he has most cause to be ashamed of us.

Jesus Only

Ch. 9:8. Jesus only.
V. 34. Man only.

Jesus alone on the mount of transfiguration, and alone on the mount of suffering.

The Christian Life: "On the mountaintop" (v. 2)—Spiritual, communion, occupied with Jesus. "In the plain" (v. 9)—Practical, conflict, occupied for Jesus.

Once it was the blessing—now it is the Lord
[illegible]
Once I sought for healing—now the Healer own:
[illegible]
trust:
[illegible]
says:
Once 'twas constant asking—now 'tis ceaseless praise;
Once it was my working—his it hence shall be:
Once I tried to use him—now he uses me:
[illegible]
One:
[illegible]

Ch. 9:20. Like a bad tenant, the devil tried to do as much harm as he could when he got notice to quit.

Ch. 10:21. Jesus's first look was one of love: "Jesus beholding him loved him." V. 21.

Jesus's second look was one of sorrow. "Jesus looked round about," and said, "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God." V. 23.

Jesus's third look was one of hope: "Jesus looking upon them saith, With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible." V. 27.

"One thing thou lackest." One leak can sink a ship, one sin destroy the sinner.

Rewards and Treasures

Ch. 10:22. Men read the Old Testament story of earthly prosperity held out as a reward for well-doing, and the New Testament disclosure of heavenly joys beyond the highest earthly possessions, and they say they would like to have the Old Testament rewards in this world, and the New Testament treasures for the next world. The call of the Master comes in to decide for one or the other: not both.

Ch. 10:33. Jesus proclaimed his coming sacrifice: hence he did not die a mere martyr's death.

V. 45. Jesus gave his life a ransom for many.

Jesus gave himself for me. Gal. 2:20.

Ch. 15:21. Rutherford speaks of the sweet burdensomeness of Christ's cross. It is such a burden as wings to a bird or sails to a ship—it carries one forward to the desired haven.

*"Notes from My Bible," by D. L. Moody; [illegible] The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York.

A PECULIAR REMEDY

Something About the New Discovery for Curing Dyspepsia.

[From Mr. [illegible]]

The Rev. F. I. Bell, a highly esteemed minister residing in Weedsport, Cayuga Co., N. Y., in a recent letter writes as follows: "There has never been anything that I have taken that has relieved the Dyspepsia from which I have suffered for ten years except the new remedy called Stuart's Dyspepsia-Tablets. Since taking them I have had no distress at all after eating and again after long years can sleep well. Rev. F. I. Bell, Weedsport, N. Y., formerly Idalia, Colo."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is a remarkable remedy, not only because it is a certain cure for all forms of indigestion, but because it seems to act as thoroughly in old chronic cases of Dyspepsia as well as in mild attacks of indigestion or billiousness. A person has dyspepsia simply because the stomach is overworked, all it wants is a harmless vegetable remedy to digest the food and thus give it the much needed rest.

This is the secret of the success of this peculiar remedy. No matter how weak or how much disordered the digestion may be, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not. New life and energy is given not only to the stomach but to every organ and nerve in the body.

A trial of this splendid medicine will convince the most skeptical that Dyspepsia and all stomach troubles can be cured. Send for little book on Stomach mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. So popular has the remedy become that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can now be obtained at any drug store at 50c. per package.

IAN MACLAREN

IAN MACLAREN'S GREAT ARTICLE

One of the most direct articles ever written on modern tendencies in the social life of the church.

THE CANDY-PULL SYSTEM IN THE CHURCH

An article of Truths which many have felt and thought, but none has ventured to express. "If this goes on," says Dr. Watson, "the church will soon embrace a theatre."

In the October issue of

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

One Dollar for an Entire Year of Twelve Issues

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

RUBIFOAM

is a perfect liquid dentifrice. It cleanses and beautifies the teeth — and stops decay.

All druggists. 25c. per bottle. Sample [illegible] Postage 2c. Address E. W. H[illegible] & Co., Lowell, Mass.

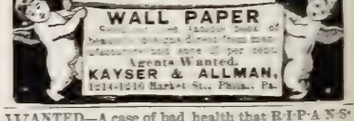
TAILOR MADE SUIT $5.98

THE SUIT is made by [illegible] Ford's Best All Wool Fast Color Ladies' Cloth [illegible] The Jacket [illegible] beautifully silk faced and elegantly lined with real French silk. [illegible] Guaranteed [illegible] worth fully $10.00. [illegible] blue [illegible]

SEND NO MONEY [illegible] and Free a large sample of the cloth and our Big Catalog [illegible] Send today quick for free sample and catalogue or suit.

REFERENCES The Rosa [illegible] Co Bank [illegible]

THE C. [illegible] CO., 157 W. Jackson St., CHICAGO



WANTED—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S [illegible] They banish pain and [illegible] Nauseous [illegible] RIPANS [illegible] RIPANS [illegible] 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS, [illegible] New York, [illegible]

Solid Gold Watch FREE to any one distributing [illegible] Catalogue and full particulars free. FRED PARKER, 306 So. Clinton St., Chicago.

MAKE MONEY EVENINGS. Men employed during the day can make money [illegible] Magic Lantern or Stereopticon. Little capital needed. Write for particulars, 256 page illustrated Price List. McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N.Y.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP [illegible] best remedy for diarrhœa.

PLAYS Speakers Dialogues Recitations — For Church Sunday Day Schools — Send For Free Catalogue — DE WITT PUB. CO. 36 W. 22d St. New York

OPIUM MORPHINE and Liquor Habit 10 to 20 days. [illegible] Dr. J. L. Stephens, Dept. R. 5, Lebanon, Ohio.

"A handful of dirt may be a houseful of shame." Keep your house clean with . . . . . SAPOLIO

Lost Opportunities

Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for Oct. 15

Jer. 8: 20; Matt. 23: 37-39; Heb. 12: 17

MORE distress has probably been caused by the passages selected for the Topic and similar passages scattered through the Bible, than by any other warnings and threats. Unwise preachers have made the matter worse, by intimating that there is a dead line in spiritual experience, beyond which, if a man go, God will never forgive him. This is to be deplored for many reasons, but chiefly because it tends to a kind of recklessness. A man is apt, when he is convinced that there is no pardon for him, to listen to the suggestion that he cannot make his situation worse by proceeding further in sin. It ought to be clearly understood, once for all, that God has drawn no such dead line. The suggestion that he has, is based on Christ's reference to the sin against the Holy Ghost, and even in that case, and supposing that the sin can be committed in our time—which is very doubtful—it would appear that the dead line is drawn by the man himself, rather than that God draws it. The character of God, as it is drawn in the Bible, is one of infinite compassion, love and mercy. He is represented as yearning to forgive, eager to see signs of repentance in his creatures and rejoicing with them in reconciliation. It is a libel upon him to represent him as ever rejecting a sincere cry for pardon

But are there not some who are excluded from his presence? Are there not cases utterly hopeless? We cannot deny it, but it is not because the door of God's mercy is closed. That remains open to the very last. The obstacles which make a case hopeless are the conditions of entrance. God will not receive a man in his sins. It would be unreasonable to expect him to do so. If a notorious burglar, a counterfeiter, or a man of foul language proposed to visit a family in which there were growing sons and daughters, we should not blame the father if, having regard for his own family, he declined to receive such a visitor. If the man would quit his evil ways and express his determination to lead a clean life, the case would be different. He might be received, but such a change would be indispensable. That is the condition God imposes; and he goes further than the supposed father would go, for he accepts the pledge of reform before reformation has actually taken place. He does so in order to aid the sinner in the process. All that the sinner has to do is to forswear his sins, and to plead the promise of Christ of divine help, and to submit himself to divine treatment. He is then received as a child of God, and the process of cleansing commences. He must, of course, observe the rules of the household; but this, if he is sincere in his desire to become a member of it, he will be glad to do, not only to prove his sincerity, but to enjoy the advantages of training so that he may be worthy of the dignity conferred upon him.

Thus the dead line is of his own drawing. The opportunity is always open to him, but the older he gets, and the more steeped in sin he is, and the more potent his habits, the less prospect there is of his qualifying himself for admission to the family. Every time there is an impulse in his mind to submit to the conditions and to go to God for pardon his opportunity is pressed upon him. Every time that he neglects it, or wilfully puts it from him, there is a lost opportunity, which by a natural law turns into an obstacle. He acquires the habit of rejecting opportunities, which is one of the most insidious and dangerous of habits. Finally the man's case does become hopeless, because he becomes incapable of breaking the chain that binds him. The opportunity remains open, and it is the same opportunity which was offered to him at the beginning of his career, and it has the same conditions attached to it, but he gradually loses his power to fulfil them, and gradually loses his desire to become a child of God. That is the dead line and the only one. It is a condition to be dreaded beyond any conceivable fate. How common it is, few people realize. Many are on their way to it who have no idea of their danger. Every time they smother an impulse to accept God's invitation, every time they turn their back on virtue and go back to their sin, they make another advance on the road leading to this fatal end. Few, if any, deliberately choose that fate. It comes upon them insensibly and tightens its hold every time an opportunity is lost.

Russia's Change of Calendar

THE nineteenth century closes, says the Scientific American, with the year 1900. Immediately after midnight, therefore, of Dec. 31, 1900, is when the twentieth century begins. In other words, it begins with the first second of the first hour of the first day of January, 1901. Several announcements are made of changes to be inaugurated with the opening of the new century. The first of importance is that Russia will adopt the Gregorian calendar. This will be done by omitting thirteen days, the amount of error that will have accumulated after the close of February, 1900. The Russians will then write Jan. 1, 1901, instead of Dec. 19, 1900, or rather, instead of both, according to the dual system now in vogue in that country and in Greece. The other important announcement is that it is not at all unlikely that the astronomical day, which now begins at noon of the civil day, will begin with the civil day, at midnight. The present method of having the astronomical day to begin twelve hours after the beginning of the civil day, is apt to be confusing. On the other hand, to have the former begin at midnight, just when astronomers are often busiest, will be to them somewhat inconvenient.

Bowery Mission

The following sums have been received in aid of the work of the Bowery Mission:

Prev ack	$1,455 87
Crum, Cora	1 00
Dark, H D	10 00
Fishkill, M C	5 00
Jnbe, Mrs E	2 00
Williams, K	1 00
Total	$1,474 87

All contributions sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for the Bowery Mission will be acknowledged in these columns.

25,000 Trial Packages FREE!

Rheumatism Cured by a Simple Remedy that you may Try without spending a cent—Cured many cases of 30 and 40 years standing.

If you have rheumatism, write to me and I will send you free of cost a trial package of a harmless remedy, which cured me and thousands of others, among them cases of over 50 years standing. It is a grand remedy and in order that every suffering reader may learn about it, I will gladly send them a Trial Package free, even if more than 25,000 invalids should apply. Many a distressing case of rheumatism, among them some, which defied Hospital, Drugs, Electricity and medical skill, were successfully cured. In Denham, Ind., it cured a lady who then cured 15 of her neighbors. In Prosser, Neb., it cured Mrs. C. Morritz who had been afflicted 52 years. In Fountain City, Wis., it cured Hon. Jacob Sexauer after suffering for thirty-three years, notwithstanding having employed seven physicians. At 130 Oak St., Vincennes, Ind., this remedy rescued Miss Emma Callendar from a case of rheumatism which her physicians considered fatal. Rev. C. Sund of Harrisville, Wis., testifies that this remedy cured two members of his congregation, one who had suffered 18 the other 25 years. Thousands of similar incidents could be mentioned where this horrible plague has been completely cured. Write at once for a free trial package and other information for it is an honest remedy that you can test before you part with your money. Address John A. Smith, 371 Summerfield Church Bldg., Milwaukee, Wis.

"Necessity knows no law." A law of nature bows to the necessity of keeping the blood pure so that the system shall be strong and healthy. Hence to take Hood's Sarsaparilla is a law of health.

Simply Do This UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
Ostermoor & Co.
115 Elizabeth St
New York
Please send me "The Test of Time." It would (at least) interest me to know what you claim and how you prove it.
Name
Address
Date

The Ostermoor Patent Elastic Felt Mattress $15.

is well worthy of your consideration. Are you open to conviction? or are you one of the few people who will have an unsanitary hair mattress—no matter what it costs? We make it simple for you to learn about (see above picture) and easy for you to buy, for our mattress is always

"SENT ON SUSPICION."

SLEEP ON IT 30 NIGHTS and if it is not even all you have hoped for, if you don't believe it to be the equal in cleanliness, durability and comfort of any $50 hair mattress ever made, you can get your money back by return mail—"no questions asked." There will be no unpleasantness about it at all.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., 155 Washington Street, March 15th, 1897.

DEAR SIRS:—In 1881 (16 years ago), I ordered a Patent Elastic Felt Mattress as an experiment, and the results have been in every way satisfactory. It retains its shape and elasticity in a manner that makes devotees of hair mattresses incredulous. I know of no material that can begin to compare with the Felt. My experience with it has made me recommend it to my friends, and they soon join in the chorus of praise. All the claims you make for the material and workmanship seem to me well within the bounds of modesty.

Yours truly, (Rev.) THOS. W. ILLMAN.

SEND FOR OUR FREE BOOK, "THE TEST OF TIME," whether you need a mattress now or not. It will interest you to know about the best and cheapest mattress in the world. We sell direct to the user only.

TRADE MARK

2 feet 6 inches wide, 25 lbs.	$ 8.35	ALL 6 FEET 3 INCHES LONG.
3 feet wide, 30 lbs.	10.00
3 feet 6 inches wide, 35 lbs.	11.70
4 feet wide, 40 lbs.	13.35
4 feet 6 inches wide, 45 lbs.	15.00

Made in two parts, 50 cents extra.

Express charges prepaid everywhere.

WARNING! Not for sale by stores. A few unscrupulous dealers are trying to sell a $5 mattress for $10 and $15 on our advertising. Patent Elastic Felt Mattresses can only be bought of OSTERMOOR & COMPANY 115 Elizabeth St., New York.

We have cushioned 25,000 churches. Send for our book, "Church Cushions."

There are none so deaf as those who won't buy

Wilson's Common Sense Ear Drums

The only scientific sound conductors. Invisible, comfortable, efficient. They fit in the ear. Doctors recommend them. Thousands testify to their perfection and to benefit derived.

Information and book of letters from many users, free.

WILSON EAR DRUM CO.,
223 Trust Bldg. Louisville, Ky.

Catarrh...

and the allied diseases gout rheumatism and kidney troubles, are all largely due to retention of uric acid in the system. Hence the value of a uric acid solvent and diuretic remedy which regulates and stimulates the action of the kidneys is largely prescribed by physicians for these complaints.

Tartarlithine...

MR. F. J. MORRIS, New York City, writes: I am now 55 years old, and have had catarrh since I was a child. I was also affected with rheumatic trouble. I knew enough of my case to believe that my catarrh was connected with the rheumatic condition, and as your Tartarlithine was stated to be a specific for rheumatism I concluded to try it. After using one bottle my bronchial cough left me entirely, and the catarrh secretion was considerably less. After the second bottle I find that I am entirely free from catarrh.

Regular package $1 00,
Of all druggists or post-free by mail.
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

McKESSON & ROBBINS,
91 Fulton Street, . . New York.

SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

ASTHMA SURE CURE

I have a sure, safe and speedy cure for that distressing and dangerous disease, asthma no matter how deep seated it may be. To convince any sufferer of its great virtue I will mail a trial package free. Relief is instant and complete cure certain. Write at once to F. G. KINSMAN, M. D., Box 824, Augusta, Me.

STAMMERING. Most Speedy, Perfect, Permanent Educational Cure Guaranteed. Least Expense. Address Voice School, Salem, W. Va.

Free Your Photo in one of these beautiful Gold Heart Pins. Send Photo and we will send this ... Photo back ... Author Novelty Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Prayer

THE camel at the close of day,
Kneels down upon the sandy plain
To have his burden lifted off,
And rest to gain.

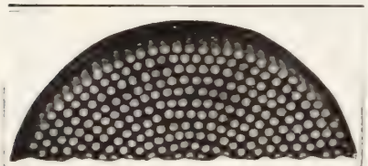
My soul, thou, too, shouldst to thy knees
When daylight draweth to a close,
And let thy Master lift the load
And grant repose.

Else how couldst thou to-morrow meet
With all to-morrow's work to do,
If thou, thy burden all the night
Dost carry through?

If thou shouldst kneel at morning's dawn,
That God may give thee daily care,
Assured that he no load too great

Y. M. C. A. Work at Manila

[illegible] the Young Men's Christian Association at Manila, Philippine Islands, reports encouraging results from its recent work. During July there were very severe rains. During this time one of the secretaries was prostrated by malarial fever, being ill for two weeks. The Association will make an effort to secure some more suitable place from the government authorities than that now being used. They have secured a good place at San Fernando, the largest city outside of Manila occupied by our troops. The Association building will therefore be the headquarters for Christian work in that vicinity. "Increased supplies of literature are needed," the secretaries write. "We could use ten times the amount we have thus far secured. Friends in the States could be of great assistance if they would furnish literature in such quantities as would enable us to supply the different camps, and also the transports which carry our soldiers home. At the new naval station at Cavite we are getting work started. Bible classes have been begun already, and the work promises to be very helpful."



It's the Flat-Ended Teeth

Bailey's Rubber Brushes

[illegible] Beware of Imitations. [illegible]

Found at all Dealers, or sent on Receipt of Price

Bailey's Rubber Complexion Brush	$ .50
Bailey's Complexion Soap	.10
Bailey's Bath and Shampoo Brush	.75
Bailey's Rubber Bath and Flesh Brush	1.50
Bailey's Rubber Toilet Brush large	.50
Bailey's Rubber Toilet Brush small	.25
Bailey's Rubber Glove Cleaner	.10

C. J. BAILEY & CO., 22 Boylston St. Boston, Mass

PARIS AND FRENCH JUSTICE

By

Hon. Thomas B. Reed

In this week's number of

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

(OF PHILADELPHIA)

An Illustrated Weekly Magazine
Founded A° D¹ 1728 by Benjamin Franklin.

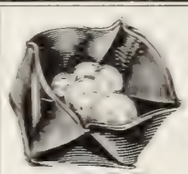
Permanently enlarged without increase in price.

5 Cents the Copy

More than 150,000 subscribers and buyers.

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

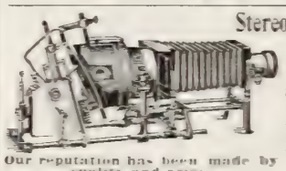
$75 [illegible]



There's Disease in Your Pocket

Paragon Patent Folding Coin Purse

JAMES S. TOPHAM, Sole M'f'r, 1232 Penna. Ave., Washington, D. C.



Our reputation has been made by quality and price.

Stereopticons and Magic Lanterns from $25 to $350 each

Our Lantern Outfits are used by the United States Government and 200 leading Universities, Educational and Religious Institutions throughout the world.

The greatest source of pleasure and instruction in the Church, Sunday School, Lecture Room, and Home. We can supply any demand immediately.

J. B. COLT & CO., Dept. 29, 3 West 29th St., New York.

Health---Comfort---Beauty

[illegible] FERRIS GOOD SENSE WAISTS [illegible] nature—who love perfect ease—who desire to dress in fashion and in taste. FERRIS' GOOD SENSE WAISTS are made to suit every form—normal, stout and slender: to suit the requirements of every woman, every purpose. If you would like to know which of the

FERRIS' Good Sense Waists

[illegible] is best suited to your form, to your manner of dressing, we will send you an interesting [illegible]

Sold by all leading retailers.

[illegible]

Made only by

THE FERRIS BROS. CO.,
341 Broadway,
NEW YORK.

AGENTS WANTED FOR "THE STORY OF TWO WARS."

[illegible] Standard, Superb and Authentic History of both OUR WAR WITH SPAIN and OUR WAR WITH THE PHILIPPINES [illegible] With New Steel Portraits of all the Military and Naval Leaders, large Colored Maps and many other Illustrations. By Hon. H. B. Russell, and ex-Secretary of War Proctor. [illegible] A book that sells on sight. Handsomely over 1000 pages and more. Now is the time. Big profits. Terms, Territory paid. The largest chance to make money ever offered to all who want to make [illegible] Write at once for terms and particulars to THE HARTFORD PUBLISHING CO., Hartford, Conn.

RUPTURE CURED

[illegible] The Improved Elastic Truss is the only Truss in existence that will retain a rupture under all circumstances, and at the same time allow the parts to perform their natural functions. It is self-adjusting, and [illegible] no pad or spring to chafe or irritate the skin. The use of these trusses for children [illegible] and they are recommended by the Improved Elastic Truss Co., 768 Broadway, N. Y. Established 30 years.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS

A Song for Our Fleets*

A SONG for our fleets—our iron fleets
Of grim and savage beauty,
That plow their way through fields of spray,
To follow a nations duty!
The winds may blow and the waves may flow,
And stars may hide their faces,
But little we reck; our stars o'er deck
Still glitter within their places!

Let never a one who gazes on
This pageant calm but splendid
Doubt that our coasts from hostile hosts
Will gallantly be defended!
A desperate foe may wish us woe;
But what is their petty knavery
Against the right, when backed with might,
And Anglo Saxon bravery?

A song for our fleeets—our gallant fleets,
'Neath flags of glory flying,
That carry the aid, so long delayed,
To those that are crushed and dying!
And flames may glow, and blood may flow;
But still, with a stern endeavor,
We'll rule the main, and lash foul Spain
From our Western World forever!

WILL CARLETON.

A Child's Influence†

IN the beginning of this century, a Welsh girl was in a Sunday School. Her parents were very poor, and had no Bible of their own, nor had any of their neighbors. The nearest Bible was at a house some miles away, over the hills, and this faithful little girl was in the habit of walking there and back to learn her Sunday School text. One Sunday, she could not repeat her text, and, when questioned by the minister, she said: "Please, sir, the weather was very bad." "Very true," said the minister, "but what had that to do with your learning your verse?" Then he found out how scarce the Bibles were. He was deeply moved, and he went up to London, and proposed to some friends that a society be formed to print Bibles in Welsh for the poor. One of his hearers said: "Why not start a Bible Society for the world?" The grand idea was carried out, and the London Bible Society sends out its Bibles by the millions to all the world. Yet it all began by a little girl at Bala walking miles each week to learn her Sabbath School lesson. God honored her fidelity, and used it; and he will use yours, if you are faithful, in ways you do not dream of.

While we are about it, we will tell of another little girl whose influence will be felt as long as time shall last. Less than half a century ago, a Sunday School superintendent in Jacksonville, Illinois, asked each one to bring a new scholar to the school the next Sunday. Little Mary Paxton went home, and asked her father to come to Sabbath School. He was nearly forty years old, and so ignorant that he could not read. He was rough in appearance, and rude in speech. He hated the church, and despised Sunday Schools and religion and everything good. But he loved his little Mary, and when she took him by the hand he did not resist. He went to Sabbath School, and was led to Christ. He then learned to read for Christ's sake, and he finally came to be a Sunday School evangelist. He founded fifteen hundred Sunday Schools, into which seventy thousand children were gathered, and out of which sprang one hundred churches. When little Mary was leading her father to Sunday School, she was leading a train of thousands up the shining way that leads to God. It may seem a small thing for a Christian boy or girl to be always in the pew to cheer the pastor while he preaches, and to be always in the Sabbath School with a knowledge of the lesson, and to be helpfully present in at least one prayer-meeting every week. But just such simple, faithful service as that is keeping alive the Christian church.

* From War-Time Echoes, a collection of patriotic poems by J. H. Brownlee, pp. 209, Werner Co., Chicago, publishers.

† From Food for Lambs, by Rev. A. M. Hills; 202 pp., cloth. M. W. Knapp, Cincinnati, O., pub'r.

GOOD COFFEE MAKER.

Experience With the Berry.

"I have gained twenty five pounds since I left off coffee and began drinking Postum Food Coffee in its place.

"I had become very thin in flesh and suffered tortures with heartburn, was a nervous wreck with headache practically all the time until one dreadful day when the good doctor told me I must quit drinking coffee, as he had nothing left to try, to relieve me.

"I could not drink tea and had tried everything else, even Postum, but put it by at the first trial, because it was tasteless.

"Forced to it again, I determined to see if it could not be made palatable and found at once that when I followed directions and boiled it long enough, that I not only liked it but gave it to my husband for several days without his finding it out. I have the name of making splendid coffee, and we always used the best, but of late I have given Postum to guests many times in place of coffee and have never been detected yet.

"Our four children have not drank coffee for three years, and all have gained health and flesh since using Postum. One son, who was always sick, has been greatly benefited by its use, and as above stated, I have gained twenty-five pounds since taking up Postum. I am healthier to-day than I have been for years and give Postum all the credit. Please do not use my name in public."

This lady lives in Burlington, Des Moines County, Iowa, and the name will be furnished by the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., to those interested.

Free to Bad Stomachs.

To prove that Kremer's Dyspepsia Powder is the most meritorious remedy for all forms of dyspepsia, I will send a large box for 5c. postage, the price (soc.) to be sent only in case you are benefited after a week's trial. Otherwise return powder by mail.

J. RITCHIE, Durant, I. T., writes: "It relieved exceedingly aggravated dyspepsia with which I have suffered for years."

Mention this paper.

JOHN KREMER, Druggist, 428 7th Ave., N. Y.

THE FASHION MACHINE

It is the latest improved, strictly first-class, up-to-date, positively the best and most perfect Shuttle Sewing Machine in all respects yet produced. High-Arm, finely finished throughout. Warranted 10 years. All attachments free. We have no agents. Ship direct from factory to family, saving $25 to $40. We are sewing machine dealers exclusively and handle all other makes of first-class machines at a low price. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Send today for illustrated catalog

ONLY $18

We pay the freight.

High-Arm.

N. Hook & Co., 1551 Central Ave., Cincinnati, O

NO CASH REQUIRED. 30 DAYS FREE TRIAL. WE TRUST YOU.

WE PAY Freight

$9.00 Buys a High Victor Sewing Machine with full set of best attachments Adapted to light or heavy work Guaranteed for 20 years. We make 35 DIFFERENT STYLES AT ALL PRICES

$22.00 Buys a Fine Victor CHURCH OR PARLOR ORGAN Guaranteed for 25 years Free Trial WE MAKE 24 STYLES AT ALL PRICES

$120.00 Buys a Grand VICTOR Upright PIANO

We also deal in all kinds of Musical Instruments. ALL CATALOGUES FREE

VICTOR MFG CO. Dept P51, 161-167 Plymouth Pl. Chicago, Ill

1500 SEWING MACHINES

Second-hand Standard makes, $3 to $10. Shopworn or slightly used samples, $7 to $12. Three years on trial. New machines one-fourth price. Largest dealers in the world. Write for Bargain Offer. James L. Mead & Co., Dept. 41 T, Chicago

ALL WOOL SUIT $5.95

Man's Suit made from rich Black Cheviot woven by America's Best Woolen Mill from fine picked wool yarn, dyed by a new process and cannot fade—famous everywhere for its perfect weave and deep black color.

SKILLED SUIT TAILORS will make the suit in latest sack style to fit perfect, line it with fine, heavy Farmer's satin and sew it with pure silk an linen thread guaranteed far better in quality, style and looks than others b at $10 suit.

SEND NO MONEY but send this adv. and we'll send Free a large sample of this beautiful Cheviot and our big book of cloth samples of other suits fr m $6.95 up, or send us your Height, Weight, Waist and Crotch measure with $1.00 deposit and we ll express the suit to you C O D., subject examination examine it carefully, try i n, see that it fits perfect, then pay the express agent the balance ($4.95) and expressage, only after you find it exactly as represented, a perfect fit and far better than other $10.00 suits. Send today quick f r suit or free sample book.

REFERENCE. The Royal Trust Co. Bank, Chicago—any wholesale house in Chicago or any express Company in merica.

THE G. LOUIS VEHON CO., 157 W. Jackson St., CHICAGO.

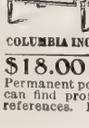
BRAIN and NERVE TONIC

BEST ON EARTH

For all Weaknesses, regardless of Cause. Month's Treatment, $1.00 Merit doubted? Write to Banks, or any Business House in City. Thirty years' experience. Address,

A. S. Johnson, M. D., Battle Creek, Mich.

DON'T BUY AN INCUBATOR



and pay for it before giving it a trial. We will send the celebrated NEW PREMIER INCUBATOR on trial. This evidences our faith in it. So simple a child can runit. First prize World's Fair. Also sole manufacturers of Simplicity Incubator. Catalogue and Poultry Helps 5 cts. Plans for Poultry Houses etc., 25 cts.

COLUMBIA INCUBATOR CO.'S Adams St. Delaware City, Del.

$18.00 a Week and expenses to good parties to travel. No canvassing. Permanent position. Also local workers and managers can find profitable employment for part time. Give references. R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore.

Rising Sun and Sun Paste

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH

Durable, Economical

DOES NOT BURN RED, DOES NOT STAIN THE HANDS, DOES NOT CAKE ON THE IRON.

Ask for RISING SUN in cakes for general blacking, and SUN PASTE for quick use—and don't be fooled with any other.

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH MADE BY NORSE BROS. CANTON MASS U.S.A.

DUSTLESS, LABOR SAVING. SOLD BY ALL GROCERS.

Stove Polish

Dr. Bull's COUGH SYRUP

is a favorite with children. No coaxing necessary. No nasty taste and sickening effects. It cures too—that is the best point about it. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has been used over fifty years—always cures. It's pure, it's sure and it's quick. Why not have a bottle in the house ready for changeable weather? Any mother will tell you about Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

Refuse Substitutes

A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Bull's Pills Cure Costiveness.

Trial, 20 for 5 cents, at dealers or by mail.

ABSOLUTELY FREE TO EXAMINE.

Send no money in advance, but just send your order giving name address, number of the garment desired and your best measure, and we will forward the garment to you C O D with privilege of examination You may examine same at your nearest express office and satisfy yourself that it is exactly as ordered and represented before paying the express agent our Special advertised price and charges. This illustration represents our greatest leader in ladies seal plush capes No 545 It is made of a very good quality satin lined seal plush 22 inches long, cut in four gores, elaborately braided and trimmed around collar and down front with black thibet fur, has black mercerized lining

Price, $4.98.

No. 546. This cape is 27 inches long, otherwise the same as No 545 $5.48

No. 547. This cape is 30 inches long otherwise the same as No 545 $5.98. Our magnificently illustrated Fashion Catalogue No 22 is free for the asking. It contains half tone illustrations of all that is new in Ladies, Misses and Children's wearing apparel Write for it

EDWARD B. GROSSMAN & Co.

170-172 STATE ST. CHICAGO

THE GREAT MAIL ORDER CLOAK HOUSE

Reversible LINENE Collars and Cuffs.

Stylish, convenient, economical. Made of fine cloth, finished in pure starch, and exactly resemble fashionable linen goods. No Laundry Work When soiled discard. Ten Collars or five pairs of Cuffs, 25cts. By mail, 30cts. Send 6 cts. in stamps for sample collar or pair of cuffs. Name size and style.

REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. S, Boston, Mass.

RUBENS DANTE TASSO MURILLO ANGELO RAPHAEL

No. 95261

$13.40

freight paid and your money back if you are not satisfied.

A bed like this has hitherto always been sold at a price prohibitive to most people.

It has remained for us to offer a really beautiful bed at a price within the reach of all people who desire refinement and luxury in bedroom furnishings.

Size of bed: Either 3 ft. 6 in., 4 ft., or 4 ft. 6 in wide by 6 ft. 6 in. long. Height of head 5 ft. 7 in. Height of foot 3 ft. 4 in. Corner posts 1 1-4 inches in diameter. Ball-bearing casters. Best white enamel finish. Very strongly made of malleable iron, steel and brass, with elaborate brass trimmings.

Guaranteed absolutely unbreakable. Our guarantee is on metal plate attached to each bed. Price, bed only, $13.40, freight paid to any point in this country east of Mississippi River.

We make about 150 different styles of beds and cribs, some lower and some higher priced than the bed illustrated.

Send for our free book about other beds; also cribs, mattresses and springs. If your dealer don't handle our goods, remit to us.

BARCALO & BOLL MFG. CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

Quilt Patterns

Every quilter should have our book of 400 Designs, containing the prettiest, queerest, scarcest, most grotesque patterns, from old log cabin to stars and puzzle designs. Revised edition; beautiful. Sent postpaid for 10c. silver or six 2c. stamps.

Ladies' Art Co., 806 N. B'way, B 13, St. Louis, Mo.

MADE TO ORDER CLOTHING

High Art Catalogue of Clothing, with large Cloth Samples attached. FREE. We pay expressage. Address

JULIUS HINES & SON, Baltimore, M. D. Dept. 218.

LADY or MAN wanted to travel and appoint agents. $60 per month salary and all expenses. ZIEGLER CO., 228 Locust St., Phila.

This Ladies' Dongola Kid Boot, Lace or Button, sole leather counter, inner and outer sole, Patent Leather Tip, Opera Toe, 2 to 8, D, E, or EE, sent postpaid on receipt of $1. Equals any $2 boot sold. Our make. Money refunded if unsatisfactory. We guarantee fit, style, wear. FREE—Our catalogue with illustrations of 150 bargains in shoes, also a Subscriber's Ticket which secures a Liberal Cash Bonus on your year's trading.

$1.00

DEXTER SHOE CO.

Est'b'd 1880. Order Clerk, 12 Boston, Mass.

RESTFUL

and healthful foot covering for chamber, bathroom, sick room. Warm feet and foot-ease are assured wearers of pair. 25c.

PARKER'S Arctic Socks

All sizes. Best thing in rubber boots. Sold by dealers or by mail. Parker pays postage. Catalog free. J. H. Parker, Dept., K, 108 Bedford St., Boston.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS.
OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS.
SCHOOL FURNITURE WORKS
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

BIRDS

A beautiful book on Canaries, Parrots and other cage birds. 100 fine illustrations, cover in 7 colors FREE if you mention this paper

Write us to-day. IOWA SEED CO., Des Moines, Ia.

WANTED WOMEN! to lend dress shields at home. Steady work. Distance no disadvantage. Ask your dealer to show you Kora Shields. Kora Shields snap on waist without sewing. Send for catalogue of work. Kora Shield Co., Dept. E, 525 Broome St., New York.

CASH or NEW HAIR MATTRESS For Your OLD FEATHER BED

Write for particulars. Estab'd 20 years. Bank reference. CANADA EXPORT COMPANY, 118 North 11th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

SILK REMNANTS for CRAZY WORK

A big package of beautiful Silk Remnants, from 100 to 120 pieces, all carefully trimmed, prepared from a large accumulation of silks especially adapted for all kinds of fancy work. We give more than double any other offer, and the remnants are all large sizes, in most beautiful colors and designs Send 25 cents in silver or stamps to Paris Silk Company, Box 3045, New York City, N. Y.

Libby's Condensed Mince Meat

Fresh and fruity. Made from the pick of the choicest beef—deliciously seasoned. Put up in convenient packages, enough for two big pies.

Drop postal for book, "How to Make Good Things to Eat."

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago

All the News of the World ... exception of crimes, scandals and sensations.

It is a little weekly paper of forty pages, which tells the story of current events in simple, readable English. It is non-sectarian and non-partisan and ... regularly in many of our best schools and should be in every home. It enables both old and young to ... to bring sensationalism into the household. As an anniversary or holiday gift it has no equal.

$1 ... $2 ...

THE GREAT ROUND WORLD CO.
150 Fifth Ave. New York

2 Giant Lily Violet of California

... 1 Narcissus, Angels' Tears, 1 Bermuda Easter Lily, ... 1 Christmas Hyacinth, 2 Mariposa, ... 2 Buttercup Oxalis, 2 Golden Spotted Lilies, 2 Scillas, ... 2 Glory of snow, 2 Ixias, 2 Sparaxis, 4 Freesias, ... FREE with every order. ... Seed, Tuberous Begonia, Diamond flower, "Successful Bulbs" ... All these 23 bulbs and 3 pkts. seed 25 cts. postpaid.

Miss Mary E. Martin, Floral Park, N. Y.

SAVE ½ Your FUEL

now wasted up chimney

BY USING THE ROCHESTER RADIATOR.
COST $2.00 AND UP.
Money refunded if not satisfactory. Write for booklet on economy in heating homes.
ROCHESTER RADIATOR CO.,
15 Furnace Street, Rochester, N. Y.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS

FREE TO AGENTS

IDEAL CAKE SPOON

... FREE ... you pay postage etc.
G. VINING NOVELTY CO., 60 Wabash Av., CHICAGO.

Trade-mark

Griss-Cross CEREALS

Seven food products—prevent and relieve diabetes, dyspepsia, ... Ass desserts. Unique and delicious. Lay for cross-cut lines. Pamphlet and ... mailed free.

K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR. Prevents constipation and other troubles.
GLUTEN GRITS, New health breakfast food.
PANSY Pastry Flour, Finest made.
FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U. S. A.

STEREOPTICONS

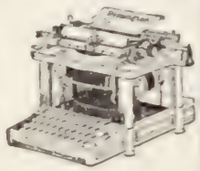
MAGIC LANTERNS and SLIDES
CONDENSED CATALOGUE FREE.
RILEY BROS. 16 BEEKMAN ST. NEW YORK.

Walter Baker & Co.'s BREAKFAST COCOA.

A Perfect Food.
Pure, Nutritious, Delicious.

WALTER BAKER & CO. Ltd.
Established 1780.
DORCHESTER, MASS.

For Length and Quality of Service the Remington



Standard Typewriter defies competition

Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict, 327 Broadway, New York

Tuxedo Oil Heater

TUXEDO Oil Heater

THE LATEST AND BEST

"Take the chill off," before ... It has every feature of a perfect Oil Heater. ... paid.

HOLMES, BOOTH & HAYDENS,
37 Park Place, NEW YORK

SELF-SEALING PIE TIN

... Household Specialties ... AGENTS ... FREE. ...

HOUSEHOLD NOVELTY WORKS, 25 Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

GOOD LITTLE INCUBATORS

Many people want a chick. Incubator but don't want a poultry plant that will only hatch good eggs. To meet the demand for a really good chick incubator we have perfected the new famous Reliable 50 EGG BANTLING SPECIAL. It is the equal ... $5

... 20th Century Catalogue and Poultry Book ... published.
RELIABLE INCB. & BROODER CO., Box B16 Quincy, Ill.

HENS LAY double the eggs when fed on Green Cut Bone.

MANN'S NEW BONE CUTTERS ... bone in the best and cheapest way. Cut fast. Last made. Many Cutting Pattern, ... Catalog free. F. W. MANN CO., Box 29 Milford, Mass.

Greatest Offer Ever Made

OF A COMPLETE RELIGIOUS REFERENCE LIBRARY.

25,000 ...
Order at once ...

$6 FOR 6 STANDARD BIBLE-STUDY BOOKS.... All New and Perfect.

CHOICE OF TWO PLANS AS GIVEN BELOW.

ONE-QUARTER OF FORMER PRICE.

... happy, grateful ... satisfied ...

FORMER PRICES:

... Life of Christ (2 Vols)	$1 00 6 00
... Epistles of St. Paul.	4 50
... Concordance.	1 50
	$13 00

Now only $6.00 CASH, or $7.00 on the monthly payment plan.

EDERSHEIM'S LIFE AND TIMES OF JESUS THE MESSIAH.

THE AUTHORIZED AMERICAN EDITION.

... By Alfred Edersheim, M. A., Oxon., D.D., Ph.D., Lecturer Oxford University ...

... critical in the best and truest sense of the word, and is biblical at the same time. The book is written not for ...

JAMIESON, FAUSSETT, AND BROWN'S BIBLE COMMENTARY.

A complete commentary—critical, explanatory and practical—on the Old and New Testaments. By Robert Jamieson, D.D., St. Paul's, Glasgow; Rev. A. R. Fausset, A.M., St. Cuthbert's, York; and David Brown, D.D., Professor of Theology, Aberdeen.

One Large Super-Royal Octavo Volume of Nearly Fourteen Hundred Pages. Strongly Bound in Cloth.

It is enriched with the results of learning, the researches of travelers who have visited every region on which the light of revelation originally shown, and the expository labors of scholars and critics. Far in advance of the other works now in use, this explanatory and practical commentary has been prepared by three eminent divines, distinguished alike for their scholarship and their piety. While this is the most practical, suggestive, scientific and popular commentary yet published in this country, its compact form and convenient size, together with the immense amount of matter it contains, forming an encyclopedia of biblical knowledge, render it also at once the cheapest and most economical.

Rev. J. H. Vincent, Bishop, M. E. Church: "This immense book deserves a place on the table of every Bible student. It is the cream of the commentaries carefully collected by three eminent scholars."

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE. By Alexander Cruden, M.A. Complete in two parts.

Contains 756 large, octavo pages, handsomely and strongly bound in cloth. Christians of all denominations ... place in the library of the Christian than Cruden's Concordance to the Holy Scriptures.

SMITH'S DICTIONARY OF THE BIBLE. Edited by William Smith, LL.D., Classical Examiner of the University of London.

... account of each of the books of the Bible; explains the civil and religious institutions, the manners and customs, while many of the longer articles, being the results of the most finished scholarship, are complete treatises ...

This is, undoubtedly, the best work of its kind in the English language.

THE LIFE AND EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL. By the Rev. W. J. Conybeare, M.A., of Cambridge; and J. S. Howson, D.D., of Liverpool.

Contains 1,014 large octavo pages, many fine illustrations, maps, charts, etc., is printed on the same quality ... quently portrays the early life, education, conversion, teachings, labors, travels, sufferings, perils, persecutions, and missionary career of St. Paul, thus constituting a living picture ... he was surrounded.

HOW TO GET THE SIX BOOKS ALL SENT AT ONCE. CHOICE OF TWO PLANS.

1. Send $6, and we will forward the six books at once, securely boxed, and guarantee safe delivery, you paying freight or express ...

2. Send $1 ... $1 a month for six months, making $7 ... payment ...

Mention "The Christian Herald" and order quickly to be sure of getting the six books for less than the price of one. Our offer is a plain bona fide one. We have been before the public as publishers ... Y ... BANK, ... We ... monthly ... mony is "Do not see how you can furnish so much for so little." Take Notice.—We guarantee the books ... WE PAY EXPRESS CHARGES ... MONEY REFUNDED ... AS to our reliability, we refer to any commercial agency. Established 1866.

S. S. SCRANTON & CO., Publishers, . . . HARTFORD, CONN.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

VOLUME 22 NUMBER 41

COPYRIGHT 1899 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 11, 1899

PRICE FIVE CENTS

"I Pray that in my Old Age I may be Spared the Pain of Another War."—VICTORIA "The Transvaal will Neither Begin a War nor Take Any Step that may Result in War."—KRUGER

THE TRANSVAAL CONFLICT PORTRAITS OF QUEEN VICTORIA AND PRESIDENT KRÜGER

1. Boer Farmers "Trekking" in the Transvaal. 2. A British Soldier. 3. A Boer Sharpshooter. 4. Pretoria, the Capital of the Transvaal. (See page 766)

The Crisis in the Transvaal

Preparations for a Gigantic Struggle Being Made by the British and the Boers —Generals who will take Command

A BOER MILITARY PICKET ON THE TRANSVAAL-NATAL FRONTIER

NEWS from both the Transvaal and London during the week is of a warlike character. The dispatches are concerned less with the questions in dispute than with the strategic points occupied by the two armies. A speech by the Duke of Devonshire, an influential member of the British Cabinet, delivered on September 30, indicates the British attitude. He intimated that the latest dispatches to the Transvaal did not contain proposals, but demands. The latter word has an imperative, peremptory tone which implies an acute stage in the negotiations. The Duke did not say what the demands were, but a prominent journal, which is usually well informed, says that they include—first, franchise for aliens after five years residence; second, municipal self-government for Johannesburg, where the largest number of aliens reside; third, a judicature independent of the president and parliament; fourth, the abolition of the dynamite policy; fifth, the removal of the fort dominating Johannesburg, and, sixth, English to be taught in the schools which the aliens support. There appears to be nothing unreasonable in these demands, but as the Boers have rejected terms much more favorable, there is no ground for hope that they will accept these. It is evident, too, that the Boers resent the tone more than the matter of the English proposals. It assumes a right to interfere in the internal affairs of the Transvaal, which they are resolved never to concede. They contend that the Transvaal is an independent sovereign state which they have the right to govern in their own way. The British, on the other hand, contend that England is its suzerain, and as such has the right to insist on honest, impartial government. Mr. Chamberlain, who, as Secretary for the Colonies, is the spokesman for England in the negotiations, points out that the Transvaal cannot be a sovereign state, because the treaty of 1881 and the revised treaty of 1884, by which the state was constituted, expressly stipulates that the Transvaal shall make no treaty with any government except its neighbor, the Orange Free State, without first submitting it to the approval of the English Government. It is not asserted that the Transvaal has violated that stipulation, but it is quoted to prove that the country is not absolutely independent. If the claim of suzerainty is once admitted, the English attitude is justified, because a suzerain has the right to control the policy of its vassal.

The question of suzerainty, while really the basis of the English claim, has been kept in the background in the negotiations and Mr. Chamberlain has tried to convince the Boers that the best way of avoiding its being brought to the test of force is to grant the English demands. If, he says, the Boers would grant the franchise to foreigners, with a fair representation in the Volksraad, or Boer Parliament, the foreigners would be able to make their grievances known and take measures to secure redress. This would obviate the necessity for English interference, because her subjects in the Transvaal would then be able to protect their own interests by constitutional methods. This, however, the Boers steadfastly refuse to grant. They are evidently afraid that if the foreigners once obtained a share in the government, their numbers and wealth would soon give them a controlling influence and the Boers would find themselves in a minority in their own Parliament. Besides this, they contend that the foreigners are unwilling to abjure their allegiance to their Queen and thus they would be an undesirable addition to the constituency. It is nevertheless a fact that the Boer government gave an explicit pledge when the state was constituted that foreigners should be treated on equal terms with the Burghers and this pledge has not been kept.

MAP SHOWING THE SCENE OF THE TROUBLE IN SOUTH AFRICA

Both sides have now assumed that further negotiation is useless, and are merely preparing to put the dispute to the test of the sword. The Boers have taken up a position only two miles from the Natal frontier, and are prepared, at short notice, to cross the border by the old war trail of Laing's Nek. General Joubert, who was victorious over the British forces eighteen years ago, is once more in command, and has much difficulty in holding back his men, who are eager for the fray. So little do the rank and file know of the power of their antagonist that they talk freely of what will be done when the British forces are routed, and many of them boast that the next step will be for Oom Paul, as they familiarly call President Kruger, to take England. It now seems clear that the Transvaal will have the active assistance of the Orange Free State, though it is by no means sure that the sixty thousand men, that the Boers expect from that source, will be furnished. The best judges believe that not more than ten thousand will be willing to leave their farms and fight for their Boer kinsmen. The easy victory which the Boers achieved over Sir George Colley at Majuba Hill, and the prompt repulse of the Jameson raiders a few months ago, has evidently produced in their minds a confidence, which their best friends, who know how much larger is the force England intends putting in the field, are unable to disturb.

The British, on their side, are rapidly preparing for the conflict which now appears inevitable. In addition to the troops now in Natal and Cape Colony, an army corps of infantry, cavalry, and artillery comprising thirty-one thousand men is now ready for transport to the front, and the steamship companies have placed their vessels at the disposal of the government to convey them thither. Other forces from India, Malta, and Egypt are already on their way, so that in a few weeks, at furthest, England will have an army of nearly fifty thousand men ready to begin the conflict. General Sir Redvers Buller, who is known as one of England's most famous fighters, has been appointed to the supreme command toria, but several hard fought battles will have to be fought before that strongly fortified town can be approached. There is a general impression that the Boers will assume the offensive either by invading Natal or by attacking the British forces in Zululand. In the latter contingency, the blacks would have to be reckoned with, and it is not certain whether they would help the Boers or the British.

Lieut.-Gen. Sir F. W. E. Forestier-Walker and Major-Gen. Sir Charles Stewart White, who are both in command of British troops in Natal

A suggestion has found its way into print, that may eventually prove a solution to all the difficulties and, at the last moment, avert a war from which the best allied racially and politically with the Transvaal, shall annex that state. The two states together would have so many Dutchmen in the combined Volksraad that they could afford to give the most liberal franchise to the aliens without fear of being outnumbered. There would then arise no question of suzerainty, and the two states combined would have a strength that neither now possesses. That such a project would relieve the Transvaal of its difficulties is obvious, but there is little expectation of the Boers accepting it. So long as they believe themselves capable of maintaining their independence against England, they will be little likely to share their wealth with their impoverished neighbor, or to consent to lose the political power and the rich prizes that the control of the Transvaal brings them, even though both might go to men of their own race. Should they be defeated at the beginning of the war, that solution might prove more attractive, as it would obviously be more congenial to become a member of the Dutch federation than to have their country become an English colony.

Every day brings nearer the probability of a conflict, and possibly before these lines are in the hands of our readers the opening guns may have been fired. Mr. Conyngham Greene, the English representative, is, however, still at Pretoria, and so long as he remains diplomatic negotiations may be resumed. It is certain that both Queen Victoria and President Kruger are decidedly averse to war. The Queen has written to Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands a personal letter, deploring the turn events have taken and assuring her that she has "gone to the utmost limit of her constitutional power in her endeavor to secure peace." President Kruger, on his side, is reported to have said that he "would neither declare war nor begin war." The danger consists in the fact that the opposing forces do not share the reluctance of their chiefs. The British are eager to retrieve the reverses they suffered at the hands of the Boers eighteen years ago, and the Boers have that contempt for a foe that they have once beaten which victory so often produces. The two forces face one another on the southwestern border of the Transvaal, and are eager for the conflict to begin. Sentries have been doubled along the frontier line and pickets have been placed at all exposed points. The towns on both sides the border are deserted except by soldiers, and all signs of an immediate outbreak of hostilities are present. Meanwhile prayer goes up from Christian hearts everywhere that even yet the conflict may be averted.

A Famous Negro University

Wilberforce, where Many Great Educators of the Negro Race have been Trained—The Urgent Needs of a Worthy Institution

A GROUP OF WILBERFORCE TEACHERS

1. Miss Roberts, Art and Elementary. 2. Prof. Shorter Mathematics 3. Miss Clark, Science. 4. W. S. Scarborough, Vice Pres. 5. Prof. Prioleau, Theology. 6. Anna H. Jones, Principal. 7. T. H. Jackson, Theology.

THE story of the leading American college for the education of teachers of the negro race is one that is full of interest to all who have the welfare of that race at heart. It is of the highest importance to the nation that the education of the colored population should not be neglected, and none are so fitted to teach them as those who, belonging to their own race, have the keenest sympathy with them in the long struggle for enlightenment and progress which they have undergone.

Wilberforce University is situated in Greene County, Ohio, three and a half miles from Xenia, the county-seat, midway between Columbus and Cincinnati. Its location is favorable to the purposes for which it is designed—the education of the negro. Xenia is the "black belt" of the North; it was once the "underground railroad," and has a large percentage of colored people who came hither before and during the war. Then, too, it is not far from Kentucky. The University was incorporated in 1856, and passed into the possession and under the control of colored men in 1863, when Bishop Daniel A. Payne, himself a negro, purchased the property in the name of the African M. E. Church for $10,000. He was its first president after its purchase. Its finances are controlled by a board of trustees, who delegate their authority to an executive board of nine members. This board transacts generally the business of the University.

The principal funds that were early received by the institution were a bequest of $10,000 from Secretary Salmon P. Chase, for endowment; $10,000 from the Avery estate, for endowment; $6,000 from the American Unitarian Association; $18,000 from the Society of Collegiate and Theological Education in the West; $2,300 from the A. I. Powers' estate, and $5,000 from Mrs. Monroe, of Cleveland, O., for scholarships. The endowment fund is about $30,000, yielding an income of about $1,500. The A. M. E. Church contributes about $2,000 annually. The friends of the negro race—those interested in its elevation and education—contribute from time to time sufficient funds to help keep the school in operation. The entire expenses (about $15,000), are never all met at one time, so that the institution is constantly hampered and pressed for funds. The amount received from tuition and incidentals is small, as a large number of those students attending school are either beneficiaries or work their way through. They are poor, but deserving.

There are six departments: Preparatory, college, theological, musical, normal and industrial. A number of the pupils are from the South. Much stress, therefore, is laid upon the work done in the normal and industrial departments, as a majority of the graduates go South to labor among their own people. Booker T. Washington has from time to time employed graduates from this arm of the University to teach at Tuskegee. They have always proved faithful and successful. In Texas alone, there are several colonies of Wilberforce graduates employed as teachers. They are in demand in this State, and a Wilberforce diploma is regarded as equivalent to an examination, and is accepted instead of the usual examination tests. There are many of its graduates in the "black belts" of the South, laboring in various fields—generally teaching and preaching—striving to elevate their race. They are doing a good work—one of self sacrifice and devotion—such as their training at Wilberforce University fits them for. Could the life-work or the men and women trained at this University be given to the world, it would make a chapter that would more than justify every dollar contributed, every prayer offered and every longing of the heart of its well-wishers in its behalf.

Wilberforce—named after the great humanitarian, William Wilberforce—was founded in the fear of God and for the good of humanity. God's hand has guided all its past; His promises will make sure the contributions of the benevolent in the years that are to come.

Bishop B. W. Arnett, D. D., well-known throughout the country from his connection with the Christian Endeavor Society, and one of its trustees, was educated at Wilberforce. Miss Hallie Q. Brown, now laboring abroad in the interest of temperance in Great Britain, was a Wilberforce student. Rev. Dr. I. M. Burgan, President Paul Quinn College, Waco, Texas, was educated here. The Rev. G. W. Prioleau, D. D., chaplain of the Ninth Cavalry, is also a graduate of Wilberforce. Its President, Dr. S. T. Mitchell, is another graduate, class '73. Many other names might be mentioned, but it is unnecessary as it is easily inferred from what has been said what becomes of the Wilberforce graduates.

Over six thousand students have been enrolled since the establishment of the University. These represent many parts of the globe, including Haiti, Bermuda and Trinidad. Last year there were represented twenty-five states, aside from Canada, Jamaica and South Africa. At present there are eleven students from Africa, and others are coming. In this field alone Wilberforce is doing more than any other negro institution in America. From all departments there have gone forth over three hundred graduates, and more than that number from the industrial courses. At its recent commencement there was graduated a class of fifty-nine, from all courses.

From the first Tuesday in September to the third Thursday in June—the educational year—there is an average attendance of 300 students. The Normal Teacher's course is three years and the full course four years. Among the students there are some who are too poor to pay the very modest fees, and these are accepted on partial payment in money and part in labor. They work on the farm in the intervals of study and class attendance. If the means at the disposal of the University permitted, many more poor deserving students of this class could be assisted in the manner indicated. There is no greater need than that of means to help the hundreds who, in the midst of poverty and want, are pleading every year for intellectual light. Hundreds are turned away annually because of the lack of means.

There are other pressing needs also. A boys' dormitory building is necessary, also a chapel for religious worship, and a fund for additional scholarships and increased endowment.

The present buildings consist of four brick structures and a number of frame ones. The latter, however, have passed their day of usefulness, and will be torn down as soon as means are available for erecting new ones. There are about 6,000 volumes in the library.

To meet the more urgent demands made upon the meagre resources of the institution there is a pressing need of $5,000, and the conductors have asked all who are interested in the educational progress and elevation of the colored people to assist them in meeting the present emergency.

O'NEIL HALL, WILBERFORCE UNIVERSITY—PRESIDENT S. T. MITCHELL, LL.D.

Wilberforce is non-sectarian. Baptists, Presbyterians, Methodists and other denominations are represented in its classes, and its faculty is composed of all the leading orthodox denominations. Its charter prohibits all discrimination on account of race, color or creed among either its trustees, faculty or students. Its present officers are: Rev. S. T. Mitchell, LL.D., president; Prof. W. S. Scarborough, LL.D., a graduate of Oberlin College, vice-president; Rev. Horace Talbert, A.M., an alumnus of the college, secretary, and Rev. J. P. Maxwell, treasurer.

The average annual expense of a student at Wilberforce is about one hundred dollars. This includes tuition, incidentals, room-rent and board. In no case need the amount be more than one hundred and twenty-five dollars per year for a student.

The university has a military department, under the direct supervision of Lieut. Charles Young, First Lieutenant Ninth Cavalry—the only negro West Point graduate now in the service. He was specially detailed by the War Department by order of the President of the United States.

A Pastor-Evangelist

How a Washington Minister Combines the Evangelistic with the Pastoral Commission

SERVANTS of Christ fulfil their duties best when they hold themselves entirely at his disposal to go and do any kind of work that needs doing. Sometimes there is a reluctance to engage in any labor outside the well-defined limits of a certain sphere, and often there is a feeling that certain kinds of effort are beneath the dignity of a regularly ordained pastor. The church suffers when such a disposition becomes prevalent, and it prospers best when the leaders are like the great missionary Apostle who in the best sense was ready to be made all things to all men if by any means he might save some. A man of this spirit is Rev. E. Hez Swem, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, of Washington, D.C. Mr. Swem has a church of nearly eight hundred members and has consequently abundant pastoral occupation; but he finds time to help his brother ministers in Washington and other cities, and his church encourages him in his free labors outside its fold. Mr. Swem has found that the promise is fulfilled to him that they who wait on the Lord shall renew their strength. Some of his most effective sermons have been preached after a long series of revival meetings, when every one would have supposed that his chief need was that of rest. As our Lord said that his meat and drink was to do the will of Him who sent him, so his followers learn that there is no stimulus like that of helping in the winning of souls, and that the joy of bringing men to the feet of the Master gives renewed vigor to the worker.

REV. E. HEZ SWEM

Mr. Swem is a native of Indiana, the son of a well-known physician. He was educated in the public schools of his native town, whence he proceeded to De Pauw University. In his boyhood his powers of declamation suggested to his family and friends the probability of his becoming successful on the stage. He was himself attracted by the delights and honors of that career; but his conversion changed his point of view, and he willingly renounced the career of an actor for the higher joy of winning souls to Christ. He took a theological course in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, and afterwards made a tour of Bible lands. He has been pastor of his present church for fifteen years, during which his congregation and church membership has largely increased in spite of his frequent absences from the pulpit on evangelistic work. About six years ago it became necessary to build a more commodious church building, which would hold the crowds attracted by his preaching.

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT.

... The Hornet's Mission ...

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text, Deut. 7: 20: . . . . . The Lord thy God will send the hornet

It seems as if the insectile world were determined to extirpate the human race. It bombards the grain fields and the orchards and the vineyards. The Colorado beetle, the Nebraska grasshopper, the New Jersey locust, the universal potato-beetle, seem to carry on the work which was begun ages ago when the insects buzzed out of Noah's Ark as the door was opened.

In my text, the hornet flies out on its mission. It is a species of wasp, swift in its motion and violent in its sting. Its touch is torture to man or beast. We have all seen the cattle run bellowing under the cut of its lancet. In boyhood we used to stand cautiously looking at the globular nest hung from the tree-branch, and while we were looking at the wonderful covering, we were struck with something that sent us shrieking away. The hornet goes in swarms. It has captains over hundreds, and twenty of them alighting on one man will produce certain death.

The Persians attempted to conquer a Christian city, but the elephants and the beasts on which the Persians rode were assaulted by the hornet, so that the whole army was broken up, and the besieged city was rescued. This burning and noxious insect stung out the Hittites and the Canaanites from their country. What gleaming sword and chariot of war could not accomplish was done by the puncture of an insect. "The Lord sent the hornet."

My friends, when we are assaulted by great Behemoths of trouble, we become chivalric, and we assault them; we get on the high mettled steed of our courage, and we make a cavalry charge at them, and, if God be with us, we come out stronger and better than when we went in. But, alas, for these insectile annoyances of life—these foes too small to shoot—these things without any avoirdupois weight—the gnats and the midges and the flies and the wasps and the hornets! In other words, it is the small stinging annoyances of our life which drive us out and use us up. In the best conditioned life, for some grand and glorious purpose God has sent the hornet.

I remark, in the first place, that these small stinging annoyances may come in the shape of a nervous organization. People who are prostrated under typhoid fevers or with broken bones get plenty of sympathy; but who pities anybody that is nervous? The doctors say, and the family say, and everybody says, "Oh, she's only a little nervous; that's all!" The sound of a heavy foot, the harsh clearing of a throat, a discord in music, a want of harmony between the shawl and the glove on the same person, a curt answer, a passing slight, the wind from the east, any one of ten thousand annoyances, opens the door for the hornet. The fact is, that the vast majority of the people in this country are overworked, and their nerves are the first to give out. A great multitude are under the strain of Leyden, who, when he was told by his physician that if he did not stop working while he was in such poor physical health he would die, responded, "Doctor, whether I live or die, the wheel must keep going round." These sensitive persons, of whom I speak, have a bleeding sensitiveness. The flies love to light on anything raw, and these people are like the Canaanites spoken of in the text or in the context—they have a very thin covering, and are vulnerable at all points. "And the Lord sent the hornet."

Again, the small insect annoyances may come to us in the shape of friends and acquaintances who are always saying disagreeable things. There are some people you cannot be with for half an hour but you feel cheered and comforted. Then there are other people you cannot be with for five minutes before you feel miserable. They do not mean to disturb you, but they sting you to the bone. They gather up all the yarn which the gossips spin, and retail it. They gather up all the adverse criticisms about your person, about your business, about your home, about your church, and they make your ear the funnel into which they pour it. They laugh heartily when they tell you, as though it were a good joke, and you laugh, too—outside.

These people are brought to our attention in the Bible, in the book of Ruth. Naomi went forth beautiful and with the finest of worldly prospects, into another land; but, after a while, she came back widowed and sick and poor. What did her friends do when she came to the city? They all went out, and instead of giving her common-sense consolation, what did they do? Read the book of Ruth and find out. They threw up their hands and said, "Is this Naomi?" as much as to say, "How awful bad you do look!" When I entered the ministry, I looked very pale for years, and every year, for four or five years, many times a year I was asked if I had not consumption; and, passing through the room, I would sometimes hear people sigh and say, "A-ah! not long for this world!" I resolved in those times, that I never, in any conversation, would say anything depressing, and by the help of God I have kept the resolution. These people of whom I speak reap and bind in the great harvest-field of discouragement. Some day you greet them with a hilarious "good morning," and they come buzzing at you with some depressing information. "The Lord sent the hornet."

It is astonishing how some people prefer to write and to say disagreeable things. That was the case when Henry M. Stanley returned after his magnificent exploit of finding David Livingstone. When Mr. Stanley stood before the savants of Europe, and many of the small critics of the day, under pretence of getting geographical information, put to him most insolent questions, he folded his arms and refused to answer. At the very time when you would suppose all decent men would have applauded the heroism of the man, there were those to hiss. "The Lord sent the hornet." And when afterward that man sat down on the western coast of Africa, sick and worn out, with perhaps the grandest achievement of the age in the way of geographical discovery, there were small critics all over the world to buzz and buzz, and caricature and deride him, and when after a while he got the London papers, as he opened them out flew the hornet. When I see that there are so many people in the world who like to say disagreeable things and write disagreeable things, I come almost in my weaker moments to believe what a man said to me in Philadelphia one Monday morning. I went to get the horse at the livery stable, and the hostler, a plain man, said to me: "Mr. Talmage, I saw that you preached to the young men yesterday." I said, "Yes." He said: "No use, no use; man's a failure."

The small insect annoyances of life sometimes come in the shape of local physical trouble, which does not amount to a positive prostration, but which bothers you when you want to feel the best. Perhaps it is a sick-headache which has been the plague of your life, and you appoint some occasion of mirth, or sociality, or usefulness, and when the clock strikes the hour you cannot make your appearance. Perhaps the trouble is between the ear and the forehead, in the shape of a neuralgic twinge. Nobody can see it or sympathize with it; but just at the time when you want your intellect clearest, and your disposition brightest, you feel a sharp, keen, disconcerting thrust. "The Lord sent the hornet."

Perhaps these small insect annoyances will come in the shape of a domestic irritation. The parlor and the kitchen do not always harmonize. To get good service, and to keep it, is one of the great questions of the country. Sometimes it may be the arrogance and inconsiderateness of employers, but, whatever be the fact, we all admit there are these insect annoyances winging their way out from the culinary department. If the grace of God be not in the heart of the housekeeper, she cannot maintain her equilibrium. The men come home at night and hear the story of these annoyances, and say, "Oh, these home troubles are very little things!" They are small, small as wasps, but they sting. Martha's nerves were all unstrung when she rushed in, asking Christ to scold Mary, and there are tens of thousands of women who are dying, stung to death by these pestiferous domestic annoyances. "The Lord sent the hornet."

These small insect disturbances may also come in the shape of business irritations. There are men here who went through the 24th of September, 1869, and the panics of 1873 and of 1893 without losing their balance, who are every day unhorsed by little annoyances—a clerk's ill manners, or a blot of ink on a bill of lading, or the extravagance of a partner who overdraws his account, or the undersselling by a business rival, or the whispering of store-confidences in the street, or the making of some little bad debt which was against your judgment; but you wanted to please somebody else.

It is not the panics that kill the merchants. Panics come only once in ten or twenty years. It is the constant din of these every-day annoyances which is sending so many of our best merchants into nervous dyspepsia and paralysis and the grave. When our national commerce fell flat on its face, these men stood up and felt almost defiant; but their life is going away now under the swarm of these pestiferous annoyances. "The Lord sent the hornet."

I have noticed in the history of some of my congregation that their annoyances are multiplying, and that they have a hundred where they used to have ten. The naturalist tells us that a wasp sometimes has a family of twenty thousand wasps, and it does seem as if every annoyance of your life brooded a million. By the help of God, to-day I want to show you the other side. The hornet is of no use? Oh, yes! The naturalist tells us they are very important in the world's economy; they kill spiders, and they clear the atmosphere. And I really believe God sends the annoyances of our life upon us to kill the spiders of the soul, and to clear the atmosphere of our skies.

These annoyances are sent on us, I think, to wake us up from our lethargy. There is nothing that makes a man so lively as a nest of "yellow jackets," and I think that these annoyances are intended to persuade us of the fact that this is not a world for us to stop in. If we had a bed of everything that was attractive and soft and easy, what would we want of heaven? We think that the hollow tree sends the hornet, or we may think that the devil sends the hornet. I want to correct your opinion. "The Lord sent the hornet."

Then I think these annoyances come on us to cultivate our patience. In the gymnasium you find upright parallel bars with holes over each other for pegs to be put in. Then the gymnast takes a peg in each hand and he begins to climb, one inch at a time, or two inches, and getting his strength cultivated, reaches after a while the ceiling. And it seems to me that these annoyances in life are a moral gymnasium, each worriment a peg with which we are to climb higher and higher in Christian attainment. We all love to see patience, but it cannot be cultivated in fair weather. Patience is a child of the storm. If you had everything desirable, and there was nothing more to get, what would you want with patience? The only time to cultivate it is when you are lied about, and sick and half dead.

"Oh," you say, "if I only had the circumstances of some well-to-do man I would be patient, too." You might as well say, "If it were not for this water I would swim," or, "I could shoot this gun if it were not for the cartridge." When you stand chin deep in annoyances is the time for you to swim out across the great headlands of Christian attainment, so as to "know Christ and the power of his resurrection, and to have fellowship with his sufferings."

Nothing but the furnace will ever burn out of us the clinker and the slag. I have formed this theory in regard to small annoyances and vexations. It takes just so much trouble to fit us for usefulness and for heaven. The only question is, whether we shall take it in the bulk or pulverized and granulated. Here is one man who takes it in the bulk. His back is broken, or his eyesight put out, or some other awful calamity befalls him; while the vast majority of people take the thing piecemeal. Which way would you rather have it? Of course, in piecemeal. Better have five aching teeth than one broken jaw; better ten fly blisters than an amputation; better twenty squalls than one cyclone. There may be a difference of opinion as to allopathy and homeopathy, but in this matter of trouble I like homeopathic doses—small pellets of annoyance rather than some knock down dose of calamity. Instead of the thunderbolt give us the hornet. If you have a bank, you would a great deal rather that fifty men would come in with checks less than a hundred dollars than to have two depositors come in the same day, each wanting his ten thousand dollars. In this latter case you cough and look down to the floor and you look up to the ceiling before you look into the safe. Now, my friends, would you not rather have these small drafts of annoyance on your bank of faith than some all-staggering demand upon your endurance? But remember that little as well as great annoyances equally require you to trust in Christ for succor, and for deliverance from impatience and irritability. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee."

In the village of Hamelin, tradition says, there was an invasion of rats, and these small creatures almost devoured the town, and threatened the lives of the population; and the story is that a piper came out one day and played a very sweet tune, and all the vermin followed him—followed him to the banks of the Weser, and then he blew a blast and they dropped in and disappeared forever. Of course, this is a fable; but I wish I could, on the sweet flute of the Gospel, draw forth all the nibbling and burrowing annoyances of your life, and play them down into the depths forever.

How many touches did Mr. Church give to his picture of "Cotopaxi," or his "Heart of the Andes"? I suppose about fifty thousand touches. I hear the canvas saying, "Why do you keep me trembling with that pencil so long? Why don't you put it on in one dash?" "No," says Mr. Church, "I know how to make a painting; it will take fifty thousand of these touches." And I want you, my friends, to understand that it is these ten thousand annoyances which, under God, are making up the picture of your life, to be hung at last in the galleries of heaven, fit for angels to look at. God knows how to make a picture.

I go into a sculptor's studio and see him shaping a statue. He has a chisel in one hand and a mallet in the other, and he gives a very gentle stroke—click, click, click! I say, "Why don't you strike harder?" "Oh," he replies, "that would shatter the statue. I can't do it that way; I must do it this way." So he works on, and after a while the features come out, and everybody that enters the studio is charmed and fascinated. Well, God has your soul under process of development, and it is the little annoyances and vexations of life that are chiselling out your immortal nature. It is click, click, click! I wonder why some great providence does not come, and with one stroke prepare you for heaven. Ah, no; God says that is not the way. And so he keeps on by strokes of little vexations, until at last you shall be a glad spectacle for angels and for men.

You know that a large fortune may be spent in small change, and a vast amount of moral character may go away in small depletions. It is the little troubles of life that are having more effect upon you than great ones. A swarm of locusts will kill a grain field sooner than the incursion of three or four cattle. You say, "Since I lost my child, since I lost my property, I have been a different man." But you do not recognize the architecture of little annoyances, that are hewing, digging, cutting, shaping, splitting, and interjoining your moral qualities. Rats may sink a ship. One lucifer match may send destruction through a block of store-houses. Catherine de Medicis got her death from smelling a poisonous rose. Columbus, by stopping and asking for a piece of bread and a drink of water at a Franciscan convent, was led to the discovery of a new world. And there is an intimate connection between trifles and immensities, between nothings and everythings.

Now, be careful to let none of those annoyances go through your soul unarraigned. Compel them to administer to your spiritual wealth. The scratch of a six-penny nail sometimes produces lockjaw, and the clip of a most infinitesimal annoyance may damage you forever. Do not let any annoyance or perplexity come across your soul without its making you better.

Our national government, when it wanted money, did not think it belittling to put a tax on pins, and a tax on buckles, and a tax on shoes. The individual taxes do not amount to much, but in the aggregate to millions and millions of dollars. And I would have you, O Christian man, put a high tariff on every annoyance and vexation that comes through your soul. This might not amount to much, in single cases, but in the aggregate it would be a great revenue of spiritual strength and satisfaction. A bee can suck honey even out of a nettle; and if you have the grace of God in your heart, you can get sweetness out of that which would otherwise irritate and annoy. The earth has been strewn with the carcasses of men slain by insect annoyances. O Christian men, if you cannot apply the principles of Christ's religion on a small scale, you will never be able to apply them on a large scale. If I had my way with you I would have you possess all possible worldly prosperity. I would have you a splendid mansion, the beds covered with upholstery dipped in the setting sun. I would have every hall in your house set with statues and statuettes, and then I would have the four quarters of the globe pour in all their luxuries on your table, and you should have forks of silver and knives of gold, inlaid with diamonds and amethysts. Then you should each one of you have the finest horses, and your pick of the equipages of the world. Then I would have you live a hundred and fifty years, and you should not have a single pain or a single ache until the last breath.

Polycarp was condemned to be burned to death. The stake was planted. He was fastened to it. The fagots were placed around him, the fires kindled, but history tells us that the flames bent outward like the canvas of a ship in a stout breeze, so that the flames, instead of destroying Polycarp, were only a wall between him and his enemies. They had actually to destroy him with the poniard; the flames would not touch him. Well, my hearer, I want you to understand that by God's grace the flames of trial, instead of consuming your soul, are only going to be a wall of defence, and a canopy of blessing. God is going to fulfil to you the blessings and the promises, as he did to Polycarp. "When thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be burned." Now you do not understand; but you shall know hereafter. In heaven you will bless God even for the hornet.

The Nation Honors Dewey

After the Magnificent New York Pageant, He Reviews a Military Parade in Washington and is Invited to Other Cities—Echoes of the Celebration

AFTER a season of patriotic ecstacy, New York has doffed her dress of brilliant bunting, the million and a half visitors who crowded her streets and filled her hotels have disappeared, and the great demonstration in honor of Admiral Dewey is a thing of the past. While it lasted, it afforded such a sensation as the metropolis has rarely experienced. What with the splendors of naval and land parades, the incessant roaring of great guns, the multitude of glittering uniforms, the dense crowds of jubilant sightseers on every corner, and the general holiday aspect of everybody and everything, the big city fairly abandoned itself to the spirit of admiration to the bravery of the crews who had served under him, and to whom he attributed, as much as to his own efforts, the results that had been achieved.

In the widest sense, New York's demonstration in Admiral Dewey's honor was non-political and non-partisan. It was a tribute to the hero himself, and incidentally to his gallant crew. Had he permitted it, enthusiastic and generous hearted people would have loaded him with rich gifts as evidence of their admiration of the man. As it was, every appropriate token that patriotic hearts could devise was thrust upon him. Flowers were piled upon the Olympia's deck, and her commander's cabin was like a fragrant rose-garden. Some of the gifts were unique. One enthusiastic admirer gave him a young lion cub, which instantly became a pet. Another gift was a beautiful and costly loving cup of silver and gold. Flags, vases, floral horseshoes, an album containing the printed records of his the "Dewey days" and celebrated to its heart's content. As for the gallant Admiral himself he bore the social ordeal with remarkable fortitude and good-nature. Hardly an hour of the twenty-four could he call his own while the festivities lasted. From daylight till long after dark he graciously surrendered to the demands made upon his time and attention without a murmur, save possibly when he diplomatically cut short the dry formal addresses which many would fain have delivered before him. Even while his big ship, the Olympia, was overrun with visitors, he stood the test with impregnable good-nature and thereby achieved a reputation as a courteous naval host that is second only to his fame as the victor of Manila Bay. For many years to come, thousands will tell of their visit to the great Admiral.

Admiral Dewey was simply astounded at the magnificence of the reception, both by sea and land. "I seem dazed at it all," he said, on reviewing the military procession, and he added modestly: "It is beyond my comprehension why all this superb spectacle should have been gotten up in my honor. I seem to be a mere spectator instead of the object of this tremendous ovation. I have done nothing more than my duty—nothing that any other officer of the navy would not have done had he been in my place." Repeatedly he referred with genuine adgallant deeds gathered from a hundred publications, a silver service for his use on board,—these are only a few of the many reminders he possesses of the hearty admiration of the metropolis and its people.

Nowhere was the enthusiasm more pronounced than among the young folks. Dewey has indeed become the hero of the children. At seventy-second street and Central Park West there was a great gathering of several thousand school children, the juveniles being massed artistically on a sloping platform so that the living letters DEWEY, composed of hundreds of little girls in white dresses stood out in bold relief against a living background of youngsters in dark clothes. At 102nd street there was another gathering of children. The great Admiral bowed to the little ones and appeared to be greatly pleased at their presence in the demonstration.

The two allegorical floats, "Peace" and "Victory," were greatly admired, and although they had been hastily constructed, and were insecure owing to the high winds and the roughness of the water, they attracted much enthusiasm from the fleet and the crowds of spectators.

Some of the statistics connected with the celebration are instructive, and show it to have been without a parallel in many respects. Over 1,000 vessels of various descriptions were in line at the Naval Parade, which was viewed by nearly 2,000,000 spectators along shore in the city and its suburbs, and on the islands, and probably 50,000 afloat. The land parade was witnessed by the greatest gathering ever known in New York, variously estimated at from 1,500,000 to 2,500,000, and probably even much larger, since the entire population, together with over a million strangers, seemed to be crowded along the line of march. It is believed that, including city appropriations, all expenditures by citizens and strangers, hotel bills, traveling fares, illuminations and decorations and other charges, a total exceeding $20,000,000 was expended in the metropolis during the "Dewey days." The Admiral's ship, the Olympia, had over 9,000 visitors—5,000 in a single day.

Thoroughly fatigued after the pageant on Saturday, the Admiral declined all further hospitalities. On Sunday he rested. The two days' ordeal had worn him completely out, and he wisely heeded the protest of exhausted nature.

On Monday he went to Washington by special train, to be the central figure in another great military ovation, and where, after being welcomed by the President and reviewing two parades, he would be presented with the splendid sword voted to him by Congress. Chicago, Philadelphia and other cities are each eagerly urging him to give them the honor of a visit; but Admiral Dewey is diplomatic, and satisfies all without making definite promises. He will, however, undoubtedly accept some of these very cordial invitations at a convenient hereafter.

One of the very prettiest features of Admiral Dewey's welcome was the serenade rendered on the night of the 28th, while the Olympia lay at anchor off Staten Island, by the People's Choral Union, two thousand strong (and all working people), on the boats Warwick and Mount Hope. As the singers neared the Olympia, they began the Alleluia Chorus from Handel's "Messiah"—bass singers in the extreme bow, sopranos on the port side, altos on the starboard, tenors amidship, each answering to each, sang out the noble words, "Alleluia! alleluia! the Lord God omnipotent reigneth, and he shall reign forever and ever." As the words died away, a salute thundered from the Olympia, and the "jackies" shouted applause. Then, after more singing, Ambrose Phipps, president of the Choral Union, went up on the Olympia's quarter-deck, and singers presented the Admiral with a great bunch of red roses.

The superb Dewey Memorial Arch, which was shown in the beautiful two-page illustration in last week's CHRISTIAN HERALD, has been—next to the Admiral himself, and his warship—the greatest centre of attraction. Vandals have already begun to deface it, chipping off pieces of the sides to carry away as souvenirs. It is proposed to reproduce the arch in granite and marble in Central Park, in order that it may be made a permanent attraction.

CROWDED EXCURSION BOATS

THE NAVAL PARADE, AS VIEWED FROM RIVERSIDE DRIVE

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Ezra's Journey to Jerusalem

S. S. Lesson for Oct. 22. Ezra 8: 21 32

Golden Text, Ezra 8: 22

BY MRS. M. BAXTER

A MAN of great piety and learning was Ezra: a priest descended in a direct line from Aaron, having a reputation as a scribe of the law of God, well known to the reigning king of Persia, Artaxerxes, who calls him "the scribe, even the scribe of the words of the commandments of the Lord, and of his statutes to Israel" (7: 11). Ezra was a Bible student after God's own heart: for he learned not only intellectually, but he "set his heart to seek the law of the Lord, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments" (Ezra 7: 6, 10). Daniel had done the same, and his heart had longed for the return of his people from captivity. Zechariah and Joshua, the high priests, and Haggai, the prophet, had all the same burden upon them; just as Jeremiah at the commencement of the captivity, and Ezekiel through a considerable part of it. All three men had felt deeply the shame and disgrace of God's people under the judgments which had come upon them. Perhaps the deepest grief which Ezra had was that Cyrus had made it possible for all who would to return to the land which God had given to their fathers, and that only about fifty thousand had cared to avail themselves of the opportunity. God's people had learned to be at home among the heathen!

Thus Ezra was stirred up to make a request of the king for a second return of Israel out of Babylonia: "and the king granted him all his request, according to the hand of the Lord His God upon him" (Ezra 7: 6). The hand of the Lord gives "good measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over" (Luke 6: 38), just as Christ says men also shall give to them who give. The king had learned to respect the Word of God. In his written decree he says to Ezra, "Thou art sent of the king and his seven counsellors to inquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, according to the law of thy God which is in thine hand:" and it is wonderful how this king of a heathen land recognizes the God of Israel. He and his counsellors "freely offered" silver and gold, and caused a free-will offering of the people (the Jews) and of the priests, offering willingly for the house of their God, which is in Jerusalem (verses 15, 16); this provision to be for offerings upon the altar of God in Jerusalem, and the remainder of the money "do ye after the will of your God." He gives vessels "... for the service of the house of thy God, ... the God of Jerusalem."

And, moreover, the treasurers beyond the river were commanded to give supplies up to a hundred talents of silver, a hundred measures of wheat, a hundred bottles of oil, and salt, without prescribing how much. There is no stint in this decree: "Whatsoever is commanded by the God of Heaven [not only the God of Jerusalem] let it be done exactly for the house of the God of heaven, for why should there be wrath against the realm of the king and his house?" We are reminded of the king of Nineveh in the days of Jonah. Again, the king remitted all taxes, "tribute, custom or toll," which might be imposed upon any who should serve in the cause of the Lord (v. 23), and then the decree closes with an earnest exhortation to Ezra himself to appoint as magistrates and judges "all such as know the laws of thy God, and teach ye him that knoweth not." And yet more, the king makes common cause with God in his laws: "Whosoever will not do the law of thy God and the law of the king, let judgment be executed upon him," etc.

How came it that this king was brought [illegible] nezzar, Cyrus, and Darius brought to fear God? In answer to the prayers of his believing children to whom his cause was dear. Ezra tells us nothing of his own prayers, but he breaks forth into praise for the answer. "Blessed be the Lord, the God of our fathers, which hath put such a thing as this in the king's heart, to beautify the house of the Lord, which is in Jerusalem; and hath extended mercy unto me before the king and his counsellors, and before all the king's mighty princes. And I was strengthened according to the hand of the Lord my God upon me, and I gathered together out of Israel chief men to go up with me." For the king had commanded that all who were minded of their own free will should go up to Jerusalem with him (v. 13). Blessed is the man who has more to say of God's answers than of his prayers!

A company was thus gathered, and the rendezvous where they were to gather was "the river that runneth to Ahava," and "there we encamped three days" (8: 15). On reviewing the company Ezra discovered that none of the Levites were with them. Therefore, before proceeding with their journey, Ezra sent for some of the Levites whom he knew, "who were teachers." These were necessary, for Ezra had no mind to do a merely superficial work: his heart was set upon making the Word of God the guide of his people as it was his own guide. Did he pray about this matter? Surely, when he says, "And according to the good hand of our God upon us," there lies the secret that he expected teachers not so much through the earnestness of his appeal to them, as through his appeal to God for them. And accordingly "they brought us a man of discretion, of the sons of Mahli, the son of Levi, the son of Israel," and thirty-eight more; also two hundred and twenty of the Nethinim to the service of the house of the Lord.

Now that the company was gathered, should they not press on without losing time? The greatest loss of time to a child of God is to be uncertain about his will. "Let us run with patience" (Heb. 12: 1), patience which waits for direction. To Ezra it was economy of time to publish a fast "... that we might humble ourselves before our God, to seek of him a straight way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our substance." What was the trouble? The journey was dangerous: they might fall into the hands of their enemies. So Ezra says, "For I was ashamed to ask of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in the way, because we had spoken unto the king, saying, The hand of our God is upon all who seek him for good; but his power and his wrath is against all that forsake him."

This is the true consistency of a man of God. He can bear witness of God to the king, and he fully believed in and counted on this protection, but he does not therefore presume. Knowing that God is on his side, he does not therefore say, "It is all right; no harm can happen to us; but he seeks the face of God. For this, moreover—i. e., what he has already promised—will I be inquired of by the house of Israel to do it for them" (Ezek. 36: 37). We can never be too dependent upon our God; we are never in a position in which prayer is unnecessary. "So we fasted and besought our God for this; and he was entreated of us." Had Ezra an intimation that they were heard? We believe it was so.

Now that matters were settled with God, he was ready for the business arrangements with man. As in the early church men who were of good report, full of the spirit of wisdom, were chosen as deacons (Acts 6: 3), so now Ezra separated twelve of the chief of the priests to take charge of the treasure which had been committed to them, saying, "Ye are holy unto the Lord; the vessels are holy; and the silver and the gold are a free-will offering unto the Lord God of your fathers. Watch ye and keep them."

ORIENTAL TRAVELERS STARTING ON A DESERT JOURNEY

Lesson Points

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers

SIXTY years had passed, leaving no record of the proceedings of the little colony in Palestine. A large number of Jews remained in Babylon and other parts of the Persian empire. They evidently prospered, and with their prosperity there was a toning up of the religious spirit. But for that fact they would have been absorbed. Their existence as a separate people depended on their religion. They had leisure for study and they appeared to have had facilities in the schools of the empire. Learning had made great strides in Babylon, as we know from the terra cotta tablets recently unearthed. The Jews would be likely to make the most of the opportunities and they appear to have paid special attention to their own annals. After the murder of Xerxes, the Ahasuerus of Esther, there was a period of disturbance, but finally his youngest son, Artaxerxes, succeeded in establishing himself on the throne. His greatest difficulty was with Egypt, which had risen in rebellion and menaced the western portion of the empire. Following the policy of Cyrus and Darius, Artaxerxes seems to have conceived the idea of establishing in Palestine a colony which would resist the Egyptian inroads, and no better material for such a colony could be found than the original people of the country. Accordingly, Artaxerxes renewed the offer of freedom made by Cyrus to the Jewish captives, and gave them permission to return to their own land. He was so interested in the project that he entered fully into the arrangements. A leader was needed, and there was one ready to his hand, in all respects suited to the purpose. We judge from the personal tone of the edict issued by Artaxerxes, that he was already acquainted with Ezra and had full confidence in him. Ezra deserved this confidence. He was a man of profound learning and if, as is almost certain, he was the author of the two books of Chronicles, he was a man of marked literary ability. He was also descended in direct line from Aaron, the first high-priest, which would give him prestige in the eyes of the Jews. Him, [illegible] structed him to gather such of his countrymen as were willing to return, and lead them to Jerusalem. The king probably [illegible] actually occurred. The people were comfortable in Babylon; they would have to leave their possessions, give up their business, undertake a long and dangerous journey and at the end would find an impoverished colony, which had deteriorated in the distant abode. Ezra's following could not have been more than seven thousand persons and it was only by a strong personal appeal that he could get any Levites to join the company. He gathered them at a place which he calls Ahava, probably the modern Hit, and there inaugurated the expedition with a three days' fast. The direct route to Palestine was westward, across the desert, a distance of five hundred and twenty miles, but it would be difficult to take such a caravan over a waterless tract and besides, they would be liable to attacks from the Bedouin robbers. As they carried a quantity of gold vessels and precious metals worth about four million dollars, the gifts of the king, of the Babylonian people and of the Jews who did not go, it was necessary first of all, to consider which route promised the greatest safety. Ezra seems to have proceeded northward for a considerable distance to Balis, and then to have turned westward along the caravan route to Damascus, where he would turn southward to reach Jerusalem. This route was not far from a thousand miles, and the journey occupied four months. It was safely accomplished, and in the month of July B. C. 458, he arrived in [illegible]

[illegible] This [illegible] It is easy to see that Ezra appreciated the perils of the journey, and the most natural course would have been to ask for an armed escort, which the king would surely have granted. But then would not the king have drawn the conclusion that Ezra was not so confident of divine protection as he had represented himself as being? During the early part of George Muller's career, he was often urged to appeal to the public for funds to carry on his or- [illegible] that there were rich men who would undoubtedly help him if they knew that he had several hundred orphans depending upon him, and not enough food for the next day. His reply was always the same. He would make no appeal to anyone but to God, because his work was started with the avowed object of proving that God would provide for those who trusted in him, and to appeal to men would imply a doubt of God's provision. Therefore all through his long career, even when food and money were both exhausted, no man knew of the strait and God always furnished the table in time.

[illegible] beginning an enterprise so full of danger. There is no merit in fasting, except as it is an expression of humility and desire for communion with God. It is not every man in the high position of leader of a great enterprise who would like to propose inauguration by a season of devotion. Carlyle draws a vivid picture of such a scene in the English Parliament in the time of the revolution under Cromwell. Five hundred English gentlemen having taken the oath as members of Parliament fell down on their knees in the House to ask divine direction. They needed such help in a marked degree.

He delivered us. Ezra doubtless took all the precautions he could in getting his caravan safely through to Palestine, but he takes no credit for it. He says God delivered them. That man is wise who sees God in all the events of life. He is not relieved of the duty of exertion or caution, but he is conscious of the protecting hand over him. Oliver Cromwell's instructions to his troops were, "Trust in God and keep your powder dry."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Jacob W., Louisville, Ky. Had the United States a public debt a hundred years ago? If so, what was the amount?

In 1789 our government began, under the Constitution, with a foreign debt of $15,000,000 and a domestic debt of $42,000,000. It then assumed the debts of the States, amounting to $22,000,000, which they had contracted during the War of the Revolution. This combined debt was funded, and in 1796 the total national liability was $83,800,000. In 1799, a century ago, it may have been a few millions less, but it rose shortly thereafter on account of the Louisiana purchase.

Reader, Tallahassee, Fla. What is the average daily volume of business of the New York Clearing House?

The average is about $130,000,000 per day, and it has occasionally run up as high as $165,000,000 in one day.

S. S., Paterson, N. J. Is the Greek myth of Deukalion founded on the Hebrew story of the flood? What are the points of similarity?

There are so many variants of the flood found in different parts of the globe that the story may be said to be well nigh universal, and all have certain features in common. According to the ancient Greek myth, Zeus, perceiving the sinfulness of the world, determined to exterminate man. Deukalion, the son of Prometheus, dwelling in the highlands of Phthia, had been warned by his father of the approaching deluge and had prepared an ark in which he now placed Pyrrha, his wife, and an ample store of food. The flood lasted nine days and all mankind save those in the ark and a few persons who found shelter on the summit of the highest mountains, perished. Deukalion's vessel alighted on Mount Parnassus. He lamented the destruction of the race and Zeus instructed him to "cast the bones of his mother behind him." Deukalion flung stones behind him, which changed into men, and Pyrrha did likewise, those she threw being transformed into women, and so the earth was repeopled.

J. N. D. L., Travis S. C. What is the reason for beginning the word "Filipinos" with an F, and having in it only one p, when "Philippines," the name of the islands, begins with Ph and has pp in it?

The former is the Spanish form of spelling the word, and, by general consent, is employed in referring to the natives, while the English spelling is adopted in referring to the islands.

Christian, Philadelphia. When a person gives a tenth of his income to the Lord, ought he to give it to the church and let them divide it for the different causes, or would it be right for him to divide it as he thought best?

While there is nothing to prevent a person being the administrator of his own gifts, it is generally agreed that the wisest way, and that which is most likely to produce substantial and permanent results, is to employ the regularly organized channels. The church has its organization so perfected that in a majority of cases it is capable of doing more good with a given amount than would be possible in the case of an individual administrator. It has all the machinery for educational, missionary, evangelistic and benevolent work ready to hand, with tried and experienced men at the head of every branch and thoroughly familiar with every field of effort. It is quite clear that the individual who ignores such advantages and acts independently, while he may do well, misses the valuable aid which the use of the church's facilities and wider experience would give.

Miss J. Adolphson, of the Gospel Mission, 211 South Main street, Burlington, Ia., writes us that an effort is being made by a number of Christian people in that city to establish a much-needed Rescue Home for unfortunate girls. Any reader interested in the work may communicate with her at the address given.

O. W. S., Chicopee, Mass. Apropos of the sermon in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD on "Divorce," I find this emphatic comment in a Springfield daily, and I judge that 20,000 divorces in New England in twenty years is very near the mark. I trust that your appeal to Congress will not fall of reasonable response.

The correspondent encloses a newspaper clipping which shows shows that a Massachusetts judge in opening court, found fifty divorce cases awaiting trial, besides new suits ready to go on the calendar.

M. A. M., Rapid City, S. Dak. We do not think the writer of the slip you send has any clear views on the subject—certainly none that can be helpful even in the smallest degree, to the enquiring soul.

Inquirer, New York City. What was the custom among the ancient nations in reckoning the beginning and ending of the day?

The Chaldeans, Persians and Syrians reckoned daybreak or sunrise as the beginning of the day; the Chinese, like ourselves, began their day at the moment of midnight; the Hebrews reckoned theirs from evening to evening—a method which is in accord with the Mosaic story of the Creation, where the natural night precedes the morning. Tacitus states that the ancient Germans reckoned by nights instead of by days. The Romans designed the time between sunrise and sunset as "the natural day," and the whole twenty four hours as the "civil day," beginning and ending at midnight.

John L. M., Rhinebeck, N. Y. How must I proceed in order to learn all about a Civil Service examination?

If for Departmental Service or the Government Printing Office, address the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., making formal application for the blanks required to enable you to apply for the particular examination at which you desire to appear, and also ask for information as to date and place of holding it. If for the Custom House, address the Secretary, Board of Civil Service Examiners, Custom House, in that particular city and state, and if for Post office or Internal Revenue Service, address Secretary of the appropriate Board of Examiners, in each case mentioning the Custom House, Post office or Internal Revenue office at which the applicant wishes appointment.

Wm. McL., Indianapolis, Ind. Without raising the question whether or not the work was one of necessity, are there any well authenticated cases of Sunday labor, outside the cities, being punished by law in the United States?

Yes; there have been several. In Arkansas, a man was indicted for cutting his wheat on Sunday. The court held that the "husbandman should look forward to the ripening of his grain as an event which must happen, and should make such timely provision for the harvest as not to violate the Sabbath. This is a duty enjoined alike upon the poor and the rich." Still, although the Sunday laws are variously construed in different states—some being more rigid in their enforcement than others—we think that these laws are rarely if ever enforced without regard to the essential point whether the labor complained of, was a work of "necessity or mercy." In some states, hauling fruit and harvesting crops, under exceptional circumstances, are excluded.

M. D. W., Kiowa, Kans. If we are nowhere in the Bible commanded to keep the first day of the week holy, how can business or pleasure be Sabbath desecration?

Because the day is set apart for religious observance. We keep that day in celebration of the resurrection of Christ from the dead, and we ought to devote it to his service. One day in seven is little enough to give to the concerns of the soul, which are more important than the concerns of the body.

E. F. Vogl. The ancient German flag, or national colors, were black, red and gold. In what century did Germany adopt these colors, and in what century did she discard them for the present national colors?

In Hulme's Flags of the World the following information is given in regard to the German national colors: In 1867, on the establishment of the North German confederation, at the conclusion of the Austro-Prussian campaign, the king of Prussia sanctioned a proposal for a flag common to all. The decree says: "The confederate flag, henceforth solely to bear the qualification of the national flag, and as such to be used exclusively on the merchant marine of the confederacy, shall be composed of three equilateral stripes horizontally arranged, the color of the top one being black, the middle stripe white, and the bottom stripe red." On the inclusion of other German states and the formation of the German Empire, the same flag was retained. "Up to 1867," says Hulme, "no German national flag had ever flown on the ocean, as the various states and five cities had their special colors of merely local value." Some of these special colors were, we believe, black, white, red and gold.

M. E. S., Lorado, Ark. In a recent sermon preached here a minister said that there was not a criminal in the penitentiary who had been baptized. If that was true of our local penitentiary, is it true of others?

It is not. There are plenty of criminals in the various penitentiaries who were baptized in their infancy. If such a fact as the minister stated applied to all our penal institutions, the coincidence would be extraordinary. We should have to conclude that there was some preventive virtue in the ordinance which kept men from crime. As a matter of fact, those who practice infant baptism, with few exceptions, regard it as simply an act of dedication, and do not expect from it any magical or supernatural results.

M. S. W., Elkhart, Ind. 1. What are we to understand by "water" in John 3: 5? 2. What advantage over the chapter-by-chapter method is there in the International Sunday School Lessons?

1. The passage is a difficult one: but the most reasonable explanation is that Jesus, talking with a Jewish ruler who was familiar with the [illegible] to Judaism, used it as an illustration of the fact that even a Jew must begin a new life before he entered the kingdom of God. Just as the Gentile by the water of baptism, administered when he became a proselyte, began life as a Jew, so the Jew must enter into the kingdom by a formal act of confession. 2. The only advantage [illegible] Bible truth in a course of [illegible] is the average length of a child's attendance in Sunday School. The chapter-by-chapter method would not take him half through the Bible in seven years.

M. S. A., Appleton, Wis. If a person promises to marry another and [illegible] the discovery that he does not really love his fiancee and then breaks the engagement, ought he to change his mind again and renew the engagement if he learns that owing to the breaking of the engagement the other is suffering physically or morally?

We think there is nothing that can justify a loveless marriage. It is far better to break an engagement than to go on to marriage when there is reason to believe that a mistake has been made. If the couple are unsuited to each other, if during courtship one discovers traits of character in the other that will lead to quarrels, it is an imperative duty to break the engagement. Of course, it should be done with the utmost kindness, and no effort should be spared to prevent the act causing unnecessary pain or disgrace. A person who is suffering physically or morally through the breaking of an engagement would probably not be cured by marriage, and would be likely to suffer still more in a union brought about solely by pity or compassion.

W. G., Brooklyn, N. Y. In your answer to "Perplexed" you appear to assume that Christ was equal with God. Do you really believe that he was?

The doctrine of the Trinity is full of difficulty. Nevertheless, it is certainly the doctrine taught in the Gospel of John, in the Epistles of Paul, and by the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews. We do not see how anyone can hold those books as we have them to be divinely true, while he denies the doctrine of the Trinity. As to the relation of the three Beings, no clear idea can be conceived by the human mind. The Jews drew the inference from Christ's words that he claimed equality with God (John 5: 18): "Said also that God was his Father, making himself equal with God." When Jesus answered the charge, he did not tell them that their inference was untrue. Again in John 14: 9, in reply to Philip's request that Christ would show them the Father, Christ answers: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." Yet in the same chapter (ver. 28), Christ explicitly says, "My Father is greater than I." The whole Christian system seems to us to turn upon the Incarnation—God becoming flesh, taking upon him the human form. Otherwise the death of Christ upon the Cross was merely martyrdom. The essence of the Atonement consists in the Divine dying for men. The Epistle to the Hebrews (1: 3) describes Christ as being the brightness of the Father's glory and the express image of his person, upholding all things by the word of his power. Whether in the days of his flesh Christ was equal with God may be disputed, seeing that he laid aside his Godhead to become man: but we see no reason for questioning his essential divinity.

F., Berwick, Calif. No.

Robert J., Salemsburg, Kan. California and New Mexico.

A Reader, Perkasie, Pa. Training School for Nurses, Waltham, Mass.

Mrs. O. D. E., Ithaca, N. Y. Write to American Bible Society, New York.

Constant Subscriber, Stockholm, Wis. Write to the Congressman from your district.

Reader, Northville, N. Y. We have no information upon which to base comparisons.

Mrs. R. C. Morris, Washington, D. C. Address her care of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Mrs. Sarah Allen, Janesville. Address the papers for the soldiers in care of Y. M. C. A. tent, Manila, Philippines. Should be prepaid.

G. Conable, Brooklyn, N. Y. We believe a majority of those in charge are professedly Christian. To name names might be considered invidious.

Subscriber, Racine, Wis. They cannot make a charge for any longer time than that for which you subscribed, especially as you refused to accept it longer.

Miss Helen C., Brockton, Can. No, and never will; we do not discuss plays. Re[illegible] book upon which the play is founded it a grotesque distortion of the character it assumes to represent.

Mrs. Maria M. Reints, Freeport, Ill., is the possessor of a very old Dutch Bible, dated 1618 and 1619. It is in perfect order, large, heavy brass corners, and was printed in Amsterdam by Van Zal and Van Ravenstein.

K. F. A., Winchester, Ind. We think that a letter of inquiry to the Presbyterian Hospital, New York city, giving your full name and address, might bring you desired information. It is preferable, however, to ask information of some institution in your own state.

THE GLITTERING PALACE OF SALT, JUST COMPLETED AT SALT LAKE CITY

A PALACE of salt, dazzling as snow, has just been erected in Salt Lake City, Utah. This architectural marvel covers about eight acres, and is modeled after the design of the World's Fair buildings in Chicago. The salt was applied to the wooden structure by a spray, the water of the Great Salt Lake, which is twenty-five per cent. salt, being used, with the addition of a certain chemical which renders the quickly solidifying salt impervious to water. Seen from the interior, the structure appears like a palace of crystal rock. The building encloses a square one hundred and sixty feet square, and is in the shape of an octagon, surmounted by a dome, relieved by tall, square towers, one hundred and thirty feet in height. Around the palace are to be walks, a lake and a fountain, inclosing open spaces ornamented by trees, shrubs and flowers. The building will not melt under the action of the elements; it will not burn nor fall down with age, but will be enduring as though of stone. It will be used for the purpose of a permanent Utah exhibition of minerals and other products, and also as an auditorium.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR
T. DeWitt Talmage
EDITOR

The Christian Herald
Subscriptions may commence
Remittances
Register
Foreign Postage
Renewals
Back Numbers to early renewals
Change of Date
Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless Change of Address your address
The Name
writing to this office. We cannot find your name
The Christian Herald
manuscripts forwarded
Letters
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Not Providing for Her Own

A WOMAN in Baltimore, leaving bequests to many church institutions to the amount of $50,000, while her four children are wholly unprovided for. In the enthusiasm of benevolence for institutions, a reasonable degree of which THE CHRISTIAN HERALD warmly approves, we should remember the words of inspiration: "He that provideth not for his own has denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." There may be reasons entirely satisfactory why a person's relatives should be largely omitted. They may be unfit to control property; they may be already well provided for. But it sometimes happens that by neglecting one's relatives a burden is left for individuals not relatives, or for the community itself, which is wholly unreasonable and inequitable. Christianity requires of us that we be sure first to regard the claims of our own flesh and blood. It is true that the Saviour says of his followers: "Behold, my mother, my sister and my brothers." But on the cross he said to the favorite disciple: "Son, behold thy mother." He does not counsel us to forget kindred after the flesh, but to honor them and care for them. Of this he shows an example, even when himself dying. And we should be suspicious of any so-called ecclesiastical counsel which goes counter to his own practice.

A Chance for American Artists

NOTHING was more apparent and wonderful, at the Columbus Exposition in Chicago, than the art genius of those who laid out the grounds and arranged, created and decorated the structures. An opportunity for another display of American genius is to be given at the coming exposition in Paris, where the United States building, entrance, dome, and committee rooms are to be treated artistically by American artists. Commissions are to be assigned to seven painters, who are to have entire charge of the mural decorations of this building. Most of this work can be done in this country. Of course, the appropriate subjects will be American; some of them, doubtless, of recent date. It has been suggested that the dome in the Capitol at Washington be now completed by commemorating Admiral Dewey's triumph at Manila. This would not be inappropriate; but, it need not prevent seizing upon similar subjects for the Paris Exposition. Or, if subjects more irenic were preferred, they might be found in some of the recent triumphs of Peace, for example, that at the Hague, which though quietly achieved, may yet prove to be a world triumph.

American Schools in Turkey

THE complaint that American schools in Turkey provide the children with new ideas of civil and religious liberty, and that these are inconsistent with their Turkish environment, doubtless, is in some part the truth. It is of the property of light to shine. There is a world-progress in these directions. American schools are sui generis. American history can not be taught in them, nor anywhere else on the face of the earth, without exercising a leavening power. And while in Turkey, thus far the restlessness of the Armenians does not seem traceable to such institutions, the habit of inquiry and independed thinking which they awaken, must indirectly tend that way.

During the colonial period in this country, all the people were reading law. Trevelyan says that Edmund Burke claimed that more copies of Blackstone were imported, than were sold in Great Britain. This was what made the tax on tea so offensive. George III. undertook to retain it, for the sake of the principle; the Colonies would have none of it for the same reason. The presence of a larger number of American vessels of traffic and intercourse in the waters of the Orient can not fail to awaken new interest and remark respecting our form of Government. If the peoples of the Sultan are set off on new trains of thought, and if especially the school-children are guided indirectly into Republican predilections, it can not seem strange; nor will it be contrary to our Saviour's words: "I came not to send peace on earth, but a sword."

American Asiatic Associations

ONE result of making this country Asiatic in its interests is the organization in all the great Oriental cities of American Asiatic Associations. These associations are for the purpose of guarding American interests in the Orient. This is done by instituting branches of one great organization with headquarters in New York, Peking, Hong Kong, Japan, the Philippines, where interchange of thought on the part of representative Americans may be had, a kind of international exchange for the protection and promotion of American interests.

That we can solve all our new and complicated problems, civil and commercial, without such associations, seems unlikely. We need to be in touch with all world centres, and ready to meet all world-obligations. There is a Japanese outlook and a Chinese outlook, as well as a Philippine outlook. The great hand of Providence is moving upon the board of destiny, and it becomes Americans to study the meaning of every move.

THE world itself will grow old and die. The stars will burn down in their sockets and expire. The sun, like a spark struck from an anvil, will flash and go out. The winds will utter their last whisper and the ocean heave its last groan, but you and I will live forever! Gigantic immortal. Mighty to suffer or enjoy. Mighty to love or hate. Mighty to soar or sink. Then what will be to us the store, the shop, the office, the applause of the world, the scorn of our enemies, the things that lifted us up and the things that pressed us down?

The Sick Ship

M [illegible] to a lonely little bay on the north [illegible] crafts. She was quite alone in the still, secluded place into which she had sailed, with [illegible] announced her return home, and without any fluttering flag to express her own joy and grat[illegible] and her captain and sailors walked sadly [illegible] down even into the dark recesses that touched [illegible] of oak, and shaking their heads with a mourn[illegible] her lighter wood between their fingers.

"You may as well sail her into deep water and sink her," they said to the captain. "She is eaten clean through with dry-rot. Nothing [illegible]

Now, this dry-rot is precisely the same [illegible] garments. Then, as now, the reddish patches [illegible] something like a spider's web. These threads grow closer and thicker, until they form a substance of a yellowish-white color and roundish shape, from one inch to eight or nine inches in diameter, and hundreds of them ooze through the interstices of the floors and walls in any house or ship infected by them. When fully matured, they produce immense numbers of rusty seeds, which are diffused through the atmosphere and are ever ready to germinate where moisture, warmth, [illegible] rot spreads with amazing rapidity; even extending from the wood-work of a house to the [illegible] the bricks and stones, reducing all to a mouldering state. Professor Burnet says: "I knew a house in which dry-rot gained admittance and which, during the four years we rented it, had the parlors twice wainscoted and a new flight of stairs, the dry-rot having rendered it unsafe to go from the ground floor to the bedrooms. Every precaution was taken to remove infected timbers when the new work was done, yet the dry-rot so rapidly gained strength that the house had to be pulled down. Some of my books bear mournful impressions of its ruthless hand; and others were so much affected that the leaves were like tinder, and when the volumes were opened they fell out in dust to fragments." And if we consider with this testimony the fact that in the war between England and Russia, the ships in the Crimea suffered more from dry-rot than from all the fire, shot, and shells of the enemy, we may have some idea of the terrible nature of this leprous fungi, which only needs to be shut up in close, badly-ventilated places, to spread like wildfire.

All Scripture is given for our welfare and information, and the minute care which God takes for the physical health and cleanliness of his people, renders the chapters in Leviticus concerning this plague full of instruction for us. There is a wonderful connection between cleanliness and godliness. Physical [illegible] homes that endure it. Filthy sights and filthy smells deaden and harden the heart. If the tabernacle of our God is to be with us, then we must heed his solemn announcement "The Lord thy God walketh in the midst of thy [illegible] enemies before thee, therefore shall thy camp [illegible]

[illegible] is united to humanity. God is not far off. He dwells in the pure heart, and the pure heart [illegible] hill of the Lord, and who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart." "He that walketh righteously, and speaketh uprightly, and shutteth his eyes from seeing evil; he shall dwell on high; his place of defence shall be the munitions of rocks; his eyes shall see the King in his beauty; they shall behold the land that is very far off."

[illegible] spiritual and physical, that we can say, "It is [illegible] until it falls to earth again, but yet even here, [illegible] Christ has redeemed us, both spiritually and physically; and that we are "waiting for the [illegible] bodies."

[illegible] then keep sacred to God that inner shrine of the soul, hidden from the nearest and dearest earthly friend. Not defiling our hands or gar[illegible] us; and the mystic ladder, binding the seen and the unseen, is set up again in our hearts; so that even in this life, we may hope, in some [illegible] Lord, and to stand in his holy place."

Amelia E. Barr

BRIEF NOTES

[illegible] in China. Dr. Griffith John has baptized more than [illegible]

The highest spot on the earth inhabited by [illegible] Thibet where twenty-one monks live at an altitude [illegible]

In one field in China nearly seven thousand natives have "enrolled themselves as learners," and they are entirely dependent on the native preachers for instruction.

It is said that the first missionary contri[illegible] religion in the colony of Virginia.

Rev. John C. Paton's reports for the past [illegible] bership.

[illegible] town of France which has only forty inhabitants, [illegible] and one is a hundred years old.

[illegible] declares that the greatest national peril to France is alcoholism, especially among the women. In [illegible]

[illegible] know I have not much sense," he said, "so I must [illegible]

The Woman's Union Prayer Meeting of [illegible] Oct. 5 at 12:30 a. m., in the chapel of the Second [illegible] dred and Twenty-third street. Miss S. R. Kendall, [illegible]

John Livingstone, brother of Dr. Living[illegible] [illegible] ence until the Doctor's death.

A German sociologist who is interested in [illegible] woman named Kola Jourke, who was an habitual drunkard. Her descendants now number 709, of [illegible]

[illegible] were converted. They at once began to work for [illegible] the last Sunday of the meetings they took two men in who stayed to the after-meeting. One of the policemen remarked that there was more hope in taking men to such meetings than in locking them up.

Rev. J. J. Munro, chaplain of the Tombs [illegible] on a week day.

[illegible] the language. A Moravian missionary named [illegible] Bible into Tibetan, and has prepared a lexicon of [illegible] He tried to enter the country to preach and being [illegible]

Earthquake In India

CABLE dispatches from Calcutta report a destructive earthquake, accompanied by floods and extensive landslides at Darjeeling in the lower Himalayas on September 24. Over a hundred persons are reported to have been killed in Darjeeling alone, and more than two hundred in the immediate neighborhood The destruction of crops, too, has been very disastrous. In one district one thousand acres of tea are a total loss. A sad story is told of the destruction of a school conducted by American ladies of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It was the Ida Villa branch of the Calcutta institution. At the first shock of earthquake there was a landslide which endangered the building. Miss Stahl immediately took the strongest of the children and tried to climb the mountain. They succeeded in reaching a level path, but the night was so dark, the torrents of rain so heavy, and the earthquake shocks so terrifying, that the children were completely unnerved, and Miss Stahl took them back to the trembling building. Miss Reid and Miss Soundry subsequently made another attempt to save the children, but on their way up the mountain there was another landslide which carried away the children. The teachers escaped. During their absence another landslide destroyed the school, and only one inmate survived the wreck. Darjeeling is a convalescent station for invalids, many of whom it is feared must have perished. It is sad to read of such calamities befalling children and invalids. Time was when they would have been regarded as a judgment from God. Happily, in these days, we have a better view of them, and while we know that there is no immunity for the good in the accidents of life, we can be sure that the Apostle was justified in his confidence·

That the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed (Rom. 8: 17).

An Explorer's Despair

A correspondent of the New York Herald had an interview a few day's ago with Nansen, the Arctic explorer, who is attending the Geographical Congress in Berlin. He was asked his opinion as to the prospects of success of the present polar expeditions and those planned. He said they would doubtless increase the sum of human knowledge, but he did not believe the poles would be reached in the present state of human capacity, equipment and technical means, all of which are wholly imperfect. The Arctic explorer added that the poles will probably not be reached, even if international cooperation is practically and systematically carried out, as looks likely, as the result of the present geographical congress. The explorer said that he did not intend to venture into the Arctic again, unless some expedition was planned with better equipment and more advantages than any that had yet attempted to reach the pole. How many have come to the same conclusion about reaching heaven when they die! Happy he who realizing that no man can attain it by his own strength, avails himself of the divine help which Christ gives to all who seek it.

He is able also to save them to the uttermost who come unto God by him (Heb. 7: 25).

Married at the Barge Office

Among the passengers on the Thingvalla steamer Norge, which arrived recently in New York from Copenhagen, was a light-haired girl of twenty years who could not speak English. The captain said that when the steamer was well out to sea the steward had found the girl in one of the cabins. She had no ticket and apparently did not know that one was required. She said she wanted to come to her lover, who was in America. The vessel was too far away to send her back, so the captain brought her over and turned her over to the immigration inspectors. On being questioned, she gave her lover's name and address in Brooklyn. She said that since his departure for America a few months ago she had been very unhappy, and had made up her mind to follow him. Hearing that the Norge was coming to America, she had gone on board and concealed herself until it started. Her lover was sent for and informed of the girl's arrival. He seemed embarrassed, and became serious when told that the girl would have to pay a fine of ten dollars for coming as a stowaway. He went out, however, and borrowed the ten dollars, with which he paid the fine. He proposed taking the girl to the home of his married sister until she could find employment, but the immigration officers refused to consent to that arrangement and told him that the girl must be sent back unless he married her at once. A clergyman was then sent for and the marriage was solemnized. The couple went away looking very happy. The girl must have had great love for her lover, as well as confidence in him, to take such means to get to him. If men only acted so towards Christ, who deserves in infinitely greater degree their love and confidence, how happy they would be!

DARJEELING, INDIA, THE SCENE OF THE RECENT EARTHQUAKE

Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest (Matt. 11: 28).

To Flood the Desert

A scientific journal says that two vast schemes, combining the geographical and commercial, on a magnificent scale, are now being discussed. One of these is the reconversion of the great Sahara desert in Africa, which was once an inland sea, to its former state. It is believed that a canal sixty miles long, connecting the Atlantic with the immense depression which runs close up to the coast nearly midway between the twentieth and thirtieth parallels of latitude, would solve the problem. The water would not, of course, cover the entire surface of the desert. Here and there portions would remain above sea level, these becoming the islands of the new Sahara ocean. Another proposed enterprise in this line is that which has in contemplation the submersion of the Yuma desert in southern California, and this plan, if carried out, will involve a tract of absolutely uninhabitable territory comprising nearly thirteen thousand square miles, and the greater portion of which lies between five hundred and one thousand feet below sea level. Prodigious as are these plans, modern engineering science views their realization as among the possibilities of the future. How far future none can yet tell; but we know that in the golden age predicted by the prophets, if not before, such changes will take place:

I will open rivers in high places. I will make the wilderness a pool of water (Isa. 41: 18).

Fire to Purge Sin

A strange attempt to commit suicide was made recently in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia. One of the park keepers in making his rounds saw flames among some bushes. He made his way to the spot to see what was burning, and was horrified to see lying on the ground writhing in agony the body of a man, enveloped in flames. He took off his coat and threw it over the blazing form, but the man threw it off and rose to his knees, seeking to catch hold of him. He evaded him, and grasping the coat again, threw it on the blaze, and again it was thrown off. The guard, perceiving that he had to deal with a madman, shouted for help, and a milk man who was passing responded. He had in his wagon a rubber blanket, which he procured and threw over the crazed man, and he and the guard held it down until the flames were put out. The man, terribly burned and then unconscious, was put in an ambulance and sent to the German hospital. On the way he recovered consciousness and asked why he was not allowed to die. The odor of oil was noticed, and being asked what caused it, the would-be suicide said he was the most sinful man in the world and he had determined to purge his sins by fire. He had purchased a gallon of kerosene oil, which he had poured over his clothes and then ignited them. Only fire, he thought, could purge his sin. He appeared to be in fair circumstances, being well dressed and having money in his pocket. At times, too, he spoke intelligently, like an educated man. It is thought that his burns will prove fatal. It is evident that the man was demented, otherwise he would have known that a man cannot purge himself of sin by self-inflicted suffering. Nothing can remove that stain but the blood of Christ which changes a man's nature so that love to God and man pervades his whole being and he becomes like God.

DARJEELING BAZAAR

Though I give my body to be burned and have not love, it profiteth me nothing (I. Cor. 13: 3).

Bitten by a Snake

An employee of a telephone company, while at work digging postholes near Haverstraw, N. Y., last week, had an encounter with a copperhead which came near ending fatally for him. He had put some of his tools in a cavity between two rocks, and when he was leaving work he reached down between the rocks to get them. He drew his hand back quickly with an exclamation. He thought he had spiked it on a thorn, but, looking down, he saw a large copperhead snake, and realized that it was that which had hurt his hand. He searched around and found a club and some large stones, and soon had the satisfaction of killing the snake. But his hand was badly swollen, and was of a purplish hue. He tied a handkerchief tightly around his arm, and went as quickly as he could to a doctor. The doctor cauterized the wound and administered a dose of strychnine. On removing the bandage the swelling spread up to the neck with marked discoloration. During the night he was delirious, and the doctor was summoned. He administered quieting medicines, and at intervals a dose of stimulant to keep up the heart's action. All through the night the man was in danger of succumbing to the snake poison, but in the morning the crisis was passed, the swelling subsided, and the patient gradually recovered. The doctor said that had the man been less physically strong he must have died, for an unusually large quantity of poison had been injected into his system. His prompt action in applying an improvised tourniquet and getting quick medical assistance had alone saved him. Unhappily when men have the poison of sin in their souls, they are seldom so prompt in taking remedial measures, though the need for them is greater, and a sure cure is within reach.

Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no physician there? Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered? (Jer. 8: 22).

His Secret Dead with Him

A convict died on Sept. 29 in the penitentiary at Kingston, Quebec. He had committed a murder, and was sentenced to be hanged, but there were extenuating circumstances in his case, and his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. In prison, his conduct won the good will of all the wardens and officers. His manner was singularly gentle and refined and he had evidently received an excellent education. After a few months, his health began to suffer, and visitors to the prison interested themselves in his behalf. The lawyer who had been his counsel at his trial, went to see him, and finding him so weak and ill, applied to the Minister of Justice for a pardon. It would have been granted, if the prisoner would have disclosed his identity. He acknowledged that the name he had given at his trial was not his proper name, but he steadfastly refused to tell his name, or tell anything about his family. He said they occupied a high position in society and he would not disgrace them by disclosing his identity. Even when informed that there was no other obstacle in the way of receiving a pardon, he held his peace and said he would rather die in prison than reveal his secret. As he was so firm, nothing could be done for him and he is now dead, having kept his secret to the last His consideration for his relatives was creditable to him, but it cost him his life. Unhappily, there are many who lose eternal life through a similar obstinacy which is not creditable to them. Though they know the conditions on which it may be had, they will not accept them.

Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life (John 5: 40).

· AMERICAN · PROGRESS · IN · THE · PHILIPPINES ·

A Full account of the Conditions Around Manila, Written for "The Christian Herald" by a Special Correspondent

THESE FIGURES ARE TYPICAL OF THE VARIOUS GRADES OF SOCIAL LIFE IN OUR NEW COLONIES

MANILA, THURSDAY, AUGUST 24, 1899.—Notwithstanding the rainy season in the Philippine Islands, there have been several aggressive movements by the American troops in the vicinity of Manila since the rains began. These movements can be enumerated as follows: The taking of Calamba and Los Banos on the southern shore of Laguna de Bay by General Hall; the occupation for the third time of the town of San Matea, ten miles northeast of Manila, by General Young, and the recent advance north from San Fernando resulting in the occupation of Angeles and other smaller towns by troops under command of General MacArthur.

Theoretically, all territory taken from the enemy and held by us is advantageous to our cause. We still hold Angeles and Calamba and Los Banos, and as peacefully as the insurgents before us. It is said these towns have certain strategic advantages. But it is impossible to operate in Luzon on a big scale during the rainy season; besides, we have not enough men to operate on a big scale, or to follow up advantages.

Angeles is a town some nine miles north of San Fernando, and on the railroad line running from Manila to Dagupan, 120 miles to the north. Former rebel territory extending from five to seven miles about San Fernando is now occupied by our troops. Here we have rested, waiting for the reconstruction of the railroad from San Fernando. The railroad from Manila has been a most valuable aid in the provisioning of the troops stationed along its line. The Americans hold it from Manila to Angeles, and the Filipinos are in control of the balance, from there to Dagupan, on the Gulf of Lingayen. In this respect, their end of the road has been of as much service to them as ours has been to us, and as we drive them from it, progressing northward, the insurgents tear up the rails and hide them, burn sleepers, and destroy bridges. So we find this means of transportation impaired and are obliged to spend much time in its repair and even reconstruction. Such is the case between San Fernando and Angeles; between three and four miles of the road were destroyed and Chinese laborers are now at work repairing it. The only alternatives to railroad transportation are crude carts drawn by water buffalo a most unsatisfactory and slow method of provisioning an army. Pack mule trains would be of inestimable advantage their value in transporting army stores was demonstrated in Cuba, before Santiago, and they would be equally valuable here. Aguinaldo's present headquarters are asserted to be at Tarlac, a town on the railroad about thirty miles north of Angeles. At this point, the Filipino general, his staff and his civil administrators, are awaiting the expected American advance. Gapan, a town in the mountains, east of Tarlac, has been selected as his next point of retreat when occasion so requires. At least such is the information brought to our lines by a

A RICH TAGALOG FAMILY IN LUZON

SULU CHIEFS OF MINDANAO

TAGALOGS BRINGING MILK TO MANILA

INDIANS TRAVELING ON CARIBOU

INDIAN DWELLING IN ALBAY, LUZON

Spanish prisoner recently escaped from the Filipinos, and from the same source of information comes the statement that the insurgents have had trouble with their end of the railroad. Heavy rains have washed out the roadbed, and between Dagupan and up to this date General Wheeler has not been assigned to any command. The arrival of the promised reinforcements from the United States, due here between now and the end of the rainy season, will create new army divisions, and General and Angeles there are two gaps, a total of twenty miles, which are impassable for trains and over which goods and passengers have to be ferried in canoes or drawn in buffalo carts. Such, in a few words, is what has been done since the rains. It is interesting to consider the extent and position of the American military lines around Manila to-day. If one draws a line from Caloocan, four miles north of Manila, to Pasig, seven miles east, and from Pasig to Pasay, four miles south of here, this line will give a very fair idea of the American territory surrounding this city. This includes the Pasig River from here to Laguna de Bay and the pumping station seven miles to the east. Outside of these lines are the Filipinos, in what numbers we do not exactly know, but they are there and hold the land. Following south from Pasay along Manila Bay to Cavite, there are several small towns, namely, Paranaque, Las Pinas, Bacoor and Cavite, and the strip of land they occupy is held by us. Four miles south of Bacoor and about fifteen from Manila is Imus, which, with the road leading to it from Bacoor, is in our possession. The rebels occupy Santa Cruz, San Francisco, San Nicolas and Muting, all in the vicinity of Imus, as well as all territory further south.

TAGALOG FAMILY, TONDO

NEGRITOS OF MARIOCLES SHOOTING FISH

TINGUIANES OF AEEA, LUZON

Our most northern point is Angeles, forty-seven miles from Manila; but from Caloocan we hold the railroad to Angeles and a few towns close to the track, and nothing more. The insurgents occasionally get in at night and tear up this railroad and dig holes in the road bed, thereby causing delay to our trains; but they do not wait for our soldiers to come out and catch them at their energetic work of destruction. So we hold about sixty miles north and south of Manila, and, with the exception of the vicinities of Manila and San Fernando, this line is a narrow ribbon, varying in width from the distance between rails to two or three miles. Generals Schwan and Wheeler have recently arrived in Manila. General Schwan has taken up his duties as chief of staff to General Otis, Wheeler may be put in command of one of these. Here in Manila we have every promise of an active and aggressive campaign with the new troops beginning as soon as the rainy season is over, and there are no signs of the advent of peace before the rebels have been thoroughly whipped into submission. Spaniards long resident of these islands do not believe the Filipinos will surrender until the last trench has been taken and the last scattered bands of Malays, still asserting they are fighting us for liberty and independence, are driven into the mountains where we cannot follow. Liberty and independence they have always claimed as their watchwords. Just what their understanding of these words may be we do not know, but to them they signify an ideal for which they are crying by thousands. We know nothing of their ability for self-government and the maintenance of law and order because we are in utter ignorance of their character, their abilities and their nature. The Filipinos are as well organized and led to-day as they were six months ago, and these months of hostilities have taught them many things in the art of warfare. To all appearances, peace will only come to these islands when our army of occupation will have vanquished and scattered the army of Filipinos who persistently and fanatically oppose us, with liberty, as they understand the term, as their watchword.

HAROLD MARTIN.

TINGUIANES HUNTERS, LUZON

NEGRITO HUNTERS, LUZON

Spiritual work among our troops is progressing at the Soldiers' Institute, established some time ago by Mr. and Mrs. Prautch, at No. 6 Plaza de Goiti, just across the Escalta Bridge from the Postoffice. Freedom, an "American paper for the American soldier," published at Manila, describes among the attractions of the Institute a reading and writing room, where good literature is provided and stationery furnished free; also baths and a dressing room, where our heroes from the front who have a day in town can come and wash and brush up. A Sunday School and interesting temperance and Gospel meetings are leading features.

TINGUIANES OF ABRA, LUZON

CANNIBALS OF CARBALLO

AETAS FROM MARIOCLES, LUZON

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

Wandering Villages

The Indian Hunters of the Prairies—The Woman's Life—School and Missionary Work

IT is the time of year when Indians are returning from summer hunts on the prairies to towns and settlements, where they can trade their antelope and deer-skins for blankets, sugar, tea, and too often, alas! for fire-water. A visit to an Indian camp on the prairies and participation in an Indian buffalo hunt have been described as interesting and exciting experiences. Among the Blood Indians of Montana some very peculiar hunting laws have long been in existence. A hunter may go alone to shoot deer, elk or other small game, their meat being considered essential to existence; but if buffalo are discovered, he who goes forth alone to kill does so under penalty of confiscation and death. Appointed watchers, always on the lookout for herds, make report when one is sighted, camp-criers spread the news, hunters on their ponies assemble at the chief's lodge, and at a signal are off and away like the whirlwind. After them follow the women on slower ponies, with a string of boys and pack animals behind them, their work being to dress the buffalo and see that it reaches the village. Sometimes, while the women are engaged in skinning and cutting up the beasts, a party from a hostile tribe will swoop down upon them and begin to shoot them and carry off the game; the hunters, hearing the noise, rush to the rescue, and there is a general, often desperate fight. On the prairies even now similar scenes sometimes occur. The women are always with the wandering villages that follow in the track of the big and little game of the prairies. They are experts in handling the skins, in making new lodges, moccasins and various other things, and, of course, they do all the cooking and menial labor. Sometimes one finds a village where all the lodges are new and white and clean, and they present a cheerful and picturesque appearance; but they are usually dingy, and the life within is repellant to our ideas of cleanliness and comfort. On their way from the summer hunt to the towns, the Indians fold their tents, travel a day's journey and set them up at night in a new place.

Missionary work and the Government's Indian School system are doing much for the red man. Statistics show remarkable development of this system. In 1877 the appropriation for it was twenty thousand dollars, and less than four thousand Indian children were taught; the present outlay is $2,500,000, and over twenty-five thousand scholars are enrolled. Our readers are familiar with the American Sunday School Union's good work for the Indian.

♦

Work for the Aged

In every home, life should be made as sweet and as full of development and helpfulness to the aged as the young. Devise little occupations for the old folks when they begin to feel that they are being "laid on the shelf." A lot of patchwork pieces were donated to a mission in New York City, and the workers did not know what to do with them until some one said, "Let's take them to an old ladies' home." This was done. Christmas came, and with it, lo! a lot of warm quilts to give to those in need; and the old ladies were so happy to think they were able to do and to give. "Papa will you keep my household accounts for me?" said a daughter to an aged father, who could only sit in a paralytic's chair, and moan that he was no use. He gladly accepted the task, and the mutual benefit was great. There are many ways. Let us study this matter.

♦

Clean Lips

Who of us has not at some time heard a volume of angry, evil, coarse words bubbling from the lips of some neatly attired little boy? And who, hearing, has not thought: "If his parents had taught him that it was more important to keep his soul than his body clean, this thing would not be possible?" Speaking or hearing angry, coarse or profane words is worse pollution than playing in the dirt or throwing mud. Let the father, as well as the mother, bend prayerful energy to teaching little ones the beauty of clean lips that can speak no evil and that are ever free from guile.

♦

The Letter Home

When you are off on your business or pleasure trip, don't forget the letter to home-folks. The letter to those we leave behind, in the quiet places where our presence is missed, is a graceful courtesy that becomes us well and that is worth the time it takes; more than that, it is a kindness always appreciated. It costs so little to write a letter, and everybody appreciates it. If we value opportunities for showing kindnesses, we should eagerly seize those which our journeys from home present to remind the dear ones there that we think of them, and that no new faces and no distractions of any kind whatever can make us forget our own. Letters need not be long or labored—a line or two will suffice, if we have good reason for brevity—but they can always be frequent and loving. Don't crowd your troubles into them; but try and make them as cheerful and encouraging as you possibly can.

♦

A King's Fun

The Spanish king is kind-hearted, fond of his mother and sisters, and possessed of a spirit of fun which not even Spanish etiquette can crush. This story is told of him: "The little king had read aloud this sentence: 'She possessed in the highest degree the distinguished manners and grace of speech inherent in princesses,' and to his tutor's amazement remarked, 'That writer don't know much about courts.' 'Why do you say that sire?' 'Well look at that pair of princesses.' One of his royal sisters, evidently dreadfully hot and sleepy, was sprawling over her desk, whilst the other, unable to solve a problem, was rubbing her eyes and looking dazed. His Majesty tugged the hair of one and pinched the arm of another princess, evoking some very strong and familiar terms of sisterly reprobation. 'There are the distinguished manners and grace of speech for you' he exclaimed, recruiting triumphantly the tutor."

♦

Blinded Warblers

A reader in Iowa, asks us to reprint from a clipping she encloses, the following sad little incident hoping "ladies [illegible] THE CHRISTIAN HERALD [illegible] induced not to wear birds on their hats any more."

[illegible] Florence a lady came [illegible] those birds sing, O, such mournful notes!" [illegible] cages, and these birds were all blind; they had had their eyes put out. In the night the owners take them outside the city and hang the cages in trees. The trees are then all smeared with tar. These birds keep up their pitiful singing, and other birds are attracted to the cage, and they get stuck on the tar, and then they are caught and their eyes put out. And these birds are killed and sent to America for ladies to wear on their bonnets."

♦

Little Guardian Angels

Little feet that run to do our bidding,
Little hands in childish service free,
Dear are you unto the loving Master—
Glad to bless you will the Master be.
Children can be messengers of Jesus,
Cheer the lonely, wipe the falling tear,
Bless our days with laughter and with loving—
Children can be guardian angels here.

—Mary Jackson

INDIAN CAMP LIFE, ON THE PRAIRIES IN MONTANA

A Mission and a Marriage

By T. G. Levings, [illegible] in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD [illegible]

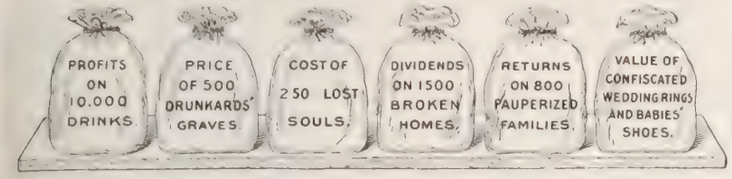
MIN THU, THE [illegible] KAREN MISSIONARIES

interesting letters from Tharrawaddy, [illegible] concerning the labors of Miss Sarah J. Higby, the devoted Gospel worker there, with a picture of two Karen girls, now Christian missionaries through Miss Higby's instrumentality. Mrs. Levings supplied the means to carry one of these girls, Min Thu, through the Baptist College at Rangoon, where Min Thu was the only girl student and the guest of Prof. and Mrs. Gilmore. She has received many bright and grateful letters from her protegee, who has studied diligently to prepare herself to speak the Word of Christ to the women of her race. A pretty story of love and marriage is interwoven in the following sober [illegible] of missionary toil and [illegible].

Min Thu was recently married to Shin Yan, the son of a faithful pastor at Moulmein, and her [illegible] assistant in Miss Higby's school. He had long loved her, and when he secured the position of choir leader and teacher in the Mission School at Moulmein he wanted Min Thu to help him. Though this marriage brings disappointment to Miss Higby, who has been raising Min Thu up to help her, she rejoices because it will not take Min Thu out of missionary work. The burden at Tharrawaddy is a heavy one: the station is lonely; the mission is built of thatch and bamboo; food is scarce; water has to be brought a mile; the heat is oppressive. Miss Higby's worth is well known: her services have been sought by stations where conditions are better. To friends asking, "Why do you stay at such a place?" her answer has been: "There is no one else to come here; so I stay to help these people, comforting myself with the thought that the Master wants me here." She has been thirty years in Burma; it is ten years since she visited America. Four years ago, when she went to Tharrawaddy, she found a small school of sixteen boys; last year there were 125 pupils of both sexes, and many applicants are turned away for want of room. The little church had twenty members; it now has a hundred, and members going out from it are doing evangelical work in other towns. The fortitude, faith and courage that have been required to build up such a work at this lonely and desolate missionary outpost, can hardly be measured.

Plea for the Drunkard's Wife and Children

Readers Urge Rejection of the Saloon-Keeper's Money for Their Sakes Others Advocate Its Application to their Relief



PROFITS ON 10,000 DRINKS.
PRICE OF 500 DRUNKARDS' GRAVES.
COST OF 250 LOST SOULS.
DIVIDENDS ON 1500 BROKEN HOMES.
RETURNS ON 800 PAUPERIZED FAMILIES.
VALUE OF CONFISCATED WEDDING RINGS AND BABIES' SHOES.

THE following letters, on the all-absorbing topic, "Shall a Church Accept the Saloon-Keeper's Money in Aid of Its Spiritual Work?" are representative of a large number received. It will be seen that in this particular group of letters there is uniformity of opinion on one point, viz., that the saloon-keeper's money represents the unutterable wrongs and sufferings of helpless women and children, as well as the debasement of man "made in God's image."

Mrs. Samuel Willson, New Jersey, writes:

If I were to accept that saloon-keeper's gift I would not use it for church or missionary work; but I would take it and give it to the wives and little ones who have been robbed by this same saloon-keeper, for in my opinion it belongs to them and no one else.

J. F., Markdale, Canada, writes:

No; saloon money is worse than stolen money. If a man steals another's money he does not injure his body or soul. If he gives another liquor for it he not only gets his brother's money, but helps to make his children paupers, his wife a maniac, himself a fool and a candidate for a drunkard's grave.

Mrs. Geo. W., Addison, Vt., writes:

Take it, and give it to the drunkard's wife and children who surely need it; but do not use it for church work.

John Brunner, Pa., writes:

The traffic affects innocent wives and helpless children of inebriates. Money amassed in this way from men whose families are in constant anguish and poverty is certainly blood-money. Never take it for the furtherance of God's kingdom, because money made through the liquor traffic cannot carry a Divine blessing. We have ample proof in the Bible that money coming from an evil source should not be used to promote any Christian work.

Mrs. L. M. McKnight, Kan., writes:

My mother, who is nearly eighty-two years old, suggests that the money contributed by saloon-keepers be used as a fund for the support or help of drunkards' families.

Miss C. M. Crandall, Pa., writes:

The saloon-keeper knows very well what he is doing, when he so willingly donates money to the churches. When a remonstrance against the saloon is passed around to the church members to sign, few, if any, will sign it (although they are not in favor of the saloon) because the saloon-keeper contributes so generously to the church. While they are accepting the money with the hope of saving the souls of the saloon-keeper and his family, he is selling the poison that is hurling hundreds and thousands of souls to destruction. If the churches and Christian people of this country ever expect to put down the cause of intemperance, they will not be bribed by accepting money from the saloons. The farmer and mechanic earn their money honestly, and by hard labor; the saloon-keeper gets his money by taking the bread from their mouths, the clothes from their backs, and the happiness and comfort from the homes of numberless women and children, giving in exchange the poison that is filling their lives with sorrow and care, and their ears with profane and vile language.

E. M. H., Jeffersonville, O., writes:

Take it; it may be the means of clothing some ragged child whose father has spent his money at the saloon. Thank the giver kindly, tell him that Christ loves his soul, and, if he will hear you, say that you hope that he will ask God to help him to change his business; convince him of the many bitter tears shed by broken-hearted women; the many hungry, barefooted and ragged children that are caused by the liquor traffic. Don't snub him with the assertion that it is blood-money; God may have led him to give.

J. L. O., Berea, Neb., writes:

It is a shame that after the saloon-keeper has killed, robbed and destroyed happy homes, he is permitted to offer his money to the church in the hope that he will make friends enough thereby to sustain and continue him in his evil business.

Rev. J. A. Caskey, Illinois, writes:

If the saloon-keeper has money to give, let him give it back to those whom he has robbed, or help to bury those he destroys in his nefarious business, and let the church keep her hands pure from the saloon-keeper's guilt.

Charles Fletcher, Indiana, writes:

Go to that desolate home, see the fatherless children, see that broken-hearted wife, look into the drunkard's face, which was made in God's own image, but now without intelligence; watch the staggering drunkard, hear his curses. Thus seeing how the saloon-keeper gets his money, you will never say, "Put that money into church work." The church that uses it cannot prosper.

V. A. S., Johnstown, Ohio, writes:

Take and use it for the good of suffering humanity, but never cease to condemn the whiskey traffic.

E. M. F., Cedargrove, Va., writes:

Do not use blood-money, the price of ruined homes, for the advancement of the cause of Christ; but if any church supports a saloon-keeper and his business it is not inconsistent to accept his money.

R. S., Spadra, Calif., writes:

By all means take all you can get to feed and clothe those who have in various ways been made to suffer from this, the greatest curse in the world.

Mrs. Ruth S., Alabama, writes:

There is a man here in Alabama whose name should be legion, there are so many in the world like him; he lives on a small farm in a little log cabin; has a wife and several small children. Almost every Saturday he picks up chickens, eggs, and anything he can sell, carries them to town, and in less than two hours every cent of the money is in the rum-seller's till, while the poor wife and children are at home crying for the food and clothes that money would have bought. Use money like that for church work? No!

Mary E. N. Luther, New York, writes:

Yes. If the saloon-keeper offered it to the drunkard's family you would all say, Take it. He won't do that, but he will give it to the church, and the church can be an agent to return it to them as seems best—in building churches, schools or orphan homes, of which they have the benefit. As to the question of blood-money: What have we worth having that was not bought with blood? First, Christ gave his blood for us all; second, our fathers gave their blood for our country, this land of liberty; our boys gave their blood for humanity's sake in Cuba; our boys are giving their blood to-day to better other lands. Uncle Sam and all his money were bought with blood. Take it; it is Uncle Sam's good, honest money; it makes no difference who has handled it.

L. C. Bunker, Indiana, writes:

Accept all such donations and feed the hungry, clothe the naked and shelter the homeless.

B. G. G., Lynchburg, Va., writes:

The money cannot bear with it a curse nor detract from the comfort of the benefited ones. If the saloon-keeper saw homes rendered comfortable and happy by this gift, he might be softened and might remember that he had made more sorrow and broken more hearts than his gifts could ever heal, and so be led to abandon his destructive business.

Wm. H. Thomas, Maryland, writes:

Let us not accept money which belongs to the despoiled wives and helpless children of our land. Our churches are working very hard to save men from punishment in another life; but the whiskey traffic and its mountain of misery and sins here they hardly notice. There are thousands of mothers, wives, sisters and children standing at the church door to-day pleading with the church to save their fathers, husbands, brothers and sons from whiskey; they have no other friend to help them, none other to apply to. Let the church do something practical to stop the whiskey traffic.

G. C. S., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

I can see no harm in a church accepting money from a liquor dealer, provided such moneys can be distributed among the families who suffer through this awful curse.

Mrs. G. H. H., Little Silver, N. J., writes:

Do not accept any money from the saloon keeper, as it encourages him in his sin of selling liquor; and, besides, that money may have caused a great deal of sorrow and suffering, perhaps murder, in some home. Just ask yourself the question, "What would Jesus do?"

Hundreds of other letters received will be considered in a later issue

How to Use the Gift

I. L., Glendale, Ariz., writes:

This money is the price of lives and souls. It represents the tears of starving widows and children. In a moral sense it is ill-gotten wealth. But if the widows and orphans have been oppressed and men debased until they became beasts instead of men, in order that this money might flow into the saloon-keeper's till, the saloon-keeper has no moral right to it. Take it; and restore it for the benefit and uplifting of those from whom it was wrung. It is blood-money, but the stain is upon the whiskey seller, not upon the money.

The Gift Not Desired

J. L., Patterson, Cal., writes:

No. It is the price of broken homes; aching and bleeding hearts; lives of shame; nameless, pauperized families helpless, unheeded and unknown; and "confiscated wedding rings, babies' shoes," virtue—everything that is good and just and true. The grave of manhood, the tears of women and children, the silent anguish of countless victims who suffer untold agony with patience and heroism cry, No! If your house were on fire or your family assailed by a murderous foe, would you quietly compound with the incendiary or assassin?

Money for Retired Ministers

School teachers, or others seeking outdoor work. We offer good pay to the best agents, those of experience, and who can be relied upon for faithful work. We want good people, those with tact and energy, good address. A large commission for every subscriber — new or old—you get for

The Ladies' Home Journal
AND
The Saturday Evening Post

—and $18,000, to be distributed among best 764 agents at the end of the season.

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

CARPETS—FROM THE MILL—RUGS.

Our Lithographed Catalogue of Carpets, Rugs, Art Squares, Portieres and Lace Curtains shows an endless variety of styles, and looking at these colored pictures you can tell exactly how the Carpets would look on your floor, or the curtains at your window. We pay freight, sew Carpets free, and furnish wadded lining without charge. Our mammoth Catalogue of everything to Eat, Wear and Use is also free, as is our Catalogue of Pianos, Organs, Sewing Machines and Bicycles. Which book do you want? Address this way:

Rugs 39c to $30, freight prepaid

29c to $1 10 sewed free.

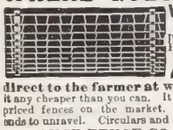
JULIUS HINES & SON,
BALTIMORE, MD. Dept. 218

DO NOT STAMMER YOU CAN BE CURED

Endorsed by Prof. Horatio C. Wood, M.D., LL.D., University of Penn., and Bishop C. H. Fowler, Buffalo N. Y. Send for new illustrated book to the Philadelphia Institute, 1032 Spring Garden Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Established 1884. EDWIN S. JOHNSTON, Founder and Principal (who cured himself after stammering forty years)

The Latest Improved McCREERY FOLDING VAPOR BATH CABINET. Has a Door and all the latest improvements. A home treatment that will cure la grippe, rheumatism, all blood, skin & kidney troubles; reduces superfluous flesh. Price $5. Face steamer $1.50 extra. Folds neatly in small space. Free descriptive book and testimonials. Special inducements to salesmen. MOLLENKOPP & M'CREERY, 138 Summit St. Toledo, O

WHERE GOES YOUR MONEY WHEN YOU BUY FENCE?



Lots of it goes into the dealer's pocket. Why not save that amount? How? Buy your fencing from us. We sell the ADVANCE FENCE direct to the farmer at wholesale. The dealer can't buy it any cheaper than you can. It is equal in quality to the highest priced fences on the market. Completely interwoven—no loose ends to unravel. Circulars and discounts free.
ADVANCE FENCE CO., 149 Old St., Peoria, Ill.

FREE TO AGENTS

IDEAL CAKE SPOON
will stir Cake or mix Bread in ½ time. To prove its merits we will send sample FREE on receipt of 10c to pay postage etc.
G. VINING NOVELTY CO., 60 Wabash Av., CHICAGO.

CRAZY WORK 125 Velvet Remnants, assorted colors, with Embroidery, Chenille, 12 cts., 400 Beautiful Heavyweight Silk Remnants, all colors, enough for a large quilt, 50 cts. Big package with floss and quilt patterns, 10 cts. 50 Fine Woolen Remnants, soft, 25 cents. All postpaid. LEMARIE'S SILK MILL, Little Ferry, N. J.

"Think of Ease But Work On."

If your blood is impure you may "work on" but you cannot even "think of ease." The blood is the greatest sustainer of the body and when you make it pure by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla you have the perfect health in which even hard work becomes ease.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

20,000 CHURCHES

Lighted by the FRINK System of Reflectors with Electric, Gas, Welsbach, Acetylene or Oil. LICENSED to manufacture electric and combination gas and electric fixtures. Send dimensions for estimate.
I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl Street, NEW YORK.

LIFE PRODUCERS
SUCCESSFUL INCUBATORS.
LIFE PRESERVERS
SUCCESSFUL BROODERS.
All about them in our 148-page catalogue. Mailed for 6 cents in stamps.
DES MOINES INCUBATOR CO., Box 71 Des Moines, Ia.

...State Manager...

WANTED—Ladies or Gentlemen to appoint and manage agents for our Bibles and other books and attend to collections. Fair salary and expenses advanced to right party. Work can be done at home or by traveling. No snap. Permanent. No investment required. Apply with self-addressed stamped envelope and references to Providence Publishing Co., C, 334 Dearborn St., Chicago.

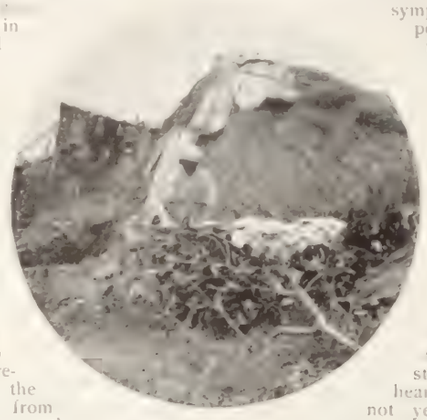
PHONOGRAPH RECORDS MADE BY.... IRA D. SANKEY

"The Ninety and Nine,"
"Where Is my Wand'ring Boy,"
"When the Mists Have Rolled Away,"
"Saved by Grace," and others of the famous
MOODY AND SANKEY HYMNS
Price, $1 per record; $11 per dozen.
Can be HEARD at ALL Phonograph Dealers.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO. 135 FIFTH AVE. NEW YORK.

SYMPATHY FOR PORTO RICO

All Helping to Stem the Tide of Suffering Among the Unfortunate Islanders — General Davis Makes Another Appeal

WITH characteristic promptness and generosity, the American people have responded to the call in behalf of the [illegible] multitudes in Porto Rico, and life-saving consignments of food are now going forward to San Juan with encouraging regularity. Gen. Davis and his aids are directing the relief work with energy and [illegible] cannot fail to produce good results; but, as the following letter from the general shows, the suffering alleviated by the means thus far placed at his disposal, is small compared with what might be accomplished if the supplies were more abundant. He writes to the Secretary of the Relief Committee in New York City:



[illegible]

[illegible] Dept. Relief Expn.,
SAN JUAN, PORTO RICO.

"As you know, I asked for food, clothing and medicines, and your Association has nobly met its share of these demands. But as generous as it has been, I venture to ask that it will continue to give generously until these people are safely through a very critical period. The fruit and most of the food crop of the Island are totally destroyed. Upon these, as you well know, the people subsist, living from hand to mouth, and without these there is nothing intrinsic in Porto Rico, nor any food reserve upon which they can live until a new crop is produced. Neither have they the means of purchasing food, even were it here in abundance. I believe that the great problem to be solved is more a question of food than anything else, and to supply this every effort should be bent. The human animal can live here with very little clothing and shelter: but without food there can only be one result.

"If my conclusions as to the extent of the destruction of food supplies be correct, the stress of hunger will be an increasing one from this forward for many weeks, and we must prepare to feed not less than a quarter of a million people, before the earth can again bring forth fresh supplies. What this means is shown by a simple mathematical demonstration, summed up in the question: At the rate of one pound of food a day, per person, how many pounds of food would it take to feed 250,000 persons 119 days?"

Gen. Davis, continuing, explains that the food needed consists of rice, beans and codfish or bacon—the cheapest kind, but good and sound. He closes by urging that the needs of these destitute people be brought fully to the attention of the sympathetic American people. In view of this most outspoken appeal from Gen. Davis, who as director of the relief work on the field, is best qualified to judge of the situation and its needs, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will urge those of its readers and their friends who [illegible] stricken islanders at heart, and who have not yet contributed, to send in their offerings. The sufferers have the strongest claims on us for aid. "They gave themselves into our keeping; they came to us with words and deeds of loyalty, and with love for the American flag and all it stands for." This is the language of those who know the people of Porto Rico. We cannot in this emergency, abandon the people to death by starvation.

All contributions will be promptly acknowledged in the columns of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. The following have been received in aid of the relief work in Porto Rico:

[illegible]	$4 100 19
Adams, Mrs H C	1 00
Adams, Miss Mary A	5 00
Allen, G T	3 00
[illegible]	4 00
Ames, Mrs W B	1 00
Andrews, John B	2 00
[illegible]	1 00
Ashton, Chas D	5 00
Bailey, Joseph	1 00
Baird, J E	10 00
Baldwin, Mr & Mrs	2 00
Baldwin, Mrs H	1 00
Baldwin, Ida H	50
Baltimore, Bettie	1 00
[illegible]	1 00
[illegible]	5 00
Bartlett, Mrs Mattie	1 00
Benedict, Mrs C P	1 00
[illegible]	1 00
Bevan, E J	1 00
[illegible]	1 00
Bevan, F A	2 00
Bask, F M	1 00
Bloomhall, J	1 00
Boggan, Lulu C	2 00
[illegible]	1 00
Broadhead, Lemina C	50
[illegible]	2 00
[illegible]	2 00
Calhoun, S A	1 00
Calley, D S	6 00
Carlisle, Ruth	1 00
[illegible]	1 00
Carrel, Mrs R	1 00
Carruth, Louis	5 00
Carter, E J	1 00
Chase, John H	50
[illegible]	1 00
Church, E P	1 00
Clark, Geo B	1 00
Clark, Mrs J C	5 00
Claxton, Frances	1 00
Crawford, Miss M t	2 00
Claxton, Fred	1 00
Claxton, I	5 00
Claxton, Lillian	1 00
Cochrane, Mrs Jennie	5 00
Cock, Mrs H W	1 00
Cole, Mrs Alex G	1 00
Colton, Mrs F M	1 00
[illegible] Mrs Julia E	1 00
Cook, Pansy	50
[illegible] M S	1 00
Cornforth, Keith	50
Cornic, P F	2 00
Cox, Miss C J	2 50
Craig, Mrs R J	1 00
[illegible] H I	3 00
Carleton, Mrs H M	5 00
Carpenter, Dr E S	25
Carpenter, Mrs G S	1 00
Carpenter, M M	1 00
Carrier, M H & son, Lester	2 00
Church, C M	3 00
[illegible] Mr B P	1 00
Clark, Marshall	50
Clegg, Mrs Clara A	5 00
Cobb, Mrs J C	5 00
Holley, William	[illegible]
Hooker, D G	1 00
Horn, Mrs J D	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
House, J E	2 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Johnson, Alice	1 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Jordan, Hattie H	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	5 00
[illegible]	2 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
Knight, Mrs & Mrs I A & Mrs I Darby	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	1 25
[illegible]	65
Kurau, Mary L	1 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
Larue, Lydia	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Lathrop, Mrs Lucy	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Lillie, Mrs R M	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	1 00
[illegible]	1 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
McMurray, Lucretia	1 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Little, S W	2 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Lybarger, R M	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Magill, Mrs S	[illegible]
Martin, J T	[illegible]
May, C E	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]

The American Church in Paris

A Visit to an Interesting and Consecrated Spot in the Busy French Capital

TO one who is a stranger in Paris and who loves to visit the Lord's house, there can be no greater contrast than that found between the formal and stately services of the Russian Church and the simple style and order of service of the American Church. The order of service was invocation, responsive readings from a Psalm, the three hymns and earnest and thoughtful sermon on "Strict Obedience to God's Will." The large congregation joined in singing before the benediction the hymn beginning,

Crown his head with endless blessings
Who in God the Father's Name,
With compassion never ceasing,
Comes salvation to proclaim.

The simple, yet ample and stately church, the solemn service, and the expressed faith in the eternal realities was most tranquilizing and reassuring. The organist of the American Church in Paris is M. Fidele Koenig, while the quartette choir—which rendered an exquisite anthem—is conducted by M. Reginald Gesling. The services during the past summer were conducted, in the absence of Pastor Dr. Thurber, by the Rev. C. P. H. Nason, D.D., pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, Germantown, Penn. Dr. Thurber, meanwhile, preaching to the Germantown congregation. The American Church in Paris was founded in 1857 as an undenominational evangelical agency for the propagation of the simple Gospel, and in 1867 was reorganized on the basis of the International Evangelical Alliance. Situated in the heart of Paris, thousands have here been helped and saved. Among the successful preachers have been the Rev. A. F. Beard, D.D., and Drs. Kirk, Seeley, McClintock, Sunderland, Longlace and the present much-loved pastor, Rev. Dr. E. G. Thurber.

REV. DR. E. G. THURBER REV. C. P. H. NASON

It is proposed to make an effort to secure funds for endowing a church house with appointments for Sunday School, devotional meetings, benevolent work, library, reading rooms and a pastor's residence. It will cost at least $100,000, of which sum $50,000 has already been raised.

In connection with the American Church is a beautiful mortuary chamber, with round stained windows in the ceiling, and walls and pillars of marble and mosaic. It was the gift of Mrs. Leland Stanford, in memory of her son, who died suddenly in Paris. In a coffin on the marble table lay the latest victim of a runaway on the Champs Elysees. She was a young American student, unknown and friendless in the great city. She was taken to a hospital, and when she died her remains were received in the mortuary chamber, where they await the coming of friends from America. So to the living and the dead the church is carrying on a good Samaritan work.

W. J. PECK.

Our Children's Home

A lack of space has prevented the acknowledgment of many of the generous gifts received, some of which follow. The hot summer has gone, but the good done by helpers of our fresh-air work abides. Many little ones are healthier, happier and better for it all the year round. The following contributions have been received, and other names will appear later:

Prescott	$7 14 61	Hutchinson J G	5 00
Bliss Mamie & Ruth	1 00	Jackson Mary	1 00
Brewster Ella	1 00	McEwen Nannie	1 00
Chamberlin Mrs J W	3 00	Muhlenberg J W	3 00
Comstock, Mrs J T	50	Muir, Miss M E	3 00
Dewitt Mrs A	10 00	Parker Mrs L & friends	4 00
Fleming Mrs R B	3 50	Parrott, Mrs R	1 00
Hughes, Sarah L	1 00	Total	$7,180 04

Jewish Colonies in Palestine

IN a recent issue of the Jewish Chronicle of London, there appears a most interesting report of an address delivered by Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Wilson, at a public meeting of the Jewish Workingmen's Club, held in that city. He told of a tour he had made to the various agricultural colonies in the Holy Land. Among other things, he said:

"The first place that I went to was the Agricultural School near Jafta. Mikveh Israel is one of the oldest establishments of its kind in Palestine, and is doing very good work indeed. About 250 pupils attend the school. They are there for five years, during which time they are given thoroughly practical instruction, not only in reading, writing, arithmetic and languages, but also in agriculture. They work in the morning until dinner time, entirely in the field as agricultural laborers, and the afternoon is spent in the school. During the last two years of their stay more time is devoted to instruction in the school than in the field. The languages taught are Hebrew, French, Arabic and a little Turkish. The managers of the Jewish colonies in Palestine have decided that the medium of communication between Jews in Palestine shall in the future be Hebrew.

"The next colony I visited was that founded by Baron Edmond de Rothschild—'Rishon le Zion.' The colony is now one of the sights of Palestine. The whole ground is covered with vineyards, orchards and orange groves, and a great deal of barley is grown in the neighborhood. Another feature of the place is the manufacture of scents, a large area of land having been set apart for the cultivation of geraniums, and I saw the process of distilling conducted with great success while I was there.

"The colony which interested me most of all was Ekron. The horticultural part of the colony is managed by an educated Roumanian Jew, one of the most able men I met in Palestine. Water is everywhere raised by steam mills, by or pumping apparatus, and in some instances by the old-fashioned wheel system. The whole estate is a perfect garden.

"The next colony visited was Petach Tikvah. This colony was, at first, a comparative failure, owing to the prevalence of malaria, but the colonists planted an enormous quantity of eucalyptus trees, and that seems to have nullified the disastrous effects of the malarious winds that come from the neighboring marshes, and the colony is now healthy and flourishing.

"The next colony visited, Zichron Jacob, is very thriving. But, unfortunately the vines failed a few years ago, and the ground had to be replanted with other fruit trees, which are now growing. The colony made perhaps one of the best roads in Palestine. I visited Rosh Pinah, north of the Sea of Galilee. The colonists have made of the valley a garden.

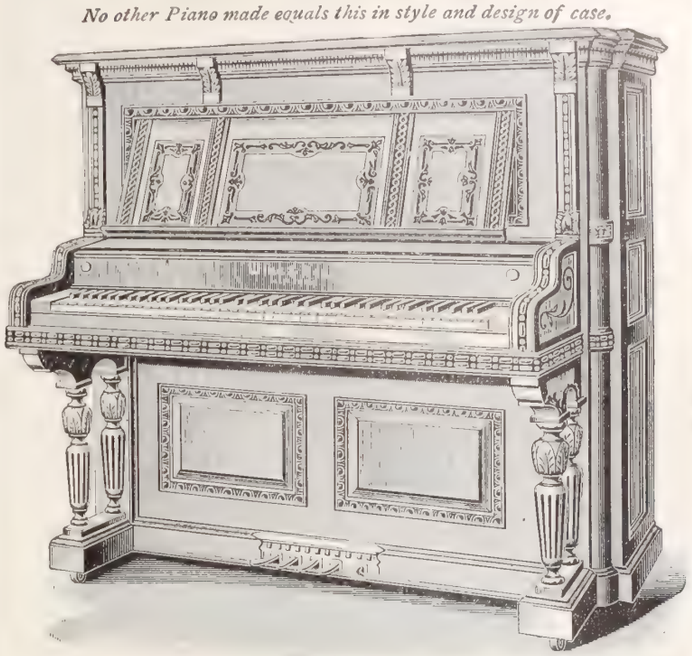
"Before the Jewish colonists came to Palestine, the land there was lying waste. In a few years' time a great many of the Jewish colonies will be entirely self-supporting."

"He that is warm thinks all so." Thousands are "cold" in that they do not understand the glow of health. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives all who take it the warmth of perfect health.

DOUBLE ENTRY BOOK-KEEPING
BUSINESS-ARITHMETIC
Approved System. Taught Thoroughly by mail. Send for particulars.
HENRY VON DEYLEN, 314 Clifton Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Wing Piano

STYLE 29. CONCERT GRAND UPRIGHT.
No other Piano made equals this in style and design of case.



We aim to make the best piano possible and to sell it at the lowest price possble. If you wish to buy a fine piano at a low price, write us.

DESCRIPTION OF STYLE 29.

7⅓ octaves.

Double lever, grand repeating action.

Grand scale, overstrung bass; three strings to each note in middle and treble registers.

The scale is the same as in grand pianos, with the largest size of sound board and strings of greatest length, thus giving the greatest volume and power of tone.

Case.—Double veneered inside and outside.

Choice of superior Circassian walnut, rich figured mahogany, genuine quartered oak and ebonized.

Keys.—Of best ivory and ebony.

SPECIAL INFORMATION

Tone.—The one great object for which a piano is made is its tone. The Wing Piano possesses magnificent tone qualities, durability, sweetness, richness, power, singing quality and evenness.

Action.—The Wing action is patterned after the perfected double lever grand repeating action, to secure the greatest strength and power and greatest repeating qualities. Every note acts instantaneously and recovers promptly, ready for the repeat, so that after a note is played the same note may be sounded again immediately without taking the finger from key.

Improvements.—Wing Pianos have the following improvements, viz.: "Built up" wrest plank construction. "Dovetail" top and bottom frame case construction. Full metal plate, with metal depression bar and metal supports for key bed. Improved noiseless direct motion pedal action. Improved practice attachment. Full length duet music desk. Carved panels. Instrumental attachment.

THE INSTRUMENTAL ATTACHMENT

imitates perfectly the tones of the Mandolin, Guitar, Harp, Zither and Banjo. Music written for these instruments, with and without piano accompaniment, can be played just as perfectly by a single player on the piano as though rendered by a parlor orchestra.

Every Wing Piano is guaranteed for twelve (12) years against any defect in tone, action, workmanship or material . .

SENT ON TRIAL

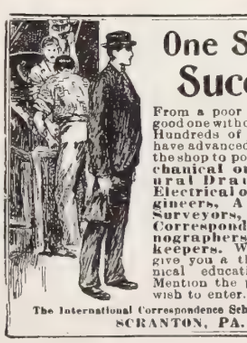
FREIGHT PREPAID. We will send this piano or your choice of four other styles, to any part of the United States on trial (all freight paid by us), allow ample time for a thorough examination and trial in the home, and, if the instrument is in any particular unsatisfactory, we will take it back at our own expense. No conditions are attached to this trial. We ask for no advance payment, no deposit. We pay all freights in advance. Our object in offering these terms is to give everyone an opportunity to examine the Wing Piano free of expense or risk.

Over 18,000 Wing Pianos Manufactured and Sold in 30 Years (since 1868).

We will send free on request "The Book of Complete Information about Pianos," 118 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Everyone who intends to purchase a piano should have this book. Sent free on request, with twelve (12) pieces of music.

OLD INSTRUMENTS EXCHANGED—EASY PAYMENTS.

WING & SON.
205-207 EAST 12th STREET, NEW YORK.
1868—31st Year—1899



One Step to Success

From a poor position to a good one without loss of time. Hundreds of our students have advanced directly from the shop to positions as Mechanical or Architectural Draughtsmen, Electrical or Steam Engineers, Architects, Surveyors, Chemists, Correspondents, Stenographers and Bookkeepers. We guarantee to give you a thorough technical education by mail. Mention the profession you wish to enter.

The International Correspondence Schools, Box 861, SCRANTON, PA.

WANTED—A case of bad health that R-I-P-A-N-S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R-I-P-A-N-S on the package and accept no substitute. R I P A N S 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

$3.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working for me. People preferred who can furnish their own team. Applicants must furnish satisfactory references as to character and standing. B. F. Johnson, 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

$18.00 a Week and expenses to good parties to travel. No investment. Permanent position. Also local workers wanted. $18 can be profitably employed for part of time. Give references. R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore.

STENOGRAPHY Typewriting, Penmanship, Bookkeeping, etc., thoroughly taught by mail. Experts made at Eastman, on Lake, N. Y. Situations furnished. Catalogue Free. C. C. GAINES, Box 500, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS

The New Minister*

As the keen dark eyes of the minister swept over the faces of the congregation, he recognized many among the older men and women, but the young people and the children, most of them, had changed beyond his recognition in the years of his absence. After a brief solemn invocation he announced the hymn and a young woman stepped forward and took a seat before the little old-fashioned melodeon. Fortunately the hymn was an old familiar one in which all who could sing at all could join, for there was no choir and no leader. The minister himself could sing, however, and his strong voice rang out and kept the laggards up to time and tune; and nobody suspecting how rasping to his nerves was the wheezy squeaking instrument. The people were so used to that melodeon, and few of them had ever listened to the grand harmonies of a fine church organ played by a skilled hand.

When the preliminary part of the service was over and the minister announced his text, Sepha drew a long breath and lifted eager eyes to the face above the pulpit. A strange thrill passed over her; it seemed to her that a fresh page of life was to be opened to her that day.

But now there was a noisy stir and a rustle all over the room—the scraping of heavy boots on the bare floor as their wearers settled into comfortable positions for listening—a cough here and there, and the dull thud of a hymn-book that had slipped from a child's uncertain grasp. The minister began to speak.

No such sermon as that had ever before been heard from that pulpit. From the beginning it held the close attention of all who were old enough to understand it. Never before had the rough big boys in the back seats sat in hushed silence as they did that day, and even the lightest and most careless of the girls forbore to whisper or giggle; while old-time critics forgot to criticise then. They listened one and all with an absorbed attention, anxious to lose no word.

"An unselfish life—a life filled with loving ministry to others—this is the true, the really happy life—the only life worth living." Such was the theme of the young minister that morning, and he ended with those ringing words of the great preacher who knew so well how to reach the hearts of men: "'Do you ask what you can do? Let Christ tell you that there is nothing that a man rests upon in the present moment—that he thinks of as he looks back upon it when it has sunk into the past, with any satisfaction—except some service to his fellowman, some strengthening and helping of a human soul. Then take your place in the great army of God, and go forward, having something to do with the work that he is doing in the world."

♦

The Decadence of Religion†

NOR on personal life was the influence of religion any more potent than in social life. Not a day but crimes, most atrocious and unnatural, were presented in every paper in every city. Not a day but marriage vows were scoffed at. Not a day but the sad story of poverty was rehearsed. Not a day but the wail of suffering, the sob of neglect, the sigh of despair rose heavenwards, discordant sounds to make the very angels weep.

It was the same with business life. Religion was of slight or no account. Men lied in business. Precautions were necessary for every transaction. Lawyers throve. Gigantic financial schemes crushed the weak, robbed the widow and took from the fatherless the investments which the bread-winner had made in his lifetime. Business failures, redolent with fraud, became no more startling, by reason of their frequency. Neighborhoods were rendered unsavory by immoral houses, whose tenants by bribery closed the very eyes which should have checked them, and who by proving the police rotten, bound the very hands which should have uprooted them. There was a spirit of unrest everywhere. The spirit of novelty moved every mind. Worse than all was the spirit of rejection of salutary safeguards—such as home life made happy by parental example and parental interest in children; school life made promising by heart training as well as by brain training; college life made vigorous by the inculcation of the doctrine of duty and self-sacrifice. Thinkers wondered at the immorality of so many even among the rich, marvelled at the ignorance of more, and trembled at the viciousness of yet others. Preachers preached, missionaries were sent abroad to convert savages, while souls at home needed ministration—needed to be saved. Bibles were printed but not read. The working classes in their attitude to the rich, and the rich in their attitude to the poor, showed little humility, less consideration, and, least of all, any sufficient consciousness of duty! In all towns, narrow alleys and dingy tenements were filled with homes on whose hearths the flowers of religion, sympathy, love, friendship and beauty never grew, never flourished, for they were never planted. This sad picture is actual fact, and an unexaggerated statement of society toward and at the close of the nineteenth century, and for half the twentieth.

I do not mean to say that religion was wholly powerless, but it was certainly generally subservient to personal interest. By some it was not noticed, except with a shrug. By others it was a subject for jest. For all, it was so far practically of no force that all business transactions were fenced in with precautions, as I have before remarked—a fact testifying how little a man's spoken word was taken, how little a man trusted his brother. The devil was such a power in the world that lawyers were necessary, for they had to guard their clients against him, and sometimes they were his agents.

Religious likes and dislikes were entertained, and fed by various sects, which fact did not fail to bring religion into disrepute. Above all, religion was practically of such little force that in all Christian countries the institutions of conscription and standing armies, navies and militia gave the lie to peace and goodwill on earth.

♦

My Mother's Bible

IT is old and stained with time,
It is much the worse for wear,
But I prize it as her choicest legacy.
'Twas her friend when in her prime,
'Twas her stay in years of care:
Mother's Bible is a precious thing to me.

O how oft she sat alone
With it open on her knee, [years.
When her soul was lonesome in her widowed
Other comfort had she none,
But the Bible seemed to be [tears.
Quite enough to calm her heart and dry her

And the babies left behind
When her dear one fell asleep
Oft she gathered in the evening by her side,
And she told them God was kind—
That the helpless he would keep,
And that orphans 'neath his wings might safely hide.

Then from that dear book she read
Of the home prepared above,
Of the life that may be had for just a look;
And our hearts she gently led,
'Till like her we learned to love
Christ as Saviour and the Bible as his book.

It is old and stained with years;
Many pages now are torn,
And it has no beauty left that men can see;
But it dried my mother's tears,
Cheered her heart when so forlorn,
And it is the dearest thing on earth to me.

Noank, Conn. W. C. MARTIN.

*From A Village Contest, by I. T. Thurston; pp. 329. cloth, illustrated, price $1.25. A. I. Bradley & Co., Boston, publishers.

†From Looking Ahead, by Rabbi H. Pereira Mendes. A remarkably able book in which the writer gives a forecast of religious, social and political conditions in the twentieth century. Pp. 381, cloth binding. F. Tennyson Neely, New York, Chicago and London, publisher.

AN EXTRAORDINARY CHANCE

For a Bright Man to Secure a Steady Position the Year Around In His Own Home

DEAR SIR:—We want a clothing salesman in every town where we have no agent to take orders for our tailor-made to measure suits, pants, overcoats and ulsters. Any good, bright man, especially if he has had experience as a salesman in a store, agricultural implement house, or where he has come in contact with people, as solicitor for tailoring, insurance, nursery stock or other goods, can make big money with our line the year around; but any good, bright man, even without previous experience, can make $150.00 a month and expenses with the big outfit we furnish him and the opportunity we give him if he will devote his time to the work; or, a good man whose time is partly taken up with other work and who can devote his spare time to our line, even if only an hour or so a day, he will do exceedingly well with our agency. We have men in real estate, loan, legal, lumber, grain, railroad, express, and other business, who give their spare time to our line with big results. No experience is absolutely necessary, no capital required. We furnish a complete line of cloth samples and stationery; have no commission plan, no house-to-house canvass, no catchy conditions, but offer a rare opportunity for some man in vicinity to secure high grade employment at big wages.

We are the largest tailors in America. We make to measure over 300,000 suits annually. We occupy [illegible] of the largest business blocks in Chicago. We refer to the Corn Exchange National Bank in Chicago, any express or railroad company in Chicago, or any resident of this city. We buy our cloth direct from the largest European and American mills, we operate the most extensive and economic custom tailoring plant in existence, and we reduce the price of made-to-measure suits and overcoats to from $5.00 to $18.00 (mostly $5.00 to $10.00), prices so low that nearly everybody will be glad to have their garments made to measure, and will give our agent their orders.

We will furnish a good agent a large and handsomely bound book containing large cloth samples of our entire line of suits, pantaloons, overcoats, etc., a book which costs us several dollars; also fine colored fashion plates, tape measure, business cards, stationery, advertising matter and a rubber stamp with name and address and pad complete, also an instruction book, which makes it easy for anyone to take orders and conduct a profitable business. We will also furnish net confidential price list. Agent can take orders and send them to us and we will make the garments within five days and send direct to agent's customer by express, C. O. D., subject to examination and approval, collect the agent's full selling price, and every week we will send the agent our check for all his profit. The agent need collect no money and deliver no goods—simply go on taking orders at a liberal profit. We deliver the goods, collect all the money and every week promptly send him in one round check his full profit for the week, and nearly all our agents get a check from us of at least $40.00 every week of the year.

We will make no charge for the book and complete outfit, but, as the outfit costs us several dollars, it is necessary to protect ourselves against anyone who would impose upon us by sending for the outfit with no intention of working, but merely out of idle curiosity; therefore we will ask as a guarantee of good faith on the part of the reader who decides to take up this work, that he cut this article out and mail to us, with the understanding that the big book and complete outfit will be sent to him by express, he to pay the express agent $1.00 and express charges for the outfit, with the distinct understanding that we will refund the $1.00 as soon as his orders have amounted to $25.00, which amount of orders he can take the very first day.

Don't compare this with any catchy offers made to get your $1.00. The genuineness of our offer and our reliability are proven by the bank reference referred to above, or you can easily find out by writing to anyone in Chicago to call on us.

This is a rare chance for any man to take up a work at once that with reasonable effort on his part is sure to net him from $5.00 to $10.00 a day from the start, and we trust that from among your many readers we will be able to get a few good representatives.

Cut this notice out and mail to the AMERICAN WOOLEN MILLS CO., West Side Enterprise Building, Chicago, Ill., and the book and agent's complete outfit will be sent to you at once, you to pay $1.00 and express charges when received, the $1.00 to be returned to you when your orders amount to $25.00.

A Few Of Our SPECIAL BARGAINS

Sent to anyone C. O. D. with privilege of examination and try on. Just give us your bust and waist measure also length of skirt.

They are the Latest

Manufactured and come to you direct from the mills, factory

THIS SUIT WILL COST YOU $9.50

THIS SUIT WILL COST YOU $9.50

We send free samples of the skirt and mackintosh

Order either and you will be pleased.

No. 10—Ladies Latest Style Golf Cape, made from an all wool Vicuna black golf cloth, large black and white plaid lining, hood, lack of collar and tucked cape. Black and white fringe on extreme edge of cape. Two shoulder belts with pocket attached. New style, strictly tailor-made and the finest. Fronts are fastened with clasps and buttons. Cannot supply Price, only.... $9.50

No. 12—Ladies Golf Jacket. New style. Plain Venetian cloth outside with golf plaid inside, top collar made from fine Astrachan cloth, front sleeves and bottom edged with same, and trimmed with black all seams covered with Kersey straps and finished fine slash back with ripple effect, has a soft roll and fastens with silk loops and olives. Comes in brown, navy and royal blue. In ordering state color preferred. Cannot supply A beauty. Price, only.... $9.50

No. 14—Ladies Navy Blue Skirt [illegible] front. Front dark grass or French serge, [illegible] trimmed with one row of tabbing of same material as skirt and lined with red mercerized [illegible] Nearly all these desirable goods in stock, fastened with buttons and cord sewed and ready. Samples sent. Sizes 24 to 30 waist 40 to 44 length. Price, only.... $7.85

These are all Beautiful

THIS NOVELTY HERRINGBONE COVERT CLOTH MACKINTOSH WILL COST YOU $5.75

THIS FINE ELECTRIC SEAL COLLARETTE WILL COST YOU $8.65

Our Catalogue is ready Free for the asking.

Samples sent on Application

No. 16—Ladies' Extra Fine Electric Seal Collarette, same as above cut, lined with brown silk, 10-in. cape, long tabs with tails and two heads. A wonderful bargain at the price.... $8.65

No. 18—Ladies' High Grade Novelty Mackintosh, same as cut, made from a beautiful herringbone covert cloth, double breasted, large storm collar, with velvet collar, extra fine woven bright large plaid lining. If you order this garment you will be pleased and no one else will have one like it, for we are the exclusive manufacturers. In ordering just give us your bust measure and length, down back. Price, only.... $5.75

Ladies' Felt Juliet—Widths, C, D & E sizes, 2½ to 8, colors red or black made of finest quality piano felt with black fur trimming and fancy black bead embroidered on both colors. Price only.... $1.45 Postage 17c extra.

$1.45 BUYS IT.

GRAYDON-PALMER CO.,
Market and Madison Streets, CHICAGO.

Rheumatism, Pneumonia & Grip

cured and prevented by wearing Dr. Arthur's Sulpho Antiseptic Insoles. Indorsed by the medical profession as being the best preventative of disease.

Colds, Grip and Pneumonia you cannot get while wearing them. Mailed to any address on receipt of price, 50 cents per pair. Send size of shoe—fits any shoe.

The Sulpho Insole Co., 158 Hartford Bldg., Chicago

Cuts Cake from pan. Fast seller. Big profits to Agents. Catalog new goods, free. Richardson Mfg. Co., 6th St. Bath, N. Y.

$14 IT COSTS NOTHING to try our Sewing Machines. We ship direct from factory to consumer. Save agents profits. 30 days free trial. 117,500 sold. Warranted 20 Years. All attachments free.

$40.00 Arlington for.....$14.00
$45.00 Arlington for.....$16.00
$60.00 Kenwood for.....$21.50
Other Machines at $8, $9 & $11.50

Illustrated catalogue and testimonials free. Write at once for our special freight offer. Address, CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 W. Van Buren St., B-18, Chicago, Ill.

RUPTURE CURED

The Improved Elastic Truss is the only Truss in existence that is worn with absolute comfort night and day, and it retain the rupture under the hardest exercise or severest strain, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure. Comfortable Belts made to reduce corpulency. The use of these belts reduces your size and leaves no room for surplus fat to accumulate. They can be used after any operations. Our goods are not sold by agents or druggists. Send for free pamphlets to the Improved Elastic Truss Co., 768 Broadway, N. Y. Established 18 years.

SILK REMNANTS for CRAZY WORK

A big package of beautiful Silk Remnants, from 100 to 120 pieces, all carefully trimmed, prepared from a large accumulation of silks especially adapted for all kinds of fancy work. We give more than double any other offer, and the remnants are all large sizes, in most beautiful colors and designs. Send 25 cents in silver or stamps to Paris Silk Company, Box 3045, New York City, N. Y.

An Old Time Missionary

Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for Oct. 22. Jonah 3: 1-10

HEROISM in the highest degree is required of the true missionary. The Christian Church has never appreciated the fact as it should. These men who have left home and friends and all the comforts of civilization to go out to heathen lands to preach Christ, are men to be proud of. We honor the victorious general who has added territory to the national domain, and we erect arches of triumph in his honor and greet him with huzza and great processions; but after all he does not compare with the missionary in the qualities of true heroism. The man to whom the call comes to missionary service knows that a life of toil and danger is before him. He must go into a land where all is hostile to his principles. He settles down in some unknown district where there is not a soul that he knows. He must painfully acquire a difficult and barbarous dialect, and gradually make acquaintances and tell them the story of the Cross. He has to teach them the very opposite of all they believe and admire. He must get them to give up fighting, give up polygamy, give up all their vices and lead clean lives. After long years of labor he succeeds in getting a few adherents, some of whom inevitably relapse into barbarism. It is hard work, discouraging work, full of difficulty and disappointment. During a lifetime of such service he is shut out from all that, to a refined, educated man, makes life worth living. An occasional letter or newspaper tells him of what is going on in the world he has left. If he is sick, there is no doctor within call; if he is depressed, there are no friends to cheer him. And what is his reward? A beggarly stipend which is not one-tenth of the sum he could earn in his own land, and at the end, death among strangers and an unknown grave. But he adds another field to the Master's kingdom: he knows that the seed he is sowing will come to harvest, even if he does not reap it, and that multitudes will yet be brought, through his labors, out of darkness into light. Surely an heroic life, unselfish, brave, consecrated—a life that will win the glorious "Well done, good and faithful servant," from the all-seeing Lord whom he serves.

Most unfortunate is the choice of a type for the topic. Is this an old-time missionary? Jonah is called to go to Nineveh and reprove the people for their wickedness. At first he tries to evade the duty, and, with the ignorant notion that God is merely a tribal Deity, whose dominions do not extend beyond Palestine, he sets out for Tarshish to escape conscription. When he is brought back and once more confronted with his duty, he performs it in a savage, bitter fashion. He declares that in forty days the city shall be overthrown, and, when he delivered the message, he takes up a position outside that he may witness the destruction he has predicted. There is no concern in his heart for the many teeming thousands of women and children who are to perish. But, meanwhile, the people have repented and have cried to God, who is more magnanimous than his prophet, and God averts the impending calamity. Does the prophet rejoice? No, he is more concerned about his own reputation as a prophet, than about all the lives which must have been sacrificed if his prophecy had been fulfilled. So he complains of God for not executing his threat. He intimates that it is an unthankful business to serve One who does not stand by his messenger. We leave Jonah chagrined and angry, bitterly complaining of God, and in his vexation wishing himself dead.

What a contrast is all this to the life of the missionary. To call Jonah an old-time missionary is an insult to the brave, noble, self-renouncing men who go forth with a religion of love to save the heathen; who lay down their lives that men who know not Christ may be won to him. They are men who love those to whom they go, who care nothing for themselves, and who have no desire in life, no hope in all their labor, but that of seeing men delivered from evil and made children of God. They must face dangers of climate, perils from natives who misunderstand their work and must live under most depressing conditions, their only hope that of saving souls and extending their Master's kingdom.

When I Went Out to Glean

WHEN I went out to glean
The field was brown and bare,
But as I worked I found
My sheath was always there.

When I went out to glean
There was so little light;
But soon the sun rose high
And made the shadows bright.

When I went out to glean
I thought the field so small,
But lo! it grew and grew
Beyond my ken, or call.

Thanks, Ancient Giver, thanks!
Thine handmaiden has seen
How kind thou art to those,
Who in thy fields go glean.

Lord of the Harvest, grant
That at the last I bring
My sheaves all ripe and full,
To thy Ingathering.

—AMELIA E. BARR.

A Providential Journey

Mr. D. L. Moody relates the following concerning himself: "A short time ago I needed $500 for a church purpose. I had no idea where I could get the money, but I felt confident that if the Lord wanted me to have the money he would send it to me. One morning I felt impressed to take a railroad journey. I boarded the train. The conductor came along and asked for my ticket. I told him I had none. 'Where are you going?' 'I do not know.' 'Don't know?' 'No.' I felt in my pockets, took out all the change I had, and said 'Take me as far as that money will carry me.' In an hour or so the train stopped at a little station, and the conductor told me this was as far as my money would take me. I alighted. It was a place where I had never been before. I stood on the platform wondering what I should do, when a gentleman came up to me and said, 'Is this Mr. Moody?' 'Yes.' 'Well, sir, I want you to take this money and use it for the Lord's work.' I counted the money. There was just $500."

The Flood Sufferers

Since our last acknowledgment, the following sums have been received in aid of the sufferers by the floods in the Brazos river, Texas:

Prev. ack	$166 30	Mrs S L Apple	1 00
Hiram F Clark	6 00	Mrs E Wilkinson	3 00
Friend, Lonsdale	1 00	Geo E Klink	2 00
The Lord's Tenth, Springfield	2 00	E Tilton	4 00
Mrs E S Wallers	5 00	M E B. Shawhan	1 00
David B Gladfelter	1 00	M E Torrey	3 00
Friend of Jesus	5 00	M Crews	50
Andrew Sack	1 00	Mr & Mrs C K Davis	2 00
L F T, Washington	1 00	John Anderson	1 50
W F Hicks	5 00	E G. T. Allentown	15 00
—, New Lisbon	5 00	Maggie J McFadden	5 00
R W Jones	5 00	Subr, Lanark	2 00
Subr, Haverhill	1 00	Friend, Bucyrus	10 00
—, Auburn	1 00	J Kuhn	1 00
Mr & Mrs Gillespie	10 00	Overt Brownsey	5 00
Wm Stone	5 00	R P Church Flackv'e	10 16
Friend to the needy, Merrillan	1 00	E F Nehls	1 00
Mrs Elizabeth Cross	2 00	J P. Mass	1 00
Mrs Frank Woodside	2 00	Rev Saml Riddogh	1 00
Friends-Summerville	10 05	Miss Sue E Goodwin	1 00
King's Daughter	5 00	Jane Reyser	2 00
—, Jordan	25	C V Kintner	1 00
FPP, Wadham's Mills	1 25	—, National Soldier's Home, Va	2 00
Dr J F Herbert	5 00	—, Glenbeulah	50
P C Vawter	2 00	Mr & Mrs Hogarth	1 00
Mrs G C Richards	50	Brownie, Bar Harbor	1 00
N C Jensen	5 00	— Lathrop	5 00
Friend, Santa Barbara	2 00	—, Week's Mills	1 00
A M Edwards	1 00	Will Mc, Ind T	2 50
Mrs Julia Allegre	5 00	Total	$348 51

The Gospel in Porto Rico

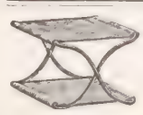
One of the brightest features of the Porto Rican relief movement is the opportunity it affords of showing to those simple, untaught islanders, the love and sympathy for suffering humanity which the Gospel of Jesus Christ kindles in the hearts of his followers. America will mean to them hereafter much more than before the flood and famine visited them, and the kindness that is now extended to them in their time of need will assuredly make them the more eager to accept a Gospel which is brought to them with hearts and hands "full of blessings." United States Consul, Philip G. Hanna, speaking on the subject to the writer, said:

"The Porto Ricans are talking a great deal of the Gospel as illustrated by the United States—'the religion of Uncle Sam,' they sometimes call it. It is different from anything they have known. Religion in the Island has been neglected sadly. This is illustrated by a remark of Chaplain Sherman of the United States army, attached to Gen. Fred Grant's staff. He said it was 'a Catholic country without any religion.' The people are not to be held responsible for their bitterness against religion. They have learned to look upon the priesthood as a class of Spanish officials who had but little more interest in the welfare of the people morally than had the officers of the Spanish army or navy. Already they are forming high ideas of American Christianity. It not only appeals to their hearts, but to their bodies as well. It not only means to make better men and women out of them, but teaches them to become better providers for their families, and places the means within their reach to lift themselves and families above the position of brutes to which they had almost fallen. I believe there is no country in the world so opposed to the Gospel, in its broadest sense and application, as this group of islands. I have met all the church dignitaries who have visited Porto Rico, and have tried, in a friendly way, to impress them with the importance of working together, to show the people that while there are various methods of bringing about the same results, there is but one Christianity."

What One Tract Did

WHAT may be accomplished by even the smallest effort in a spiritual direction is beautifully illustrated in the following incident related by Rev. Jacob Chamberlain, for thirty-seven years a missionary in India, among the Telugus: "Near forty years ago a tract, called 'Spiritual Teaching,' written by Dr. H. M. Scudder, found its way into a Telugu village seventy-five miles northwest of my station in India. It fell into the hands of one of the headmen of the village. He was a high caste man of noted probity of character. He read it, and then reread it with more attention. It was the first he had heard of any other religion than Hindooism. He read the tract to his wife and little boys, and told them it was so good it must be true. He read it to his neighbors, and some of them also accepted its teachings. At last he heard of a missionary who taught similar doctrines some seventy miles away; he went on foot across the hills. He found him, told him what he had learned from the little tract, and asked if it were true, and if he knew about the God who had given his own Son to save us from our sins. He went back and brought his family with him to hear more of this wonderful news. They were all baptized by the missionary, and he placed his children in the mission school there to be educated, that they might help to make known the glad tidings to his countrymen. In 1861 I buried the old patriarch in a Christian's grave. He was a man of strong faith and much prayer; he spent his last breath in sending up shouts of praise to his Saviour for sending this tract to his village, and through it saving him from his sins.

"Two of his sons have since been laboring as preachers of the Gospel. The elder was for a long time native preacher of the church at Palmaner. In 1884 I stood by his death-bed. After his funeral, a prominent Hindoo said to me: 'Sir, he was a man who never ceased to tell others of his Saviour. When he was sick in your hospital, one of my family was also a patient in the same ward, and I was there a great deal. Every day, and often during the day, he would gather groups of the patients and their friends around him, and read to them from his Bible, and talk to them of the love of Jesus. He was a good man, and we Hindus mourn over his loss.' This was accomplished by that one tract which found its way all alone in that distant Hindu village."



Three Persons

sit as easy as two on a buggy or cutter seat when you use the

New I. D. SEAT

This little accommodation seat placed on the seat of any vehicle increases its carrying capacity one-third without the least discomfort. No cramping or crowding. Requires no fastening. Folds up when not in use. Desirable for children; will hold heavy persons. Sensible cheap, needed in every conveyance for emergency or regular use. If not sold by your dealer will be sent postpaid anywhere upon receipt of the following prices; Tapestry Brussels seat, $1.30; Velvet seat, $1.55; Nickel seat $2.30. Circulars free.

THE NEW I. D. SEAT CO., Rohrerstown, Pa.

9 CORDS IN 10 HOURS

BY ONE MAN, with the FOLDING SAWING MACHINE. It saws down trees. Folds like a pocketknife. Saws any kind of timber on any kind of ground. One man can saw MORE timber with it than 2 men in any other way, and do it EASIER, 163,000 in use. Send for FREE illustrated catalogue showing latest IMPROVEMENTS and testimonials from thousands. First order secures agency. Address FOLDING SAWING MACHINE CO., 55-57-59 No. Jefferson St., H-20, Chicago, Ill.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE

More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Color greatly improved. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO MOSS GROWING. CLEANING NO CRUMBLING CRACKING.

THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO., 70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

EXPANSION....

of business necessitates our employing more General Agents. The duties are to travel and appoint local agents on our Popular Subscription Books. Ladies or Gentlemen. We guarantee $600 to $900 per year and all expenses. Salary and expenses paid weekly. A very healthful, pleasant and lucrative position, affording many advantages over other agency work. If interested send stamp for Application Blank and full information. If you cannot travel write for terms on home work.

C. W. STANTON CO., 980 Monon Block, Chicago, Ill.

If you contemplate

BUILDING

Send for Catalogue of PLANS containing fifty different designs. Price 50c.

T. W. BAST Architectural Co.

SEDALIA, MO.

10,000 BICYCLES

Closing out Overstock. Shipped on trial without deposit. Order Today. STANDARD '99 Models, $10 to $20. '98 and '97 Models, $6 to $12. Second Hand, good as new $3 to $10. EARN A BICYCLE on our new plan. 3 FREE USE of wheel to Rider Agents. Write for Special Offer. Mead Cycle Co., Dept E-B. Chicago.

ENTERTAINMENTS

For CHURCHES and SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Finest Magic Lanterns, Stereopticons & views; all prices. Full particulars in 256-page illus. book, free. McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., New York

CASH or NEW HAIR MATTRESS For Your OLD FEATHER BED

Write for particulars. Estab'd 20 years. Bank reference. CANADA EXPORT COMPANY, 118 North 11th St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

$13.75 THIS ELEGANT GONDOLA COUCH $13.75

Unsurpassed in value. A bargain without a parallel. Extra Size and extra quality. 6 ft. 5 in. long, 30 in. wide, full Gondola shape, as shown. Upholstered in three toned Kaiser plush and deep bisont tufted buttons guaranteed not to fly out. Stuffed with fine tow and moss. Full set of springs in head, edge and seat. Samples of material and colors FREE.

A HANDSOME PRESENT. Each purchaser of this couch will receive free the handsome down pillow, with wide hemmed border, shown in illustration. This, in addition to the low price of the couch, is a wonder.

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL. This handsome couch and down pillow will be sent FREE on thirty days' trial to all responsible purchasers who will send us their freight address at once, as satisfactory reference as to their responsibility. After thirty days' trial the couch alone is worth every cent of $20. If not all you expected return to us at our expense. We cannot do more than this to show our belief in the quality and price of our goods. We have couches at all prices. Of our $9.75 couch we sold over 10,000 last year. A postal card will secure our new fall and winter catalogue of couches and upholstered furniture. Established 1857.

PILLOW FREE WITH COUCH.

C. LOUIS SCHULTZE'S SONS, 1051-1053 Milwaukee Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

CHAPTER II.

FINDING AN ANCHORAGE

HARE-FOOTED boy of eleven, clothed in rags and tatters, and with the grime and dirt of a long tramp visible in his thin face, and slouching figure, Dave Sears stood at the door of a Dakota farm house. The man of the house looked him over, heard him ask for work, considered. He had a shrewd but not a hard expression, this Western farmer.

"You've seen hard times, my friend," he said at last. "Will you work if I give it to you? I'm too poor to pay you wages just now, but I'll give you a home till you get into better shape. If you'll close with that offer, come right in."

"I'll close with that offer, gratefully, sir. It's years since I've had a home."

"Mother!" called the farmer. A sallow-faced woman, wrinkled and brown, but with pleasant eyes and a kind look, came to the door with a skillet in her hand. She was getting a meal and something was in the oven. Dave smelled it.

"Here's a young man I've engaged to help on the farm. Can we take him in? And make him one of us?"

"That we can," she said cheerily. "The first thing, honey, will be to give you a place to wash, and the next you must have a square meal; you look fairly beat out. I'm glad you've happened along. Father's been needing a hand the worst way, but we're poor, and we can't hire help. I felt sure, though, that the Lord would send us a man, and he's done it. The Lord never went back on Jim and me, and he won't do it now."

She indicated a basin at the back lean-to, and handed him a clean towel.

"There's soap there," she said. "And when dinner's over you can go to the loft, and you'll find a good bed, and have the place to yourself. Jim and I sleep downstairs. We're all alone; have been for six years since our baby died."

They sat down to a good dinner—boiled corned beef and cabbage, potatoes, apple sauce. It was plain that there was plenty of it. The tramp had not tasted such fare nor sat at such a table for many months. Before the first mouthful was taken the farmer bowed his head and said reverently:

"Bless, O Lord, this refreshment to our use, and us to thy service. Bless, O Lord, the friend within our gates, and grant us thy peace. For Christ's sake. Amen."

In that Amen Dave Sears joined.

The work was hard, but he went at it with a will. After the desultory life he had led, his muscles were weak, and he had very little facility; but he tried with all his might. It was so good to be clean, to have whole clean clothes on, for the farmer's wife found an old coarse suit of her husband's and burned the remnants that Dave had on when he came; it was so comfortable to have three meals a day. Only, after a fortnight, the demon within him, quiescent for a time, awoke and clamored and tugged and tore at him, even as in our Lord's day the demons rent their poor victims. He was beside himself with restlessness.

"Dave," said the keen-eyed farmer, watching him intently, "you've been a drinking man, I see."

"I have," said Dave.

"And the desire for the cursed stuff is in ye now. Well, my lad, there's not a drop of it to be had here, nor within five miles of this house, and if you will ask the Lord's help, he and you and I will fight the thing together, and I'll bet on the Lord Jesus and Jim Burnham against you and whiskey. What do you say? Will you try it?"

"I hate the stuff as I hate poison, Mr. Burnham. It's ruined me, body and soul. It's broken my mother's heart. It's killed my career. I'm what I am because of it, but I'm afraid it's too strong for me!"

"Certainly it's too strong for you! But nothing can frustrate God. Is there anything too hard for the Lord? Down on your knees here in the furrow, and we'll pray against the whiskey, and for the man he means you to be."

To the end of his life David Sears will remember Mr. Burnham's prayer that day. Above them the blue sky, around them the wide, treeless fields, standing near the patient, uncomprehending mules. God does not turn a deaf ear to such a cry for help. David rose ready to take the first step toward a new manhood.

"It's time to go home," said the farmer. "Mother's got an extra good dinner for us to-day."

So she had; and the coffee she made for David was extra strong and hot. She took a hand, too, on the side of the Lord Jesus and Jim Burnham. It was the sword of the Lord and of Gideon over again, and the battle they waged was for a man's deliverance from the bondage of a cruel appetite.

"They've started a Sunday School at the Corners," said the farmer one Sunday morning, and I suppose 'twouldn't hurt us to ride over and help them. What say, David?"

"I can't be any help that I know of."

"Well, you can't hinder things. Lend a hand—won't you, my boy?"

But David held back. It required some persuasion to get him started. Mrs. Burnham did it. She laid her hand on his forehead; it was a broad, smooth brow, winning and clear, now that his hair was cut and parted in the middle, as his mother used to comb it.

"Come, Davy," she said, "you and I can lead the singin'."

"If I had shoes," he answered falteringly.

"Oh! if that's all," she replied, "I can fix you up. When my Cousin Rueben was here visiting, he left a good pair of shoes—land o'Goshen, he left a lot of clothes an' I forgot them, for they didn't fit father. You can have them, Dave, as well as not. Rueben's never coming

(Continued on next page).

CAUGHT A NURSE.

Didn't Know Old King Coffee Had Her.

"The duties of professional nurses call them among a great many different people, and it is surprising to know how many are suffering from the use of coffee, which is the primary cause of the majority of many nervous disorders. My own experience has been such that I feel that I can speak with some knowledge of the subject.

"For about ten years I was afflicted with a severe nervous disorder, which was so great that sleep became an unknown thing to me without the use of opiates. I was a confirmed coffee drinker at this time, but had never thought that had anything to do with the difficulty.

"After coming to Chicago to live I was told by an acquaintance, who had been a similar sufferer from nervousness, that he discovered it was caused by the use of coffee, and when he made that discovery, gave up the coffee and took up the use of Postum Food Coffee and was completely restored. His argument sounded so logical, I was determined to make the experiment, and to my surprise, upon leaving off the coffee habit I commenced to improve. This improvement has continued until now I am in complete health and sleep well and naturally. I always advise patients suffering from nervous trouble to abandon the use of coffee and use Postum, for I know what I am talking about on that subject.

"Occasionally private families do not prepare Postum well, that is, they fail to allow a sufficient amount of time for boiling. It requires more boiling than coffee, but the care well repays, for the beverage is delightful to the taste and wonderfully nourishing." Maggie F. Church, No. 2 E. 33d Place, Chicago, Ill.

Postum is sold by all first-class grocers, and made by the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

Something New in Wall Paper

Methods of making wall paper have changed. Machinery has been improved. The cost has been reduced. But the price to the consumer has been increased. Why? There is a wall paper "Trust."

Ours is the only large factory outside the Trust, and our capacity is greater than that of any one Trust factory. Our machinery is new. Our management is economical. Our factory was built this year with every convenience for quick and economical work.

Our designs and colorings are the latest and best work of the world's foremost decorating artists.

The dealers who sell our papers can offer at ten and fifteen cents a roll papers which the Trust prices all the way from eighteen to twenty-five cents. Other grades in proportion. One dealer in each town sells "Pittsburg Wall Paper."

Look for our name on the edge of each roll.

Pittsburgh Wall Paper Co.,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Bloch Adjustable Reclining Chair

$14.70 ... one free anywhere east of the Mississippi. Write for catalogue.

Doll Go-Carts

25c. to $10. ... Write for catalogue.

'Reclining Go-Cart

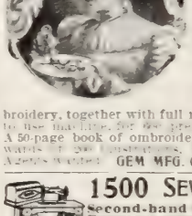
which is really a combined Carriage and Go-Cart. A remarkable patented improvement. ... $5 to $20. Write for catalogue.

Philadelphia Baby Carriage Factory

Builders of Children's Carriages and Go-carts, Invalids' Rolling and Reclining Chairs.

713-715 Spring Garden St., PHILADELPHIA

The Gem Embroidery Machine



SOMETHING NEW!!

... the finest grades of embroidering ... Embroiders as much ... does ... Sews on cloth 3 inches thick ... and sewing ... will send a sample machine with a full set of stamping patterns and a ... broidery, together with full instructions teaching how to use the machine. Sent free prepaid for $2.00. A 50-page book of ombroidery designs, containing upwards of 300 illustrations, free with each machine. Address as above.

GEM MFG. CO., Dept X, St. Louis, Mo

1500 SEWING MACHINES

Second-hand ... $3 to $10. Shopworn or slightly used samples $7 to $12. ... years ... New machines one-fourth price. Largest ... in the world. Write for ... Agents Wanted. Mention Paper.

James L. Mead & Co., Dept. 41 T, Chicago

SILK QUILT

Crazy Quilt Patch, ... pieces, 10c. ... Quilt Patterns, ... Ladies' Art Co. 806 N. B'way, D 13, St. Louis, Mo.

If You

... are a sufferer from disease ... have taken drugs and nostrums ... all ... DAVIDSON ...

REV. THOS. J. OLIVER CURRAN, St. George's Church, 76th St. & Drexel Ave., Chicago, Ill., July 8th, 1899, writes:

... DAVIDSON ... Nervura ... to work like magic.

"I am positive from what I know it has done for myself and others, that it will do all you claim."

(In charge of St. George's Mission)

CAUTION! ... DAVIDSON are imitations. Refuse to accept them. Dr. Sanche is the inventor and originator, and has obtained final decision ... ONLY PATENTS ... THIS PROCESS ... THESE INSTRUMENTS. ... to SAVE ... by purchasing ... direct.

Send for prices. Our ... will send ... Many ... are ... $50 to $200 per month. Others giving all their time are making much more.

DR. H. SANCHE & COMPANY,
261 Fifth Avenue, New York City.
57 State Street, Chicago, Ill.
61 Fifth Street, Detroit, Mich.
Canadian Branch 2268 St. Catherine Street, Montreal, P.Q.

EARN A SECRETARY

By Selling

Baker's Teas, Etc., to a total of ... lbs. ... a few hours' work among friends will ... prize: 25 lbs. Silver Watch; 50 lbs. Waltham Gold Watch; 75 lbs. for Boys' or Girls' Bicycle; 150 lbs. for Ladies' or Gents' Best High Grade Bicycle. ...

W. G. Baker, Dept. 7, Springfield, Mass.

$75 MONTH AND EXPENSES, ...

... position permanent ... PEASE MFG. CO., P.O. Box A, Cincinnati, O.

A PRODIGAL SON

(Continued from preceding page)

back after them." So he was fitted out in comfort.

A home missionary, one of those heroes of the faith who count not their lives dear for the sake of the Gospel, took the lonely district as part of his parish. He gave a cordial welcome to Dave, and Mr. Burnham and himself were already acquainted. The minister was about Dave's age, and he at once recognized in the man one who had been educated, and had possessed some early advantages. He did not need to be told much of the past: living in that community he had met more than a few who had left the East and cut loose from old associations, either because they were discouraged or dissipated, or unable to hold their own. There was a winning quality in Dave's manner, and, now that he had found friends, and was assured of assistance, there was in him a new confidence, which was very pleasing. The missionary liked him from the start, and gave him the cordial hand of a comrade.

"I tell you, Mr. ——" he hesitated.

"Call me Dave, if you please. Never mind my other name."

"Dave, then, let it be. A fellow, I was going to say, needs friends in this world, and there's one Friend he can't be without. Dave, do you know the Lord?"

"I know about him, Mr. Elmore." "That's good. But you've got to go farther. You've got to know him. Then you'll be safe, and strong, and sure to go ahead all right Dave, I must have you for Jesus."

CLAUDE HANSBURG COOK
The Boy Preacher

The two had many talks. The weeks wore away. Season followed season. Still, Dave, earning no money, but climbing back bit by bit, step by step, to a clean, brave manhood remained in the Burnham home and worked as if he had been their own son.

"He's left a good mother somewhere," said Mrs. Burnham. "I wish she knew how he's getting on. But he's as close as a clam. He never mentions his people."

"Give him time, dear," the farmer would answer. "He's safer here, for a while, and he's stepping to the light. He'll never be really safe till he comes out on the Lord's side, 'till he's washed and made whole."

From the barn came the sound of Dave's singing as he went about his evening chores:

"I've found a Friend, oh! such a friend!
He loved me ere I knew him."

"Maybe he's yielded all to Jesus now. I must run out and ask him."

She came back with a shining face.

"Yes, Jim, the Lord's opened his eyes. Dave's a new man in Christ Jesus. Praise the Lord!"

. . .

"Dave!" It was the minister calling from the gate.

"I'm coming," shouted Dave.

"I want you to drive to the postoffice with me. I've heard that a box of books has been sent from New York, and it will be a Godsend. We're just starved for something to read, and from what I've heard, this is a nice lot of volumes for everybody. Let me read you what Dr. Ebbenhurst writes."

"But," looking attentively at him, "something has happened to you, my friend. What is it? I never saw you so glad before!"

David answered him solemnly, "I have reason to be glad. I've surrendered to your Saviour. Henceforth he is my Master and my Friend, and by his grace I'll serve him, better than I've served the devil, as sure as my name is David Sears."

(To be concluded).

Lancaster's Door of Hope

Lancaster, Pa., is soon to have a Door of Hope—a refuge for friendless and unfortunate women—in which a rescue work similar to that conducted at other Doors of Hope in different cities will be carried on. Mrs. E. M. Whittemore, of New York, the founder of the first Door of Hope, cooperating with Rev. Charles T. Knox, of Lancaster, has organized an auxiliary committee of thirty Christian ladies, who will give valuable aid in the work. Miss Addie T. Briscoe, an experienced mission worker, will be the matron. There is promise of cordial support for such a movement in Lancaster.

A Boy Preacher's Visit

CHURCH circles in New York, Philadelphia and elsewhere have been much interested in the visit of Claude Hansburg Cooke, the "Boy Preacher of Manchester," better known as "Jack Cooke," now here from England. He is twelve years old, and has received very little education, but it is asserted that he has astonished many by his clear, simple talks on religious topics. Often he has confounded inquirers and surprised his audiences with the acuteness of his replies. His talks are all impromptu. His audiences are asked to suggest any subject within the Bible. His face lights up as he speaks, and his ideas, though crudely expressed, are full of knowledge and a certain childish eloquence, quickly and distinctly spoken, and which captivates his hearers. A large audience gathered at the Sunday Breakfast Association in Philadelphia recently to hear him. He has been used in revival work in England, and since arriving has addressed audiences in a number of cities.

Up to two years ago Claude was a very reserved and retiring little fellow who did not show in any way that he would be different from other lads of similar surroundings and position. It was found, however, that he had become possessed of a certain inner knowledge, which was a source of wonder to all who knew him. Shortly after the discovery, the boy was taken out to deliver addresses at religious meetings, which his father conducted, and soon afterward he took up evangelistic work as his vocation.

Among those who have testified to the young speaker's usefulness in Gospel meetings in the United States are: Rev. J. J. Wicker, Baltimore, Md.; Rev. Mr. Heebner, St. John's M. E. Church; Rev. F. A. Lloyd, Baptist Church; Rev. J. M. Palmer, the Superintendent of Bethany Church Sunday School, and others.

WORKING ON BRAINS.

Food Specialist Brings out a Novelty

A food expert at Battle Creek, Mich., connected with the Postum Cereal Co., Lim., has produced a food especially intended for rebuilding the brain. It is a well known fact among physicians that examination of perspiration and urine will tell whether the individual has been actively using the brain or not.

Brain work exhausts the phosphates which appear in the excreta above mentioned. Administration of inorganic phosphorus or phosphates does not readily supply the waste, for nature demands that phosphates be made up and blended in food which she furnishes. Advantage has been taken of this knowledge and a scientific selection of part of the grain has been made, and these have been put through mechanical processes parallel to the processes through which food is passed in its management by the human digestive organs. Therefore the new food is not only ready to serve without cooking, but it has passed through the process where the starches have been changed to grape-sugar, and that with the proteids, organic phosphates, etc., are at once ready to be quickly absorbed and turned to use in vitalizing and nourishing the parts of the body like brain, solar plexus, and the delicate nerve centers.

The new food has been given the name of Grape-Nuts, and far from being a "Crank's Food," "Invalid's Food," or anything of that sort, it is a crisp, sweet novelty, charming to the athlete, brain worker, epicure, or invalid.

Grape-Nuts can be had of grocers, and a trial dish for breakfast will be found a pleasant experience.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

SUGAR is not improved by the addition of sand; neither is White Lead improved by the addition of Zinc and Barytes, yet there are hundreds of such mixtures branded and sold as "White Lead," "Pure White Lead," etc.

You can avoid these by making sure that the brand is right. Those named in the margin are genuine.

FREE By using National Lead Co's Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, any desired shade is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also folder showing picture of house painted in different designs or various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

National Lead Co., 100 William St., New York.

FREE COSTS NOTHING
But the asking to get our new 1900 Catalogue of either PIANOS OR ORGANS
At wholesale prices, thus saving you every penny usually pocketed by agents and dealers.
SEND TODAY FOR OUR NEW
1900 Coupon { It saves you $10.00 on an ORGAN. " " " $20.00 on a PIANO.
CASH OR INSTALMENTS.
30 days' trial. No money in advance. Safe delivery at your depot insured. Instalments. Easy payments. Our new due bill certificate shows you how to get an Organ or Piano for little or nothing. Remember, our Catalogue costs you nothing, and will positively save you money.

PIANOS, $155 UP.
ORGANS, $21.75 UP.
We furnish with each Piano a $10 hard wood Piano Chair free, also Plush Scarfs and $10 worth of the latest sheet music. Complete Organ outfit, free. Our factory, with its enormous capacity, enables us to sell you a high-grade instrument at a figure much below that of any other company in the world.
INCORPORATED FOR 50 YEARS.
WE LEAD, OTHERS FOLLOW.
Beethoven Piano and Organ Co.,
BOX 741 WASHINGTON, N.J

Wool Soap
For Toilet and Bath
Answers every household purpose. It is just the soap for the bath room and the every-day soap tray. Sold everywhere. Made by Swift and Company, Chicago
100

THE TREATMENT OF RHEUMATISM BY TARTARLITHINE.

Mr. Hunt of Knoxville, Tenn., writes "I was a great sufferer from chronic rheumatism, having to go around on crutches. Your Tartarlithine was recommended to me so highly that I gave it a trial. In a short time I discarded my crutches and am now a well man. I will recommend the Tartarlithine to others." . . .

Regular package $1.00,
Of all druggists or post-free by mail.
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

McKESSON & ROBBINS,
91 Fulton Street, . . New York.
SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

Two Wagons at One Price.

It is a matter of great convenience and a saving of labor for a farmer to have a low, handy wagon. They save more than half the labor of loading in hauling manure, hay, grain, corn fodder, wood, stones, etc.

The man who already has a wagon may have one of these low handy wagons at the small additional cost for a set of wheels. These Electric Steel Wheels, with either direct or stagger spokes, with broad faced tire, are made to fit any axle. You can convert your old wagon to a low, handy wagon in a few moments time. You thus virtually have two wagons at one price. Write to the Electric Wheel Co., Box 136, Quincy, Illinois, for their catalogue; which fully explains about these and their Electric Handy Wagons, Electric Feed Cookers, etc.

OPIUM MORPHINE and Liquor Habit cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Book of particulars free. Address Dr. J. E. Stephens, Dept. R. 5, Lebanon, Ohio.

RUPTURE is easily curable by the use of EGAN IMPERIAL TRUSS. Causes no inconvenience. Yields to every motion, can be worn day and night. The spiral spring and graduated pressure fits it. Hernia always retained, brings comfort and cure. Used by U. S. Surgeon General. If unsatisfactory return truss in good condition and money will be refunded. Circulars for a stamp. Ask your druggist or send direct to EGAN IMPERIAL TRUSS CO., 104 N. Fourth St., Ann Arbor, Mich.

Sea Shells A beautiful book describing wonders of the deep, hundreds of illustrations. FREE Mention this paper. IOWA SEED CO., Des Moines, Iowa.

SOUPS

OFTEN LACK RICHNESS AND A DELICACY OF FLAVOR. A FAULT EASILY REMEDIED BY USING

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

It has more Imitations than any other brand ever produced.

John Duncan's Sons, Agts., New York.

Dr. Bull's COUGH SYRUP

is good for the children—they know it. Cures any cough. No fuss about it. Tired and worrying mothers have known about Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for over 50 years. Sore lungs and raw throats get well and stay well. It is good for delicate babies or strong men—it cures. Don't experiment—get a Doctor's prescription—get Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

Refuse Substitutes.

A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Bull's Cures Colds & Influenza. Trial, 30 for 5 cents, at dealers or by mail.

FENCE! STRONGEST MADE.

Strong, Chicken Tight. Send for free catalogue at Wholesale Prices. Fully Warranted. Catalogue FREE. COILED SPRING FENCE CO., Box 47. Winchester, Indiana, U. S. A.

Whatever your needs in Life Insurance, whether you are wealthy or in moderate circumstances, offers policies just suited to you. They afford full protection to both your individual and business interests.

THE PRUDENTIAL

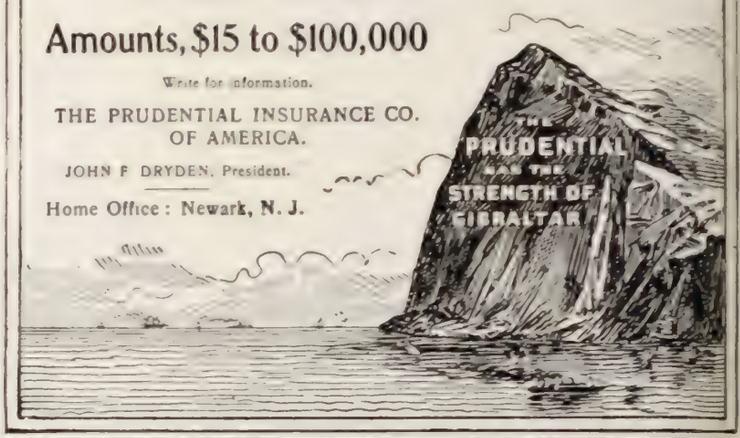
Amounts, $15 to $100,000

Write for information.

THE PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE CO. OF AMERICA.

JOHN F. DRYDEN, President.

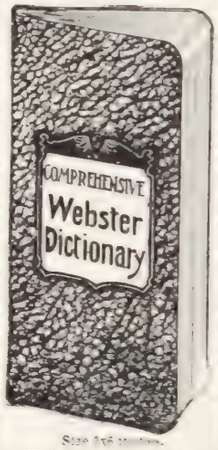
Home Office: Newark, N. J.



THIS DICTIONARY FREE.

CONTAINS 50,000 WORDS.

All the Average Person Has Any Use For.



Size 7½ inches.

A work of extraordinary interest to all classes of progressive [illegible] of to-day. In quantity it contains nearly [illegible] four people. Worcester Dictionary has [illegible] 50,000 words [illegible] 35 cents.

A [illegible] shows the plural forms of all the nouns. A [illegible] 5000 [illegible] difficult words; [illegible] a [illegible] cannot be "Columbian Word-Builder."

TWELVE DEPARTMENTS.

[illegible] Abbreviations; 2 Pronouncing Dictionary; 3 Proper Names; 4 Gazetteer of the World; 5 Large Cities; 6 Parliamentary Rules; 7 Business Instructor; 8 Social Etiquette; 9 Letter Writer; 10 Use of Capitals; 11 Punctuation; 12 Postal Guide.

It contains 192 pages, [illegible] in [illegible] leather covers.

GIVEN AWAY.

[illegible] Farm and Home, our [illegible] a circulation of 350,000, [illegible] Remarkable Offer: The regular [illegible] Farm and Home is 50 cents a year. We will send this [illegible] October 1st, 1899, and January 1st, 1900, for only 10 cents (in silver, stamps or otherwise), and without further charge send "The Comprehensive Webster Dictionary," as [illegible] magnificently illustrated 40-page premium list, [illegible] others ever made. Agents wanted everywhere. Liberal [illegible]

FARM AND HOME, Springfield, Mass., or Chicago, Ills.

ENTERPRISE

Meat and Food CHOPPER

Unquestionably the most perfect, most convenient, most durable and most economical machine that has ever been made for chopping—

Sausage and Mince Meat, Tripe, Suet, Hash, Hamburg Steak, Clams, Chicken and Lobster for Salad, Codfish, Cocoanut, Corn for Fritters, Scrap Meat for Poultry, etc.

Does not grind or bruise the food, but chops finely, evenly, rapidly. Our trademark ENTERPRISE is on every machine. Prices: No. 5, $1.00; No. 10, $1.00; No. 20, $1.50. Twenty-three other sizes and styles, for hand and power. Sold by all hardware dealers. Descriptive catalogue mailed free.

Send 4c in stamps for the "ENTERPRISING HOUSEKEEPER"—200 recipes.

THE ENTERPRISE MFG. CO. OF PA., 3d & Dauphin Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE CELEBRATED CORNISH AMERICAN PIANOS AND ORGANS

ONE YEAR'S FREE TRIAL

Mention this Paper.

WE WILL SHIP A CORNISH PIANO OR CORNISH ORGAN ANYWHERE UPON THE DISTINCT UNDERSTANDING THAT IF IT IS NOT SATISFACTORY TO PURCHASER AFTER 12 MONTHS' USE, WE WILL TAKE IT BACK and refund the purchase money and freight charges, adding interest at the rate of six per cent. Thousands have taken advantage of this, the original Cornish Plan, of doing business, during the time this really wonderful offer has been in force, and the immediate success of this most liberal guarantee decided us to continue it so that hundreds more can participate in its object of insuring the purchaser of a Cornish Piano or a Cornish Organ against any risk. It would be impossible for us to make public this offer were it not backed up by the strongest evidence of our absolute responsibility. The Cornish American Pianos and Organs are warranted for twenty-five years and every warrant is a personal guarantee endorsed by a business reputation of fifty years, as [illegible] and property worth over one million dollars. There are over a quarter of a million satisfied purchasers of the Cornish Pianos and Cornish Organs, and so great has been the demand for our instruments during the last two months that we have just completed a very extensive addition to our factories which will give us still greater facilities for the manufacture of our world famed instruments.

PIANOS FROM 175 DOLLARS

With the Cornish Patent Musical Attachment, which [illegible] takes the place of [illegible] Mandolin, etc. This patent can only be had in the CORNISH PIANOS.

FOR FULL PARTICULARS OF THE WORLD FAMOUS CORNISH PLAN and for a complete description of the instruments made by us, see new Jubilee Catalogue for 1899-1900, handsomely illustrated in colors—the most comprehensive musical catalogue in the trade. The frontispiece is a masterly reproduction in facsimile of an interesting oil painting, designed and executed for us by an eminent artist, representing "St. Cecilia and the Angelic Choir." This beautiful catalogue is sent FREE, charges prepaid, and we also include our newest reference book "The Heart of the People" and our latest special offers free.

A prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT of $15.00 on the list prices as quoted in our 1899 Catalogue on any CORNISH ORGAN or $20.00 on the list price if you buy a CORNISH PIANO.

REFERENCES. Our bank, your bank, any bank, or any of the multitude of patrons who have purchased millions of dollars' worth of instruments from us during the past fifty years.

Send for particulars of the Cornish Co-operative Plan, showing how you can secure a Cornish Piano or Organ FREE.

CASH OR EASY PAYMENTS

ESTABLISHED 50 YEARS.

CORNISH & CO., WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.

MAKERS OF HIGH GRADE AMERICAN PIANOS AND ORGANS

ORGANS FROM $25.00

Boys,

Get... Premiums.

Takes No Money and Only Half Day's Time

We give away absolutely free, Watches, Dynamite Typewriters, Cameras, Fountain Pens, Printing Presses, and other premiums, all worth several dollars each, to boys who show to their friends THE ROVER—the best Boy's Paper. We require no money whatever. Drop us a postal and we will explain.

THE ROVER, Dept. C. 107 Dearborn St., Chicago.

LOTS OF EGGS

winter, summer and all the time. Properly fed, Green Cut Bone makes a steady layer of any hen, and will last double the eggs.

MANN'S NEW BONE CUTTER

cuts it finer, faster and easier than any other and they break less and last longer. We make A CLOVER CUTTER that actually cuts clover—no guessing. Also Mann's Crystal Grit and Swinging Feed Trays. Illustrated Circular Free.

F. W. MANN CO., Box 29, Milford, Mass.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT 1899, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

VOLUME 22—NUMBER 42

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 18, 1899

PRICE FIVE CENTS

PRESIDENT KRÜGER PREACHING TO A BOER CONGREGATION IN PRETORIA

The Boer statesman is a powerful preacher, simple and straightforward rather than eloquent, and has a remarkable acquaintance with Scripture.—(See Page 791)

OUR MAIL-BAG

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Helen M., Passaic, N. J. In many of the sermons I hear and in not a few of the books I read Jesus Christ is spoken of as though he were the equal of God, the Creator and Father of us all. To me this is confusing and so I write to THE MAIL-BAG, which is a constant and reliable source of enlightenment, to ask whether such an assertion has any warrant in the Scriptures. Does Jesus anywhere claim to be the equal of God? In speaking to his disciples or to the multitudes, does he not rather point out clearly that there is but one God, who is omnipotent, and does he not tell them to pray to God for the forgiveness of sins, and that whatsoever they ask in his (Jesus') name it would be granted? In his own prayers, rendered in the Gospels does he not acknowledge the divine authority of the Father, and even himself offer up a petition to the Father? This being the case, are our writers and preachers right in asserting that Jesus is the equal of God?

[illegible] truth—has asked a question which we believe [illegible] satisfactorily. We accordingly submit the question to them, and invite all who feel able to answer the direct question she propounds to do so, making the replies in all cases as brief as possible. The answers will be published in THE MAIL-BAG.

Inquirer, Scranton, Pa. What are the mystical Nine, five and three—which are the diapason, diapente and diatrion of the Greeks. Nine is a trinity of trinities, and the representative of plural perfection.

Reader, New York City. In a recent book, Rev. Madison C. Peters, of this city, asserts that the Jew has been maligned in the portraiture of Shylock, and that his character was the reverse of what Shakespeare asserted. Is there any evidence in support of such an assertion?

It is related by Gregory Leti, an ancient writer, in his "Life of Sextus V," that a Venetian merchant named Secchi, having heard that Drake, the English commander, had captured and plundered San Domingo, sent to inform a Jewish money-lender, named Caneda. The latter discredited the news, and offered to sacrifice a pound of his own flesh if it were true. The news was confirmed, and Secchi demanded of the Jew the pound of flesh. The matter was referred to Sextus, who told Secchi he might take it but must take neither more nor less on pain of losing his own life. Dr. Peters' statement, therefore, has the appearance of being well founded.

Otto S., Fandon, Ill. What sex should ladies address first in speaking to an audience?

It is customary everywhere on public occasions where there is speechmaking, to first address the ladies, and we believe this custom is followed even when the speaker is a woman.

Subscriber, Lima, O. Where did the United States get the name "Uncle Sam," and when was it first used?

It is said that during the Revolutionary war, the commissary department sacks and boxes and the soldier's blankets, etc., were stamped U. S. (indicating that they were the property of the government), and that the soldiers, in joke, declared that the initials stood for "Uncle Sam." This is said to have been the origin of the phrase.

R. McA., Trenton, N. J. What is meant by a "Loving Cup." I mean like that which was presented by the City of New York to Admiral Dewey?

Originally it was a large cup which was passed from hand to hand at state banquets and city feasts. It is said to have been introduced by Margaret Atheling, wife of a British king, in order to induce her guests to remain still longer at table. Afterward, when the custom of drinking at feasts had become greatly modified, the "Loving Cup" was one in which two persons pledged friendship for each other. Nowadays, it has lost the old-time significance and is simply a token of affectionate regard, presented to an individual. In the present instance it was an expression of New York's admiration for Dewey's heroism and its love of the man himself.

Subscriber, Scottsville, Va. Will the person who wrote in regard to adopting a child, please send full name and address to THE CHRISTIAN [illegible]

Mrs. J. S., Bath, Pa. Will you be kind enough to tell me who Susan Coolidge is or was?

"Susan Coolidge" is the pen-name of Sarah Chauncey Woolsey, writer of poems and prose articles for periodicals, and author of a number of good and popular books for young people, as The Barberry Bush and Other Stories About Girls; What Katy Did, etc. She was born in Cleveland, and lives now, we believe, at Newport, R. I.

Laura N., Burlington, Vt. It is contended by some here that the Deweys are of Dutch descent. Can you inform us accurately on this point?

They are descended from an old English family, the Deawys, of Kent. This, we believe, is the claim of the family itself, and the same experience, everyone has so much to be thankful for that praise springs from the heart to the lips naturally. Certainly you should join in singing these hymns, and if your own experience has not yet reached that exalted standard, then pray and strive that it may do so. 2. This is a question frequently asked. It is certainly desirable to have the choir composed of professing Christians, but not always practicable for various reasons. On the other hand, the selection as choir singers of persons who, as the letter suggests, lead notoriously objectionable lives, is a thing [illegible]

E. B., Lind, Wis. In what year did Wm. Morgan, [illegible]

Young Lady, Bowling Green, Ky. 1. In giving your age, is it correct to state what it was at your last birthday, or what it will be at your next? If your last birthday, say, was nine months ago, is it permissible to put your age at [illegible] are you obliged to tell him? 3. On what day next year does the census begin?

1. To be quite accurate, one should say, "I am so many years, months and days old." Except for an inscription on a tombstone, we would hardly conceive of an occasion demanding such a strict statement. Your last birthday, we think, should govern the count; you might not live till your next. Director Merriam, in preparing questions for the next census, declares that the question in reference to age, shall not be as formerly, "How old are you?" but "How old were you on your last birthday?" as being the form that would bring the most accurate information. 2. There is no law compelling answer. Such a law could not be enforced, for some people do not know their ages. You can refuse, too, on the ground that your age is "private business." It might be wiser, however, to answer. The census-taker, to complete his poll, has to supply your supposed age; he might suppose it to be greater than it is—especially if you are dis[illegible] should be recognized as conclusive. The family motto, too, is the ancient motto of the Kentish house of the same name.

We have already received many hundreds of letters in answer to J. R. N.'s question regarding the acceptance or rejection, by a church, of saloon money. The correspondence on this subject will close next week.

Reader, Mount Forest, Ont. 1. Should I join in singing a hymn which is not my experience, such as "Beulah Land as on Thy Highest," etc., when my experience is very poor? 2. Is it right to have any but professing Christians in the choir, especially those who are known to be the reverse, and who openly violate the laws of morality?

1. It is always a privilege to join in the service of praise, and although all may not have [illegible] The Chapel of the Hermit.

[illegible] tobacco. This is a question which troubles me a great deal and I wish you could give me your opinion on it.

We [illegible] him that thinketh it sin, it is sin. (See Rom. 14: 14). If your conscience condemns, follow [illegible] quickly as possible.

[illegible] all the family names originated?

Surnames originated in different countries, and with different nations in various ways. [illegible] names handed down from father to sons—was introduced into England from Normandy at the time of the Conquest. Normans usually [illegible] they lived, as for instance, Robert of Belleville, who, through dropping the "of," would come to be known as Robert Belleville, a name that he would carry with him wherever he went and transmit to his sons. A man might take such a name as Atbrook from his propinquity to a small stream; in the same way, river, well, spring, mountain, etc., might come to be [illegible] "Brown," "White" etc., acquired by reason of some personal peculiarity; also names derived from occupations, as Smith, Carpenter, Forester, Sadler, etc., would come to be recognized as surnames. Other patronymics came about in this way: John's son, Richard would come to be called Richard Johnson, to distinguish him from William's son, Richard, who would, [illegible] son. Tribal names have also become surnames.

Apropos of the Peace Memorial to the Czar Mrs. L. C. Sneed, Centralia, Mo., sends us an original poem on "The Peace Battle," i. e., the Conference at The Hague, one verse of [illegible]

Thou of this century art the crowning deed.
Unknown in any century past:
Oh, let us with our Father plead
That this may ever last.

H. B., Blocksburg, Cal. 1. What is meant by the [illegible]

1. The exodus of the Boers from Cape Colony, 1834-6, in search of a locality where there would be no English, and where they could establish a government in which the English would have no voice. A large number of the Dutch (or Boers) of Cape Colony, sold their farms, mostly at a sacrifice, and set out to find a "Promised Land," which their leaders thought would be on the banks of the Nile, but that river was never reached. 2. The first party of ninety-eight, among whom were sixteen women and sixty-four children, under Louis Trichard and Johannes Kensberg, crossed the Orange River and began their long and weary pilgrimage which ended not at the Nile, but among the mud huts at Lourenzo, Marquez, whence twenty-eight (all that remained of the original ninety-eight) were carried by sea to Natal, where they found a Boer settlement composed of other trekers, under a Boer government established by Peter Retief, the noted Boer leader.

Ethel A., Athens, O. We have no information on the subject.

Miss M. E. F., Germantown, Pa. As now practised, it is largely in the hands of charlatans, and is practically a humbug, kept up to make money and delude the simple and credulous.

Inquirer, Reading, Pa. We would advise you to be careful about trusting charlatans, who under the name and guise of divine healers, merely seek to impose upon unsuspecting victims.

Mrs. J. L. S., Martinsville, Va. Being almost a "Shut-in," I seldom get to church, so I read your sermons instead. In my library I have a bound volume of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. The piece of olive wood given to subscribers years ago is still kept as a memento, and is so carefully kept that there is not a scratch on it.

Mrs. M. R. S., Chicago, Ill. 1. Conditions in Cuba at present do not warrant such interference. 2. Well equipped steamers and sailing vessels carry from twenty to fifty gallons of fresh oil in bags for calming the waves in stormy weather. 3. Consult a lawyer. 4. We cannot advise you. 5. Both have been honored, but Dewey, having won the first victory, is accorded the highest honor.

Reader, New York City. [illegible] THE MAIL-BAG of Sept. 27th, a letter from Quincy, Ill., outlining a plan for an anti-polygamy petition. I beg to inform your readers that such a petition is in actual circulation over the United States. It is under the care of the National Anti-polygamy League, with headquarters in New York. The secretary is Miss Grace Cutter, 15 Spruce street, New York. It is proposed to obtain 5,000,000 signatures before [illegible] rapidly less in which it is to be accomplished. Consequently, anyone who feels the seriousness of the situation, can assist greatly by sending to that lady for petition blanks.

PRESENTATION OF THE NATION'S GIFT TO ADMIRAL DEWEY

This picture, taken expressly for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, shows one of the most impressive ceremonials that ever occurred in Washington—the presentation to Admiral Dewey, on October 3d, of the magnificent $10,000 sword voted to him by Congress as the "gift of the Nation, in memory of the victory at Manila Bay." The presentation took place on a platform extension of the central steps of the east front of the Capitol, in the presence of a vast and enthusiastic assembly of people, and a distinguished company of National and State officials, soldiers and seamen—among whom were captains of the Manila fleet and the sailors of the Olympia. Secretary Long made the presentation speech and President McKinley handed the sword to the Admiral, who received it with profound emotion. Prayer was led by Rev. Frank Bristol, the President's pastor; benediction was pronounced by the aged Cardinal Gibbons.

THE GOSPEL IN HOP FIELDS.

UNTIL within the last few years Madison and Oneida counties in the central part of New York State have been the market makers for the entire hop product of this country. It is a beautiful sight to see acres of ground covered with hop-poles, from which trail the green hop vines.

The calendar may speak of the "four seasons," but here there is but one, the "hop season." Everything points forward or looks backward to this important time of the year, which lasts about a month. Engagements, marriages, renting of farms, payment of debts, etc., are all adjusted to the "hop season."

When the crop is ripe it has to be harvested at once, so thousands of pickers are required. There are two general classes—home and foreign pickers. The home pickers are those living in the immediate neighborhood, and are quiet, respectable people. This is true of many who are classed as foreign pickers, but the majority of them are from the slums of neighboring cities. Of late years there has been an increasing number belonging to the "hoboe" class. In one field we met three men who had "stolen" their way across the continent on the railroads, and were to return, after hop picking, in the same fashion. One was from California, one from New Mexico and the third from Texas. Large bodies of these tramps congregate in the neighborhood of the villages, living in swamps and the woods for a month before the season opens. They beg and steal their food, and are a menace to the farmers, who pay tribute in the shape of vegetables and chickens. From Syracuse and Utica thousands of men, women and children go, and each year whole families make this their annual outing. The people are herded in cars like cattle, and the doors are locked on the drunken, fighting mob.

To many the hop-picking time is a season when they can lay aside all restraints and do as they please. A man, now a Christian minister but formerly a drunkard, told the writer that for years he went annually to the hop-fields to indulge in sin. Said he, "One is there thrown in company with hundreds of others, with every opportunity for sin. In a few weeks they separate, and no one is held responsible for his sin. They are not likely to meet again, and no one knows who you are, nor where you come from." Every evening "hop-digs" are held—(these are dancing assemblies). The pickers gather from neighboring farms in one of the large barns, or in one of the village hotels, where drink can be procured and spend the night in carousing.

Young girls stand at the hop-box, side by side with hardened toughs, and have to listen to their vile jests, and are subject to their attentions.

The pickers go into the yard in the early morning and work till sunset, stopping only for a hasty meal at noon. They work at a box covered with an awning to protect them from the sun. This box is divided into four compartments, holding seven bushels each. The "pole-pullers" cut the vines about a foot from the ground, and place the pole, with its trailing vines, across the end of these boxes. Around each box from four to eight work. When the box is full they cry "hop-sack," and the man in charge of the yard empties the box, giving the picker a check, which is cashed at the end of the season. The pickers get from twenty to thirty cents a box, and an expert picker can fill four or five of these boxes in a day.

Religion is at low ebb in all this section

A GROUP OF HOP-PICKERS WHO HAVE JUST FINISHED A YARD—A COOL ALLEY

There are many deserted churches, and those that are still alive are having a struggle for existence. In England Gospel work has been carried on among the hop-pickers for the last thirty years. Rev. J. J. Kendon, of Goudhurst, established a mission in his own neighborhood and got some missionaries from London to help him. The work spread until it is now carried on over an area of thirty miles in circumference.

Nearly ten years ago the attention of Mr. H. B. Gibbud, then engaged in Christian work in Syracuse, N. Y., was called to the needy field in our own country, and each year since, with one exception, he has made some effort to reach these people with the Gospel. The first few years the effort was small. One or two workers went into the fields picking hops, and doing what they could to influence their fellow-workers for Christ. For the past few years a Gospel wagon has made an annual trip of about two hundred miles through the region. Lasting good has been done, many have been converted, and the whole section has felt the influence of the work.

There were four regular workers, Mr. J. E. Hendsey, Rev. Wm. Newton, Mr. Wm. Bourne, of Pawtucket, R. I., and H. B. Gibbud, of Springfield, Mass. Rev. Mr. Gaston spent a few days in the work. Some of the ministers in the locality and Mr. Morse, the secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Waterville, assisted. The workers, with their folding organ and Gospel trumpets, and bags full of tracts, would start out in the morning, drive to a field, and then go from box to box giving out tracts and religious literature, speaking a personal word of exhortation, and, if possible, holding a short song service in the fields. At the noon hour, services were held at the farmhouse while pickers were eating their dinner; thus the day was spent driving from yard to yard—holding roadside meetings, and giving the Gospel to all who were met. Evening meetings were held in the hop barns, at the corner in the village street, or in one of the church buildings. Large numbers would gather at these meetings. Eighty-seven such services were held with a total attendance of 9,257. Thirty requests were made for prayer. It meant much for a man to ask prayers in the midst of his rude comrades. Twenty-two professed conversion. Over seventy five thousand tracts were distributed.

The work is supported by voluntary contributions. It is a hard field in many ways. From some from whom the workers might have expected better things they received harsh treatment, while from the hardest characters, they received invariably the best attention, and even courtesy. In some cases personal violence was threatened, but none was harmed. At one evening service, while the workers were engaged in presenting the Gospel, some one stole the horse and wagon. They were not found till next day, and then only after a vigorous search.

Some of the meetings in the barns were very interesting; from fifty to seventy five would gather. Rough boards were used as seats, and the audiences would be composed of men, women and children, the men smoking. In one place a fire had been built in a small stove, and around it were gathered a lot of "tramps" hardened in sin. When we entered, a group of young boys and girls were gathered around, listening to their stories of travel on the road. When the service began, the men upstairs began to pound hard on the floor, but soon all became quiet. A number requested prayer, one young girl yielding herself to Christ.

At some meetings we could hear the cries of "Here come the Gospel hoboes," and our ears were often greeted with vile jests and jeers, ending with a string of terrible oaths. The workers warned them solemnly of coming judgment, gave them tracts, and before they left, succeeded in quieting them down, to listen to the story of the Cross. One yard had about sixty pickers, most of them were quite aged men and women, and the rest young boys and girls. These old people blasphemed in a shocking manner. The owner of one of the fields came angrily to the roadside. He was a fine-looking man, wealthy, a prominent citizen, yet with hatred to Christ and His messengers, declared he wanted nothing to do with Christ, and called us all sorts of names, to all of which we replied pleasantly, at the same time preaching Christ, and warning him of his sin and the consequences. We dealt faithfully with him, and at last he became quiet, and, later on, presented us with some fruit as we drove by. At our open-air meetings in the village we had over a thousand present the first night. The second night our service was interrupted by the police on the complaint of an elder of one of the churches, because it drew a crowd near his store. The next day a saloon-keeper offered us permission to hold the meeting in front of his place, and while the service was in progress sent out a request for us to sing "Where is my wandering boy?" With our Gospel trumpets, we made the message ring out through the village streets. Men in the saloons left the bar and crowded around.

Night is falling on the fields. Only brown dried vines ready to be burned up remain. The hop pickers are many of them picking their way over railroad ties toward their homes, having spent their earnings at the village saloon in riotous living. The saloon-keeper slaps his well-filled pocket, and can live for the rest of the year on his gleanings from the hop-pickers. The Gospel worker, weary with labor returns home praying that the seed sown by the wayside, on the stony ground and amid the thorns, may yet spring up and bear fruit.

PICKERS AT THE HOP BOX

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT.

... The Deer Hunt ...

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text, Psalm 42 : 1 : . . . . . | As the hart panteth after the water brooks

DAVID, who must some time have seen a deer hunt, points us here to a hunted stag making for the water. The fascinating animal, called in my text the hart, is the same animal that in sacred and profane literature is called the stag, the roebuck, the hind, the gazelle, the reindeer. In central Syria, in Bible times, there were whole pasture fields of them, as Solomon suggests when he says: "I charge you by the hinds of the field." Their antlers jutted from the long grass as they lay down. No hunter who has been long in "John Brown's track" will wonder that in the Bible they were classed among clean animals, for the dews, the showers, the lakes, washed them as clean as the sky.

But one day David, while far from the home from which he had been driven, and sitting near the mouth of a lonely cave where he had lodged, and on the banks of a pond or river, hears a pack of hounds in swift pursuit. Because of the previous silence of the forest the clangor startles him, and he says to himself: "I wonder what those dogs are after!" Then there is a crackling in the brushwood, and the loud breathing of some rushing wonder of the woods, and the antlers of a deer rend the leaves of the thicket, and by an instinct which all hunters recognize, plunges into a pond or lake or river to cool its thirst, and at the same time by its capacity for swifter and longer swimming, to get away from the foaming harriers.

David says to himself: "Aha, that is myself! Saul after me, Absalom after me, enemies without number after me: I am chased, their bloody muzzles at my heels, barking at my good name, barking after my body, barking after my soul. Oh, the hounds, the hounds! But look there," says David, "that hunted deer has splashed into the water. It puts its hot lips and nostrils into the cool wave that washes the lathered flanks, and it swims away from the fiery canines, and it is free at last. Oh, that I might find in the deep, wide lake of God's mercy and consolation, escape from my pursuers! Oh, for the waters of life and rescue! As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God."

Some of you have just come from the Adirondacks, and the breath of the balsam and spruce and pine is still on you. The Adirondacks are now populous with hunters, and the deer are being slain by the score. Once while there talking with a hunter, I thought I would like to see whether my text was accurate in its allusion, and as I heard the dogs baying a little way off, and supposed they were on the track of a deer, I said to the hunter in rough corduroy: "Do the deer always make for the water when they are pursued?" He said: "Oh yes, Mister: you see they are a hot and thirsty animal, and they know where the water is, and when they hear danger in the distance, they lift their antlers and snuff the breeze and start for Racquet or Loon or Saranac: and we get into our cedar-shell boat or stand by the 'runway' with rifle loaded ready to blaze away."

My friends, that is one reason why I like the Bible so much—its allusions are so true to nature. Its partridges are real partridges, its ostriches real ostriches, and its reindeer real reindeer. I do not wonder that this antlered glory of the text makes the hunter's eye sparkle, and his cheek glow, and his respiration quicken. To say nothing of its usefulness, although it is the most useful of all game, its flesh delicious, its skin turned into human apparel, its sinews fashioned into bowstrings, its antlers putting handles on cutlery, and the shavings of its horns, used as a restorative, its name taken from the hart and called hartshorn. By putting aside its usefulness, this enchanting creature seems made out of gracefulness and elasticity. What an eye, with a liquid brightness as if gathered up from a hundred lakes at sunset! The horns, a coronal branching into every possible curve, and after it seems done, ascending into other projections of exquisiteness, a tree of polished bone, uplifted in pride, or swung down for awful combat. It is velocity embodied. Timidity impersonated. The enchantment of the woods. The splendid animal a complete rhythm of muscle and bone and color and attitude and locomotion, whether couched in the grass among the shadows, or a living bolt shot through the forest, or turning at bay to attack the hounds, or rearing for its last fall under the buckshot.

It is a splendid appearance, that the painter's pencil fails to sketch, and only a hunter's dream on a pillow of hemlock at the foot of St. Regis is able to picture. When, twenty miles from any settlement, it comes down at eventide to the lake's edge, to drink among the lily-pads, and, with its sharp-edged hoof, shatters the crystal of Long Lake, it is very picturesque. But only when, after miles of pursuit, with heaving sides and lolling tongue, and eyes swimming in death, the stag leaps from the cliff into Upper Saranac, can you realize how much David had suffered from his troubles, and how much he wanted God when he expressed himself in the words: "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God."

Well, now, let all those who have coming after them the lean hounds of poverty, or the black hounds of persecution, or the spotted hounds of vicissitude, or the pale hounds of death, or who are in anywise pursued, run to the wide, deep, glorious lake of divine solace and rescue. The most of the men and women whom I happen to know, at different times, if not now, have had trouble after them, sharp-muzzled troubles, swift troubles, all-devouring troubles. Many of you have made the mistake of trying to fight them. Somebody meanly attacked you, and you attacked them: they depreciated you and you depreciated them: or they overreached you in a bargain, and you tried, in Wall street parlance, to get a corner on them: or you have had a bereavement, and instead of being submissive, you are fighting that bereavement: you charge on the doctors who have failed to effect a cure: or you charge on the carelessness of the railroad company through which the accident occurred: or you are a chronic invalid, and you fret and worry and scold, and wonder why you cannot be well like other people, and you angrily charge on the neuralgia or the laryngitis or the ague or the sick headache. The fact is, you are a deer at bay. Instead of running to the waters of divine consolation, and slaking your thirst, and cooling your body and soul in the good cheer of the Gospel, and swimming away into the mighty deeps of God's love, you are fighting a whole kennel of harriers.

Sometime ago I saw in the Adirondacks a dog lying across the road, and he seemed unable to get up, and I said to some hunters: "What is the matter with that dog?" They answered, "A deer hurt him," and I saw he had a great swollen paw and a battered head, showing where the antlers struck him. And the probability is that some of you might give a mighty clip to your pursuers: you might damage their business, you might worry them into ill-health, you might hurt them as much as they hurt you: but, after all, it is not worth while. You only have hurt a hound. Better be off for the Upper Saranac, into which the mountains of God look down and moor their shadows. Do not turn back, but go ahead. The deer will accomplish more with its swift feet than with its horns.

There are whole chains of lakes in the Adirondacks, and from one height you can see thirty lakes: and there are said to be over eight hundred in the great wilderness. So near are they to each other that your mountain guide picks up and carries the boat from lake to lake, the small distance between them for that reason called a "carry." And the realm of God's Word is one long chain of bright, refreshing lakes: each promise a lake, a very short carry between them, and though for ages the pursued have been drinking out of them, they are full up to the top of the green banks: and the same David describes them, and they seem so near together that in three different places he speaks of them as a continuous river, saying: "There is a river the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God": "Thou shall make them drink of the rivers of Thy pleasures": "Thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water."

But many of you have turned your back on that supply, and confront your trouble, and you are soured with your circumstances, and you are fighting society, and you are fighting a pursuing world: and troubles, instead of driving you into the cool lake of heavenly comfort, have made you stop and turn round and lower your head, and it is simply antler against tooth. I do not blame you. Probably under the same circumstances I would have done worse. But you are all wrong. You need to do as the reindeer does in February and March—it sheds its horns. The Rabbinical writers allude to this resignation of antlers by the stag when they say of a man who ventures his money in risky enterprises, he has hung it on the stag's horns: and a proverb in the far East tells a man who has foolishly lost his fortune, to go and find where the deer shed his horns. My brother, quit the antagonism of your circumstances, quit misanthropy, quit complaint, quit pitching into your pursuers: be as wise as next spring will be the deer of the Adirondacks. Shed your horns!

But very many of you who are wronged of the world—and if in any assembly between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, it were asked that all who had been badly treated should raise both their hands, and full response should be made, there would be twice as many hands lifted as persons present—I say many of you would declare, "We have always done the best we could, and tried to be useful, and why we become the victims of malignment, or invalidism, or mishap, is inscrutable." Why, do you not know that the finer a deer, and the more elegant its proportions, and the more beautiful its bearing, the more anxious the hunters and the hounds are to capture it? Had that roebuck a ragged fur, and broken hoofs, and an obliterated eye, and a limping gait, the hunters would have said, "Pshaw! don't let us waste our ammunition on a sick deer." And the hounds would have given a few sniffs of the track, and then darted off in another direction for better game. But when they see a deer with antlers lifted in mighty challenge to earth and sky, and the sleek hide looks as if it had been smoothed by invisible hands, and the fat sides enclose the richest pasture that could be nibbled from the bank of rills so clear they seem to have dropped out of heaven, and the stamp of its foot defies the jack-shooting lantern and the rifle, the horn and the hound, that deer they will have if they must needs break their neck in the rapids. So if there were no noble stuff in your make-up, if you were a bifurcated nothing, if you were a forlorn failure, you would be allowed to go undisturbed: but the fact that the whole pack is in full cry after you is proof positive that you are splendid game and worth capturing. Therefore sarcasm draws on you its "finest bead": therefore the world goes gunning for you with its best Winchester breech-loader. Highest compliment is it to your talent, or your virtue, or your usefulness. You will be assailed in proportion to your great achievements. The best and the mightiest Being the world ever saw had set after him all the hounds, terrestrial and diabolic, and they lapped his blood after the Calvarean massacre. The world paid nothing to its Redeemer but a bramble, [illegible] and [illegible]. Many who have done [illegible] have had such a tough time of it that all their pleasure in [illegible] next world and they would, if they could, express their own feelings in the words of [illegible] at the close of [illegible] life, "Would I [illegible] to live her life over again

Would you be young again?
So would not I.
[illegible]
All but at rest on shore.
[illegible]
Heavenward, away.

Yes: for some people in this world there seems no let up. They are pursued from youth to manhood, and from manhood into old age. Very distinguished are Lord Stafford's hounds, and the Earl of Yarborough's hounds, and the Duke of Rutland's hounds. But all of them put together do not equal in number or speed or power to hunt down, the great kennel of hounds of which Sin and Trouble are owner and master.

But [illegible] pursued of trouble and annoyance and pain and bereavement? My text gives it to you in a word of three letters, but each letter is a chariot, if you would triumph, or a throne, if you want to be crowned, or a lake, if you would slake your thirst—yea, a chain of three lakes—G-o-d, the One for whom David longed, and the One whom David found. You might as well meet a stag which, after its sixth mile of running at the topmost speed through thicket and gorge, and with the breath of the dogs on its heels, has come in full sight of Schroon Lake, and try to cool its projecting and blistered tongue with a drop of dew from a blade of grass, as to attempt to satisfy an immortal soul, when flying from trouble and sin, with anything less deep and high and broad and immense and infinite and eternal than God. His comfort, why, it embosoms all distress. His arm, it wrenches off all bondage: his hand, it wipes away all tears. His Christly atonement, it makes us all right with the past, and all right with the future, and all right with God, all right with man, and all right forever.

For him I thirst: for his grace I beg: on his promise I build my all. Without him I cannot be happy. I have tried the world, and it does well enough as far as it goes: but it is too uncertain a world, too evanescent a world. I am not a prejudiced witness. I have nothing against this world. I have been one of the most fortunate, or, to use a more Christian word, one of the most blessed of men—blessed in my parents, blessed in the place of my nativity, blessed in my [illegible], blessed in my natural temperament, blessed in my family, blessed in my opportunities, blessed in a comfortable livelihood, blessed in the hope that my soul will go to heaven through the pardoning mercy of God, and my body, unless it be lost at sea or cremated in some conflagration, will lie down among my kindred and friends, some already gone, and others to come after me. Life to many has been a disappointment, but to me it has been a pleasant surprise, and yet I declare that if I did not feel that God was now my friend and ever present help, I should be wretched and terror-struck. But I want more of him. I have thought over this text and preached this sermon to myself until with all the aroused energies of my body, mind, and soul, I can cry out: "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God."

Through Jesus Christ make this God your God, and you can withstand anything and everything, and that which affrights others will inspire you. As in time of earthquake, when an old Christian woman was asked whether she was scared, answered: "No: I am glad that I have a God who can shake the world," or as in a financial panic, when a Christian merchant was asked if he did not fear he would break, answered: "Yes, I shall break when the fiftieth Psalm breaks in the fifteenth verse: "Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me." O Christian men and women, pursued of annoyances and exasperations, remember that this hunt, whether a still hunt or a hunt in full cry, will soon be over.

We are told in Revelations 22: 15: "Without are dogs," by which I conclude there is a whole kennel of hounds outside the gate of heaven, or, as when a master goes in a door, his dog lies on the steps waiting for him to come out, so the troubles of this life may follow us to the shining door, but they cannot get in. "Without are dogs!" I have seen dogs, and owned dogs, that I would not be chagrined to see in the heavenly city. Some of the grand old watch-dogs who are the constabulary of the homes in solitary places, and for years have been the only protection of wife and child; some of the shepherd dogs that drive back the wolves and bark away the flock from going too near the precipice; and some of the dogs whose neck and paw Landseer, the painter, has made immortal, would not find me shutting them out from the gate of shining pearl. Some of those old St. Bernard dogs that have lifted perishing travelers out of the Alpine snow; the dog that John Brown, the Scotch essayist, saw ready to spring at the surgeon, lest, in removing the cancer, he too much hurt the poor woman whom the dog felt bound to protect; and dogs that we caressed in our childhood days, or that in later time laid down on the rug in seeming sympathy when our homes were desolated. I say, if some soul entering heaven should happen to leave the gate ajar, and these faithful creatures should quietly walk in, it would not at all disturb my heaven. But all those human or brutal hounds that have chased and torn and lacerated the world; yea, all that now bite or worry or tear to pieces, shall be prohibited. "Without are dogs!" No place there for harsh critics or back-biters, or despoilers of the reputation of others! Down with you to the kennels of darkness and despair! The hart has reached the eternal water brooks, and the panting of the long chase is quieted in still pastures, and "there shall be nothing to hurt or destroy in all God's holy mount."

Oh, when some of you get there, it will be like what a hunter tells of when he was pushing his canoe far up north in the winter, and amid the ice-floes, and a hundred miles, as he thought, from any other human beings: He was startled one day as he heard a stepping on the ice, and he cocked the rifle ready to meet anything that came near. He found a man, barefooted and insane from long exposure, approaching him. Taking him into his canoe, and kindling fires to warm him, he restored him, found out where he had lived, and took him to his home, and found all the village in great excitement. A hundred men were searching for this lost man, and his family and friends rushed out to meet him; and as had been agreed at his first appearance, bells were rung, and guns were discharged, and banquets spread, and the rescuer loaded with presents. Well, when some of you step out of this wilderness, where you have been chilled and torn, and sometimes lost amid the icebergs, into the warm greetings of all the villages of the glorified, and your friends rush out to give you welcoming kiss, the news that there is another soul forever saved will call the caterers of heaven to spread the banquet, and the bell-men to lay hold of the rope in the tower, and while the chalices click at the feast, and the bells clang from the turrets, it will be a scene so uplifting, I pray God I may be there to take part in the celestial merriment. And now do you not think the prayer in Solomon's Song, where he compared Christ to a reindeer in the night, would make an exquisitely appropriate peroration to my sermon: "Until the day break and the shadows flee away, be thou like a roe or a young hart upon the mountains of Bether"?

The prayers of the readers of this journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its proprietor, and also upon those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ, are printed in it: and that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of sinners and the quickening of God's people.

France's Picturesque Missions

Some on Rivers and Others on Land, But All Zealous in Winning Souls to Christ

IT is strange that a pleasure-loving people like the French take their religion so gloomily. The mission halls of Paris and their services are not so bright as those of London or New York: the congregations are devout and solemn, but they seem to lack that brightness and cheer which are so often observed in English-speaking lands. This is apparent from views of the mission people. At the Rue National is a hall which seats 220 persons. M. D'Aubigne, who has charge of the work, has used lately a lantern lecture for the Sunday School, and thus more than doubled the attendance. A Christian Endeavor Society is connected with this mission, and is accomplishing much good. The mission hall at Rochefort seats 170. The pastor is M. J. Duleman. Grandmothers and grandchildren join in singing the sweet songs of Immanuel. The congregations at these meetings are made up chiefly of the French working class. Here the children seem happier than in Paris, and the meeting goes on with zest and power. Artisans, workmen from the arsenal, soldiers and all classes are to be found represented in the mission congregations. Many of the children have very happy and pleasing faces.

The same is true of the mission at La Rochelle, whose popular and painstaking pastor is M. de Richemond. Among others, a dramatic artist often came to the meetings, and finally accepted and confessed Christ. Many children join regularly in the services here.

At Nantes the Conferences Populaires Mission Hall has connected with it a reading-room, where many come regularly. Temperance meetings are held, and a specialty has been made of limelight pictures in illustrating Bible truths, as this method draws larger congregations. Mr. E. Leubra says that the work at historic Nantes is taking deeper root, and that numbers are confessing Christ and coming to communion.

It is hard to give the Gospel to the people in rural regions. Some earnest efforts have been made in France to reach the frugal, hard-working agriculturists. One mission is known as "The Good Messenger," and has sent the Gospel over many waterways. For six years this house-boat, with iron hull and flat bottom, has been busily engaged in this work. It has cabins for the captain, the pastor and a caretaker; the roof is of zinc, and in winter the boat is heated by hot-water pipes, and is as comfortable as any church. It attracts much attention as it floats from place to place, now on the River Seine, again on the Yonne—a sort of Noah's ark, a floating church, but used by ever-changing congregations. The preacher's family is always on board, and help in the meetings.

In the French provinces evangelical meetings are held, with many services at Ajaccio, Angers, Bethune, Bordeaux, Beziers, Boulogne-sur-Mer, Calais, Cholet, Marseilles, Montpelier, Nice, and in many other towns. Sometimes the congregations dwindle, and then the halls are closed and the work is taken elsewhere. It is still a "pioneering work," according to the most successful pastors. A difficulty is found in renting halls. Music is a prime factor in the meetings. The French love music, and quickly pick up the new hymns, and hum them in the streets and while at work. "Oh, Think of the Home Over There," in a French version, at the close of a meeting, is as touching as when sung by English lips and in English, and heavenly spells of thought and feeling linger as long.

A MISSION DOORWAY—TYPICAL AUDIENCE IN A PARIS MISSION

Missions in France are now emphasizing the social purity principles so much needed in Paris, where the social evil is prominent. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God," is a watchword often used as a motto and text, and not without results.

Again, the missions are conscience centres, awakening keen moral perceptions. They call for a halt in the political crisis They believe that God's voice must and will be heard by the French statesmen, and that religion must have a larger part in the France of the future.

REV. W. J. PECK.

* * *

Among the famous Christian missions in France which will long be remembered and whose influence will last through generations, are the McAll Missions and the Belleville Mission founded by Mlle. de Boren. These have made an ineffaceable impression upon thousands of hearts throughout the republic, and have led multitudes to Christ.

The World's Oldest Poem

Composed in Egypt in Honor of a King who Lived Many Centuries Before Moses

IN a recent issue the London Standard gives these most important details of a recent "find" by Prof. Flinders Petrie, in Egypt:

Near to the pyramid at Illahun, Prof. Petrie found during his explorations in 1888-1890 the extensive town occupied by the workmen employed by Usertesen II. in building his pyramid and other public works. In the office where the records of the town were kept, Prof. Petrie discovered a large number of papyri. The gem of the collection is a royal ode, or hymn of welcome addressed to Usertesen III., apparently by the people of the Fayoum. The poem to Usertesen III., is written in a hieratic hand upon a papyrus measuring forty-six inches in length and twelve in width, and consisted, when complete, of six stanzas of ten lines each. Its value lies in its being certainly the oldest poem in the world, many centuries before the time of Moses; and also in the wonderful way in which it describes, in most figurative language, the great work that the king had done in the Egyptian Empire

Homage to thee our Horus divine of beings!
Protecting the land and widening its boundaries,
Enclosing the two lands within the compass of his hands and seizing the nations in his grasp.
The tongue of his Majesty bindeth Nubia, his utterances put to flight the Bedouin.
Sole one of youthful vigor, guarding his frontier: suffering not his subjects to faint, but causing all the people to repose unto daylight.
As to his trained youth, in their slumbers, his heart [illegible] is their protection.
His decrees have formed his boundaries his word maketh strong the two regions.

Twice joyful are the gods thou hast established their offerings.
Twice joyful are thy forefathers thou hast increased their portions.
Twice joyful is Egypt in thy strong arm: thou hast protected the ancient regime.
Twice joyful are the people in thy policy, thy mighty spirit hath taken upon itself their welfare.
Twice joyful are thy paid young troops, thou hast made them to prosper.
Twice joyful are thy veterans: thou hast made them to renew their youth.

Twice great is the lord of his city: he is as it were a dike damming the stream in its water floods
Twice great is the lord of his city: he is as it were a cool shelter, letting every man repose unto daylight.
Twice great is the lord of his city: he is as it were an asylum; delivering the frightened one from his enemy.
Twice great is the lord of his city: he is as it were a verdant shade and cool place in the time of harvest.
Twice great is the lord of his city: he is as it were a corner warm and dry in time of winter.
Twice great is the lord of his city, he is as it were a rock barring the blast in the time of tempest.

The closing lines are:

He hath come: he hath made the people of Egypt to live: he hath destroyed its afflictions.
He hath come: he hath made the men and women to live: and hath opened the throat (voice?) of the captives.
He hath come: we nurture one: we bury our aged ones (in peace).

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Psalms of Deliverance

S. S. Lesson for Oct. 29. Ps. 85 and 126

Golden Text, Psalm 126 : 5

BY MRS. M. BAXTER

BOTH of our Psalms to-day refer to the deliverance of God's people from captivity. "Thou hast brought back the captivity of Jacob." "When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion, we were like unto them that dream." This latter Psalm, is one of the "songs of ascents," believed by many to have been sung by the "remnant" on their way back to Jerusalem from the seventy years' captivity in Babylon. Both of these Psalms ascribe deliverance to God alone; no trace is found in either of them that the writers attribute any merit to themselves or to their fellow-exiles. Lord, thou hast been favorable to thy land. Because thou art faithful to us, not because we are faithful to thee, we are delivered. The captivity had done its work upon those "whose heart stirred them up," and "who were minded of their own free will to go to Jerusalem" (Ezra 1 : 5; 8 : 13). They had learned the lesson which is so prominently brought out in the prayers of Ezra 9, Neh. 9 and Daniel 9, of their own deep sin as a nation, and of God's righteousness in bringing them into judgment. And now they can sing, "Lord, thou hast been favorable unto thy land; thou hast brought back the captivity of Jacob."

But where did deliverance begin? In remission of sin. "Come, now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord," many years before the captivity: "though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool" (Isa. 1 : 18). But Israel had repudiated all conviction of sin. "I am innocent;" "I have not sinned," he said (Jer. 2 : 35); and it needed all the humiliation of the captivity to bring even a remnant of the people of the Lord to see and to acknowledge their sinfulness. But the goodness of God leadeth to repentance (Rom. 2 : 4), and it was his goodness in thinking upon them in their captivity and low estate which broke the hearts of the returning exiles. They do not sing of their own good resolutions, but of God's great grace: "Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people: thou hast covered all their sin; thou hast taken away all thy wrath; thou hast turned thyself from the fierceness of thine anger" (R.V.). It is a complete justification of God in his dealings with them. This is true worship.

Although this Psalm is historic, and treats of God's relations to Israel, yet all the Psalms are world-wide in their application, and suitable to all generations. We, too, have our times of captivity. Paul was a prisoner, hindered from preaching the Gospel, but he neither pitied himself nor grumbled at his lot. Believing that "all things work together for good to them that love God" (Rom. 8 : 28), he turned his prison into a place from whence light and life should flow forth. Calling himself "the prisoner of the Lord" (Eph. 4 . 1), he sent up prayers in the Spirit for "all saints," and wrote his valuable contributions to the Scriptures of truth, which have preached the Gospel ever since. Few men who are at liberty were so free in spirit as was Paul in his prison. Grace, of which he was such a witness, turned his captivity. He saw neither the Roman tyrant nor other instruments. Citizen of heaven that he was, and sitting with Christ in heavenly places, he saw God, and dealt with God in all things. Thus his captivity, which would have been an unendurable trial, became his glory, and God turned his captivity while he was yet captive.

We can never escape our captivity to circumstances, to physical weakness, or to the power of our surroundings, until all is set completely right with God and with man. As long as we have a conscience which is not thoroughly cleansed from sin, we are still in captivity to an uneasy conscience. As long as our relations with our fellow-creatures are not thoroughly adjusted by God, we are still in captivity; hard words will still pain us and insults will still move us to indignation. But when all is clear between God and us, when we are not only wholly forgiven, but our will is wholly yielded to God in regard to man as in all else, then we cease to think of or feel anything which is directed against us, but only that which touches our God. We are the prisoners of the Lord; our suffering is in fellowship with Christ; our captivity is turned, and we are like them that dream. The things of earth are seen in their littleness and their temporary duration; hindrances, physical weakness and all impossibilities are his affairs, and not ours. The captives of earth, while still on earth, are citizens of heaven.

The Psalmist has learned God's wisdom while in captivity. "Thou hast turned thyself from the fierceness of thine anger; turn us, O God of our salvation." He has learned that God's favor, their deliverance from captivity, his free pardon, and the cessation of his wrath, does not ensure the continuance of faithfulness on their part or of favor on his. He feels the deep need of a radical change in them: "Turn us, O God of our salvation" . . . "Wilt thou not quicken us again, that thy people may rejoice in thee?" O the danger of rejoicing in deliverance rather than in him who delivers! And this of itself manifests an element of corruption; it is a piety which will not last. "Turn us," yes; turn us, O Lord, from ourselves to thyself; to see all in thee, to have all in thee, to be all in thee, and then to believe God does answer our prayer—such is becoming those whom God has blest with all spiritual blessings, in heavenly places, in Christ Jesus (Eph. 1 : 3). The Psalmist knew how often Israel had turned back and failed to continue because their spirit was not steadfast with God, therefore he prayed, "Turn us."

But this was not to be a vain, unanswered prayer: the writer was dealing directly with his God, and, like Habakkuk, who stood upon his watch-tower "to see what he will speak with me" (Hab. 2 : 1), so the Psalmist here says, "I will hear what God the Lord will speak; for he will speak." This he was sure of. "He will speak peace unto his people." He knew it before he prayed, and it was therefore that he did pray. "He will speak peace unto his people, to his saints;" but their responsibilities will not cease when he has turned them, but "let them not turn again unto folly." "Surely his salvation is nigh them that fear him." Yes; so nigh. God is so near to all who seek him. His nearness is a continual wonder to all who truly seek him. That he should be willing to commune with such as we are; he, the high and holy One that inhabiteth eternity (Isa. 57 : 15) is a never-ending source of wonder. He is nigh "that glory may dwell in our land;" the glory of the presence of God, which went up from the temple before the captivity because of Judah's sin, but which will return when Christ shall "reign in Mount Zion."

"SHALL COME AGAIN WITH REJOICING, BRINGING HIS SHEAVES WITH HIM."

Lesson Points

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers

PUBLIC feeling, at the period in the history of the Jews to which our studies have brought us, is mirrored in the two Psalms selected for the lesson. It is not certain that they were written at that time, but their contents suggest the thought that they may have been, and there is no other period to which they so well apply. The author of the Psalms looks backward as well as forward in voicing the emotions of the time then present. The transition in the Eighty-fifth Psalm comes between the third and fourth verses. The meaning becomes clear if we accept Wellhausen's suggestion that a line is missing from our version, which may have formed part of the original or may have been indicated by a pause in the music. It would make the verses run thus: "Thou hast turned thyself from the fierceness of thy anger [In the bygone days of distress, we said] Turn us O God of our salvation." etc. One other emendation, by the same author in the same Psalm, makes the poet's meaning clearer. It is in the last verse, which runs: "Righteousness shall go before him, and shall set us in the way of his steps." Wellhausen's suggestion is: "Righteousness blossoms up before him and welfare in the print of his feet." We can understand how the people could sing both Psalms with deep feeling as an expression of their inmost thoughts. Their release and return from captivity was a matter for devout thankfulness and rejoicing: but as they looked around at the heaps of ruins in their beloved city and met the frowns of the stranger who was occupying estates once in possession of their own families, their hearts must have been full of sadness. So in their songs, joy and sorrow are mingled, and as they sang praises to God, whose favor they are again enjoying, they cannot forget that he is a God whose hand has been laid upon them in chastisement, nor the fact that their sins as a nation abundantly justified the punishment from which they are still smarting.

Thou hast covered all their sin. The story is told of a youth who stole a large sum from his employers and fled the country. He went from city to city in Canada, hiding himself and feeling every time he went on the street that some policeman would seize him and carry him back to endless punishment. One day he saw in a newspaper, an advertisement, evidently written by his father, urging him to come home, or at least write to his afflicted parents. He did write, and in a few days received a letter from his father telling him that he had made restitution to the young man's employers, and that he might come home safely. He went back and received a glad welcome. But it was not in his old home. His father had sold that and all his furniture to make good his son's defalcation. There was not a word of reproach from the parents, but when the young man saw what they had suffered and how much they had given up for his sake, his heart was broken. His sin was covered, but at what a cost! So we read "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son."

We were like them that dream. They could not believe that such good fortune had happened to them as that Cyrus should permit them to return to their homes. Livy, the historian, relates that after Flaminius had defeated the Macedonians, a herald was sent to the Greeks who were assembled at the Isthmian games, to announce that the Romans would permit them to retain their liberties. The Greeks looked at one another in amazement, unable to believe their own ears, and one asked another if he had heard aright. Every one supposed it was a dream. Finally, the herald was called back and asked to repeat his proclamation. When it was evident that the good news was true, such a shout of joy was raised as had never been heard in Greece before. The magnanimity of the conquerors astonished every one. When a sinner realizes the enormity of his transgressions, he is frequently overcome by despair, but when he learns that God for Christ's sake forgives him, it seems too good to be true and his joy is indescribable.

Our land shall yield her increase. Dr. Vincent describes a luxuriant hot house in the garden of one of his friends. There was a beautiful vine covering the roof, the grapes on which were wonderfully large and luscious. His friend said: "This is the first year these vines have borne so plentifully. My new gardener would not have anything to do with the vines unless I gave him permission to cut them down to the stock. I did so, and for two years we had no grapes, but this is the result." Affliction is like this cutting and pruning. It fulfils its purpose when it produces fruit to God from the new life.

The Lord hath done great things for us. But the process is often painful. The way God makes us better, holier and more useful is by putting us through an ordeal of sorrow. The price of steel is about twenty dollars a ton: but when that steel is passed through the fiercest heat and has been hammered and hardened by various processes so as to fit it for fine wires, hair-springs and instruments of extreme delicacy, it is much more valuable. Steel of this character, when it is fully prepared for such uses, is sold at the rate of over two million dollars a ton. It is made out of the ordinary metal, but its value is enhanced by the processes through which it has passed.

Bringing his sheaves with him. That is the day of glory and of rejoicing, but it is rendered possible only by those previous days of toil and self-denial. Two workmen were laying aside their saws and planes. "Robert," said one of them, "I am going to take Sophie for a ride this evening. Come with us and bring Mary. We will have a good time." Robert shook his head. "I am working on some plans every evening now," he said. "I do not mean to be married till I have a house of my own, and if these plans win the prize, as I hope, it will be a good start for me." His friend said he should be sorry to spend his evenings in that dull way; a little pleasure now and then brightened a man's life. So he went his way and enjoyed himself, and Robert went to his drawing. A few months later Robert resigned from the workshop to become the architect of a new building at a high salary. 'What luck!" his friend said. It was not luck, but the fruit of many a night of study and toil.

Armed Hosts in the Transvaal

British and Boer Forces Face to Face, and a Clash Momentarily Expected
Final Efforts for Peace—It May Be a Sanguinary War of Races

"A GREAT armed camp" would be a fitting description of the Transvaal-Natal border at the present moment. On the northern side of the mountain chain, which forms the frontier, are the Boer armies, chiefly cavalry, well-equipped and reported as eager for active service. Their strength is variously estimated at from 12,000 to 20,000 men. In the main camp at Zandfontein there are 8,000 men. Joubert, the victorious veteran of many wars, is in supreme command, and he has been able thus far, though not without difficulty, to restrain his Boer troopers from occupying the mountain passes and invading Natal. On the southern side of the range at Ladysmith, anxiously awaiting reinforcements now on the way, are the British troops, under General Symons. Inferior in numbers at present, they will soon be much stronger than the Boer force, though the latter, when supplemented by the Orange Free State contingent, will have considerably over 30,000 men in the field. Seven British troopships have already reached Durban, and over 9,000 men have been disembarked and added to the troops stationed at Pietermaritzburg, Ladysmith and Newcastle. To these will shortly be added over 20,000 troops of all branches now on the way in transports from England, with 20,000 to 30,000 more to follow. Britain is pouring a vast military equipment into the field. It is reported that seventy troopships will be engaged in carrying her soldiers to the port nearest to the probable theatre of war. Added to these are the Natal contingent, and the troops from Australia, the whole combined force representing, when fully assembled, an army of not less than 70,000 troops, under the command of Gen. Sir Redvers Buller.

A WARLIKE BOER AND HIS TEN SONS

MARKET DAY IN JOHANNESBURG

THE PRINCIPAL FORTRESS OF JOHANNESBURG

It is not surprising, in view of such formidable preparations, that a condition akin to panic should have seized upon the non-combatant population on both sides of the border. The towns on either side are depopulated, save for the military; farms and grazing grounds are deserted, and Boer and Natal people alike have transferred their women, their children and their movable belongings to safe quarters, distant from the scene of expected hostilities.

Despatches from Pretoria represent the Boers as confident of winning successes at the opening of the war, and of being able to clear the country of the British, as far as Durban. Military trains heavily laden with supplies and packed with enthusiastic Boer troops, are constantly going to the frontier. The general feeling is that the Boers will perish to a man, rather than surrender their independence. It is even said that President Kruger, though now an old man, has announced his desire to do military service in defence of the republic. There have been rumors of shortness of forage among the Boer troopers on the border, and it was even stated, in late telegrams, that the breakup of the Boer camps, owing to the impossibility of obtaining supplies and forage, was impending; but those statements have not been verified. On the other hand, it was stated at the beginning of the present troubles, that both at Pretoria and Johannesburg, the government had laid in abundant stores of all kinds, in anticipation of such a contingency, and were fully prepared. The cause of the rumored break-up is probably to be found in the fact that in order to check the impetuosity of his troops, and to prevent the possibility of parties of armed Boers from invading Natal and thus precipitating the war, Gen. Joubert ordered the advance corps to fall back from a point not far from Laing's Nek to their original base near Sandspruit, a movement which seems to have been misinterpreted. At the same time, the Boer leaders are understood to have complete plans in readiness for an immediate advance to the frontier whenever such a step becomes necessary.

That such an order will eventually be issued seems to be everywhere expected. The plan is believed to contemplate a forward movement by some fifteen thousand troops under Joubert in person, from a point between Standerton and Volksrust, the burghers from the Orange Free State cooperating, and the two columns converging on Ladysmith, should the British continue to occupy that place in force.

There is still a lingering hope in both countries that, even at the last moment, active conflict may be averted and some compromise arranged. Peace advocates urge, with considerable reason, that no better cause exists for beginning war at the present moment than existed six months ago. The Liberal leaders in England strongly oppose war, and Parliament will be by no means a unit upon the subject. Many foresee a struggle in which not only British and Boers, but all the native races of South Africa—the Basutos, Bhamangwatos, Bechuanas, Zulus and Kaffirs—may be involved, and a vast territory, now comparatively prosperous and progressive, may be made a desolate waste. It is undeniable that there is a partial revulsion of feeling in England, and that, brought face to face with imminent conflict, the country is perhaps more disposed to listen thoughtfully to the admonitions and warnings of the peace party, than it was a week ago, when, on the occasion of Queen Victoria issuing an imperial order calling out the national reserves, twenty-five thousand strong, the war-like spirit ran exceedingly high.

MAJUBA HILL

The scene of the English defeat in the last Boer war

But the whole situation is so critical, at this writing, that even before this issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD reaches its readers, the conflict may have actually begun. It is hardly probable that the present strain can long endure without breaking. Meanwhile offers of mediation continue. President Steyn, of the Orange Free State, has tendered his services as mediator, although there is little likelihood of the offer being accepted. President Kruger has again declared to the Volksraad that war is wholly unnecessary, and it is evident that, notwithstanding its enthusiastic military preparations, the Transvaal would gladly welcome peace. The good little Queen of Holland is indefatigable in her efforts for peace. Several European powers are evidently interested, and it would not be surprising if the covenant of the Hague Conference afforded a legitimate pretext, even at this late stage, for friendly interposition in the South African trouble with a view to averting a needless sacrifice of human life.

GENERAL SIR REDVERS BULLER

President Kruger at Church

The illustration on the first page of this issue presents a scene which, though strange to others, is not unfamiliar to dwellers in the Transvaal. President Kruger, besides being the political head of the State, is also to a certain extent the spiritual father of his people, and occasionally officiates in the pulpit. His sermons are of the nature of simple addresses or homilies without much grace of rhetoric, but abounding in common sense and with a deep vein of spiritual truth underlying them. To the simple burghers, the preaching of "Oom Paul" has far more charm and potency than are to be found in the eloquent phrases and rounded periods of more polished pulpit orators of the modern school.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR
T. DeWitt Talmage
EDITOR

The Christian Herald ... Wednesday. The subscription price is $1.50 per year, ...
Subscriptions may commence ...
Remittances ... manner available to the remitter. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.
Register your letters when you remit by cash
Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the Canadas, and Mexico, foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.
Renewals. ... before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.
Back Numbers. ... back numbers, nor to make good omissions caused by tardy renewals.
Change of Date. ... the date, after your subscription is renewed.
Expiration ... per indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed
Change of Address. ... and your new address when you ask us to change your address.
The Name ... live in should always follow your own name when ... on our books unless this is done.
The Christian Herald ... the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded.
Letters ...
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,
... Broadway, New York.

Hundreds of Dreyfus Cases

THERE is great need of more use of the pardoning power. In all the prisons there are men and women who ought never to have been put there, or once incarcerated, having suffered enough, ought to be set free. What was seen in the large and resounding Dreyfus case is seen on a smaller scale every day. Communities get prejudiced, juries get prejudiced, newspapers get prejudiced, and the innocent are arrested and condemned. The defendant cannot get his witnesses into the court-room, or he has incompetent attorney, or the arraigned man was caught in a conjunction of circumstances for which he was in no wise responsible. After the public pulses are calmed, petitions for the sufferer's pardon ought to pour into the room of Governor or President. While Grover Cleveland was Governor of New York State, he called my attention to two large packages of applications for pardon lying on his table. I had just before then, at the funeral of Gov. Alexander H. Stephens, in Georgia, heard of his wonderful pardoning procivities, and I rehearsed them to Governor Cleveland, and I thought the rehearsal had some effect when, a few days after, I saw a long list of men whom the Governor had pardoned. New York State had at one time a Governor who boasted that he had never pardoned any one. I was glad to see him sink out of public consideration and go into private life. Recognizing the impertection of jury trial, the pardoning power was given by law to Governors and Presidents, and that power ought oftener to be used. We speak in gladness and reverence of a pardoning God, and I cannot think of anything more admirable than a pardoning Governor or a pardoning President I believe there are hundreds and thousands of men and women in jails to-day who ought to be set free. That would be a sublime and Christ-like mission, to go through the penitentiaries of America and find out those who were unrighteously imprisoned, and those who, though guilty, ought because of the alleviating circumstances be now liberated. Such an angel of mercy might run against sharp criticisms, and be roughly jostled, but he would win the approval of Him who said, "I was in prison and ye visited me." I had a Bible class for several years in a penitentiary, and once a week I confronted hundreds of the incarcerated, and I was constantly made acquainted with cases of awful injustice, where the man behind the bars was as innocent as any man who walked the streets. There are hundreds of Dreyfus cases

Mothers, Sweethearts and Wives

ADMIRAL Dewey attributes the bravery and heroism of the young ... sweethearts and wives. "It is the thought of these," he says, "which sends men up to the guns; it is the approbation of those at home that helps men win battles in the war. If it were not for these, there would be fewer heroes." This is all sound as a nut. And this is another argument for pure and noble women: women, who not only lead the world in beauty, but who send letters of sympathy and love to the men at the front; and who do not forget them and the cause they represent, when they daily kneel in prayer to the God of Battles.

Indeed, everything noble and heroic in youth, is rooted in the home, and fed from the home. It is while the young man reads and dreams in his early days of what he will be and do, to be honored and loved by his nearest and dearest ones, that he forms aspirations and purposes and hopes, which eventually make him a hero, whether on the deck of a warship, or the ship that sails with him as a foreign missionary to carry the Gospel to other lands. For it is the same kind of stuff that goes into the Admiral who wins the plaudits of a nation, and the messenger of the Cross, to whom it is said at last, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." It was a wonderful time, when the Metropolis of the New World rose up and called Admiral Dewey blessed. But heaven is to show greater wonders than this, when the nations of them that are saved walk in the light of it, and when the great Captain comes with his reward with him, and gives to every man according as his work has been.

The Population of Heaven

WE have seen a curious estimate by an ingenious ... culated how long the world is going to last and how many people there are in each generation, and then sums up the whole matter and says he thinks there will be twenty-seven trillion of souls in glory. We have no faith in his estimate. We simply take the plain announcement of the Bible—it is "a multitude that no man can number." Every few years, in this country, we take a census of the population, and it is very easy to tell how many people there are in a city or in a nation: but who shall give the census of the great nation of the saved? It is quite easy to tell how many people there are in the different denominations of Christians—how many Baptists, and Methodists, and Episcopalians, and Presbyterians—of all the denominations of Christians we could make an estimate. Suppose they were gathered in one great audience-room, how overwhelming the spectacle! But it would give no idea of the great audience-room of heaven, the multitudes that bow down and that lift up their hosanna. Why, they come from all chapels, from all cathedrals, from all sects, from all ages: they who prayed in splendid liturgy, and those who, in broken sentences, uttered the wish of broken hearts, from Grace Church and Sailor's Bethel, from under shapeless rafters and high-sprung arch—an innumerable host.

One of the most impressive things we have looked upon was an army while we were standing upon a hillside. You see forty or fifty thousand men pass along. You can hardly imagine the impression if you have not actually felt it. But you may take all the armies that this earth has ever seen, and put them in one great array, and then on some swift steed you may ride along the line and review the troops; and that accumulated host from all ages seems like a half-formed regiment compared with the great army of the redeemed.

But now let us take the field-glass of St. John and look off upon the hosts of heaven—thousands of thousands, ten thousand times ten thousand, one hundred and forty and four thousand, and thousand of thousands, until we put down the field glass and cry out, "We cannot estimate it." You may tax your imagination, and torture your ingenuity and break down your powers of calculation in attempting to express the multitudes of the released from earth and the enraptured of heaven, and talk of hundreds of hundreds, of thousands of thousands, of millions of trillions, of quadrillions of quadrillions, of quintillions of quintillions, until your head aches and your heart faints, and, exhausted and overwhelmed, you exclaim, "We cannot count them or mention their number—'a great multitude that no man can number.'"

Female Athletics

A LADY physician, writing for the Nineteenth Century, claims that the present excessive tendency of women to athletics is destined to destroy her womanly beauty. If she wants to grow up muscular and rigid like a boy, let her go on with the cycle and golf and the gymnasium as her brothers use it. But if she aspires to female grace and beauty of form and development, let her hesitate.

How much there may be of wisdom in this counsel, it may be difficult for the unprofessional to state. If to be at ease in the drawing-room be the height of woman's aspiration, perhaps not a little. There is this, however, to be borne in mind. In the Colonial period and in the Revolutionary period, woman had little athletic culture besides horse-back riding and house-work. She had large families. It is a question whether the peasant woman in European countries, especially in Germany, does not make the best mother and the best wife. And it is notorious that her life is one prolonged struggle with athletics of the house and field, and that though she may gather some degree of physical coarseness in the battle, she is to be regarded as thrice victorious.

The Future of the Philippines

UP to the advent of Dewey, the Philippines had little knowledge of the new nation, now attempting to impress upon them a Christian civilization. For Christian it will be, despite the present sounding of cannon, and the garments rolled in blood. All great changes like that about to be inaugurated in the Philippine Islands have begun with the cost of life. If there is a better way, it has not yet been discovered. We could not wrest Cuba from the bloody tyranny of Spain without the destruction of the Maine, without the storming of San Juan.

Till Dewey came, the Philippines knew nothing of Americans, save now and then an American as a curiosity. They threshed their rice in a hollowed log and backed their sugar cane to the nearest ... Here is the open door. The transforma... commerce, of export and import. The proportions of such commerce, we can hardly conjecture.

To-day ... who have already elected to remain there It is one way Providence takes to colonize those islands, and everyone of those Americans has his eye-teeth cut and his eyes wide open. Only a few months ago little was known there about wheat flour Soon it will be a staple of commerce. All people of foreign birth will demand it. It will cease to be ... houses and be furnished by Americans. Americans will be in demand everywhere. American ingenuity and pluck and activity will take the lead. This is just as sure as anything else in the future. These changes and improvements will take time; but they will come. They are on the way, they are at the door

In Next Week's Issue will Appear the Opening Chapters of

. . . A NEW SERIAL STORY . . .

. . . Of Absorbing Interest to Old and Young. All should Read It

BRIEF NOTES

... W. F. ... has ... Mission Society.

... Evangelical Alliance, for the United States, in succession to Dr. Josiah Strong.

... In His Steps, has been translated into French ... Italian edition is now being prepared.

... received from the estate of the late Mrs. B. A. Benedict, of Pawtucket, R. I., the sum of $55,000, to be added to the endowment fund of Benedict College, Columbia, S. C.

... of the Rev. G. W. Neely, of Clemmonsville, N. C., who was held in much respect in the district wherein he resided. He was the father of Mr. F. Tennyson Neely, the well-known publisher.

Col. J. G. Hallimond, who has been secretary of the Volunteers of America for the last three years, has been elected secretary of the Industrial Christian Alliance, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the recent resignation of Mr. Arthur W. Milbury.

Kano in the Central Soudan, the great rendezvous for the Mohammedans, of Western Africa, who are about to make pilgrimage to Mecca, has been chosen as the headquarters of the ... tian work in the Soudan.

... at Stockholm is a Bible. In weight and size alone it ... writing, and each page falls but one inch short of being a yard in length. The width of the leaves is twenty inches.

The Rev. Dr Powers, secretary of the American Church Missionary Society, has issued a highly encouraging report, in which he states that the receipts for the last fiscal year show an increase of almost 250 per cent. Nearly $79,000 ... and $47,000 expended leaving a balance of about $40,000.

It is rumored that the committee on marriage and divorce, appointed by the convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, has decided to recommend the adoption of a canon forbidding clergymen of that church to perform marriage service, in any case in which one of the parties to the marriage is a divorced person. This will apply even when the divorced person is the one who has been wronged.

The Moravian Missionary Society is embarrassed by the legacy of Mr. J. J. Morton, of a million dollars. The testator stipulated that it should be spent in founding new stations. This can be done, but there is no provision for maintaining them after they have been founded. Unless the Moravians receive liberal help, they may have to abandon some old stations to take care of the new ones.

A London clergyman has adopted a novel method of increasing his Sunday evening congregations. A sheet is stretched between two pillars in the churchyard and stereopticon pictures of scenes from the life of Christ are thrown upon it. The Vicar briefly explains each picture with appropriate lessons. At the conclusion of the exhibition, the spectators are invited to attend the evening service in the church and nearly all of them accept.

Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, of London, whose sermons at Northfield this summer were greatly blessed, will hold services in New York this month. He will preach at the Broadway Tabernacle, Saturday, October 21, at 8 P. M., to ministers only: on Sunday, October 22, in the same place at 11 A. M. and 4 P. M., and in the evening in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, where he will also preach on Monday, October 23, and Tuesday, October 24 at 4 P. M. and 8 P. M.

Civil War in Venezuela

CARACAS, the capital of Venezuela, is in danger of falling into the hands of the forces that the government calls "rebels." Technically they deserve the name, because they are in arms against the recognized government, but so extensive and orderly is the movement they are engaged in that it promises to end in revolution. Its leader is Gen. Cipriano Castro, who was recently a candidate for the governorship of a province, but was defeated, mainly, it is said, through the influence of the President of Venezuela, Gen. Andrade. With him is Gen. Hernandez, who was the unsuccessful candidate for the Presidency when Andrade was elected. On the way to join these two, is Gen. Velutini, who has been until lately a strenuous supporter of the government. He was a personal friend of Andrade, as he had been of President Crespo, but when Andrade took measures that Velutini deemed unconstitutional, he declared he would not be a party to such measures, and left the country. While he was staying in New York President Andrade wrote him, telling him to consider himself an exile. Velutini, incensed by Andrade's letter promptly joined the revolutionary party, and has sailed for Venezuela with a cargo of arms to take part in the struggle. Our government has made an offer of mediation. It has sent the Detroit under the command of Capt. Hemphill to Curacoa, and, chiefly through his efforts, the revolutionary army was halted fifty-five miles from Caracas, and an armistice was arranged. Gen. Castro said that he wished to avoid unnecessary bloodshed, and would be glad to engage the Government troops outside the capital, or to listen to terms of peace. Efforts are now being made to that end. It is evident, however, that a large section of the country has lost confidence in President Andrade. His chief offence appears to have been an attempt at the practice we know as "gerrymandering." He tried to rearrange the areas of the several states in the interest of his party, and it was this attempt which brought the discontent with his government to a head. Capt. Hemphill reports his opinion that nothing can avert a renewal of the conflict but the abdication of President Andrade. Whether he will make such a sacrifice to bring peace to his unhappy country is doubtful. He appears to be a man like those of whom the Psalmist complained:

Shall the throne of wickedness have fellowship with thee who frameth mischief by a law (Ps. 94: 20).

A Race With Fire

The Mallory Line steamer Leona, which reached her dock in New York a few days ago, had an anxious time on her voyage from Galveston, Tex. She was laden with cotton, wool and tobacco. Three days before her arrival the smell of smoke was detected and there could be little doubt as to the cause. Her cargo was on fire. The hatches were promptly battened down and all speed was made to port. She had barely entered her dock and discharged her eighteen passengers when flames burst from her forward compartment. The fireboats were summoned and poured a continuous stream of water into her hold. The fire, however, continued to burn, the plates of the vessel became red hot and she heeled over on her side. More fireboats were sent for and soon ten lines of hose were pouring water on the burning cargo. It is matter for congratulation that the fire did not start earlier, otherwise she might have perished at sea and many lives must have been sacrificed. Her captain and crew, doubtless, suffered horrible anxiety during the race to port, not knowing whether the fire could be kept under control until the voyage was over. There are some voyagers on the ocean of life who suffer similar anxiety. Old habits and evil passions are constantly striving to gain the mastery, and only by the grace of God are kept under control. The time will come when, the struggle over, a safe entrance into the eternal haven is assured and the conflict will end in victory.

I keep under my body and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway (I Cor. 9. 27).

A Dying Girl's Charge

A girl who died at Paterson, N. J., on October 3, made a charge against the matron of a school which may involve that lady in a trial for manslaughter. The child was an inmate of the State Industrial School for Girls, at Trenton, N. J., the management of which was recently investigated by a Commission. She alleged in an ante-mortem statement that one day she was charged with infringing one of the rules of the school. The matron had seized her by the throat and dragged her into the corridor where she threw her down. A stout woman came to the matron's help and sat upon the girl, while the matron beat her with a strap. A strait-jacket was then put upon her, and she was taken to a dark, bare room, known as "the dungeon," where she was kept for forty-eight hours, and fed on bread and water. If the child's statement is true, the matron may receive a sentence which will be exemplary. The child probably seemed to her a friendless creature who might be illused with impunity; but it is never safe to injure the most helpless of God's creatures while he rules the world.

Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father who is in heaven (Matt. 18:10).

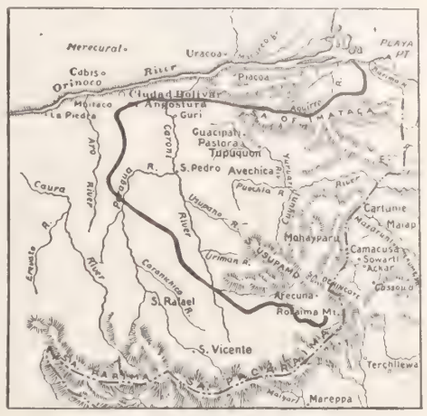
A Hero in the Mine

A wonderful story of heroism is reported by the Salt Lake, Utah, Herald. A man was working at the top of a mine when a cry was raised that the mine was on fire. The miners were called out and the order was given to shut off the air to stop the flames. But it was found that one man was still in the mine unconscious of his danger. To shut off the air would be to cause that man's death, yet unless it was shut off, the flames would spread and he would be burned to death. In this dilemma, Heber Franklin, the miner who was at work at the top of the mine, volunteered to go down and fetch him out. He was warned that it was a most dangerous undertaking. He might have to go through fire, and as there was powder in the mine he might be blown to pieces. But he insisted on going. The suspense while he was below was painful. At last the signal was given to haul up, and to the joy of all Franklin came up safe, with the man he had rescued. We are all thrilled by such a deed of daring; but how many listen to the story of him who to save us from a worse fate gave his life as a sacrifice!

He saw there was no man and wondered that there was no intercessor: therefore his own arm brought salvation (Isa. 63: 5).

A Triumph of Arbitration

The dispute which has for sixty years been a source of trouble between Great Britain and Venezuela, has at last been decided by a court of arbitration in Paris. It will be remembered that this dispute at one time threatened to involve the United States, and for some weeks brought the United States into an attitude which might have involved war. The trouble arose out of a question as to the true boundaries of British Guiana in South America and Venezuela. There was a large section of land which neither country deemed of much value lying between the two countries. English subjects settled upon it and developed it. Venezuela paid little attention to it until its value was enormously increased. It then declared that it was a part of Venezuela, and insisted on taking possession of it and imposing taxes on the settlers. The British Government, after long negotiation, proposed to enforce its claim to the territory by military occupation. But President Cleveland, in December, 1895, championed the claim of Venezuela, and advised Congress to insist on the dispute being submitted to arbitration. Congress gave him full power to deal with the question, and, finally, England consented to accept arbitration. Two judges were to be appointed by England and two by Venezuela. These four to select a fifth. Venezuela chose two American judges, Chief Justice Fuller and Associate Justice Brewer of the Supreme Court, and retained ex-President Harrison as counsel. England appointed two of her own judges to represent her on the tribunal and the four so selected chose Professor Martens, a distinguished Russian jurist and an authority on international law, as the fifth member of the commission. The court assembled on June 15, and on October 3 it rendered its decision, which was unanimous. It is not altogether satisfactory to either party. Our map on this page shows that while Venezuela and Great Britain claimed territory that the commission does not award to them, each party gains more than its rival would concede. England fails to obtain Point Barima and the control of the mouth of the Orinoco River, which she strongly insisted belonged to her, and Venezuela fails to obtain the zone stretching to the Essequibo, which she claimed. Outsiders, however, regard the settlement as an equitable one and the boundary settled by the Commission as rational and easily understood, as it follows well-marked geographical lines. Its chief interest, however, is in the fact that it is another proof that war may be avoided by arbitration. It becomes another precedent, which we may hope will be followed more and more frequently, until that happy time predicted by the prophets shall come, when Christ himself will reign and all questions will be submitted to his judgment.



THE VENEZUELAN AWARD

—— England's Claim. —·—·— New Boundary.

CARACAS THE CAPITAL OF VENEZUELA

He shall judge among many people: and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more (Micah 4: 3).

A Town's Responsibility

A curious claim on the municipality of Dunellen, N. J., has been made by one of its citizens, and there is some doubt in legal minds as to the liability involved. The citizen in question has lost a number of chickens, the value of which he estimates at six dollars. They were killed, according to the contention of their owner, by a big cat, owned by one of his neighbors. This cat, he alleges, prowls around his premises every night, and has found some way of getting into the outhouse in which his chickens roost. The ordinary course of proceedings would have been to sue the owner of the cat, but the citizen insists that the municipality is under obligation to protect his property, and as it has failed in that duty, so far as his chickens are concerned, he claims compensation for his loss. The lawyers and the courts will have to decide whether the municipality is liable, but the dispute is of interest because of the principle involved. It is that neglect of a recognized duty is in the nature of an offence. This is often overlooked. Many a man will claim that he has done no harm and that he has a good moral character, but if he has failed to do that which he ought to have done, he will stand condemned in the final judgment.

These ought ye to have done and not to leave the other undone (Luke 11.42).

A Y. M. C. A. Pioneer Worker Tells of the Almost Magical Growth of Dawson City and Skagway

OUR ALASKAN WONDERLAN

CHURCH AT BONNET, BUILT OF SLABS

NOTWITHSTANDING the many exaggerated accounts that are made about Alaska and the Klondike, it is still claimed as one of the wonderlands of the country. The conditions there are constantly changing, but the social and civilized side of life is now assuming a more permanent form every day. Scientists claim that the climate is growing milder each year, and it is possible that some day, after all, Alaska may afford homes for a great population.

Social progress is largely due to the influence of the churches and other forms of Christian effort that have been carried on since the breaking out of the first excitement over the gold discoveries. The churches and missionaries are doing a very aggressive work; but, notwithstanding this fact, there is no field in the world where there is greater need of workers than in this great Northwest. As in all mining communities, everything in Alaska is run after the "wide-open" fashion, and gambling dens and other places of vice predominate. In speaking of the Northwest country, of life on the trail and of the evil influences of gambling and other vices, it hardly seems possible that in two short years, notwithstanding such influences, such wonderful progress could have been attained. Skagway in August, 1897, was represented by a few tents erected on the beach; but the great rush which followed soon developed the place, until it has now become a city of about five thousand inhabitants, with five churches, a Y. M. C. A., a railroad, a Salvation Army headquarters, public schools, a college, fire department, water-works, electric light plant, and other features that pertain to a well-conducted town.

THE CITY OF SKAGWAY AS IT IS TO-DAY

What has been said of Skagway can also be said in larger measure of Dawson which has a population of twenty thousand, with at least twenty thousand more within the immediate vicinity, and is fast assuming permanent aspects. Sanitary methods in Dawson have lately been adopted, and there is now very little sickness. A fire limit has been established, and no tents or "shacks" are allowed within the district. The town is now putting in a water system, by which it is designed to heat the water to boiling point and force it through the pipes, so that a hot water supply may be maintained, if possible throughout the cold weather.

A PRAYER MEETING IN CAMP NEAR ATLIN

Travel from Skagway to Dawson in the summer season is no longer a hardship, but a source of enjoyment. Thousands of tourists during the last season have availed themselves of this opportunity. One can make this trip in the summer months with all the comforts of modern travel.

With reference to the religious work now going on in Alaska and the Northwest, it is conducted in an aggressive form, adapted to the peculiar need of the field. The work of the Y. M. C. A. seems to be especially suited to the Northwestern country. Sixteen months ago, Mr. W. A. Reid undertook to open up the Association work, establishing it first at Skagway. He reached New York City a few days direct from the Klondike, and the photographs on these two pages, as well as the information in this article, are kindly furnished by him for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD readers. Although the work in Skagway for the first six months was conducted in a tent, over 25,000 visitors were entertained, and during this short period more than 5,000 letters were sent out by the men to their homes. The building was constantly thronged day and night, and was often kept open till after midnight. Entertainments, lectures, public debates, Gospel meetings and Bible classes were conducted, and the men enjoyed gratuitously the full benefit of the Association. The work soon found earnest support and is now being maintained by those in the local field. During the first few months, much hardship was experienced by Mr. Reid, the founder of this work. The weather was arctic and the water-mains were frozen during eight weeks of the ice-

THE FIRST Y. M. C. A. HEA

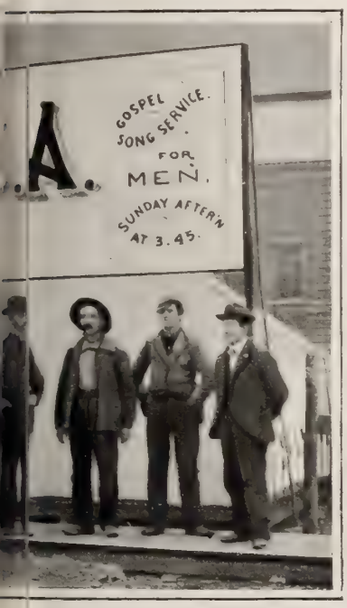
DAWSON CITY, WHICH HAS SPRUNG INTO EXISTENCE WHOLLY WI[TH]

D ITS MARVELOUS CITIES

Social Life in the New Territory—Many Reports of Cheering Progress of Christian Work There

RSAGO ITS SITE WAS A WILDERNESS

ter weather, so that there was little or no fire protection. Oftentimes it was necessary to sleep with one's clothing on and to be ready to vacate the premises at a moment's notice. Hot fires had to be kept up to prevent freezing. As many as three times in a single day, the tent in which the Association was conducted caught fire. Mr. Reid, before returning from the Northwest, organized an Arctic Committee for the extension of the work throughout Alaska and the Northwest territories. The work at Skagway will be placed in charge of an experienced man, and Mr. Reid will devote his time to its extension as Field Secretary. Supplies have been shipped into Dawson, and the Y. M. C. A. work will be established there this winter. To secure a hall will necessitate an expense of $200 to $300 a month. There is no organized religious effort now going on in Dawson, which can take the place of the Y. M. C. A. The few churches are far from the business centre, where most of the men are massed. There, as in Skagway, however, the churches have done noble work. A church, with reading-room attachments, has recently been established at Bennett by a Presbyterian missionary. Mr. Grant, the Presbyterian missionary in Dawson, who lately resigned, deserves credit for what he has accomplished. It was largely through his efforts that the Dawson City Hospital was established. Over $165,000 have been expended in work done within its walls. Dr. Grant, too, has been untiring in his efforts to maintain this beneficent institution.



IER IN THE KLONDIKE

THE HOSPITAL AT DAWSON. IT COST OVER $30,000

In the return trip to the Klondike, it will be necessary for Mr. Reid to travel over the ice, as the Yukon River freezes up early in the season. This will involve a trip of something like six hundred miles over the fields of blinding ice and the treacherous snow.

The prevailing impression that the rough element predominates in Alaska and the Northwest, Mr. Reid assures us, is decidedly a wrong one. The most intelligent class control to-day in Skagway and in Dawson. One would find an average audience quite as critical perhaps as could be found in many places in the East. There are many men of good family and fine education who have gone up there in quest of gold, and failing to gratify this hope, they have, in many cases, taken up the duties of a common laborer.

As the Klondike has not yet put on the social polish of older communities, it is rather blunt in speech, and has a habit of calling things by somewhat unique names, more accurate, perhaps, than graceful. One unsavory locality in Dawson is known as Liarsville, another as Profanity Hill, and others bear similarly picturesque appellations. Frequently the community is startled by wild stories of unheard-of happenings, and the spreading of such canards seems to be a pastime peculiar to the country and the climate. Those reports are circulated for the sake of the excitement they afford, and probably without malice. As there is no communication with the outside world during several months each year, the mining communities feeling themselves isolated, resort to this method of creating excitement. With the increase in population and the growth of railroad facilities, these odd traits will soon disappear. Every season brings Alaska nearer to civilization, and soon the going to that region, once regarded as "bleak and inhospitable," will lose its terrors, and life in the interior will become very much like what it now is elsewhere in the same latitude. From Seattle to Skagway by steamer, from Skagway to Bennett by rail and from Bennett down to Dawson again by steamer is the present method of travel in the Klondike. In the open season there is no longer any privation to be endured in making the trip; it is probably quite as pleasant and enjoyable as any ordinary tourist could desire. In winter, however, all this is changed. Then the only method of travel is over the ice by means of dog-sleds, or, as is more common, on foot—which is termed, in that country, "mushing." The hardships of life on the trail can hardly be exaggerated.

Y. M. C. A. HALL AND DINING-ROOM, SKAGWAY

Y ARS—THE MOST WONDERFUL OF ALL THE MINING CAMPS

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

Child Work For Animals

Our Animal Protective League—A New Society Which Has Many Child Members

UR Animal Protective League is the name of an Association recently organized with headquarters at 105 East [illegible] street, [illegible]. The officers of the society are Mrs. Myles Standish, President, W. H. Tolman, Vice-President, Mrs. John Greenough, Secretary, Henry Whitney Munroe, Treasurer, and Henry E. Howland, Counsel. Upon its advisory board appear in addition to these well-known names, those of Mrs. Francis Dana Winslow, George Hamilton Dean, and Alexander M. Hadden. The pledge which every applicant for enrollment must make is this: "I hereby promise that, as far as in my power lies, I will prevent all cruelty to dumb animals, and will aid and succor those that are weak and helpless." One object of the League is the education of all children in the care, protection and kindly treatment of animals. "This does not imply," says Mrs. Standish, "that childhood's school curriculum is to be enlarged. Far from it. Almost all children are interested in animals, and instruction can be made so pleasant and health-giving as to be really recreation. We shall have picture talks, illustrated by lantern slides, upon such subjects as city animals, city birds, park animals and birds, animals in art and history, the horse, the cow, and other domestic animals; the animal in fable; animal sagacity; Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, etc. Then, we will have pretty illustrated leaflets giving true stories about animals.

"What we regard as a very important feature will be practical object lessons in the care and treatment of animals. For instance, a pretty stuffed pony is used in teaching children how to harness and handle a horse properly. Children in large numbers are joining the League." Sub-divisions of the League are auxiliaries and chapters. Ten children form a chapter. The children themselves get up the chapters; two or more become interested and enlist others. Mothers and fathers are drawn into the movement, and organize auxiliaries. Parents see that the League work makes the children more humane, not only to animals, but to each other, and that it entertains and occupies them wholesomely; so they are very glad to take turns in lending a room for chapter meetings. Another feature of league work particularly emphasized by its promoters will be farmers' auxiliaries and chapters. The object of these will be to show the farmer how to care for his beasts in such a way as to get the very best value out of them and their labor. Expert veterinary surgeons will be employed to address the meetings, and lantern slides will be used. Drivers' auxiliaries will receive special encouragement and attention. The League takes the position that cruelty to animals is oftener than otherwise the result of ignorance rather than hardness of heart. One of the ways in which the New York children are showing the League's influence is in bringing stray and starving cats to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, which puts destitute, decrepit and unclaimed beasts to a painless death.

♦

Wanted—a Grandmamma

A little three-year-old laddie who had gone with his papa and mamma from an Eastern to a Western home, sadly missed his grandmamma, and one day his mother, who had been too busy in the new home to give usual attention to the small man, saw him make a hole in the ground and put an old daguerreotype of his grandmamma therein. "Why, what are you doing, baby?" she asked. "I fought," he said, with a quivering lip and a world of pent up loneliness and homesickness in his voice as he tried to explain, "maybe if I planted it anozzer grandma'd grow."

♦

The Daily Prayer

It should be a delight—from which we cannot withhold ourselves—and not a burdensome task. If prayer is irksome to you, try this plan: Think of prayer as a little quiet talk with a dear loving Father, who listens to every word; who will help you even in the smallest matters, to carry life's cares bravely and happily; ask his blessing, knowing he will give it; and then as the day wears along, and strength is given and little pleasures bloom up along your path, think, "My loving Father remembers me." Think, when trials great or small come, "My Father is helping me. I can overcome." When seeming failures oppress, take heart and think, "My Father can lift me up and He will." All through the day, keep sending loving, trustful thoughts towards the Father who loves and fails not. Try this, and see if the habit of prayer does not grow upon you; and if you do not come to regard it as life's sweetest, most helpful privilege.

♦

A Kindly Knight

Sir Thomas Lipton, who has received such a warm welcome to America, has a well-remembered claim upon our kind regard. His check for $10,000 for the relief of our soldiers from Cuba last year is not easily forgotten. A thousand of it went, we believe, to the Irvington Auxiliary, of which Miss Gould was the guiding spirit, and some of it doubtless helped THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S boys at Camp Jewett. Sir Thomas did not inherit his title; he won it worthily, for he was knighted by England's good queen in recognition of his public benefactions. At the time of the Diamond Jubilee the Princess of Wales wanted to give a dinner in honor of the event to all the poor of London; she was in despair because subscriptions did not come in fast enough for this purpose; Thomas Lipton heard that the plan was about to fall through, and sent in his check for $125,000. Next, he gave $500,000 to found eating-houses for London's poor; his charities have been numberless. Thirty-six years ago, a ragged little blue-eyed boy on the dock at Glasgow, he said to himself that he would own ships some day. He worked early and late, cheerily and intelligently; was ever an honest, sober, and kind-hearted lad. Little Tommy Lipton he was called then; now as the queen's knight, he is just as simple and kind-hearted, and so cheery that his friends call him "the merry millionaire."

♦

The Queen and the Peasant

Good Queen Margaret, the "Pearl of Italy," is an energetic mountain climber, and, when rambling with ladies of her suite, has been known to get so far ahead as to be out of sight. On one of these occasions the Queen lost her way, was hungry and tired, and, seeing a peasant's hut, decided to wait there until her ladies came up. She knocked at the door and was answered by an old peasant woman, whom she asked for rest and refreshment. "Come in, my dear, and welcome," the kindly old peasant said. The Queen entered and insisted on helping her hostess prepare the simple meal of milk and bread. When the belated attendants reached the cottage they found the Queen and the old woman gossiping and eating with all the freedom of old friends, and it was not until some days later, when a handsome present arrived at the cottage, that the woman learned how she had entertained her Queen.

♦

The "New Woman"

The following bit of news goes to show that the "new woman," so called, is the same woman the world has known for a long time. At the approaching State fair in Georgia, there is to be a very extensive exhibit of woman's work; and note is being taken of the fact that a very large number of the articles entered represent the handicraft of "new women"—that is club-women, presidents of free kindergarten associations, history classes, hospital auxiliaries, Florence Crittenton homes, and so on; also, that the State and City Federation of Women's Clubs have, through hard work and unremitting organized effort, secured the unusually large concessions granted, as well as the excellent collection of articles to be displayed, their idea being to make the exhibit thoroughly practical, broad in its scope, and including every sort of work done by women. Among the articles which the Atlanta City Federation sends as handiwork of its own members are: an artistically trimmed hat, a well-darned stocking, embroideries, drawn-work, hemstitching, jellies, fruit-cake and fresh bread, every article representing some club-woman's industrial and domestic "fad."

FISHERWOMEN OF GRANVILLE, NORMANDY

"The Little Boy in Blue"

I [illegible]

And then I hear two lips repeat:
"I 'oves, I so 'oves you,
[illegible]
"I 'oves, I so 'oves you,
To 'ittle Boy in Blue!"

[illegible]
So freely given me!
And O, sweet words of childish glee:
[illegible]
Tause oo're so tind, so ood and tind
[illegible]
[illegible]
There summers do their vigils keep,
And winds of winter rave,
And still I hear this broken stave:
"I 'oves, I so 'oves you,
Tause oo're so tind, so ood and tind
To 'ittle Boy in Blue!"

—ARTHUR E. SMITH

♦

Fisherwomen

EVERY traveler through European countries notes the fact that women as well as men are "toilers of the sea." On the Cornish coast, the coasts of Norway, Sweden and almost every country with a water front, sturdy, industrious women may be seen handling boats, mending nets and bearing off to market great baskets full of the shinny, scaly treasures of the deep. The fish-wives of Holland are familiar in picture, song and story. Almost as well known are the fisherwomen of Granville, Normandy, who are noted for beauty, industry and courage. Blackburn, the writer, describes one thus:

[illegible] a Norman maiden, about eighteen years old, without shoes or stockings; a picture of health and beauty, bronzed by the sun; she is not strictly handsome, and she may be very [illegible] she [illegible] and happiness is a part of her nature. [illegible] a smile [illegible] and now at eight o'clock on this summer's morning, she sits down on the rocks, makes a quick breakfast of potage, plumes herself a little and commences knitting.

These fisherwomen are cool and daring "boatmen," can drive good bargains in the market place, where they call their wares in "shrill unpronounceable ejaculations," while they greet the purchaser with winning smiles, they make good wives and mothers.

If we except Alaska, our country has practically no fisherwomen. Last summer, Boston papers called attention to the anomaly of "a lone fisherwoman" who, day after day sat on the end of an East Boston wharf, watching the line—the only woman among the many men who ply this trade along Boston wharves. Passengers on the ferries watched her curiously; her fellow fishermen treated her with kindness and respect; and a reporter interviewing her discovered that she liked her occupation, that it helped her support her children, and that her neighbors were her principal customers. Alaskan squaws are often expert fisherwomen. In some sections of the Territory fishing is very easy work, as for instance in the neighborhood of Cook's Inlet, where candlefish are so abundant that the squaws catch great quantities of them by dipping a basket into the water.

♦

A Princess's Pets

At Sandringham Palace, the home of the Prince of Wales, is a dove-cote, where a number of beautiful white doves are kept. Whether these pretty birds are preening their feathers on their little tree or nestling in their boxes, they are ever ready to welcome their mistress, the princess, on her frequent visits. Some are special pets, and perch on her shoulders or hover around her for food in the prettiest way. The dove-house is glass-roofed, so that even in winter its white inhabitants may flutter in sunshine, while protected from severe cold.

A PRODIGAL SON

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

(Concluded)

CHAPTER III.

ELIZABETH SEARS. From her brother David. January 1, 18—.

The books had been unpacked, and as the cover came off the box, Mrs. Burnham ad sung the doxology, "Praise God, om whom all blessing flow!" Jim Burnam, his face alight with eager joy, had andled book after book; the minister ad said a word of prayer over them—or, oh! the untold good they would do the simple households, barren of intelctual food, to which they were going ke veritable messengers from above. hey were for children and grown folks like. Some were especially designed or the minister; some were stories; oth rs travels, and books of biography were ot wanting. Over a child's picture-book David lingered longest, finally burying is head in his hands, and breaking into ard and painful sobs. The three gath red around him.

"Why, Dave—Davy!" remonstrated Irs. Burnham. Then she saw the titleage of the little book, the round, careful hildish script, the boy's present to his ster. The very sight of it had opened he flood-gates of memory, and carried he young man, as nothing else could, ack to the days of his sweet innocence id blessedness, when he was still a little hild at home. He calmed himself by a reat effort.

"I gave Elizabeth that book the year was eight and she was ten. She must e dead, mother must be dead, or else ey never would have let the book go. went with mother to buy it for her." e broke down again.

"David," said the minister, "I don't ee this as you do. The little book, I ncy, was sent forth at a venture into the orld's wide desert, as Noah's dove was nt out of the ark. I feel sure your other is alive and longing for you, and at your sister sent this book in the px, thinking that, among the thousand ossibilities of life, it might get to your nds, as it has. David Sears, write to our mother this night."

"I vowed never to go home penniless id a burden," said David, slowly.

"You are not a burden," answered Mr. urnham, "and from this time on you rall not be penniless. I will pay you ages. Others who can afford it will be ry glad to pay you more than I. But is isn't the question, David. You are ot Satan's bond-slave any longer; you e Christ's freedman. Your mother ould know the good news. Think; she oes not even know you are living."

"It's hard enough," Mrs. Burnham lded, "for me to go to my boy's grave id plant flowers on it, and think how he s under the sod asleep; but it would ve been harder had he grown up and ot lost, and gone off where I couldn't id him."

"David," said the minister, "I don't ow under what provocation, or fear, or you left your home, but I'm sure your ty is plain. Write to the old folks and t them know."

"There are Mother and Elizabeth and y brothers. Father died before I was rn."

"Then he sees you from above, and ows all about it. Maybe God allowed m to be the guiding angel who brought u here. Who knows? But write to our mother, David, and we'll drive to the ostoffice and send the letter off to-night."

* * *

The prodigal did not go home, but me came to the prodigal. As swiftly steam could bring them, traveling by ght and by day, the mother and Elizath were whirled across the great conent, never stopping nor resting until e mother's arms were around her boy, r head gathered to his breast. The two women arrived in the twilight one evening, and they thought they had never known silence and remoteness till they drove mile after mile from the station and found at last Mr. Burnham's far-off homestead. They remained that night, and were made as comfortable as Mrs. Burnham's means would allow, and the next morning the minister came and told them he would escort them to a house where they could find board.

"You will go home with us, my boy?" said Mrs. Sears, pleadingly.

"Mother, darling"—the boy's voice was very low, but it had an accent of firmness new to it—"I cannot go to New York yet. My place is here. Here I have begun a new life. Till I am stronger, I must stay away from my old associations. Then, too, I must earn enough to pay up what you paid for me. Drink made me a brute; it made me a thief. I must wait. One of these days I will come home, but not yet."

The mother's heart ached, yet she knew David was right. She urged him no more, but her worn face was sweet with a great illumination when Elizabeth said, as firmly as David himself: "I shall take you home, dearest mother, and then I'll come back and stay with David. We'll have a little cabin here together, and I'll take care of him for you. No, brother, you need not oppose me. I shall carry out my plan. I have always had my own way, and you must not be the first to break into the established order of things."

"Mother, I must tell you every single thing," said her boy at last. "I was once on the very doorstep, and I could not go in. Mary gave me something to eat from the kitchen table. You musn't cry, mother," for at these tidings Mrs. Sears was overwhelmed; her tears flowed.

"Then," said Elizabeth, "I know the night. It was a year ago. We felt there was something unusual. We looked up and down the street, but nobody was there except old McIntyre, and, when I said to him that he kept faithful watch, he said: 'Aye, aye, Miss Elizabeth; but the angels keeps faithfuller.' He's a queer old fellow."

David did not betray McIntyre.

His mother did not rest until she had sent to the nearest town and procured for him what she thought a decent amount of wearing apparel—underclothing, stockings, trousers, coats, shoes, hats—all a man could wish; and since neither money nor clothing could be offered to Mr. Burnham, she sent for the two articles his wife had most eagerly craved—a cabinet organ and a sewing machine—and the Burnhams were as pleased as two children when these helps to family life arrived and were set in their places.

Elizabeth fulfilled her intention. She escorted her mother home, but she came flying back, and for two years there was nothing that a farmer's wife needed to do, which a farmer's sister did not learn. She had a pony, and soon the widely-scattered neighbors grew accustomed to the sight of her speeding about on its back; she taught in the little Sunday School, cheering and comforting everyone.

"Sister," said her brother at last, "I think we will go home to our mother. I can trust God to keep me now, and I feel that I can do more for Him there than here. Besides mother wants us; she misses you; she needs me. Let us turn our backs on Dakota, and do Christ's work in New York."

Elizabeth hesitated; she blushed; she was about to speak, but Dave did not notice any confusion. Having resolved to go, he was impatient to be in motion.

"I will go with you, dear," she said. "It will be a joyful home-going. And I do want to see my mother."

But long after the fatted calf had been killed, and the great delight of the home-returned prodigal was over, long after they had grown used to seeing David in the vacant chair, and to hearing him whistle and sing about the house, Elizabeth was observed to feel a peculiar interest in the visits of the postman. Thick letters came to her weekly, and she spent much time in writing, and one day there was much bustle in the house, for a friend was expected, a real guest of honor.

"Dear," said the mother, "I never expected to see you marry a minister, much less a home missionary."

"The unexpected is always happening mamsie."

"If you could have chosen somebody at home!"

"There wasn't the right somebody here, mother. There couldn't have been any other somebody half so good."

David smiled. As the soul of another David had been knit to the soul of Jonathan, was his to his Dakota comrade and brother. It seemed to him a beautiful circumstance, that his sister should marry his dearest friend.

[THE END.]

"To Err is Human."

But to err all the time is criminal or idiotic. Don't continue the mistake of neglecting your blood. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It will make pure, live blood, and put you in good health.

All Gone—"Had no appetite or strength, could not sleep or get rested, was completely run down. Two bottles Hood's Sarsaparilla cured the tired feeling and I do my own work." MRS. A. DICK, Millville, N. J.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The CENTURY DICTIONARY CYCLOPEDIA & ATLAS

THE CLUB PLAN of selling books was pioneered and perfected by us. During the last four years we have distributed through the Wanamaker Book Clubs special editions of three important works—at prices very much below the usual. Each was a more-than-expected success—which showed us you wanted them—wanted equally the books, the price-saving, and the comfortable payments.

This time we have secured an edition of the one great work of the present century that you cannot afford to get along without, The Century Dictionary & Cyclopedia & Atlas, universally acknowledged to be the standard of authority throughout the English-speaking world—secured it, too, at just half the price at which thousands of sets were sold, by contracting to take an entire edition!

It is expressly stipulated in our agreement that no more sets will be furnished us after our one edition is exhausted. Some of our friends last season delayed—prices were raised—and there was disappointment. We advise your joining the Wanamaker Century Club TO-DAY.

HALF PRICE in little payments DELIVERED COMPLETE $1.00

NOW a word about the work itself, which for this edition has been revised to date—words, spelling, definitions, encyclopedic matter, proper names, maps and charts—with new material added in every department.

It is not merely a Word Book. It is more than an Encyclopedia. It is the Best Atlas in the World. It is a Reference Work, the most practical and all-embracing ever compiled. There are ten volumes, which contain 9,100 pages, 500,000 definitions, 300,000 quotations, 150,000 encyclopedic articles, 50,000 proper names, 8,000 illustrations, 310 maps and charts in colors, forming a complete working library that meets the requirements alike of the busy man of affairs and of the most exacting student. It more than takes the place of all other dictionaries and cyclopedias combined.

How to Join the Wanamaker Century Club. Send a dollar to-day—for club membership fee. After you receive the books, you complete the purchase by paying $3.00 per month (only ten cents a day) for fourteen months. Or better bindings if you prefer—a few more monthly payments.

Write us, Mentioning The Christian Herald and we will mail you, free, our book of specimen pages, and full particulars as to bindings, etc.

NEW YORK
JOHN WANAMAKER

Temperance Workers in Conference

The Great Convention This Week of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union at Seattle, Washington

IN this journal, on October 4, we gave a brief sketch of the preparations for the forthcoming convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union at Seattle, with portraits of the president, vice-president and corresponding secretary. These conventions are always deeply interesting, and exercise a wide influence; but this year is a special anniversary of exceptional significance, as it is a kind of silver wedding anniversary, marking the twenty-fifth commemoration of the organization of the Union.

MRS. FRANCES J. BEAUCHAMP

The event the convention celebrates was, like nearly all mighty events, almost unnoticed at its occurrence. It grew out of a conference of "crusaders" at Chautauqua, N. Y., in August, 1874. "Mother" Stewart, of Springfield, O.; Mrs. George Carpenter, of Washington Court House, O.; "Mother" Thompson, of Hillsboro, O., and other devoted women of Ohio had demonstrated to the world how much power there was in the hands of consecrated women thoroughly and heartily united against the curse of the home. By their appeals to saloon keepers and their pleadings with the men who patronized the saloon, a wave of temperance reform swept through two hundred and fifty towns and villages, closing the saloons, pledging inebriates to sobriety and bringing into the kingdom of God multitudes whom the liquor habit had excluded. During the fall and winter of 1873 this great movement had been going forward, and woman was tasting the first fruits of her victory over the enemy who has done more than any other to render her lot a misery. In December, 1873, the women of Fredonia, N. Y., banded together, with Mrs. Esther McNeil at their head, for a work in their town like that in Ohio, and gave their organization the name, destined to become famous the world over, of Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Many workers were gathered together at Chautauqua, N. Y., at the Sunday School Assembly in August, 1874, who heard with delight the reports of the victories already achieved, and were fired with the idea of greater triumphs that might be accomplished by the same means. It was resolved to call a meeting of women to be held in November at Cleveland, O., to organize women temperance workers on a national basis. The convention was held November 18–20, and a hearty response from all sections was made. The title chosen by the little society of Fredonia, N. Y., was recognized as eminently suitable for the larger organization, was adopted, and the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union was ushered into the world.

MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN

The first President was Mrs. Annie Wittenmeyer, of Philadelphia. Its declaration of principles was duly made and its objects, as stated by the organizers, were: "To form a better public sentiment, reforming the drinking classes, transforming by Divine grace those who are enslaved by alcohol, and securing the entire abolition of the liquor traffic." During the quarter of a century in which it has been in existence, it has done a noble work among the children in Sunday Schools, Loyal Temperance Legions and Kindergartens; its efforts to influence college students and to train and organize young women for a philanthropic life; its evangelistic work for non-churchgoers, for railway employees, soldiers, lumbermen, miners (especially for the drinking men of all classes), all these have proved the breadth of its comprehensiveness and the tirelessness of its zeal. Its efforts to reach the pauper and the prisoner, to establish reformatories and homes for the wretched victims of inebriety and their suffering children, and its temperance Flower Mission, must appeal to every true heart. It also strives to redeem outcast women from a slavery worse than that of chains, and by better laws to secure protection to women and girls from the outrage of brutal or designing men. It has been instrumental in raising the age of consent in nearly every State in the Union, and its influence is being strongly felt in the purification of our literature and art.

The reports of the results achieved by the organization reached other lands in which the liquor evil was doing a work almost as deadly as here, and inquiries as to its methods came from many countries. It was resolved to send out a number of devoted women as missionaries to spread the Temperance Gospel and organize women's work. They were Mary Clement Leavitt, of Massachusetts; Jessie A. Ackermann, of California; Dr. Kate C. Bushnell and Elizabeth Wheeler Andrew, of Illinois; Alice R. Palmer, of Indiana; Mary Allen West, of Illinois; Miss Clara Parrish, of Illinois; and Mrs. J. K. Barney, of Rhode Island. Through their efforts, national unions were organized in several lands, and in November, 1883 an international organization was effected under the title of The World's Woman's Temperance Union. It now represents woman's temperance work in no less than forty nations and has a total membership of more than half a million. It has held four international conventions, the last in Toronto in 1897.

MRS. HELEN M. BARKER

The three officers of the National W. C. T. U., whose portraits are here given are all ladies of singular force of character, eloquent platform speakers and remarkable for administrative ability. Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman was for several years President of the W. C. T. U. of Missouri, where she won the hearty good will and loyal enthusiasm of all the branches. She is the Recording Secretary in the National organization. Mrs. Helen M. Barker, the Treasurer, is of New England parentage. She is a graduate of Gouverneur Wesleyan Seminary, and was for some years principal of a public school at Oswego, N. Y. As the wife of a clergyman, she entered heartily into religious work and was for eight years Secretary of Foreign Mission work in Western New York. She identified herself with the W. C. T. U. at the beginning and was unanimously elected first President of the Alleghany (N. Y.) County Union. Afterwards she served as President of the State Union of Dakota. In 1893 she was elected Treasurer of the National Union. Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, the Assistant Recording Secretary is a native of Kentucky, and was elected President of the Union of that State. She is the youngest officer of the National organization and one of its most efficient workers

AUTHORS EDITION

An Exquisite Production of All the Standard Works in Uniform Size, at a Popular Price in little payments monthly

WHAT THE MAGAZINE ASSOCIATION HAS ACCOMPLISHED FOR THE MAGAZINE READERS OF AMERICA.

THACKERAY

TO-DAY the literary accumulation of the centuries fills hundreds of thousands of volumes. Selection therefore, is the order of the day, and it is also the keynote, since to purchase all the worthy books is quite impossible as to read them; consequently at this time, a greater service is done by rendering available whatever is best in the store of literature already accumulated than by adding something new to that store.

The world is not really suffering at this time for a new Hugo, a new Thackeray, a new Eliot, or a new Sir Walter Scott, but it is suffering greatly for an opportunity to secure the works of these great authors at a reasonable figure so that all may be able to enjoy and profit by the creations of these masterminds.

This is just what has been done in a superior manner by the Magazine Association, who have, for the first time in the history of book-publishing, produced an excellent, uniform edition of practically all the standard authors, for distribution to Magazine Readers only, at an extremely modest figure and upon the easiest of monthly payments.

All the sterling quality that first-class book-making can command has been buried into these handsome volumes.

The good, clear type—the clear printing—the fine paper—the profusion of superb illustrations (etchings and photogravures for frontispieces, with many woodcuts and half-tone engravings after great artists)—the rich leather bindings—all stamp the

"AUTHORS EDITION"

with the mark of quality—volumes that will last a lifetime.

THE TERMS ARE SIMPLE: $1.50 PER VOLUME IN SETS ONLY—PAYABLE $1.00 WITH ORDER AND $1.00 MONTHLY.

SCOTT

IF NOT satisfactory in every way, your dollar back promptly. The list ready for delivery is a remarkable one, since it includes complete works of the following authors:

Bulwer, 15 vols. Hugo, 10 vols. Carlyle, 10 vols.
Irving, 8 vols. Dickens, 15 vols. Scott, 12 vols.
Dumas, 15 vols. Thackeray, 10 vols. Eliot, 8 vols.
Gibbon's History of Rome, 5 vols.
Green's History of the English People, 4 vols.
Guizot's History of France, 8 vols.
Hume's History of England, 5 vols.
Josephus' History of the Jews, 3 vols.
McCarthy's History of Our Own Times, 2 vols.
Macaulay's History of England, 5 vols.
" Essays, 3 vols.
Knight's Half-hours with the Best Authors, 4 vols.
Rambaud's History of Russia, 2 vols.
Rollins' American History, 4 vols.
Rawlinson's Monarchies, 3 vols.
" Egypt, 2 vols.
Plutarch's Lives, 3 vols.
Taine's English Literature, 2 vols.

We feel we are doing our readers a service in advising them to write to the offices of the Association, as below, for full particulars regarding this exquisite edition, and we will be benefited in turn, if when writing you will mention The Christian Herald

The Magazine Association, 11 East 16 St., New York

To Troublous Stomachs.

To prove that Kremer's Dyspepsia Powder is the most meritorious remedy for all forms of dyspepsia, I will send a large box for 5c. postage, the price (50c.) to be sent only in case you are benefited after a week's trial. Otherwise return powder by mail.

J. A. HISEY, Newburgh, N. Y., writes: "It did me more good than anything else I have ever taken." So say hundreds.

Mention this paper.

JOHN KREMER, Druggist, 428 7th Ave., N. Y.

SEWING MACHINE $13.95

A fine $40 High Arm 5-Drawer Machine at $13.95 sent anywhere on 8 months' trial without one cent in advance — guaranteed 20 years—made with Piano Polish Solid Oak Cabinet Beautiful Bent Cover the best High Arm Head made has every known improvement guaranteed the equal of any $40 machine. Don't wait to see it at $13.95, as at that price they are sure the price guessing. Don't buy before you see our Big Free Catalogue it will be sent free and illustrate this machine and many others. Write today.

THE G. LOUIS VEHON CO. 157 W. Jackson St. CHICAGO, ILL.

THE WONDER of the AGE!

$10 DAILY guaranteed agents. $50 gets a gen. agent to appoint sub-agents to introduce new patent Oil Gas Burner for heating and cooking stoves, ranges, furnaces. Makes natural gas from Coal oil, cheapest cleanest fuel known to science; no coal, wood, ashes, soot; easily attached to any stove; indestructible, non-explosive. One on Exhibition sells 50 more; chance of a life-time to make money fast; no competition. Write for terms and FREE territory quick. Address Perfection Burner Co 134 Cincinnati, O

WILL PAY FOR itself in one month

BRAIN & NERVE TONIC

BEST ON EARTH

For all Weaknesses, regardless of Cause. Month's Treatment, $1.00 Merit doubted? Write to Banks, or any Business House in City. Thirty years' experience. Address,

A. S. Johnson, M. D., Battle Creek, Mich.

GOOD LITTLE INCUBATORS

Many people want a small incubator but don't want a mere toy, a plaything that will only spoil good eggs. To meet the demand for a really good little incubator we have perfected the now famous Reliable 50 EGG BANTLING SPECIAL. It is the equal of any hatcher ever made, only smaller, and sells for only $5

Send 10c for our 20th Century Catalogue and Poultry Book. Best ever published.

RELIABLE INCB. & BROODER CO., Box B16 Quincy, Ill.

ASTHMA SURE CURE

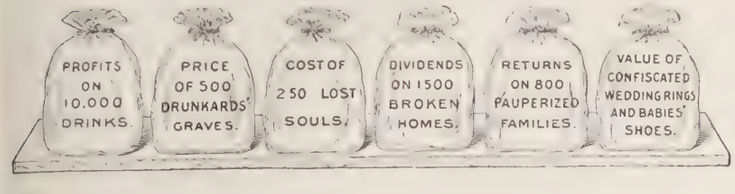
I have a sure, safe and speedy cure for that distressing and dangerous disease, asthma no matter how deep seated it may be. To convince any sufferer of its great virtue, I will mail a trial package free. Relief is instant and complete cure certain. Write at once to

F. G. KINSMAN, M.D., Box 824, Augusta, Me.

HEN MONEY is easily and quickly doubled by feeding Green Cut Bone. Makes hens lay winter and summer. The best and cheapest way to prepare it is with MANN'S NEW BONE CUTTERS. Cut hard, soft bones, meat, gristle and turn easy. Swinging Feed Trays, Granite Crystal Grit, &c. Send for free Catalogue. F. W. MANN CO. Box 29, Milford, Mass.

The Saloon-keeper's Gift

Writers Say His Wife and Children Should not be Debarred from Christian Privileges and Opportunities



PROFITS ON 10,000 DRINKS.
PRICE OF 500 DRUNKARDS' GRAVES.
COST OF 250 LOST SOULS.
DIVIDENDS ON 1500 BROKEN HOMES.
RETURNS ON 800 PAUPERIZED FAMILIES.
VALUE OF CONFISCATED WEDDING RINGS AND BABIES' SHOES.

AN almost unreadable supply of letters flow in discussing the question, "Shall a church accept the saloon-keeper's money in aid of its spiritual work?" The problem has been considered from every point of view. Almost every letter received deserves publication, but it would take every page of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD many weeks to do this. Last week we gave letters representative of a large number appealing, in the interests of the drunkard's family, for or against acceptance of the gift. This week we make selections from hundreds of letters urging the claims of the rum-seller's wife and children, who are irresponsible for the husband and father's calling, and also of the claim of the rum-seller himself upon the prayers of the church and to the privilege of doing good as God's Spirit prompts him.

J. R. Taylor, ex-saloon keeper, writes:

Through inheritance and environment, it was my misfortune to be a saloon-keeper for fifteen years. When I was converted, the surrender of my saloon meant the overthrow of my other and righteous business. "Can I join the church?" I asked my pastor. "Yes, and keep your case before God in prayer." God soon opened the way for me to quit the accursed traffic. Had church and pastor closed the door on me, I don't know what the result would have been. Apply saloon contributions to the relief of drunkards' families; they belong to them—though all the saloon money in the world would be poor requital for broken nuptial vows, lost love and blasted hopes.

T. B. U., N. Y., writes:

Yes; encourage all to sow all the good seed they can; but let the barkeeper understand that he and his family are wanted more than his money. When he or they come, never remind them of their trespass until they come for membership (Isa. 43: 25; 44: 22; II. Cor. 5: 19; Isa. 1: 18), and then only remind the one presenting himself for membership who is still engaged in the saloon business. The wife and the children should not be discouraged by the church, so long as they themselves do not aid in the business. By kindness we may win the saloon-keeper from the devil's service.

B. C. Hedges, N. Y., writes:

If intended as hush-money, reject it; but consider this case: A saloon-keeper's wife and children attend the church, the wife a good Christian member, the boys and girls members of the Sunday School. The husband and father sees the good the church is doing for his loved ones; he knows he is following a wicked business; but he is grateful to the church, and out of a good motive gives his money. It would be a sin to refuse it.

Saloon Keeper, Chicago, Ill., writes:

Never have I perused a question of religion or morality with as much interest as this. It may be out of the ordinary for a saloon-keeper to write in regard to this, but such am I. Admitting what you assume to be a fact, i.e., that we wilfully sell our own souls to the devil for gain, what right have you, or how could a loving Saviour refuse our aid in spreading Christian influence and saving grace to our brothers? Why accept our children's pennies in the Sunday School, our wives' baskets at the sociable, our daughters' voices in the Christian choir? Do you think because we are saloon-keepers we would like to see churches darkened, Sunday Schools closed, Christian work, help and influence destroyed? Go and ask the meanest saloon-keeper, and get your answer. We may feel guilt, and by thus giving to the Lord be doing the bidding of conscience, which with God may be the widow's mite.

Saloon-Keeper, Bismarck, Pa., writes:

Be consistent and take the money which we give you, and, when you think it a sin to sell whiskey, just say so at the polls, in legislatures and courts, and, like all other law-abiding citizens, we will cease to be your agents, and your question is settled forever.

Mrs. P. C. Roberts, Kan., writes:

I think you should accept it. We have a saloon-keeper in our little town who has three children, regular attendants at our Sabbath School, and never failing to bring their pennies If we should refuse to take their pennies, how very bad the guiltless little ones would feel! I think if we refuse the father's gift we must refuse the children's, for both gifts come through his hands.

Cassius B. Bechtel, Mich., writes:

This money may be offered in memory of a Christian home or mother. Whatever the motive, it would be a sin not to accept it, and make it do good instead of doing evil.

James F. Griffin, Kan., writes:

Years ago when we had open saloons in Topeka, the wife and daughter of a saloon keeper, members of our church, were regular contributors to its expenses, by the envelope system. It was my duty at that time to receive such collections, and I felt that it would have been unkind and unchristian for me to throw out their envelopes. But one day the saloon-keeper met me on the street and said that if I would call at his saloon he would give me some money for the church. I declined. I think my action was right in both instances.

E. P., Montrose, Col., writes:

Are we, as teachers in the Sabbath School, to refuse the pennies that the saloon-keepers' children bring to us as their Sabbath day offering? Can we, as Christian workers, wound the heart of the saloon-keeper's wife (who may be struggling for a better life) by refusing her gifts?

Mrs. G. R. A., Pa., writes:

There are very many ladies who have no other money furnished by their husbands who would be glad to help the church. I have been placed for many years where no other money but that paid over a bar in hotel or saloon comes into my hands. I have paid pew rent and other church expenses with it. I am glad it never was refused.

Mrs. H. P. Wheelock, N. J., writes:

A liquor seller rents a pew and members of his family are seated there every Sabbath. Shall we refuse his money, and thus virtually shut out his family from the sanctuary?

Annie Romaine, N. Y., writes:

The saloon-keeper may have children who attend the Sunday School. Surely no one would commit an act that would drive them from the house of God.

C. W. Sibley, Illinois, writes:

For years I collected the offerings for a pioneer church, receiving among other contributions those of the saloon-keeper and his patrons. The saloon-keeper's offering came through his wife and children. How could the church refuse it?

A. Clark, N. Y., writes:

The saloon-keeper's children attend Sunday School. Should not their pennies be taken as well as those of other children? Should the saloon-keeper's wife and daughter be shut out from a share in all Christian work?

Joseph Wylie, S. C., writes:

I have fought rum and saloons for many years. While I hate them both, yet as a Christian I am not to hate the saloon-keeper. He may have a very pious wife, a liberal contributor to the church of her choice. Probably every member of her church knows that these contributions come through the husband direct from the saloon. The wife may be the means of saving her husband, and turning him from evil ways. Christians should treat kindly, even the chiefest sinners.

Thos. H. Merritt, N. Y., writes:

In a small village a woman who has run a saloon for many years, rented and paid for a pew in our church, went to church herself, taking her four children; the children were all converted, joined the church and are living Christian lives. She paid her pew rent with saloon money. Had the church refused her a pew four souls no doubt would have been lost. We should watch and pray, instead of calling down fire on the saloon-keeper's head

H. A. H., State College, Pa., writes:

If the motive that prompts the saloon-keeper's gift is purely a desire to help the spread of the Gospel, then it is right to accept it; but if it is from a desire to please some church member who may go in and take a drink, or sign a petition for license, it is wrong. Pray for the saloonkeeper's family as well as the drunkard's

A great number of letters await acknowledgment in a later issue.

THE MUSE OF BROTHERHOOD

By Edwin Markham

Author of "The Man with the Hoe"

This is one of the few really great poems that the closing years of the century have produced. In it Mr. Markham voices a healthy optimism that is even more impressive and convincing than the notes of hopelessness and despair that characterized "The Man with the Hoe." At the same time he nobly sets forth the principles of that universal brotherhood which says: "I am Religion by her deeper name."

This poem appears exclusively in

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

(OF PHILADELPHIA)

For this week. Date of October 21.

The Saturday Evening Post gained a round hundred thousand subscribers and buyers in one year past. Its total circulation is nearing two hundred thousand, paid. Your newsman will supply you regularly at 5 cents the copy, or we will mail it direct every week for five months on receipt of One Dollar.

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

For Both 25 cents For Both

SALT.

If you are looking for a Great Bargain in Fine Silverware never heard of before and that will astonish you, here is one of the Greatest Bargains ever offered by any reliable Manufacturer. For 25 cents we send Prepaid Both the Salt and Pepper Shakers. They are Quadruple Coin Silver Plated. Warranted to wear ten years. Finely engraved and useful as well as ornamental to any table rich or poor. If on receipt of the same you do not think or find them the Greatest Bargain you ever have seen or heard of, return them at once to us and we will refund you your money. We have been doing business in Chicago since 1865. Any Bank or Express Company can tell you our standing. Our Bargain Silverware Catalogue Sent Free.

PEPPER.

LEONARD MFG. CO., 5 & 7 MONROE ST., COR. MICHIGAN AVE., CHICAGO.

AGENTS WANTED FOR "THE STORY OF TWO WARS."

☞ The only Official, Standard, High-class History of both "OUR WAR WITH SPAIN" and "OUR WAR WITH THE FILIPINOS" complete in one superb volume. With fine Steel-Portraits of all our Military and Naval Leaders large Colored Maps, and many superb Engravings By Hon. H. B. Russell, and ex-Secretary of War Proctor. Sold Exclusively by Agents. ☞ A book that sells fast and pays big. Hundreds are earning $100 a month and more. Now is the time. No capital required. Freights paid. ☞ The surest chance to make money ever offered to all who want honorable work that pays big. Write at once for terms and particulars to THE HARTFORD PUBLISHING CO., Hartford, Conn

Criss Cross CEREALS (Trade-mark)

Ask dealers for them — see that packages have these criss-cross lines. Pamphlet and our sample offer mailed free.

Special Diabetic Food, for Diabetes.
Gluten Flour, for Dyspepsia and Constipation.
Barley Crystals, for Kidney Troubles.
FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U. S. A.

STEREOPTICONS MAGIC LANTERNS and SLIDES CONDENSED CATALOGUE FREE RILEY BROS. 16 BEEKMAN ST. NEW YORK.

LADY AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell Flavoring Powders, Perfumes, Soaps, Household Articles, Christmas Books; our goods are reliable; satisfactory; EASY TO SELL, BIG PROFITS, PERMANENT WORK. BRADFORD & CO. CINCINNATI, O.

Solid Gold Watch FREE to anyone distributing our line of fine toilet soaps, other premiums or cash if preferred. Catalogue and full particulars free. FRED PARKER, 506 So. Clinton St., Chicago.

Money to be Made

Good pay for all you do, and perhaps five hundred or a thousand dollars extra at the end of the season. We want good, reliable agents to secure subscriptions to distribute prospectuses, secure renewals, and generally look after our interests.

The Ladies' Home Journal

AND

The Saturday Evening Post

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

PHONOGRAPH RECORDS

MADE BY.... IRA D. SANKEY

"The Ninety and Nine,"
"Where is my Wand'ring Boy,"
"When the Mists Have Rolled Away,"
"Saved by Grace," and others of the famous

MOODY AND SANKEY HYMNS

Price, $1 per record; $11 per dozen.
Can be HEARD at ALL Phonograph Dealers.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO. 135 FIFTH AVE NEW YORK

TEACH YOURSELF MUSIC

DURING LEISURE MOMENTS AT HOME, Piano, Organ Guitar and Voice.

Any one can learn at once. Tunes, Notes, Chords, Accompaniments and the Laws of Harmony thoroughly explained. It is the cheapest, easiest, most rapid and successful way ever used to learn music. Over 1,000 of the highest kind of testimonials received. Goes to the bottom of music, makes it clear to the beginner, creates a fondness for music beyond what is supposed from the start. A few days' practice will have been sufficient to show any one the truth of this statement. Accompaniments in all keys. Circulars Free. Write for them. We refer, by permission, to parties in every town in the U. S. to any one interested in Music. Sample Lessons 10c

U. S. RICE MUSIC CO., C-241 Wabash Ave. Chicago

If you contemplate BUILDING

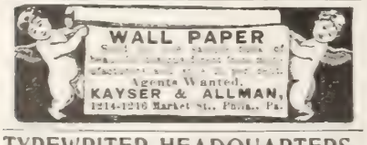
Send for Catalogue of PLANS containing fifty different designs. Price 50c.

T. W. BAST
Architectural Co.
SEDALIA, MO



TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS.

Many Second-hand Machines of Standard Makes at Half Price. Send for Catalogue and Special Bargain List. Typewriter Exchange, 237 Broadway, New York.

Stewards and Prodigals

By Dwight L. Moody

The Uses of Wealth

MR. MOODY'S notes on the Bible never fail to interest readers, but in those given below, dealing with Christ's illustrations as recorded in Luke's Gospel, the evangelist is more than usually interesting and instructive in his comments.

Luke 12:13. Even under Christ there were inattentive listeners.

V. 15. A double caution against greed. Whenever Jesus spoke of wealth, he spoke in words of warning.

V. 16. The anathema of the rich fool is not against riches, but against selfishness: against the mammon-worship which dethrones Jehovah.

Notice in this parable: a. The false conception of life. b. Forgetfulness of divine providence. c. Denial of man's stewardship. d. Neglect of true self providence, laying up treasure in heaven.

Ch. 12:20. "Thou fool!" God's epitaph over this man. The world would have said,—"Here lies so-and so, a good man, kind to the poor," etc. Why a fool? Because he thought he could fill his soul with the food his body enjoyed. The soul cannot eat and drink like the body. His soul was pining and starving in spiritual penury.

V. 37. "Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh, shall find watching." "Watching"—conduct governed by the constant expectation of the Lord's return.

Ch. 14:11. Where humility is the corner stone, glory shall be the top-stone. V. 17. "Say to them that were bidden, Come." V. 21. "Bring in hither the poor," etc. V. 23. "Compel them to come in."

V. 23. Religion a banquet. Sometimes by theological wisdom, by church architecture, by our conduct, we compel people to stay away from the feast.

The Returning Prodigal

Ch. 15. First parable—one lost in one hundred: Second parable—one lost in ten: Third parable—one lost in two. First parable—Christ seeking the sheep: Second parable—the Holy Spirit seeking the lost sinner: inside "the house" (v. 8), that is, the church: Third parable—the Father receiving the returning prodigal.

Ch. 15:2. "This man"—human, yet divine. "Receiveth sinners"—His mission, the mark by which his enemies distinguished him.

V. 11. Contrast the story of Joseph and his father with that of the prodigal son and his father.

V. 12. This young man had a fortune in his hand—not in his head or heart. Any fool can squander the former kind of fortune: but not the latter.

V. 13. The farthest a Christian can get from heaven is the world.

Vs. 14:16. The devil has never had a famine of husks. There are always plenty of husks, and plenty of swine to eat them.

V. 17. The prodigal might have said his father was the richest man in Judea, but no one would have believed him. The testimony of many Christians is not accepted by the world because of their spiritual poverty.

A Fatherly Welcome

V. 20. God was in a hurry to welcome the returning prodigal. Eyes, heart, feet, hands, and lips—all engaged to welcome the wanderer. The father saw him, had compassion, ran to him, embraced him, kissed him, clothed him, feasted him, rejoiced with him. The backslider was missed from the family circle.

V. 22. The Robe of righteousness. Ring of assurance. Shoes of peace (Eph. 6:15). Under the Law, God said, "Put off thy shoes" (Ex. 3:5). Under Grace, "Put on him the best robe" (v. 22).

V. 24. A sort of revival to which the elder brother objected.

V. 29. No enjoyment with his father: only with his friends. Six things about the prodigal son: His condition—"in want" (v. 14). His conviction—"came to himself" (v. 17). His confidence—"I will arise" (v. 18). His confession—"I have sinned" (v. 18). His contrition—"no more worthy" (v. 19). His conversion—"He arose and came" (v. 20).

Turning Points

Turning points in his life: Sick of home (vs. 12, 13). Homesick (vs. 17–19). Home (vs. 20–24). Sequel (vs. 25–32).

Six cases of men "afar off" from God: The prodigal (Ch. 15:13). The rich man (Ch. 16:23). The ten lepers (Ch. 17:12). The Publican (Ch. 18:13). The beggar (Ch. 18:40). Peter (Ch. 22:54).

Ch. 10:20. In only one parable did Jesus use a proper name—Lazarus. In only four miracles do we know the names of those benefited—Mary Magdalene, Jairus, Malchus, Bartimæus. When you step out of your self-contained residence, be sure you do not stumble over some Lazarus into hell.

V. 24. It is better to beg bread on earth (as Lazarus) than water in hell (as Dives).

Different Ideas about Prayer

THERE is a new kind of philosphy nowadays writes Mr. Moody, which teaches that it is a very healthy exercise to pray, because it teaches us submision. God doesn't change in His plans for us; we won't get anything more by asking, but then just ask; it is healthy exercise! A mother in New York has lost track of her boy. She is wandering around the streets seeking for him. You know that the boy is dead, but still you tell her to keep on seeking—it is a healthy exercise. What downright mockery!

Suppose that in the dead of winter, when the thermometer is down at zero, a man who has been stuck for twenty-four hours in a drift manages to get to my house at midnight, and rings the bell. I go to the window, and say: "Who is there?"

"Mr. ——. I have been in a snow-bank twenty-four hours, and I am dying. Won't you help me?"

"Well," I say, "I have a fixed rule never to open my door until morning, but you just keep on knocking; it will do you good; it is a healthy exercise."

That is a fair illustration of the way some people would have us look at prayer, Christ said. "Ask, and ye shall receive."

During the war a man came to me at Nashville, a great, big six-footer, and he was shaking all over and crying like a baby. I thought he must have delirium tremens. He pulled out an old, soiled letter and said: "Chaplain, read that."

It was a letter from his sister, saying that every night as the sun went down she fell on her knees and prayed God to save her brother. The soldier said: "Chaplain, I have been in a number of battles, and have been before the cannon's mouth without trembling a bit; but the moment I read that letter I began to shake. I suppose that I am the meanest wretch in the whole Cumberland Army."

I took a copy of the letter and went to another division of the army, thirty miles away. The next day I got up before the men and read it, and told how that man had been saved in answer to the prayers of his sister six hundred miles away.

"Honor is purchased by deeds we do." It is not what we say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that tells the story of its merit. It wins remarkable victories over impure blood.

A PECULIAR REMEDY

Something About the New Discovery for Curing Dyspepsia.

(From Mich. Christian Advocate.)

[illegible] seems to act as thoroughly in old chronic [illegible] it the much needed rest.

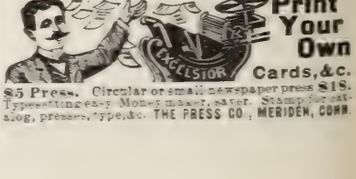
This is the secret of the success of this peculiar remedy. No matter how weak or how much disordered the digestion may be, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food whether [illegible] every organ and nerve in the body.

[illegible] all stomach troubles can be cured. Send for little book on Stomach mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. So popular has the remedy become that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets [illegible] any drug store at 50c. per package.

RUBIFOAM

For the teeth.
Free from acid or grit.
Deliciously flavored.
Superior to the higher priced dentifrices.

[illegible] All druggists. Sample and Book [illegible] Address F. W. H[illegible] & Co., Lowell, Mass.



EXCELSIOR
Print Your Own Cards, &c.
$5 Press. Circular or small newspaper press $18.
Type setting easy. Money maker. Send stamp for catalog, presses, type, &c. THE PRESS CO., MERIDEN, CONN.

GOUT AND RHEUMATISM...

A prominent physician writes:

DEAR SIRS:—Replying to yours on the use of TARTARLITHINE as a remedy in the treatment of gout, I will say that I have used it in the treatment of about a dozen cases with results that are a little less than wonderful. The characteristic feature of its action is the rapidity with which patients improve under its use. An improvement is noticeable within 24 hours. One of the most striking cases was that of a physician suffering from gout, muscular rheumatism and frequent bilious headaches. I prescribed Tartarlithine, and in one week there was absolute disappearance of all of the uric acid manifestations. The nervous irritability disappeared, and he stated that he had done the best week's work which he had accomplished in years.

Regular package $1.00.
Of all druggists or post-free by mail.
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

McKESSON & ROBBINS,
91 Fulton Street, . . New York.
SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

2 Giant Lily Violet of California

Beautiful winter-bloomer, also hardy outside; large golden Lily-like flowers, foliage like a Royal Velvet Robe, beautifully mottled. 1 Narcissus, Angels' Tears. 1 Bermuda Easter Lily, 5 to 6 flowers. 1 Christmas Hyacinth. 2 Mariposa, Tulips. 2 Buttercup Oxalis. 2 Golden Sacred Lilies. 2 Scillas, rich deep blue. 2 Glory of Snow. 2 Ixias. 2 Sparaxis. 4 Freesias, 2 white, 2 yellow. FREE with every order. Pkt. Baby Primrose Seed, Tufted Pansy, Diamond flower, "Success with Bulbs" and Catalogue. All these, 23 bulbs and 3 pkts. seed 25 cts. postpaid.

Miss Mary E. Martin, Floral Park, N. Y.

CANCER, SALT RHEUM, RHEUMATISM, PILES and all Blood Diseases Cured by fluid and solid extract of

Red Clover Blossoms.

Best Blood Purifier known, not a patent medicine but PURE RED CLOVER. Our preparations have a world-wide reputation. Send for circular. D. NEEDHAM'S SONS, 10 Inter Ocean Building, Chicago.

CATARRH INHALER FREE. Dr. Worst will mail his new scientific Catarrh Inhaler with medicine for a year, on three days' trial, Free. If satisfactory, send him $1.00; if not, return it. AGENTS WANTED. Dr. Worst, 211 Main St., Ashland, Ohio

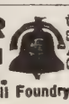
BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.



UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

$10,000 BICYCLES

Closing out Overstock. Shipped on trial without deposit. Order Today. STANDARD '99 Models, $10 to $20. '98 and '97 Models, $6 to $12. Second Hand, good as new $3 to $10. EARN A BICYCLE on our new plan FREE USE of wheel to Rider Agents Write for Special Offer. Mead Cycle Co., Dept. E 88. Chicago.

BOOK-KEEPING Stenography, Penmanship, etc., taught by mail or in person at Eastman, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. We always secure positions for graduates of complete business course. Catalog free.
C. C. GAINES, Box 236, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

...IN HIS STEPS...

By Charles M. Sheldon. We will send this wonderful book, bound in paper cover for 15 cents each or $1.50 per dozen; bound in cloth, 35 cents per copy. Address J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 55 Rose St., New York.

PLAYS Speakers Dialogues Recitations — For Churches Sunday or Day Schools — LAYS Send for Catalogue Free — DeWitt Pub. Co. 54 W. 30th St. New York

GOLD FISH A beautiful, illustrated book on care of aquariums mailed FREE if you mention this paper IOWA SEED CO. Des Moines, Ia.

$3.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working for me. People preferred who can furnish their own team. Applicants must furnish satisfactory reference as to character and standing. B. F. Johnson, 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP for children teething should always be used for children while teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa.

LADY or MAN wanted to travel and appoint agents. $60 per month salary and all expenses. ZIEGLER CO., 228 Locust St., Phila.

Porto Rico's . . . Great Need

The Suffering Only Partially Alleviated — A Duty We Owe to Our New Colony

(Written for "The Christian Herald")

POOR, helpless, starving, stricken land!
To us your famished people cry.
We've rescued you from tryant hands,
We will not leave you now to die.
Dear daughter, you have loved us best,
We love you more than all the rest.

You came to us with all your hopes,
With all your trials, griefs and fears,
We'll take you in our loving arms,
We'll wipe away your bitter tears;
We will not leave you now to die,
We will not spurn your helpless cry.

Fair daughter! you are now our own;
You gave yourself to us, and so
We'll take your tired, trembling hand
And all the way we'll with you go
Our love for you shall be secure,
While we're permitted to endure.

Chickasaw, Iowa. DAVID W. HINE.

These verses fitly describe the feeling of sympathy toward the poor Porto Ricans which prevails throughout Christian America, and which is now finding expression in the consecrated gifts of food and clothing that are being sent from our seaports to that island.

It is unquestionable, however, that there is still a very large number of our people who do not thoroughly comprehend the great needs of Porto Rico and who cannot understand why our Government does not undertake the work of relief. This is very clearly explained in a letter to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD from Mr. William R. Corwine, Secretary of the Central Porto Rican Relief Fund, appointed by the United States Government. He writes:

So far as action by the Government is concerned, there is no provision of law under which relief work of this character can be done. The treaty with Spain provides specifically that the status of Porto Rico must be fixed by Congress. The President and his advisers have held, and in this position they have been indorsed by some of the best legal talent of the United States, that under the wording of the clause in the treaty which directly affects Porto Rico, nothing can be done in the way of changing the conditions as they exist on that island, and the conditions existing between that island and the United States, without action by Congress. Congress will not convene until December. It will probably be several months after that before the subject can be threshed out sufficiently to allow proper laws to be enacted.

I visited Porto Rico for the purpose of making an investigation of the conditions there. I found that the coffee crop was only from sixty to sixty-five per cent. of the normal, and the tobacco crop about one-third of the normal. General Guy V. Henry, U. S. A., who was the Governor-General of the island, had attempted to ameliorate the suffering that had followed these conditions, by giving employment to these men upon the roads. While I was there there were some 15,000 men thus employed, each receiving fifty centavos a day, equivalent to about thirty cents of our money. The period of idleness had produced a great amount of destitution. There had been organized in San Juan, Porto Rico, what is known as the Woman's Aid Society of Porto Rico, with Mrs. Guy V. Henry as president. Mrs. Henry had the cooperation of the wives of many of the Army and Navy officers stationed there and the wives of some of the best Porto Ricans, all of whom were working with her to relieve this suffering. When General Henry was ordered home, in May, on sick-leave, Mrs. Dr. John Van Rennsalaer Hoff, wife of Major Hoff, U. S. A., Surgeon-General, succeeded Mrs. Henry as president. On the return of General Henry and Mrs. Henry to their own country there was organized here what is known as the Colonial Aid Society of the United States to cooperate with the Woman's Aid Society of San Juan. Mrs. Guy V. Henry was elected president of the Colonial Aid Society, the other officers being: Miss Anna Rhodes, vice-president; Mrs. Janvier Le Duc, secretary; Mrs. Horace See, treasurer. A committee of members of the Merchants' Association was formed to cooperate with her and Mrs. Hoff, the following gentlemen being on the committee: Duncan D. Chaplin, chairman; S. Cristy Mead, treasurer; William R. Corwine, secretary; John C. Eames and H. D. Lockwood.

As a result of a meeting held at the Merchants' Association in July, at which this committee was originally appointed, the charitable work was begun and was being carried on with considerable degree of success when the cyclone destroyed the crops, many of the homes and business buildings in the island of Porto Rico.

The Secretary of War, the Hon. Elihu Root, jumped into the breach and at once ordered that the Government buy, and the Government vessels transport, such supplies as might be asked for by Brigadier-General George W. Davis, Governor-General of Porto Rico. The Committee of the Merchants' Association offered to cooperate with the Secretary of War, and at his request a large committee of business men was formed, of which Governor Roosevelt became the chairman and the writer the secretary. This committee bent its efforts towards cooperating with the War Department and General Davis. A number of committees had sprung up in different localities and the Secretary of War, finding that there was no communication between these committees and no uniformity of action, appointed the following named gentlemen as the Central Porto Rican Relief Committee, for the purpose of taking charge of the funds donated through these various committees, making the purchases of goods that were required, and attending to the shipments:

Cornelius N. Bliss, Ex-Secretary Interior, Chairman. William R. Corwine, the Merchants' Association of New York, Secretary. Brig.-General Guy V. Henry, U. S. A., formerly Governor-Gen. of Porto Rico. Right Rev. James H. Blenk, Bishop of Porto Rico. Hon. Warner Van Norden, Treasurer, President National Bank of North America, New York. Hon. Randolph Guggenheimer, President of the Council, Greater New York. Hon. William T. Malster, Mayor of Baltimore, Md. Hon. Josiah Quincy Mayor of Boston Mass.

Meanwhile, the main or Central Porto Rican Relief Committee has been buying rice and beans to the extent of 350 tons a week. These purchases have been through bids obtained in the market. They have been purchased at the lowest possible price. In addition to this, the committee is now filling a very large order for medical supplies called for by Dr. Hoff, as being immediately necessary on the island. These last named supplies will practically exhaust the amount of money at the control of the Central Porto Rican Relief Committee.

The Secretary of War has done his share and is continuing to do it. He must, however, trust to Congress to reimburse the War Department for the money which has been used in this way. It is but just to him that the people should help him all they possibly can.

WILLIAM R. CORWINE.

In his latest report, Gen. Davis, writing from San Juan, says:

You will recall that my original estimate of the number of sufferers was 250,000. The report shows a number considerably in excess of this. Every effort is being made to prevent the misuse of relief supplies and the pauperization of the people through them. Assure the people at home, that, as near as it is possible to reach that result, every bean will go to those for whom they intend it.

People at home should be made to understand that the destitute here, whom they are trying to save from starvation, are a primitive race. They live in huts of bark and thatch upon the simplest (chiefly vegetable) food, and the mildness of the climate permits of the lightest of clothing. They are a semi-starved race, the off-spring of generations of semi-starved ancestors, without vitality or reserve force, and ready to die of starvation at the least provocation. Ours is a question of food more than anything else, and the simplest kind of food; we need a thousand tons of it every week and if it comes in the shape of beans (preferably red), rice, and cod-fish or bacon, it will be most acceptable to these poor people.

These contributions have been received in aid of the Porto Rico relief work:

Prev ack	$4 633 36	Philips Mr & Mrs D	10 00
Adams, Mrs E B	1 00	Peterson, Mrs C R	1 00
Adams, Mrs Pauline	1 00	Phillipp, Mrs Wm	2 00
Adell, L T	2 50	Pittillo, Mrs	1 00
Akeson, Anna	1 00	Pollock, Mrs E A	2 00
Andrews, H G	2 00	Post, Henry	1 00
Arrowood, Mrs W S	1 00	Powelson, Lizzie	50
Au, Nettie	1 00	Pratt, Mrs M H	1 00
Baack, H J	1 00	Price, Jerry	50
Babbitt, Ailse	1 00	Provost, Mr & Mrs F S	1 00
Baker, Albert	2 00	Radcliffe, Samuel	1 00
Baker, Doras	1 00	Reamer, C J L	5 00
Barnes, Mrs D J	2 00	Reed, Mrs A C	5 00
Bates, J N	1 00	Reed, J J	5 00
Beach, Chas A	10 00	Relander, Pearl	10
Beach J M	5 00	Reseigh, J N	1 00
Beagle, Malvin	1 00	Reuling, Miss Ella	3 00
Beamer, Mrs W S	2 00	Rice, Mrs Helen C	1 00
Beggs, James	1 00	Riddle, Chas T	05
Betts, Edward	30	Rigdon, Jonathan	1 00
Betts, Mr & Mrs T G	2 50	Riley, W P	25
Betts, Wayren	20	Ringer, Isabel	1 00
Biddulph, John Thos	5 00	Ringer, Jonas	1 00
Birkemeier, F	29 75	Roberts, James S	1 00
Bispham, Mrs N C	1 00	Roberts, John S	1 00
Blair, Mrs Eliza A	1 00	Rogan, Jas F	2 00
Blair, R R	25	Rohrer, Mr & Mrs J	1 00
Blauvelt, C D	5 00	Rood, A	1 00
Bragg, Mr & Mrs F H	75	Rose, G R & C L	6 00
Brandel, Margrite	1 00	Ruch, C & family	5 00
Brandel, Millie F	25	Runyon, G L	1 50
Brandt, Annie	1 00	Sampson, Mary A	1 00
Brandt, Daniel	1 00	Sebald F	4 00
Brandt, Mrs M E	1 00	Sheldon, A	2 00
Brandt, Miss Madel'e	10 00	Sherratt, J	1 00
Brooker, M A	1 00	Shorey, Julia R	1 00
Brown, N S	50	Shove, H	5 00
Bunting, S A	1 00	Smith, Mr & Mrs C C	1 00
Burtless, Mrs A L	1 00	Smith, Mrs F F	1 00
Bush, Louisa	25	Smith, G K	5 00
Bush, Martha	25	Smith, Maria E	1 00
Butler, C F	1 00	Spillmann, G L	1 00
Gorsline, Mary F	1 00	Squires, Mrs S B	1 00
Owens & Owens	5 00	Squires, Mrs S W	2 00
Owens, Mrs W H	1 00	Squires S W	5 00
Parker, J S	1 00	Stanglland, Mabel	1 20
Patterson, D G	50	Stearns, Mrs A I	1 00
Peterson, P L	5 00	Total	$4,844 46

YOUR dealer in lamp-chimneys — what does he get for you?

You can't be an expert in chimneys; but this you can do. Insist on Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass" whichever shape you require. They are right in all those ways; and they do not break from heat, not one in a hundred. Be willing to pay a nickel more for them.

Our "Index" describes all lamps and their proper chimneys. With it you can always order the right size and shape of chimney for any lamp. We mail it FREE to any one who writes for it.

Address MACBETH, Pittsburgh, Pa.

There are none so deaf as those who won't buy

Wilson's Common Sense Ear Drums

The only scientific sound conductors. Invisible, comfortable, efficient. They fit in the ear. Doctors recommend them. Thousands testify to their perfection and to benefit derived.

Information and book of letters from many users, free.

WILSON EAR DRUM CO.,
223 Trust Bldg. Louisville, Ky.

Quilt Patterns

Every quilter should have our book of 100 Designs, containing the prettiest, queerest, scarcest, most grotesque patterns, from old log cabin to stars and puzzle designs. Revised edition; beautiful. Sent postpaid for 10c. silver or six 2c. stamps Ladies' Art Co., 806 N. B'way, B 13, St. Louis, Mo.

MAKE MONEY EVENINGS.

Men employed during the day can make money evenings giving public exhibitions with Magic Lantern or Stereopticon. Little capital needed. Write for particulars. 256 page Catalogue FREE. McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y.

It Is a Certainty That Catarrh

can be cured. You will believe it after using a sample of Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure. Mailed free. Address Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 50 Broad St., Blosser Building, Atlanta, Ga.

WANTED WOMEN! to bind dress shields at home. Steady work. Distance no disadvantage. Ask your dealer to show you Kora Shields. Kora Shields snap on waist without sewing. Send for catalogue of work. Kora Shield Co., Dept. E, 525 Broome St., New York.

CASH or NEW HAIR MATTRESS For Your OLD FEATHER BED

Write for particulars. Established 20 years. Bank reference. CANADA EXPORT COMPANY, 118 North 11th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

EVERYTHING TO EAT, WEAR AND USE

Mammoth 304-Page Catalogue of Everything you buy, FREE. Address,
JULIUS HINES & SON, Baltimore, M. D. Dept. 218.

$18.00 a Week and expenses to good parties to travel. Nearly vacant. Permanent position. Also local workers at $90 a week can find profitable employment for part time. Give references. R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore.

OPIUM MORPHINE and Liquor Habit cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Book of particulars free. Address Dr. J. E. Stephens, Dept. R. 5, Lebanon, Ohio.

$75 MONTH AND EXPENSES to good men to introduce our position [illegible]. Steady employment. Please Mfg. Co., Dept. [illegible]

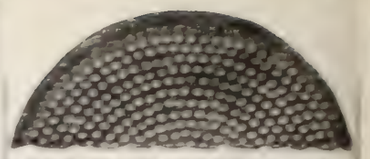
100,000 Heard the Gospel

A Great Work Accomplished in the Six Day Evangelistic Services in New York

THE

BREAKFAST ON DRINK.

Cadbury's Cocoa Essence.



Flat-Ended Teeth

Bailey's Rubber Brushes

Send 4 cts. Stamps or coin for Booklet

J. A. Bailey & Co., 11 Division St., Boston, Mass.

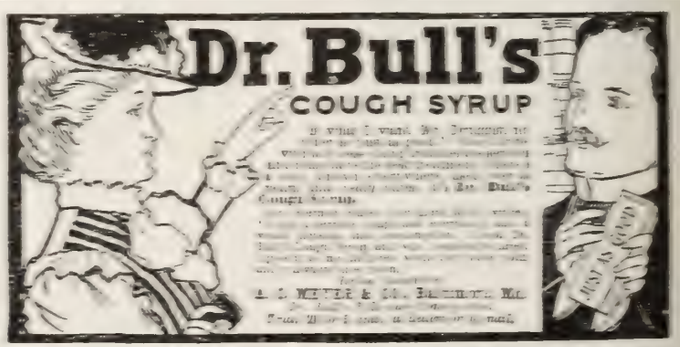
THE YOUTH'S COMPANION

The Fireside Friend is Half a Million Homes

Special Subscription Offer for 1900

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston, Mass.

Dr. Bull's COUGH SYRUP



RUPTURE CURED

SILK REMNANTS for CRAZY WORK

SAPOLIO

A Few Of Our SPECIAL BARGAINS

They are the Latest

Sent to anyone C.O.D., with privilege of examination and try on. Just give us your bust and waist measure also length of skirt.

THIS CATERPILLAR CLOTH LADIES SKIRT WILL COST YOU $6.95
THIS IMITATION ASTRICH TRIMMED WAIST WILL COST YOU $2.45
THIS GOLF WALKING SKIRT WILL COST YOU $7.35

We send free samples of all. Order either and you will be pleased.

No. 802 —Ladies' Double Breasted Jacket, made from an all-wool Caterpillar cloaking with large storm collar, has beautiful pearl buttons on front, lined throughout with Silk Romaine in cerise, blue or black. Jacket has tipped seams throughout. It is a beauty and one exceptional bargain at our price, late style and strictly man-tailored. Price only..... $6.95

No. 44 —Ladies' Skirt Waist made from all wool fine Flannel in imitation French flannel in black, dark red and navy blue, has latest style round yoke and embroidered all over as shown in cut with fine silk has the latest style collar and sleeves. This is one exceptionally fine waist and will certainly please. Price only..... $2.45

No. 666 —Ladies' Golf Walking Skirt. The late thing and the proper style, the only rational skirt manufactured, made of elegant double faced Golf Cloth in gray, black, blue and two shades of brown. Samples sent. The back of this material comes in combination of plaids, made by expert man-tailors, back being closed and finished in either Habit or French plate style with the opening in the side seam, bottom is faced with velvet and finished with ten parallel rows of stitching. This is a regular $13.00 value. Our price..... $7.35

These are all Beautiful

THIS NOVELTY HERRINGBONE COVERT CLOTH MACKINTOSH WILL COST YOU $5.75
THIS FINE ELECTRIC SEAL COLLARETTE WILL COST YOU $8.65

Our Fashion is ready. Free for the asking.

Samples sent on Application

No. 16 —Ladies' Extra Fine Electric Seal Collarette, same as above cut, lined with brown silk, 10-in. cape, long tabs with eight tails and two heads. A wonderful bargain at the price..... $8.65

No. 18 —Ladies' High Grade Novelty Mackintosh, same as cut, made from a beautiful herringbone covert cloth, double breasted single cape with velvet collar, extra fine woven bright large plaid lining. If you order this garment you will be pleased, and no one else will have one like it, for we are the exclusive manufacturers. In ordering just give us your bust measure and length down back. Price, only $5.75

Ladies' Felt Juliet —Widths, C, D & E; sizes, 2½ to 8; colors, red or black, made of finest quality piano felt with black fur trimming and fancy black braid embroidered on both colors. Price only.... $1.45 Postage 17c extra.

$1.45 BUYS IT.

GRAYDON-PALMER CO.,
Market and Madison Streets, : CHICAGO.

Giving a Measure of Love

Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for Oct. 29. Mark 12: 41-44.

WHEN a boy makes a present to his father or mother, what does it represent? It may be some trifle that they could easily buy for themselves, or it may be something utterly useless to them, but how do they regard it? They do not value it by its cost, nor by its beauty, or useful ness; the value to them is in the love that it indicates. If they learn that their son has saved his pocket-money to purchase it; if he has gone without some toy that he wanted in order that he may have the money wherewith to buy the present; or if he has done some work to earn the money that he chooses to spend in this way—any of those considerations are taken into account in their estimate of the gift. Then, on the other hand, if there are indications that the present is made with the idea that the child will gain by giving the present; if he expects that his parents will be influenced by it to grant some indulgence, or to give him some greater thing that he wants, that too would be taken into account. The acceptable gift is one that is disinterested, one that indicates love, and one that is the result of self-denial. All that we know of God teaches us to apply the same principles to our gifts to his cause. We cannot suppose that he needs them; but we are sure that he accepts them with pleasure, when the motive is right.

One of the most beautiful incidents in the Gospels is that of the woman who broke the alabaster box of ointment over Christ's feet (John 12: 3-8). The disciples knowing well the simplicity of their Master's life, were unable to under stand such an act. To Judas, especially, it seemed wasteful to use a luxury worth fifty dollars in this way. Better he thought have sold it and given the money to the poor; but Christ had no reproof to utter. We cannot imagine that he cared for the ointment, or the perfume, but he cared very much for the love that thought nothing too good for him. Everything he said about giving, has the same underlying principle. Even a cup of cold water given out of love of him, would not lose its reward. The poor widow who gives only two mites, is commended because her gift involved self-denial. In picturing the last judgment (Matt. 25: 31-46) the gifts were taken into account. They were not given to him; they were given to other men; but the motive being love of him, he appropriates them. He is beautifully considerate, too. The gift is not estimated by its intrinsic values, but by its relation to our ability. The largest gifts are not the best gifts. The pauper and the millionaire are on the same level in the matter of giving. Indeed, the poor man is able to give more generously than the millionaire, because the millionaire cannot give so as to feel the pinch of the gift, while the poor man may not be able to give one dollar without denying himself. Thus, the principle takes no account of tenths, does not worry as to whether this or that gift should be counted into the tenth, but prompts gifts of which the only measure is love of Jesus. Does a man love him with all his heart? Then he will give freely to his cause, that he may be pleased and that other men may know him. Does a man love himself? Then he will give grudgingly, lest his gift may diminish his own pleasures. There is no compulsion, but most surely the gift is a measure of the love there is to Christ in the soul.

Our New Money

The new series of greenbacks, soon to be issued by the government, will be of very different design from those now in use. The reason for the change is that the paper money now in circulation has not been satisfactory from the standpoint of convenience, as seen by bank officers and clerks. In many of the "art notes," the denominational figures are obscured in the attempt to make them decorative. In the new issue they will be large and plain, so as to render counting easy. About half the surface of the new bills will be left blank, in order to show the fibres of the paper better, and because this arrangement brings out the engraved designs more vividly and clearly. One trouble with the "art notes" is that their designs confuse the eye, making it easier for a counterfeit to pass. The new money is almost severely plain. An eagle with outspread wings is the principal ornament of the face of the one dollar silver certificate, a portrait of Lincoln being engraved beneath it. The figure 1 and the treasury seal are in bright blue, and both seal and denominational number will be of this color. The two dollar certificate has a head of Washington. The Treasury people say that the value of the portrait as a safeguard against counterfeiting lies in the fact that we are all more familiar with human faces than with other objects.

Trial Package Free!

[illegible] to me [illegible] of a simple and [illegible] them well [illegible] 10 years standing. This is an honest remedy that you, [illegible] JOHN A. SMITH [illegible] Mr. [illegible] W.

RESTFUL

and healthful foot covering for chamber, bathroom, sick room. Warm feet and foot ease are assured wearers of

PARKER'S Arctic Socks

All sizes. Rubber ring or rubber boots. Sold by leading furnishers or by mail. Latter case send for catalog free. J. H. Parker, Dept. K, 103 Bedford St., Boston. pair. 25c.

RISING SUN Stove Polish.

Made perfect by 40 years' experience—its shine is brightest, comes quickest—lasts longest—never burns red or cakes on iron.

ALSO IN PASTE FORM—"SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH."

$1. OUTFIT FREE

TO ANYONE WHO WILL ACT AS OUR AGENT.

We have given profitable and permanent employment for years to thousands of agents throughout the U. S. who are making from $5.00 to $7.00 per day selling the new and attractive Household Specialties in Tinware and Aluminum which we are constantly manufacturing and introducing. Our goods are made of the best material, are pleasing to all housewives, give liberal profits to agents and find ready sale the year 'round. They are labor-saving articles, most of which were invented by women because they were needed. To encourage the interest shown by agents now selling our goods and add good active workers to the large number already employed we have again decided to make a new free outfit offer comprising a most desirable selection from the large variety of useful and attractive Household Novelties which

WE ALONE ABSOLUTELY MANUFACTURE.

We emphasize this statement regarding the production of our goods as we believe agents should be notified there are concerns in a similar line who claim to manufacture, advertise pictures of factories, etc., which they never have had or never expect to have. Our factories are located at Buffalo, N.Y., 191 to 203 and 230 to 240 Clinton St., and 50 to 66 Union St., as to the truth of which statement we invite investigation. Read our offer and learn how to get this outfit of seven attractive articles free.

SENSIBLE SCRAPER. For cleaning kettles skillets tables sinks pots and pans. The Blades are made of finest steel nickel plated.

WIRE TABLE MAT. Useful and Ornamental. It is made of one piece steel wire, solidly tinned together. A neat stand for tea & coffee pots, hot dishes, etc.

THE WONDER. Egg Beater will beat eggs in thirty seconds. Cream Whip will whip cream in one minute.

FAVORITE CAKE SPOON.

PERFECTION MEASURING CUP. Is standard cup measure for which all receipts call. Is beaded to indicate ½ cup, ⅓ cup, ¼ cup, etc.

For stirring and mixing batter of all kinds. Is useful as a skimmer and in many other ways.

Rotary Biscuit & Cookie Cutter. For which every housewife can find daily use. Always sure to cut quick and clean. Saves time and labor.

COMBINATION DIPPER. Consists of two different useful articles combined in one. This household utensil is entirely new and sells upon its merits. It is without doubt the most useful and economical household article ever placed upon the market.

HOW WE DO IT All that is required of anyone who wishes to secure the above $1.00 outfit free is to send us name and address with 25c and this valuable outfit, together with catalogues, printed matter, instructions, etc., will be sent by express to any part of the U. S. We ask for this small deposit of 25c just one quarter the value of the goods only as a guarantee that the person asking for the outfit is willing to work for us, selling our goods and to protect the well-intending agent from those otherwise inclined. If party sending his name and address is not entirely satisfied that the goods, of which the outfit is an exact sample are first-class in every respect and will find prompt and ready sale with the housewife, he can let the outfit come back at our expense and have his deposit money refunded. When any person who receives the outfit has sent us an order amounting to $5.00 or over we will know that he is acting as agent and will allow a deduction of 25c from the amount of the order and in this way the outfit is obtained absolutely free.

HOW WE SHIP To save agents freight or express charges and to insure more quickly the receipt of goods, orders may be addressed to and shipped from any of the following six points. In writing mention Special Offer 11.

HOUSEHOLD NOVELTY WORKS,
19, 21, 23, 25 Randolph Street, - CHICAGO, ILL.

BRANCH HOUSES:
Buffalo, N. Y.; St. Louis, Mo.; Kansas City, Mo.; Denver, Col.; Seattle, Wash.

Shade Won't Work—
Because it isn't mounted on
THE IMPROVED
HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLER.
A perfect article. No tacks required. Notice name on roller when buying your shades.

NO CASH REQUIRED. 30 DAYS FREE TRIAL. WE TRUST YOU. WE PAY Freight.

$9.00 Buys a High Grade Sewing Machine with full set of best attachments. Adapted to light or heavy work. Guaranteed for 20 years. We make 35 DIFFERENT STYLES AT ALL PRICES.

$22.00 Buys a First Class Victor CHURCH OR PARLOR ORGAN. Guaranteed for 25 years. Free Trial. WE MAKE 24 STYLES AT ALL PRICES.

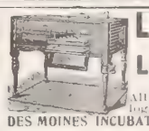
$120.00 Buys a Grand VICTOR Upright PIANO.

We also deal in all kinds of Musical Instruments. ALL CATALOGUES FREE.
VICTOR MFG CO., Dept. F51, 161-167 Plymouth Pl., Chicago, Ill.

FREE TO AGENTS

IDEAL CAKE SPOON
will stir Cake or mix Bread in ½ time. To prove its merits we will send sample FREE on receipt of 10c to pay postage, etc.
G. VINING NOVELTY CO., 60 Wabash Av., CHICAGO.

WANTED—A case of bad health that R-I-P-A-N-S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R-I-P-A-N-S on the package, and accept no substitute. R-I-P-A-N-S 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents; may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.



LIFE PRODUCERS
SUCCESSFUL INCUBATORS
LIFE PRESERVERS
SUCCESSFUL BROODERS
All about them in our 118 page catalogue. Mailed for 6 cents in stamps.
DES MOINES INCUBATOR CO., Box 71 Des Moines, Ia

"A Perfect Food,"
"Preserves Health,"
"Prolongs Life."

TRADE-MARK

BAKER'S BREAKFAST COCOA

"It is at once a delightful food and nourishing drink, and it would be well for humanity if there were more of it consumed and less tea or coffee."—The Homeopathic Recorder.

Walter Baker & Co. Limited.
DORCHESTER, MASS.
Established 1780.

Libby's
Condensed
Mince Meat

Fresh and fruity. Made from the pick of the choicest beef—deliciously seasoned. Put up in convenient packages, enough for two big pies.

Drop postal for book, "How to Make Good Things to Eat."

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago

THE AMERICAN MESSENGER.

AN ILLUSTRATED RELIGIOUS MONTHLY
25c a Year

"The American Messenger" [illegible]

Rev. Dr. T. L. Cuyler.
Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark.
Gerard B. F. Hallock, D.D.
Rev. Oliver A. Kingsbury.
Rev. H. T. Miller.
Rev. W. J. Stiles.
Frank H. Sweet.
Hezekiah Butterworth
W. Edgar Simpson.
Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson.
Mrs. Julia MacVan Wright.
Cora S. Daa.
Mrs. E. P. Allan.
Mabel Gifford.
Julia H. Johnston.
Anna B. Warner.
Mrs. Jane Ellis Joy.
Alice J. Noble

[illegible] "Fresh Air"

"The Shale Pickers."
"Philip Desmond."

Free! As a Special Inducement

FREE

Five Cents.

18 x 22 Inches in Size,

Bibles, Books, Pictures, Watches, Clocks, Silverware.

AMERICAN MESSENGER, Department 5, 150 Nassau Street, NEW YORK.

SAVE ½ Your FUEL now wasted up chimney

BY USING THE ROCHESTER RADIATOR.

COST $2.00 AND UP.

Money refunded if not satisfactory. Write for booklet on economy in heating homes.

ROCHESTER RADIATOR CO.,
15 Furnace Street, Rochester, N. Y.

9 CORDS IN 10 HOURS

BY ONE MAN. It's KING OF THE WOODS. Saves money and backache. Send for FREE illus. catalogue showing latest improvements and testimonials from thousands. Best order secures agency. Goldin Sawing Mach. Co., 55 N. Jefferson St. J20, Chicago.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES!

Buy no Incubator and pay for it before giving it a trial. The firm who will not send on trial have no faith in their machine. We do. Our PREMIER INCUBATOR ON TRIAL. Also our Catalogue of Simplicity, Catalogue and Poultry Helps, 5c.

Columbia Incubator Co., 12 Adams St., Delaware City, Del.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS.

OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS.

SCHOOL FURNITURE WORKS

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Artistic Monuments... COST NO MORE THAN PLAIN ONES in White Bronze

Marble is entirely out of date. [illegible]

White Bronze

[illegible] why not investigate it? It has been adopted for nearly one hundred public monuments. We have designs from $4.00 to $4,000.00. Write at once for free designs and information. It puts [illegible]

The Monumental Bronze Co., 710-90 Howard Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.

ONE YEAR'S FREE TRIAL

BRIGHTEN YOUR HOME WITH THE CELEBRATED CORNISH AMERICAN PIANOS & ORGANS.

SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS TO

What could be more suitable for a Birthday, Marriage, Christmas or New Year present than a

CORNISH AMERICAN PIANO OR ORGAN?

It will be a constant reminder of the giver. It will never wear out. In fact it is practically an Everlasting Gift.

WE will ship a Cornish Piano or Cornish Organ anywhere upon the distinct understanding that if it is not satisfactory to purchaser after 12 months' use, we will take it back and refund the purchase money and freight charges, adding interest at the rate of six per cent. Thousands have taken advantage of this, the original Cornish Plan, of doing business, during the time this really wonderful offer has been in force, and the immediate success of this iron clad guarantee decided us to continue it so that thousands more can participate in its object of insuring the purchaser of a Cornish Piano or a Cornish Organ against any risk. It would be impossible for us to make public this offer were it not backed up by the strongest evidence of our absolute responsibility. The Cornish American Pianos and Organs are warranted for twenty-five years and every warrant is a personal guarantee endorsed by a business reputation of fifty years, and plant and property worth over one million dollars. There are over a Quarter of a Million Satisfied Purchasers of the Cornish Pianos and Cornish Organs, and so great has been the demand for our instruments during the last twelve months that we have just completed a very extensive addition to our factories which will give us still greater facilities for the manufacture of our world famed instruments.

FOR FULL PARTICULARS OF THE WORLD FAMOUS CORNISH PLAN and for a complete description of the instruments made by us, see new Jubilee Catalogue for 1899-1900, handsomely illustrated in colors—the most comprehensive musical catalogue in the trade. The frontispiece is a masterly reproduction in fac-simile of an interesting oil painting, designed and executed for us by an eminent artist, representing "St. Cecilia and the Angelic Choir." This beautiful catalogue is sent FREE, charges prepaid and we also include our novel reference book "The Heart of the People" and our latest special offers free. The Cornish Pianos are fitted with the Cornish Patent Musical Attachment which correctly imitates the Harp, Guitar, Banjo, Mandolin, etc. This Patent can only be had in the Cornish Pianos. All Cornish Organs are fitted with the Multitone Orchestral Attachment.

A prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT of $10.00 on the list prices as quoted in our 1900 Catalogue on any CORNISH ORGAN or $20.00 on the list prices if you buy a CORNISH PIANO.

REFERENCES. Our bank, your bank, any bank, or any of the multitude of patrons who have purchased millions of dollars' worth of instruments from us during the past fifty years.

Send for particulars of the Cornish Co-operative Plan, showing how you can secure a Cornish Piano or Organ FREE.

PIANOS FROM $155.

CORNISH & CO.
ESTABLISHED 50 YEARS.
WASHINGTON, N.J.

ORGANS FROM $25.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

VOLUME 22—NUMBER 43

COPYRIGHT 1899, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 25, 1899

PRICE FIVE CENTS

RELIGIOUS DEVOTEES IN JAPAN ON A PILGRIMAGE TO FUJIYAMA, THE "HOLY MOUNTAIN"

(SEE PAGE (811)

OUR MAIL-BAG

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

At the request of many friends who have not yet been heard, the saloon money controversy will be continued until all sides to the discussion have been fairly presented, after which decision will be pronounced by competent judges of high standing.

Mrs. D. C. M., Fairfield, Neb. I have 12mo and 8vo. books, which are the same size. Are sheets of paper all the same size? If so, why are the 12mo. and 8vo. books identical in size?

No; sheets are in different "regular" sizes, according to requirements. "Octavo," as generally used by publishers, refers to a book measuring 6 x 9 1-2 in., the technical name of which would be Medium 8vo. There are also recognized in the United States, Cap 8vo., [illegible] 8vo. referred to a sheet folded in eight leaves, or books made of sheets so folded. Twelvemo. (or 12mo., as sometimes written), refers to a book measuring 4 3-4 x 7 3-4 in., the cut page or leaf measuring 4 1-2 x 7 1-2 in. It originally meant a volume having twelve leaves to a sheet, but is now always printed sixteen or thirty-two pages to a sheet.

Emma B., Wylam, Ala. Is there any Scripture which says that the prayer of the wicked availeth nothing?

See Prov. 15: 8; 28: 9 and other passages. Also the passage which declares that the prayers of the righteous availeth much (see Jas. 5: 16). By logical implication it can be read to mean that the prayers of the wicked are unavailing.

Mrs. G. T. W., Eulalie, Texas. Is it right for people who have to work hard for a living to give to the support of home preachers enough to keep their families from work? Ought not their children to work the same as ours?

There are various ways of working, besides performing actual manual labor. If a pastor (who no doubt earns every dollar of salary he receives, unless he be a rare exception), decides to economize and make personal sacrifice in order that he may educate his children, and fit them for beneficent careers, we think he should be helped instead of being made uncomfortable by adverse criticism. If, however, he is bringing up his children in idle habits criticism may be warranted; but it is not probable.

Readers of this journal who are interested in the anti-Mormon movement would do well to write to the League for Social Service, 150 East Twenty-second street, New York City, for the series of six pamphlets on the subject prepared under the superintendency of Rev. Dr. Josiah Strong. The price is ten cents.

Keene R., McCormick Seminary, Chicago, Ill. A [illegible] among friends of temperance by a ruling of Attorney-General Griggs regarding army canteens, in which he annulled an act of Congress suppressing canteens. At the time you remember, certain army officers wrote letters indorsing the canteens, which influenced the Attorney in his decision. At the meeting of the Chicago Presbytery the other day, resolutions were introduced condemning the Attorney-General and beseeching the President to interfere and sustain Congress. Can you give me any information as to the grounds of justification of the act?

We take pleasure in referring the writer of this letter, and all others interested in the canteen question, to Rev. W. F. Crafts, Reform Bureau, 210 Delaware avenue, Washington, D. C., who will supply all information.

E. W. G., Zanesville, O. 1. I am interested in city mission work here. How is mission work conducted in general? 2. How are the leaders appointed? Are they elected by a vote of those present? 3. Is the Bowery Mission an organized body? 4. Is it best to let a mission run [illegible] and supported by free-will offerings. 2. The leader may be the founder or may be chosen by a body of Christian men and women who are interested in the mission and who contribute generously to its support. The leader should have the privilege of choosing his own assistants and should be a thoroughly consecrated Christian of practical experience. 3. The Bowery Mission is an incorporated organization, and is operated under a thorough system. 4. No, organization and method are essential to success.

R. S., Burlington, N. J. No mention is made in our [illegible] the new temple. Was it not in Solomon's temple as it was in the tabernacle? What became of it?

It was put in Solomon's Temple (see II Chron. 5: 2). When that temple was destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, no mention is made of [illegible] and has bad taste. We do not think that the passages in question forbid the wearing of such ornaments, but rather that they encourage people to seek graces of character which are much better. 2. It is well to avoid offending the weak brother, but he must not rule society. There is a limit to concessions to his scruples. Some of them are very silly and it would be better to get him to take more sensible views than to yield to him.

D. D., Maine. 1. Can you tell me what became of [illegible] no vegetation grows now along the vista on [illegible] I have heard that it is so.

1. There are various legends and traditions [illegible] Pilati, an apocryphal work still extant, contains some of these. One tradition is to the effect that the Emperor Tiberius, alarmed at the universal darkness which had suddenly fallen on his empire upon the day of the crucifixion, summoned Pilate to Rome to answer for having caused it. Pilate was condemned to death, but pleaded ignorance as his excuse. His wife died at the moment of his execution. Another tradition is that Tiberius, having heard of Christ's miracles, wrote to Pilate bidding him send Jesus to Rome. Pilate was compelled to confess that he had crucified him, and was thrown into prison and committed suicide. Earth and sea refused to receive his body, and it was repeatedly cast up, finally being sunk in a pool at Lucerne, under the shadow of Mount Pilatus. Josephus, the Jewish historian (in Antiquities, 18 ch. 4: 1), states authoritatively that Pilate [illegible] Empire

[illegible] friend says:

[illegible] book then study it chapter by chapter [illegible] all, to pray that the Holy Spirit may enable you to live what you learn.

[illegible] but the hints above shown may easily and profitably be followed and amplified by any diligent Bible student.

[illegible] tained whether Christ was so baptized?

King James was not so baptized, but his example is of no value. You do not suppose that he had anything to do with [illegible] bears his name, do you? A Baptist would tell you that Christ [illegible] would tell you that he was not. No one knows, for certain. If you place any value on the mode of baptism, by all means obey [illegible] but see to it that you seek above all things, the baptism of the [illegible] greater moment.

[illegible] plant, or to learn it by deriving an electrical engineering educa[illegible]

If you have the opportunity, we would strongly advise you to get the practical training afforded in an engineering college as a basis for the actual work to come later. You will then have a better chance to rise in your chosen profession than if you began without the prelim nary training.

[illegible] States to foreign missions last year, and which denomination gave most?

The total amount given was $5,158,114. The Methodist Episcopal Church (North and South), stands at the head, with $1,501,167. Next is the Presbyterian (North and South), with $981,580. Next, the Baptists (North and South), with $906,723. Then the Congregationalists with $687,200. The Protestant Episcopal Church next with $280,969.

THE MOST FAMOUS LINE OF RAILROADING IN THE WORLD—LOOP ABOVE GEORGETOWN, COLO.

Our picture presents a striking illustration of the marvels of American railroad engineering. In the mountainous regions of the West, where natural difficulties are exceptionally great, these triumphs are particularly noticeable. A line approaching a valley from a high elevation must often wind back and forth upon itself, now on ledges cut in the rock, again on remarkable trestle-work and into mysterious tunnels, until its pathway resembles the trail of a great serpent, and, as is the case with the loop in our picture, many miles of railroad are required to cover one mile of distance.

Mrs. C. A. R., Winne, Nev. We do not discuss local or sectional politics.

Mrs. Y., Mineral Wells, Tex. Why not bring it to the attention of the proper parties?

Miss Sophia E. H., Busnnell, Ill. Write to Secretary, Y. M. C. A., Manila, Philippines.

James L., New Kensington, Pa. We do not consider the apprehensions well founded.

L. E. S., Elkhana, Pa. Address Mr. Cutter, Fulton Street Prayer Meeting, New York.

Constant Reader, Lancaster, Pa. There is no reason why you should not join the church.

N. L. B., Sing Sing, N. Y. In our issue of Oct. 4, the debt of France should have read $0,250,000,000.

Temperance, Pa. 1. Address National Temper[illegible] [illegible] Press Club, New York.

Subscriber, Shelbyville, Ind. What you ask would occupy more space than we can afford to give. See a good American encyclopedia.

P. B., Delphos, O. The lecturer was wholly misinformed. We hold no such views, and he has evidently misunderstood what he read.

Several Inquirers. You are still in time for sending signatures to the Mammoth Memorial to the Czar. All should write their names in ink.

Reader, Brooklyn, N. Y. Write to the Civil Service Bureau, Washington, D. C., or apply to the Congressman from your district.

S. L. R., Oswego, N. Y. Regarding all contributions of clothing for Porto Rican sufferers write to Porto Rico Relief Committee, Lite Building, New York.

Harass, Fultonville, N. Y. 1. If avenues of promotion are absolutely closed, the wisest course is to await an opportunity for making a favorable change. 2. Such a person is clearly unfitted for the position, which is one that ought to be a model and an encouragement to others.

---

the ark. It may have been destroyed with the temple, or, as many believe, it was hidden by the priests before the temple was taken, and as those who knew its hiding-place were killed, it was never found. It is not likely that Nebuchadnezzar carried it to Babylon with the gold flagons, etc. If he had, it would have been mentioned. It has never been found. The Jews have a tradition that the test by which their expected Messiah will be known, is his ability to disclose the hiding-place of the ark.

Christian, Fulton, N. Y. 1. In view of the Apostolic instructions as to dress, (I. Timothy 2: 9 and I. Peter 3: 3), are not Christian ladies doing wrong in wearing gold ornaments? 2. Is it not a duty in order to avoid offending our weak brother, who believes it is wrong to wear them to discard all such ornaments?

1. Under the old dispensation, minute instructions were given as to dress, the color, the fringes, etc. Both Peter and Paul, in the passages you quote, seem to be concerned, as Christ was, rather with the heart than the garments. The ornaments they desired to see were piety, a loving, quiet spirit, and earnest devotion to the Lord. They did not wish people to give their minds to outward adornment. It was not so much the gold ornaments that they objected to, as the spirit which would lead the women to put them on.

Reader, Newbern, Va. I am writing a synopsis of the history of Germany and wish to know in about what century the colors black, red and gold were adopted for the German national flag, when they were discarded, and when the present national colors were adopted? Also, what was the design of the ancient German flag?

We are indebted to Mr. Arthur List, of New York city, for the information below, in reply to "Reader's" letter.

Black, red and gold were the colors of the official German flag for a short time. These colors had been originally used for the flag of the Burschenschatten only, and when in 1832 the Burschenschaften were persecuted, their colors came into disfavor. But the importance they received through this, was the reason that the liberal German patriots recognized black, red and gold as the national colors and that standard led them to victory in the movement of 1848. The two-headed imperial eagle with the inscription "Deutscher Bund" was accepted as the coat-of-arms for the "Bund" by act of Parliament March 9th, 1848, and the colors, black, red and gold became the colors of the "Bund." This period of the German colors came to an end when the "Bund" was dissolved. In some states even the complained against him to Vitellius, president of Syria, who sent Pilate to Rome to answer to Caligula, the successor of Tiberius, and he soon afterward killed himself. The scene of this act is uncertain. 2. No; the immediate vicinity is now and always has been rocky and sterile.

Boer Hosts Invade Natal

Cape Colony also Invaded—Fierce Fighting with the British Garrison at Mafeking —Kimberley Besieged—Passes and Border Towns Occupied by the Boers

WAR between Great Britain and the Transvaal Republic has begun in earnest. All diplomatic negotiations terminated with the promulgation of an ultimatum by the Boer government, demanding that the British forces on the border be withdrawn, and that the transportation of troops from England be immediately suspended. Even in this final message, which called for an immediate answer, there was a last word in favor of a peaceful settlement of the quarrel by arbitration; but the strain to which both sides had been subjected was now too severe to be relaxed. Great Britain's reply was a curt rejection of the Boer ultimatum, which it treated as a practical proclamation of hostilities. Immediately thereafter formal declarations of war were issued, first by the Transvaal, next by Her Majesty's government, and lastly by the Orange Free State, the Transvaal's ally, and hostile operations along the border quickly followed.

PRESIDENT STEYN
OF THE ORANGE FREE STATE

As far as can be learned, in the absence of accurate telegraphic information, the situation at the opening of hostilities was as follows: The forces of the Boers were under several generals, the main body, under Gen. Joubert, being in "laager" in a valley of the Drakensberg mountains, and numbering probably 8,000. Other detachments, advantageously posted in the range and commanding the passes, brought up the Transvaal aggregate to some 20,000 troops, chiefly cavalry and artillery. The troops of the Orange Free State—about 15,000, under Gen. Cronje, but divided into three separate commands—were in readiness to cross the frontier into Natal simultaneously with the Boer movement, and also to operate against Cape Colony and the British Protectorate in Bechuanaland.

The main body of the British in Natal, 15,000 strong, are encamped at Ladysmith, a central and strongly fortified position, the Commander-in-Chief being Gen. Sir George Stewart White, with Gen. Sir William Penn Symons and Gen. Sir Archibald Hunter as aids in the conduct of the campaign. This force, which has 32 guns, is steadily being augmented by the fresh troops arriving at Durban on transports. Owing to the disparity of numbers between the Boers and British, the latter are conducting a strictly defensive campaign, awaiting the arrival of Gen. Sir Redvers Buller and the great army now on the way from England.

On the other hand, the Boer compaign is a thoroughly aggressive one. It is evident that the plans of the allied burgher armies have been well laid and are being skilfully and expeditiously executed. They are apparently operating in three great divisions, which are moving in gradually converging lines from widely separated passes in the Drakensberg to the heart of Natal. Generals Joubert and Cronje have doubtless carefully planned, long before the war opened, the movements which have given them within a week the control of all the leading frontier passes, and the occupation of several of the border towns and villages which may later prove to be strategically important. They are reported to have cut off all railway communications around Kimberly, the centre of the great diamond industry, which Cecil Rhodes, who chose it as his place of refuge during the war, declared to be "as safe as Piccadilly," and the present indications point to an early attack on that city by the Free State Boers in force.

BRITISH ARTILLERY IN SOUTH AFRICA

Railroad and telegraphic communication on the west and southwest borders of Natal have been rendered useless, and Boer pickets have penetrated so far eastward in Natal that it is believed their plans may contemplate cutting railroad connections between Durban and the British camp at Ladysmith, thus preventing reinforcements from coming to General White's army. With the British, everything now depends upon the speedy arrival of these reinforcements, their present forces being wholly inadequate for an aggressive movement or to protect the border from further invasion. While the position cannot in any sense be called critical, it is at least serious, and the remarkable activity displayed by the Boer allies promises to still further increase the difficulties of the problem which the famous English general will have to face when he arrives, by which time the allies may have secured the strong strategic position in Natal for which they are now apparently striving.

Thus far the fighting, except in a single locality, has been of the nature of mere skirmishes or exchanges of shots between the outposts. At the British frontier post of Mafeking, Lieut.-Col. Baden-Powell and a small force of artillery and cavalry had entrenched themselves and prepared for a Boer attack which is said to have been repeatedly renewed and repulsed with considerable loss on either side. The exact strength of Baden-Powell's force is not known, but is probably little short of 1,200, while the attacking troops are over 3,500 in number. An effort will be made to send through a relief column to the beleaguered garrison.

A SCENE IN WEST STREET, DURBAN

In the north, the Transvaal troops have occupied Laing's Nek, Ingogo, Newcastle, Spitzkop, Rotha's Pass, Van Reenen's Pass, and a few stations along the British side of the frontier. Their advance is characterized by a strict regard for the lives and property of non-combatants, and the peaceful residents of towns and villages in the path of the army are notified that they will not be molested and that all forage and supplies needed by the Boers will be paid for. Panic has thus been averted. No attempt has been made by the burghers to force a pitched battle with the British, although the latter have sent out a strong flying column from Ladysmith westward in the direction of Van Reenen's Pass expecting an encounter.

Naturally, the greatest interest, at this stage of the war, centres around Mafeking, where the little garrison may ere this have surrendered or been crushed by General Cronje's superior forces and heavier artillery. An armed train carrying fifteen men, two field guns and a load of ammunition, and proceeding from Vryburg to Mafeking, was wrecked by the Boers who tore up the tracks, and shelled the cars. The fate of the military convoy is uncertain. Kimberley is now besieged by over 6,000 burghers, and is surrounded on all sides, the Boer commanders having expressed a determination to capture Cecil Rhodes, dead or alive, as he is held to be primarily responsible for the war. Should an attack in force be made on Kimberley soon, it would probably succeed, as reinforcements could not reach it in time, all railroad communications being destroyed and the strongest British military station, Modder Bridge, being twenty-five miles distant from the south.

TRANSPORTS AND FREIGHTERS AT DURBAN HARBOR

TRANSVAAL ARTILLERY PRACTICING

The young American author of "Oom Paul's People," Mr. Howard C. Hillegas, just returned from the Transvaal, informs THE CHRISTIAN HERALD that when in their camps the Boers hold religious festivals every morning and night, believing that their cause is supported by the Almighty. "The Lord directs every bullet to go to the enemy's heart" was the recent remark of President Kruger.

Missionary interests during the conflict are being looked after by the American Consul, Mr. Macrum, who has also undertaken to represent British diplomatic interests at Pretoria. There are comparatively few foreign missions in the Transvaal, the majority of the South African stations being located in the outlying territories of Rhodesia, but there are several mission churches in the two republics attended by blacks.

NOTES OF THE WAR

It is reported that the Boer government has offered to pay $25,000 for Cecil Rhodes, "dead or alive."

Gen. Sir Redvers Buller is said to have remarked before leaving England that he hoped to "eat his Christmas dinner in Pretoria."

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT.

. . . The Strong Swimmer . . .

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text, Isaiah 25 : 11: . . . . . "He shall spread forth his hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands."

IN the summer season, multitudes of people wade into the ponds and lakes and rivers and seas, to dive or float or swim. In a world the most of which is water, all men and women should learn to swim. Some of you have learned the side stroke, introduced by George Pewters in 1850, each stroke of that kind carrying the swimmer a distance of six feet, and some of you may use the overhand stroke, invented by Gardener, the expert who by it won the 500 yard championship in Manchester in 1862, the swimmer by that stroke carrying his arm in the air for a more lengthened reach, and some of you may tread the water as though you had been made to walk the sea, but most of you usually take what is called the breast-stroke, placing the hands with the backs upward, about five inches under the water, the inside of the wrists touching the breast, then pushing the arms forward coincident with the stroke of the feet struck out to the greatest width possible, and you thus unconsciously illustrate the meaning of my text: "He shall spread forth his hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim."

The fisherman seeks out unfrequented nooks. You stand all day on the bank of a river in the broiling sun, and fling out your line, and catch nothing, while an expert angler breaks through the jungle and goes by the shadow of the solitary rock, and, in a place where no fisherman has been for ten years, throws out his line and comes home at night, his face shining and his basket full. I do not know why we ministers of the Gospel need always be fishing in the same stream, and preaching from the same texts that other people preach from. I cannot understand the policy of the minister who, in Blackfriars, London, Eng., every week for thirty years preached from the Epistle to the Hebrews. It is an exhilaration to me when I come across a theme which I feel no one else has treated: and my text is one of that kind. There are paths in God's Word that are well beaten by Christian feet. When men want to quote Scripture, they quote the old passages that everyone has heard. When they want a chapter read, they read a chapter that all the other people have been reading, so that the church to-day is ignorant of three-fourths of the Bible.

You go into the Louvre at Paris. You confine yourself to one corridor of that opulent gallery of paintings. As you come out your friend says to you, "Did you see that Rembrandt?" "No." "Did you see that Rubens?" "No." "Did you see that Titian?" "No." "Did you see that Raphael?" "No." "Well," says your friend, "then you did not see the Louvre." Now, my friends, I think we are too much apt to confine ourselves to one of the great corridors of Scripture truth, and so much so that there is not one person out of a million who has ever noticed the all-suggestive and powerful picture in the words of my text.

This text represents God as a strong swimmer, striking out to push down iniquity and save the souls of men. "He shall spread forth his hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim." The figure is bold and many-sided. Most of you know how to swim. Some of you learned it in the city school, where this art is taught: some of you in boyhood, in the river near your father's house: some of you since you came to manhood or womanhood, while summering on the beach of the sea. It is a good thing to know how to swim, not only for yourself, but because you will, after a while, perhaps, have to help others.

I do not know anything more stirring or sublime than to see some man like Norman McKenzie leaping from the ship Madras into the sea to save Charles Turner, who had dropped from the royal yard while trying to loosen the sail, bringing him back to the deck amid the huzzas of the passengers and crew. If a man has not enthusiasm enough to cheer in such circumstances, he deserves himself to drop into the sea and have no one help him. The Royal Humane Society of England was established in 1774, its object to applaud and reward those who should pluck up life from the deep. Any one who has performed such a deed of daring has all the particulars of that bravery recorded in a public record, and on his breast a medal done in blue and gold and bronze, anchor and monogram and inscription, telling to future generations the bravery of the man or woman who saved some one from drowning. But if it is such a worthy thing to save a body from the deep, I ask you if it is not a worthier thing to save an immortal soul? And you shall see, this hour, the Son of God step forth for this achievement. "He shall spread forth his hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim."

In order to understand the full force of this figure, you need to realize that our race is in a sinking condition. You sometimes hear people talking of what they consider the most beautiful words in our language. One man says it is "home," another man says it is the word "mother," another says it is the word "Jesus": but I tell you the bitterest word in all our language, the word most angry and baleful, the word saturated with the most trouble, the word that accounts for all the loathsomeness and the pang and the outrage and the harrowing: and that word is "sin." You spell it with three letters, and yet those three letters describe the circumference and pierce the diameter of everything bad in the universe. Sin is a sibilant word. You cannot pronounce it without giving the siss of the flame or the hiss of the serpent. Sin! and then if you add three letters to that word it describes every one of us by nature—sinner. We have outraged the law of God, not occasionally, or now and then, but perpetually. The Bible declares it. Hark! It thunders two claps: "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." What the Bible says, our own conscience affirms.

Sin is leprosy, sin is paralysis, sin is a consumption, sin is pollution, sin is death. Give it a fair chance, and it will swamp you and me, body, mind, and soul, forever. In this world it only gives a faint intimation of its virulence. You see a patient in the first stages of typhoid fever. The cheek is somewhat flushed, the hands somewhat hot, preceded by a slight chill. "Why," you say, "typhoid fever does not seem to be much of a disease." But wait until the patient has been six weeks under it, and all his energies have been wrung out, and he is too weak to lift his little finger, and his intellect gone, then you see the full havoc of the disease. Now sin in this world is an ailment which is only in its first stages: but let it get under full way and it is an all consuming typhoid. Oh, if we could see our unpardoned sins as God sees them, our teeth would chatter and our knees would knock together, and our respiration would be choked, and our heart would break. If your sins are unforgiven they are bearing down on you and you are sinking—sinking away from happiness, sinking away from God, sinking away from everything that is good and blessed.

Then what do we want? A swimmer! A strong swimmer! A swift swimmer! And, blessed be God! in my text we have him announced. "He shall spread forth his hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth stretcheth forth his hands to swim." You have noticed that when a swimmer goes to rescue anyone he puts off his heavy apparel. He must not have any such impediment about him if he is going to do this great deed. And when Christ stepped forth to save us he shook off the sandals of heaven, and his feet were free, and then he stepped down into the wave of our transgressions, and it came up over his wounded feet, and it came above the spear-stab in his side—aye, it dashed to the lacerated temple, the high-water mark of his anguish. Then, rising above the flood, "He stretched forth his hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim."

If you have ever watched a swimmer, you notice that his whole body is brought into play. The arms are flexed, the hands drive the water back, the knees are active, the head is thrown back to escape strangulation, the whole body is in propulsion. And when Christ sprang into the deep to save us, he threw his entire nature into it—all his godhead, his omniscience, his goodness, his love, his omnipotence—head, heart, eyes, hands, feet. We were far out on the sea, and so deep down in the waves, and so far out from the shore, that nothing short of an entire God could save us. Christ leaped out for our rescue, saying, "Lo! I come to do thy will," and all the surges of human and satanic hate beat against him, and those who watched him from the gates of heaven feared he would go down under the wave, and instead of saving others would himself perish; but, putting his breast to the foam, and shaking the surf from his locks, he came on and on, until he is now within the reach of every one here. Eye omniscient, heart infinite, arm omnipotent! Mighty to save, even unto the uttermost.

If you have lived much by the water, you notice also that if any one is going out to the rescue of the drowning he must be independent, self-reliant, able to go alone. There may be a time when he must spring out to save one, and he cannot get a life-boat, and if he goes out and has not strength enough to bear himself up, and bear another up, he will sink, and instead of dragging one corpse out of the billows you will have two to drag out. When Christ sprang out into the sea to deliver us, he had no life-buoy. His Father did not help him. Alone in the wine press! Alone in the pang! Alone in the darkness! Alone on the mountain! Alone in the sea! Oh, if he saves us he shall have all the credit, for "there was none to help." No oar! No wing! No ladder! When Nathaniel Lyon fell in the battle charge in front of his troops, he had a whole army to cheer him. When Marshal Ney sprang into the contest and plunged in the spurs till the horse's flanks spurted blood, all France applauded him. But Jesus alone! "Of the people there was none to help." "All forsook him and fled." Oh, it was not a flotilla that sailed down and saved us. It was not a cluster of gondolas that came over the wave. It was one Person independent and alone, "spreading out his hands among us as a swimmer spreadeth forth his hands to swim!"

Behold, then, the spectacle of a drowning soul and Christ the swimmer. I believe it was in 1848, when there were six English soldiers of the Fifth Fusiliers who were hanging to a capsized boat—a boat that had been upset by a squall three miles from shore. It was in the night, but one man swam mightily for the beach, guided by the dark mountains that lifted their top through the night. He came to the beach. He found a shoreman that consented to go with him and save the other men, and they put out. It was some time before they could find the place where the men were, but after awhile they heard their cry: "Help, help!" and they bore down to them, and they saved them and brought them to shore. Oh that this moment our cry might be lifted long, loud, and shrill, till Christ the swimmer shall come and take us lest we drop a thousand fathoms under!

The world has had strong swimmers [illegible] greatest among them Matthew Webb, [illegible] He leaped from the deck of the Ru[illegible] the Channel, [illegible] wonder the passengers subscribed for him a large reward and the Royal Humane Society of London decorated him with honors. A mighty swimmer was he. By [illegible] wall Pier to Gravesend Pier, eighteen miles, and from Dover to Calais, thirty-[illegible] drowned at last in our Niagara's whirlpool. But the strong swimmer of my text put out alone to swim a wrathier sea and for vaster distance, even from world to world, to save us who were swamped in guilt and woe, and brought us to the shore of safety, although he at last went down into the whirlpool of human and [illegible]

New modes have been invented for res-[illegible] drowning soul. In 1785 Lionel Lukin, a London coach-builder, fitted up a Norway yawl as a life-boat and called it the Unsubmergible, and that has been improved upon, until from all the coasts of the round world perfect life-boats are ready to put out for the relief of marine disasters. In sixteen years the French Society [illegible] life-boats and gun apparatus, saved 2,129 lives. The German Association for the Rescue of Life from Shipwreck, the [illegible] National Life-boat Institution and the United States Life-saving Service have done a work beyond the power of statistics to commemorate. What rocket-lines and sling life-buoys and tally-boards and mortars and hammocks and cork mattresses and life-saving stations filled with machinery for saving the bodies of the drowning! But let me here and now make it plain that there has been no new way invented for the moral and eternal rescue of a struggling soul. Five hundred attempts at such contrivance have been made, but all of them dead failures. Hear it! "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" than the name of Jesus. The mighty swimmer of my text comes down off the beach of heaven and through the breakers, comes buffeted and bruised, and reddening the waves from his own lacerations, he cries: "Lay hold of my arm! Put your head on my shoulder! Hear the beating of my loving heart. Be ye saved, for I am God, and there is no other!"

I want to persuade you to lay hold of this strong swimmer. "No," you say: "it is always disastrous for a drowning man to lay hold of a swimmer." There is not a river or lake but has a calamity resultant from the fact that when a strong swimmer went out to save a sinking [illegible] the drowning man clutched him, threw his arms around him, pinioned his [illegible] and they both went down together. When you are saving a man in the water, you do not want to come up by his face: you want to come up by his back. You do not want him to hold you, while you take hold of him. But, blessed be God! Jesus Christ is so strong a swimmer, he comes not to our back, but to our face, and he asks us to throw around him the arms of our love, and then promises to take us to the beach: and he will do it. Do not trust that plank of good works. Do not trust that shivered spar of your own righteousness. Christ only can give you safe transportation. Turn your face upon him, as the dying martyr did in olden times when he cried out: "None but Christ! None but Christ!" Jesus has taken millions to the land, and he is willing to take you there. Oh, what hardness to thrust him back, when he has been swimming all the way from the throne of God, where you are now, and is ready to swim all the way back again, taking your redeemed spirit.

I have sometimes thought what a spectacle the ocean bed will present when in the last day the water is all drawn off. It will be a line of wrecks from beach to beach. There is where the harpooners went down. There is where the line of battle-ships went down. There is where the merchantmen went down. There is where the steamers went down—a long line of wrecks from beach to beach.

What a spectacle in the last day, when the water is drawn off! But oh, how much more solemn if we had an eye to see the spiritual wrecks and the places where they foundered. You would find thousands along our roads and streets. Christ came down in their awful catastrophe, putting out for their souls, "spreading forth his hands as a swimmer spreadeth forth his hands to swim;" but they thrust him in the sore heart, and they smote his fair cheek and the storm and darkness swallowed them up. I ask you to lay hold of this Christ and lay hold of him now. You will sink without him. From horizon to horizon not one sail in sight. Only one strong swimmer, with head flung back and arms outspread.

I hear many saying, "Well, I would like to be a Christian. I am going to work to become a Christian." My brother, you begin wrong. When a man is drowning, and a strong swimmer comes out to help him, he says to him: "Now be quiet. Put your arm on my arm or on my shoulder, but don't struggle, don't try to help yourself, and I'll take you ashore. The more you struggle and the more you try to help yourself, the more you impede me. Now be quiet, and I'll take you ashore." When Christ, the strong swimmer, comes out to save a soul, the sinner says: "That's right. I am glad to see Christ, and I am going to help him in the work of my redemption. I am going to pray more, and that will help him; and I am going to weep extravagantly over my sins, and that will help him." No, it will not. Stop your doing. Christ will do all or none. You cannot lift an ounce, you cannot move an inch, in this matter of your redemption.

This is the difficulty which keeps thousands of souls out of the kingdom of heaven. It is because they cannot consent to let Jesus Christ begin and complete the work of their redemption. "Why," you say, "then is there nothing for me to do?" Only one thing have you to do, and that is to lay hold of Christ and let him achieve your salvation, and achieve it all. I do not know whether I make the matter plain or not. I simply want to show you that a man cannot save himself, but that the Almighty Son of God can do it, and will do it if you ask him. Oh, fling your two arms — the arm of your trust and the arm of your love — around this omnipotent swimmer of the Cross.

Have you ever stood by and seen some one under process of resuscitation after long submergence? The strong swimmer has put him on the beach after a struggle in the waters. To excite breathing in the almost lifeless body what manipulation, what friction of the cold limbs, what artificial movement of the lungs, what breath of the rescuer blown into the mouth of the rescued. And when breathing begins, and after awhile the slight respiration becomes the deep sigh, and the eyes open, and the blue lips take on a smile, what rejoicing, what clapping of hands all up and down the beach, what congratulation for the strong swimmer and for all who helped in the restoration! What shouting of "He lives! He lives!" Like this is the gladness when a soul that has been submerged in sin and sorrow is "coming to." What desire on the part of all to help, and, when under the breath of God, and under the manipulation by the wounded hands of Christ, the life-eternal of the soul begins to show itself—all through the ranks of spectators, terrestrial and celestial, goes the cry "He lives! Rejoice, for the dead is alive again!" May the living Christ this moment put out for your rescue, "spreading his hands in the midst of you, as a swimmer spreadeth his hands to swim!"

An Uplift for Chicago's Toilers

The Social Settlement at Gad's Hill, and what it is Accomplishing

A GROUP OF WEE KINDERGARTEN TOTS

GAD'S Hill Social Settlement, Twenty-second and Robey streets, Chicago, presents an almost phenomenal instance of growth along a line of humanitarian activity which has become popular and effective in many cities. The settlement occupies the whole building in which the work began in 1898, meetings of twenty-four clubs and classes, with the kindergarten, constituting the regular weekly programme, while a fresh-air work on lines somewhat similar to that of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD at Nyack, is among its summer agencies for helping the poor. Gad's Hill, as our readers familiar with Chicago are aware, is a great manufacturing district, the site of extensive lumber-yards, and hence the abode of a vast population of laboring people. To the industrious and thrifty, as well as to the destitute and erring, the opportunities afforded by the Settlement have been a great boon.

THE BUILDING WHERE THE WORK IS CONDUCTED

While the settlement is on strictly non-sectarian lines, religious influence and teaching are marked characteristics, and the Sunday afternoon Gospel song-service is one of the most attractive features. The kindergarten is a very large one, and through its system of study and play, furnishes pleasure and helpfulness to many little lives which would otherwise lack such sunshine. The weekly Mothers' Meeting, with its varied programme of short talks on subjects helpful to mothers—the home, art and travel—varied with a musical entertainment; a social hour; a short trip to the Art Institute or other place of interest, brings not only a delightful rest time to many weary hands, but supplies opportunities for improvement to a class sometimes overlooked in these days when child-culture is absorbing—as it should—such a tremendous amount of public attention. The gymnasium, a feature "after a boy's own heart," draws the boys and young men together in numerous evening clubs under the careful supervision of conscientious directors; and after the business and literary hour is over, the time is devoted to physical training. The workers believe in the boys, and are giving earnest attention to ways and means of helping them to noble ideals of industry, temperance, and to a just conception of the responsibilities of American citizenship.

The girls' kitchengarden is as picturesque and interesting as possible. Its object is to teach the girls the rudiments of housework in a bright, cheerful way, by showing them the easiest and best methods of doing things that make home attractive and comfortable. Fire-building, care of the stove, cooking, table-setting, dish-washing, bed-making, dusting, laundry, etc., comprises the very excellent curriculum. The girls' sewing class is likewise effective in imparting a practical knowledge of a commonplace but most helpful art. For both boys and girls there are classes in elocution, drawing and modeling, chorus singing and instrumental music. The Loyal Legion has many boy and girl members who meet during the week for scientific study of intemperance, its effects and prevention. Acquaintance with parents, coming about through relationship with the boys and girls, make the workers welcome visitors in the homes of the neighborhood; many calls are made, and flowers and reading matter distributed weekly. Medical attendance is provided free to many families, a nurse secured in needy cases, and food and clothing sent to those in distress. The penny savings bank is fast teaching the boys and girls lessons which will be effective in guarding them against extremes which require charitable aid. During the past year 500 subscribers deposited a large sum. The Young Ladies' Club, Men's Club, Mandolin Club, and various other clubs and classes organized for the object of combined pleasure and improvement, are delightful social features.

The financial support of the Settlement is dependant upon the voluntary contributions of a few friends, chiefly among business men and philanthropic citizens of the community who realize that the fitting of a boy for good citizenship is a wiser and cheaper task for municipality and State than caring for him later as a criminal.

This flourishing institution had a modest beginning in the work of one woman, who found, in helping the poor and unfortunate, balm for a great sorrow. Mrs. E. P. Martin, President of the Settlement, married at twenty, became a widow at twenty-three, through an accident which killed her husband, and upon recovering from the shock, began her work, especially seeking to help childhood and youth, through education along temperance, industrial, educational and patriotic lines. The first meetings were held at Lincoln Street M. E. Church. Her earliest co-worker, the present Secretary of the Association, was Mrs. Hettie Peary French, who began a similar ministry in St. Pius' Catholic Church. Thus a Protestant and Romanist, friends from childhood, labored with one mind and a common purpose to uplift humanity.

Their work enlarged so rapidly that they had to rent a building in which meetings could be held every day in the week, and the lumbermen and factory owners, recognizing the value of this work and seeing that it gave them an opportunity of helping their employees and the community, responded liberally. The work being Christian but non-sectarian, patriotic but non-partisan, appealed to all, offending none, and full public sympathy has been with it from the start. The W. C. T. U. and the Young People's C. T. U. were the organizations under whose auspices the first rooms were rented, the first clubs and classes formed and the government charter obtained, the object, as then stated, being "to make a pleasant meeting place for young men, many of whom live in boarding houses in this manufacturing district, and for the boys of this thickly settled section."

HOUSEWIFELY LESSONS IN THE KITCHENGARDEN CLASS

AN AUTUMNAL OUTING FOR THE SETTLEMENT BOYS

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Nehemiah's Prayer

S. S. Lesson for Nov. 5. Neh., 1: 1-11. Golden Text, Neh., 1: 11.

BY MRS. M. BAXTER

THE failure of God's people in Babylon to return as a nation from the land of their captivity, in spite of the free permission granted to them by King Cyrus: the fact that only a comparatively small number found themselves strangers in "the city of confusion" (Isa. 24: 10): the city which had been from its commencement the centre of rebellion against God, shows how little the Jews, as a people, understood their calling. And they never will until they shall "look on him whom they have pierced" (Zech. 12: 12), and understand how they have sinned in rejecting the King of the Jews, who would have fulfilled to them the numberless promises made to them in Old Testament Scriptures of their final pre-eminence, wealth, and power, when Christ shall indeed "sit upon" the throne of his father David, and the kingdom shall indeed be "restored to Israel." The hindrance was, and still is, the unwillingness of the people to recognize their sin. God cannot pass over sin as though it were not. If he reasons with his creature man, it must first be on the question of sin. Until this is settled and put away, through the one sacrifice of Jesus Christ, God must still be a stranger to those whom he loves.

There were, in all the times of such declension in Israel, some who understood, and who took God's side. These men were always ready to confess the sin of their people. Moses, Joshua, David, Elijah, Daniel, and Ezra, too, were men who confessed their sins, and the sin of their people. Ezra's prayer (Ezra 10) is one long, humble, confession, especially of the present form of sin among the people—the lack of separation from the heathen. He took the lowest place, and said, "I am ashamed, and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God, for our iniquities are increased over our head, and our guiltiness is grown unto the heavens"; and he acknowledges the justice of all God's judgments upon them as a people. Then he recognizes just what the return from captivity meant: "Now for a little moment grace hath been showed from the Lord our God to leave us a remnant to escape, to give us a nail in his holy place, that our Lord may lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage." It was, in fact, through the return of this remnant from the captivity that there was found when Christ was born a Zacharias and Elizabeth, a John the Baptist, a Simeon, an Anna, a little group which spake of redemption in Jerusalem, and who, amid the universal rejection, recognized Jesus as the Messiah.

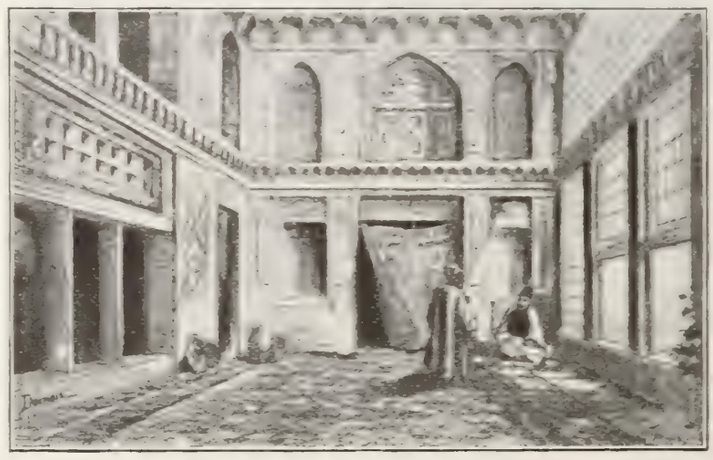
Ezra's ministry prepared the way for Nehemiah's. Ezra was still living. God had greatly used him. The temple had been rebuilt, the sacrifices restored, and a witness for God had been again set up in the land of his fathers. But the condition of the people was far from what it should have been. The prophet Haggai had had a burden from the Lord about the selfishness, love of ease and earthly gain, which characterized the people of the Lord (Hag. 1: 6–11); and the consequence was that God had again allowed judgment to fall upon his people.

Nehemiah was cup-bearer to King Artaxerxes, and in the twentieth year of his reign news came through Hanani, one of the Jews who had recently come from Jerusalem, that the remnant that were left of the captivity there were in great affliction and reproach: the wall of Jerusalem, also, was broken down, and the gates burned with fire.

Had God forgotten to be gracious? Or had his people's unfaithfulness brought down his anger upon them? In any case, Nehemiah, the man of God, found his heart stirred to its depths. He had a government position, was in comfort, honor, and respect among the Jews and their conquerors, and he was honored and respected at court. But all this could avail him nothing while his people were in trouble. The cause of God and his people lay near to his heart. "When I heard these words, I sat down and wept and mourned certain days, and I fasted and prayed before the God of heaven." God had prepared the heart of this man; he was not absorbed with his own things; there was room in his heart for the afflictions of his people. It is only unselfish people whom God can use as his reformers. And such were rare in the Old Testament times! Alas, alas! although it is written for us in these days, "Christ died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them and rose again" (II. Cor. 5: 15), yet how selfishness prevails even among Christians, and how [illegible] God takes precedence of every personal consideration!

Nehemiah took the matter to the Lord; his heart was burdened, and he unburdened it to him who alone could understand, who alone could help. He did not first think of some plan how he might influence the king and so obtain help for his people. He believed from his heart that God was to be trusted, and thus he dealt first-hand with him. And Nehemiah did not make request without first of all confessing sin. This is the true foundation for all prayer. Unless we take our true place, confessing that we are utterly unworthy, having in ourselves no rightful claim for anything, we come to God in a character which does not belong to us. In the first place, he remembered to whom he was speaking: "I beseech thee, O Lord, the God of heaven, the great and terrible God [God's majesty] that keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love him and keep his commandments"—his faithfulness. He was coming to a God who had power to help: he was coming to one who was wont to help—a covenant-keeping God.

And now his petition: "Let thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes open unto the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee day and night." His was a burden which knew no times and seasons; he would not put it off. It was a prayer "for the children of Israel, thy servants, while I confess the sins of the children of Israel which we have sinned against thee: yea, I and my father's house have sinned." Here was one important point: the petitioner took his own share in the sins of his people. And then, taking up Lev. 26: 33-40, he justified God in his judgment upon them, but for that very reason pleaded with assurance the Word of God (Lev. 26: 40–45; Deut. 30: 1–6), in the very words of these scriptures. God cannot deny himself, and Nehemiah knew that he was heard. He had laid hold of God by his character, and by his promises.



INTERIOR OF A PERSIAN PALACE

Lesson Points

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers

HISTORY is silent about the thirteen years which elapsed after [illegible] governor of Judea and instituted his reforms. That they were years of trouble and disaster for the little colony in Jerusalem, may be inferred from the report which Hanani brought to his brother at the Persian court. Evidently Ezra was no longer governor, the surrounding people were hostile, and the Arabs encamped near Jerusalem [illegible] plunder with impunity those who entered or left the city. This was probably due to the machinations of the Samaritan people, who had succeeded in prejudicing Artaxerxes against his Jewish subjects. Even the building and repairs had ceased, chiefly, we may suppose, because of the withdrawal of the royal favor, without which Ezra could not obtain the money and building material which the king's edict permitted him to draw from the royal domains. It was a sorrowful story that Hanani told to Nehemiah, who was serving at Susa, in the capacity of cup-bearer to the king. That office was not one of exalted rank, but it was coveted because it afforded opportunity for reaching the king's ear and winning his favor. Nehemiah was evidently a Jew who had adapted himself to the customs of the people around the palace. His very language shows that he had identified himself with them. He does not speak of God as the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, but by the title "God of Heaven," which was the Persian way of speaking of Ormazd. But his heart was with his people. He was deeply afflicted when he heard of the miserable condition of the Jewish colony in Jerusalem. He reflected that his ancestors were buried there and that as long as the walls of the city were thrown down, it was possible for those graves to be desecrated, which, to a Jew, was something very revolting. He grieved, therefore; but it was not idle grief. He turned, first of all, to prayer, and then prepared himself to address the king.

PERSIAN PLATTER

I was the king's cupbearer. The later kings of Persia had departed from the simple habits of Cyrus and Darius and had surrounded themselves with court [illegible] difficulty to approach the king. Only specially [illegible] presence, and at the royal repasts the king had a table to himself. It was the cupbearer's duty to serve at this table, to [illegible] jeweled bowl, and after tasting it, to it to his master. The cupbearer also served as a personal attendant at other [illegible] admission of unauthorized visitors. He was thus in a position to hold familiar intercourse [illegible] providential circumstance that at that [illegible] patriotic a man as Nehemiah held the office.

The gates thereof are [illegible] Whether Hanani was referring to recent calamity, or whether [illegible] destruction under Nebuchadnezzar [illegible] been disasters of recent date, which Nehemiah did not know of, and the condition of the people was worse than he had supposed. When [illegible] sin against God, as the Jews did, they must suffer, and it is so still. It is the [illegible] it leaves the sinner exposed to the attacks of the enemy. The gates of his soul are no longer a protection to him. When a young man begins to drink and to go [illegible] bad company, he soon falls a [illegible] other vices: poverty comes upon him, [illegible] he is very liable to steal. It is the beginning of sin that opens the gate to temptation. A jail chaplain making his rounds was surprised at one of the prisoners addressing him by name. "How do you know me?" he asked. "I do not remember ever seeing you before." The prisoner replied: "No, you are not likely to [illegible] but we were at college together," and he mentioned his real name. "How did you sink to this?" the chaplain asked. "Oh, by gradual steps. After the first false step, I was a slave, tied and bound, and there was no escape."

I will scatter you abroad. That warning had been fulfilled, and the same warning has been fulfilled since. There is no land under the sun where the Jews are not to be found. People without a country, a nation without a home. A pathetic story is told of a Jew in Russia, who was driven out about twelve years ago. He was a steady, hard-working young man with a wife and two children. He sold his furniture and effects for a small sum, and set out to walk to the nearest post-[illegible] his wife carrying one child, and he the other. They traveled from place to place, economizing their slender store of [illegible] but at last it was all gone, and weary and footsore they went into a deserted cattle-shed to spend the night. One of those terrible Russian storms came on, burying the shed in snow. When at last a road was cut through it, all four were found dead of cold and starvation.

Yet will I gather them. There is a condition attached: "If ye turn unto me and keep my commandments." That is the way of blessing for the Gentile as well as the Jew. A Christian lady in New York saw among the prisoners in a police court a girl whose parents were among the most respectable people in her own native village. She went to them and pleaded for her daughter. The father replied, "Yes, I will forgive her gladly, if she will ask it and promise to amend her life. I cannot have her at home to corrupt her sisters, but if she will stop drinking and quit her evil ways she may come back. I will never reproach her, nor make any difference in my treatment of her from the other children." The lady returned to New York and sought the girl to give her the glad message. But to her surprise, the girl would not return. She had grown to love her sins, and by her own obstinacy excluded herself from her father's house. So it is with every sinner. It is he who shuts himself out of heaven.

INDIA'S GRATEFUL CHILDREN

How the Orphans and Famine Children are Being Fed, Clothed, and Educated Through the Generosity of our Readers

IN acknowledging the quarterly remittances sent by this journal, from the residue of the famine fund, to the missionaries who are supporting and educating the orphans in India, encouraging reports are given of the progress of the little waifs. The wisdom of the course adopted for the disposal of the balance of this fund, so generously contributed by our readers, is abundantly proved by the letters of the missionaries. It is clear that they are, as we foresaw, beginning to feel the financial strain of the Christlike work they undertook in the stress of the famine. Their hearts melted as they saw bright boys and girls reduced to skeletons by hunger, and certain, if uncared for, to perish miserably in a few days or weeks. At that time the funds contributed by Christians in America and other lands were sufficient to provide for these needy guests; but now the famine funds are exhausted, and it is difficult to find food and clothing for the children. Yet it would be very painful to turn them out of the refuges to which they were admitted. They have proved so grateful, so anxious to learn, so intelligent, and in so many cases have pleaded to be received into the Christian church, that to abandon them now would be almost a crime. Besides, as most of them have lost their parents and have not yet acquired the power to earn their own livelihood, many would undoubtedly starve to death. The missionaries therefore eagerly welcome the day when the regular quarterly remittance from THE CHRISTIAN HERALD arrives, and some admit that when it came the treasury was almost empty. It is evident that had it not been for the foresight which doled out this fund in instalments, there are many orphanages and schools, where stern necessity would have compelled a reduction of the number of dependent children. With the utmost economy and scrupulous care, it requires a considerable sum to feed such families as some of the missionaries have received. In the orphanages of the Society of Friends alone, six hundred children are now sheltered, over and above the normal number, every one of the six hundred waifs received during those awful months of famine. Mr. Joseph Taylor, the superintendent, writes: "Those who have contributed to the fund may rest assured that they have been the means of rescuing a large number of lives from a lingering death by starvation, and of mitigating the sufferings of many others who were not actually reduced to that state. It is a great pleasure to see the children, who came to us in such a weak and wretched condition, now healthy and happy and enjoying life. Thirty-six boys and eighteen girls have already made public profession of their faith in Christ." Mr. Taylor gratefully acknowledges that the largest contribution to the fund which enabled the society to do this great work came from the fund raised by the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

JESSI DAR, A RESCUED CHILD WIFE

Mrs. Ada Lee of Calcutta writes: "We are very grateful for this continued help, and wish you could visit us and see the work you are doing through us. What rejoices my heart the most is the change God has wrought in the hearts and lives of these children. Some of the older girls whom we took in at the very beginning of the famine were not only saved from severe suffering, and probably death or that moral ruin which is worse than death, but have been saved for eternity. They have made such wonderful progress that some of them are already helping as Christian teachers in our mission schools and others are preparing for that duty." Mrs. Lee sends in her letter the photograph of one of her charges, which we reproduce at the beginning of this article. The girl was the most pitiable of all natives of India, a child-widow. She had been actually sold to a horrible servitude, when she ran away and appealed to Mrs. Lee to shelter and protect her. She is now one of the brightest and most intelligent girls in the institution. Another picture on this page, that of "cleaning the new-comers," is also from Mrs. Lee's orphanage. It is a memento of the famine days when daily large numbers came, in a state of dreadful neglect, to be transformed into clean, decent Christian girls.

HINDOO WAIFS IN MRS. ADA LEE'S SCHOOL IN CALCUTTA—YELLANDU SCHOOLHOUSE, INDIA

An interesting work, in which this journal has helped, is that of Rev. C. B. Ward, who is laboring at Yellandu, in the dominions of the Nizam of Hyderabad. Mr. Ward's interest in the orphans was manifested from the outset of the famine, and he has undertaken a work which shows how strong is his faith in the God of the fatherless and the widow. Mr. Ward has testified his gratitude to this journal for the aid rendered him by calling one of his pioneer institutions THE CHRISTIAN HERALD MISSION. He has happily been able to get employment for his boys as fast as they were ready for work in the Hyderabad Deccan Company's workshops, which are in close proximity to his station. He also secured from the Nizam, at a nominal rent, a large section of land which through neglect had become jungle, and he has been able to partially clear this and cultivate it, with such help as could be given by his orphans and the village people who were in danger of starving. Work of this kind is so obviously of public utility that the people who have been employed really feel that they have been paid for developing their own property, and so they have not been pauperized by the help afforded them. Bishop J. M. Thoburn, who was indefatigable throughout the time of India's appalling suffering, has a general oversight of Mr. Ward's work.

Pandita Ramabai also sends cheering accounts of progess in her homes. She has still nearly four hundred girls dependent upon her. Of these a large proportion of the older ones have already become Christians and have received Christian baptism. The younger ones are learning earnestly and Ramabai believes that they too will become Christians. The fame of her institutions has spread throughout India, and numbers of girls are fleeing from lives of misery in distant cities to find a refuge with her. The help rendered her from the funds contributed by our readers have enabled her to receive many who otherwise must have been refused admittance. One very pitiful case was that of a girl only nine years of age, who had, according to Hindoo custom, been married in her sixth year. But the boy to whom she was married died, and the girl thus widowed was turned out of her home. It was two years before she was able to reach Ramabai's institution at Sharada Sadan. The institution was full, but the pathetic pleading of the little widow touched Ramabai's sympathetic heart, and to her intense delight she was received. The farm Ramabai has cultivated at Kedegaun is at last becoming a source of help and it also proved a valuable aid for the convalescents.

Died in Service

MISS GERTRUDE L. WHEELER, formerly of Bridgeport, Conn., died at Naples, Italy, September 21st, on her return from missionary work in British East Africa.

THE LATE MISS G. L. WHEELER

She had been in Africa but a few months and was engaged in work of a pioneer character. Her station was some 350 miles in the interior. Returning from the interior by the way of Mombasa, where smallpox was quite prevalent, she contracted that disease before taking the steamer for Naples. She was taken from the steamer at Naples quite sick and sent to the hospital, where she died four days afterward. She was buried in the cemetery at Naples. Miss Wheeler went to Africa under the auspices of the Christian Unity Association, whose headquarters are at Hawleyville, Conn., Rev. W. P. Ray, president. She was born in Monroe, Conn., educated in the South Norwalk and Bridgeport schools, and she first taught school at Thomaston, Conn., and afterward in Bridgeport. In 1893, she entered upon a new work, opening the home in Bridgeport known as the Beulah Home for Friendless Women. For several years she conducted this work successfully, assisted by Miss Alice B. Garrigues, who had been a friend for many years, and also a teacher with her. Miss Wheeler had a large circle of Christian friends and acquaintances in the New England States. She was of a very lovable disposition and wholly devoted to Christian work. In a sense it may be said that her life was laid down for the Master.

Pilgrims in Japan

(See illustration on first page).

FUJIYAMA, the "sacred mountain" of Japan, is the objective point of every pious Buddhist in the Mikado's empire and the Mecca of innumerable pilgrimages. At a great distance, its immense bulk and gigantic height are visible, dwarfing all other altitudes, and, on coming nearer, the pilgrim who aims to ascend may well be appalled by the task before him. After climbing to Muriyama, the highest inhabited spot on the mountain, and resting there awhile, the real ascent is begun. Priests and mountaineers serve as guides and porters. To the summit of the mountain is almost a two days' climb, the height of the crater being 13,997 feet and the highest peak 14,177 feet. Japanese pilgrims who make the ascent from religious motives, robe themselves in white garments, which are stamped with queer-looking mystic symbols and figures of idols by men who make such stamping a business. A peculiar blessing is superstitiously believed to be conferred by the gods on those who ascend from motives of piety. Tradition assigns these pilgrimages to a very ancient date. A saint who was the reputed founder of the Shinto religion—Japan's oldest faith—dwelt on the mountain, and after his death his spirit continues to give health and good fortune to those who honor his memory and visit his shrine.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR.
T. DeWitt Talmage
EDITOR
B. J. FERNIE, G. H. SANDISON,
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald ...
Subscriptions may commence ...
Remittances ...
Register ...
Foreign Postage ...
Renewals. ... before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted ...
Back Numbers. ... back numbers, nor to make good omissions caused by tardy renewals.
Change of Date. ... the date, after your subscription is renewed ...
Expiration ...
Change of Address. ... your address.
The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.
The Christian Herald ... the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded ...
Letters ...
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Yoked Together

ATTEMPTS have been made in various directions to prove that marriage is a mere civil contract. Away with such a notion! Marriage is a Paradisaical, six-thousand year old, divine institution, and all the laws since Blackstone or before Blackstone cannot appropriately marry two hearts unless the Lord Almighty had first married them. All this makes sensible people look upon marriage as an important step. Instead of being lassoed by a curl, or trading hearts in a philopena, they realize that between cradle and grave the most tremendous place is the marriage altar, and that while before that altar the twain stand with joined hands, between them stands, all unseen, either the white-winged angel of blessing or the horned and hoofed and fire-nostrilled gorgon of despair. Applaud therefore all honest marriages and frown upon everything that would put them to ridicule. Have nothing to do with those slushy pamphlets and books which tell how impossible men met impossible women, got into impossible difficulties, and with impossible results and villainy went unwhipped, and virtue fell dead. The fact is that many of the young married people of this day get their heads so filled with the false and sentimental notions in regard to the plain, serious, old-fashioned institution of marriage they are unfit for the common duties of life. There she goes, lounging around the house with a twenty-five cent novel over her arm, her slippers run down at the heel, the furniture undusted and the socks undarned, and everything from cellar to garret in domestic chaos. Go home and gather up all that French stuff and pitch it into the kitchen grate. The best way for us to honor the marriage institution, of which we have heard so much, is for us who are now in that relation to faithfully perform all our duties, not taking easy offense from each other, remembering that hasty words and hasty actions sometimes are not a matter of the heart, but merely a matter of the nerves.

National Economy

NEVER has there been in the history of the United States such a reckless expenditure of public funds, and the rate of taxation will soon reach a higher point than ever before. It is astounding how the money of the people is being voted away. Not only are those of large means subjected to severe taxation, but the man who owns not a dollar suffers also indirectly. First, the tax assessment strikes the capitalist; then the capitalist puts that tax upon the rent he asks for the house occupied or upon the price of the goods sold. There is not a man or woman in America who buys a pound of sugar or a yard of cloth or a loaf of bread that does not feel the influence of taxation, and all the people have a right to be heard on the subject of national economy. At the ballot-box and wherever you have influence, uphold those who are trying to stop useless expenditure, either city, state or national. With such a climate, such a soil, and such rivers to turn the factory wheel, and such wealth of mines being disgorged, and such multiplied resources of accumulation far greater than those offered to any other nation under heaven, it ought to be easy, very easy, in this country to make a living, and a good living, while now for multitudes it is very hard work. But all recuperation and all betterment, will directly or indirectly come from the saturation of the people with wholesome religious influences.

High-toned morals means for a nation temporal prosperity. Godliness is profitable in the life that now is as well as for that which is to come. When individuals are made right nations will be right. Perhaps some do not know how the Americans came to be called Brother Jonathan. George Washington, having been made Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the Revolution, went to Massachusetts to organize his forces. It was an awful time of perplexity. Jonathan Trumbull was Governor of Connecticut, and Washington had great confidence in his ability and patriotism, and said to his officers: "Let us consult Brother Jonathan." Again and again during the war was Jonathan Trumbull advised with, and it got to be a byword among the troops and among the officers: "Let us consult Brother Jonathan," and so that became the sobriquet of the American. This idea of brotherhood, bestowed by the first President of the United States is the gospel idea when a man shall learn everywhere that his fellow man is a brother—that will make perfect individual life, perfect social life, perfect national life. I saw in one of the gardens at Poughkeepsie, on a high bank, spelled out in large letters of flowers that might be seen at a great distance, "Peace on earth, good will to men." Over all our hearts, over all this land may there be written in letters of eternal bloom that Christmas cantata.

An Unwilling Heir

MR. JAMES EADS HOW has become heir to a million of dollars. Mr. How springs from a distinguished family in St. Louis. His grandfather, John Eads, was the great architect who built the Eads Bridge in that city, and the well-known quays in New Orleans. His father, J. F. How, Esq., was Vice-President of the Wabash Railway. The eccentric personage who has now become heir to this large sum of money, has always declined to take the social position to which he is entitled, and preferred to support himself as an humble laborer. He is now thirty years old. Since coming into possession of this property, Mr. How has in vain sought some one to take charge of it, and distribute it where it will do the most good. He has offered $100,000 of it to Mayor Zeigenhein, of St. Louis, to be used in some charitable enterprise. The offer has been declined.

We look upon the rejection of the responsibility which has come upon Mr. How, as a mistake. Evidently there could be no better man than he, for that duty. "To him that hath shall be given." It is not having money that honors Mr. How, so much as his simplicity and sincerity, and his sympathy with the Son of Man, who knew not where to lay his head. At a period when social and industrial questions are pressing, and [illegible] who have little sympathy with the working classes, it seems to us a mistake for [illegible] of his father's and his grandfather's industry and ability, to give anybody else his chance to attempt a readjustment of some of the social and industrial inequalities of the age. No mayor of St. Louis could do this better than James Eads How himself.

The Saloon Money Controversy

AS many hundreds of letters continue to be received in reply to J. R. N's question regarding the acceptance or rejection of saloon money by a church, it has been decided, at the urgent request of many subscribers, to continue the open discussion for sometime longer, in order to permit all having definite views on the subject to be heard. When both sides have been fully represented, the whole subject will be submitted to five competent judges, whose duty will be to review the points presented in the voluminous correspondence and announce decision on the merits. It is possible that there may be a dissenting opinion, but in any event the controversy and its judicial outcome is one that cannot fail to be helpful to many thousands of interested readers and to "make for righteousness." It is one which none having the spiritual welfare of the church at heart should fail to read.

Quit Growling

ANOTHER winter is coming on, and we hear the evil prophecy already rising on the air—we hear it everywhere. We will give our prophecy on this coming winter. It will be the easiest winter we ever had, either in one way or the other. If it be severe in temperature, then we believe there will be such Christian beneficence that the poor will not suffer more than they ever have before. They will not suffer so much. We do not believe the people of this country will ever commit outrages and riot and murder for the sake of getting bread. But lugubrosity of tone and face keeps people down. Now we will make a contract. If the people of the United States for one week will talk cheerfully, we will open all the manufactories: we will give employment to all the unoccupied men and women: we will make a lively market for your real estate that is eating you up with taxes: we will stop the long processions on the way to the poor-house and the penitentiary, and we will spread a plentiful table from Maine to California and from Oregon to Sandy Hook, and the whole land shall carol and thunder with the national jubilee.

But says some one: "I will take that contract: but we cannot hope to affect the whole nation." Yes, you can. Representing as you do all professions, all trades and all occupations, if you resolve never again to utter a dolorous word about the money markets, but by manner and by voice and by wit and caricature and, above all, by faith in God, to try to scatter the pervading gloom, do you not believe the influence would be instantaneous and widespread? For the sake of the poor and for the sake of the unemployed, quit growling.

♦

The prayers of the readers of this journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its proprietor, and also upon those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ, are printed in it; and that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of sinners and the quickening of God's people.

"A Joy to Every One"

What Three Eminent Christian Leaders Say of the Red Letter New Testament

[illegible] in red, [illegible]
Red Letter New Testament.
[illegible] for a traveler, that I commend your enterprise without stint.
[illegible] Very sincerely yours,
D. L. Moody.

[illegible]
No. 700 Park Avenue.
My Dear Sir,—
[illegible] Red Letter New Testament. [illegible] a long time have I been more attracted to any [illegible] Your plan of [illegible] adopted the beautiful little volume for my own private devotional use. Hoping that it may have great influence in calling attention [illegible] I remain, Gratefully yours,
[illegible]

[illegible]
A. F. Schauffler, D.D., Vice Pres.
New York, Oct. 2, 1899.
My Dear Dr. Klopsch,—
[illegible] Red Letter New Testament. Really, it is capitally done, and I shall make constant use of it. If I had had this book last year it would have saved me much labor, for I needed to know exactly how many words of our Lord are recorded in each of the four Gospels, and I counted them straight through, but if I had had your Red Letter Edition, the counting could have been much more quickly done. The book is a capital one for teachers to use, and is so convenient [illegible] will be a joy to every one who loves the Word of God. With many renewed thanks, I remain, Yours very sincerely,
A. T. Schauffler

♦

BRIEF NOTES

The preachers chosen to serve at Harvard [illegible]

[illegible] China to Japan, there are sixty-two towns and villages [illegible] of native churches.

Methodist soldiers in the British Army are organizing systematic work for the Twentieth Century [illegible] of five hundred dollars.

Dr. I. T. Gracey reports that young Chinamen desiring an up-to-date education are now going to Japanese colleges instead of coming to this country or going to Europe.

The chairman-elect of the Congregational Union of Ontario and Quebec, is Mr. Edmund [illegible] third time that a layman has been elected for the office.

A significant fact, stated by a writer in the Independent, is that the Pope keeps the bulk of his fortune at Rothschild's London Bank. It is noteworthy that he should entrust it to a Jew in a Protestant country.

The receipts of the Ashleydown Orphanages [illegible] years ago, were last year $149,380. They are now [illegible] who strictly adheres to Mr. Muller's principles.

Several delegates to the International Congregational Council have asked that emphatic contradiction be given to the charge made by Dr. Withrow, that there was no reading of the Bible at the sessions of the Council. They say there is not an atom of truth in the charge.

The Luther League, the young people's society of the Lutheran Church, reports a membership of nearly seventy thousand. Its object, like that of the Christian Endeavor Society, is to retain in the Church young people who, after confirmation, are liable to drift away.

The gift of a church by an India potentate is announced. The Rajah of Chamba has made over to the Scotch Presbyterian Missionary Society a handsome building for its use. The significant fact is that the Rajah is not a Christian, but he has been present occasionally at missionary services.

Statistics presented to the Utah Methodist Episcopal Conference, show that in twenty-eight churches of various denominations, the number of members who were formerly Mormons is seventeen per cent. The number of Christians who have become Mormons is less than a half of one per cent.

Karnak's Fallen Columns

NEWS comes from Egypt that nine of the great columns in the wonderful temple of Karnak, have fallen. The catastrophe was not unexpected, for recent visitors have noticed that they were far out of the perpendicular and it was not possible to effectively shore them up, though the attempt was made. They were huge columns sixty-two feet high and thirty-six feet in circumference at the base. They were erected by Seti I. and were therefore new when Moses was born, and he doubtless often walked among them. Hatasu, the daughter of the princess who rescued him from the river, aided in beautifying and enriching the temple, of which they formed part, and she built another temple in the immediate neighborhood. The chief pillars were twelve in number and they were surrounded by one hundred and twenty two, which though somewhat smaller, are gigantic. These latter were arranged in seven lines, forming imposing avenues. In front of them were two immense courts formed by other pillars. At each entrance, was a gigantic statue of Rameses II., the Pharaoh who oppressed the Israelites On the south side of the temple was another approach lined with a double row of sphinxes. Enclosed in the magnificent group of columns is a still older building, of inferior architecture erected by Osertesen I. who belonged to the dynasty, one of whose members was the patron of Joseph. The temple formed part of ancient Thebes and must have been its chief edifice. Its remains have been the wonder of the world, even in their desolation. The fall of these nine pillars only adds to the ruin among which they have so long stood. So has the word of the Hebrew prophet, spoken when Egypt was at the summit of her power, been fulfilled:

I will make the land waste and all that is therein . . . . I will also destroy the idols and I will cause their images to cease (Ezek. 30:12).

A Fire Put Out With Wine

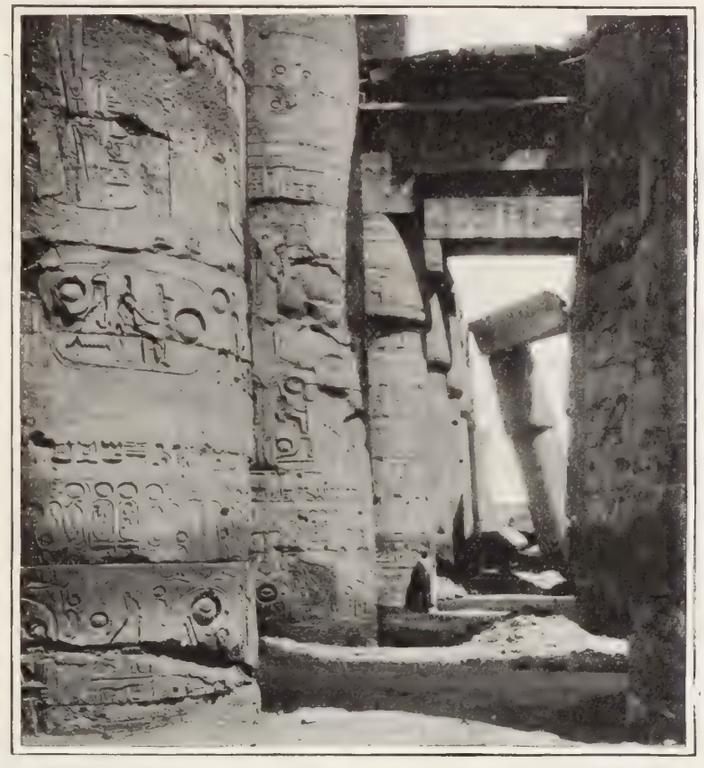
California journals report the prevalence of forest fires in that State. Last week there was one burning on the slope of Mount Tamalpais, opposite San Francisco, which destroyed many pretty suburban homes near Mill Valley. Large numbers of young society men turned out to help the firemen, and worked with a will to save the menaced homes. Several times the fire was thought to be extinguished, but a high wind rose and fanned the smouldering fragments into flame. In the Santa Cruz mountains a large fire broke out which destroyed property worth a quarter million dollars. It was approaching a large vinery, which appeared to be doomed. The proprietors attached a large suction pipe to their tanks and used the wine in them to fight the approaching fire. They succeeded in extinguishing the flames, but at a great cost. The wine thrown on the fire would have been sold for four thousand dollars; but the owners are quite satisfied, since it saved buildings and vines worth ten times that amount. For once, it seems, wine did good service. It would require, however, a great deal more benefit than that it did in this case to atone for all the misery it has caused in the world.

Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow? Who hath contentions? Who hath wounds without cause? They that tarry long at the wine (Prov. 23:29).

A Romantic Marriage

A press dispatch from Matteawan, N.J., on Oct. 10, announces a marriage which had a strange prelude. Among the patients in the General Hospital there, was a man who had sustained an injury to his feet. It was a bad case and for some days it seemed inevitable that an amputation would be needed. During the weeks that he lay suffering, his chief comfort was in the visits of a lady who came regularly to read to the patients and bring them good cheer. She was very popular in the hospital and those who had known her a long time, said that an early disappointment in love had clouded all her life. She was over fifty years old and had never married. Her kindness won the heart of the patient with the injured feet and he grew confidential with her. Finally he told her all his history, and to their mutual surprise, they discovered that he was the lover who had been alienated from her in their youthful days. As both were free to marry, their long-standing quarrel was easily settled and, as soon as the patient was able to walk, they went out and were married. Probably they would have ended their lives without reconciliation and union, if there had not been suffering on one side and sympathy on the other. Many a soul has been brought into eternal union with Christ by like means. Affliction often brings precious results.

No chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness to them who are exercised thereby (Heb. 12:11).



THE GREAT TEMPLE OF KARNAK, EGYPT

To Fathom an Old Mystery

The Geographical Congress, at its recent sessions in Berlin, adopted a resolution inviting international cooperation in the search for traces of Dr. Ludwig Leichardt who disappeared nearly twenty-one years ago. Dr. Leichardt was an enthusiastic scientific explorer whose learning and enterprise won him world-wide fame. He gave years to the exploration and geological study of New South Wales, and the book he wrote on his work in that colony made him well known before he started on his first great inland journey. For sixteen months he and seven comrades tramped through inner Australia, depending upon the country for their food, though nothing was known about its resources. In this journey, over 3,000 miles long, he traversed the inner part of Queensland, passing from the temperate zone to the torrid zone. He wrote a book describing his journey and before it was off the press the restless explorer started on the undertaking from which he never returned. His purpose was to cross the Australian desert from east to west. It was to be the first trans-continental journey, and he started with hope from Moreton. He was never heard from again. Reports came that some articles known to have been in his possession had been seen among the tribes of the Northwest, but no authentic intelligence of him was ever received. It is now proposed to make a systematic effort to penetrate the mystery. How glad we would be if it were possible to penetrate that still deeper mystery which is continually falling all around us at every newly opened grave. Even the Bible tells us little, but while it does not satisfy our curiosity it gives us assurances for our comfort.

Let not your heart be troubled. . . . In my Father's house are many mansions. . . . I go to prepare a place for you (John 14:1-2).

A Dangerous Counterfeit

Thousands of dollars in counterfeit fifty-cent pieces have been put in circulation during the past few weeks in New York and Brooklyn. The bad fifty-cent pieces are of the kind that have given the United States authorities so much trouble for the last two or three years in New Orleans and the South. They are made of silver of the standard fineness and correct weight, stamped in close imitation of the genuine, and have the same value as bullion that the genuine coin has. These are the features which make the counterfeit so dangerous. With silver at its present price the coiners can afford to put in the proper weight and quality of metal and do good work, and still make a handsome profit. Even the experts have found but one mark by which the bad coins can be distinguished from good ones. This is to be found on the reverse or eagle side. Above the eagle is a group of thirteen stars arranged between the eagle's head and the "E. pluribus unum" scroll, which he carries, and the inscription, "United States of America," which runs around the coin. In the genuine fifty-cent pieces the stars are kept well clear of the letters, while in the counterfeit the stars are larger and the fifth one in the upper row, counting from the left, has a point which just touches the final letter "s" in "States." It is obvious that the coin is all the more dangerous for having so much silver in it, which gives it the same weight and appearance as the genuine coin. It is so in the matter of character. There are many persons so moral, so kind and good that they are highly esteemed in society; but if they have not been made children of God through Christ, they will be rejected in the judgment, in spite of their estimable qualities.

Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name done many wonderful works? and then will I profess unto them, I never knew you, depart from me (Matt. 7:22).

An Architect in a Hole

A difficulty between an electrical company and a government architect has involved a singular conflict at Camden, N. J. The Federal Government is erecting a new post office in that city which will cost $225,000. The handsome building has right in front of it an unsightly pole supporting a large number of heavy power wires. The architect tried in vain to induce the company to remove the pole, which obstructed the view of his work. He therefore had the curb so rounded as to leave the pole in the carriage-way. This is a violation of the local laws, so the municipality directed its removal. Thereupon men were sent to put the pole on federal property. They dug a hole six feet deep to receive it, and they paid no attention to the remonstrances of the special officer who warned them off. They roughly pushed him aside and were about to put the pole in the hole when the architect jumped in. Several men tried to pull him out of the hole, but he remained firmly fixed and refused to be hauled out. When a man laid hands on him he had him arrested for assault, and one after another ten men went to jail on that charge. The architect staid in the hole for an hour, at the end of which time the company called their men off, and he climbed out. The architect is evidently a brave man, for if the unscrupulous men who were trying to fix the pole, had persisted, he would have been killed. Not every man would have dared to interpose his own body in resistance of wrong. It is that which enlists our admiration and love for the means by which our salvation was wrought. Christ did not draw back even when he knew that his life would be sacrificed.

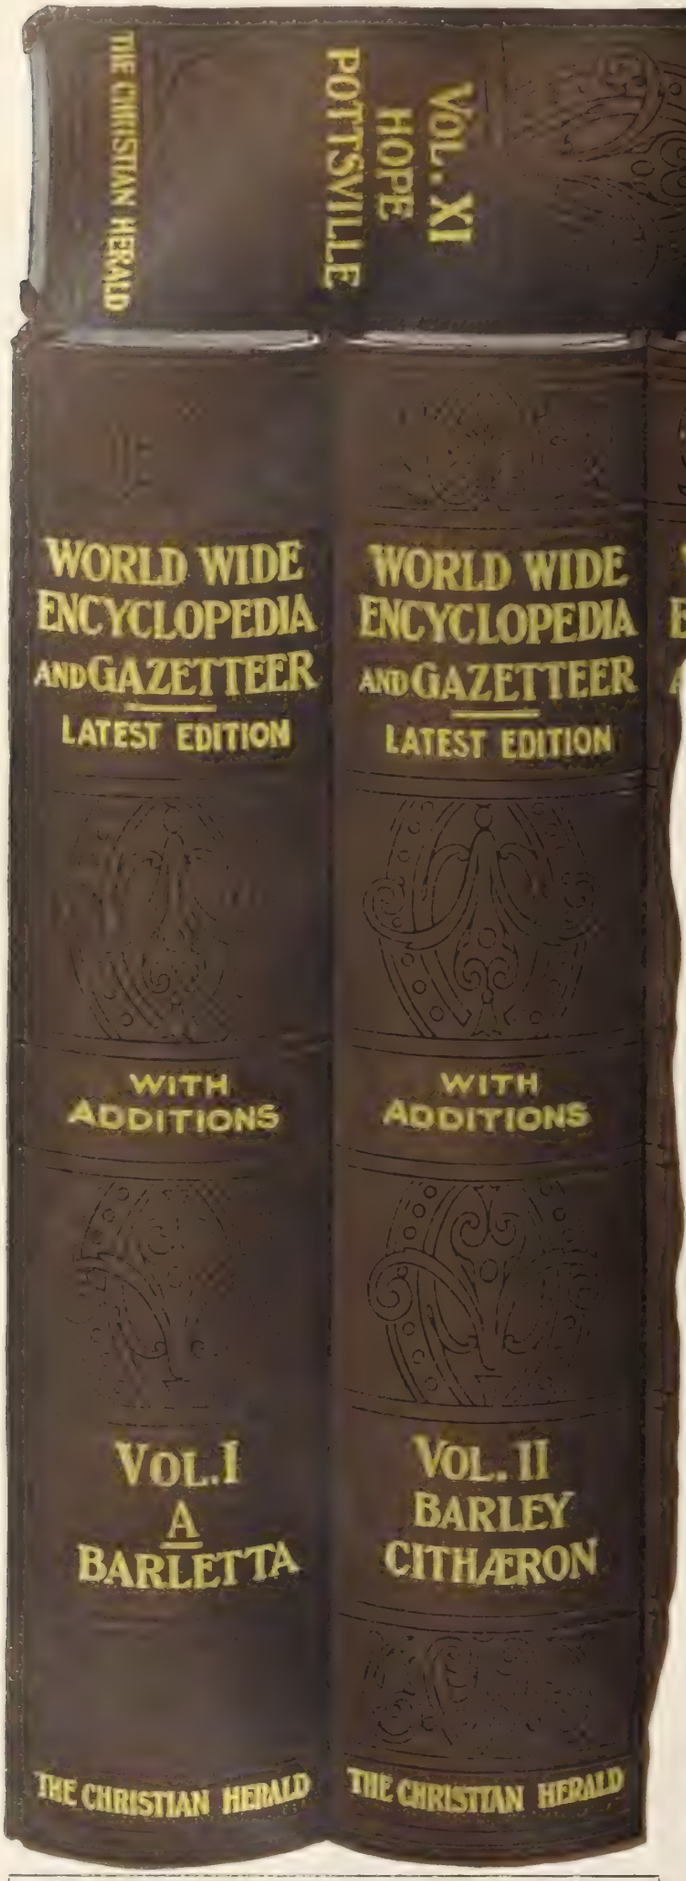
I am the good Shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep (John 10:11).

A Curious Election

One of the strangest votes by ballot on record is reported in a press dispatch from a hamlet in South Carolina. There has of late been some illegal liquor selling in the hamlet, and some visitors have made a temporary stay there whose habits were not conducive to order and morality. A few days ago a meeting was called in a public building to which every white man in the town received an invitation. A chairman and secretary were elected and the meeting was regularly organized. Then the secretary stated the business by putting the following question: "If you conscientiously believe there are any person or persons whose presence is contaminating to the moral and social atmosphere of this community, then write his or their names on a piece of paper, fold, and deposit in ballot box. On the contrary, if you conscientiously do not believe there are any such person or persons in the community, then so write it." A box was opened, ballots were distributed, and managers were appointed. The voting proceeded silently, and there were no threats or abusive talk. After the votes were examined the secretary informed the meeting that one of the men there present had been duly elected by a large majority. His fellow townsmen had declared by their votes that his presence was contaminating, etc. It would accordingly be good for the town and incidentally for his own health if he went elsewhere. The man so notified began his preparations for leaving promptly and within forty-eight hours was on his way out of town. The people of the town had waited until mischief was done before they took action; but the time is coming when such an edict will be issued against every unrighteous man by an infallible Judge who sees the evil in the heart before it takes form in open sin.

And before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats (Matt. 25:32).

A Liberal Education Now Placed Within Easy Reach



Twelve Large Volumes in Rich Silk Finished Cloth with Gold Stamp
NINETY-SIX COLORED MAPS

Unprecedented Unparalleled ...

Only One

Secures the Twelve Extra Large Volu

World-Wide

Enlarged and Revised to Date, Including the Spanish-Amer

Regular Price $30.—Cut in T

Thousands of commendably ambitious men and women now literally hurri institutions of learning, will hail with delight this exceptionally liberal proposi House of Knowledge, and henceforth eat and drink to their hearts' content. Th

The World-Wide Encyclopedia treats of every subject, great and m Statesman, the Scholar, the Student, the Professional and Business Man, the Ir

The Rich Store-House of World-Wide Knowledge has, with infinite lab

A Wonderful Offer! Never before has it been our fortune to We place special emphasis on this note

The World-Wide Encyclopedia brings the history of Science, Lit ar ment of the Race down to date (1899.) All the Recent Discoveries and the

The World-Wide Encyclopedia answers Every Question, howeve no person, however untutored, provided he can read, need lack for full inform

A Guide for Any Course of Systematic Readi

These Twelve Extra Large Octavo Volumes, aggregating nearly the best and costliest library in the world. No Two Hundred Dollar work, a Complete Library in itself, will rank its possessor among the

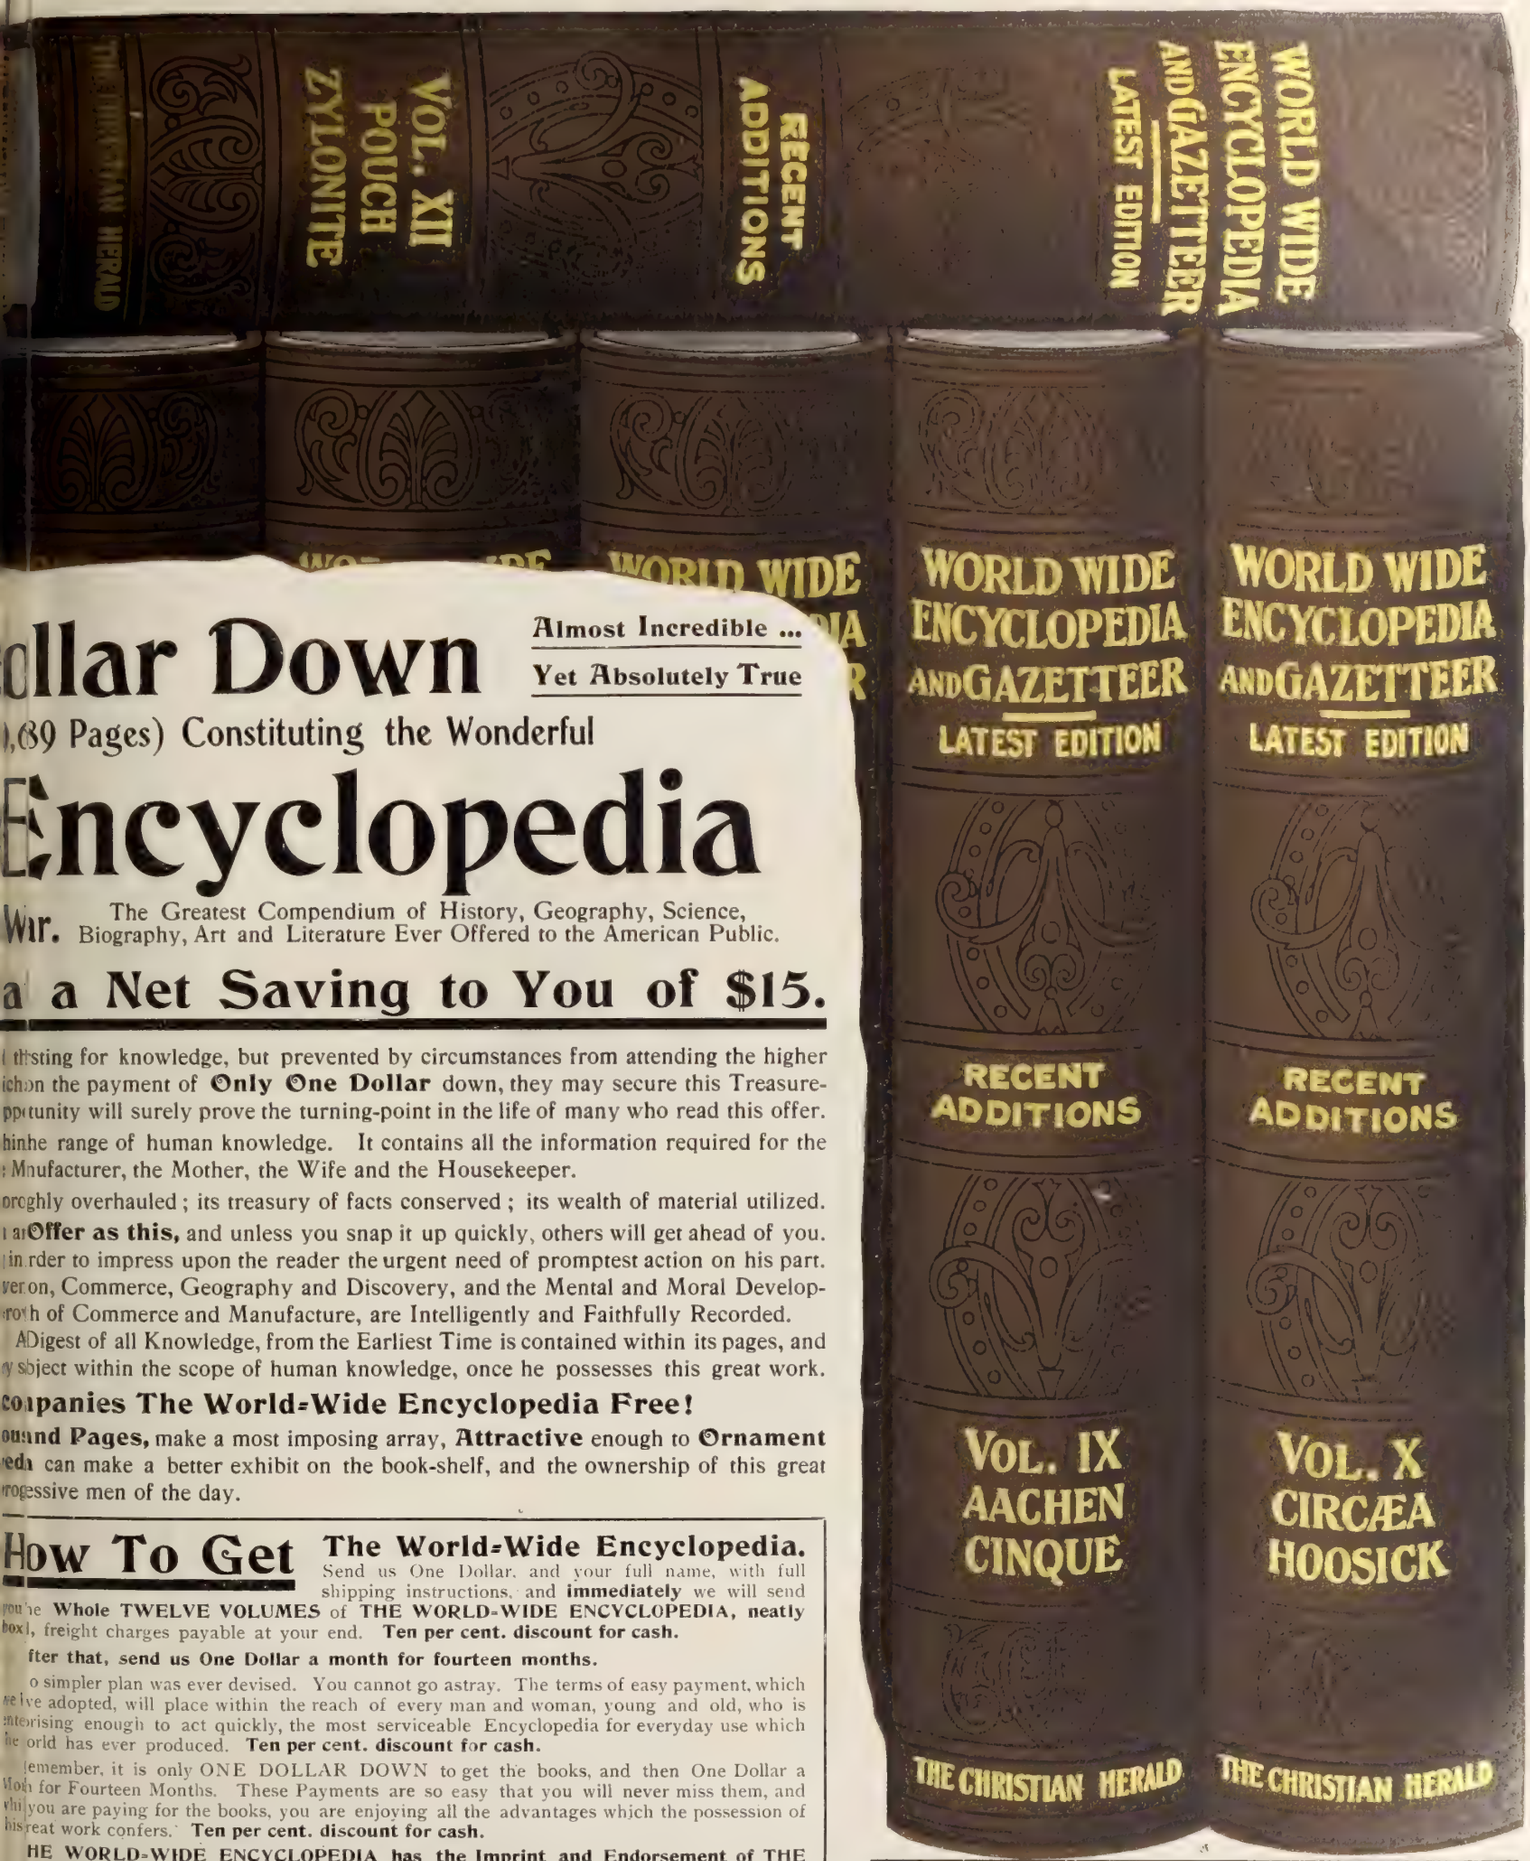
"What Man Has Done Man Can Do

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Abraham Lincoln at twenty-two simply knew how to read, write and Andrew Johnson, President of the United States. NEVER ATTE SCHOOL. His wife was his only teacher. She taught him how to rea Hiram Sibley, formerly President of the Western Union Telegraph C his father's farm at fifteen to learn a trade. After having given away of dollars during his life-time he died worth many millions more a few ye Peter Cooper, whose name will ever be cherished in the hearts of th of young men and young women who graduated, free of expense, from t school of Cooper Institute, himself never had more than one year's Now if these men, under such unfavorable circumstances, succeed achieving fame and fortune by dint of industrious application to study and work, why n of the tens of thousands of young people who have in them the making of great men an women, despair of their ambition with such an opportunity as this, placing within their rea everything necessary for a liberal education?

Address: Christian Herald Book

ven the Poorest, with 10 Per Cent. Discount for Cash



ollar Down

Almost Incredible ...
Yet Absolutely True

,689 Pages) Constituting the Wonderful

Encyclopedia

Wir. The Greatest Compendium of History, Geography, Science, Biography, Art and Literature Ever Offered to the American Public.

a a Net Saving to You of $15.

thsting for knowledge, but prevented by circumstances from attending the higher ichon the payment of Only One Dollar down, they may secure this Treasure- pptunity will surely prove the turning-point in the life of many who read this offer. hinhe range of human knowledge. It contains all the information required for the Mnufacturer, the Mother, the Wife and the Housekeeper.

oroghly overhauled; its treasury of facts conserved; its wealth of material utilized. arOffer as this, and unless you snap it up quickly, others will get ahead of you. in rder in order to impress upon the reader the urgent need of promptest action on his part. ver on, Commerce, Geography and Discovery, and the Mental and Moral Develop- roth of Commerce and Manufacture, are Intelligently and Faithfully Recorded.

ADigest of all Knowledge, from the Earliest Time is contained within its pages, and y sbject within the scope of human knowledge, once he possesses this great work.

companies The World-Wide Encyclopedia Free!

ound Pages, make a most imposing array, Attractive enough to Ornament edi can make a better exhibit on the book-shelf, and the ownership of this great rogessive men of the day.

How To Get

The World-Wide Encyclopedia.

Send us One Dollar, and your full name, with full shipping instructions, and immediately we will send you he Whole TWELVE VOLUMES of THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA, neatly box), freight charges payable at your end. Ten per cent. discount for cash.

fter that, send us One Dollar a month for fourteen months.

o simpler plan was ever devised. You cannot go astray. The terms of easy payment, which ve ve adopted, will place within the reach of every man and woman, young and old, who is enterising enough to act quickly, the most serviceable Encyclopedia for everyday use which he orld has ever produced. Ten per cent. discount for cash.

Remember, it is only ONE DOLLAR DOWN to get the books, and then One Dollar a Moh for Fourteen Months. These Payments are so easy that you will never miss them, and whi you are paying for the books, you are enjoying all the advantages which the possession of his reat work confers. Ten per cent. discount for cash.

HE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA has the Imprint and Endorsement of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD as a guarantee of its superior excellence and complete reliability.

rtment, Bible House, New York

9,689 Pages. 19,378 Columns. Over Fifteen Million Words. Weight 40 Pounds.
The Set Measures—26 in. Long, 9 in. High.

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

Big Sisters and Brothers

Their Duties to the Little Ones—How One Sister Entertained a Caller

OUR picture might doubtless be taken as almost a photograph of just such jolly rides as make merry many homes into which THE CHRISTIAN HERALD goes. We read that a famous English king once "played horse" to a little Prince of Wales, and when his prime minister, or some other official, called on State affairs, laughingly requested the visitor to wait a moment until his son had taken one more turn around the room. So, big folks and little folks who "play horse" are not without distinguished precedent.

The writer once heard a young gentleman—a "regular society swell"—ask a pretty maiden, at whose home he was calling, as to how she danced some particular figure of the German. "I don't know how to dance," she said, a shadow flitting over her face—for she was not indifferent to the questioner, and she felt that the admission would be a detraction in his eyes. "But," she added brightly, to cover the awkward pause that followed, "I can 'play horse' and 'ring-a-rosy,' and 'Lift up the gates as high as the sky and let King George and his army pass by.'" "How I would like to know those plays!" laughed her caller. "There is no reason why you should suffer in ignorance," was the smiling retort, as she ran out of the room, to return with a merry troop of small brothers and sisters, all eager to impart instruction. "Join hands!" was the merry cry, and soon the parlor was ringing with the chorus, "All around the mulberry bush." "I don't know when I've had so much fun," declared the "society man," wiping his brow when the game was over. When nurse came in to say that "it was really time for the children to go to bed," the baby brother was curled up asleep on his big sister's shoulder; two little sisters, leaning on her knee, looked up in her face; the eyes of a small lass and laddie, established on the knee of the caller, were turned in the same direction, and the gaze of the caller seemed magnetized, too. "Sister dear," as the little ones called her, after telling Hans Andersen's beautiful story of "The Twelve Swans," was giving the history of "Little Samuel," from The Children of the Bible, in response to an encore. Is anybody surprised to hear that there was a wedding in that house before a great while?

It is a fact that big brothers and sisters help "raise the little ones;" they are quite as responsible as father and mother for the future of the younger members of the family. The boys and girls who grow up with their eyes fixed upon Bessie and John, and to whom Bessie and John are often heroes and heroines, will model their lives upon Bessie's and John's. Bessie and John, by living straight and true, and being jolly and companionable with the little folks, will be doing that work in the home that God sent them to do. Remember, young people, that the duty and privilege of training children does not wait upon the time when you have a home of your own; you will be better prepared for the duties of parenthood if you take the course of study and practice that God provides for you in your father's and mother's house and in the Sunday School.

♦

A Pretty Game

Write on bits of cardboard such words as "A loving heart," "Gold," "Truth," "Silver," "A new dress," "Kind words," "A nice hat," "A smiling face," "A story book," "Kind deeds," "A necklace," "Pretty ways," and so on. Then let each child select a card, naming the thing he or she most desires. If a child wishes something that is not on a card, let him or her make out such a card. When all have drawn, ask each child to state the advantages that will accrue to him or her as the result of the choice made, supposing that the card represents the object itself.

♦

The Lapland "Baby Carriage"

The Lapland baby's "coach of state" is not a perambulator on wheels, such as our American babies have, but a very queer-looking birch-bark basket. The basket is shaped like a sofa pillow, and fastened like an envelope, with a little open place at one end for the baby to get his breath through. Sometimes these baskets are quite pretty and ornamental. The baby, bundled in downy skins, fastened up in his birch bark envelope, and thus swung on to his mother's back, takes his airing when she goes abroad to help skin seals and bring walrus meat home.

♦

Which is Best?

In friendly chat one asked of me,
"Which is best?"
A scowling face, an angry pout,
A bitter word, a jealous doubt,
A heart's unrest;
Or gentle trust through long, dark days,
When clouds obscure the sun's bright rays?

—ELIZABETH FRY PAUL.

♦

Philippine Camp Life

A bright letter, written by a soldier from "Camp in Trenches, near Pasay, P. I.," to Freedom, the American paper published at Manila, gives a graphic picture of how our boys live in camp. He says of the "goo-goos," as he calls the Filipinos, who were bushwacking around [illegible] especially after tattoo has sounded and the stillness of the night has settled down upon us, [illegible] call almost note for note. A few nights ago [illegible] with a genuine Tagalog yell, and pleasantries of all sorts were exchanged. It is hard to get up at 4.45 A. M., but we do it. The caribou of A and E Company vamoosed the other night into unknown regions, and no sooner had the companies gotten new ones than the old ones turned up in the possession of some gooseys. The last performance of one of the new caribous was to tear down the road and upset cart, water-cans, Chino and all. [illegible] pleasant ways and ever ready helping hand.

It is a comfort to know that at the Soldiers' Institute, Manila, our boys find Christian influences as well as home comforts when they come from the trenches for a day in town.

♦

Women's Work at the Paris Fair

The Paris Fair Committee, of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is arranging for an excellent exhibit, in the French Capital next year, of work accomplished by American women and particularly of work accomplished by club-women, such as vacation schools, play-grounds, street-cleaning and—it is to be hoped—working-women's homes, photographs being used in demonstration. Mrs. Tod Helmuth is chairman, and Miss Anna Maxwell Jones, Secretary of the Committee. Mrs. W. B. Lowe, President of the Federation, lately stopped in New York, on her return from France, to confer with the Committee. She says: "There is the greatest interest among the women in Paris to see what the American club-women are doing." The Federation will charter a steamer of its own to carry several hundred American women over next year, and there is to be a big international convention of women, at which German, English, Dutch, French, Russian and Italian housewives, teachers, writers and artists will confer about ways and means of improving public and private manners and morals. Domestic science and the servant question will receive large attention.

A MERRY PAIR OF COMRADES

Where are the Flowers?

WHERE are the flowers, the fair young flowers,
In brighter light and softer air, a beauteous [illegible]?
Alas! they all are in their graves; the gentle [illegible]
Are lying in their lovely beds, with the fair and good of ours.
The rain is falling where they lie; but the cold November rain
Calls not from out the gloomy earth the lovely ones again.

The wind-flower and the violet, they perished long ago,
And the briar rose and the orchis died amid the summer glow;
But on the hill the golden rod, and the aster in the wood,
And the yellow sunflower by the brook in autumn beauty stood,
[illegible]
And now, when comes the calm mild day, as still such days will come,
To call the squirrel and the bee from out their [illegible]
[illegible]
And twinkle in the smoky lights the waters of the rill,
[illegible]
And sighs to find them in the wood and by the stream no more.

—BRYANT.

♦

City and Farm Wives

BY way of advice to overworked city women, Mrs. William King, a well-known writer, and busy Sunday School and missionary worker, says:

For good, wholesome, genuine rest, give me a visit to some hospitable, roomy home. To wake in the early morning and look out on a quiet farmyard is the most restful feeling one can experience. Persons living in the country get so accustomed to these scenes that they are like a great many other blessings. We become so use to receiving them that we don't realize that they are new every morning, and so it is with [illegible] things that most impress a city visitor are nothing to them.

For the farm-wife an occasional little trip to the city, when her husband goes to sell his crop and buy winter supplies, is adviseable. This periodical sojourn of the farm-wife in the city, and of the city woman in the country, makes each acquainted with the joys and hardships of the other, keeps each from falling into nets, and broadens the vision of each. Each will borrow from the other some bit of knowledge or quality of character that will enable and help her to keep her home better. The time for the city woman's annual visit to the city has passed—if we except Thanksgiving, when so many city folks flock to the farmstead. But during Fall and the early Winter, a farmer usually takes his trip to town, and we suggest to him, the children and "mother" herself, that a little sum of money be set aside, if possible, for "mother" to go with "father." It will be a good investment; "mother" will come back better qualified to carry another year's work along cheerily and intelligently. If husband and children urge the trip, Mother, take it; do not let a false economy intertere; it is to their interest, as well as your own, that you brush up against the outside world now and then, and see how other wives and mothers do things.

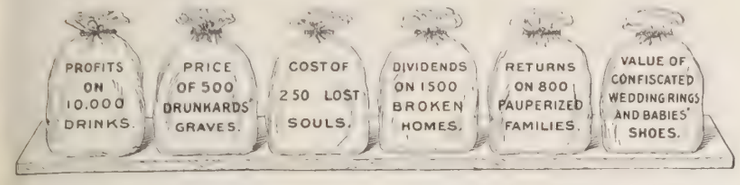
♦

"Tattling"

This is one of the ugliest and most mischievous of habits, and one of the hardest to break, but it is not difficult to prevent. Guard your child against it as you would against smallpox. Nip "tale-telling" in the bud. "Mamma, I heard Kitty tell teacher a lie. I wouldn't tell a lie," your child says. You answer: "I know you wouldn't, my dear," and you are confirming your child in Pharisaism as well as tale-bearing. Say simply: "I am sorry to hear you say so," and change the subject, or add: "Has my little daughter heard anybody say anything pretty to-day?" and you do your child a double service. Reporting a matter in which your knowledge may be preventive or helpful is a different affair. "How can I teach my child to distinguish?" you ask. By cultivating the spirit of loving-kindness and teaching him that speech is God's gift, to be used for the help and not the injury of our fellows.

The Saloon-Keeper's Money

What Preachers, Lawyers, and Missionaries Say about Its Acceptance — A Reformed Drunkard's Verdict



PROFITS ON 10,000 DRINKS.
PRICE OF 500 DRUNKARDS' GRAVES.
COST OF 250 LOST SOULS.
DIVIDENDS ON 1500 BROKEN HOMES.
RETURNS ON 800 PAUPERIZED FAMILIES.
VALUE OF CONFISCATED WEDDING RINGS AND BABIES' SHOES.

No Compromise

SHALL we take the sin-stained earnings,
Won by treachery and wrong,
Though it be a licensed evil,
Bold and confident and strong?
Shall we use the gold that glitters
With its mocking, baleful light?
Shall we sacrifice for money
All our principles of right?

When their cry goes up to heaven,
From the children in our land,
Can we take the price of birthrights
From the liquor-dealer's hand?

Can our church, in league with Satan,
Sharing in the spoiler's fee,
Holding gains derived from evil,
Teach a spotless purity?

No! O, no! The cry repeated
Echoed o'er and o'er again.
Our fair church for one short moment
Must not bear so foul a stain.
Right and justice, love and mercy,—
Brave and fearless in the fight,
Make no compromise with evil,
Stand for purity and right!

Boy's Club. MRS. EDWIN N. NORTHROP
Worcester, Mass.

OUT of a flood of able and interesting letters upon the question: "Shall the Church accept the saloon keeper's money in aid of its spiritual work?" we publish the following selections from a number which might be called "expert testimony," since they are for the most part the verdict of preachers, lawyers, temperance and Prohibition workers. Other letters will appear next week.

Wm. F. Round, Brother Director Order of St. Christopher, College Point, N. Y., writes:

It has been decided that the Order of St. Christopher will not take such money. It can't afford the risk!

W. D., Justice of Peace, Calif., writes:

The cause of Christ would not be benefited thereby. I know from experience, in criminal cases of felony, that at least three-fourths of them originate in saloon drinking. Still, we must win the saloon-keeper for Christ.

Rev. T. J. L., D.D., First Presbyterian Church, California, writes:

It might be perfectly proper to accept a voluntary contribution, but it would be wrong to solicit contributions.

H. J. C., Attorney-at-law, N. Y., writes:

Let the church put itself under no obligation whatever to the saloon.

L. B., A Superintendent of W. C. T. U. prison and jail work and work among railway employees, writes:

It would be no worse to accept money made by murder and robbery. If the devil helps to carry on the church work I think he will have his share of the profits.

Wm. Woods, Texas, writes:

If proclaimed or advertised it is all wrong Given according to scriptural injunction, "Let not thy right hand," etc., would obviously settle the question at once, for all givers, saloon-keepers included.

Geo. Hoffman, Sec. State Central Committee of Pennsylvania Prohibition Party, Bryn Mawr, writes:

I believe the fact that "tainted" money has been received in the past is largely responsible for the lack of aggressiveness on moral questions which exists in the church to-day. The acceptance of such money by a church having large financial burdens, does wonders to hinder its influence in a community. Let the church of God not be forced to seal its lips by receiving subscriptions from saloon-keepers.

Rev. W. A. Hutchinson, Colo., writes:

If he gives money and the church accepts it as "hush money," it is wrong. I have known saloon-keepers who were helped by permitting them to give, but always with the understanding that the church would not be "hushed."

D. B. R., "A reformed drunkard," writes:

No. I have never known an instance where the saloon-keeper's money was received by churches and benevolent societies that it did not create respect for him and his business.

Mrs. D. A. Price, Texas, writes:

If there were no saloons, the drug stores sell the whiskey just the same. If we exclude the saloon-keepers' money we must exclude the druggists'.

Dr. H. A. Reid, Pasadena, Wis., writes:

There can be no excuse, reason or argument framed in favor or in defense of accepting saloon money for church uses, that will not apply just as well to the gambler's, blackmailer's or counterfeiter's money. Some urge that these pursuits have been outlawed, while the saloon has not. Yes; but the church—all branches of it—has declared the saloon and the whole liquor trade to be the most infamous, God-defying, body and soul destroying pursuit ever licensed in our country. The church has morally outlawed it as a crime against God and humanity, if possible more heinous than the others, because it is a breeder of them all. Hence the moral obloquy of accepting money from saloon profits has its own scarlet shame, besides that of all the other outlawries added to it.

J. W. McL., Bridgetown, N. S., writes:

"If all good thoughts, all holy desires," come from God, to whom all "the silver and the gold" belong, surely it must be right to use in his service what belongs to him—when he prompts the giving. We cannot limit his power. Pray for the giver.

D. M. Gillespie, Pres. Christian Cooperative Association., Kansas, writes:

It is no worse and no better to accept money from a saloon-keeper than from men engaged in other nefarious callings. If the saloon-keeper or gambler sees fit to attend church and cast in a contribution when the basket is passed, the sin—if there is any—would be his, not the church's. It is wrong to solicit his aid.

C. T. P., Notary Public, N. J., writes:

Put me down no; I hope with a vast majority.

W. S. C., Atchison, Kan., writes:

Here, where I am known as a Prohibitionist and where I have had some experience in helping the destitute, I must testify to the generous help given by the families of the local saloon-keepers, and also to the excellent moral and religious influence of several families whose bread-winners are saloon-keepers. The dram-shop is bad, but how much worse than the men who patronize it or vote to legalize it? The drift of nearly all the arguments seems to blame the saloon-keeper, and the principles of self-control and personal responsibility seems to be lost sight of. The real fact is we are all responsible for this evil and we can not shove the whole burden on to the saloon-keeper's shoulder.

N. J. Thomas, Indiana, writes:

Suppose a mother has her boy killed by the saloon-keeper's traffic. The saloon-keeper comes to her and says, "My business killed your son, but I will give you money." Will that mother accept the money? I think not. She would sooner spend her life in the almshouse.

H. C. Underhill, N. Y., writes:

The motive, not the source of the gift, nor the past or present occupation of the donor, was Christ's test—e. g., the widow's mite, the benevolence of the good Samaritan (Luke 10: 30), and the anointing of Jesus by the Magdalene, who was a sinner (Luke 7: 39). Christ never raised questions as to the past or present life of the donor or as to the source of the gift, nor refused gifts on that account. He took dinners from publicans and sinners (Matt. 9: 10; Luke 5: 25; Mark 2: 10); and self-righteous Pharisees (Luke 7: 39); from men like Zaccheus, and hospitality from Samaritans (John 9: 10), and perhaps from heathen Gentiles (Luke 7: 2-8), and a colt from a man who apparently was no disciple and certainly was an unwilling giver (Luke 19: 31). The apostle did the same, not inquiring the source of the gift —e. g., the division and enjoyment of goods in common (Acts 2: 44; Acts. 4: 34-37), and the Centurion, Cornelius, to whom, though a Roman and outwardly a heathen, Peter said: "Thy alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God."

A Subscriber, Enders, Ark., writes:

In accepting the saloon-keeper's money let him know that God will bless him in giving according to the motive that prompts him. As some of the friends have said, it is blood-money—the fruit of heartaches and anguish, broken homes and life-time suffering. I for one have experienced this. May God so move the heart of the saloon-keeper that his giving may be one step towards his reformation.

This letter is signed Henry Root, M.D., E. B. Murray, "a one-time victim"; and A. Williamson, Elder Presbyterian Church:

Is it not true that "the receiver is as bad as the thief"? Is not the liquor-seller a thief of bread from children, their clothing, shelter, and the very home itself? Should the church or Y. M. C. A. ask for or accept a share of the stolen profits? No; forever no!

Mrs. Nettie E. Myers, Ia., writes:

No, no—a thousand times no! The woes, heartaches, the hunger and cold of desolate wives and little children cry "No!"

Mr. Moody Denies a Story

In the October 11th issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, there appeared a paragraph under the caption: "A Providential Journey," which was reprinted from a usually reliable English contemporary. It related an experience which happened to Mr. D. L. Moody while he was engaged in securing a certain sum of money for a benevolent object, and how he finally realized his wish in a remarkable manner during a railroad journey. We now learn from Mr. Moody that the anecdote is without the slightest foundation. It was evidently the manufacture of some unscrupulous sensation-monger, and to permit it to stand uncontradicted would be unjust to Mr. Moody as well as to our own readers.

Quieting vs. Irritating Food

Try Grape-Nuts

"Chinese dogs are taught to subsist upon boiled rice with a little milk, and become so placid that they will not even bark," says Dr. Oswald.

This seems to demonstrate the fact that a largely vegetable diet inclines to quiet the nervous system, where, on the contrary, a diet composed largely of flesh is ultimately irritating, particularly to one confined mostly to mental work.

Grape-Nuts was placed on the market for the use of brain workers. It is a concentrated nourishing food, containing in its make up minute particles of phosphate of potash obtained from the field grains. This, when combined as nature combines it in the human body with albumen, makes the gray matter of the brain and the nerve centers; therefore the use of Grape-Nuts supplies the brain worker with steady renewal of the daily losses from his employment. Grape-Nuts do build brains, as can be demonstrated by ten days or two weeks use. There comes a steady, sturdy feeling of independence and strength.

The question of properly selected food is the question of the day, and the individuals who give this question their care and attention will become best fitted to make a success of life. Grocers sell Grape-Nuts food.

...THE...
TREATMENT OF RHEUMATISM.

The editor of the New Albany (Ind.) Medical Herald recently published an article on Rheumatism in which he said:

"But not until lately, when Tartarlithine has been employed by us, have we attained results that were even fairly satisfactory in the treatment of gout and rheumatism. By the employment of this drug I have been able to relieve some of the most distressing afflictions of this class, and now regard Tartarlithine as the most valuable remedy at our disposal in the treatment of this class of affections. In rheumatism and in gout Tartarlithine can be administered with confidence."

Regular package $1.00, 50 doses.
Of all druggists or post-free by mail.
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

McKESSON & ROBBINS,
79 Ann Street, - - - New York.
SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

"Every Well Man Hath His Ill Day."

A doctor's examination might show that kidneys, liver and stomach are normal, but the doctor cannot analyze the blood upon which these organs depend.

Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood. It cures you when "a bit off" or when seriously afflicted. It never disappoints.

Dyspepsia—"My husband had dyspepsia and Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him. Our little boy was nervous and the baby had ulcerous sores. It cured both." MRS. EMMA BEBE, Portage, Pa.

Indigestion—"I could not eat for some months on account of distress and indigestion. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me so that I can eat and sleep well." MRS. G. A. GUNTZ, Taylor and Walnut Sts., Wilmington, Del.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

DROP-HEAD MACHINES, $13.50:

$13.50 buys this "Hines" Drop-Head Sewing Machine fully guaranteed by us for 30 years complete with full set of best attachments. This Machine is equal to others advertised for $40.00, is made with piano polished solid oak cabinet, best head made and every known improvement. Catalogue of Pianos, Organs, Sewing Machines and Bicycles, Lithographed Catalogue of Carpets, Rugs and Draperies, and General Catalogue of everything to Eat, Wear and Use, are all free. Which do you want? Address this way:

JULIUS HINES & SON,
BALTIMORE, MD. Dept. 218

WE SAVE HALF YOUR MONEY ON
VIOLINS, GUITARS, MANDOLINS, BANJOS ETC.
GET OUR BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED
CATALOGUE IT'S FREE WRITE TO DAY
SYNDICATE MUSICAL INSTRUMENT Co
356 FULTON ST BROOKLYN, N.Y.
IN BUSINESS 20 YEARS

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE

More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Color greatly improved. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate

NO MOSS GROWING CLEANING. NO CRUMBLING CRACKING.
THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.,
70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

The Latest Improved McCREERY FOLDING VAPOR BATH CABINET. Has a Door and all the latest improvements. A home treatment that will cure la grippe, rheumatism, all blood, skin & kidney troubles; reduces superfluous flesh. Price $5, Face steamer $1.50 extra. Folds neatly in small space. Free descriptive book and testimonials. Special inducements to salesmen. MOLLENKOPP & M'CREERY, 138 Summit St. Toledo, O.

WANTED—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents; may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

10,000 BICYCLES
Closing out Overstock. Shipped on trial without deposit. Order Today. STANDARD '99 Models, $10 to $20. '98 and '97 Models, $6 to $12. Second Hand, good as new $3 to $10.
EARN A BICYCLE on our new plan. FREE USE of wheel to Rider Agents. Write for Special Offer. Mead Cycle Co., Dept. ..... Chicago.

It Is a Certainty That Catarrh

can be cured. You will believe it after using a sample of Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure. Mailed free. Address Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 50 Broad St., Blosser Building, Atlanta, Ga.

OPIUM MORPHINE and Liquor Habit cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Book of particulars free. Address Dr. J. E. Stephens, Dept. R.5, Lebanon, Ohio.

THE TOUCHSTONE

A NEW SERIAL STORY

BY HELEN SHIPTON

CHAPTER I.

MAY AND DEATH.

IF there is a time when the place of a man's abode seems to him cheerless and unattractive, it is when it is neither a new home nor an old one, when the charm of novelty has had time to wear off, and the charm of association has not had time to grow: when the possibilities that seem always to be latent in a strange place have been tested and found to be but limited after all, and no soothing influence of habit and custom has yet asserted itself.

It was at such a stage in his affairs that Douglas Lingard had arrived, and consequently it was with a somewhat depressed and jaundiced eye that he surveyed the picturesque farmstead of Highashes, in which he had taken up his quarters with some satisfaction rather more than a month before.

"I WILL BE UP AGAIN," SAID THE YOUNG MAN QUIETLY.

He was still aware that it was picturesque: indeed, it was even more so than it had been, for April had just blossomed into May. But he knew now that it was lonely, or rather that he himself was so, and that he had possibly made a mistake in setting himself so far from his comrades, although he had told himself a month ago that he saw quite enough of them in working hours.

Far below him in the valley he could see, like a little scar upon the face of the landscape, the half finished embankment which marked the progress of the railway line upon the construction of this portion of which he and four or five other young civil engineers were employed. A couple of miles farther away was the faint smoky blur which indicated the little country town where the others had elected to find lodgings.

They were not bad fellows, all more or less gentlemanly; one officially his superior, and the others ranking as equals or subordinates; but Douglas Lingard, though he got on fairly well with them all, had not felt much drawn to any of them, or to the dull little town whose mild attractions they had voted better fun than the country.

A mile on this side of the uncompleted line, and looking almost at his feet, though in reality nearly a mile distant by the steep winding road, was the village of Sudbrook, where he had first looked for quarters, but had failed to find any one who could and would receive him.

The young man leisurely surveyed the wide and, on the whole, fair and smiling prospect; then turned and looked at the small farm house, a modest building of brown-gray stone, only distinguished from many others of the kind by a large bay-window projecting from the middle of the front and carried up to the second story, and by the ivy that muffled it from the ground to the eaves.

"It was that window that brought me here!" he thought, and with a little twist of the lips, half rueful and half amused. "Well! if it does not prove to be enough in itself to enliven existence, I can always change it for the wild excitements of Castleford."

And upon that, thrusting his hands into his pockets to make sure that he was provided with a book in each of them, Douglas Lingard set out to employ the leisure of his Saturday afternoon in a long walk of exploration.

In one sense he had little reason to care very much in what kind of place he found himself for it could only be for him a temporary abode. In three years at most that part of the G. W. X. line upon which he was employed would be finished, and he would have to seek work elsewhere. But even a home for two years may be something to one who has no other: and Douglas Lingard had the "domestic instincts" rather strongly developed: he would have liked to feel himself growing fond of Sudbrook village and Highashes Farm, even though he had no permanent ties to link his lot with them.

The peaceful English landscape was very beautiful in his eyes; if he was dull it was not because he desired change of scene, but because he had had too much of it—because during the latter half of his six-and-twenty years he had been flung from pillar to post.

It seemed a sort of irony of fate that such a man should have at that moment a grammar and phrase-book in his pocket, and be doggedly striving in his leisure hours to give himself a working knowledge of more than one foreign language, with a view, when his present work should be over, to laying railroads in wild lands beyond the sea.

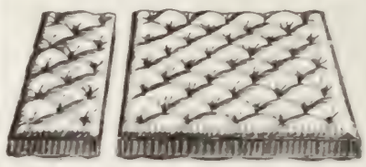
But that was really an outcome of the same longings, a step towards the realization of his favorite dream, according to which he was to make money enough to return to his native land and buy a place of his own, however small, and have at last a settled home, and neighbors, and responsibilities, and all the little homely trivial blessed details that make up so many men's lives.

(Continued on next page)

"The laborer is worthy of his hire." But a wage-earner can earn more if he has vigorous health. If the blood is not pure itshould be purified. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the weak strong.

Uwanta Snow White

Cotton Down Sectional Mattress $6.50



FROM FACTORY TO CUSTOMER.

Uwanta Snow White Cotton Down Mattress can be had only of us. We do not sell them to retailers. You save all middlemen's profits. Were these mattresses sold to dealers the retail price would be $15. Beware of imitations. Do not confound Uwanta Snow White Cotton Down Mattresses with the cheap cotton mattresses sold by the trade. They are no more nearly related than is finely tempered steel to pig iron.

Absolutely the Best Mattress Money Can Buy.

As soft as a $40 Hair Mattress. Hair will pack, Cotton Down will not. Hair attracts moths, Cotton Down never does. Hair is of animal origin and may be tainted and carry disease. Cotton Down is a vegetable fibre and is cool, sanitary and healthful.

What is Cotton Down? It is carefully selected Snow White Cotton, fresh from the fields, thrice run Cotton Down by our own patented machinery, by which it is made as fluffy as feathers. Our Uwanta Mattress, made from it, we guarantee to last a lifetime without being turned over. If made in other parts the price is but $6. Sectional mattresses are to be preferred because of the ease with which they are handled and because by shifting the sections all parts of the mattress receive the same wear. We prepay the freight to all points east of the Mississippi and north of Tennessee, and divide the freight with you to more distant points.

Thirty Days' Free Trial. If not entirely satisfactory after thirty days' trial return the mattress to us at our expense and your money will be most cheerfully refunded. In ordering give the width of your bed, measuring from the inside of the side rails. All mattresses are 6 ft. 3 in. long.

Fort Wayne Furniture Company, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Also manufacturers of Sideboards, Extension Tables and Dining Room Chairs. Send for Catalogue of Dining Room Furniture. References: Old National Bank, or Dun's Commercial Agency, Fort Wayne, Ind.

If You

REV. THOS. J. OLIVER CURRAN, St. George's Church, 70th St. & Drexel Ave., Chicago, Ill., July 8th, 1899, writes:

Colds, Nervousness and Sleeplessness and found it self and others, that it will do all you claim."

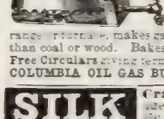
CAUTION!

inventor and originator, and has obtained final decision in Supreme Court in Washington, D. C., against imitators. We are operating under the ONLY PATENTS that have been granted on THIS PROCESS and THESE INSTRUMENTS.

Send for prices. Our productions are selling rapidly in this country. We want persons in all sections to sell for us. Many giving only part of their time are making $100 to $300 per month. Others giving all their time are making much more.

DR. H. SANCHE & COMPANY.
261 Fifth Avenue, New York City.
57 State Street, Chicago, Ill.
61 Fifth Street, Detroit, Mich.
Canadian Branch: 2268 St. Catherine Street, Montreal, P.Q.



WE PAY SALARY to sell our oil burner, just patented, heats any cook stove, range, furnace, makes gas out of coal, at one-half cheaper than coal or wood. Bakes and cooks perfectly. Write for Free Circulars giving terms & showing burner in operation. COLUMBIA OIL GAS BURNER CO., Washington, D. C.

SILK QUILT Crazy Quilt Patch, large pack age, pretty pieces, lot: 5 pkgs. 25c. Large pkg. Emb. Silk, 25c. Quilt Patterns, 40 diagrams and catalogue, Ladies' Art Co. 806 S. B'way, D 13, St. Louis, Mo.

A Few Of Our SPECIAL BARGAINS

They are the Latest

We send free samples of all. Order either and you will be pleased.

No. 802 – Ladies' Jacket Dressed Broadcloth, has beautiful velvet collar, has beautiful braid trimmed cuffs and fastening in front, fancy braid trimmed cuffs and fastening in front, fancy braid trimmed cuffs and fastening in front, fancy

The Touchstone

(Continued from preceding page)

Some men carry a prophecy of failure written, as it were, upon their foreheads, but Douglas Lingard was not one of them. His figure was strong and well knit, as could be seen even as he moved somewhat listlessly and slouchingly along the quiet, lonely road, studying alternately his phrase-book and his Spanish grammar. And though close-cut dark hair, green-gray eyes, straight nose and clean-shaven, firmly-closed lips are not striking features by which to identify any one when enumerated in a passport, yet as this young man combined them they seemed to betoken that he was both a strong man, as men go, and a gentleman, as that word ought to be understood.

But if he had not the look of a failure, neither had he quite the look of a successful man, or at least of a man who had been successful so far. He looked as though some trouble or disappointment might have partly quenched the animal spirits proper to six-and-twenty, and have made hope less easy, though without weakening resolve. And, indeed, there had been a time when his modest ambition had seemed many years nearer being realized than it was at present; and when a man's chief object in life is linked with the memory of a disappointment, and what he conceives to be a wrong, it is apt to impart a slight but permanent flavor of bitterness to his cup.

Douglas Lingard was not so dull as to be giving all his attention to the construction of the Spanish language, with the beauty of the May afternoon wooing him on every side. The special charm of that hilly pastoral country through which he was passing is its infinite variety, and every time he raised his eyes to look round him they were greeted by some fresh combination of wooded hill and green valley—small, quaintly shaped fields where the young lambs were playing—winding sandy road alternately bordered by tall hedgerows and crumbling lichen-covered dry stone walls, and strips of plantation dark with sombre firs and white in patches with wild cherry blossoms.

Another such road struck presently into this that he was pursuing, and as he looked up to decide whether he should turn aside or keep straight on, he saw before him a little hamlet, about half the size of Sudbrook, which was itself one of the smallest of villages.

This, he thought, would no doubt be Brentwood, the little place that he had seen indicated on the ordnance map to the west of Sudbrook, and through its narrow street he allowed his aimless feet to take him, walking blindly—as we all do—towards his fate.

Standing before one of the humblest of the humble little dwellings of brownish gray stone was an object which is always ugly and repulsive looking, but there was doubly so, in contrast with the fresh young life of nature opening all around. It was a hearse, of that particularly objectionable variety which looks like some huge black beetle, by reason of its having a receptacle for the coffin in front, to represent the thorax, and behind, as an enormous abdomen, the mourning coach, which economically conveys four relatives of the deceased.

One glance told Douglas Lingard that this monument of bad taste and pagan sentiment was at present empty, and at the same time he perceived that this was not quite an ordinary village funeral.

Two or three women stood at their doors, looking out, their children thrust behind them, and apparently by force prevented from running out into the road. The other houses were closed, as far as could be seen, door and window, and not a soul was moving in the road.

The two men who were in charge of the hearse stood, one on either side of the horses, staring straight before them with an aggressively wooden expression, or rather lack of expression. One was short and red-faced, one tall and cadaverous-looking, but they were for the moment wonderfully alike in their evident determination to hear nothing, see nothing, and do nothing, until further orders.

Curiosity made the new-comer linger for a moment, and in that moment the cottage door opened, and there came out—a young lady.

She was not in mourning; indeed to Douglas Lingard's ignorant masculine perception, she seemed to be wearing very much the reverse of mourning, as she stood by the grim black side of the hearse, though in fact her garb was only that natural to a well-dressed young woman on a bright spring afternoon.

Her eyes were full of tears, with indignant flashes lightning through them, and, her lips apart, she seemed ready to appeal to anybody and everybody, and the larger the audience the better. Finding no audience but the undertaker's assistants, who looked far less responsive than their horses, and a strange young man, she naturally and breathlessly addressed the latter.

"Is it not dreadful—disgraceful?" she said, and even in her eagerness her voice was hushed and low. "There is a poor man lying dead in there, and these men will not help to put him into his coffin—they are afraid. The funeral was to be at three, and it is nearly four now; they were more than an hour late in coming, and now they will do nothing."

Douglas Lingard glanced from the stolid countenances of the men—which somehow suggested that they might have been seeking for Dutch courage on the way—to the quivering features of the lady, and then through the open door into the cottage room, where three women in black were standing.

"Why are they afraid?" he asked.

"It was smallpox!" she answered, dropping her voice still lower. "The poor wife has been ill, too, or she and I would have done it. I have told those women that I would help any of them, but they say we cannot do it without a man. I suppose they are afraid, too."

"I will help you," said the young man quietly.

The lady—she was only a girl, as girls are reckoned nowadays, being, perhaps, a year or two younger than Lingard himself—started and looked at him, as if for the first time recognizing his existence as a stranger, and flushed and grew pale.

"Oh!" she said. "Are you sure? Do you think that you ought?"

"Some one must do it, and I give you my word that there is no reason why I should not. It is no use talking to these——"

He did not finish the sentence, but it sounded as though he had said "these things."

The young lady still stood as if irresolute, with wide questioning eyes, not making way for him to enter; but as he added, "Don't you think we had better lose no more time?" she started and moved back into the little kitchen into which he followed her.

A sickly-looking woman sat by the fire, holding on her knee a baby which was evidently not many days old. Her tears flowed freely as she bent over its little pinched face, and the three black-clothed women looked at each other, or at the floor rather than at her, and had nothing to say to her.

Douglas Lingard laid his hat upon the table and turned to the lady.

"Surely you might be spared," he said. "One of these good women will show me what to do, and help me if necessary. It is not fit for you——"

The good women looked ashamed of themselves, but not particularly ready to respond, and the girl broke in, still with that same hushed eagerness:

"No! I could not bear to think that I had brought you into it unless I took my share of the risk. And they have their children to think of. Will you come this way?"

She opened a door that led into a larger room behind the kitchen—the only other room that the cottage could boast. The woman had dragged in the light roughly-finished coffin, and had left it on the floor; and on the bed lay the poor relics of mortality that now were a terror and a difficulty to the living.

They had been decently straightened and clothed for burial, as the young man saw with relief and some surprise.

His companion answered his look:

"The woman who—does these things—was here the day he died. But she was taken ill yesterday, and that has helped to frighten people, though of course it cannot be caused by this. And these poor things are almost strangers here."

(To be Continued).

A TRIUMPH OF SCIENCE.

Reader, do you know what real cocoa is? To economical housewives and wide-awake people generally, the best cocoa and that of Van Houten are synonymous terms. The cocoa manufactured by that well-known firm is a preparation from the very best cocoa beans, and contains all the valuable nutritive and stimulating properties natural to cocoa. The cocoa-bean contains an alkaloid called "Theobromine," which is the principle of the "cup that cheers, but does not inebriate."

The great point of difference between the stimulating properties of alcohol, and that of theobromine is, that the use of the former causes a subsequent depression, which is propo-tioned to the amount of stimulation it has previously brought about; the use of the latter (theobromine) is unattended by such unpleasant after-effects. Of course, only a first-class cocoa, such as Van Houten's will work in the aforesaid manner. That cocoa has been described as "A triumph of science!" It is absolutely pure, entirely soluble and easy of assimilation and digestion by the weakest stomach. It costs but a trifle, being less than one cent per cup; and it is the simplest drink to make ready, of the whole catalogue of possible beverages. It smells so good, and tastes so delicious, that when you try it you will certainly exclaim: "Ah! indeed, it is a triumph of science!"

HAVE YOU TRIED
VAN HOUTEN'S EATING CHOCOLATE?

CHILDREN NEVER CRY
when they have to take
Dr. Bull's
COUGH SYRUP
It is pleasant, pure and reliable. It soothes while it cures.

PORTSMOUTH, Va., Jan., 18, 1899
I am never without a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in the house, because it prevented my two children of dying of the whooping cough. I think it an excellent medicine.
MRS. C. B. JOLLETT.

Refuse Substitutes.

A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md.
Dr. Bull's Pills cure Constipation and Biliousness. Trial, 20 for 5c. At Dealers, or by mail.

Wool Soap
For Toilet and Bath
Swift and Company, Makers, Chicago
102

"SAMANTHA AT SARATOGA" FREE
BY JOSIAH ALLEN'S WIFE

"Samantha at Saratoga" is the most popular book ever written by the famous authoress, Marietta Holley ("Josiah Allen's Wife.") It is brimful of witty remarks, droll philosophy and ludicrous descriptions, written in the author's best vein, and will be enjoyed by every lover of the humorous. Many thousands of the subscription edition of this book have been sold at $2.50 each. We have just published an entirely new and complete edition of "Samantha at Saratoga," containing all the text of the original, in one large volume of 374 pages, printed from large type, embellished with 60 humorous illustrations by Opper, many of them full page, and for the purpose of introducing our popular illustrated household magazine, The Ladies' World, into thousands of homes where it is not already taken, we now make the following special and extraordinary offer: Upon receipt of only Fifteen Cents we will send The Ladies' World for Three Months, and to each subscriber we will also send, Free and prepaid, one copy of "Samantha at Saratoga." This is an exceptional opportunity, and places this incomparable book within the reach of all. THE LADIES' WORLD is a large, 24-page, 96-column illustrated magazine for ladies and the family circle, with elegant cover printed in colors. It is devoted to Stories, Poems, Ladies' Fancy-Work, Home Decoration, Housekeeping, Fashions, Hygiene, Juvenile Reading, Floriculture, etc. You will be charmed with the magazine, and delighted with "Samantha." Five subscriptions, with the book free to each, will be sent for 60 cents. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. We have been established 24 years, and refer to the mercantile agencies as to our responsibility. Address:
S. H. MOORE & CO., 23 City Hall Place, New York.

SENT ON RECEIPT OF 25 CENTS

It will repay you in a month if you buy our $2 scale. SEE THAT YOU GET CORRECT WEIGHT, and avoid being imposed upon.
Finely Finished Tile Top. Guaranteed Accurate.
Weighs 1 ounce to 24 pounds. No family should be without one, it checks your purchases. Takes little room. Price $2.00 for a limited time. Send 25c. and we will express it to you with privilege of examination, and if you find it as represented pay balance, $1.75, and the scale is yours. Agents wanted. The CARLISLE MFG. CO., Chicago, Ill.

HENS LAY BEST
—in fact they lay double the eggs winter and summer when fed Green Cut Bone.
Mann's New Bone Cutters
cut all hard and soft bones, meat, gristle, &c., fine, fast and without choking and run easy. Clover cut with our Clover Cutters helps wonderfully. Mann's Granite Crystal Grit and Feed Trays too. Catalogue FREE
F. W. MANN CO., Box 29, Milford, Mass.

Don't Pay High Prices
TO YOUR DEALER.
You can buy the Advance Fence

direct from us at wholesale prices. It's a first-class fence in every way. Write for circulars and prices.
ADVANCE FENCE CO. 149 Old St., Peoria, Ill.

METAL WHEELS
In all sizes and varieties, to fit any axle. They last forever. Either direct or stagger spoke. Can't break down; can't dry out; no resetting of tires. Good in dry weather as in wet weather. Send for catalog & prices.
ELECTRIC WHEEL CO., Box 186 QUINCY, ILL.

CRAZY WORK 125 Velvet Remnants assorted colors, with Embroidery, Chenille, 42 cts.. 400 Beautiful Heavyweight Silk Remnants, all colors, enough for a large quilt, 50 cts., big package with floss and quilt patterns, 10 cts. 50 Fine Woolen Remnants, with Ice Wool, 28 cents. All post-paid LEMARIE'S SILK MILL Little Ferry, N. J.

FENCE! STRONGEST MADE. Bull-strong, Chicken-tight. Sold to the Farmer at Wholesale Prices. Fully Warranted. Catalog Free. COILED SPRING FENCE CO. Box 47. Winchester, Indiana, U. S. A.

Cuts Cake from pan. Fast seller. Big profits to Agents. Other new goods, free. Richardson Mfg. Co., 6th St., Bath, N.Y.

In Women's Lives

About Sunday Dinners—Housewifely Cares—Choosing a Life-Partner—A Little Maid of Six

HERE is a leaf from one woman's notebook. For several years it was necessary for her having cooked one dinner at twelve o'clock, to make ready a second meal of the same kind at 5.30, and also to prepare and put up a substantial luncheon at the latter hour. She says:

It had to be began at four o'clock, and it came hardest on Sunday, for I was tired after church and Sunday School. Every day I would have to take off my afternoon dress and go into the kitchen: if callers came, I was worried for fear they would stay too long. If I went out, I had to make haste to be at home in time. Finally I concluded to put away my rebellious thoughts and call myself a mechanic. After I had settled on this plan, I thought that it was very disagreeable to use a machine which was always out of order, and I therefore made up my mind, if I must be a machine, I would be a good one. Then when the hour came I went right on about that dinner, and got it in as good style as I was capable of. It sometimes takes years to learn patience under trials, but, if we ask Him, He will help us over the hard places.

When I read this letter, I said to myself: "I would have taken my callers right into my kitchen and let them sit there and chat while I went on with my work. Then, I think, by means of a large apron with a bib and shoulder-straps, or with a regular blue-checked overall, I would have protected my afternoon dress. The lady did wisely to think of herself as a machine, but she might equally have regarded the home as the machine and herself as its pulse, its prime minister, its queen. A home queen cannot be better employed than in managing for the comfort and health of the home people, and if some man going to night work, as I suppose was the case here, needs a late dinner and a dainty luncheon, what kinder thing than for the lady of the house—the loaf giver—to make it appetizing and nice for him. Not "machine," dear woman, but "queen" I call you.

THE same correspondent who is, I am persuaded, a pattern housewife, gives us some good advice about the washing of dishes. Her method is to get all pots, pans and cooking utensils out of the way before the family sits down to a meal. As soon as a dish is cooked, she takes it from the pot or pan, sets it ready for the table in a warm place, and gives that utensil a very thorough cleansing, taking care to have plenty of hot water and soap, a wire dish cloth, and a very clean scouring cloth.

For the table dishes, a long shelf and three big pans are recommended. Take the glass and silver first, then the pitchers and teacups, then the plates. Wash everything very clean on both sides in hot suds, then set them to drain, resting them on one side. Wash each piece separately, and be very particular that your towels are immaculate.

In short, give time and attention to the task: have system, and do not slight your work. Thus you can make drudgery divine.

FROM dish-washing to love-making is only a step, and here is a letter from a young gentleman who loves and wants to marry a lady several years older than himself. Well, why should he not, if she is willing? The essentials for happy marriage are similarity of taste, congenial disposition and Christian principle. I may add that there ought to be a firm basis of health and vigor, and that persons aware that they have any physical or moral taint should not marry. If you know that you have epilepsy or scrofula, or a tendency to insanity, it is not right—it is a crime for you to take the risk of marrying and transmitting these deplorable conditions to another generation. In the intimacy of wedded life there is room for great joy and for great sorrow, so that people should not rush with headlong haste into a state which ought to be regarded as sacred. Be sure you are right in your choice, then trust in God, and have no fears. A woman's seniority in the way of age often enables her to understand a man's needs, and seems to endow her with the tact and gentleness which hold a husband's heart. Many very happy marriages are formed in which there is disparity of age and in which the wife is the elder. Persons are as old as they feel, and some people of both sexes are more mature at twenty-five than others are at forty. There is no arbitrary rule about choosing a partner for life, but one should reflect that it is for life, not for a few months or years. In marriage, each should help the other to develop whatever is best and noblest in character.

I SUPPOSE if I were teaching a little maid of six to read, I should begin by making her familiar with the alphabet, and should proceed to training her in spelling in the old-fashioned way. The newer method is to show a child a word, like "cat" or "horse" or "will-o'-the-wisp" or "pansy," and treating the word as if it were a picture, let the little learner acquire it by comparison with others. In this way a child learns to read before mastering the alphabet, and reads before she spells. It seems a quick and easy method enough, and the results are good, but to women brought up on spelling-books and grammars—Brown's at that, and Mr. Elligott's and Sanders'—it has somehow an air of witch-work. By all means let your lassie be six, or even seven, before she attacks reading and arithmetic. Do not force her little brain. From what you say, dear Mother Matilda, your small woman child is uncommonly bright and precocious, and should be restrained from too rapid growth, not hurried forward. The most brilliant young woman I ever knew at college had not learned her letters when she was nine years old; but when she began to acquire, the process was like the growth of Jack's famous bean stalk.

A DEAR Western reader writes to ask how she may be delivered from chronic discontent with her lot. She pines for her old home, her old friends and her former surroundings. "Sometimes I feel as if I should fly, just to get away from these vast levels of green, and hear the sound of the sea once more. But if I should go back, my girl friends would be married and gone; my old clothes, good enough in this place, would be out of date, and I'd look like Mrs. Noah, and the hard life I've had would have set its mark on me. Perhaps I'm well enough where I am, but I'm homesick."

There are tears between the lines in this letter. I want to put my arms around you and comfort you this minute. Never mind about the old clothes; come back for a visit if you can spare the money, and if your family can spare you. Homesickness is a bitter sort of misery when it tugs at the heart. Who cares how you look? Mother and sisters will soon fix you up, and fit you out with anything necessary, and the old, well-remembered beat of the surf on the shore will lull you to sleep, and the years will drop away and you will feel young again. And then this strange thing will happen: You will want to go home, with another sort of home longing; you will be just as anxious to see the ranch again as now you are to leave it, and you will carry back a set of fresh impressions and of new ideas, which will last you many a day. There is no medicine like change of scene.

Margaret E. Sangster

YOU OWE IT TO YOUR FAMILY
AND FRIENDS
TO HAVE A
Gram-o-phone
IN YOUR HOME

ONLY MACHINE USING FLAT, SIGNED,
INDESTRUCTIBLE RECORDS.

Our Great Admiral Writes:

Designer of the "Columbia" Writes:

Sent on Approval to Subscribers to Christian Herald

For sale everywhere.

NATIONAL GRAM-O-PHONE CORP.,

BRANCHES:

BOSTON 178 Tremont Street
PROVIDENCE 422 Westminster Street
PHILADELPHIA 13 North Ninth Street
CLEVELAND 1111 Euclid Avenue
CINCINNATI 21 and 23 West Fifth Street

No. 95300

GUARANTEED UNBREAKABLE!

It is impossible to break them, because they are put together with a pressure of 75 tons.

The beautiful bed illustrated is furnished white enamel finish, with elaborate brass

Send for illustrated booklet about other beds; also mattresses and springs.

We sell the best. If your dealer doesn't sell ours, order of us.

BARCALO & BOLL MFG. CO.,
(Quality Makers)
Buffalo, N. Y.

One Step to Success

From a poor position to a good one without loss of time. Hundreds of our students have advanced directly from the shop to positions as Mechanical or Architectural Draughtsmen, Electrical or Steam Engineers, Architects, Surveyors, Chemists, Correspondents, Stenographers and Bookkeepers. We guarantee to give you a thorough technical education by mail. Mention the profession you wish to enter.

The International Correspondence Schools, Box 861, SCRANTON, PA.

PHONOGRAPH RECORDS
MADE BY.... IRA D. SANKEY
"The Ninety and Nine,"
"Where is my Wand'ring Boy,"
"When the Mists Have Rolled Away,"
"Saved by Grace," and others of the famous
MOODY AND SANKEY HYMNS.
Price, $1 per record: $11 per dozen.
Can be HEARD at ALL Phonograph Dealers.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO. 135 FIFTH AVE. NEW YORK.

HOME STUDY FOR BUSINESS We teach Bookkeeping, Business Forms, Penmanship, Com'l Law, Letter Writing, Arithmetic, Shorthand, English & Civil Service branches thoroughly by MAIL at your own HOME. Satisfaction guaranteed. Money-Making Education. Salaried situations obtained by our students. Nationally known; established 40 years. Terms easy. Trial lesson free. Catalog free. Trial lesson 10 cents.

BRYANT & STRATTON,
175 Colvin Bldg., Buffalo, N.Y.

TELEGRAPHY Stenography Type Writing Book-keeping
EASTMAN, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
C. C. GAINES, Box 236, Brooklyn, N. Y.

CASH or NEW HAIR MATTRESS For Your OLD FEATHER BED
CANADA EXPORT COMPANY, 118 North 11th St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

$5.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working for me. Permanent position. Address, stating age, reference and salary expected, B. F. Johnson, 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

$18.00 a Week and expenses to good parties. Permanent position. Address, stating age, reference and salary expected, B. F. Johnson, 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

A New Name

Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for Nov. 5.

Gen. 32:24-29; Rev. 2:17.

STRANGE and mysterious as were the events of that momentous night by the brook, they have a typical connection with the struggle in the life of every man who has been stirred with an ambition to live a life higher than the mere animal. We cannot understand how Jacob could have wrestled with the angel, but we know well enough that there are forces in our own souls and in our surroundings with which we have to contend, and that we are unable in our own strength to overcome them. We go forth to the new life as Jacob was going into Canaan, with plans arranged according to the best wisdom we can summon to our aid, but we have to learn, as he learned, that there is a strength superior to our own, which we must have in order to win the victory. Every man has his own enemy, some special obstruction, peculiar to himself, which bars his path to the higher levels. With one it may be a craving for intoxicants; with another a strongly sensual nature; with another a love of money; with another a desire for popularity; with another a passion for gambling; with another idleness and love of ease and so on through a long list of antagonists, one of which, like Bunyan's Appolyon, strides across the way and opposes all advance.

Looking down from his throne in heaven upon the poor struggling people whom his voice had called into the conflict, Christ is filled with pity for them and to encourage them to strive, he gives this promise of a new name. In monarchical countries this figure is well understood. Louis Napoleon made his general Duke of Magenta, the English Government made its general Lord Napier of Magdala, conferring on them a new name which commemorated the achievement for which they were honored. The new name which Christ gives commemorates a victory. It is given to him that overcometh. No one may know what our battle is; the closest of our companions may have no idea that underneath the calm exterior we have schooled ourselves to show to the world, there is going on a conflict for life or death, a fierce, bitter struggle which taxes all our strength and skill. But Christ knows, and the name he will give to us, if victorious, is the name of that struggle, and it will be a name "which no man knoweth, saving he that receiveth it." In the darkness and loneliness the battle may be fought, but it is not unobserved by Him who has called us to the conflict, and when we overcome he looks down with a smile of approval, and we cease to be ordinary men in his sight. We are ennobled and the title of our nobility is, victor over—some enemy whom we can name. Does not this give strength to the arm and courage to the drooping spirit? The battle is no longer the dull, sordid, common wrestle that wears the life away; it rises to the dignity of a celestial combat in which we have the sympathy of the Son of God.

With such encouragement, who is there that will not enlist in this war? To every young man and young woman the voice comes from the skies, offering a reward to him that overcometh. To the poor servant wearily sweeping and dusting who has to overcome her impatience and her quick temper; to the workman who has to pass a saloon on his way home and knows what a struggle it will require; to the business man whose competitors are pressing him so hard and who knows that he could win if he adopted their tactics; to every man trying to rise out of the mire and become a son of God the voice comes promising the reward which is to him that overcometh. It is like the Victoria Cross, the most coveted decoration that the English soldier can win, which is denied to the most illustrious nobles of the land, but is conferred on the humblest man who in some conflict shows personal valor. So Christ gives to the victor in his service the white stone on which his new name is written.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST'S

College Man's Number

This week's issue—date of October 28.
Handsome Colored Cover; 32 pages.

THE SPIRIT OF THE NORTH

The Spirit of the North is a Columbia story. It chronicles the adventures of an ill-assorted trio of professors (a young man, a young woman, and a cantankerous old lady) who penetrate the unexplored wilderness of British America. They meet with a series of strange adventures, and encounter that hostile Spirit of the North which ever resents the endeavors of men to fathom her secrets. By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

THE GREAT COLLEGE-CIRCUS FIGHT

The author of Princeton Stories and The Stolen Story here tells the tale of a famous hand-to-hand encounter between Princeton students and the cowboys of a passing Wild-West Show, and records the exploits of the Captain of the Eleven, who stayed out of the fight but was in at the finish. By Jesse Lynch Williams

THE COLLEGE DAYS OF OUR GRANDFATHERS

An informing and entertaining sketch of things as they were in our American Colleges when the century was young and the leading American University was but one-tenth of its present size. By Thomas Wentworth Higginson

THE LAST FIVE YARDS

This is the cleverly-told romance of a broken engagement, some broken bones, and a Pennsylvania football victory that sets all right. It is from the pen of the author of Pennsylvania Stories. By Arthur Hobson Quinn

IN TRAINING TO BE ADMIRALS

Some humorous reminiscences of student days at the United States Naval Academy, with personal anecdotes of men who have since become famous naval officers, told by a graduate. By Cyrus Townsend Brady

Prince Protococoff and the Press Club

In this little comedy of Cambridge student life the author of Harvard Episodes has produced a story whose irresistible humor, keen satire and accurate portrayal of University Types combine to set up a new standard of excellence in College Fiction. It is the story of a mythical club, invented by a practical joker for the purpose of luring a visiting lion away from the hospitalities of a bona-fide association. By Charles Macomb Flandrau was established in 1728 by Benjamin Franklin, and has been regularly published for 171 years. It is now a handsome illustrated magazine, published weekly at 5 cents the copy. Your newsman will serve you regularly, or we will mail it to any address every week for five months on receipt of only $1.00.

The Saturday Evening Post

Circulation nearing 200,000 mark rapidly. We printed last week 192,000 copies.

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

FREE TO ANYONE

We are giving Ladies and Misses Jackets, Capes, Collarettes, Suits, Skirts, Hats, Boys and Youths Ulsters, Suits, Reefers, Watches, Furniture, Musical Instruments and a hundred other valuable Premiums Free for introducing our Soaps, etc. Cash if preferred. No money required. Our offers beat all others. Write at once for catalogue and full particulars—sent free.

F. PARKER, 306 S. Clinton Street, Chicago, Ill.

PLAYS Dialogues, Speakers for School, Club and Parlor. Catalogue free. T. S. DENISON, Publisher, Chicago, Ill.

SEND US NO MONEY. Beautiful Couch 55 inches wide by 6 feet long. Made with full Spring Seat and Head. A small order among your friends for our Teas, Coffees, Spices, Extracts, Perfumes, Soaps, etc., will secure you this handsome couch. No money required with your order. We pay the express. Illustrated Catalogue FREE. G. A. FOLSOM & CO., Dept. S 192 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

DOUBLE ENTRY BOOK-KEEPING BUSINESS-ARITHMETIC

Approved System. Taught Thoroughly by mail. Send for particulars.

HENRY VON DEVLEN, 314 Clifton Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Permanent POSITIONS paying a Salary $12 to $20

GUARANTEED to every pupil taking the course

Board and all expenses included in charge until placed. Examination necessary to enter. C. E. YOUNG, School of Stenography, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

If you contemplate

BUILDING

Send for Catalogue of PLANS containing fifty different designs. Price 50c.

T. W. BAST

Architectural Co.

SEDALIA, MO.

ENTERTAINMENTS

For CHURCHES and SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Finest Magic Lanterns, Stereopticons & views; all prices. Full particulars in 256 page illus. book; 10c. McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 19 Nassau St., New York

Sewing Machines $5 and Up.

Quality first class, 20-year guarantee. First class new large-sized Piano $125.00 Sent subject to approval. This Company is perfectly reliable. Address

BROWN-LEWIS CO., Dept. 15, Chicago, U. S. A.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS

"To-morrow in Cuba"*

MR. PEPPER has put in permanent form the result of several years spent in Cuba. His volume (now in press) covers a wide range of topics, as it analyzes the political, social and industrial conditions in the island bearing on the future government. The key to the [illegible] is found in the author's statement of his belief that the people are chiefly interested in seeing the civilization of the church, the home and the school prevail in Cuba. The prospects that this will be so and the conditions under which it must be brought about form the framework of the various chapters. Mr. Pepper gives under the title of "Chapters from Yesterday" an historic review of the revolutionary movements in Cuba, and of the effort to implant the system of autonomy when it became clear that Spain could not conquer the insurgents and that the insurgents could not drive the Spanish troops from the island. In this historical sketch interesting glimpses are afforded of Gomez, Maceo, and other insurgent leaders, as well as of Campos, Weyler and Blanco, the captain-generals who were charged with upholding Spanish authority. Incidental glimpses are also given of General Fitzhugh Lee and the American officials.

The book also deals with the Spanish colony and the probable attitude of the Spaniards who remain in Cuba. An interesting chapter is devoted to the colored race. Mr. Pepper writes in praise of what was done for the African race under Spanish civilization. He describes the industrial and political position of the negroes and gives them much credit for their progress in industry and agriculture. He is hopeful of their future in the surroundings under which such progress has been made.

For American readers who have an idea of going to Cuba, the most useful chapters will probably be those which relate to the resources of the island and its internal development. He has condensed his views on these subjects in a clear way without going into details, which would be of little value to those who are not already familiar with Cuba. He describes the sugar industry, its advantages and drawbacks, and reiterates his frequently expressed opinion that it is not one in which Americans with small capital can engage for years to come. He lays more stress on the fact that the soil of Cuba offers openings for every kind of agriculture—general farming, grazing, raising fruits and nuts, coffee culture, tobacco cultivation, and a great variety of the lesser agricultural occupations. Tobacco cultivation, he thinks, is sure to be increased, and he also lays stress on the prospect of coffee culture, which at one time was a profitable business in all parts of the island, and which he believes will be revived. He describes briefly the opportunities in mining and in the timber lands. While he gives importance to the building of railroads as a means of internal development, he also points out that the construction of public roads is one of the earliest public necessities, and that in time the coasting trade and the merchant marine will become very important.

In an appendix on trade prospects, Mr. Pepper gives information which is supplementary to the chapters on sugar and tobacco, and which is based on official statements of the American authorities. The purpose of this is to show just what openings there are for trade between the United States and Cuba by telling what articles the Cubans buy and what they sell. The exports from Cuba include sugar, tobacco, cigars, rice, honey, molasses, wax, sponges, fruits and nuts and minerals. The imports, which are many, are given in detail, and the countries from which they come. Mr. Pepper recites the geographical and other reasons which make the United States the natural market for the tropical products of Cuba. He also indicates his belief that the list of imports into Cuba, after a time, will cease to include much from European countries, and will be almost entirely from the United States.

What the author thinks about the development of the resources of the island and the openings for Americans are indicated in these chapters, but they are also outlined in a chapter on immigration. In this he tells of the great commercial metropolis which Havana will one day become. Its commercial greatness will be based on the products of the soil, and, therefore, it is of agriculture that he treats so prominently. The point of this chapter is that various industrial and commercial enterprises cannot be expected to spring up until the population is found which shall till the fields. This is in line with what he says elsewhere about small farming. Mr. Pepper gives the ground for his belief that farm laborers from the United States, hired hands, will not see much in Cuba to attract them. By this he means the farm labor that is paid daily or monthly wages, and which itself has no stake in the soil that is cultivated. He makes it clear, that in his opinion, the present chances in Cuba are for the small capitalists and the small land owners. He is positive in his conclusions that there is a better fate in store for Cuba than to be simply one vast sugar plantation, and he thinks that Americans will do best in general farming of all kinds, at least for the present.

Mr. Pepper discusses the political conditions and the prospects with much frankness. He says that, in his opinion, the Americans who succeed in Cuba will be those who know how to speak the Spanish language, and he indicates other points in which he thinks Latin civilization will prevail, though modified and improved by American contact and example. He speaks approvingly of what has been done under American military rule, and has good words to say of the faithfulness with which the American officials have discharged their trust. Nevertheless, he advocates an early change to civil government. Mr. Pepper says that his own views on these subjects, and especially on annexation, differ from those held by the majority of Americans in Cuba. Apparently, he thinks there is room for difference of opinion. The undertone of his book might be summed up in the statement that he does not expect the Cubans to be displaced from the island by any inrush of Americans, but he believes there will be openings for Americans, and that this American leaven will be of great benefit to the island, both industrially and politically.

* From To-morrow in Cuba, by Charles M. Pepper; a volume of timely interest to all American readers; now in press; about 400 pp.; price $2. [illegible]

The Gospel Tent Closed

The Gospel Tent services in New York, after one hundred services, are now concluded. Evangelist S. Hartwell Pratt, who has had charge of them, hopes to resume his work among the churches during the fall and winter. Any church needing a revival may address him at 348 W. 55th St., N.Y. city

The Instalment Policy issued by
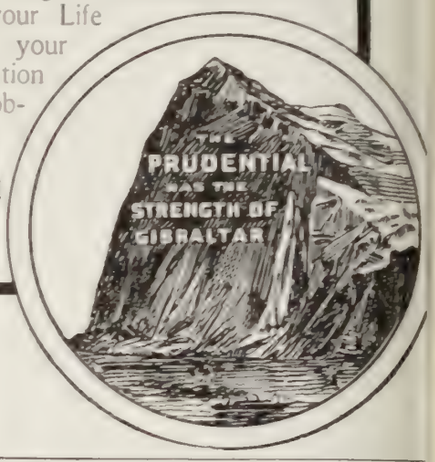
THE PRUDENTIAL
$1,000 to $100,000
Positively Guarantees an annual income to your beneficiary, either for a designated number of years or for life, as may be arranged when taking out the policy.
BY THIS MODERN FORM OF LIFE INSURANCE
you avoid the possible danger of unwise investment of the proceeds of your Life Insurance and assure your family of the protection which it was your object to furnish them.
THE PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE COMPANY OF AMERICA
JOHN F. DRYDEN, President
Home Office: NEWARK, N. J.



ARMSTRONG & McELVY
BEYMER-BAUMAN
DAVIS-CHAMBERS FAHNESTOCK
ANCHOR
ECKSTEIN
ATLANTIC
BRADLEY
BROOKLYN
JEWETT
ULSTER
UNION
SOUTHERN SHIPMAN
COLLIER
MISSOURI
RED SEAL
SOUTHERN
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO
MORLEY
SALEM
CORNELL
KENTUCKY
New York
Chicago
St. Louis
Salem, Mass
Buffalo.
Louisville.

IN your experience with White Lead have you ever been troubled with cracked, pulled or alligatored surfaces, or have you ever heard of such trouble in the use of White Lead?

Never; and these conditions were never known until the introduction of zinc white, "combination lead," and ready-mixed paints, the two last composed largely of zinc, barytes, whiting, etc., very little lead, if any.

—Mr. E. P. Edwards, in "Painters' Magazine."
Mr. Edwards is the senior member of the firm of Messrs. Edwards & King, Painters and Decorators, Elizabeth, N. J.

FREE [illegible] Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, and [illegible] shade is readily obtained. Handsome [illegible] valuable information and card showing samples of colors [illegible] also [illegible] showing pictures of houses painted in different designs or various styles or combinations of colors forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

National Lead Co., 100 William St., New York.

THE IDEAL SIGHT RESTORER

IN WHAT DISTRESS WE NOTE THIS LASS IS DISFIGURED WITH HER HIDEOUS GLASSES.

WE RESTORE SIGHT!
GLASSES RENDER DEFECTIVE VISION CHRONIC.
Write for our ILLUSTRATED TREATISE mailed free.
THE IDEAL COMPANY
239 Broadway, New York.

SEE NOW THE FACE BRIGHT AS AURORA DUE TO USE OF THE SIGHT RESTORER.

NO BULGING POCKETS.

[illegible] commutation [illegible] an otherwise well dressed [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Days of Sorrow in Porto Rico

Conditions in the Storm-Swept Island Far Worse Than Reported—Consul Hanna's Appeal

THE worst is not over in Porto Rico. Indeed, it may well be feared that the period of direst suffering has not yet been reached. In a letter from Consul-General Hanna (now in Des Moines, Ia.), just received, he gives this gloomy picture of the situation:

From what I learn from every port of Porto Rico, the state of affairs is much worse than our people in the States know anything about. The half of their sorrows have not been told. Many of the best families of refined, educated people are about on the starving point, as well as thousands of the lower classes. Our people must continue to help them for several months to come. If we do not, God will go back on us. We now have a chance to make a most favorable impression on a people who never cried for help before, and who will probably never need our help again. This island, under American rule, will soon make all its people prosperous and they will look back with thankful hearts to the time of their need, when their new mother came so quickly to the rescue and lifted them out of their sorrowful state.

Every state in the Union should send a 1,000 ton load of food to Porto Rico, and they should send it now, for they are starving. I hope you will keep the matter before the American people. God will bless you in your grand work and the people of that fair island will rise up and bless you.

PHILIP C. HANNA.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S Sunday School work on the island is progressing, notwithstanding the many difficulties it has met, as the following letter shows:

INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE, Y. M. C. A., }
NEW YORK, Oct. 7. }

DEAR MR. KLOPSCH:—Advices just received from Porto Rico indicate a new interest in the Sunday School work. The services have been moved from the theatre to a more central point. On Sunday, Sept. 24, the school was in better shape than ever before, and the principal need now is a Sunday School missionary who will visit among the people and pay direct attention to the Sunday School and nothing else. F. L. SMITH.

The following contributions to the Porto Rican relief work have been received:

Prev ack	$4,844 46
Adair, G W & M H	50 00
Agard, Mrs R C	1 00
Alford, D T	1 00
Allen, Mrs	1 00
Allen, Mrs C M	11 00
Anch, J H	1 00
Baker, Mrs & Miss	1 00
Baker, Mrs L H	5 00
Baker, Wm H D	1 00
Bannister, E B	1 00
Barrick, Ettar Leavel	1 00
Bartlett, the Misses	5 00
Beal, Mrs A S	1 00
Beauregard, Mrs J B	1 00
Beck, Mrs J R	1 00
Beeman, Mrs F E	1 00
Beggs, Mrs James	3 00
Belknap, G W	1 00
Benjamin, Lona M	2 00
Benjamin, M T	1 00
Bennett, V J	10 00
Bentley, Mrs Salome	1 00
Bettis, Jas R	50 00
Billah, Mrs J L	1 00
Bonnous, A	1 00
Bowers, Mrs Nathan	1 00
Bradley, E J	2 00
Brett, Mrs D	10 00
Brewster, Ella	1 00
Breyer, Mrs	08
Brown, J Howard	1 00
Brown, P	1 00
Brown, Mrs P	1 00
Brown, Mrs Sarah H	5 00
Brown, Mrs T Y	5 00
Bryant, Demila	1 00
Bryant, E G	7 00
Buchanan, Emma	1 00
Buck, W R	3 00
Burges, S A	1 00
Burnett, Fred L	1 00
Burnett, Jennie	25
Burnett, Jimmie H	25
Burnett, John Hill	5 00
Burns, Mrs Jonn	2 00
Burrows, Mrs P L	1 00
Bushnell, H K	5 00
Butler, Herbert F	1 00
Butman, A A	1 00
Camp, Mrs S S	1 50
Carlson, A F	2 00
Carlson, Mrs A F	1 00
Carrier, Mrs M J	1 00
Casebeer, Mary E	1 00
Caughey, J R	1 50
Cayvette, Mrs S A	2 00
Chandoin, Mrs C A	2 00
Chandoin, W N	3 00
Chase, Mrs H F	1 00
Childs, Mrs S E	2 00
Chisholm Bros	8 00
Christianson, J H and children	3 00
Christianson, O H	2 00
Christie, Mrs J E	1 00
Clayton, Mrs F N	5 00
Coblentz, Charles R	1 00
Coblentz, Howard B	1 00
Coffin, Hector Jr	25
Coleman, E R	2 00
Coleman, W C	1 00
Colton, Edith L	1 00
Compton, Catharine	1 00
Comss, Emma	1 00
Conant, S	2 00
Connell, A & E	50
Connor, Amanda B	1 00
Cook, S H	50
Cooper, H	1 00
Cooper, L	1 00
Corwin, Mrs Chas	1 00
Cothren, Mrs C I	1 00
Covert, J W	10 00
Cowan, Elaine	3 00
Cratty, Anna S	2 00
Craver, H D	1 00
Crawford, Rev Otis D	1 00
Crum, W J	1 00
Cullum, Mrs Edith	5 00
Curtis, Rev A W	1 00
Cutter, C H & A E	4 00
Davidson, R A	5 00
Day, Judson & wife	2 00
Delavan, Mrs E C	2 00
Denison, Mrs H L	2 00
Dewar, A W	1 00
Diefendorf, Harry O	1 00
Dimont, Fred	25
Dolbeare, Sarah R	1 00
Donkin, Mrs Mary W	10 00
Downing, Alfred	10 00
Drake, Mrs Louise G	1 00
Dunn, Eliz	1 00
Dunning, Mrs Emily	1 00
Dwiggins Eliz A	5 00
Ebbert, Mary	1 00
Edwards, Mrs A M	1 00
Evans, John	2 00
Farmer, John G	1 00
Farnsworth, Mrs E J	2 00
Ferguson, Mrs Jas	1 00
Ferry, C S	2 00
Finley, Harriet	1 00
Fischer, Adolph	75
Fisher, E D	5 00
Flick, Mrs Jane	1 00
Flower, Mrs W D	1 00
Foster, Mrs E	4 00
Fowler, Mrs E M & Mrs S W Porter	5 00
Frederickson, Geo L	2 00
French, Jennette L	1 00
Fulton, Misses	2 00
Fulton, Mrs Eliza	2 00
Gaddis, Mr and Mrs A J	1 00
Gannon, S	1 00
Garner, Harry A	2 00
Garnett, Wm	1 00
Garvie, Helen	2 00
Gates, Mrs A J	50
George, Emma	1 00
Gibbs, H D	10 00
Gleason, Mrs	50
Glover, Mrs P F	1 00
Gowie, John W	2 00
Grannis, W S	2 00
Grantham, Mrs S E	2 00
Green, Clara B	2 00
Greene, L M	5 00
Gregg, Mrs J L	1 00
Griffith, Margaret	1 60
Grim, Miss Abbie	5 00
Grover, Mrs S N	50
Grubb, E M F	1 00
Guild, Mrs W B	1 00
Hagaman, C A	5 00
Hagaman, C A	1 00
Stephenson, F A M	5 00
Stone N	1 00
Strad, Lydia	1 00
Summers, A T	25
Summer, H M	5 00
Swallow, J R	3 00
Sybrant, Mrs G	1 50
Taylor, Mrs N	5 00
Thomson, A C	1 00
Thomson, J	10 00
Thornburg, L & L	3 00
Tracy, W A	3 00
Tanner, Mr & Mrs J M A daughter	3 00
Turrill, H	5 00
Usher, Miss C R	1 00
VanMarter, Prev & Mrs	2 00
Vedder, A G	15 00
Wade, Emma M	2 00
Walker, Mary B	2 00
Wallace, D D	10 00
Wallis, Mrs E G	3 00
Ward, Mrs H W	1 00
Weaver, John	30
Webb, Mrs M L	1 05
Welch, Wm	1 00
Wells, Geo	5 00
Wentz, Andrew	2 00
Wheeler, Julia W	1 00
White, M Luella	1 75
White, R R	1 60
Whitten, Mrs E	2 00
Wilbur, Mrs M	1 00
Wilbur, Mrs O K	1 00
Wiley, C T	10
Willitte, Mary I	50
Williams, C B	20 00
Williams, Mrs P	2 00
Willingham, W B Jr	25
Willingham, W B	1 00
Willits, Mr & Mrs J	2 00
Winestock, Rev O C	4 80
Wood, Mrs E W	3 00
Woodale, Chas	2 00
Woodworth, Sarah A	2 00
Wright, Mrs Caleb	1 50
Young, Mrs J B	3 00
Young, Capt P H	10 00
Chas W, Dartford	1 00
Oliver W, Dartford	50
Henson, Danville	05
John, Canajoharie	10
Joseph, Danville	1 00
Mottaz, Utica	5 00
Publes, Portsmouth	6 00
A Y, Woodville	1 00
C P, Balto	5 00
C T B, Oneida	3 00
E A F, Fountain City	1 00
E A M, Woodview	2 00
E B, Brighton	10
Mrs E L H, Panama	2 00
E L H, Proctorsville	1 00
E W, Dartford	1 00
Miss I, Miss G G, Mrs M W, Miss Cornelia & Mrs C N Y City	3 00
F V, Oakland	1 00
G M M, Manset	1 00
H O S, Lakeport	1 00
I F, Halifax	1 00
Mrs I H S, Zurich	50
J D S, Chelsea	1 00
J S H, Brooklyn	1 00
L, Montrose	1 00
Mrs L A G, Ocean Grove	1 00
L M A, Evansville	2 00
M A S & J W W, Clinton	2 00
M F B, Axtell	1 00
M J H, Albany	1 00
M R L, Washington	1 50
M S W, Lawrence	3 00
O J S, E Texas	2 00
P, Princeton	2 00
P O M C, La Fayette	1 00
S, Scranton	25 00
Mrs S E P, Larned	1 00
S J W, Hubbardston	1 00
Mr & Mrs T E, Annon	2 00
W S S, W Berne	1 00
W T, Guthrie Center	5 00
—, Beddow	1 00
—, Big Rapids	5 00
—, Brampton	1 00
—, Brooklyn	100
—, Carolina	1 00
—, Harrisburg	1 00
—, Little Genesee	5 00
—, N Y City	1 00
—, Norfolk	1 00
Pageville	3 00
—, Providence	2 00
—, Rantoul	1 00
—, Reeds Ferry	1 00
—, Stockport	1 00
—, Suplee	1 00
Friend, Bay City	1 00
" Binghamton	5 00
Friend, Boisswain	1 00
Friend, Bristol	5 00
" Daretown	1 00
" Galesburg	1 00
" Galion	1 00
" Hudson	2 00
" Ingram	1 00
" Kensington	2 00
" Lyons Farms	2 00
" N Y City	1 00
" Osceola	5 20
" Otsego	1 00
" So Saginaw	1 00
Friends, South Lee	4 50
" Templeton	2 15
" Terryville	5 00
" Maine	15 00
Friend, Warwick	1 00
" Waterbury	1 00
" Wellsboro	2 00
I H N, Bellows Falls	1 00
" Last Tilton	15 00
" Essex	2 00
" Manhattan	10 00
In Jesus' Name, Knox Point	50
Inasmuch C M, Bethlehem	1 00
Reader, Oak Park	2 00
" Perry Center	2 00
Subscriber, Readville Station	1 00
In Loving Ch, Berea	5 00
M E S S, Binghamton	8 30
M E S S, Thornton	2 75
Walnut Valley Baptist Ch, Pawnee Rock	6 15
Cong Ch, W Andover	2 48
S S Class Ref Church, Canajoharie	1 05
Mrs Hill's S S Class, Cold Water	1 75
Pres S S, Beckerville	1 00
Strickland SS, Fowler	3 00
Cornish Con S S, Gibbon	2 17
1 Pres Ch S S, Glasca	3 00
Mrs W Sawyer's S S
1 Con Ch, Harvard	2 50
Prairie Centre S S, Hensington	4 00
Miss C Heath's S S, Hollidaysburg	1 25
Chat Boys Tonl Ch S S, Peoria	10 00
Sweet Water Un S S, Sunnyside	6 00
Sweetwater Un SS & YPSCE, Sunnyside	11 00
SS1 Presech, W Newton	10 00
Bethel Presby S S Lewis	2 00
Y P U S Bapt ch, Belvidere	1 45
Mem Y P Alliance of the Evan Assn, Bath Ch, Botzum	7 00
Jr League, Clarkson	2 60
E L M E Ch Crooksville	2 80
YPSCE, Bapt Ch, Haddonfield	5 00
Tompkins L, Hobart	7 00
Ladies Aid Soc, S E Riga	5 00
JrC E S, Cong Ch, Old Orchard	2 00
E Leagr, Quincy	1 00
Mt Pleasant Missy Soc, Raymilton	1 00
"Jos" 2 Bapt Ch, Stillwater	5 25
Mem of E Vincennes	1 00
C E S 1 Pres Ch, W Newton	5 00
Anon, Pa	5 00
Cash, Americus	2 50
Mem of the Prince of Peace, Balto	1 00
Follower of Jesus, Glenmore	1 00
In memo of Albert Ellis, Jasper	1 00
Jersey	5 00
4 of God's little chil'n, Los Angeles	1 00
Servant, Nepaug	1 00
"Cow Boy," Newdale	5 00
The Master's Steward, Norwich	1 00
3 sympns, Rosston	2 50
Sympr, S Merrimack	3 00
Total	$5,788 49

Over 500 others to be acknowledged later.

THE MINISTER'S COFFEE

Hurt Him Worse Than the Devil Did.

"I used the old-fashioned coffee from my babyhood, and like many others, thought I could not live without it. Was in the army four years during the Rebellion, and came out very much broken in health. I was compelled to quit the active work of the ministry for more than a year at a time, suffering terribly from stomach and intestinal troubles and torpid liver, with the consequent nervous headache and prostration, lumbago and rheumatism.

"Four years ago, being confined to bed with these troubles and ulceration of the liver, my physician positively forbade the use of coffee and brought me some Postum Cereal Food Coffee. Since that time, myself and family have used no other coffee. All my intestinal trouble has been greatly relieved, and I no longer suffer from rheumatism and very little from torpid liver or biliousness.

I am fully convinced that coffee is very largely responsible for the greater part of all stomach, intestinal and liver troubles from which people suffer. I am now 58 years old, and my health has so much improved that I do as much work as I ever did, and with as much comfort. I can conscientiously attribute it chiefly to the use of Postum Cereal Food Coffee. There are several friends who have had valuable experience with the leaving off of coffee and the use of Postum Food Coffee. It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to help humanity to understand that the general cause of sickness is, I consider, very largely attributable to mistakes in the use of food and drink." Rev. J. A. Flickinger, Pastor of the Lutheran Church, Ray's Hill, Pa. Grocer's sell Postum Coffee, and Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., make it at Battle Creek, Mich.

FISH OF ALL KINDS, NO MATTER HOW PREPARED IS MADE PERFECTLY DELICIOUS BY THE USE OF

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

BEWARE OF MANUFACTURERS WHO ATTEMPT TO SELL A WORTHLESS IMITATION. ~~ SEE SIGNATURE.

JOHN DUNCAN'S SONS, AG'TS., NEW YORK.

Sausage meat, Mince meat, Hamburg steak, Tripe, Hash, Suet, Chicken and Lobster for salads, Clams, Codfish, Cocoanut, and many other articles of food, as well as scrap meat for poultry, can be easily, quickly, perfectly chopped with the

ENTERPRISE
Meat and Food Chopper

It is guaranteed to chop—not grind—the food. As easy to clean as it is to use. Our trade-mark ENTERPRISE is on every machine.

28 sizes and styles—hand and power—for families, hotels, meat markets, etc. Prices from $1 50 up. Sold by all hardware dealers. Descriptive catalogue mailed free. The "Enterprising Housekeeper" with 200 recipes mailed for 4 cents in stamps.

THE ENTERPRISE MFG. CO. OF PA., THIRD and DAUPHIN STREETS, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

GOLD DUST
The Best
Washing Powder.
Cleans Everything from Cellar to Garret.

FREE COSTS NOTHING
But the asking to get our new 1900 Catalogue of either PIANOS OR ORGANS

At wholesale prices, thus saving you every penny usually pocketed by agents and dealers.

SEND TODAY FOR OUR NEW
1900 Coupon { It saves you $10.00 on an ORGAN. " " " $20.00 on a PIANO.

CASH OR INSTALMENTS.

30 days' trial. No money in advance. Safe delivery at your depot insured. Instalments. Easy payments. Our new due bill certificate shows you how to get an Organ or Piano for little or nothing. Remember, our Catalogue costs you nothing, and will positively save you money.

PIANOS, $155 UP.
ORGANS, $21.75 UP.

We furnish with each Piano a $10 hard wood Piano Chair free, also Plush Scarfs and $10 worth of the latest sheet music. Complete Organ outfit, free. Our factory, with its enormous capacity, enables us to sell you a high-grade instrument at a figure much below that of any other company in the world.

INCORPORATED FOR 50 YEARS.
WE LEAD, OTHERS FOLLOW.
Beethoven Piano and Organ Co.,
BOX 741 WASHINGTON, N. J.

RUPTURE CURED

The Improved Elastic Truss! The only truss in existence that is worn with ease and comfort night and day, and retains rupture under the hardest exercise or severest strain, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure. Comfortable Belts made to reduce corpulency. The use of these belts reduces your size and prevents rupture from accumulating. They can be used after any operations. Our goods are not sold by agents or druggists. Send for free pamphlets to the Improved Elastic Truss Co., 768 Broadway, N. Y. Established 18 years.

MONEY IN IT Splendid chance to make money without risk. For particulars, Address, FIDELITY INVESTMENT CO., SEATTLE, WASH.

$75 MONTH AND EXPENSES no experience necessary, position permanent. Address, Press Mfg. Co., P. O. Box 7, Cincinnati, O.

The Duchess of Sutherland.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION

Free Every Week to January 1, 1900.

THE particulars of The Companion's offer to new subscribers are given below, but it is impossible to enumerate here all the good things in store for those who read The Companion during 1900. We shall be glad to send to any address on receipt of a postal-card request, our Illustrated Announcement Number, containing a full prospectus of the new volume.

* * *

Among the two hundred contributors especially engaged for the 1900 volume of THE YOUTH'S COMPANION will be:

DUCHESS OF SUTHERLAND,
A Highland Industry

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA,
Some Experiences of a Bandmaster.

Gen. "JOE" WHEELER,
My War-Horses.

HENRY M. STANLEY,
How I Acted the Missionary.

S. A. NELSON,
Country Boys who Come to New York.

MARGARET DELAND,
The Modern Girl's Ambitions.

ANDREW CARNEGIE,
The Habit of Thrift.

WALTER CAMP,
A Historic Game of Football.

Gen. CHARLES KING,
The Manila Wire.

C. A. STEPHENS,
An Office-Seeker's Trip to Washington.

JANE BARLOW,
Two Sacks of Potatoes.

SARAH ORNE JEWETT,
The Stage Tavern.

VICTOR MAUREL,
A Baritone Among Famous People.

The Companion Calendar

for 1900 is embellished with three figure pieces, exquisitely lithographed in twelve colors from original designs painted expressly for The Companion. This Calendar is to new subscribers for the 1900 volume and old subscribers who pay their subscriptions to 1901, as explained in

GIVEN FREE

OUR SPECIAL OFFER.

Those who Subscribe Now, sending $1.75, the price of a year's subscription, with this slip or the name of this periodical, will receive all the issues of The Youth's Companion for the remaining weeks of 1899 FREE from the time of subscription, and then all the issues for the 52 weeks of the new year, until January 1, 1901. This offer includes the gift of the New Companion Calendar for 1900—done in twelve lithographic printings and gold. It is sold to non-subscribers for 50 cents. FF 96

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, BOSTON, MASS.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

VOLUME 22—NUMBER 44

COPYRIGHT 1899, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 1, 1899

PRICE FIVE CENTS

A True Christian Endeavor Knight

John Willis Baer, the Leader of a Great Army of Consecrated Workers, and His Life of Christian Service

WHEN the history of the Christian Endeavor movement—one of the grandest and most beneficent of the passing century—comes to be fully written, the name of John Willis Baer will stand out foremost among a host of illustrious Knights of the Cross as that of the ideal Endeavorer, whose splendid example no less than his brilliant teaching, has been the means of influencing thousands of young men and women and lifting them to a higher plane of spiritual living. His is a most interesting personality, and in presenting the story of his career to readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, we are yielding obedience to a widespread demand, besides fulfilling a pleasant and agreeable duty.

Concerning men who are much in the public eye, the average reader is usually well-informed, but Mr. Baer is an exception to this almost universal rule. Modest and unassuming, he has rather preferred to exert his influence and employ his powers in an inconspicuous way than to grasp at the prominence which his fine qualities as a leader and organizer are everywhere accorded. This very trait has endeared him to Endeavorers all over the Union. They appreciate his intense earnestness in the cause, and admire the abilities he has shown at times when a true leader was needed. They have been swayed by his enthusiasm and held charmed by the magnetism of his eloquence and the logic of his appeals. Probably no man who has ever come under the Christian Endeavor banner has thrown himself with such full consecration into the cause.

USED BY THE COURTESY OF REV. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN, D.D.

JOHN WILLIS BAER, GEN. SECRETARY UNITED SOCIETY OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

It was in a log cabin, on a farm near Rochester, Minn., on March 2, 1861, that John Willis Baer first saw the light. His parentage was humble. When he was two months old the family moved to Cleveland, O., where the years of childhood were passed. He received a good, plain education, attending grammar and high school. At twenty he returned to Minnesota, and there had his first business experience. After a two years' residence in Cedar Rapids, he engaged in newspaper work, becoming the business manager of a weekly publication. He married a daughter of Mr. G. W. VanDusen, a leading grain dealer of the Northwest, and some time later took a position in the employ of the VanDusen Elevator Company. While in this service he acquired a most valuable business training. The concern had connections in over one hundred cities and towns in Minnesota, and North and South Dakota, and this wide experience in its employ stood him in good service in later years. The great turning-point in Mr. Baer's life—his conversion—occurred before his marriage and was largely due to the instrumentality of the lady who afterward became his wife. The couple have three children living: George, aged nine; Francis, aged six, and Mildred, a little tot of two.

It was in his old home church—the First Presbyterian Church of Rochester, Minn., that Mr. Baer became actively interested in Christian Endeavor work. He was the organizer and first President of the Rochester local Christian Endeavor Union, and at its meetings he first met Dr. Clark, who was his guest. Six months after that meeting, the young Endeavorer, whose energy and enthusiasm had impressed the visitor, received an invitation to become General Secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor.

It was an honor wholly unexpected. After careful thought and prayer, Mr. Baer decided to accept, and he accordingly gave up his business, with its prospects and associations, and for the last ten years has devoted his time, energies and abilities to Endeavor work. He has visited, organized and conducted conventions in every state, territory and province in all America and has made frequent trips across the Atlantic. Every year he travels thousands of miles, and addresses countless multitudes of people on Endeavor topics. An important branch of his work is the conserving of Association interests at headquarters. There he not only acts as the right hand of Dr. Clark, but he has charge of the vast mail that is received daily. It may be said with truth that Mr. Baer has his fingers upon every wire that leads from the centre of the Society to its uttermost limit, and is familiar with all its workings, even to the minutest detail. No one has ever been more successful than he in overcoming the friction and reconciling the differences that occasionally arise in the branches of a great organization, and his tact and agreeableness are everywhere recognized. Endowed with a deep spirituality, the evangelistic and missionary features of his Endeavor work appeal

(Continued on page 827).

OUR MAIL-BAG

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

AS fully explained on another page of this issue, no more contributions for Porto Rican relief work will be received by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD after November 15, the United States Government having decided to make a liberal appropriation for public works on the island, which will afford labor for all the able-bodied, and thus permanently relieve the distress.

M. Z., Meadows, Ill. Who were the wiser, the men who shouted or the men who wept at the laying of the foundation stone of the new temple? (Ezra. 3: 12, 13).

We do not know that either were particularly wise. It was natural emotion in both cases and we do not see why one man would not have been consistent in doing both. He might rejoice that the nation was to have a temple at all, while he might regret that it was not to be so fine a building as the one that was destroyed.

Dr. A. C. V., Menominee, Mich. In your October 4th MAIL BAG, replying to "J. B., Manor Station, Pa.," you say: "It is generally believed that it was not Peter, but the statement Peter made, to which Christ had reference as the foundation of his future Church," etc. Were "Peter" and "Rock" at that time, or are they now, exactly "identical"? Upon looking up the Greek text, you will find that the word for "Peter" is in the masculine gender, while the word for "Rock" is neuter. Now, if we say that Christ meant "Peter," the statement is then untrue, for the gender of one word must agree with the other. On the other hand, if we say that Christ meant the mere "confession" or "statement" to be the foundation, then that destroys the personal element, "Thou art Peter." And is not the right view and meaning something like this: the confession in Peter, and neither one apart from the other? He certainly did speak the whole utterance, as equal in emphasis and authority. Your MAIL-BAG is of great interest and immense value.

The precise meaning of the expression is doubtful, but the interpretation we gave is that which many eminent commentators hold, including among others Pearson, Hammond, Bengel, Rosenmuller, Schleusner, Bloomfield and Kuinol.

Many friends in different states have written us concerning the famous Symposium, "What think ye of Christ?" which appeared in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD some time ago. One of our readers in Linden, Md., writes:

In your recent list of our Christian statesmen, I did not observe the name of the man who bought and provided the food and clothing for the naval soldiers in the recent war with Spain. I refer to Admiral Edwin Stewart (retired), who for nine years was Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts of the Navy Department, upon whose efficient management the purchase and proper inspection of the food and clothing of the Navy depended. If the writer (a deacon in a Presbyterian Church) now possesses Christian principles, some of them originated with the Bible class teachings Sundays, and Christian example week days, of this God-fearing government official when stationed in Washington as a Naval Officer, thirty years ago.

Mrs. N. J. G., Orange, Mass. 1. What was the Queen of Sheba's name? 2. How is Captain Coughlin's name pronounced; also Roosevelt and Cervera?

1. Balkis, according to the legendary accounts. 2. Koflin, Ros-e-velt, Ther-vay-ra.

Ellehart. 1. If spiritual life is one of progression and growth, how will a mother know her child that died in its infancy thirty years ago? 2. Are not these foreign marriages contrary to the commands of God? He forbade his people giving their children to other nations in marriage.

1. The question is one which it is impossible to answer in this life; but there is no doubt in the mind of the Christian that identity will be preserved in the spiritual world, and therefore that recognition will be possible. The fact that Christ was recognized by his disciples after death and in the spirit form, makes it clear that identity is not to be destroyed. 2. The prohibition to which you refer was given to prevent the Israelites from intermarrying with the heathen and idolaters and from contracting alliances with nations whose sins were notorious. It would seem to have no modern application, in the sense which you imply.

Constant Reader, N. C. 1. What effect has chewing tobacco on the system, if any? 2. Where can a history of the Christian martyrs under Queen Mary's reign be had? 3. From a moral standpoint, what would constitute a necessity to call for manual labor to be done on the Sabbath (or Sunday)? 4. If it is a violation of the moral law, who is the more criminal, the workman or the man (or party) who ordered the work to be done?

1. It is a filthy habit and wholly inexcusable. It dulls the intellect, injures the stomach, vitiates the blood, and in most cases acts as a mild narcotic, limiting the natural energies. 2. See Fox's Book of Martyrs. 3. Saving crops or animals in imminent peril, or in any case in which delay would involve unforeseen financial disaster or great physical danger. 4. It depends wholly on the circumstances.

S. D. H., Brooklyn, N. Y. Which of the two offices is considered the highest in the gift of the people, Governor of New York or Vice-President of the United States, both of which were held by Mr. L. P. Morton?

The Vice-President has the higher office, being next to the President, and in certain contingencies, assuming Presidential duties and authority. At the same time, he has an office of less responsibility and influence than that of Governor of New York, except in the event of the death or disability of the National Executive.

G. A. V., New Orleans, La. Are such games as chess, checkers, base-ball, etc., fit for Christians to play?

As they are games of skill, not of chance, we see nothing improper in them. Recreation is a necessity, and every one is entitled to take it in the form that best suits him, providing it does not interfere with his duties nor compromise his Christian character.

Fanny V. G., Bath, N.Y. 1. Has Roberts, the polygamist, a seat in Congress? 2. Please explain what the Transvaal, of South Africa, means.

1. He has been elected to Congress, but as he is an avowed polygamist and acting in violation of the constitution of his State, it is believed that the House will be justified in exercising its prerogative of expulsion, according to the plan pointed out by Senator Edmunds, the author of the Anti-polygamy statute. 2. It means literally "beyond the Vaal"—the latter being one of the several streams separating the Boer republic from the Orange Free State on the south.

Milton S. K., East Stroudsburg, Pa. Would it be proper for a contractor and builder, who is a professing Christian, to take the contract to build a large brewery in a town where laborers are numerous and labor scarce, considering that about forty men would be given employment for, say, four months?

This is wholly a matter for the individual conscience to decide. If conscience disapproves, don't build it. At the same time, we have seen churches transformed into theatres and rumshops, and gambling hells into Gospel missions.

P. S. N., Inavale, Neb. I am not clear about the meaning of James 2: 10. How can a man who has broken only one commandment be guilty of breaking all?

He is not guilty of breaking all. But he can no longer claim innocence. If he has broken one command he must take his place as a sinner, just as surely as if he had broken all. His guilt is not the same, but he must plead for mercy as a sinner, though only one command be broken.

Y. A. S., Franconia, N. H. Is it right to repeat a page of some author's writings at a young people's meeting without mentioning the author's name?

There is no absolute need to give the author's name, and sometimes it may be impossible. But the quotatation should always be given as a quotation, and not as if it were the speaker's own composition.

From Coamo, Porto Rico, Mr. Florencio Santiago writes:

The country highly appreciates all that the Relief Committee and the papers are doing. The circulating money is very small, and it is necessary that the planters should be helped, that they may put their plantations in condition to raise good crops again. In that way few rations would be needed for the indigent, as the planters would employ the workmen who now come for rations.

Reader, Wickenburg, Ariz. Why is the outlandish name of "Boer" given to the South African Dutch?

"Boer" simply means farmer, or agriculturist, and is the name applied to the Dutch colonists at the Cape of Good Hope who are farmers or cattle raisers. It is not, as some have supposed, a term of derision.

Constant Reader.——, N. Y. I have been guilty of sins which are not known. I have sincerely repented of them, but I am told by an evangelist who has been preaching in our town that unless I confess them publicly they will be brought up in judgment against me. Is that true?

We do not believe it for a moment. There is no need in our opinion for a public confession. If you have wronged any one and are able to make restitution, that ought to be done, but we do not believe that any benefit would accrue to you, or to the persons who would hear you, from making a confession. It might be that your confession would do irreparable injury to persons which you ought to protect. It certainly would in the circumstances you describe in your letter. If you made such a confession as you have made to us, you would do a cruel and shameful thing. Confess your sins to God, repent of them, ask him to forgive you for Christ's sake and be at peace. Do not let any man persuade you to confess such things in public. (See Isa. 1: 18. Ezek. 18: 21, 22. Matt. 6: 14, 15. I. John 1: 7, 9).

Mrs. A. M., Lexington, Ky. How often in former wars have the losers met the victors at the table? Kindly give the facts in the case.

The latest Boer historian, Mr. Howard C. Hillegas, in his book entitled Oom Paul's People, gives these statistics:

Battles	Men Engaged		Casualties
	British.	Boer.	British.	Boer.
Laing's Nek	4,0[illegible]	5[illegible]	150	24
[illegible]	2,0[illegible]	2[illegible]	14[illegible]	17
[illegible]	9[illegible]	12[illegible]	2[illegible]	5
[illegible]	2,0[illegible]	2[illegible]	120	1
Jameson raid . . .	6[illegible]	4[illegible]	100	5

It should be explained that Mr. Hillegas' figures, especially those relative to the numbers at Majuba Hill, disagree with previous authorities, who place the Boer strength much larger—probably 1,500.

Perplexed, Kamona, Kan. Is not the doctrine of salvation by faith in Christ a mere dodging of responsibility? Why should God accept and pardon a sinner on account of something another person has done?

We are not justified in asking why, or how, in this case. We find that God declares that it is so and we ought, knowing that we deserve punishment, to be thankful to be saved on any conditions. Suppose a father has a servant who does some outrageous thing and that servant runs away to escape punishment. His master pursues him determined to punish him, but does not find him. Suppose that the master has a son whom he dearly loves, and that son falls ill and dying, says to his father: "I have tried to save that servant of yours who ran away. He is very sorry for what he did and I pity him and love him. Will you grant me, as my last request, for my sake, pardon for him?" The father in such a case would do anything to please his dying son and he promises that if the servant will come and ask to be forgiven for the sake of that son, he shall be forgiven. What would you think of that servant if he refused to avail himself of that offer and objected to the conditions as "a dodging of responsibility?"

Reader, Spencer, Wis. A neighbor of mine contends that ministers in our day are recreant to their duty in not preaching more about eternal punishment. I contend that they are right in dwelling more upon the love of God. Which of us is right?

It is the duty of the minister to preach "the whole counsel of God." He ought to warn sinners of the consequences of their sins; but he has to take into account the tendency of human nature. Few men can be scared into the kingdom of Christ. They may be won by dwelling on the love of God which is seen in Christ. After all, the great business of the preacher is to win souls, and if he finds that he can win more by emphasizing the loving side of the divine character, he is justified in making that prominent in his teaching. But he should not neglect the warning, and should always make it clear that while God loves the sinner, he hates sin, and will punish it if the sinner does not repent and quit. God saves men from their sins. He does not save men that they may go on sinning with impunity.

Reader, South Bethlehem, Pa. In Kings. 185,000. In Chronicles. 1.100.000 and 470,000.

E. J. P., Girard, Kansas. He can give counsel and advice, but can make no motion and has no vote in committee.

R. Lubbers, Emden, Ill. 1. About $950,000,000. 2. It can only be liquidated by economy in administrative expenditures. 3. Certainly not. 4. Yes, it is Sabbath desecration.

H. B., Sawmsville, Va. Mr. Moody's idea was, doubtless to distinguish between saving faith in Christ and the faith that rests upon forms and ceremonies and man-made creeds.

Mrs. Robert E. L., Westport, Conn. 1. Address her, 101 East Sixty-first street, New York. 2. Address the Bethesda, care of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Anxious American, Paterson, N. J. Apply at Navy Yard, New York, or at any recruiting station. There is one at Third avenue and Eighth street, New York.

J. M. C., Harrisburg, Pa. It dated from the intervention resolution adopted by Congress. Any good almanac for 1899 will give you all the chronology of the war.

S. E. J., Washington, D. C. A mural painting is a painting upon a wall, whereas a fresco (which has a florid, decorative style of its own) may be on a wall or ceiling or other part of a hall or chamber.

A COUNCIL WITH THE REDSKINS AT A WESTERN INDIAN AGENCY

This photograph is taken on the day set for hearing complaints at a border agency. The chiefs are their own spokesmen. The agent is both civil judge and administrator.

A True Christian Endeavor Knight

(Continued from first page)

with especial force to Mr. Baer. He believes that all that has been accomplished in the past eighteen years of its history is only the beginning of its usefulness—a foreshadowing of the greater work God has designed for the Christian Endeavor movement—if it remains true to its sacred principles. An optimist always, as a Christian should be, Mr. Baer sees the brighter side of things and his cheerfulness and confidence are contagious and produce the most agreeable results. On a convention platform, facing a great audience, he is at his best, and heart and soul speak in every tone and gesture. It is a saying of his own that "I never make an address without going at it as though I might never have another chance to speak for God." His style of address is wholly his own, and there is probably no other Endeavor speaker at the great gatherings who uses the same simple, direct, straightforward heart-to-heart manner with which Mr. Baer, discarding conventional forms, impresses his auditors. Into everything he says or does he puts something of his own peculiar personality—whether receiving a caller at headquarters, or answering a letter, or arranging a national convention.

The drink traffic and its train of evils, Mr. Baer holds in abhorrence, and he never loses an opportunity of doing work on temperance lines. Five times he has been urged to accept the Prohibitionist nomination for Governor in Massachusetts, and this year he was nominated in direct opposition to his expressed wish, and refused to allow his name to stand. He is no political place-seeker and believes that he can do his most efficient work against intemperance from the public platform and in the press. Heartily in favor of clean politics, he holds that no one so wholly devoted to Christian Endeavor work as he is should run for office on any ticket.

At the famous annual gatherings at Northfield, Mr. Baer is in great request as a speaker, and his evangelistic spirit has been welcomed as an ally by such leaders as Mr. Moody, Rev. F. B. Meyer and Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman. It is a common remark of his that Dr. Clark, Mr. Meyer and Dr. Chapman have influenced his life more than any other men he has ever known.

Mr. Baer, while a very young man, sustained a serious injury to his knee, which necessitated a surgical operation. It was during this crisis, and while he lay in a hospital, that the light of Divine truth entered his life and he came closer to God. The death of his son, Willis, occurring six years ago, also produced a deep impression and drew him still nearer to the Cross. His sorrowings have been keen, but they have always borne the sweetest spiritual fruit. There came a time, not so long ago, when, under the pressure of overwork and worry, he broke down temporarily; but a long rest brought complete recuperation and he is now in splendid health. His life is more intense than ever. He is inspired with "the Divine passion for souls," and, firmly believing that the Church of Christ is God's greatest institution on earth, he is joyfully devoting his life to its service. Success has not changed him, except in that it has broadened his nature, and made him more generous than most men in his attitude toward others. He has a difficult place to fill—one in which he is watched by millions of young and old; but a rare judgment, borne of experience, keeps him free from entangling alliances and from being diverted from the straight path along which his duty lies. He is wholly in love with his chosen work and this complete and unselfish devotion is the secret of the inspiration he awakens in others. His home life is simple and beautiful and he has often said of his life's partner, to whom he owes so much of joy and blessing, that without her aid and encouragement, he could really have accomplished but little.

Such are the character and surroundings of the man who seems to have been providentially chosen as a leader of the thoughtful and spiritually-minded young men and women of our Union. Mr. Baer is still in his young manhood, and under Divine blessing he has yet before him the best years of his life in which to labor with voice and pen for the advancement of the Master's kingdom. Some of the ablest and brightest productions of his pen will hereafter appear in the columns of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, to which he will be a regular contributor during the coming year, the first of his articles appearing in an early issue.

GEORGE V. BAER AND FRANCIS S. BAER — SECRETARY BAER IN HIS OFFICE — MRS. JOHN WILLIS BAER

THE GREAT C. E. CHORUS OF 4,000 VOICES ON THE CAPITOL STEPS, WASHINGTON, D. C.

On this memorable occasion President Clark and Secretary Baer were together on the stand from which Perry Foote led the chorus, which was accompanied by the Marine Band. This gathering was a picturesque and impressive feature of the C. E. Convention. Rarely has the Nation's capital heard such music as was made by those many tuneful voices.

The prayers of the readers of this journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its proprietor, and also upon those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ, are printed in it; and that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of sinners and the quickening of God's people.

A Strange Ceremonial

Jews and Christians Uniting in the Consecration of a Jewish Temple at El Paso

AT the consecration of the new Jewish Temple in El Paso, Tex., which took place recently, a very remarkable scene occurred, which will not soon be forgotten by the large audience who attended the ceremonies. Besides the Jewish pastor, Rabbi Oscar Cohen, there were present and assisting in the service, three Christian clergymen, viz: Rev. M. C. Martin, the Episcopal Rector, Rev. H. W. Moore, of the Presbyterian Church, of El Paso, and A. M. Lumkin, Pastor of the First M. E. Church, of El Paso.

Their presence was a significant indication of the fact that, in that part of the world at least, the old lines which had so often stood as barriers between the races, had been broken down, and that the followers of Moses and of Christ could meet at least on the common level of human brotherhood, and on the same platform. It was, moreover, a striking testimony to the fact that in this country more than anywhere else on the globe does genuine equality and religious freedom exist, allowing men to worship the Almighty according to the dictates of their own consciences.

From an El Paso paper we learn that the three Christian clergymen named occupied the rostrum on which the pulpit stands, and took part in the ceremonies. The interior of the new temple was beautifully decorated, and the audience not only filled it throughout, but even the vestibule was crowded. Rabbi Cohen opened the exercises with a simple, yet beautiful prayer, after which Rev. Mr. Lumpkin read from I. Kings, 8: 22-53. Then came the presentation of the key of the edifice to the president of the Mt. Sinai Society. Miss Annie Stolaroff, a young girl, made the presentation in a short speech; after which another young lady presented the president with a Bible, in the name of the congregation. The president, Mr. Krakauer, then addressed the congregation in a congratulatory speech, reviewing the history of the church. When he had concluded, a beautiful model of the ark, standing upon the pulpit, was opened and the scrolls of the Mosaic law deposited therein with solemn ceremonies, after which a lamp was trimmed and lighted and set on its stand. According to the Jewish custom, this lamp will remain continually lighted while the temple endures.

In the course of a noteworthy address, Rev. H. W. Moore, the Presbyterian clergyman, said: "We meet in the spirit of love to-day, and our hearts with yours are full of good-will. I am especially glad for the scene, when the brethren of other denominations, and men and women of other churches, can come here in the true spirit of brotherhood. We rejoice with you. In speaking for my own church, I believe I speak for the other Christian denominations when I say, 'Pray God's blessing upon you every one.' We have long wished with you that this day might come, when you would have a temple in which you could meet and worship God, and have to lead you beside the green pastures and still waters, a true servant of God. It is true, we differ in some things in our beliefs; but let us never forget the common standing-ground there is for us all. Malachi has said so beautifully: 'Have we not one father? Has not one God created us?' We all have the same pain, the same sickness, the same sorrow, the same hopes, and the same joys. We sincerely pray to arrive at the same beautiful heaven. The co-operation of the good is essential for the city's true life. In social, educational and philanthropic work too, we can cooperate. Above all things, let each see the good in the other, and remember we are brothers.

"It has often been a matter of comment that the relation between the Jewish and Christian population of our city has been so cordial. That this may continue, is our prayer. It is as it should be. The New Testament says, 'He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen'? I am glad we are getting to understand one another religiously. I cannot help but feel that so long as Judaism and Christianity stand so far aloof, each will continue to ascribe to the other all the vices of its most unworthy representatives. When they meet, and learn to know one another better, they will find a great common standing-ground, judging each by its best. Then each can have for the other the highest respect and good will. And so to-day, in this spirit, we meet you in this temple of God, and we pray that once more the Spirit of God may descend and dwell among you in your life to-day, as it did among the holy men, and the prophets of the olden times, lighting the world, as it did for them, with the radiance of the skies, and so make known to this community the faith, the love, the hope, the victory that is in you."

The fraternal feeling existing between the two races of different religions has been deepened and strengthened by this incident, which has been very widely commented upon throughout the State.

... ANGELOLOGY ...

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text, Judges 13: 19: . . . . And the angel did wondrously

FIRE built on a rock. Manoah and his wife had there kindled the flames for sacrifice in praise of God, and in honor of a guest whom they supposed to be a man. But, as the flame rose higher and higher, their stranger guest stepped into the flame and by one red leap ascended into the skies. Then they knew that he was an angel of the Lord. "The angel did wondrously."

Two hundred and forty-eight times does the Bible refer to the angels, yet I never heard or read a sermon on Angelology. The whole subject is relegated to the realm mythical, weird, spectral and unknown. Such adjournment is unscriptural and wicked. Of their life, their character, their habits, their actions, their velocities, the Bible gives us full-length portraits, and why this prolonged and absolute silence concerning them? Angelology is my theme.

There are two nations of angels, and they are hostile to each other; the nation of good angels and the nation of bad angels. Of the former I chiefly speak today. Their capital, their headquarters, their grand rendezvous, is heaven, but their empire is the universe. They are a distinct race of creatures. No human being can ever join their confraternity. The little child who in the Sabbath School sings, "I want to be an angel," will never have her wish gratified. They are superhuman; but they are of different grades and ranks, not all on the same level, or the same height. They have their superiors and inferiors and equals. I propose no guessing on this subject, but take the Bible for my only authority. Plato, the philosopher, guessed and divided angels into super-celestial, celestial and sub-celestial. Dionysius, the Areopagite, guessed and divided them into three classes—the supreme, the middle and the last—and each of these into three other classes, making nine in all. Philo said that the angels were related to God, as the rays to the sun. Fulgentius said that they were composed of body and spirit. Clement said they were incorporeal. Augustine said that they had been in danger of falling, but now are beyond being tempted. But the only authority on this subject, that I respect, says they are divided into Cherubim, Seraphim, Thrones, Dominations, Principalities, Powers. Their commander-in-chief is Michael. Daniel called him Michael, St. John called him Michael. These supernal beings are more thoroughly organized than any army that ever marched. They are swifter than any cyclone that ever swept the sea. They are more radiant than any morning that ever came down the sky. They have more to do with your destiny and mine than any being in the universe except God. May the Angel of the New Covenant, who is the Lord Jesus, open our eyes, and touch our tongue, and rouse our soul, while we speak of their deathlessness, their intelligence, their numbers, their strength, their achievements.

Yes, deathless. They had a cradle, but will never have a grave. The Lord remembers when they were born, but no one shall ever see their eye extinguished, or their momentum slow up, or their existence terminate. Yes, deathless are these wonderful creatures of whom I speak. They will see world after world go out, but there shall be no fading of their own brilliance. Yea, after the last world has taken its last flight, they will be ready for the widest circuit through immensity. Awake, agile, multipotent, deathless, immortal!

A further characteristic of these radiant folk is intelligence. The woman of Tekoah was right when she spoke to King David of the wisdom of an angel. We mortals take in what little we know through eye and ear and nostril and touch; but those beings have no physical encasement and hence they are all senses. They take it in at all points. They absorb it. They gather it up without any hinderment. No need of literature for them! The letters of their books are stars. The dashes of their books are meteors. The words of their books are constellations. The paragraphs of their books are galaxies. The pictures of their books are sunrises, and sunsets, and midnight auroras, and the Conqueror on the white horse with the moon under his feet. Their library is an open universe. No need of telescope to see something millions of miles away, for instantly they are there to inspect and explore it. All astronomies, all geologies, all botanies, all philosophies at their feet. What an opportunity for intelligence is theirs! What facilities for knowing everything and knowing it right away!

There is only one thing that puts them to their wit's end, and the Bible says they have to study that. They have been studying it all through the ages, and yet I warrant they have not fully grasped it—the wonders of Redemption. These wonders are so high, so deep, so grand, so stupendous, so magnificent that even the intelligence of angelhood is confounded before it. The apostle says, "Which things the angels desire to look into." That is a subject that excites inquisitiveness on their part. That is a theme that strains their faculties to the utmost. That is higher than they can climb, deeper than they can dive. They have a desire for something too big for their comprehension. "Which things the angels desire to look into." But that does not discredit their intelligence. No one but God himself can fully understand the wonders of Redemption. If all heaven should study it for fifty eternities they would get no further than the A B C of that inexhaustible subject. But nearly all other realms of knowledge they have ransacked and explored and compassed. No one but God can tell them anything they do not know. They have read to the last word of the last line of the last page of the last volume of investigation. And what delights me most is that all their intelligence is to be at our disposal, and, coming into their presence, they will tell us in five minutes more than we can learn by one hundred years of earthly surmising.

A further characteristic of these immortals is their velocity. This the Bible puts sometimes under the figure of wings, sometimes under the figure of a flowing garment, sometimes under the figure of naked feet. As these superhumans are without bodies these expressions are of course figurative, and mean swiftness. The Bible tells us that Daniel was praying, and Gabriel flew from heaven and touched him before he got up from his knees. How far, then, did the angel Gabriel have to fly in those moments of Daniel's prayer? Heaven is thought to be the centre of the universe. Our sun and its planets only the rim of the wheel of worlds. In a moment the angel Gabriel flew from that centre to this periphery. Jesus told Peter he could instantly have sixty thousand angels present if he called for them. What foot of antelope or wing of albatross could equal that velocity. Angelic beings are bodiless and have no limitation. God may with his finger point down to some world in trouble on the outmost limits of creation, and instantly an angelic cohort is there to help it. Or some celestial may be standing at the furthermost outpost of immensity, and God may say "Come!" and instantly it is in his bosom. Abraham, Elijah, Hagar, Joshua, Gideon, Manoah, Paul, St. John, could tell of their unhindered locomotion. The red feet of summer lightning are slow compared with their hegiras. This doubles up and compresses infinitudes into infinitesimals.

Another remark I have to make concerning these illustrious immortals is that they are multitudinous. Their census has never been taken and no one but God knows how many they are, but all the Bible accounts suggest their immense numbers. Companies of them, regiments of them, armies of them, mountain-tops haloed by them, skies populous with them. John speaks of angels and other beings round the throne as ten thousand times ten thousand. Now, according to my calculation, ten thousand times ten thousand are one hundred million. But these are only the angels in one place. David counted twenty thousand of them rolling down the sky in chariots. When God came away from the riven rocks of Mount Sinai, the Bible says he had the companionship of ten thousand angels. I think they are in every battle, in every exigency, at every birth, at every pillow, at every hour, at every moment. The earth full of them. The heavens full of them. They outnumber the human race in this world. They outnumber ransomed spirits in glory. When Abraham had his knife uplifted to slay Isaac, it was an angel who arrested the stroke, crying, "Abraham! Abraham!" It was a stairway of angels that Jacob saw while pillowed in the wilderness. We are told an angel led the hosts of Israelites out of Egyptian serfdom. It was an angel that showed Hagar the fountain where she filled the bottle for the lad. It was an angel that took Lot out of doomed Sodom. It was an angel that shut up the mouth of the hungry monsters when Daniel was thrown into the caverns. It was an angel that fed Elijah under the juniper tree. It was an angel that announced to Mary the approaching nativity. They were angels that chanted when Christ was born. It was an angel that strengthened our Saviour in his agony. It was an angel that encouraged Paul in the Mediterranean shipwreck. It was an angel that burst open the prison, gate after gate, until Peter was liberated. It was an angel that stirred the Pool of Siloam where the sick were healed. It was an angel that John saw flying through the midst of heaven, and an angel with foot planted on the sea, and an angel that opened the book, and an angel that sounded the trumpet, and an angel that thrust in the sickle, and an angel that poured out the vials, and an angel standing in the sun. It will be an angel with uplifted hand, swearing that Time shall be no longer. In the great final harvest of the world, the reapers are the angels. Yea, the Lord shall be revealed from heaven with mighty angels. Oh, the numbers and the might and the glory of these supernals! Fleets of them! Squadrons of them! Host beyond host! Rank above rank! Millions on millions! And all on our side if we will have them.

This leads me to speak of the offices of these supernals. To defend, to cheer, to rescue, to escort, to give victory to the right, and overthrow the wrong: that is their business. Just as alert to-day and efficient as when in Bible times they spread wing, or unsheathed sword, or rocked down penitentiaries, or filled the mountains with horses of fire hitched to chariots of fire and driven by reinsmen of fire. They have turned your steps a hundred times, and you knew it not. You were on the way to do some wrong thing, and they changed your course. They brought some thought of Christian parentage, or of loyalty to your own home, and that arrested you. They arranged that some one should meet you at that crisis, and propose something honorable and elevating, or they took from your pocket some ticket to evil amusement, a ticket that you never found. It was an angel of God, and perhaps the very one that guided you to this service, and that now waits to report some holy impression to be made upon your soul, tarrying with one foot upon the door-step of your immortal spirit, and the other foot lifted for ascent into the skies. By some prayer detain him until he can tell of a repentant and ransomed soul! Or you were some time [illegible] with trouble, bereavement, persecution, bankruptcy, sickness, and all manner of troubles beating their discords in your heart and life. You gave up; you said: "I cannot stand it any longer. I believe I will take my life. Where is the rail-train, or the deep wave, or the precipice that will end this torment of earthly existence?" But suddenly your mind brightened. Courage came surging into your heart like oceanic tides. You said: God is on my side, and all these adversities he can make turn out for my good." Suddenly you felt a peace, a deep peace, the peace of God that passeth all understanding. What made the change? A sweet, and mighty, and comforting angel of the Lord met you. That was all.

What an incentive to purity and righteousness is this doctrine that we are continually under angelic observation! Eyes ever on you, so that the most secret misdeed is committed in the midst of an audience of immortals. No door so bolted, no darkness so Cimmerian, as to hinder that supernal eyesight. Not critical eyesight, not jealous eyesight, not baleful eyesight, but friendly eyesight, sympathetic eyesight, helpful eyesight. Confidential clerk of store, with great responsibility on your shoulder, and no one to applaud your work when you do it well, and sick with the world's ingratitude, think of the angels in the counting-room raptured at your fidelity! Mother of household, stitching, mending, cooking, dusting, planning, up half the night, or all night, with the sick child, day in and day out, year in and year out, worn with the monotony of a life that no one seems to care for, think of the angels in the nursery, angels in all the rooms of your toiling, angels about the sick cradle, and all in spmpathy!

Railroad engineer, with hundreds of lives hanging on your wrist, standing amid the cinders and the smutch, rounding the sharp curve, and by appalling declivity, discharged and disgraced if you make a mistake, but not one word of approval if you take all the trains in safety for ten years, think of the angels by the throttle-valve, angels by the roaring furnace of the engine, angels looking from the overhanging crag, angels bracing the racing wheels off the precipice, angels when you mount the thunderbolt of a train, and angels when you dismount! Can you not hear them, louder than the jamming of the car-coupling, louder than the bell at the crossing, louder than the whistle that sounds like the scream of a flying fiend—the angelic voices saying, "You did it well; you did it well"? If I often speak of engineers, it is because I ride so much with them. I always accept their invitation to join them on their locomotive, and among them are some of the grandest men alive.

Men and women of all circumstances, only partly appreciated, or not appreciated at all, never feel lonely again or unregarded again! Angels all around; angels to approve, angels to help, angels to remember. Yea, while all the good angels are friends of the good, there is one special angel your body-guard. This idea, until this present study of angelogy, I supposed to be fanciful, but I find it clearly stated in the Bible. When the disciples were praying for Peter's deliverance from prison, and he appeared at the door of the prayer-meeting, they could not believe it was Peter. They said, "It is his angel." So these disciples, in special nearness to Christ, evidently believed that every worthy soul has an angel. Jesus said of his followers, "Their angels behold the face of my Father." Elsewhere it is said, "He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways." Angel-shielded, angel-protected, angel-guarded, angel-canopied, art thou! No wonder that Charles Wesley hymned these words:

> Which of the petty kings of earth
> Can boast a guard like ours,
> Encircled from our second birth
> With all the heavenly powers?

Valerius and Rufinus were put to death for Christ's sake in the year 287, and after the day when their bodies had been whipped and pounded into a jelly, in the night in prison, and before the next day when they were to be executed, they both thought they saw angels standing with two glittering crowns, saying, "Be of good cheer, valiant soldiers of Jesus Christ! a little more of battle and then these crowns are yours." And I am glad to know that before many of those who have passed through great sufferings in this life some angel of God has held a blazing coronet of eternal reward. Yea, we are to have such a guardian angel to take us upward when our work is done. You know, we are told an angel conducted Lazarus to Abraham's bosom. That shows that none shall be so poor in dying he cannot afford angelic escort. It would be a long way to go alone, and up paths we have never trod, and amid blazing worlds swinging in unimaginable momentum, out and on through such distances and across such infinitudes of space, we should shudder at the thought of going alone. But the angelic escort will come to your languishing pillow or the place of your fatal accident, and say: "Hail, immortal one! All is well; God hath sent me to take you home." And, without tremor or slightest sense of peril, you will away and upward, further on and further on, until after awhile heaven heaves in sight, and the rumble of chariot wheels and the roll of mighty harmonies are heard in the distance, and nearer you come, and nearer still, until the brightness is like many mornings suffused into one, and the gates lift, and you are inside the amethystine walls and on the banks of the jasper sea, forever safe, forever free, forever well, forever rested, forever united, forever happy. Mothers, do not think your little children go alone when they quit this world. Out of your arms into angelic arms; out of sickness into health; out of the cradle into a Saviour's bosom. Not an instant will the darlings be alone between the two kisses—the last kiss of earth and the first kiss of heaven. "Now, angels, do your work!" cried an expiring Christian.

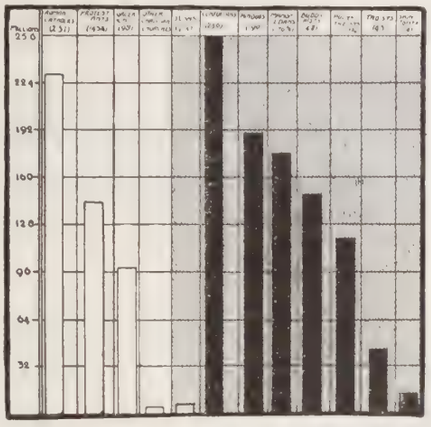
Yes, a guardian angel for each one of you. Put yourself now in accord with him. When he suggests the right, follow it; when he warns you against the wrong, shun it. Sent forth from God to help you in this great battle against sin and death, accept his deliverance. When tempted to a feeling of loneliness and disheartenment, appropriate the promise, "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them." Oh, I am so glad that the spaces between here and heaven are thronged with these supernaturals taking tidings home, bringing messages here, rolling back obstacles from our path and giving us defense; for terrific are the forces who dispute our way, and if the nation of the good angels is on our side, the nation of bad angels is on the other. Paul had it right when he said, "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." In that awful fight may God send us mighty angelic reinforcement! We want all their wings on our side, all their swords on our side, all their chariots on our side.

Thank God that those who are for us are mightier than those who are against us! And that thought makes me jubilant as to the final triumph. Belgium, you know, was the battle-ground of England and France. Yea, Belgium more than once was the battle-ground of opposing nations. It so happens that this world is the Belgium or battle-ground between the angelic nations, good and bad. Michael, the commander-in-chief on one side; Lucifer, as Byron calls him, or Mephistopheles, as Goethe calls him, or Satan, as the Bible calls him, the commander-in-chief on the other side. All pure angelhood under the one leadership, and all abandoned angelhood under the other leadership. Many a skirmish have the two armies had, but the great and decisive battle is yet to be fought. Either from our earthly homes or down from our supernal residences, may we come in on the right side; for on that side are God and heaven and victory. Meanwhile the battle is being set in array; and the forces celestial and demoniacal are confronting each other. Hear the boom of the great cannonade already opened! Cherubim, Seraphim, Thrones, Dominations, Principalities and Powers are beginning to ride down their foes, and until the work is completed, "Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon, and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon!"

THE WORLD COMING ∴ ∴ TO CHRIST

One-third of its Population Now Acknowledge Him as Lord and Saviour

"IS the world growing better or worse?" is a question frequently asked and not always satisfactorily answered. It has been contended by a certain class of very earnest, but hardly very hopeful Christians, that spirituality is retrograding and that instead of the church of Christ making progress in the conversion of the world, infidelity, heathenism and even paganism are more than holding their own; that, despite the efforts of the thousands of consecrated workers in the foreign field, the increase of the heathen more than keeps pace with the progress of the Christian population.



1. PROPORTIONATE STRENGTH OF THE RELIGIONS OF THE WORLD

Statistics, however, show a wholly different condition of affairs and demonstrate that the Lord is greatly blessing the efforts made for the advancement of his kingdom. In the following article, prepared for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, by Harold Macfarlane, a high statistical authority in England, presents facts which cannot fail to lend confidence and enthusiasm to God's people everywhere who are daily praying "Thy kingdom come," and working for the evangelization of the world.

. . .

"The number of countries in which census returns are made at intervals by no means coincides with the number of nationalities into which the world's population is divided; it therefore necessarily follows that the varying estimates compiled by the learned societies and distinguished savants, can only be accepted as approximate; but that there is no serious divergence of opinion—in view of the magnitude of the figures—can be seen at a glance by a comparison of the following statements:

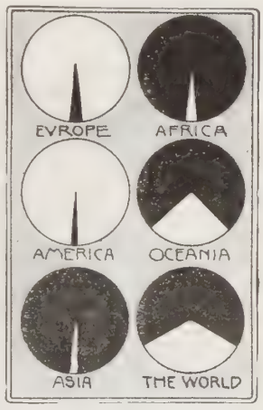
M. FOURNIER DE FLAIX.
Christians, . . .	477,080,158
Non-Christians, . . .	952,602,041
Total, . . .	1,429,682,199
FROM MEYER'S "KONVERSATION-LEXICON"
Christians, . . .	448,000,000
Non-Christians, . . .	1,004,000,000
Total, . . .	1,452,000,000
AMERICAN STATISTICAL SOCIETY
Christians, . . .	472,090,000
Non-Christians, . . .	948,400,000
Total, . . .	1,420,490,000

"Messrs. Wagner and Supan estimated the earth's population at 1,479,729,400 and Ravenstein at 1,487,900,000, but for the purpose of this article the Christian population is taken at 477,220,000, and non-Christians at 952,650,000, which are practically the figures supplied by M. de Flaix.

"In Fig. 1, the heights of the columns, which are all drawn to the same scale, show how the members of the different religions of the world compare in numbers one with another. The Confucians among the heathen and the Church of Rome amongst Christians claim the greatest number of followers, whilst the community of Jews (excepting divers minor Christian sects) have the fewest adherents; indeed, there is only one Jew to every sixty-eight Christians in the world, and only one of the chosen race to over one hundred and thirty heathen.

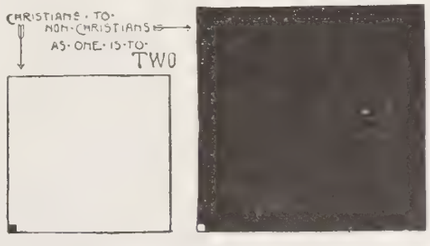
"A glance at the four white columns that represent the Christians on this earth, and at the seven black columns representing the heathen, is sufficient to show that the latter greatly outnumber the former. In Fig. 2, where the black square is drawn in proportion to the millions of non-Christians and the white in proportion to the Christian army, the statement is made that the non-Christians are twice as many as the Christians. This is practically the case, but if we require absolute accuracy, the proportion (according to M. de Flaix's estimate) is as 1.99673 is to 1. The small squares drawn at the left-hand bottom corner of each figure each represent one million (1,000,000) souls; when we compare them to the great squares of which they, representing so much, form so small a part, we get some idea of the magnitude of the earth's population. It may be of interest to point out that if portrayed on the black square the population of England (31,000,000) would be represented by a white strip down one of its sides having the same depth as the small square in the corner.

"When compared with the non-Christian millions, the millions of Christians throughout the world make but a poor show, but when the right-hand square is obliterated, and we glance at the small square representing a million Christians, and compare it with the large white square four hundred and seventy-seven times as great, we can appreciate the magnitude of Christ's army—an army large enough, if its members stood shoulder to shoulder (the attitude of all good Christians), to present a living bulwark over 135,000 miles in length, or sufficient to encircle the earth at the equator more than five times.



3. THE GOSPEL'S PROGRESS

"In Fig. 3 is portrayed the proportion of Christians and non-Christians in Europe, Asia, Africa, America, Oceania and (combining them all into a single figure and thereby obtaining the result illustrated in another manner in Fig. 2) the world. In this diagram the portion of the circle that appears white represents the Christian population of the continent portrayed, the black portion being drawn in proportion to the number of non-Christian inhabitants: a glance at the diagram will reveal the fact that Europe and America have almost their exact antithesis in Africa and Asia.



2 CHRISTIANS AND NON CHRISTIANS

In every 100 people of Europe there are 96.3 Christians and 3.7 non-Christians.

In every 100 people of Africa there are 3.3 Christians and 96.7 non-Christians.

In every 100 people of America there are 99 Christians and 1 non-Christian.

In every 100 people of Asia there are 1.625 Christians and 98.375 non-Christians.

In every 100 people of Oceania there are 25.5 Christians and 74.5 non-Christians.

A final calculation, however, treats of the English-speaking people of the earth, who number more than one-twelfth of the world's population only. Of the English-speaking races almost a quarter (23¼ in every 100) are Episcopalians; three-twentieths (15 in every 100) are Methodists; one-eighth (12½ in every 100) are of the Church of Rome; a tenth are Presbyterians; three-fortieths (7½ in every 100) are Baptists; one-twentieth are Congregationalists; Lutherans claim 2¼ per cent.; Unitarians 2 per cent., whilst 13½ per cent. are unclassified. There is still 4¼ per cent. of the English-speaking population to account for, but they, alas! are religionless."

My Station

My place is not amid the battle's brunt,
Where charging lines are pressing hard the fight;
For others is reserved the surging front—
To them 'tis given to storm the gun-crowned height.

The Captain of the host assigns to me
A post to guard unseen by public eye;
And though unknown my weary watch may be,
I'll stand my ground, or like a soldier die.

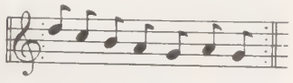
Detroit, Mich. GEORGE F. UNIDE.

Music from a Piece of Coal

ONE whose heart is open for the reception of the lessons nature is ever seeking to impart, need never go hungry for intellectual and spiritual food. Here art and science seem to play in a realm without mete or bound. And though we are prone to suggest that things chance to turn out thus and so, we should do well to check this tendency with the reflection that God's laws are unchangeable and certain in their operation, interlocked like the links of a chain, each one dependent upon and strengthening every other one in the cooperative whole.

Most observant persons have, at one time or another, noticed some strange coincidences, as unusual occurrences are commonly called. Under no circumstances are these phenomena mere happenings, but they are the creatures of God's harmonious laws. The writer was once eye-witness and ear witness, too, of a little natural musical serenade that was a truly remarkable example of coincidences, whose effect might be compared to that of a miniature calliope or pipe-organ. At the time alluded to, the writer occupied a rather capacious sleeping-room, whose mode of architecture left windows and doors and floor so unmistakably ventilated that he was compelled to keep a brisk coal fire going in the large open grate at one end of the room in order to maintain a bearable temperature, for the winter weather was hovering somewhere below the zero mark.

Soft or bituminous coal was the fuel used. Now, those who have had some experience with this sort of fuel, may have taken notice how it sometimes gets heated to a waxy consistency, in which state gas collects in the interior of the block of coal, until it acquires sufficient force to open up a vent, through which the gas escapes with little puffs and reports, as if from a diminutive volcano. In the instance under consideration, those puffs were so adjusted that, as sometimes occurs, they resulted in musical notes, forming a pretty little melody from the gamut, as follows:



While the pitch may have been higher than indicated, the order of intervals and the relative length of the various notes, proceeding from that pasty mass of coal, were as represented, as nearly as a fairly trained musical ear could distinguish. This little strain was repeated many times, gradually faster and faster, until the order was broken up, and the fairy serenade had almost wrought the observer into an ecstacy of delight. Truly may we say of our God, as sang the Israelitish bard, "Thou art the God that doest wonders."

Chicago, Ill. JAMES W. HIZER

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Rebuilding the Walls . . . of Jerusalem

S. S. Lesson for Nov. 12. Neh. 4 : 7-18
Golden Text, Matt. 26 : 41.

BY MRS. M. BAXTER

GOD made his servant Nehemiah to be an inspiration to the rulers and the people of the Jews. These very men whose indifference first, and then whose discouragement, had allowed them to leave the broken-down walls of Jerusalem without making any attempt to repair them, were now ready to put all their heart into the work. It was portioned out between the different families, but "above the horse gate repaired the priests, every one over against his own house, and Zadok, the son of Immer, over against his house" (Neh. 3 : 28). Oh, how good it would be if every teacher of the Gospel would make strong the wall between the church and the world in the regulations of his own house and family! The life of a preacher has far more power for good or for evil than all the sermons which he preaches.

The devil never permits—and God suffers it—that any work of the Lord, be it the building of walls or the building up of believers, or be it soul winning, shall go on without continual tests of faith and patience. If we understand our God, we do not fret and worry over these apparent hindrances; we do not count it as "a strange thing" which happens to us (I. Pet. 4 : 12) when our God lets us pass one examination after another in his school. We know that he has the whole plan before him. He sees the end from the beginning, and has a purpose to carry out which is far beyond the small conceptions which we may form. He could do by a word all which he permits us to do for him; but he cannot, consistently with the dignity of man, who is called to be made partaker of the divine nature, force the will of one of his creatures, or give them by miracle the knowledge of himself, which is eternal life, and which is learned in recognizing him in all things according to his Word. Old Testament men—i. e., some special Old Testament men—learned to understand God, and that they might do so, were subjected to many and special tests, that they might learn to have to do with God in everything.

Thus it came to pass that Nehemiah and the rulers, priests and people were subjected to the most tantalizing interference and harass on the part of their enemies. The descendants of those colonists whom Shalmanezer had planted in the land of Israel were jealous of anything which might restore the prosperity of Jerusalem. Sanballat was one of these, and he, with his allies, Tobiah the Ammonite, the Arabians and the Ashdodites, sought, by one means after another, to hinder the building of the wall. Their first attempt was by mocking. "What do these feeble Jews? Will they fortify themselves? Will they sacrifice? Will they make an end in a day? Will they revive the stones out of the heaps of rubbish, seeing they are burned?" said Sanballat. And Tobiah added, "Even that which they build, if a fox go up, he shall break down their stone wall" (Neh. 4 : 1-3). There is in the human heart, by nature, an instinctive desire to retaliate—to reply to cutting, wounding words such as these. But when Christ in us has shown us our true place at the cross, we can no longer be hurt by mockery, however unjust it may seem; for what we may not deserve from man, we know we do deserve from God, and it shuts our mouths. It is not "a strange thing which has happened to us."

Nehemiah understood how to trust his God, and without replying one word to the enemies, he turned over his cause into the hands of God: "Hear, O God, for we are despised." His prayer was, indeed, an Old Testament prayer, but it was a righteous one, and a prayer of faith.

The next attempt to stop the building of the wall was by a general conspiracy of the enemies to come and fight against Jerusalem, and stop the building of the wall, as previously the building of the temple had been made to cease, "by force and power" (Ezra 4 : 23). Again God was their refuge: "But we made our prayer unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night, because of them." This did Nehemiah: Instead of pitying himself, and so giving way to discouragement, he kept his eyes wide open to all the manœuvres of his foes, that he might trust them implicitly in detail to his God.

"SO BUILT WE THE WALL AND ALL THE WALL WAS JOINED TOGETHER"

All things seemed to be against him: "Without were fightings, within were fears," as with Paul (II. Cor. 6 : 5). "Within, Judah said, the strength of the bearers of burdens—the coolies—is decayed, and there is much rubbish, so that we are not able to build the wall." But the man of faith saw in this an occasion to make prayer unto God, who could build the wall. Without "our adversaries said, They shall not know, neither see, until we come into the midst of them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease." Who told this to Nehemiah? In any case, the Lord heard prayer, and by some means apprised his servant of the enemies' tactics. Once before, in the time of Elisha, the king of Syria was surprised that a man of God, from whom God did not hide things, could tell the king of Israel the words which he, the king of Syria, spoke in the greatest secrecy, in his bedchamber (II. Kings 6 : 12). Then the Jews which dwelt around them looked upon their case as hopeless. In their eyes the cause of the builders was a lost one, and they advised them to come out to them in the country, and this ten different times.

But Nehemiah did not look to probabilities and possibilities: "I looked, and rose up, and said to the nobles and to the rest of the people, Be not ye afraid of them: remember the Lord, which is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons and your daughters, your wives and your houses." And God justified his servant who trusted him. "It came to pass that when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and that God had brought their counsel to naught, that we returned, all of us, to the wall, every one to his work."

Lesson Points

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers

BETWEEN the period of this lesson and that of last week there is an interval of about six months, which is full of interest. Nehemiah's prayer is answered, but only through intense activity and constant vigilance in the face of opposition. Nehemiah's genius was administrative, and a really good administrator is one of the rarest as well as the most useful of men. Ezra, with all his learning and high principle, was lacking in this quality with which Nehemiah was so richly endowed. We see in Nehemiah the man of affairs, energetic, far-sighted, vigilant, tactful. How far the queen helped him in getting permission to go to Jerusalem and rebuild its walls he does not say, but his mention of her sitting by her husband when he urged his petition is not without significance. History tells us that her name was Damaspia. A definite leave of absence was accorded, letters of authority were granted and an escort provided, for Nehemiah was to go out as governor of Judea. The journey appears to have occupied about three months, which would include a stay at Damascus, where Nehemiah would have to present his letters to Megabyzus, who, as governor of Syria, would be his official superior. Thence to Jerusalem would be a twelve days' journey, as a detour would have to be made to avoid [illegible] understood the character of the difficulties with which he would have to contend. These were twofold. There was the inertia of the Jews in Jerusalem who must be stirred up to rebuild the walls; and there was the hatred of Sanballat the governor of Samaria who might be relied on to thwart Nehemiah's project by fair means or foul, if it was possible. It is deeply interesting to read how the sagacious man went to work. Without telling friend or foe of his purpose, he made a personal examination of the walls, choosing the night as the safest and most secret time for his expedition. When, the next day, he met the leaders of his people in conference, he was thus prepared by personal knowledge, to deal with the subject. His plans were fully prepared. Every man was to do his share in the work and every one was to repair that portion of the wall nearest his own home. Thus the worker would have a personal interest in seeing that the wall at that point was well and solidly built. That point settled, preparations must be made to deal with the enemy who would be sure to come. So the workmen were armed and sentinels were set to watch. So well was the work done and so effective the watch, that Sanballat's marauding troops did not venture to attack, and all his plots miscarried. In fifty-two days from the beginning of the work, all the holes were filled and the wall was once again strong and firm. Nothing was needed but to finish the gates and put them in place. Nehemiah does not say much about his share, but his incidental mention of the fact that he never took off his clothes during the seven weeks, shows what an anxious and vigilant time it must have been for him. All this care and activity, taken in connection with the prayer he offered at the beginning, is very noteworthy. His prayer shows that he relied on God wholly; but he did not neglect anything that would secure success. The combination of faith with intelligent effort is very suggestive.

Judah said. What Judah said was a complaint and an assurance that they were not able to do the work. In the next verse there is an account of what the adversaries said. Still farther on is the report of the Jews who had come from other parts of Palestine to help. All three reports were of the same purport, discouraging in the extreme. Nehemiah must have been a man of great courage and tenacity of purpose to proceed; but he did proceed, and he achieved his purpose. This is the kind of man who does succeed. When George Stephenson, the engineer, was proposing to construct the first line of railroad he was opposed by the owners of the property through which the line was to run; he was opposed by the owners of stage coaches. Then the men of science came and proved that the whole thing was impracticable. They showed that by scientific law the wheels of the engine would turn round and round, but the locomotive would not move. But Stephenson would not be discouraged, and in the end he triumphed.

We made our prayer unto our God and set a watch. That is the true kind of piety. The man who prays and does not set a watch is a fanatic and he is liable to come to grief. The man who sets a watch and does not pray is irreligious and loses the help that God places within his reach. Æsop tells a fable of a wagoner, who was driving a heavy load along a very muddy way. At last he came to a part of the road where the wheels sank deep in the mire. So the wagoner threw down his whip and knelt down and prayed to Hercules the strong: "O Hercules, help me in this my hour of distress." Hercules appeared to him and said: "I am come at thy request. Now, don't sprawl there, but get up and put thy shoulder to the wheel." A modern illustration of the same truth is that of two school-girls. One of them who often failed, asked the other who could always say her lessons, how it was that she succeeded. The other replied that she asked God to help her. A few days afterwards they met again and the first girl complained that she continued to fail though she had asked divine help. "Did you study the lesson thoroughly?" her friend asked. "Oh no," said the child, "I did not suppose it was necessary to study if I asked God to help me." God does not dispense with our efforts but he is ready to bless them and prosper them.

. . . In the Great Hurricane's Heart . . .

The Signal Officer at Mayaguez Describes the most Terrible Night in Porto Rico's History

SCHOONER "VASCO" AGROUND

DISTRIBUTING RELIEF AT MAYAGUEZ

WRECK OF SCHOONER "DICHOZA"

FROM ex-U. S. Consul Badrena, now signal officer at the important port of Mayaguez, Porto Rico, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has received the first actual description of the great hurricane by which thousands of islanders perished. It will be read with pathetic interest, since it presents a picture of such awful desolation and suffering as is seldom witnessed even in tropical lands, where great storms are not infrequent.

"The work of relief in Porto Rico is conducted in a truly practical way. There are two committees: one of men, who see that the relief goes to the right parties, and another of ladies, who have in charge the investigation of cases where relief is needed, and where the sufferers rather conceal their condition than apply for aid. Last week over 10,000 rations were distributed in this city. At Anasco, for the same week, the rations reached 21,410, and at Maricao 5,067. For Cabo-Rojo, Sabana Grande and las Marias, in this district, a long file of wagons start from here every seven days with provisions for the sufferers.

. . .

"I represent in this port the Weather Bureau, and on the 7th, at 2 P. M., I received information by wire that a hurricane was approaching from Dominica, and an order to display the hurricane signal. My attention was directed to the shipping in port, and I prevailed on the masters that they should not sail. By midnight signs of a hurricane were already evident. I had little sleep, keeping the records of the falling needle. Early in the morning it was plain that the hurricane was already on the island, coming from E.S.E.

"At 9.15 A.M., after sending my last telegraphic message to San Juan, the first gusts of wind were felt, and by 9.45 the telegraphic office was blown down. From that time to 12.15 P.M. the havoc was indescribable,—trees uprooted, houses unroofed, walls falling down and iron roofing flying about like so many missiles. The wind apparently blew from all sides. Store-houses were blown off balloon-like, and fell entirely demolished. Palms were wrung from the soil and fell down in heaps. The barometer fell thirty lines, a point I had never before seen it reach, and it looked as if the end of the world was to come. My house, already partly unroofed, seemed as though ready to give way and bury us all under the debris.

. . .

"Calm, dead calm, followed, which, to the uninitiated, appeared as though the storm had come to an end. To me, a look at the barometer showed that the vortex was passing at that moment over the city. Time 12.45 P. M. I hurried to learn the fate of the shipping and to warn all that the second and more terrible part was to begin. I found that the schooner Concepcion had struck the S. S. Gyller, and was broken to pieces and washed away. Of the one hundred and seventy-eight emigrants on board, only two were missed, a woman and a child.

"The calm lasted an hour; 1.45 P.M. and it began to blow again. The wind came this second time from the S.W. and kept on blowing until the last gusts came from the S.E. The hurricane had lasted eight hours. Then darkness came, and with the darkness, new horrors. Rain! rain! It fell in heavy sheets incessantly. Rest was needed, but it was impossible to obtain it. After 1 A.M. the river, in mighty flood, kept the people awake and flying from their homes in search of new places of safety. Trees, telegraph poles, small houses and all sorts of furniture were passing in the current at full speed.

. . .

"The news that reached us from the country was simply appalling. What the storm had left the flood took, carrying cattle and whole families to the sea. Communication with the nearest town was out of the question. The railway was demolished and the rails twisted like threads.

"Next forenoon sad tidings came that the little hamlet called La Vega had been carried away by the water. The school of La Vega was under the direction of my brother-in-law, who had a large family of eight children. The hamlet was near the juncture of two rivers. The inhabitants, surprised by the swollen appearance of the flood, remained in their houses trusting that the water would not reach their abodes. There was a raise of nearly ten meters, and all at once, the houses, already full of water, began to give way, knocking one another to pieces, and throwing the inmates into the current. When my brother-in-law came to his senses, he found that his wife and two of the children had disappeared. The alcalde had lost his whole family, except one little boy. Forty perished; of that number but eight were found, the torrent having carried them thirty miles. Next day we were asked by the authorities if we wished to identify the bodies that had been recovered. My wife and I started for the spot. My sister-in-law was a tall, fine-looking woman with long blonde hair, and by these signs we were enabled to recognize her. She was clasping in a last embrace her youngest son.

"This far-reaching calamity has brought with it the everlasting love of the Porto Ricans for their American countrymen.

"M. BADRENA, Late U. S. Consul."

Mayaguez Porto Rico.

GIVING OUT RELIEF SUPPLIES TO THE SUFFERERS AT BAYAMON

A HOUSE WITH SECOND STORY FRONT BLOWN OFF

A WRECKED SUMMER RESORT AT MAYAGUEZ

THE MARKET-PLACE, MAYAGUEZ

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR.

T. DeWitt Talmage
EDITOR.

B. J. FERNIE, G. H. SANDISON,
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald [illegible]

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Remittances [illegible] manner available to the remitter. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the Canadas, and Mexico, foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals.—It is always best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers.—We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, nor to make good omissions caused by tardy renewals.

Change of Date. [illegible] the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address.—Always give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name [illegible] live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded [illegible]

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,
Bible House, New York City.

[illegible]

To Relieve Porto Rico

AFTER months of suffering, the result of the recent flood and cyclone, the people of Porto Rico, who have for many weeks past been kept alive mainly through the generosity of America, are at last to be substantially, and it is hoped permanently, relieved by the United States Government. It is learned upon reliable authority that the Government will very shortly make a Large Appropriation of Money for Public Works on the Island, and thus meet all the requirements of the case by means of the grandest sort of charity, viz., honest and profitable labor for all. This beneficent measure will bring immediate relief to the sick, the feeble and the aged, as well as to the strong and able bodied.

In view of this cheering prospect, which will doubtless soon be realized, it will no longer be necessary to make appeal to private benevolence to support the destitute throughout the island. It is understood that the new measure of relief will go into operation within the next few weeks. The Relief Fund has been the means, under Divine blessing, of saving many lives and of lifting the dark cloud of starvation from a multitude of Porto Rican homes. Especially has it been a boon to the thousands of hapless and helpless women and children who, deprived of their natural protectors and with none to care for them, must have perished miserably had not the generous hand of American charity been extended to them in their time of distress. This class, together with the sick and those who were rendered incapable through injuries sustained in the great storm, have been the special care of those who had charge of the distribution of the funds raised through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and the good friends who contributed for this worthy cause, besides the consciousness of having performed a sacred duty promptly and cheerfully, have earned the undying gratitude of the mothers and children of our new island colony and of its people generally. On and After November 15th no Further Contributions Will be Received by "The Christian Herald" for Porto Rican Relief, and the Fund, Having Accomplished Its Purpose, as Far as the Efforts of Our Readers are Concerned, Will be Closed.

It is with pleasure that we have to report excellent progress in the Sunday School work established at San Juan by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. This promising spiritual work, in which our readers have taken an active interest and towards whose support many of them have contributed, has multiplied, and the labors of those in charge of it are already proving fruitful. With the kind cooperation of Mr. Frank L. Smith, representative of the International Y. M. C. A., at San Juan, the school was established last fall and it has grown beyond all expectation. Hundreds of Porto Rican children now come regularly to the classes on Sunday, and the teachers report a deep and growing interest in spiritual things among the scholars. Testaments in Spanish and English are used and the beautiful Gospel hymns that are familiar in our own churches and Sunday Schools are sung by sweet young native voices, to words that seem to fit themselves to the melodies. Nor is the influence of the Sunday School confined to the children, for many parents who probably never before heard the Gospel of Jesus Christ preached, are being awakened and the missionary meetings in San Juan and vicinity are greatly helped in consequence. With a view to extending the Sunday School work and to found schools at other available localities throughout the island THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has commissioned Rev. James Jamieson, an experienced and consecrated teacher, to proceed to Porto Rico and assume charge of this work. Dr. Jamieson is now on his way to San Juan. He will keep our readers fully informed of the progress made and of the opportunities the island affords as a field for Sunday School effort. That his task is an extensive one may well be understood when it is remembered that our Sunday School at San Juan is the only one in Porto Rico at the present time. Tens of thousands of little lambs to be folded, and as yet without a shepherd! This is the special work which, begun before the cyclone and the subsequent suffering visited the island, now invites our earnest effort. We hope to interest many of our readers in this labor of love among the little children of Porto Rico, and we ask them to join with us in holding up the hands of the workers by their prayers and their offerings.

Colonial History Revived

IT is a remarkable coincidence that with our new burden of colonial responsibility should come a wholesome epidemic of colonial literature. Some very remarkable books have lately been written, which open up afresh the manner of colonial life just previous to the Revolutionary period and during the same. These volumes are calculated to inspire a spirit of heroism in the young people of this generation. They show what it costs to plant free institutions, and what they are worth. They depict life in Mother England, as well as in the colonies. Remarkable among these productions is Richard Carvel, a book whose pages are redolent of colonial life in Maryland, and give us also pictures taken from civil and fashionable life in London, while there are in it fictitious characters full of vigor and beauty and international incidents of the most stirring nature, taken from the lives of such statesmen as Charles Fox and such naval heroes as John Paul Jones. The book has enough history to make it instructive and enough fictitious matter to make it fascinating to the young, while it is very appropriate to the present period.

The Expansion of the United States in the Turkish Empire

IN the public prints in Austria there is much discussion of the apparent disposition of the United States to extend its influence in Turkey. This is indicated by the effort to elevate the United States Legation to an Embassy. This step means, so these Austrian papers think, that this Government has a distinct purpose to figure in the circle of the Great Powers as never before, and to secure to itself a fair share of the business advantages of the East. The new line of steamers between New York and Constantinople, the frequency of American vessels in Turkish waters, the fact that more than a million kilograms of American flour have recently been imported there, and that the United States is establishing commercial agencies in Southern and Central Russia, all point in the same direction.

We have confidence enough in our national principles and administration to believe that these changes will benefit the East, as well as will be of material advantage to the nation itself. It is almost certain that the presence of American vessels in Turkish waters several years ago would have prevented the bloody massacre of Armenians and the needless destruction in battle of thousands of Greeks. Everywhere our flag flies, the idea of man as a freeman is emphasized. The most conservative old-world systems will be liberalized by our presence, while our Ambassadors at other Courts will be loyal to the best American instincts and aspirations.

Party Of Good Morals

IT is evident to all sensible observers, that American affairs are being Divinely supervised. But the trouble is we have no God in American politics. We have a devil; yea, a whole gang of demons. The devil of office-seeking, the devil of fraud, the devil of injustice, the devil of wastefulness, but no God. We have plenty of gin and plenty of old rye, and plenty of schnapps and plenty of city and state and national swindle, but no God. I am far from wanting to see a union of Church and State in this country, but I would like to see a party that would recognize openly and above board and without disguise and without cant, the God in whose name Columbus took possession of this country and in whose name Washington achieved our independence and in whose name so many blessings have come to us—the God of our great harvest fields, the God who protected our American armies in 1776 and 1812 and 1864, the God of our peaceful and beloved homes. Blessed be His glorious name forever! "Oh," says some one, "that would not be fair to put a recognition of God in the platform of a political party when there are so many people who do not believe in a God." Well, there are a great many people who do not believe in the sanctity of the family relation, a great many people who do not believe in the rights of property, a great many people who do not believe in any style of government—people who would rob and steal and murder. Do you refuse to make laws against criminals because there are criminals? Will you refuse to recognize God in governmental affairs because there are men who do not believe in a God? Your political parties come on with a preamble and they say, "Whereas this and whereas that," and it is simply a hash of old political hacks. There is overwhelming victory to that party which shall come and have enough courage to say in a preamble, "Whereas, this nation has been blessed of God as no other nation has been—blessed in the harvests, blessed in its civilization, blessed in its protection against foreign enemies: therefore, we, in convention assembled, acknowledge His goodness and pray for the continuance of His mercy, and in the name of God we now set up our banners." A party that has the strength to say that in such a preamble followed by commonsensical and righteous resolutions as to what you will do for the agricultural, the commercial, the manufacturing, the mining, the literary, the artistic, the moral interests of this country, will sweep the whole land from [illegible] Among the magnificent men in our city, state and national councils there are men who could lead forth in a movement like that if they only would. I could call them [illegible] north, south, east and west, with enough talent and with enough good character to marshal a movement in which the moral idea shall be the dominant one over all others, and then you will see the Gehenna of modern politics plowed under. I wait for the formation of such a party. I wait for the coming of such a man. Where is this Joshua? We are as a nation on the way either to reformation or destruction. A flight of doves discovered to Columbus the direction of the land. We shall come to new and regenerated America by a flight of prayers. We need in our homes, in our churches, in our schools, the principles of pure patriotism inculcated. We want to live the rest of our lives in a city and national atmosphere cleansed of all moral contamination and the dust of our graves untouched by the feet of the demagogue and the despoiler. God save the cities! God save the nation!

BRIEF NOTES

[illegible]

A Professorship on Temperance and the [illegible] by a bequest of the late Rev. George F. Clark, of [illegible]

[illegible] New York and one or two other large cities in the Northern States.

Evangelist William E. Geil has concluded his services in the Bushwick Ave. Baptist Church, Brooklyn. The pastor, Rev. T. J. Whittaker, writes [illegible] accept remuneration for his services.

Rev. J. T. Wills, D.D., formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Greenwich, Conn., is prepared to assist pastors in special services during the fall and winter. Dr. Wills has had a very successful season in Great Britain and has just returned full of energy for work on this side. [illegible] West Fortysecond Street, New York.

Pastor Chiniquy's last work, about which many subscribers have written us, is practically an autobiography. It describes his labors since quitting the Church of Rome, now forty years ago. It was substantially complete at the time of Father Chiniquy's death, and has been prepared for the press by his son-in-law, Dr. J. L. Morin, of Montreal. The Revell Company, of New York, are the [illegible]

The "Protestant Missionary Directory of [illegible] aries in India as 436, showing a decrease of 17: [illegible] smaller bodies, make up a total of 2,797, being an [illegible]

At the Alliance Convention in New York on Sunday, Oct. 15, Rev. A. B. Simpson made his annual appeal for funds to carry on the foreign missionary work of the Alliance. The amount given, including cash and pledges, was sixty-four thousand dollars. This brings the total collected at the [illegible] A large portion of this amount consists of pledges to be redeemed within a year.

It may be hoped that the words of Bishop Lawrence addressed to the International Congrega[illegible] by the bishops of his communion in England. He expressed his great satisfaction in the fact of the church in the United States being free from state support and state control. It may comfort English brethren to know that the disendowment and disestablishment they so much dread is not so disastrous a thing as they suppose.

The Christian Endeavor Society and the Epworth League of Elmira, N. Y., have had a week of special meetings, conducted by Don. O. Shelton, of New York. Fully thirteen hundred young people attended these meetings. [illegible] Mr. Shelton gave a short talk on the best methods of studying the Bible. This was followed by the study of some one of the Epistles. The societies speak highly of the benefits derived from the meetings. Mr. Shelton is now holding similar conventions with the Young People's Societies in Illinois.

The Sunday School Association has now seven different meetings every week in New York city for teachers, at which the lesson for the ensuing Sunday is taught. They are: Broadway Tabernacle, Saturday [illegible] which is for the primary department; Broome St. Tabernacle, Monday; Collegiate Reformed Church, 123d St., Tuesday; Olivet Memorial Church, Thursday; [illegible] 42d St. and Third Ave., Friday; and Presbyterian [illegible] 53d St. and Madison Ave., Friday. Dr. A. F. Schauffler, Rev. A. J. Kerr and J. W. Miles are among the leaders.

The Boer Defeat in Natal

FOR weeks past, two hemispheres have been watching with keen interest the conflict between the British and the Boers in Natal, where the burgher invasion of the colony had been conducted with so much energy and in such overwhelming force that it threatened to overrun the entire territory and cut off communication between the main British camp at Ladysmith and the port of Durban, its only source of reinforcement. Matters were looking ominous for the British forces. Joubert, the veteran Boer commander, with two large columns threatened them on the north, and the Orange Free State troops were advancing from the westward, either force being equal in point of numbers to the British army under Gen. White's command. The latter had placed a strong body of troops at Glencoe, north of Ladysmith, hoping to impede the Boer advance and to prevent the junction of the two burgher armies. There were, besides, several commandos operating at various points, destroying railroad lines and otherwise harassing the British, making the position of the defenders still more uncertain and insecure. Suddenly, on Oct. 20, came the news that an important battle had been fought at Glencoe, which entirely changed the aspect of affairs. The British force at Glencoe, four thousand strong, under Gen. Sir William Penn Symons, was attacked by a Boer column of nine thousand Transvaal burghers under Gen. Joubert. The latter occupied a commanding position on Smith Hill, overlooking the British camp. Soon a furious artillery duel was in progress, the Boer shells falling short, while the British guns were served with deadly accuracy. General Symons himself led a forward movement against the Boer position, and after a stubborn fight, the British infantry, under cover of a heavy artillery fire, swarmed up the hill and drove the enemy from their guns after a fierce hand-to-hand struggle. The carnage was terrible. Before the summit of the hill was reached, Gen. Symons fell mortally wounded in the stomach. Men were dropping on all sides. The Boers rallied, but their assailants charged with the bayonet, and then began a panic and flight, accompanied by fearful slaughter. British cavalry, which had swept around the base of the hill, flanked the fugitives and an artillery battery mowed them down at short range. It is estimated that 1000 burghers fell in the engagement. The British troops too, lost heavily, 41 being killed and 173 wounded. Ten officers were among the dead and 20 were wounded. The heaviest losses were among the King's Rifles and Dublin Fusiliers, who led the charge and captured the Boer guns. Another engagement of almost equal importance took place on Oct. 21st, at Elandslaagle, between Ladysmith and Glencoe, where a strong Boer position on a rocky hill was shelled by British artillery and carried by an infantry attack after desperate fighting. Gen. Jan Kock and Piet Joubert (Gen. Joubert's nephew) were among the prisoners taken. These reverses, while they may not materially affect the plans of the burgher commanders, will probably delay the projected attack on Ladysmith. Some time must elapse before the British reinforcements, under Gen. Sir Redvers Buller, can reach Africa, and many battles may be fought in the interval. The fate of both Kimberley and Mafeking may be decided before either can be relieved. In any event, the struggle will not close until thousands of human lives have been sacrificed. Britain's jubilation is mingled with the lamentations of those who have been bereaved, and many a burgher homestead across the Vaal mourns the loss of those who will return no more. Grievous, indeed, is this horrible strife. The church has need to pray for the speedy coming of that day which the ancient seer assures us will yet come:

He maketh wars to cease unto the ends of the earth; he breaketh the bow and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire. Be still and know that I am God (Ps. 46: 9).

MARKET-SQUARE AT KIMBERLEY—GEN. SIR R. BULLER, BRITISH COMMANDER

THE CAMP AT LADYSMITH, BRITAIN'S MILITARY CENTRE IN NATAL

A Peculiar Explosion

The tenants of a large tenement house in Brooklyn, N. Y., had a panic on Thursday of last week. A man who occupies one of the nests of apartments is a foreigner who, as a boy, had some experience in a wine-growing country. He bought a quantity of grapes early in the week, intending to make wine with them. Then he brought in an empty whiskey barrel which he purchased at a nearby saloon. It was tightly sealed up, but before putting in the grape juice he drew the bung and thrust a lighted taper in. Neither he nor his wife and children knew just what occurred after that. The barrel was empty, as he supposed, but he had not taken into account the gases that are generated in a barrel which has held whiskey, when it is closed and allowed to stand. The other tenants heard a terrific explosion, their windows were shattered and the walls trembled. When they went to the apartment whence the noise proceeded, they found the man and his wife lying unconscious on the floor and the children with their faces bruised crying bitterly. An ambulance was summoned, but the surgeon who came was able to dress the man's wounds and restore the other members of the family without taking them to the hospital. The accident proves how powerful and destructive an agent whiskey is. It does not often take this way of demonstrating the fact; but its ordinary way of injuring a man and wrecking his home is quite as effectual and still more disastrous:

Thou shalt be as he that lieth down in the midst of the sea, or as he that lieth upon the top of a mast. They have stricken me, shalt thou say, and I was not sick; they have beaten me, and I felt it not (Prov. 23: 34).

The Trophy of the Yachts

Intensely gratifying to national pride is the result of the contest of the yachts this year for the famous cup. It was admitted on all hands that the Shamrock, which Sir Thomas Lipton brought from England to try to win back the cup, was the best boat ever entered for the contest. Never before in the forty-eight years that the United States has held the cup, did it seem so likely to lose it. But the American boat Columbia proved in at least two of the three races a better sailor. In the third race the Shamrock's mast snapped and she was disabled, so, according to previous agreement, her rival went over the course alone, The arrangement was that there were to be five races, but, as the Columbia won three consecutively, there was no need for the other two contests. So America keeps the cup for this year that she won so gallantly on August 22, 1851. Before that time the cup had scarcely been heard of outside of yachting circles. It had, however, been offered as a prize to be competed for by the yachts of all nations. Every year it had been won easily by the English Royal Yacht Squadron, but in that year a yacht named the America, smaller than many of her competitors, was sent from this country. The course was around the Isle of Wight, and, though her captain and crew were unfamiliar with the intricate channels, the America came in 20 minutes ahead of the English yachts. Queen Victoria witnessed the victory, and gracefully acknowledged that the race was fairly won. The cup was brought to America in triumph, and since then, in spite of all efforts to win it back, our yachtsmen have kept it. Enormous sums have been spent in England in building boats that would be sure to win, but in every instance the American builders have turned out a better yacht than the challenger, and have succeeded in beating their rival. The interest and enthusiasm displayed on both sides of the Atlantic in the contest shows that the same spirit survives that existed in the time of the Olympic games which the Apostle Paul describes so graphically, and which he used as an illustration of the struggle of the Christian life. Unhappily, there is in our day the same need to wish that Christians put into their spiritual effort the same energy and indomitable spirit that the sportsmen show.

THE AMERICA CUP

Know ye not that they who run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run that ye may obtain (I. Cor. 9: 24).

Juvenile Voyagers

The novel sight of three boys and a girl each wearing a tag like a package of merchandise attracted notice in New York one day last week. They were three boys and a girl, the eldest only eleven years old and the youngest three years. They were being taken to the dock of the German Lloyd Steamship Company, where the big steamer Friederich der Grosse lay ready for sailing. They were taken on board and placed in charge of the stewardess. A reporter who questioned that official, learned that they were the children of a dry-goods merchant on Long Island, who was sending them to relatives in England. The children's mother died recently, and they were helpless without her care. After one or two experiments, the bereaved father decided to place them all under the charge of some members of his deceased wife's family in England. As he was unable to go with them, and fearing lest here or in Southampton, where they would leave the steamer, they might stray, he had attached a tag to each of them bearing the child's name and destination. How thankful many parents would be if there were some such way of providing for their children reaching the right destination at the end of the journey through the world Children cannot be tagged for that journey, but their safety is assured if the parents will take the prescribed course at thebeginning.

Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it (Prov. 22: 6).

Quaint Little Guam,

THE BEAUTIFUL MID-PACIFIC ISLET PHOTOGRAPHED AN

THE BEAUTIFUL HARBOR ROAD ALONG THE SEA-BEACH AT GUAM

A NAVAL OFFICER'S LETTER FROM OUR SMALLEST COLONY

THE smallest of our newly won colonies has at last swung into de facto existence, and to-day the starry flag floats securely over a stable and well-organized government in our Pacific stronghold. Perhaps it is a bit premature to call it a stronghold as yet, for the plans for its defense are hardly matured; yet, with the battalion of 125 marines that guards the shore, and with the heavy battery of the U. S. S. Yosemite frowning from the harbor, Guam could now give a far different account of herself than she did in her ludicrous capture in June, 1898. Some day the fine harbor of San Luis d'Apra will doubtless be surrounded by strong batteries and the narrow entrance heavily mined, thus forming a safe and smooth shelter for our Pacific fleet and a pleasant coaling station and resting place in the long, long stretch of sea that extends from our possessions in Hawaii to our rich Philippine colonies.

So far, the people of the United States know but little of their midget colony of Guam, and I fancy they are more prone to regard it as a target for humorous invention than for serious consideration. This idea will soon be dispelled by the reports that the U. S. S. Yosemite is now sending home. The little island of Guam is twenty-six miles long and from three to five miles in width, and has about eight thousand inhabitants. Of these the greater part are natives, of Tagalo descent, their ancestors having come from the Philippines at a comparatively recent date. The original inhabitants were nearly all extirpated by the newcomers, and there is very little of the aboriginal stock left. They were called Chamorros, and were a peaceable and intelligent race, far superior to most of the Pacific island people, and possessing a written and spoken language, which survives, mixed with a large infusion of Spanish words, to this day. In spite of the long Spanish regime of over 250 years of settlement, remarkably little Spanish is spoken, and in fact English is quite as common. This last fact is due to the custom followed by the old-time whaling ships, of making Guam a place of rest and recruitment for their crews.

THE VILLAGE OF ASAN, A TYPE OF MANY OTHER VILLAGES IN GUAM

While this practice was not at all conducive to elevating the moral standard of the island, its influence was very marked upon the life, speech, and racial characteristics of the population. In appearance, the natives of Guam are of medium stature, with good figures, both men and women. Their hair is straight and black, but not so porcupine-like as that of the Filipinos. Their skin is of a brown color; their cheek bones are apt to be prominent and their noses sunken. Their costume is like that worn by the Filipinos: for the men, a white jacket or shirt, buttoning in front and hanging loose, with cotton trousers and a straw hat; for the women, a white undergarment and a fancy colored cotton skirt. The women never wear hats, and very rarely shoes or slippers. On gala days an elaborate jacket or bodice of pina cloth is worn. I have seen groups so attired gathered together during the afternoons in front of the local or mayor of the small village of Soumaye, on the harbor, where the Yosemite is lying.

All the islanders are Christians of the Roman Catholic faith, but their Christianity is neither deep nor fervent. Nearly all of the church-going is done by the women, and though not a vicious or depraved race, nor at all unchristian in their practices, yet they have very little depth of religious devotion or feeling. The Church, to them, is more a matter of ceremonial, of processions, of fiestas, than anything else. Each little village, however, has its own small stone church, though there is not always a padre to attend to its services; and each village has, in its principal street, a wooden cross with a rough stone base. Incidentally, I must apologize to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for the poor quality of my pictures. Those who have ever tried to do photographic work in the heat of the tropics with no dark-room, no running water, no ice-water, and after one's paper and films have undergone a torrid journey of 14,000 miles, will be able to appreciate my difficulty and will know that under such circumstances a film is more fickle than the fancy of a coquette.

The principal church at Agana, the capital of the island, is a commodious structure with a tile and galvanized iron roof. In the tower is a chime of bells, whose notes are of the most distressingly cracked variety. Outside on a small battery [illegible] the island that tolls for the island's joys and griefs, for the arrival of a vessel or for the burial of the dead. The future residence of the governor of Guam, Captain Richard P. Leary, U. S. N., is on the large plaza at Agana, surrounded by the other government buildings, which are all quite commodious and well built. The palace or government house is a large and well-ventilated building of two stories, with wide balconies and a tiled roof. The first floor contains the offices for the administration of the government, and the second, airy and spacious, with hard-wood floors, is the residence of the governor. Nearby are the barracks, arsenal, jail, school and church, all substantial buildings, worthy of no special mention except that they serve their purpose well, though the jail seems very insecure, viewed from an American standpoint. It is rarely necessary to make use of it, for among these well-behaved people there is but little crime. The road from Piti, where is the landing from th[illegible] to Agana the capital, is about five miles long and abounds in beautiful views a[illegible] villages. The native houses are built of wood or wattled bamboo, and have s[illegible] made of a very heavy thatch that is absolutely impervious to the heavy tropical [illegible] which is so marked a feature of the otherwise delightful climate of the island. Th[illegible] by reason of this same rainfall, are all raised on posts from the ground, and [illegible] houses is the shady lounging place of the pigs and chickens that every fam[illegible] to possess. The road winds close along the sea and is constructed of the gro[illegible] rock, and is generally in excellent condition, quite smooth enough to furnish a very pleasant bicycle ride, and there are, in fact, already upon the island a few wheels. Transportation generally is of a very primitive nature. I send you pictures of two contrasting turn-outs. One is the governor's private carriage, and the other the usual type of native cart, drawn by a bullock and having wheels of solid wood tired with a [illegible] strip of iron. The island has many quaint sights and [illegible] scenery, and I see fields of excellent promise for pen and camera, which I hope to be able to lay before you in my next letter. At this moment the navy transport Solace is preparing to take her departure for the United States, and if I wish to lay before you these few impressions I must defer further description until later, for communication with the Isle of Guam is rare and most irregular, depending on the movements of Uncle Sam's ships-of-war, for merchant steamers from the commercial nations of the world rarely or never appear in this lonely and little visited part of the Pacific.

AN OF[illegible]

A G[illegible]

CHAS. L. POOR, Ensign, U. S.

U. S. S. "Yosemite," Isle of Guam, Sept. 10, 1899.

• • •

OUR PEACEFUL VICTORY OVER THE SULTAN OF JOL

(From a Special Correspondent)

MANILA, AUG. 26, 1899.—Within the last few days we have won a victory th[illegible] islands without one shot fired; we have acquired territory and the rights of sov[illegible] and have promised the prot[illegible] our flag in return therefor. [illegible] tact, patience, diplomacy and [illegible] words of one man we have [illegible] the South in five weeks wh[illegible] thousand fighting men have n[illegible] in Luzon in six months. Fi[illegible] ago General Bates started up[illegible] sion to the Sultan of Jolo (pr[illegible] Ho-lo), and he has just retur[illegible] port his efforts have been su[illegible]

The Sultan of Jolo is the [illegible] head of the various tribes [illegible] inhabiting the Jolo archipela[illegible] lection of some 140 islands [illegible] that constitute a considerabl[illegible] of the Philippine group. Th[illegible] of these islands is Mindanao, [illegible] 000 square miles, and the res[illegible] the Sultan is on the island [illegible] thirty-seven miles long by twe[illegible] with an estimated population [illegible] This group is sometimes [illegible] Sulu archipelago. It is the m[illegible] and its climate is the bes[illegible] Eastern possessions.

The Moros are Mohamme[illegible] their Sultan has recently m[illegible]

AN OLD CHURCH AT AGANA, STILL SUBSTANTIAL AND IN GOOD CONDITION

st of all Our Colonies

EN FOR THE FIRST TIME, BY AN AMERICAN NAVAL OFFICER

N IN GUAM

grimage to Mecca. Under him are several chiefs, or dattos, who, while dutifully recognizing him as their religious chief and leader, do not grant him the same position concerning matters material. Two of his dattos are even now considering revolt against him, and it is said the Sultan's religious standing is the only thing which holds them back from active revolt. Spain never controlled these islands: she maintained a few isolated garrisons throughout the group, and collected duties at one or two ports only. She has not collected taxes there for over twenty years, and her rule and the recognition of her sovereignty were only nominal, and were obtained by the payment of yearly sums to the Sultan and his dattos. The Sultan drew a salary of 2,400 Mexican dollars a year, and, with the sums paid to his chiefs, amounting to 6,000 Mexican dollars a year, our predecessor in these islands acquired a passive acceptance of her flag. The Spaniards seldom ventured beyond e w s of their garrisons or the confines of the towns where they lived. The Moros e fice fighters, proud and self respecting. They have been pirates and looters and eir ternal feuds have been many. They have no affiliation with the Tagalogs of Luzon; ey a a distinct race, and to gain their good will and control was a difficult task.

Gieral Bates was absent upon his mission for five weeks. On August 20th an agreent is signed by himself, representing the United States, and the Sultan, the main ints f which follow: The sovereignty of the United States over the group is recogzed no man to be persecuted on account of his religion; the United States to occupy and control such points in the archipelago of Jolo as public interests seem to demand; any person can purchase land by obtaining the consent of the Sultan; the introduction of firearms is forbidden; piracy is to be suppressed; the courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction in all cases except of Moro against Moro; the United States will guard the Sultan and his people against foreign imposition. We allow religious freedom, and this pleased the Moros; Spain strove always, with practically no success, to force upon them the religion of Rome, and this continually promoted friction and ill feeling. Our toleration in this matter will do much to preserve concord and confidence between ourselves and the latest foreigners who have come under the Stars and Stripes. During the negotiations which resulted as herein set down, the Sultan was stubborn and crafty, and held out long for points impossible for our representative to concede. For instance, the Sultan wanted his flag to fly above the Stars and Stripes. General Bates replied that the gunboat in the harbor and the troops in the town were there for his (the Sultan's) protection; that should his vessels flying our flag sail to foreign ports they would be otecd and respected as American ships. Our representative was firm, business-like d cl r in his statements and arguments, and the Sultan was tactfully led away from this wel s from all his other impossible contentions.

AR

Tis is the latest American victory in the Philippines; it was won by patience, tact d diomacy.

Wen the Filipino commissioners came to Manila last May to treat with our Peace mmsioners for an honorable cessation of hostilities, they expressed themselves as well aseswith the form of government we drafted for them. They considered it liberal d we inclined to accept it. "But e trouble lies here," said Senor Gonzo, secretary to the Filipino Com ssio "your commissioners say they ll do us and so for us, but they also l us neir proposals are dependent on subsequent ratification by your ngres; if your Congress accepts se conditions well and good, but theylo not, where are we, the Filios? You practically ask us to surrender, n exchange for promises of ure forms and benefits which, you l us, ay or may not be kept, beise o one can tell what your ngres will do. Do you wonder degne to consider such negotiaons?" said Mr. Gonzago in concluding the conversation.

t is elieved by many men in these ands hat if a properly empowered mmission were appointed by the esid t to negotiate with the Filio leders, we could gain by tact l lomacy as satisfactory and no e a victory in Luzon as Gen l s has just won for us in Jolo.

HAROLD MARTIN.

THE PRIVATE CARRIAGE OF THE GOVERNOR OF GUAM

THE ROYAL PALACE AT AGANA, ISLE OF GUAM

KOREAN "DEVIL-WORSHIPERS" WON TO CHRIST

THROUGH the kindness of relatives in Bay City, Mich., we are permitted to make this interesting extract from a letter received from Rev. James S. Gale, missionary at Wonsan, Korea, descriptive of the progress of Christian work in that place:

WONSAN, KOREA, Feb. 27th.

Twice now I have been back and round this underside of the globe on which we live, but find nothing to rest the heart and soul but the glad news, so old, yet always new, that Jesus lives and will soon appear to reign. I have just come through a two weeks' session of Bible study. The class was composed of sixty members, all packed into a little room, twelve by eighteen and five feet high, but we had a glorious time. There were men from scattered parts of the country, some from Pukchung, three hundred miles further north, who walked all the way. I went in the morning at nine and remained till ten at night among these people. Some who sat nearest my elbow came from homes in Wonsan where smallpox is now raging. A young man, called Pyun, came to me to say that Jesus was his Saviour and he would follow. I asked him if he would bow with me and tell Jesus so in prayer. He bowed and prayed so earnestly that I was convinced he was safely in the fold. The classes went on. Newcomers constantly came, among them a young merchant who had called before and had said, in a sneering way, that "there was no use in this doctrine; that he had looked at the Gospel but there was no sense in it." His face was full of contempt and bitterness. How hopeless he seemed to me; but he sat and listened and came again and again, earnest and almost fierce in his desire to get at the truth. At last the joy unspeakable and full of glory came over him, and when he prayed it was with many tears that Jesus would take him. Others came; more and more were interested daily. Among the number came one, like Nicodemus, a ruler among them, with long beard and long silk coat and cap, denoting rank. He was in the inquirer's place in the evening, full of trouble. "Could he be saved?" he asked. I told him to ask Jesus, and his prayer was one of the most touching I have ever heard. "Lord Jesus," he said, "take me, vile as I am; alas, what shall I say? there are no words, it is the first time, Lord, in all my life. Thou knowest, though I can't say it; forgive me; that is all."

WOODEN CROSS FOUND IN MANY OF THE PRINCIPAL STREETS

Here he broke down. All the powers in Korea could not break down a man like that; he would rather die. Yet here he was, like a little child; and all the class looked on in wonder, for to see him humbled was a marvel.

When people here become Christians they usually burn up all their devil-worship objects, but they never let me see them, for they seem ashamed to show them to a foreigner. Last night, however, in the meeting, Mr. Kim sa Kyum said before all the people: "I have decided to follow Jesus, whether I live or die. He is my Saviour. Now, what shall I do with my implements of devil-worship that fill my house?" It was a question addressed to me and I was to answer; so I said, "Give them to me, and they will be a witness to my people at home of a house cleaned out and Jesus let in."

He at once said he would. Next morning, I looked out and there was a pouring rain, snow still on the ground and the roads muddy, but with thick boots and overcoat, I started out, determined to get to Mr. Kim sa Kyum's and see if he was still willing to give up these objects. I took a few native friends with me and we gathered in his home. He was quiet and undemonstrative, so I read I. Cor. 10, translating it into Korean, and then we had prayer.

After prayer, the man told his story and then he called to some one in another apartment, and had the objects of devil-worship brought in and they were wrapped up and given to me and as I now write they stand bundled up just as he gave them.

This is the first time that I ever saw the objects that they consider dearer than life. Nicodemus' conversion has been one of the greatest wonders I have ever seen in Korea. What rejoicing there is to-night in the church and there will be, too, in heaven over him who has come in.

JAS. M. GALE.

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

Home Life in the Transvaal

Oom Paul's Wife—The Kruger Cottage—A Boer's House and Farm

AN American who recently visited President Kruger wrote: "As he closed our interview, Mr. Kruger went across the hall into a low-ceilinged white-washed room and leaned for a moment over a placid-faced motherly little woman seated in a rocking-chair mending stockings.

She got Mr. Kruger's hat, escorted him to the front door, and then went back to her knitting. She has been his constant helpmate through all the years of his public life, and their affection seems to have grown with each succeeding year." They have had sixteen children, seven of whom are living. The girls are comfortably married to worthy burghers, in and around Pretoria, and the boys take an active interest in the army. One of them is the President's secretary. The Kruger home is a little, white, two-story cottage, half-covered with morning-glory vines.

As a rule the Boer farmer does not like near neighbors, and the average description of Boer farmsteads does not call up so pretty a picture as Oom Paul's cottage. What is usually told suggests that the burghers and their vrouws left a large proportion of the typical Dutch neatness and thrift behind them in Holland. The ordinary dwelling of the veldt, reached over bad roads in the shackling looking vehicles employed in the Dutch Republic, is a low stone building, possibly with a roof of corrugated iron: the stoep, or veranda, is a raised causeway built of stones, and covered with earth beaten hard. This is the farmer's lounging place. The cattle-kraal, built of stones and partly thatched, also a paddock or two, is usually in the rear. A few lean mules, a pair of oxen, and barking dogs complete the picture. "Two black boys named 'Sunday' and 'Shilling' came to take charge of our horses," writes an Englishman who visited such a dwelling, "and we were ushered in by the back entrance through the kitchen." On a stout cord across the kitchen, pieces of meat are usually hanging: when dried they make the biltong which Boers put to such good use in protracted journeys and in warfare. The long narrow dining-room contains a deal table, a few wooden chairs, a cushioned box doing duty as couch, a small harmonium perhaps, and one or two little cupboards under the bottom shelves of which motherly hens are comfortably sitting on a nest of eggs; and although this is the parlor as well as dining-room, chickens and ducks walk in and out at pleasure. At night, the croaking of many frogs from the duck-pond breaks the stillness, and disturbs or soothes the sleeper according to his taste for such music. Breakfast consists of bread, butter, fried biltong, and tea or coffee. Boer coffee is said to be a dreadful concoction in which ground mealies predominate over coffee-beans. Oom Paul's coffee ought to be unexceptional; his salary is $35,000 a year, with $1,500 for coffee. The typical Boer home has never a library; the Bible is, however, always in evidence. This devotion to God's Word is commended, but the narrowness which excludes all other literature is hardly in keeping with the spirit of the Good Book, in which God commended Solomon for desiring wisdom above all gifts.

MRS. KRUGER, WIFE OF PRESIDENT PAUL KRUGER

Naughty Children

"You're a naughty, naughty boy!" "You're a bad, bad girl!" are words which should never be uttered to any child. They tend to humiliate or to anger him, and to confirm him in that of which they accuse him. Besides, an occasional, or more than occasional naughty deed does not justify the charge of naughty character; a child realizes the injustice, and presently thinks—and possibly says: "I don't get credit for being anything but naughty—I'll be naughty." A better plan is to say: "Dear, you're too nice a child to do a naughty thing," and then divert his thoughts by song or story or pretty game and turn them into nobler and happier channels.

Mrs. Roosevelt and the "Mothers"

Mrs. Roosevelt, a devoted mother herself, added to the interest of the recent convention at Albany of the New York Assembly of Mothers. The reception at the Governor's mansion was a very pleasant feature of the affair. The Assembly Chamber of the Capitol building was placed at the disposition of the "Mothers," and morning sessions were held there, while evening meetings were held at the Second Presbyterian Church. Mrs. David O. Mears, President of the Assembly, is a minister's wife and director of the Mothers' Association (founded 1833) of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, Albany. Among many able speakers who addressed the Assembly were: Mrs. T. W. Birney, President National Congress of Mothers; Mrs. Harris, President New York Mothers' Club; Mrs. Rebekah Kohut, President Jewish Council of Women; Hon. Charles R. Skinner, State Superintendent Public Instruction; Dr. Merrill, State Superintendent of Kindergartens; Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson, representing the King's Daughters, and Dr. Luther Gulick, Director Chautauqua School for Parents. The Mothers' Assemblies and Clubs are doing a great work for childhood and parenthood.

Our Dumb Servants

Of course, children, it pays us to be kind and nice to the horses and cows, the hens and the chickens. Have you ever stopped to think what excellent servants they are to us, how badly we would get along without them, and how little we pay them? They carry our burdens, furnish us with food—really give up their lives for us. Let us try to be kind to Dobbin and Bossy, the calves, and the hen and her chicks. Take the fowls and consider how much they do for us. The feathers that make our downy pillows is their gift, and their eggs supply our table with dainty and nutritious food, and the sick with often the only nourishment they can take. A recent market report stated that there were 168,000,000 eggs in Chicago—one city only. Think of how many people were fed thereby, and then go out in the yard and give Mrs. Hen and her chicks some crumbs, and, if it is your particular task to feed your mamma's poultry, be regular and faithful about it. And, if papa trusts you to feed the horse or the cow, do not be forgetful.

The Queen's Donkey

Our little readers have doubtless seen pictures of Queen Victoria in her favorite equipage, the little low donkey carriage, in which she rides around the grounds of Windsor Castle, and outside, too, sometimes, to visit the sick and poor. Perhaps they will be interested to hear that Her Majesty has received from Lord Kitchener, in Egypt, the present of a new donkey, a large Arabian, very kind and gentle. When he was coming over the children on the ship took great delight in him. He in turn seemed to enjoy their society and to be on the lookout for his little friends when his keeper brought him out of his stall and walked him around the ship for exercise. They all took rides on his back, and Mr. Donkey appeared to like giving them that pleasure. There was rivalry among the children to see who would be allowed to give Mr. Donkey some tidbits or perform other courtesies for him. The caressing pats he received could not be counted, and it is doubtful if he can be made much happier at Windsor Castle.

Little Kindnesses

You [illegible] the while,
It warmed a heart, new promise stirred
And so for the word and its silent prayer

You lent a hand to a fallen one,
A lift in kindness given;
And won a heart for heaven;
And so for the help you proffered there
You'll reap a joy sometime—somewhere.

—[illegible]

Books for Children

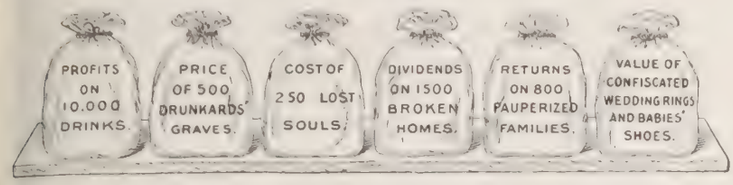
THE following letter, typical of [illegible] voices with unusual pathos:

"For three years I have been living without a wife and trying as best I could to raise my little children for usefulness and for heaven. I read the Bible to them; at night always pray with and teach them the Lord's [illegible] anxious to raise my boys up right, but sad experience teaches me that a mother is the one to train children. I miss my wife so much, and my children miss her too. She was so kind and good. My boy of nine, the eldest, goes to Sunday School and reads well. What books should I select for him to read? And what books should I read to my children? I want books that will interest them and make them better and nobler and give them a love for reading. They enjoy the Family and Home Circle stories in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD very much. I want books that are as good and interesting." We are glad to consider and to answer this question, not only for the benefit of the writer, but of many parents similarly perplexed. Almost every public library keeps a carefully selected list of books for children, embracing Bible stories, history, and stories of travel and adventure. The Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, has a peculiarly good list. Librarians, too, are usually very kind in supplying information. The National Congress of Mothers has done particularly commendable work in this direction. Their list of children's books is continually being enlarged; and every book is interesting and of sterling worth. Lists can be purchased at a nominal cost (five cents), by addressing the secretary, Mrs. E. R. Weeks, Kansas City, Mo. We believe, too, that the "Mothers" supply a little circulating library of children's books.

A TRANSVAAL FARMER

The Saloon-keeper's Money

Old and Young Seeking to Solve the Problem that Agitates the Church



PROFITS ON 10,000 DRINKS.
PRICE OF 500 DRUNKARDS' GRAVES.
COST OF 250 LOST SOULS.
DIVIDENDS ON 1500 BROKEN HOMES.
RETURNS ON 800 PAUPERIZED FAMILIES.
VALUE OF CONFISCATED WEDDING RINGS AND BABIES' SHOES.

Gifts for the Altar

WHO, pray, acceptably offers,
Thinkest thou, gifts unto God?
Wealth from the rich man's coffers
Is often the price of blood—
Wrung from weary ones toiling
For only a pittance a day—
Grime from the by-ways soiling
Weak ones, through want gone astray.

Wrung from the heart of a mother,
The price of a daughter's shame,
Stained by the blood of a brother,
Offered to God in Christ's name!
How dare we lay on the altar
Money thus tainted by sin!
Well may we all shrink and falter
Until we're made pure within.

Down through the ages clear ringing
Comes still the message to-day:
"As gifts to the altar thou'rt bringing,
Remember while yet on the way
If thou holdest aught 'gainst thy brother,
Or he holdeth aught against thee,
Be reconciled one to another,
Bring then thy gifts unto me."

If from his ill-gotten treasure
The rum-seller offers a gift,
Take from his o'erflowing measure
And fallen ones help to uplift.
Who votes for the sale, votes for drinking,
And theirs is blood-money, I claim;
They will answer to God, I am thinking,
With the rum-seller bearing the blame.

—P. F. M.

THE question, "Shall a church accept the saloon-keeper's money in aid of its spiritual work?" continues to receive the prayerful attention of our readers. One of the most hopeful and helpful signs of this discussion is that young men—and young men representatives of large bodies of young men—are speaking. Y. M. C. A. leaders have spoken, and it will be seen from our first letter this week that college boys are becoming interested. That the wives, the fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, and even the saloon-keepers of our land are giving such intelligent, earnest attention to this question, is we believe, a promise that the days of the saloon are numbered.

College Boy (for many college boys) Lancaster, Pa., writes:

The gold and silver of the Egyptian taskmasters was blood-money and was used for the adornment of the tabernacle, the construction of the ark of the covenant, the golden candlestick, and the vessels of the sanctuary. Church boards of finance are not regularly constituted courts of inquiry for determining whether donors secure their monies by strictly moral means. Acts of charity, deeds of philanthropy, may be performed even by a Samaritan, and we should not hinder them in their good works. So long as churches have liquor-handling and liquor-consuming members they should expect contributions from such members. Churches accept gifts from monopoly promoters and trust magnates who freeze out small competitors, purchase up and dismantle rival plants, reduce wages, put men out of employment, and, in short, drive weak men, economically involved, to drink. Such money is blood-money equally with that of the saloon-keeper.

A Brother in Christ, Epworth Praying Band, Drakesville, Ia., writes:

Let us not be contaminated by the devil's filthy lucre, for what Christian will dare to handle money that has been gained at the cost of many precious souls? Every cent means a drop of the life blood of a fellow man created after God's own image.

A. F. Hart, Illinois, writes:

The money that passes through the saloon-keeper's hands is just as lawful and holy as a Christian vote can make it. All that is written proves the saloon, not the money, to be bad. If there were a mad dog in camp, the soldiers would not write the best way to cure the bitten, but they would kill the dog. Kill the saloon.

Frank L. Stine, Maryland, writes:

No statement in God's Word will justify the church's acceptance. Would it not be inconsistent for the church to accept money which is the price of domestic and national peace, of the happiness of the home, of the purity of our sons and daughters, and of eternal life itself?

Mrs. E. R. F., Neilsville, Wis., writes:

Take all the money they give and use in feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, and educating them to cast their ballots for the right, and the saloon will be a thing of the past, and the drunkard will be known no more.

M. S. B., Mass., writes:

The church can not accept it for spiritual work, but it might say: "We will take all you will give us and apply it to feed some of the starving women and children who suffer through your nefarious business."

Mrs. E. E. H., Schenectady, N. Y., writes:

If you had a son who was being ruined by liquor, would you want the money he spent in the saloon for foreign missions, while your son goes to perdition?

E. D. C., Potter Hollow, N. Y., writes:

What would Jesus do? He ate with publicans and sinners. Do we read anywhere that he refused their gifts? We can never know how much of what is cast into the treasury is the wages of sin; but, if any feel competent to judge, "let him that is without sin" be the first to refuse the gift; otherwise accept it, and pray that the heart may follow.

Alice Newell, Washington, writes:

My conscience would not allow me to take money from the saloon-keeper for the church; but if I were soliciting funds for the building of a home for orphan children, or children who are worse than orphans, whose father spends his earnings in the saloon, then my conscience would allow me to take all the money I could possibly grind out of the saloon-keeper.

Seth Brubaker, Bellaire, Pa., writes:

My advice would be to take the money offered by the saloon-keeper as a church fund, and apply it to the good cause. If the saloon-keeper sows to the wind when he contributes to the church, only the harvest will tell.

Mrs. Anna Ballinger, Mich., writes:

I do not think the gift of a saloon-keeper should be accepted for Christ's work. Some may say, "Why, the money is just as it ever was!" That may be, but just think how many little ones are nearly starving, and the many sad hearts because of the saloon. We know how saloon money is obtained; to use it for God's church is wrong.

Charles D. Linskill, Pa., writes:

With the understanding that the church will oppose his business, receive the money and spend it to benefit the poor wives and children of the men who drink.

Mrs. E. M., Williston, Fla., writes:

No. The saloon is an open enemy to the home and to the kingdom of God. It has destroyed the souls and bodies of men, and wrecked many once happy and prosperous homes, made many a broken-hearted mother and wife, and caused many poor little children to be left destitute and without a kind father's love and protection.

B. S. Norton, Monticello, N. Y., writes:

Take the money and buy a Potter's Field. Any one who votes to sustain the liquor traffic is as guilty of the blood of souls as the saloon-keeper.

J. A. D., Salisbury, N. C., writes:

The spirit of Christianity and the teachings of Christ are opposed to the saloon and everything connected with it.

F. C. M., of Denver, Colo., writes:

If a liquor-dealer will give to the church to relieve those upon whom he has helped to bring sickness or poverty, why not take his money to relieve distress.

C. Journell, West Virginia, writes:

No. If a saloon-keeper wants to do right, he should quit his unholy business, and return the money, so far as possible, to his injured patrons.

Mrs. J. R. W., Fields, O., writes:

Undoubtedly the money was gotten by "putting the bottle to his neighbor's lips," and there are none who do not know either by experience or observation the home-ruining effects of this demon—Rum. It is blood-money, defiled, as I believe the mind and conscience of him who proffers it are defiled. Say to him, as did Peter: "Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter; for thy heart is not right in the sight of God. Repent, therefore, of this thy wickedness; and pray God if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee: For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity." If your prayers have been in earnest God may cause his heart to be touched, and he will answer, as did Simon: "Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me."

M. P. Smith, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

I cannot understand why thoroughly practical Christianity does not see in an instant that it is perfectly right to accept any amount of money the saloon-keeper offers, and to put it to any good use. The idea that the saloon-keeper's money is corrupted or "tainted," and should not therefore be used to aid in getting souls saved, or to better the condition of those whom the same money has before helped to degrade, seems very narrow. The saloon-keeper's money is perfectly innocent, and just as pure as though it had never entered the saloon. It is legal tender just the same, and still bears its E. pluribus Unum and its "In God We Trust." Some have also written that the money ought not to be accepted because it is offered by one who is engaged in wrong-doing, and who is a great sinner. But who has any more right to sacrifice an offer to the cause of God than the blackest of sinners? For whom did Christ sacrifice or offer his own precious life but for the blackest sinners? Were I a minister of the Gospel, I should thankfully receive the saloon-keeper's offerings, giving him to understand that his gift would be used to overthrow the saloon.

A reader, Kimberly, Minn., writes:

No. It is the price of blood; it is the fruit of robbing helpless women and children; its making caused poverty and broken homes.

W. W. Kirke, Flagstaff, Ariz., writes:

I cannot see any difference between the money the saloon-keeper or his customer gives. Either is blood-money. The saloon-keeper pays his taxes and his business is protected by Christian votes. Let God be his judge; take every dollar he will give and use it for extending church work.

F. W. K., Railroad Agent, Maine, writes:

It is no worse for the church to accept money from a saloon-keeper for spiritual work than it is for Christian people to use their votes to further the liquor traffic. Do not accept the money; have more faith in God.

M. Parker, Lincoln, Neb., writes:

I would accept the saloon-keeper's gift with the definite understanding that the money was not to go into any church fund, but to be used expressly to relieve the parties who have suffered by his diabolical business.

Mrs. Z. Pearce, Missouri, writes:

No church can think it right to do anything encouraging the saloon-keeper who takes the last dime from a drunkard, while the drunkard's wife struggles as best she can to earn a living for herself, for him, and for his children.

J. A. Whitner, Millgrove, Pa., writes:

It all depends upon what spiritual condition the church is in. If the minister is a model man, upheld by true Christian officers who are aiming to make and keep the church pure in the sight of God, why it is a sin to receive money which they know was obtained by selling whiskey to our brethren; but if the church is in partnership with the saloon, then the church can accept such money.

L. R., Munnee, Ill., writes:

I think it right to use all the money for good that we can get honestly.

W. Barneby, Mullen, Neb., writes:

The devil offered Christ a gift—something that did not justly belong to him. Perhaps Satan did not have quite as good a claim on his possessions as the bloated saloon-keeper, who deals out damnation to fill his coffers, and robs thousands of their hard-earned rewards, making homes desolate and filling our land with crime, squalor and death. With a view of obtaining favor from the church, they offer a kind of "hush money." They can have no other motive.

Trial Package Free!

If any reader, suffering from rheumatism will write to me, I will send them free of cost a trial Package of a simple and harmless remedy which cured me and thousands of others among them cases of over 40 years standing. This is an honest remedy that you, can test before you part with your money. Address: JOHN A. SMITH, 219 Summerfield Church Building Milwaukee, Wis.

"What's in a Name?"

Everything when you come to medicines. A sarsaparilla by any other name can never equal Hood's, because of the peculiar combination, proportion and process by which Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses merit peculiar to itself, and by which it cures when all other medicines fail. Cures scrofula, salt rheum, dyspepsia, catarrh, rheumatism, loss of appetite and that tired feeling.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla

Opens the Pores

This is the secret of the wonderful curative power of the Buckeye Folding Bath Cabinet. There is nothing so effectual as a good "sweat" or vapor bath to dispel the impurities, symptoms of fever or break up a hard cold. Properly taken, every pore is opened and the medicated vapors are naturally absorbed, strengthening the entire body. It is the most perfect means of inducing perspiration. The treatment is effectual in cases of Chronic Rheumatism or Gout, purifies the blood. All the benefical effects of Turkish, Vapor and Medicated Baths may be had at home at a trifling cost.

The Buckeye Bath Cabinet is manufactured at our own factory under personal supervision and the material used is selected from the best stock. Owing to its peculiar construction it is the most economical and quickest to heat. The Cabinet is supplied with a door and an opening for the arm, convenient for bathers in removing perspiration from the face or otherwise adding to their comfort. It is absolutely germ proof and needs no care and is light and simple in construction.

We are so confident that you will be entirely pleased with the Buckeye Bath Cabinet that we will sell it on approval, to be returned at our expense if not satisfactory. Price $5.00, including Alcohol Safety Stove and Recipes for all kinds of medicated baths. LADIES should have our Complexion Steamer, used in connection with the Cabinet. The only sure method of drawing away all impurities, leaving the skin clear and soft as velvet. Price $1 extra.

Agents and Salesmen.—We want agents and salesmen to represent us in every section and we offer money-making terms to active men and women. FREE Descriptive Booklet and testimonials to all who write. Address MOLLENKOPF & McCREERY, 9-7 Dorr St., TOLEDO, O.

Peter Moller's Cod Liver Oil

now prepared by an improved process which is the result of years of scientific investigation, may be confidently relied upon as being of

Absolute Purity and Free From Disagreeable Taste and Odor.

MOLLER'S OIL always gives satisfactory results because of its perfect digestibility and the fact that it may be taken continuously without causing gastric disturbance.

In flat, oval bottles only, dated. See that our name appears on bottle as agents. Explanatory pamphlets mailed free.

Schleffelin & Co., New York.

SAVE ½ Your FUEL wasted up chimney.
BY USING THE ROCHESTER RADIATOR.
COST $2.00 AND UP.
Money refunded if not satisfactory.
Write for booklet on economy in heating homes.
ROCHESTER RADIATOR CO.,
15 Furnace Street, Rochester, N. Y.

STAMMERING. Most Speedy, Perfect, Permanent Educational Cure guaranteed. Least Expense. Address, Voice School, Salem, W. Va.

ALUMINUM AND AGENTS SPECIALTIES
Write for particulars and CATALOG FREE.
G. VINING NOVELTY CO., 60 Wabash Av. CHICAGO

Xmas Presents What to make and how. Sofa pillow cover; Indian linen work start'd. Outfit 10c. Write us BELL & CO., PIERCE CITY, MO.

STEREOPTICONS MAGIC LANTERNS and SLIDES
CONDENSED CATALOGUE FREE
RILEY BROS. 16 BEEKMAN ST. NEW YORK.

THE TOUCHSTONE

A NEW SERIAL STORY

BY HELEN SHIPTON

CHAPTER II.

THE COST OF SERVICE

THIS was only the second time that Douglas Lingard had ever looked upon death. He remembered that first time, as he steeled himself to go quietly and quickly through what had to be done. His impulse was to thrust the girl aside and do all himself, but she would not have it so; and, indeed, her strength was needed once or twice to supplement his, for the dead man had been tall and largely made. Now and then he took a covert glance at her, but though the color had faded from her cheek she looked calm and steady, and more awed than nervous or afraid.

AS HE ENTERED THE HOUSE, MRS. TOLMINSON CALLED TO HIM

As for himself, he had that dreamlike unreal feeling that comes to us sometimes in totally unlooked-for circumstances—the feeling that he had been through it all before, and that it was not possible that it should really be taking place now.

It was all so frightfully incongruous: the poor homely room, and the shining coffin resting, where he had lifted it, on two broken-backed chairs; and the girl in her bright delicate dress, bending over the poor disfigured corpse and reverently adjusting the covering over the cold pulseless breast.

The pity and the awe of her face seemed to the young man who was watching to lift the whole pitiful scene out of squalor and the shadow of death into a far different region; but none the less he instantly interposed, and half entreated, half commanded her to stand back. The coffin-lid was soon laid in its place, and the screws put in, firmly if somewhat clumsily: and then he threw open the door and strode into the kitchen.

"Those men are going to help to carry it out, or I will know the reason why!" he said, and the women stood aside to make way for him.

Apparently the undertaker's men were not afraid of infection being conveyed through pinewood planks, for they sulkily lent themselves to carry out the coffin and place it in the hearse. Douglas Lingard helping them. As he turned from the final effort that placed it safely inside, he found the young lady at his elbow.

"I cannot thank you properly," she said. "I can't think what we should have done if it had not been for you. I do hope no harm will come of it to you! What are you going to do now?"

"I may as well walk after that thing," said the young man, with a gesture towards the hearse, and flushing a little before the frank eager gratitude of her look. "The burial is down at Sudbrook, is it not? I should just like to see that those fellows deliver their charge there decently and respectfully, for they don't seem to me to be quite to be trusted."

"That will indeed be very good, it will complete your kindness. But [illegible] take the breeziest walk I can find before going home. And my landlady at Highashes has no family, and to judge by appearance is safe from small-pox in her own person. And what about you?"

"I must go back to the poor wife. She is not fit to be left alone, and I must see what can be done for her."

"But surely you ought not to stay in that infected atmosphere? What will your friends say?"

He eyed her rather wistfully, as though he would have been glad to be one of the friends who had a right to remonstrate and interfere.

"I shall take every precaution. I am not one of the people who catch things," she answered hurriedly; and at that moment the hearse began slowly to move on, the black-clad women having bestowed themselves in the hinder part of it, with handkerchiefs raised to their faces.

Douglas Lingard lifted his hat, and turned to follow the clumsy vehicle, and the girl went back into the cottage, pausing an instant on the threshold to look after that moving blackness that seemed a blot upon the glory of the bright spring day.

If there is danger that brave men fear, and may be pardoned for fearing, it is infection.

As young Lingard went on his way he felt a little cold in spite of the May sun-

(Continued on following page).

"Be strong in the battle of life." Health, necessary to win life's battles, comes only with absolutely pure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best blood specific for both sexes and all ages.

O'Neill's,

Sixth Avenue, 20th to 21st Street, New York.
IMPORTERS and RETAILERS.

TWO GREAT BARGAINS THAT WILL INTEREST EVERY WOMAN READER OF THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Suits!

Women's Cheviot Serge Suits, with Jaunty Fly Front Walking Jacket, Notched Collar, Hip Pockets, and lined throughout with Black Taffeta. New Habit Shape Skirt, [illegible] and Velveteen Bound. Worth $14.00. $9.98

Wrappers!

Women's Flannelette Wrappers, Pointed Yoke Front and Back, Watteau Back, Full Skirt, finished [illegible] Collar and Sleeves Trimmed with Braid. Worth $1.25. 98c.

H. O'NEILL & CO., Sixth Ave., 20th to 21st St., New York.

It's the Flat-Ended Teeth

Bailey's Rubber Brushes

Beware of imitations.

Found at All Dealers, or sent on Receipt of Price

Bailey's Rubber Complexion Brush	$ .50
Bailey's Complexion Soap	.10
Bailey's Bath and Shampoo Brush	.75
Bailey's Rubber Bath and Flesh Brush	1.50
Bailey's Rubber Toilet Brush large	.50
Bailey's Rubber Toilet Brush small	.25
Bailey's Rubber Glove Cleaner	.10

C. J. BAILEY & CO., 22 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

CLOAKS, SUITS, FURS

SKIRTS AND WAISTS,

Seal Plush Cape $4.98

Our catalogues are fre Write for them to-day.

Our No. 545, $4.96

No. 646, [illegible] $5.4

No. 647, [illegible] $5.9

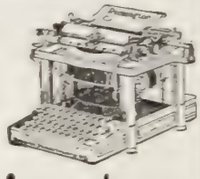
No money required in advance.

EDWARD B. GROSSMAN & C

170-172 STATE ST. CHICAGO

THE GREAT MAIL ORDER CLOAK HOUSE

For Length and Quality of Service the



Remington

Standard Typewriter defies competition

Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict, 327 Broadway, New York

Reversible LINENE Collars and Cuffs.

Stylish, convenient, economical. Made of fine cloth, finished in pure starch, and exactly resemble fashionable linen goods.

No Laundry Work

When soiled discard. Ten Collars or five pairs of Cuffs, 25cts. By mail, 30cts. Send 6 cts. in stamps for sample collar or pair of cuffs. Name size and style.

REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. S, Boston, Mass.

LADY or MAN [illegible] $60

$1.00

This Ladies' Dongola Kid Boot, Lace or Button, sole leather counter, inner and outer sole, Patent Leather Tip, Opera Toe, 2 to 8, B, D, E, or C, sent postpaid on receipt of $1. Equals any $2 boot sold. Our make. Money refunded if not satisfactory. We guarantee fit, style, wear. FREE—Our [illegible] Catalogue containing [illegible] Ladies, Gents & Children, which will be sent to you free. Cash [illegible] with your order.

DEXTER SHOE CO. Order Clerk, Boston, Mass.

Estab'd 1880.

AGENTS WANTED FOR "THE STORY OF TWO WARS."

The only Official, Standard, Illustrated History of both OUR WAR WITH SPAIN and OUR WAR WITH THE PHILIPPINES. Written by Hon. H. B. Russell, ex-Secretary of War Proctor. With Exclusive Views and Many Superb Engravings. By Hon. H. B. Russell, ex-Secretary of War Proctor. Sold Exclusively by Agents. Outsells a book that sells on sight and pays big. Hundreds are earning $100 a month and more. Now is the time. No capital required. Freight paid. Credit given. The largest cash commissions ever offered to all who want to work. Write at once for terms and particulars to THE HARTFORD PUBLISHING CO. Hartford, Conn.

RUPTURE CURED

The Improved Elastic Truss is the only Truss in existence that is worn with perfect comfort and ease in bed, and will retain the most obstinate rupture under the hardest exertion, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure. Comfortable. Rupture made to retain it night and day. The use of these belts prevents your rupture from ever getting larger, consequently cures. They are used after all operations with great success. Send for free pamphlets to the Improved Elastic Truss Co., 768 Broadway, N. Y. Established 18 years.

SILK REMNANTS for CRAZY WORK

A large package of assorted Silk Remnants (over 100 in package), all carefully selected, free from dyes, and suitable for Crazy Work. We also supply Silk Remnants by the pound at 50 cents per pound. Send for sample and design. Paris Silk Company, Box 1747, New York City, N. Y.

You will realize that "They live well who live cleanly." If you use SAPOLIO

The Touchstone

(Continued from preceding page)

shine. His real sober self was not afraid, but he knew there was a traitor in his heart that would be afraid at times, that would give him sudden groundless qualms, and creeping sensations that were more of disgust than of terror. He wished that he knew how long smallpox took to "incubate," and that he could somehow sleep through that time, whatever it was, and only wake to know for certain whether anything was to come of this day's work or not.

And yet—and he was surprised at himself as he realized this—he was not sorry for what had happened. He did not wish that he had taken another road, and not stumbled upon Brentwood hamlet and the little tragedy that was being enacted there.

Life had suddenly become interesting, and anything is better than lack of interest. There was hardly any perilous service that could have been asked of him that he would not have more gladly rendered; but when he remembered those tearful, indignant eyes, and the slender hands with their appealing gesture, he could not wish that they had found no one to respond to them. And then, he bethought himself of his comrades, good, honest fellows all, and owned that they were men, that none of them would have done less than he had done—and, somehow, was distinctly glad that he and not they had been on the spot to be asked.

The young man did as he had promised, and after he had seen the white-robed clergyman meet the sad little procession at the gate he turned off up the valley, and found the lonely pool where the brook had been dammed for a mill that was now a ruin, and stripped, and took a plunge or two in the brown ice-cold water, which did not seem yet to have lost its winter chill.

Then he warmed himself by a brisk climb to the top of the long hill on the side of which Highashes Farm nestled, and walked along its ridge from end to end, and looked down upon Brentwood in the hollow, and wondered whether she was still there, and where she lived. And then at last turned homewards, having little enough in the way of Spanish phrases to show for his afternoon's work.

As he walked down the bare stone-floored passage that led from the front door of the farmhouse to the bow-windowed "parlor," his landlady, a tall, gaunt, good-tempered woman, deeply marked by small-pox, called to him unceremoniously from her kitchen, where she was busy with her sewing.

"There's a note for you in yonder, Mr. Lingard," she said, "from"—and then followed a name or names that her lodger could not catch: and knowing by experience the difficulty of following Mrs. Tomlinson's dialect when she became at all prolix, he judged it better to pass on, and let the note itself tell him by whom it was written.

It told him nothing of the kind, except so far as he could guess, and his guess could supply neither habitation nor name. It was written on a rough piece of paper, folded without any envelope, and with no direction on the outside. Inside was written in pencil, in a remarkably clear and delicate hand:

"There is one thing I thought of directly you were gone. Have you been vaccinated lately? If not, I hope you will see about it at once. I ought perhaps to apologize for writing this, but I cannot help feeling that it is as much my business as yours, and I know that men are apt to be neglectful of such things. Please attend to it at once, for my sake as well as your own, for I feel more and more that I incurred a great responsibility this afternoon, and perhaps I did wrong."

"C. H."

"Who did you say left this note?" asked Mr. Lingard, when presently his landlady brought in his dinner.

"Miss Ceelie left it at the door herself. Well!—I should say Miss Celia Hamerton, I suppose. I forgot you wouldn't know all about her, being a stranger. She's Miss Hamerton, right enough, and her father used to be the Squire there at Sudbrook; they lived at the Hall in his lifetime. But nobody about here ever thinks to call her anything but our Miss Ceelie."

Mrs. Tomlinson's account was not very clear, but the situation was soon brought more impressively to Lingard's attention. The young lady whom Mrs. Tomlinson familiarly called Miss Ceelie was too anxious about the possible results of the service Lingard had rendered her, to be satisfied with sending a letter. She determined to send a messenger to see that the young man took the precaution she had suggested. This, of course, involved finding a suitable messenger. That was her next business and she went about it with her usual directness.

"Martin," she said, put by that book and listen to me for a minute. I want you to help me. I have been too busy, as usual, and I am afraid I may have done harm!"

The man to whom Celia Hamerton spoke lifted from his book a face sufficiently like her own to proclaim him as probably her brother. Both had brown hair, delicate complexions, and eyes of the color of mid-Atlantic on a windy morning, and whether that is grey or blue let artists decide. The man's eyes were habitually dreamy, and occasionally vivacious, while for his sister the description would simply need to be reversed; and the nameless something that in his face betokened mind in her's suggested spirit.

It used to be the custom in describing a heroine to say, "She was not beautiful, but——," and then followed a catalogue of charms, half of which would have made the fortune of a fashionable beauty. I might describe my heroine after that fashion, with a difference. She was not beautiful, but a great many people thought her so—children, to wit, and old folks and poor folks, and all that were desolate and oppressed. If the question of ladies' charms was still to be settled by ordeal of battle, and Celia Hamerton's admirers had been allowed to take the field in force they would have been a motley and pathetic crew, but they would certainly have been victorious by sheer weight of numbers.

Her brother looked at her now with a teasing, affectionate smile, as though not prepared to think very seriously of any harm that she might have done; and as for her, though she looked anxious and disturbed, there was an occasional gleam in her eyes that seemed to show that she was one of the few women who can see something humorous in their own distress.

Very briefly she recounted from her own point of view what has already been told from Douglas Lingard's; then added, meditatively,

"I suppose whoever I could have caught just then I should dragged into it, without respect of persons. But I am glad it was a gentleman, and not a working man with a large family."

"Are you sure he was a gentleman?"

"Quite, in every sense of the word. And, if you will not laugh at me, Martin, for jumping to a conclusion, I think he must be a good man! He was so—so respectful, somehow. Not only to me—that's nothing—but to Poverty and Death."

"I am very glad he was, considering that you laid yourself under a sort of obligation to him. But what do you want me to do?"

"To go and see him, of course, and find out whether he has taken proper care, and has been vaccinated, and all that. And then you can call again later and bring me word whether he is all right. You need not be stupid, Martin!"

"You think so? Well! I will even do as I am bid, though it seems a quaint proceeding to call upon a total stranger for the purpose of asking him if he has been vaccinated!"

"Lately, Martin! It is of no use unless it has been done lately—since he has been grown up. And if not, you must just make him see about it!"

"I hope he is small, and not muscularly developed! What is his name, by the way?"

"Mrs. Tomlinson says his name is Lingard. I was told that he lodges with her at Highashes, and she says that he is one of the engineers on the new railway."

"He is a long way from his work, then. I was at school with some Lingards—two brothers—but I don't fancy they would either of them be earning their bread in a modest way, or lodging in a place like Highashes. Though, for that matter, it is hard to say nowadays what any of us may come to."

(To be Continued)

The Author of "In His Steps"

Answers for the first time the question, "Is this theory practicable?" which has sprung into the minds of thousands who have read his famous book. Directly and forcibly he writes on

Is Christianity Practical in Worldly Affairs?

The article by Mr. Sheldon is in the November issue of

The Ladies' Home Journal

One Dollar for an Entire Year

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

THE AMERICAN MESSENGER

An Illustrated Religious Monthly 25c a Year

MARY LOWE DICKINSON

"American Messenger" is a unique paper. No other fills its place. Founded in 1842 to meet the demand for a high-class non-sectarian religious paper at a price within the reach of all, it has fulfilled its purpose so well that to-day no other paper of its class compares with it in circulation and influence. Among our regular contributors are:

Rev. Dr. T. L. CUYLER	Mrs. JANE ELLIS JOY
Rev. Dr. J. R. MILLER	CORA S. DAY
Rev. W. C. STILES	Mrs. E. P. ALLAN
Rev. Dr. FRANCIS E. CLARK	MABEL GIFFORD
Rev. Dr. G. B. F. HALLOCK	JULIA H. JOHNSTON
Rev. OLIVER A. KINGSBURY	ANNA B. WARNER
Rev. H. T. MILLER	ALMA J. NOBLE
FRANK H. SWEET	MARY LOWE DICKINSON
HEZEKIAH BUTTERWORTH	ANNIE HAMILTON DONNELL
W. EDGAR SIMPSON	JULIA MACNAIR WRIGHT

And many others. During the coming year, Miss WARNER'S serial, "Fresh Air" will be completed. This will be followed by a charming short story, "The Shale Pickers," by MR. W. EDGAR SIMPSON. "Philip Desmond," a serial of absorbing interest, by CORA S. DAY, begins in November, 1899, and another new serial will be begun in the early fall of 1900.

Free! If you send us the small sum of 25c., silver or stamps, at once, we will send you this great paper for the whole of 1900, and, in addition, we will send it FREE from the time your subscription is received to January 1, 1900, including Thanksgiving and Christmas Special Numbers.

Bibles, Books, Pictures, Watches, Clocks, Silverware, etc., given for securing subscribers. Terms and sample copies free. Address Dept. 5.

American Tract Society, 150 Nassau Street, New York.

CARPETS FROM THE MILL

Our lithographed 16-color Catalogue of Carpets, Rugs, Art Squares, Draperies, FREE. Address,

JULIUS HINES & SON, Baltimore, M. D. Dept. 218.

300 Choice Leaflets for Letters and Distribution at Religious Services. No two alike. Sent postpaid for 50c. M. E. Munson, 77 Bible House, New York

NEW EDITIONS
OF THREE FAMOUS
5c. EACH • BOOKS • 5c. EACH

THE PRINCE OF THE HOUSE OF DAVID

THE PILLAR OF FIRE

THE THRONE OF DAVID

BY REV. J. H. INGRAHAM

THE fame of these books has been long established, and their fascination has held sway over multitudes of readers. These new editions have been thoroughly revised and partly rewritten to correspond with latest research. In their present form, at the remarkably low price at which they are offered, their popularity will be renewed. Each book contains 96 large pages, in double column, beautifully illustrated.

PRICE, 5 CENTS EACH, POSTPAID
Library Editions, Bound in Cloth, 25 Cents Each

OTHER FAMOUS BOOKS
AT SAME LOW PRICES.

Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush.—A new edition of Maclaren's masterpiece.

Intra Muros.—This "Dream of Heaven" is a truly remarkable and comforting work.

The Days of Mohammed.—A $1,000 prize story of medieval times in Arabia.

Out of the Triangle.—A story of ancient persecution of Christians in the East.

Titus: a Comrade of the Cross.—One of the grandest books of the century.

The Wrestler of Philippi.—A tale of the times of the early followers of Jesus.

The above books are for sale by booksellers and newsdealers throughout the United States. Sent postpaid, on receipt of price, by the publishers.

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO.,
36 WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO.

CASH or NEW HAIR MATTRESS
For Your OLD FEATHER BED
Write for particulars. Established 20 years. Bank references. Agents wanted. Canada Export Co., 118 N. 11th St., Brklyn, N.Y.

"A Perfect Food,"
"Preserves Health,"
"Prolongs Life."

BAKER'S BREAKFAST COCOA

TRADE-MARK.

"It is at once a delightful food and nourishing drink, and it would be well for humanity if there were more of it consumed and less tea or coffee."—The Homeopathic Recorder.

Walter Baker & Co. Limited.
DORCHESTER, MASS.
Established 1780.

TAILOR MADE SUIT $5.98

Silk Lined Jacket

All Wool Material

THE SUIT is made by Expert Men Tailors from Ford's Best All Wool Fast Color Ladies' Cloth famous for its rich, soft lustre and beautiful appearance. The Jacket is made in latest single breasted style, expertly trimmed with fine satin bands, beautifully silk faced and elegantly lined with real French silk. The skirt is lined and interlined, has 3 wide welted seams, new style back, cut full width and hangs graceful and stylish. Guaranteed strictly tailor made and worth fully $10.00. Choice of black or blue cloth.

SEND NO MONEY but send this adv and we'll send Free a large sample of the cloth and our Big Catalog of other Suits, Jackets, Capes and Skirts. If send the $1. with color desired, give bust and waist measure, length of skirt down front from waist band to bottom and we'll express the suit to you C.O.D., subject to examination when it arrives examine it carefully, try it on, see that it fits perfect, then pay the express agent the balance ($4.98 and expressage). Send today quick for free sample and catalogue or suit.

REFERENCES The Royal Trust Co. Bank, Chicago, any Chicago wholesale house or any express company in America.

THE G. LOUIS VEHON CO. 157 W. Jackson St. Chicago.

ONE CENT
for each hour and a
TUXEDO
Oil Heater

30 INCHES HIGH

$4.50 FREIGHT PAID

will make a room warm as toast. A warm room in Nov. or Dec., no muss, no smell, no smoke. If your dealer doesn't keep it, send us $4.50

Tuxedo Oil Heater

HOLMES, BOOTH & HAYDENS,
37 Park Place, NEW YORK

FACTORY: Waterbury Conn. Established 1858.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

Gluten Grits AND BARLEY CRYSTALS,

Perfect Breakfast and Dessert Health Cereals. PANSY FLOUR for Biscuit, Cake and Pastry. Unlike all other foods. Ask Grocers. For book or sample, write

FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

We pay the freight.

High-Arm.

THE FASHION MACHINE

It is the latest improved, strictly high-grade, up to date, positively the best and most perfect Shuttle Sewing Machine it has ever been produced. High-Arm. Handsomely finished throughout. Warranted 10 years. All attachments free. We have no agents. Ship direct from factory to family, saving $25 to $40. We are sewing machine dealers exclusively and handle all other makes of first-class machines at a low price. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Send today for illustrated catalog.

ONLY $18

J. N. Hook & Co., 1851 Central Ave., Cincinnati, O.

WALL PAPER

Send for free sample book of beautiful designs direct from manufacturers and save 25 per cent. Agents Wanted.

KAYSER & ALLMAN,
1214-1216 Market St., Phila., Pa.

ANECDOTES BY MOODY

Working for Christ

I said to a man one day as he stayed to the after-meeting, "Would you speak to that young man there?" writes Mr. Moody.

He was a great manufacturer. He said, "Mr. Moody, I am very reticent; I don't know that I could do that."

I said, "Perhaps you can help him; I wish you would speak to him."

He sat down beside the young man and found him to be a workingman. He said that every Saturday noon when he was paid off and went home to get his dinner, a terrible thirst for strong drink came on him, and that by Monday all his wages were drunk up.

This gentleman asked: "What time do you get your dinner?"

He told him. The next Saturday afternoon that great manufacturer was there, and spent the whole afternoon with him. The next Saturday he came again, and he kept at it until he got that man away from the power of strong drink. That is a good way to confess Christ. If you can't do it with your lips, you can do it in some way. Watch for opportunities to let the world know on whose side you stand.

The Best of All

A Jewish rabbi once asked his scholars what was the best thing a man could have in order to keep him in the straight path. One said a good disposition; another, a good companion; another said wisdom was the best thing he could desire. At last a scholar replied that he thought a good heart was best of all.

"True," said the rabbi. "You have comprehended all that the others have said; for he that hath a good heart will be of a good disposition, and a good companion, and a wise man. Let every one, therefore, cultivate a sincerity and uprightness of heart at all times, and it will save him an abundance of sorrow."

We need to make the prayer of David: "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me."

The Leap in the Garden

I was standing with a dear friend at his garden gate one evening, when two little children came by. As they approached us he said to me: "Watch the difference in those two boys."

Taking one of them in his arms he stood him on the gatepost, and stepping back he folded his arms and called to the little fellow to jump. In an instant the boy sprang toward him and was caught in his arms. Then turning to the second boy he tried the same experiment. But in the second case it was different. The child trembled and refused to move. My friend held out his arms and tried to induce the child to trust to his strength, but nothing could move him. At last my friend had to lift him down from the post and let him go.

"What makes such a difference in the two?" I asked.

My friend smiled and said, "The first is my own boy and knows me; but the other is a stranger's child whom I have never seen before."

There was all the difference. My friend was equally able to prevent both from falling, but the difference was in the boys themselves. The first had assurance in his father's ability and acted upon it, while the second, although he might have believed in the ability to save him from harm, would not put his belief into action.

So it is with us. We hesitate to trust ourselves to that loving One whose plans for us are far higher than any we have ourselves made. He, too, with outstretched arms, calls us, and would we but listen to his voice we would hear that invitation and promise of assurance as he gave it of old.

Not Wanted

A man said to me some time ago: "Mr Moody, now that I am converted, have I to give up the world?"

"No," said I, "you haven't to give up the world. If you give a good ringing testimony for the Son of God, the world will give you up pretty quick; they won't want you."

Mr. Robert C. Ogden

Executive head of one of the largest department stores in the world, John Wanamaker's, writes interestingly and authoritatively on a subject of importance to young men:

Getting and Keeping a Business Position

In this week's number of

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

(OF PHILADELPHIA)

Date of November 4.

J. PARMLY PARET writes on "A New Era in Lawn Tennis."

HARRIET RIDDLE DAVIS tells a clever story of Washington society, which hinges on a love affair between an American girl and a foreign Prince—"His Superfluous Highness."

Your newsman will serve you regularly at 5 cents the copy. Sent by mail every week for five months on receipt of $1.00.

THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA

CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

Prince of Peace. Concert Exercise for S. S. by Hartsough & Fillmore. Responsive Services and recitations. 5c., 50c. per dozen, post-paid.

Recitations and Dialogues. No. 4.

Santa Claus' Charm. A Christmas Cantata by Chas. H. Gabriel. Bright music and dialogue. 30 cts.; $3.00 per dozen, not prepaid.

Mrs. Santa Claus and the Christmas Dolls. By Mrs. J. M. Runstad & J. B. Herbert. A beautiful cantata for primary grades, 25 cts., $2.50 per dozen, not prepaid.

Prince of Peace. Anthem by Herbert, 15 cts. Thy Watchmen shall lift up the Voice. Anthem by Danks, 10 cents.

The above are all new. Our Christmas Music is unsurpassed. We supply every need. Full descriptive catalogue sent on application. A sample of our monthly MUSICAL MESSENGER sent free.

FILLMORE BROS. 119 W. 6th St., Cincinnati. 40 Bible House, New York.

20,000 CHURCHES

Lighted by the FRINK System of Reflectors with Electric, Gas, Welsbach, Acetylene or Oil. LICENSED to manufacture electric and combination gas and electric fixtures. Send dimensions for estimate.

I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl Street, NEW YORK.

ONE HUNDRED

copies of a letter, piece of music, drawing, or any writing can be made on a Lawton Simplex Printer. No washing. No wetting of paper. Send for circulars and samples of work. Agents wanted.

LAWTON & CO., 30 Vesey St., New York. 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

PHONOGRAPH RECORDS MADE BY.... IRA D. SANKEY

"The Ninety and Nine,"
"Where is my Wand'ring Boy,"
"When the Mists Have Rolled Away,"
"Saved by Grace," and others of the famous

MOODY AND SANKEY HYMNS

Price, $1 per record; $11 per dozen.

Can be HEARD at ALL Phonograph Dealers

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO. 135 FIFTH AVE. NEW YORK.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE

More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Color greatly improved. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO MOSS GROWING. NO CLEANING. NO CRUMBLING. NO CRACKING.

THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO., 70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS.
OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS.
SCHOOL FURNITURE WORKS
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

PLAYS Dialogues Recitations

For Churches Sunday Schools Day Schools

Send for Catalogue Free

PLAYS

RELIEF FROM RHEUMATICS..

Mr. W. H. Jenkins writes from Topeka, Kan., under date of August 5th, 1898:

GENTS: Several years ago I was crippled with rheumatism, and for 162 weeks I was unable to do business of any kind, and in that time I have expended nearly $3,000. I had given up all hope.

My mother in looking over the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE saw your advertisement, and we ordered one bottle of your Tartarlithine, which gave me immediate relief.

I have recommended your medicine to a number of parties in this city, who have had chronic rheumatism for years. One of them, a lady 68 years of age, is now doing her own work. So far your medicine has not failed to make a cure.

In conclusion your medicine is just as represented, and I as entirely eliminated the disease from my body. My mother is enthusiastic over the benefits that I have derived from the use of your medicine.

Regular package $1.00,
Of all druggists or post-free by mail.
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

McKESSON & ROBBINS,
91 Fulton Street, . . New York.
SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

SENT ON RECEIPT OF 25 CENTS

It will repay you in a month if you buy our $2 scale. SEE THAT YOU GET CORRECT WEIGHT, and avoid being imposed upon.
Finely Finished Tile Top, Guaranteed Accurate.
Weighs 1 ounce to 24 pounds. No family should be without one, it checks your purchases. Takes little room. Price $2.00 for a limited time. Send 25c. and we will express it to you with privilege of examination, and if you find it as represented pay balance, $1.75, and the scale is yours. Agents wanted. The CARLISLE MFG. CO., Chicago, Ill.

NO CASH REQUIRED.
30 DAYS FREE TRIAL. WE TRUST YOU.

$9.00 Buys a High Grade Victor Sewing Machine with full set of attachments. Adapted to light or heavy work. Guaranteed for 20 years. We make 35 DIFFERENT STYLES AT ALL PRICES.
$22.00 Buys a Victor CHURCH OR PARLOR ORGAN. Guaranteed for 25 years. Free Trial. WE MAKE 24 STYLES AT ALL PRICES.
$120.00 Buys a Grand VICTOR PIANO. Copyright.
We also deal in all kinds of Musical Instruments. ALL CATALOGUES FREE.
VICTOR MFG. CO., Dept. P51, 161-167 Plymouth Pl., Chicago, Ill.

RESTFUL

and healthful foot covering for chamber, bathroom, sick room. Warm feet and foot-ease are assured wearers of PARKER'S Arctic Socks pair. 25c.
All sizes. Best thing in rubber boots. Sold by dealers or by mail. Parker pays postage. Catalog free. J.H. Parker, Dept., K, 103 Bedford St., Boston.

After Thirty Years' Experience

I have the best

Brain and Nerve Tonic

on earth for all weakened conditions regardless of cause. Medicines sent for full month's treatment for one dollar postpaid, or address for particulars A. S. JOHNSON, M. D., BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

WANTED—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S 10 for 5 cents or twelve packets for 48 cents; may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

ASTHMA SURE CURE

I have a sure, safe and speedy cure for that distressing and dangerous disease, asthma no matter how deep seated it may be. To convince any sufferer of its great virtue, I will mail a trial package free. Relief is instant and complete cure certain. Write at once to F. G. KINSMAN, M.D., Box 824, Augusta, Me.

It Is a Certainty That Catarrh

can be cured. You will believe it after using a sample of Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure. Mailed free. Address Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 50 Broad St., Blosser Building, Atlanta, Ga.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP for children teething should always be used for children while teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa.

OPIUM MORPHINE and Liquor Habit cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Book of particulars free. Address Dr. J. L. Stephens, Dept. R, 5, Lebanon, Ohio.

$75 MONTH AND EXPENSES; no experience needed; position permanent; self seller. PEASE MFG. CO., P.O. Box A, Cincinnati, O.

Beside the Fire

Training for Housekeeping—Thoroughness—Large Families

SOME of you may not agree with me, but observation of a rather wide order has led me to the conclusion that it does no harm for a growing girl to intermit a year in her school life, when about fourteen or fifteen, taking that time to learn from her mother a good many things which she ought to know about housekeeping. When she is older, at college perhaps, she will have no leisure for domestic economy, and whatever her station in life, an acquaintance with cooking and fine laundry work and the management of a household, will help her to adorn it in her future career. A woman can direct only when she knows how herself, and we shall have better servants in this land of ours when we have better equipped mistresses.

If a woman understands housework and has some personal idea of its demands, she will not be unjust in her requirements. A maid is often expected to do more in one day than flesh and blood can compass; this would not be the case if the lady who hires her were familiar with the work and its details. In certain lines of manufacturing business the proprietor's son, anticipating entrance on the business and success in enlarging it and increasing its emoluments, begins on the lowest round of the ladder, serves an apprenticeship in every branch, and thereafter meets his employees on equal terms, and knows what he may expect of them, and what he is justified in asking. He becomes an intelligent head of affairs by a process of careful and practical education, often hard, but always worth having. A housekeeper should have a similar novitiate; it would be largely to her advantage. Our German friends understand this, and every young German girl receives domestic training.

. . .

SPEAKING of thoroughness in doing housework reminds me that I have been meaning for weeks past to talk about fastening one's thread. If only the seamstress would be careful about that last stitch! Do you ever find your skirt braid ripping and binding itself into a treacherous loop to catch your unwary foot, or your pocket hole gaping, or the braid which trims your gown giving way, or a hook and eye coming off, all because the person who did the sewing was too hasty in her finishing?

Of course it is harder to rip out carefully stitched seams, when it comes to making over one's gown, but that does not count. One must just take her time then. I saw last autumn a beautiful piece of work, done by the fair hands of a lady, who had turned her father's coat. She had ripped it all apart, sponged, pressed and cleaned it, then made it over, and turned it out a fine new garment. The only thing which really bothered her was the doing over of the buttonholes.

. . .

WHY be sorry for the woman with a large family? She is better off than the childless woman, or than the mother of one child. I drove by a little farmhouse not long ago where there were twelve children of assorted sizes; I saw eight of them standing in a row beside the garden fence. The living was plain, but they all looked sturdy and rosy, and most of them went to school, and two or three older ones went to work and were earning something to help their parents. In the country a large family has plenty of space to grow; in a crowded tenement in town one must feel regret at the starved and stunted specimens one sees. But American families are, as a general thing, so very small among the well-to-do classes that children lose the opportunity of being self-denying and amiable and of educating one another; also of having rarely good times, as those do who are set in large families.

Margaret E. Sangster

Registered by U. S. Patent Office

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Springs 1 & 2

A Blood Food and Nutrient

Far more effective than extemporaneous preparation of the Lithia Salts.

In the N. Y. Medical Journal of July 22d.

Dr. John V. Shoemaker, M.D., L.L.D., Professor of Materia Medica and Therapeutics in the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, etc.

"The peculiar virtues of the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER appear to be owing to the mixture of salts which they contain, and as regards Spring No. 2, to the proportionately large quantity of the Bicarbonate of Potassium. They are likewise due to the perfect solution in which the salts are held, and consequently to the complete absorption and assimilation which results. In the alembic of Nature more effective solutions are produced than the laboratory of the chemist can always prepare.

"An additional advantage and extremely important reason for the peculiar efficacy of the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER lies in the fact that its composition approximates that of the serum of the blood; therefore it is admirably fitted for absorption into the blood current and immediate incorporation with the watery portions of the nutrient fluid. It becomes at once identical with the blood serum. These are qualities which far surpass those possessed by any extemporaneous solution of a single chemical preparation, as when a lithia tablet, e. g., is dissolved in water for immediate administration. When we speak of a dose, it is of a quantity altogether relative, and what the physician emphatically desires in a dose is therapeutic efficiency. This we have in the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

"Those who have made use of this water and carefully noted its effects have often been surprised at the results obtained from amounts so small, according to chemical analysis, of lithia and the accompanying salts. The explanation of this extraordinary activity is doubtless to be found in the conditions just adduced."

Both of these Waters are powerfully NERVE TONIC and EXHILARANT. Number 1 is also a Potent BLOOD TONIC and is especially indicated in NERVOUS INDIGESTION and in all cases where there is poverty or deficiency of the blood, indicated by a pallid, bloodless appearance, or where there is extreme exhaustion. In the absence of these symptoms No. 2 is to be preferred.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER is for sale by Grocers and Druggists generally.
Testimonials which defy all imputation or questions sent to any address,

PROPRIETOR, BUFFALO LITHIA SPRINGS, VIRGINIA.

...FOR...
Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Colds, Bronchitis.
For twenty one years the most successful GERMICIDE in contagious disease.
Send for descriptive booklet, containing physicians' testimonials and price list.
Sold by Druggists Generally.
Vapo-Cresolene Co.,
69 Wall St., New York,
SCHIEFFELIN & CO.,
N. Y. U. S. Agts.

THIS AUTOGRAPH IS NEVER ON A POOR SHADE-ROLLER AND NEVER ABSENT FROM A GOOD ONE.
Stewart Hartshorn
SET
THE GENUINE
HARTSHORN

PERFECTION CAKE TIN
has a removable bottom which enables you to remove without breaking the most delicate cake or pie. Bottom fits in groove, will not leak batter. Used by over two million American house-keepers. Requires no greasing. Tenstyles. No. 1 by mail, sent prepaid on receipt of 20c. We are the largest manufacturers of Household Specialties in the U.S. AGENTS, write for particulars how to get this and other of our best selling novelties. Outfit worth $2 free. FREE. All goods guaranteed to give satisfaction. Address Dept. T.
HOUSEHOLD NOVELTY WORKS, 25 Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS,
102 Fulton st., New York, sell all makes under half price. Don't buy before writing them for unprejudiced advice and prices. Exchanges. Immense stock for selection. Shipped for trial. Guaranteed first class. Dealers supplied. 52-page illustrated catalogue free.

MAKE MONEY EVENINGS.
Men employed during the day can make money evenings giving public exhibitions with Magic Lantern or Stereopticon. Little capital needed. Write for particulars. 256 page Catalogue FREE.
McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y.

SUCCESSFUL MEN
have learned their business "from A to Z." Your future depends upon your ambition. We have prepared thousands who studied "between times" to secure enviable positions through EDUCATION BY MAIL
in Electrical, Civil, Mining, Steam and Mechanical Engineering; Metallurgy, Journalism, Machine Design, Mechanical Drawing, Art, Architecture, English Branches, Stenography. Low price; easy terms.
The United Correspondence Schools,
156-158 Fifth Ave., New York.
Write at once for Catalogue No. 30

EASTMAN Thoroughly trains young men and women for business and secures situations. Instruction by mail or in person. Full information in catalogue free.
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
C. C. GAINES, Box 236, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

$3.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working for me. People preferred who can furnish their own team. Applicants must furnish satisfactory reference as to character and standing. B. F. Johnson, 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

$18.00 a Week and expenses to good men and women to introduce our Poultry Compound. Permanent position. Also want workers for other specialties; can mail profitable employment for part time. Give references. R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore.

Living Bread

Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for Nov. 12. John 6:26-35

WE are not surprised to learn that Christ's hearers werepuzzled by his description of himself as bread. The Mass in the Roman Catholic church to this day, is an evidence that even now men do not understand his words. How can Christ give us his flesh to eat? Yet there are expressions in common use that may help us to understand his meaning. We speak of an enthusiast in music as "drinking in" some sublime rendering of a master's composition. We speak of a man "devouring" a book, meaning his delight in it, his mastery of it. Everyone knows what is meant by a man thoroughly "digesting" an argument. It is possible to take some theory or doctrine so thoroughly into our lives as to make us a living embodiment of that doctrine. That one phrase, "blessed is drudgery" has been to many a poor toiler such a motto as to transform and glorify his life, giving him strength and support such as food gives to the enfeebled body. All our strength does not come from material things. There are thoughts and motives and suggestions that stimulate and invigorate men to do and endure, as certainly as food builds up the body. The sight of his flag to a soldier, the thought of wife and children to a weary toiler, brings stimulus to new effort and imparts fresh strength for greater exertion. So, Christ says that he is the bread which sustains the life of his people.

This idea of Christ as bread, gives the key-note of Christianity. It is not a system of doctrines to be believed, nor a series of facts to be grasped; it is Christ living in his people. When the poor, weak victim of sin describes his struggles to lead a good life and recounts his failures, philosophy abandons hope of his reformation; but Christianity takes hold with confidence. He is told that the Divine nature which Christ imparts, gives him the strength that he needs and he finds that it is so. Trusting in Christ, he gains power that he never had before. His enemy quails before this new force and after a few defeats ceases to trouble him. It is so with natures untouched by grosser forms of evil. The gentle, virtuous nature becomes purer, higher, stronger, both to do and to bear. Thus Christ is in the world to-day. Is there trouble, or distress, or poverty, or hunger? Christ in his people takes measures for relief and comfort. It is his impulse, his example, his prompting, that operates in every good work. Seeing what he was when he was here, admiring and loving him, desiring to be such as he was we become transformed into his image. As the bread, eaten, becomes our own and its strength becomes ours, renewing the wasted tissue and sustaining life, so Christ's nature comes to be ours and we live his life, doing his work, having his principles. This is being a Christian. It is not what we believe, nor what we do, but it is what we are, that makes us Christians.

It is Christ incarnate that makes the Christian life possible. But for the incarnation we would not have known God any better than the patriarchs and prophets knew him. But we have seen how God would act in human form. We know what the divine life in humanity is like. We have seen in Christ its moral beauty, its purity, its benignity, its gentleness, its sweet reasonableness. As we look and wonder and admire, Christ bids us feed on him, take him into our lives, and assures us that we may become like him. Believing in him, trusting ourselves to him, we receive his nature and have his strength for service. The mystery remains, but we become familiar with it by experience. By prayer, by obedience, by earnest effort, we find that the power is received, and so, like our Lord, we have meat to eat that the world knows not of. This explains the mystery of many a life. We see a sufferer lie helpless year after year, yet keeping a spirit full of patience and peace. We see a man so weighed down with trials and sorrows that we wonder his heart does not break under the burden, yet going on courageously and cheerfully to his daily duty. It is not in human nature to do this; but Christ can do it, and he does.

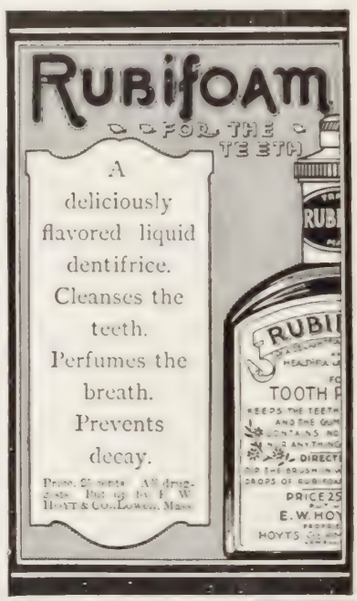
MACBETH'S "pearl top" and "pearl glass" lamp-chimneys do not break from heat, not one in a hundred.

They are made of tough clear glass, clear as crystal.

They fit the lamps they are made for. Shape controls the draft. Draft contributes to proper combustion; that makes light; they improve the light of a lamp.

Our "Index" describes all lamps and their proper chimneys. With it you can always order the right size and shape of chimney for any lamp. We mail it FREE to any one who writes for it.

Address MACBETH, Pittsburgh, Pa.



There are none so deaf as those who won't buy

Wilson's Common Sense Ear Drums

The only scientific sound conductors. Invisible, comfortable, efficient. They fit in the ear. Doctors recommend them. Thousands testify to their perfection and to benefit derived.

Information and book of letters from many users, free.

WILSON EAR DRUM CO.,
223 Trust Bldg. Louisville, Ky.

FREE FOR TRIAL.

To prove that Kremer's Dyspepsia Powder is the most meritorious remedy for all forms of dyspepsia, I will send a large box for 5c. postage, the price (50c.) to be sent only in case you are benefited after a week's trial. Otherwise return powder by mail.

P. C. KINNAMAN, Mailberry, Ind.: "Have taken four boxes with great success for catarrh of the stomach."

Mention this paper.

JOHN KREMER, Druggist, 428 7th Ave., N. Y.

A Few Plain Facts on the Curability of Consumption, Asthma and Bronchitis

BY DR. ROBERT HUNTER

I have made the lungs a specialty for nearly fifty years, and know by experience that Consumption is curable in all stages. By this I do not mean that it is curable in every case, for in some the patient's constitution is so bad and broken down that no healing power is left in the body. But treated in its early stages, fully 95 per cent. recover under antiseptic medicated air inhalations.

All medical colleges now admit that Consumption is Curable, but differ as wide as the poles as to its proper treatment. Since 1891, when Koch's Lymph was heralded by the profession as the long looked for panacea for Consumption (but which proved to be the most murderous quackery that ever disgraced the annals of medicine), general physicians have had no treatment beyond palliation and the temporary relief of symptoms. Patients have been practically left by them to die of the disease without any attempt to save them by curative treatment.

It would be invidious for me, as a physician, to make these statements, had I not before me absolute proof of their truth in the testimony of many prominent physicians, given only a few weeks ago before a special committee of the New York State Senate and published in its report. I was gratified at this endorsement of my treatment which I introduced nearly fifty years ago and am still applying with great success in thousands of cases of Consumption and other lung diseases. It is the only treatment that ever cured true Consumption. By it I have rescued hundreds in the last stage of Consumption, and given up as hopeless, who are alive to-day to bear grateful testimony to their restoration to health by my treatment. No stronger proof of the relief of any disease exists than I have shown of that of Consumption by my antiseptic air inhalations. The records of my office are always open to inspection and hundreds of patients are willing to be referred to.

But the mere act of inhaling some fragrant nostrum, is not what I mean by inhalation treatment. The remedies must be adapted to the disease and condition of each patient. The physician must have thorough knowledge of medicines, be able to detect the different forms of lung disease and have experience in the action of inhaled remedies on the lungs or he cannot apply it with success.

Consumption, to have the same chance of relief as other diseases, must be treated in its early stage, before serious injury has been done to the lung structures. Almost every case is seen in this stage by the patient's family physician, and if he knew the remedies to use, their strength, and how to apply them to the lungs, there would be few deaths by Consumption.

But what possible chance has anyone afflicted with Consumption, under the care of physicians who never cured a case in their whole professional career, who confess that they have no curative treatment of their own, and no confidence in anything they can do for the disease? What moral right have they to treat Consumption at all, or to permit their patients to believe they are striving to cure them when all they are doing is but a wretched system of palliation of symptoms?

Here is the real cause of this wide-spread mortality of Consumption. People die of it because general physicians do not know its proper treatment and are wholly incompetent to cope with it. Before they can do so they must be taught the principals of medical science which govern the treatment of all local diseases, and acting under them, must discover, as I did, the remedies which, when locally applied to the lungs, will kill their germs and heal the ravages they have made in that organ.

I have given to the world, in my Antiseptic Medicated Air Treatment, an invaluable check to the disease, when applied before mortal lesions have taken place. It is a treatment which places Consumption among other curable local diseases. By it, healing and germicidal remedies are brought into direct contact with the internal surfaces of the nose, throat, larynx, air tubes and cells of the lungs. It soothes the mucous lining of the breathing organs, arrests irritation and prevents inflamation, while the antiseptics destroy the germ life on which the disease depends.

A few cases are as good as a thousand that I might refer to, write to any of them. A personal letter from them may be the means of saving your life.

TESTIMONIALS.

Mr. L. A. Peer, 179 Washington Street, Newark, N. J., states that seven years ago, while living in Hackettstown, N. Y., he had an oppressive feeling in his throat, and, upon spitting, found that it was blood. This was the first intimation he had that anything was the matter with his lungs. After this he suffered with pains in his left lung, and continued to spit blood. After he moved to Newark he had the grippe badly, which left his lung in a very weak condition, and had hemorrhages frequently. In a short space of time he had 27 hemorrhages, and his condition was critical. He became terribly emaciated, his weight dropping from 170 to 130 pounds. He had great difficulty in breathing and was unable to leave his bed because of weakness. His doctor gave him little encouragement, and pronounced it a case for the worst. Hearing Dr. Hunter had opened an office in New York, he engaged treatment for Mr. Peer. From the start he began to improve. His breathing became freer, the hemorrhages ceased, although weak, his appetite returned, enabling his former plump self to be built up, and after he was able to come over to Dr. Hunter's office, on a few days after he commenced treatment. Mr. Peer now weighs 185 pounds and is feeling entirely well, and ascribes that Dr. Hunter's treatment was the only that saved his life.

Edward J. Raynor, with Ward & Co., Carriage Makers, Newark, N. J., says: I was a hemorrhagic Sufferer, and almost a wreck when I took care of I had to discontinue after frequent hemorrhages and getting home from work in a carriage. I coughed up blood, pieces and had fever and night sweats and was brought to my bed from which I never expected to rise again. I am now strong and able to do my work with the same degree of strength as ever. I have gained my flesh back, and can eat and sleep as well as ever. From being a perfect wreck I have been rebuilt by Dr Hunter's medicated air inhalations. Any one who wishes further particulars of my experience of this wonderful treatment, can write or call on me. I know I owe my life to it, and believe no one suffer ought to know of it.

In order to obtain Dr. Hunter's book, "The Lungs and Their Diseases," free, it is necessary to mention this paper, and address Dr. Robert Hunter Association, 117 W. 42d St., New York.

Turkish Baths for 3 Cents.

THE best of all bath cabinets is now sold at maker's prices direct to the user. Sold even lower than the inconvenient affairs that are advertised for this service. A tight, double-walled room, rubber coated inside and outside, and fitted with a door. Made so that merely tipping folds it into a six inch space. Handsome, convenient and strong.

The Racine Cabinet is guaranteed to be the best one on the market. We sell on approval, to be returned at our expense if not satisfactory. Sold direct to users at from $5. to $12., express or freight prepaid; alcohol stove, vaporizer and face-steaming attachment included. Send today for our handsome illustrated catalogue, and order from that.

Racine Bath Cabinet Co., Box J, Racine, Wis.

SAWS ANY WOOD IN ANY POSITION ON ANY GROUND 4 in. to 5 ft. Through

1 MAN with a FOLDING SAWING MACHINE BEATS 2 MEN with a Cross-cut Saw

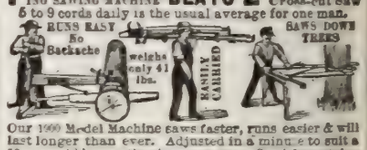
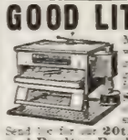
6 to 9 cords daily is the usual average for one man.



Our 1900 Model Machine saws faster, runs easier & will last longer than ever. Adjusted in a minute to suit a 12-year-old boy or the strongest man. Send for catalog showing latest improvements. First order gets agency.

Folding Sawing Mach. Co. 55 N. Jefferson St. C 20, Chicago.

GOOD LITTLE INCUBATORS



Many people want a small incubator but don't want a large high priced machine that will only spoil good eggs. To meet the demand for a really good little incubator we have perfected the new famous Reliable 50 EGG BANTLING SPECIAL. It is the equal of any incubator ever made, only smaller, and sells for only $5

Send 10c for our 20th Century Catalogue and Poultry Book. Best ever published.

RELIABLE INCB. & BROODER CO., Box B16 Quincy, Ill.

LIFE PRODUCERS SUCCESSFUL INCUBATORS.
LIFE PRESERVERS SUCCESSFUL BROODERS.

All about them in our 148-page catalogue. Mailed for 6 cents in stamps.

DES MOINES INCUBATOR CO., Box 71 Des Moines, Ia.

DON'T BUY AN INCUBATOR

and pay for it before giving it a trial. We will send the celebrated NEW PREMIER INCUBATOR on trial. This evidences our faith in it. So simple a child can run it. First prize World's Fair. Also sole manufacturers of Simplicity Incubator. Catalogue and Poultry Helps 5 cts. Plans for Poultry Houses etc., 25 cts.

COLUMBIA INCUBATOR CO. 12 Adams St. Delaware City, Del.

THE BEST EGG FOOD for laying hens is Green Cut Bone.

Nothing equals MANN'S NEW BONE CUTTERS for preparing bone. Cut fast, fine and turn easy. Mann's Clover Cutter cuts clover the best and fastest. Swinging Feed Trays, Granite Crystal Grit, &c. Illustrated catalogue free. F. W. MANN CO., Box 29 Milford, Mass.

CATARRH INHALER FREE. Dr. Worst will mail his new scientific Catarrh Inhaler with medicine for a year, on three days' trial, Free. If satisfactory, send him $1.00; if not, return it. AGENTS WANTED. Dr. Worst, 211 Main St., Ashland, Ohio.

FRUIT TREE AGENTS. Will send you free, plans for an original profits without much doing with your present time. Write quick. Frank H. Battles, Seed Grower, Rochester, N. Y.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS

The Story of a Child Wife*

WHEN Srimati's young husband arrived at the conclusion that stones could not be gods (nay, in their hideousness, not even symbols of the Godhead), he took refuge in the Vedanta as preached by Keshub Chunder Sen. This was a bold step. But when he told his young wife what had happened to him, and explained to her his reasons, serious as the consequences of such a step were in India, she, as a faithful and devoted wife, at once followed his example.

They might easily have kept up an appearance of orthodoxy, while holding in their hearts those simple, pure and enlightened convictions. The temptation was great, but they resisted. The families to which she and her husband belonged occupied a highly respected position in Hindoo society, which in India is fortunately quite compatible with extreme poverty. Much as both she and her husband had been loved and respected before, they were now despised, avoided, excommunicated. Even the allowance which they received from their family was ordered to be reduced to a minimum, and in order to fit himself to earn an independent livelihood, the husband had to enter as a student in one of the Government colleges, while his little wife had to look after their small household. Soon there came a new trial. Her husband's father, who had renounced his son when he joined Keshub Chunder Sen's church, died broken-hearted, and the duty of performing the funeral rites fell upon his son. To neglect to perform these rites is considered something awful, because it is supposed to deprive the departed of all hope of eternal life. The son was quite ready to perform all that was essential in such rites, but he declared he would never take part in any of the usual idolatrous ceremonies. In spite of the prayers of his relatives and the protestations of the whole village, he would not yield. He fled the very night that the funeral ceremony was to take place, accompanied again by no one except his brave little wife. Thereupon his father's brothers stopped all allowances due to him, and he was left with eight rupees per month to support his wife and mother. Srimati, however, managed with this small pittance, to maintain not only herself and her husband, but her husband's mother also, who had become insane, his little sister and a nurse.

The rest of their lives was not very eventful. The husband, after a time, secured a small income; but their life was always a struggle. Srimati, blessed with healthy children, thought she had all that her heart desired, though she deeply felt the unkindness of her relatives. Her servants loved her and would never leave her, and when her husband complained of certain irregularities in the household and thought she was too lenient to her maids, she would but sigh and say: "Why should I lose patience, and thereby my peace of mind? Is it not better that I should suffer a little by their conduct than that they should be unhappy?" Her love of her children was most ardent. Yet her highest desire was always the happiness of her husband. She twined round him, as her friends used to say, like a creeper, but it was often the creeper that had to give strength to him and uphold him in his many trials and unfulfilled aspirations. Religion was the never-failing support for both of them, and their conversation constantly turned on their unseen life here and hereafter.

*From Auld Lang Syne. A series of charming sketches of persons in India by Rt. Hon. Professor Max Muller. The girl in this story was married according to the custom in India at nine years of age to a boy of twelve. Pp. 298; Price $2; Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, 153 Fifth Ave., New York.

Books Received

The Stolen Baby, Marion Clarke. A touching, true and thrilling story of to-day. By Alice Hallowell, author of Forget-me-not, etc. This pretty booklet, in artistic tinted and gold covers, gives a full account of the loss and recovery of Baby Clarke. Pp. 50; price 50c.; for sale at all book-dealers, and may be had from the authoress direct by addressing Miss Alice Hallowell, 7- West Thirtieth street, New York.

ONE QUARTER FORMER PRICE

We have had prepared an exceedingly large edition, and by so doing have saved many dollars on the cost of each copy of the new edition of

Tissot's Life of Christ

500 ILLUSTRATIONS

The Christian Herald said: "For many months past the art world of two continents has been discussing with mingled feelings of surprise and delight the remarkable productions of J. James Tissot."

ITEMS OF INTEREST

M. Tissot spent ten years, much of this time in Palestine, painting the originals from which the hundreds of illustrations in his work were made.

These 500 pictures tell the entire story of Christ's Life as it has never before been pictured.

The preparation and publishing took four years.

An investment of over $400,000 was made before the work was ready for delivery.

Each illustration is of distinct value.

The many reproductions of paintings IN COLOR are identical with the originals.

Hundreds of thousands of visitors to the galleries have seen these great paintings, not only in this country but in England and France as well

INDEED

The present figure for this the most remarkable Religious art work of all times is NOW easily within the reach of every one interested in ART or RELIGION.

NO WORK has ever been so well received by PEOPLE, PULPIT, and PRESS.

IT CERTAINLY is the publishing ACHIEVEMENT of the NINETEENTH CENTURY.

UPON REQUEST

we will forward full particulars of the WORK, the MODEST PRICE, and EASY TERMS of payment which we now offer on the early impressions of the new edition.

McClure Tissot Co.

141 East 25th Street
New York City

You Can Play Them Without Learning

New Yorker Church Choir, Zobo Band.

This Band has been organized over a year, and has given many successful concerts by the M. E. Church Choir and Organist, Mr. C. Diehl, of 123d Street, New York City, as a means of raising money for church purposes. They find it a pleasant, profitable variation from routine work, especially when concerts and of great use in church services. Many Church Choirs have these Zobo Bands, and find them of great value. As a means of earning money for church purposes, a "Zobo Concert" unrivaled wherever introduced. Zobo Bands can play any piece of music in all parts by ear or by note as preferred.

READ WHAT PASTORS AND ORGANISTS SAY ABOUT OUR INSTRUMENTS.

Rev. C. McKibbin, of East Grand Fork, Minn., says: "I am pleased with Zobo instruments and have organized a boy's band to be with big success." Wm. F. Miller, organist and director of Church, Paterson, N.J., says: "I find the Zobo Brass Band Instruments to be first-class and just what we needed, as we have a very small organ. We have a fourteen-piece Zobo Band and intend to enlarge it. We have had one Zobo Concert, and I would say that it was a complete success." Rev. W. H. Sampson, St. John, West New Brunswick, Canada, says: "I am sending you express money order, as those I have are very satisfactory, and suited for giving church entertainments." Also refer you to Rev. Jas. J. Seiler, of Menomonie, Wis.; Rev. Robt. R. Clelland, of Pablo Beach, Fla.; Rev. W. H. Mahaffie, Ph.D., Burlington, Ia. Had we space, we could quote you thousands of such letters from pastors who have had our goods, but we believe that we have quoted enough to satisfy any reasonable person that we are perfectly reliable and that our goods are as represented.

CAN BE PLAYED BY ANYONE WHO CAN HUM A TUNE—NO LEARNING.

We do away with the long tedious labor of practice. It is the most extraordinary musical instrument ever produced, so constructed that the human voice comes out so wonderfully as to make it melodious beyond all imagination. It seems impossible for it to accomplish so much. It gives you the vocal power of giants, yet its music may be softened to the cooing of a dove, or the thrilling song of the nightingale. It is a money and music making feature for Church Choirs and all Concerts. It improves the voice. They afford unlimited pleasure to the amateur, as the cornet is an elegant accompaniment to organ, Piano, or any string instrument suited for home amusement.

WITH A FULL BAND A GRAND PIPE ORGAN EFFECT CAN BE OBTAINED.

Those that have no pipe organ, the Zobo supplies the want at a minimum cost. In every church without a paid choir should organize a Zobo Church Choir Band. Sing into the mouth piece—Zobo does the rest.

99 CTS. SPECIAL THIRTY-DAY OFFER. To introduce the Musical Marvel of the Age, we will send the Zobo Cornet, solid brass, highly polished and lacquered, 12 inches long, 6 inch bell, with full instructions how to play, and illustrated catalogue postpaid for 99 cts. This is a grand offer and you should not miss it. We warrant each instrument just as represented or money refunded. Send money by registered letter, post office money order, a bank draft payable to our order, or have your store keeper order for you. FERDINAND STRAUSS, 369 Broadway, New York City.

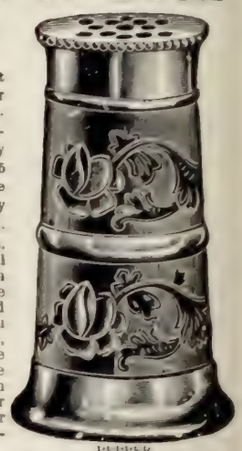
SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH

Best in quality—largest in quantity—applied with a cloth—makes no dust—does its work quickly, easily and effectively.

MADE BY PROPRIETORS OF "RISING SUN STOVE POLISH."

For Both 25 cents For Both

SALT.



PEPPER.

If you are looking for a Great Bargain in Fine Silverware never heard of before and that will astonish you, here is one of the Greatest Bargains ever offered by any reliable Manufacturer. For 25 cents we send Prepaid Both the Salt and Pepper Shakers. They are Quadruple Coin Silver Plated. Warranted to wear ten years. Finely engraved and useful as well as ornamental to any table rich or poor. If on receipt of the same you do not think or find them the Greatest Bargain you ever have seen or heard of, return them at once to us and we will refund you your money. We have been doing business in Chicago since 1865. Any Bank or Express Company can tell you our standing. Our Bargain Silverware Catalogue Sent Free.

LEONARD MFG. CO., 5 & 7 MONROE ST., COR. MICHIGAN AVE., CHICAGO.

TEN MILLION BABIES

have been saved to their mothers by the timely use of the old original

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup

It is the prescription used by him in his practice for years without failure. It is not a patent medicine, and contains no injurious drugs to destroy your child's brain. A quick, sure cure for young and old. Get a bottle today!

"Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is the greatest remedy for cough, cold and sore throat I ever used. I always keep it in the house. I have three small children, and this past spring they all had the whooping cough. I used no other medicine but Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and it relieved and cured them quickly."

MRS. F. H. PIERCE,
Sub-Station 3, Detroit, Mich.

Refuse Substitutes.

A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Bull's Pills cure a weak stomach. Trial, 20 for 5 cts. Dealers or by mail.

Larkin Premiums FREE.

HANDSOME PREMIUMS,

Value $10.00 each, for selling or using $10.00 worth of the

LARKIN SOAPS.

Choice of Writing Desk, Morris Chair, Bookcase, Brass and Steel Bed, Silver Tea Set, Oil Heater, Lamps, Watch, etc.

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL.

Beautifully illustrated booklet free to all who ask. It tells how to earn the Larkin Premiums.

THE LARKIN SOAP MFG. CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

$13.75 Elegant Gondola Couch $13.75

FOR XMAS or BIRTHDAY no more acceptable present can be found than our Elegant Gondola Couch. The donor will be kindly remembered every day. It is extra size and extra quality. 6 ft. 5 in. long, 30 in. wide, full Gondola shape, as shown. Upholstered in three-toned Kaiser plush, hand deep biscuit tufted, buttons guaranteed not to pull out. Stuffed with fine tow and moss. Full set of springs in head, edge and seat. Samples of material and colors FREE.

A HANDSOME PRESENT Each purchaser of this couch will receive free the handsome down pillow, with wide hemmed border, shown in illustration. This in addition to the low price of the couch, is a wonder.

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL

This luxurious couch and down pillow will be sent FREE on thirty days' trial to all intending purchasers who will send us their freight address and give us satisfactory references as to their responsibility. After thirty days remit us $13.75, if satisfied that the couch alone is worth every cent of $20.

PILLOW FREE WITH COUCH.

If not all you expected return to us at our expense. We cannot do more than this to show our belief in the quality and price of our goods. We have couches at all prices. Of our $9.75 couch we sold over 10,000 last year. A postal card will secure our new winter catalogue of couches and upholstered furniture. Established 1857.

G. LOUIS SCHULTZE'S SONS, 1051-1053 Milwaukee Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

ONE YEAR'S FREE TRIAL

BRIGHTEN YOUR HOME WITH THE CELEBRATED CORNISH AMERICAN PIANOS & ORGANS.

A prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT of $10.00 on the list prices as quoted in our 1900 Catalogue on any CORNISH ORGAN or $20.00 on the list prices if you buy a CORNISH PIANO.

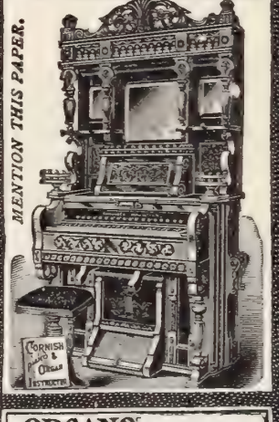
MENTION THIS PAPER.



WE WILL ship a Cornish Piano or Cornish Organ anywhere upon the distinct understanding that if it is not satisfactory to purchaser after 12 months' use, we will take it back and refund purchase money, freight charges and six per cent. interest. Thousands have taken advantage of this. THE ORIGINAL CORNISH PLAN, of doing business, during the time this really wonderful offer has been in force, and the immediate success of this iron clad guarantee decided us to continue it so that thousands more can participate in its object of INSURING THE PURCHASER OF A CORNISH PIANO OR A CORNISH ORGAN AGAINST ANY RISK. It would be impossible for us to make public this offer were it not backed up by the strongest evidence of our absolute responsibility. THE CORNISH AMERICAN PIANOS AND ORGANS are warranted for twenty-five years and every warrant is a personal guarantee endorsed by a business reputation of fifty years, and plant and property worth over one million dollars. There are over a Quarter of a Million satisfied purchasers of the CORNISH PIANOS and CORNISH ORGANS, and so great has been the demand for our instruments during the last twelve months that we have just completed very extensive additions to our factories.

FOR FULL PARTICULARS of the WORLD FAMOUS CORNISH PLAN and for a complete description of the instruments made by us, see new Jubilee Catalogue for 1900, HANDSOMELY ILLUSTRATED in Colors—the most comprehensive musical catalogue in the trade. The frontispiece is a masterly reproduction of an interesting oil painting designed and executed for us by an eminent artist, representing "St. Cecilia and the Angelic Choir." This beautiful catalogue is sent FREE, charges prepaid, and we also include our novel reference book "THE HEART OF THE PEOPLE" and our latest special offers free. WRITE TO-DAY.

REFERENCES.

Our bank, your bank, any bank, or any of the multitude of patrons who have purchased millions of dollars' worth of instruments from us during the past fifty years.

Send for particulars of the Cornish Co-operative Plan, showing how YOU CAN SECURE a CORNISH PIANO or ORGAN FREE.

ORGANS FROM $25.

CORNISH & CO.
ESTABLISHED 50 YEARS
WASHINGTON, N.J.

PIANOS FROM $155.

ALL WOOL SUIT $5.95

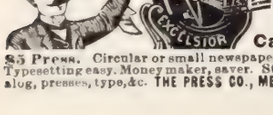
Man's Suit made from rich Black Cheviot, woven by America's Best Woolen Mill from fine picked wool yarn, dyed by a new process and cannot fade—famous everywhere for its perfect weave and deep black color.

SKILLED SUIT TAILORS will make the suit in latest sack style to fit perfect, line it with fine heavy Farmer's satin and sew it with pure silk and linen thread, guaranteed far better in quality, style and looks than other best $10 suit.

SEND NO MONEY but send this adv. and we'll send Free a sample of this beautiful Cheviot and our big book of cloth samples of other suits from $6.95 up and overcoats from $5.95 up, or send us your Height, Weight, Chest, Waist and Crotch measure with $1.00 deposit and we'll express the suit to you C.O.D., subject to examination; examine it carefully, try it on, see that it fits perfect, then pay the express agent the balance $4.95 and expressage, only after you find it exactly as represented, a perfect fit and far better than others best $10.00 suits. Send today quick for suit or free sample book.

REFERENCES The Royal Trust Co. Bank, Chicago—any wholesale house in Chicago or any express Company in America.

THE G. LOUIS VEHON CO., 157 W. Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.



Print Your Own Cards, &c.

$5 Press. Circular or small newspaper press $18. Typesetting easy. Money maker, saver. Stamp for catalog, presses, type, &c. THE PRESS CO., MERIDEN, CONN.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

VOLUME 22—NUMBER 45

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 8, 1899

PRICE FIVE CENTS

COPYRIGHT 1899, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

At the Cradle of Protestantism

A Graceful Gothic Church Being Erected at Spires, in Germany, as a Memorial of the Birth of Protestantism

A PROJECT which has an interest for every person who glories in the name of Protestant, is now in process of realization in Germany. It is the erection in the town of Spires, on the Rhine, of a church as a memorial of the intrepid protest made in that town, three hundred and seventy years ago, by a few determined Christian men against an attempt to rob them of religious liberty. That protest was so brave a thing to make and was so expressive of Christian principle that it became of world-wide interest, and the men who identified themselves with the heroes who made it, came to be called Protestants—a name by which men who resist the claims of the Pope have been called ever since.

The church is now finished as far as the roof. The tower and graceful spire included in the plan have yet to be built. It stands on an elevated site in a central situation. The design is Gothic. It was selected from among plans of forty-five of the most eminent architects in Germany who competed for the honor of designing this representative church of the world's Protestantism. The material used is a solid yellow-gray sandstone. The memorial hall is thirty-five feet square by sixty feet high. The choir of the auditorium is lighted by five beautiful windows, the gift of the Emperor. In the central window is the figure of Christ. Near the entrance, stands a bronze statue of Luther, nine feet high above its granite base. It represents the great reformer with right hand extended, resisting all restraint of conscience while with his left hand he clasps the Bible to his heart. On the floor at his feet in mosaic, are his famous words uttered before the Diet of Worms: "Here I stand; I cannot do otherwise, God helping me." Near his statue, on pillars, are the statues of the princes who made the protest which the church commemorates, each statue the contribution of the descendants of the respective princes. An organ, one of the finest in Germany, the contribution of the Protestant choirs of Europe, will stand over the entrance opposite the chancel. The beautiful building will cost two million marks (about $500,000). Contributions aggregating more than half the amount have already been received from the people of Germany, from the Emperor down to the simplest peasant, and from the Protestant people of Europe. The town of Spires alone gave one-fifth of the total cost. An enthusiastic desire has been manifested everywhere to make the edifice a worthy memorial of the momentous event it is designed to celebrate.

THE CATHEDRAL OF SPIRES

"PROTESTATIO"

("I protest")—From the celebrated heroic painting, depicting the spirit of Protestantism

THE "OLD GATE" OF SPIRES

That event is one of the most memorable in the history of Christendom. We of the nineteenth century, secure in the religious liberties our fathers won for us, cannot realize the emotions which agitated Spires in the year 1529. The potent Emperor Charles V. had summoned the representatives of all the states of the German empire to meet in Diet in Spires, on February 21. The meaning of this convocation was all too obvious. The Emperor had made friends with the Pope. Three years previous, there had been a Diet at Spires, but the Pope and the Emperor were then at issue, and Charles needed the support of the princes who were friends of Luther, to help him in a campaign in Italy. He would not therefore at that time require them to prosecute the reformers in their dominions. Knowing

(Continued on page 547).

OUR MAIL-BAG

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

D. S. E., Baroda, Mich. How did Ezra and his company travel from Babylon to Jerusalem? What mode of conveyance was there?

Though no mention is made of it we should suppose they were as well supplied as the preceding company who made the same journey under Zerubbabel. They had camels, horses, mules and asses (see Ezra 2 : 66, 67).

A. E. R., Thomastown, O. 1. What is the meaning of the expression in Matt. 20 16, "For many are called, but few chosen?" I do not see its connection with the parable. 2. What is the cutting off of the right hand, etc., in Matt. 18 :8?

1. There does not appear to be any connection. The words have probably been inserted by mistake in this place. They are not in the oldest copies of the Gospel and the revisers omitted them from the revised version. They occur in Matt. 22 :14 where they are appropriate. There the invitation is freely given—many are called, but when those who are called do not comply with the conditions, they are not accepted. There are some who despise the provision made for them, as did the man who preferred his own garment to that provided for him by the king, and propose to enter heaven by virtue of their own righteousness and not as sinners justified by Christ, and these are not chosen, or accepted. 2. That no sacrifice is too great to make to gain eternal life. If money or a habit or an association precious as a right hand or a right eye is an obstacle, it is better to give it up, painful as it may be to do [illegible] to lose the soul.

L. V., Binghamton, N. Y. I have been under the influence of a wicked person and have been led to do things I deeply regret. My mind is burdened with grief that I cannot shake off. What can I do to end my suffering?

Perhaps it is not well that you should end it. If you have done wrong are you not willing to bear the sorrow that has resulted from your wrongdoing? Do not be impatient under your suffering, but consider how much you have deserved it. But your first duty is to go humbly before God and confess your sin; tell him how sorry you are; make no excuses for yourself, but ask him, for Christ's sake, to forgive you. If you are sincere he will surely do so. The fact that he has done so, which you cannot doubt, seeing that he has promised it, will be a great comfort to you. Perhaps the suffering may not immediately pass away. It may remain with you to make you careful in the future. To the end of his life Peter could not think of his denial of Christ without sorrow, though he knew he was forgiven. It is said of him, "When he thought thereon he wept."

C. D. R., Newton, Ill. If the Apostles were converted before Pentecost, why did Christ say to [illegible] strengthen thy brethren?"

The revised version renders the passage: "When thou hast turned again, stablish thy brethren." We cannot suppose that after Peter's fall, he needed conversion in the sense in which we use the word. He needed repentance and restoration. His words, his actions, and the intense devotion he had previously shown to Christ, all indicated a man already converted. He fell under temptation as Christ had foreseen, but it was a backsliding which Christ forgave. At Pentecost their experience was not conversion, but an enduement of power for service, notably the power of speaking foreign tongues.

G. V. R., Dover, N. C. When you advised a certain inquirer to the Mail Bag to follow the dictates of his own conscience, had you forgotten that the conscience is sometimes seared or defiled? Do you consider conscience always a safe guide?

Conscience is capable of wrongly directing a man, as it did the Apostle Paul, who said (Acts 26 : 9), "I verily thought with myself that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus." The conscience needs to be informed and freed from prejudice, but its voice is supreme. If a man is intent on doing right he must obey his conscience, for it is the function of conscience to tell him what is right. Would you have the man do what he believes to be wrong? There is no better course for any man who is in a difficulty to take than to pray for enlightenment, to get all the available information on the subject, to carefully consider all the circumstances and then follow the dictates of his conscience, or, in other words, to do the thing he honestly thinks he ought to do.

Mrs. R. C. B., Milton, Ore. 1. Was Esther a Jewess? 2. Who is the character spoken of in Heb. 7, as Melchisedec?

Yes; she was of the tribe of Benjamin and her uncle was one of the principal persons among the Jews. She, however, kept her nationality a secret from the king. 2. This sentence is explained by commentators to imply that Melchisedec was a monarch of [illegible]

"[illegible] has gathered to listen to the words that drop from the Master's lips. The lame are there and the sick, the disconsolate and the bereaved, and the mothers with tender little children. In the background stand [illegible] fully the artist has caught the meaning of the incident which he has portrayed on canvas.

[illegible] genealogy, yet a man who, although even his father and mother were unknown to the world, was so distinguished by his virtues, and the purity of his character that he was divinely con[illegible] of honor paid under the primitive system. The name, Malchi means "king," and Tzedek, "righteousness." The phrase "beginning of days nor end of life," refers to the fact that neither the beginning nor the conclusion of his career is anywhere recorded.

We have not yet heard from the last of the old Bibles. Mr. S. Edgar, Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes:

I have in my possession a Bible Dictionary, English, published in 1503, and a Latin and Greek Dictionary published in 1610, also a large book giving the history of the Book of Job, published in 1656.

Mrs. G. A. D., Augusta, Ga. What was the origin of the Mohammedan standard?

The crescent (not the horsetail) is the Mohammedan standard. It was the ancient ensign of Byzantium (now Constantinople), and was adopted by the city from the fact that the crescent moon, on one occasion, by its sudden brilliant emergence from behind a [illegible] enemies and thus saved the city. The Sultans adopted it as their standard after the capture [illegible]

D. K., Maine. 1. Can you tell [illegible] Pilate after he judged Jesus? 2. Does Matt. [illegible]

1. Josephus, the Jewish historian, states that Pilate was summoned to Rome to answer before the Emperor a political complaint made against him by the Samaritans, and that he afterwards killed himself. Beyond this, all [illegible]

[illegible] which none can advise, since it deals with the secrets of the heart which none but God and yourselves may know. A cheerful resolution [illegible] may go very far toward brightening things [illegible] 55 :12). 2. It referred to the scribe, of course.

J. H. [illegible] creditors? Is it a Christian's duty to give needy creditors? That is if he has money to do [illegible]

If you owe a debt and have the money to pay it, the money is not yours. You have no right to give it to the Lord, since it is not yours to give, but another's. To use it for the church is to rob your creditors, which you cannot do with divine approval. No church [illegible] Christian's duty to give freely of his own means to the church, but not of the means of his creditors. The law declares invalid any transfer of means by a bankrupt within a certain period before insolvency, establishing the principle that the resources then in his hands were not his own but his creditors', and that to divert these resources to any other quarter would be an act of absolute dishonesty.

Mrs. A. Mc——, Oleta, Cal. A preacher said recently, referring to the promise (Luke 12 : 12), "The Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say," that it was now [illegible]

We cannot see that it is. The promise was made by Christ to a number of uneducated men who were liable to be suddenly called upon to address educated and cultivated audiences. They would naturally feel doubtful of their ability, and Christ gave them this comforting assurance. But he did not promise that the power should be perpetual after the necessity for it had passed away. It is obvious to every person who has heard many sermons, that the preacher who has studied [illegible] preach upon it, is more likely to benefit his audience than one who trusts to the impulse of the moment.

Mary D. [illegible] nurses, and was first sug[illegible] [illegible] be wrong to let some one else us[illegible]

It would be decidedly in bad ta[illegible] unless the giver could first be [illegible] notified that you regretted you [illegible] it personally. You should not [illegible] other without the giver's permiss[illegible]

Mrs. W. W., [illegible]sota, N. H. A Chr[illegible] [illegible] Year [illegible] [illegible]: but a few years ago a [illegible] [illegible] sight. If the stock be non-ta[illegible] able or if the bank pays the tax, he will be none the worse off for making the inquiry.

A. B. C., Livingstonville, N. Y. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

PROTESTANTISM'S :: :: MEMORIAL CHURCH

(Continued from first page)

how repugnant to them such a duty would be, he contented himself with obtaining their military aid and left them to do as they chose about religion. They therefore passed a resolution permitting each prince to follow his own inclination in tolerating or suppressing the followers of Luther. But in 1529 the Emperor was relieved of his anxieties about his enemies in Italy, and it was shrewdly suspected that he had bought his peace by pledges to the Pope that he would use all his influence in the Diet to exterminate heresy.

The worst fears were confirmed. Early in the proceedings of the Diet an announcement was made by the representative of the Emperor that inasmuch as the decision of the previous Diet had led to much divergence in matters of religion, the Emperor had annulled it. So arrogant a declaration at once aroused the indignation of the princes, but the Emperor had already disarmed the opposition of some by bribes and of others by threats. The friends of the Reformation were in a hopeless minority. The majority passed a decree forbidding any new reforms, forbidding the dissemination of the reformed doctrine, and forbidding any Roman Catholic embracing the Lutheran creed. Immediately the six evangelical princes who were thus required to suppress the new faith and the representatives of the cities which had adopted it, retired to an adjoining chamber to consult on their course. They were unanimous in their determination to resist the decree. A solemn protest was drawn up explaining their position, asserting their loyalty to the Emperor and the Diet in all secular matters, but insisting on their right to freedom in matters of religion. After stating in respectful terms their reasons for opposing the decree, the protest proceeded: "For these reasons we earnestly entreat you to weigh carefully our grievances and our motives. If you do not yield to our request, we protest by these presents, before God who will one day be our judge, as well before all men, that we, for us and our people, neither consent, nor adhere in any manner whatsoever to the proposed decree, in anything that is contrary to God, to his holy Word, to our right conscience, to the salvation of our souls, and to the former decree of Spires." "Thus," says the historian D'Aubigne, "spoke out the courageous men whom all men henceforward denominated Protestants." The famous document was signed by all present, and was taken into the Diet and handed to King Ferdinand, who presided. As he refused to receive it, it was laid on the table, and the Protestants quitted the hall.

The protest was presented on April 20, 1529. On the following Sunday, April 25, the chancellors of the princes, with the representatives of the cities, met in the Retscher palace, in Spires, with notaries, and there solemnly ratified the document and exchanged copies of it for publication in the various states. They clasped hands in a solemn farewell, each conscious of the peril of the step he had taken. They knew that in thus defying the strongest forces of Europe they were braving relentless foes who might send them to the stake; but they had acted under a stern sense of duty and had committed the result to God. "Posterity," says the historian, "dating from this epoch the definitive formation of Protestantism, has hailed in the protest of Spires one of the greatest movements that has ever been recorded in history."

DR. ALBERT BEYSCHLAG—THE NEW MEMORIAL CHURCH AT SPIRES

The church is now in process of erection being finished up to the roof

This is the event that Protestants, the world over, are celebrating by the erection of the church at Spires. It is believed that the Protestants of the United States would wish to have their share in thus honoring the intrepid men who nobly risked their lives in the cause of religious liberty. A delegate from the Commissioners who have charge of the undertaking, Rev. Albert Beyschlag, has accordingly been sent to America authorized to receive contributions toward the cost of completing the church. It is estimated that one hundred thousand dollars will be needed, and it is hoped that men who prize their freedom of conscience as American Protestants do, will show their gratitude for the blessings they enjoy by contributing the whole amount. The church will then be speedily finished and will stand as practical evidence that in the nineteenth century the principles for which the heroes of the sixteenth century contended are still dear. Contributions may be sent to Rev. Albert Beyschlag, 235 Harrison street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Future of the Philippines

FROM an American representing large business interests, and now visiting the Philippines, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has received a letter which throws considerable light on the situation there. His statements are those of an experienced observer, and while we may not fully endorse his proposed methods of dealing with the natives after the manner of the great military colonial powers of Europe, there is much in his letter that deserves consideration.

"The Filipinos, if left to themselves, would soon be in a much worse state than they have ever experienced in the past, for, like all other branches of the Malay race, they are not fit to govern themselves. England or Germany would be delighted to get a chance to control the islands, and especially the former. Through her long experience with native tribes in the Orient, she would presumably, within a short time, be absolute mistress of the situation. The policy of England has always been to first subdue the natives, and then treat them as liberally as possible, giving them all the privileges of education and civilization generally, under the protection of the British administration.

"The native of the Orient, and especially the Filipino, will not willingly submit to a foreign government, unless he is shown that such a government is fully able to hold its own. This is the only argument that carries any weight with a Filipino, and it is altogether useless to attempt to flatter him, as we did, with a view of thus winning him over to our side. He will simply laugh at such kindness. The only way of putting a quick and absolute end to the present trouble in the Philippines is to send a number of troops large enough to garrison any points which may be taken. We need at least 100,000 soldiers in the islands, including those already there. Once in control we must proceed to establish order, and to do so successfully, it would undoubtedly be advisable to follow the methods employed by England in India or Egypt. In Manila we are now allowing the Filipino judges to form the civil courts and preside over them. That the findings of such a court are not absolutely impartial, can easily be foreseen. Every American civilian in Manila expresses but one opinion on this matter.

"The Philippine Islands offer splendid opportunities for American trade. There is hemp, rice, sugar and coffee in abundance, not to speak of the mineral resources of the country, which are said to be enormous. Timber is to be found on nearly all of the islands; the fertile soil produces grain, vegetables and fruits of all kinds; in fact, the islands constitute a wealthy possession. The principal export business has heretofore been done by English and German firms, who established themselves in the principal ports under the Spanish rule. The central market for all Philippine products is London. This state of affairs gives English and German competitors naturally a great advantage, but there is no doubt that New York will become the Philippine export market in time. To do this we must pursue the course adopted by the commercial representatives of the above mentioned nations. Our American business houses, interested in the trade with the islands, should establish branch houses at the principal ports, which buy or exchange the Philippine products for American merchandise. An American bank of New York should establish a branch at Manila with agencies or subbranches at the smaller ports. At present only London exchange is obtainable in Manila. This having been accomplished, American capital will be invested in other enterprises in the islands, and American interests will gradually increase on a sound and solid basis.

All this takes time, however, and immediate commercially beneficial results need not be expected from the possession of the islands, but there is no doubt that under our protection American business houses will prosper in the Philippines, and that American capital will find an advantageous field for investment there, if our government guarantees its protection. The United States government, by a wise and conservative administration of the islands, will be fully repaid for its expenditures by collecting taxes and revenues, which these wealthy countries can well afford to pay."

GENERAL VIEW OF THE TOWN OF SPIRES-ON-THE-RHINE

Imprisoned in Turkey

This letter from a reader in Eastern Europe, states a not unfamiliar experience, and shows an example of the manner in which American citizens have frequently been treated in the Sultan's dominions:

Editor "Christian Herald"

DEAR SIR: On the 15th of September a certain American citizen sailed from Varna for Constantinople, on his way to Greece where he is engaged in missionary work. When he reached Constantinople the Turkish police seized him, and after a thorough examination of him and all his things, without finding anything of a suspicious character, they told him, "You are a jena adam" (bad man), and put him into prison among some robbers and murderers. He protested against such unjust treatment and wanted to be taken to the American consul, but was told that that would never take place. They took away from him his American passport and threatened to send him into exile. They would have surely done it, had he not succeeded in sending word to the Bible depot and then to the American consul, who, two days later, took him out of prison and sent him away from Constantinople. He was in prison seven days. Is it not about time for the American government to take the necessary steps to put a stop to such Turkish barbarity?

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT.

. . . Many Rooms in Heaven . . .

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text, John 14: 2: . . . . . In my Father's house are many rooms

THERE is a bottle of medicine that is a cure-all. The disciples were sad, and Christ offered heaven as an alterative, a stimulant and a tonic. He shows them that their sorrows are only a dark background of a bright picture of coming felicity. He lets them know that though now they live on the lowlands, they shall yet have a house on the uplands. Nearly all the Bible descriptions of heaven may be figurative. I am not positive that in all heaven there is a literal crown or harp or pearly gate or throne or chariot. They may be only used to illustrate the glories of the place, but how well they do it! The favorite symbol by which the Bible presents celestial happiness is a house. Paul, who never owned a house, although he hired one for two years in Italy, speaks of heaven as a "house not made with hands," and Christ in our text, the translation of which is a little changed, so as to give the more accurate meaning, says, "In my Father's house are many rooms."

This divinely authorized comparison of heaven to a great homestead of large accommodations I propose to carry out. In some healthy neighborhood a man builds a very commodious habitation. He must have room for all his children. The rooms come to be called after the different members of the family. That is mother's room; that is George's room; that is Henry's room; that is Flora's room; that is Mary's room, and the house is all occupied. But time goes by, and the sons go out into the world, and build their own homes; and the daughters are married, or have talents enough singly to go out and do a good work in the world. After a while the father and mother are almost alone in the big house, and seated by the evening stand, they say: "Well, our family is no larger now than when we started together forty years ago." But time goes still further by, and some of the children are unfortunate, and return to the old homestead to live, and the grandchildren come with them, and perhaps great-grandchildren, and again the house is full.

Millennia ago God built on the hills of heaven a great homestead for a family innumerable, yet to be. At first he lived alone in that great house, but after awhile it was occupied by a very large family, cherubic, seraphic, angelic. The eternities passed on, and many of the inhabitants became wayward and left, never to return, and many of the apartments were vacated. I refer to the fallen angels. Now these apartments are filling up again. There are arrivals at the old homestead of God's children every day, and the day will come when there will be no unoccupied room in all the house.

As you and I expect to enter it and make there eternal residence, I thought you would like to get some more particulars about the many-roomed homestead. "In my Father's house are many rooms." You see, the place is to be apportioned off into apartments. We shall love all who are in heaven, but there are some very good people whom we would not want to live with in the same room. They may be better than we are, but they are of a divergent temperament. We would like to meet with them on the golden streets, and worship with them in the temple, and walk with them on the river banks, but I am glad to say that we shall live in different apartments. "In my Father's house are many rooms." You see, heaven will be so large that if one wants an entire room to himself or herself, it can be afforded.

An ingenious statistician, taking the statement made in Revelation, twenty-first chapter, that the heavenly Jerusalem was measured and found to be twelve thousand furlongs, and that the length and height and breadth of it are equal, says that would make heaven in size 948 sextillion, 988 quintillion cubic feet; and then reserving a certain portion for the court of heaven and the streets, and estimating that the world may last a hundred thousand years, he ciphers out that there are over five trillion rooms, each room seventeen feet long, sixteen feet wide, fifteen feet high. But I have no faith in the accuracy of that calculation. He makes the rooms too small. From all I can read, the rooms will be palatial, and those who have not had enough room in this world will have plenty of room at the last. The fact is, that most people in this world are crowded, and though out on a vast prairie or in a mountain district people may have more room than they want, in most cases it is house built close to house, and the streets are crowded, and the cradle is crowded by other cradles, and the graves crowded in the cemetery by other graves, and one of the richest luxuries of many people in getting out of this world will be the gaining of unhindered and uncramped room. And I should not wonder if, instead of the room that the statistician ciphered out as only seventeen feet by sixteen, it should be larger than any of the rooms at Berlin, St. James, or Winter Palace. "In my Father's house are many rooms."

Carrying out still further the symbolism of the text, let us join hands and go up to this majestic homestead and see for ourselves. As we ascend the golden steps an invisible guardsman swings open the front door, and we are ushered to the right into the reception-room of the old homestead. That is the place where we first meet the welcome of heaven. There must be a place where the departed spirit enters and a place in which it confronts the inhabitants celestial. The reception-room of the newly arrived from this world—what scenes it must have witnessed since the first guest arrived, the victim of the first fratricide, pious Abel! In that room Christ lovingly greets all new-comers. He redeemed them, and he has the right to the first embrace on arrival. What a minute when the ascended spirit first sees the Lord! Better than all we ever read about him, or talked about him, or sang about him in all the churches and through all our earthly lifetime, will it be, just for one second to see him. The most rapturous idea we ever had of him on sacramental days or at the height of some great revival, or under the uplifted baton of an oratorio are a bankruptcy of thought compared with the first flash of his appearance in that reception-room. At that moment when you confront each other, Christ looking upon you, and you looking upon Christ, there will be an ecstatic thrill and surging of emotion that beggars all description. Look! They need no introduction. Long ago Christ chose that repentant sinner, and that repentant sinner chose Christ. Mightiest moment of an immortal history—the first kiss of heaven! Jesus and the soul. The soul and Jesus.

But now into that reception-room pour the glorified kinsfolk. Enough of earthly retention to let you know them, but without their wounds or their sicknesses or their troubles. See what heaven has done for them! So radiant, so gleeful, so transportingly lovely! They call you by name; they greet you with an ardor proportioned to the anguish of your parting and the length of your separation. Father! Mother! There is your child. Sisters! Brothers! Friends! I wish you joy. For years apart, together again in the reception-room of the old homestead. You see, they will know you are coming. There are so many immortals filling all the spaces between here and heaven that news like that flies like lightning. They will be there in an instant, though they were in some other world on errand from God, a signal would be thrown that would fetch them. Though you might at first feel dazed and overawed at their supernal splendor, all that feeling will be gone at their first touch of heavenly salutation, and we will say: "Oh, my lost boy!" "Oh, my lost companion!" "Oh, my lost friend, are we here together?" What scenes in that reception-room of the old homestead have been witnessed! There met Joseph and Jacob, finding it a brighter room than anything they saw in Pharaoh's palace, David and the little child for whom he once fasted and wept; Mary and Lazarus after the heartbreak of Bethany; Timothy and grandmother Lois; Isabella Graham and her sailor son; Alfred and George Cookman, the mystery of the sea at last made manifest; Luther and Magdalene, the daughter he bemoaned; John Howard and the prisoners whom he gospelized; and multitudes without number who, once so weary and so sad, parted on earth but gloriously met in heaven. Among all the rooms of that house there is no one that more enraptures my soul than that reception-room. "In my Father's house are many rooms."

Another room in our Father's house is the throne room. We belong to the royal family. The blood of King Jesus flows in our veins, so we have a right to enter the throne room. It is no easy thing on earth to get through even the outside door of a king's residence. During the Franco-German war, one eventide in the summer of 1870, I stood studying the exquisite sculpturing of the gate of the Tuileries, Paris. Lost in admiration of the wonderful art of that gate, I knew not that I was exciting suspicion. Lowering my eyes to the crowds of people, I found myself being closely inspected by the governmental officials, who, from my complexion, judged me to be a German, and that for some belligerent purpose I might be examining the gates of the palace. My explanation in very poor French did not satisfy them, and they followed me long distances until I reached my hotel, and were not satisfied until from my landlord they found that I was only an inoffensive American. The gates of earthly palaces are carefully guarded, and, if so, how much more the throne room! A dazzling place is it for mirrors and all costly art. No one who ever saw the throne room of the first and only Napoleon will ever forget the letter N embroidered in purple and gold on the upholstery of chair and window, the letter N gilded on the wall, the letter N chased on the chalices, the letter N flaming from the ceiling. What a conflagration of brilliance the throne room of Charles Immanuel of Sardinia, of Ferdinand of Spain, of Elizabeth of England, of Boniface of Italy! But the throne room of our Father's house hath a glory eclipsing all the throne rooms that ever saw sceptre wave, or crown glitter, or foreign ambassador bow, for our Father's throne is a throne of grace, a throne of mercy, a throne of holiness, a throne of justice, a throne of universal dominion. We need not stand shivering and cowering before it, for our Father says we may yet one day come up and sit on it beside him. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne." You see we are princes and princesses. Perhaps now we move about incognito, as Peter the Great in the garb of a ship carpenter at Amsterdam, or as Queen Tirzah in the dress of a peasant woman seeking the prophet for her child's cure; but it will be found out after awhile who we are when we get into the throne room. Aye! we need not wait until then. We may by prayer and song and spiritual uplifting this moment enter the throne room. O king, live forever! We touch the sceptre and prostrate ourselves at thy feet.

The crowns of the royal family of this world are tossed about from generation to generation, and from family to family. There are men comparatively young in Berlin who have seen the crown on three emperors. But wherever the coronets of this world rise or fall, they are destined to meet in one place. And I look and see them coming from north and south and east and west, the Spanish crown, the Italian crown, the English crown, the Turkish crown, the Russian crown, the Persian crown, aye, all the crowns from [illegible] while I watch and wonder, they are all flung in rain of diamonds around the pierced feet.

[illegible]

Oh that throne room of Christ! "In my Father's house are many rooms."

Another room in our Father's house is the music room. St. John and other [illegible] music of heaven that there must be music there, perhaps not such as on earth was thrummed from trembling string or evoked by touch of ivory key, but if not that, then something better. There are so many Christian harpists and Christian composers and Christian organists and Christian choristers and Christian hymnologists that have gone up from earth, there must be for them some place of especial delectation. Shall we have music in this world of discords, and no music in the land of complete harmony? I cannot give you the notes of the first bar of the new song that is sung in heaven. I cannot imagine either the solo or the doxology. But heaven means music, and can mean nothing else. Occasionally that music has escaped the gate. Dr. Fuller, dying at Beaufort, S. C., said "Do you not hear?" "Hear what?" exclaimed the bystanders. "The music! Lift me up! Open the windows?" In that music room of our Father's house, you will some day meet the old masters, Mozart and Handel and Mendelssohn and Beethoven and Doddridge, whose sacred poetry was as remarkable as his sacred prose; and James Montgomery, and William Cowper, at last got rid of his spiritual melancholy; and Bishop Heber, who sang of "Greenland's icy mountains and India's coral strand"; and Dr. Raffles, who wrote of "High in yonder realms of light:" and Isaac Watts, who went to visit Sir Thomas Abney and wife for a week, but proved himself so agreeable a guest that they made him stay thirty-six years; and side by side Augustus Toplady, who has got over his dislike for Methodists, and Charles Wesley, freed from his dislike for Calvinists; and George W. Bethune, as sweet as a song maker as he was great as a preacher and the author of The Village Hymns; and many who wrote in verse or song, in church or by eventide cradle; and many who were passionately fond of music but could make none themselves. The poorest singer there more than any earthly prima donna, and the poorest players there more than any earthly Gottschalk. Oh, that music room, the headquarters of cadence and rhythm, symphony and chant, psalm and antiphon! May we be there some hour when Haydn sits at the keys of one of his own oratorios, and David the psalmist's fingers the harp, and Miriam of the Red Sea banks claps the cymbals, and Gabriel puts his lips to the trumpet and the four and twenty elders chant, and Lind and Parepa render matchless duet in the music room of the old heavenly homestead. "In my Father's house are many rooms."

Another room in our Father's house will be the family room. It may correspond somewhat with the family room on earth. At morning and evening, you know, that is the place we now meet. Though every member of the household have a separate room, in the family room they all gather, and joys and sorrows and experiences of all styles are there rehearsed. Sacred room in all our dwellings! whether it be luxurious with ottomans and divans, and books in Russian lids standing in mahogany case, or there be only a few plain chairs and a cradle. So the family room on high will be the place where the kins-folk assemble and talk over the family experiences of earth, the weddings, the births, the burials, the festal days of Christmas and Thanksgiving reunion. Will the children departed remain children there? Will the aged remain aged there? Oh no: everything is perfect there. The child will go ahead to glorified maturity, and the aged will go back to glorified maturity. The rising sun of the one will rise to meridian, and the descending sun of the other will return to meridian. However much we love our children on earth we would consider it a domestic disaster if they stayed children, and so we rejoice at their growth here. And when we meet in the family room of our Father's house, we will be glad that they have grandly and gloriously matured; while our parents, who were aged and infirm here, we shall be glad to find restored to the most agile and vigorous immortality there. If forty or forty-five or fifty years be the apex of physical and mental life on earth, then the heavenly childhood will advance to that, and the heavenly old age will retreat to that. When we join them in that family room we shall have much to tell them. We shall want to know of them, right away, such things as these: Did you see us in this or that or the other struggle? Did you know when we lost our property, and sympathize with us? Did you know we had that awful sickness? Were you hovering anywhere around us when we plunged into that memorable accident? Did you celebrate the hour of our conversion? And then, whether they know it or not, we will tell them all. But they will have more to tell us than we to tell them. Ten years on earth may be very eventful, but what must be the biography of ten years in heaven? If in that family room of our Father's house we have so much to tell them of what we have passed through since we parted, how much more thrilling and arousing that which they have to tell us of what they have passed through since we parted. Surely that family room will be one of the most favored rooms in all our Father's house. What long lingering there, for we shall never again be in a hurry! "Let me open a window," said an humble Christian servant to Lady Raffles, who, because of the death of her child, had shut herself up in a dark room, and refused to see anyone. "You have been many days in this dark room. Are you not ashamed to grieve in this manner, when you ought to be thanking God for having given you the most beautiful child that ever was seen, and instead of leaving him in this world till he should be worn with trouble, has not God taken him to heaven in all his beauty! Leave off weeping, and let me open a window." So to-day I am trying to open upon the darkness of earthly separation the windows and doors and rooms of the heavenly homestead. "In my Father's house are many rooms."

How would it do for my sermon to leave you in that family room to-day? I am sure there is no room in which you would rather stay than in the enraptured circle of your ascended and glorified kinsfolk. We might visit other rooms in our Father's house. There may be picture-galleries penciled not with earthly art but by some process unknown in this world, preserving for the next world the brightest and most stupendous scenes of human history. And there may be lines and forms of earthly beauty preserved for heavenly inspection in something whiter, and chaster, and richer than Venetian sculpture ever wrought. Rooms beside rooms. Rooms over rooms. Large rooms, majestic rooms, opalescent rooms, amethystine rooms. "In my Father's house are many rooms."

I hope none of us will be disappointed about getting there. There is a room for us, if we will go and take it, but in order to reach it, it is absolutely necessary that we take the right way, and Christ is the way; and we must enter at the right door, and Christ is the door; and we must start in time, and the only hour you are sure of is the hour the clock now strikes, and the only second the one your watch is now ticking. I hold in my hand a roll of letters inviting you all to make that your home forever. The New Testament is only a roll of letters inviting you, as the spirit of them practically says: "My dying, yet immortal, child in earthly neighborhood, I have built for you a great residence. It is full of rooms. I have furnished them as no palace was ever furnished. Pearls are nothing, emeralds are nothing, chrysoprasus is nothing, illumined panels of sunrise and sunset nothing, the aurora of the northern heavens nothing, compared with the splendor with which I have garnitured them. But you must be clean before you can enter there, and so I have opened a fountain where you may wash all your sins away. Come now! Put your weary but cleansed feet on the upward pathway. Do you not see amid the thick foliage on the heavenly hilltops the old family homestead?"

"In my father's house are many rooms."

A Real "Old Folks' Day"

Vineland, N. J., Holds a Unique Celebration—Aged Christians Honored

OCCASIONALLY the public hears of gatherings of old folks, where the total number does not exceed a dozen persons, who have passed the seventieth mile stone, but a gathering of over seventy men and women who fulfill these conditions is exceedingly rare. Such an affair recently took place at the First Presbyterian Church, of Vineland, N. J.

Sometime ago, Rev. David H. King, the pastor, suggested to lay aside a day for special services, to be called "Old Folks' Day." When the services opened, Dr. King addressed over four hundred people over fifty years old, among them being sixty-three septuagenarians, twenty-two octogenarians and one centenarian.

Prizes were awarded to the three eldest, and souvenirs to such others as fulfilled the conditions, which governed the services in respect to age. Seats for those advanced in life were reserved near the pulpit. As each septuagenarian reached the church, he or she was assisted to her place. They came in twos and threes and in groups of half dozens or more; some in carriages, some afoot; some in invalid chairs, others on crutches. The body of the church soon began to fill. Friends and relations of the aged participants gathered in great numbers. The aisles were soon crowded with chairs, and the whole building was packed.

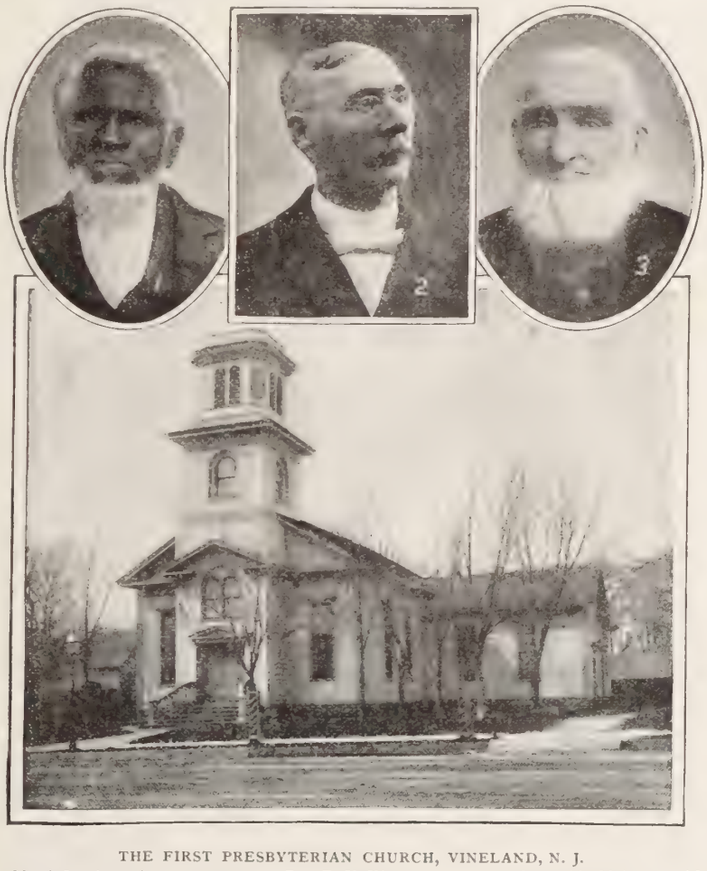
The services opened with the hymn, "How Firm a Foundation," followed by the reading of the Scriptures, after which Rev. George A. Hubble, seventy-five years old, led in prayer. He was followed by the Rev. O. O. Campbell, an octogenarian, who sang a solo which was greatly appreciated. Dr. King then preached a short sermon, taking for his text the seventeenth and eighteenth verses of the seventy-first Psalm.

The old folks were visibly affected as the speaker dwelt on childhood days. The pastor closed with a fervent appeal to all to be ready for the Master when he should call. At the conclusion of the sermon, "Psalms of Victory" was sung, the old folks all joining in the chorus. Then followed the distribution of the prizes. March Lamb, a colored resident of 102 years, proudly bore off the first, and James MacMahon, aged 89, took second. Third honors were won by Mrs. James Hay Bell, aged 89.

March Lamb, the oldest of all, ascribed his long life to total abstinence from whiskey and tobacco and to walking constantly in the fear of the Lord. He was born a slave on the plantation of Joseph Walston, at Elizabeth City, N. C. At the age of 15 he was thrilled by the preparation of the War of 1812, and ran away to enlist, but was captured and brought back by his master. When the troops left for the Mexican War he was again disappointed in his efforts to enlist. When the fight for freedom of his race was inaugurated he joined the Union Army and fought bravely under General Reynolds.

Mr. MacMahon, the second prize-winner, is 89 years and 8 months old, was born in Northumberland County, Pa., and belongs to the same family as did former President of France, Marshal MacMahon. The third, Mrs. Jane Hay Bell, was born in Scotland and came to Vineland in 1866. She is the mother of ten children. The other octogenarians were: Martha Pancoast, 88; S. B. Clough, 87; Margaret White, 82; Sarah Roselle, 82; Mrs. Barnet, 80; Ella Bartram, 83; J. S. Sanborn, 80; S. C. Robbins, 82; Herman Everett, 85; A. R. Byram, 88; W. A. Jolly, 91; James Fuarey, 81; Esther Hargis, 80; Hannah Marston, 84; Sarah J. Ruddell, 81; Portia Gage, 86; and Kelsia J. Worden, 87.

So great was the success of the old folks' day that hereafter it will be celebrated as an annual event. The Rev. Dr. King has occupied his present charge for the past twelve years, coming here from Lonacoming, Maryland, in 1887. His first pastoral work was done in Punxsatawney, from 1874 to 1880.



THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, VINELAND, N. J.

1 March Lamb, aged 102 2. Rev. D. H. King 3. James MacMahon, aged 89

The Home Sunshine Calendar For 1900

FREE FOR YOU!

FOR the encouragement of prompt renewals, we have had prepared for our own use exclusively, one hundred thousand Home Sunshine Calendars for 1900.

These Calendars consist of Six Artistic, Egg-Shelled Cards, each 10x12 inches (nearly as large as a full CHRISTIAN HERALD page), each of the Six Cards representing two Months and Containing a beautiful picture lithographed in Twelve Colors, and the six different designs neatly gathered and tied with a dainty ribbon. It makes the prettiest, sweetest and most attractive Wall Ornament conceivable. It is an Ideal Christmas Present.

Each of these six cards has a Chronology of the 19th Century for the two months which it represents printed on the reverse, and over 3,000 events are recorded.

We have expended many thousands of dollars on this enterprise, and now we shall give these lovely Calendars away to the wide-awake people who send in their renewals or New Subscriptions during the present month.

You lose nothing by so doing, for if you renew before your time is up the date on the tab of your wrapper is advanced a whole year—not from the time of your renewal, but from the date on which it would expire. For instance, if your subscription runs out Jan. 1, 1900, and you send your renewal NOW, your subscription will be extended to Jan. 1, 1901, just as though you had waited until the last moment.

Our mail in December is often over ten thousand letters a day, and rushed work is never quite so accurately done as it should be; and to avoid the necessity for rush work, we hold out to our friends these beautiful and costly calendars as an inducement to help us and to help themselves by starting in early and sending their subscriptions in November.

Please do not lose sight of this fact: We cannot give Calendars for subscription postmarked after November 30, and we cannot afford to send more than the one hundred thousand now made up. It seems an enormous quantity, but when you consider that there will be about three hundred thousand renewals, you will readily perceive that to make absolutely sure of one you must act promptly.

You will find these lovely Calendars as beautiful as any you ever saw—twelve rich colors on each of the six superb and perfectly charming pictures. Each parcel is carefully done up, so that it will not suffer damage in the mails, and is delivered to you free, just because you were prompt.

Every year we are compelled to disappoint friends who put off ordering some premium they very much desire until the stock is exhausted, and when we refund their money expressing our regrets that we cannot supply the required article, they usually order some other premium, but beg us if at all possible to secure a copy of their first choice. And we do try very hard to please them, but, of course, we cannot supply what we have not got.

Now, about new subscribers. They get the paper free from date to the end of this year, and if the subscription is mailed before November 30 they also will receive a calendar—if any are left.

No calendars sold and no calendars given away to anybody, except as above. Every one of these beautiful calendars is reserved exclusively for "Christian Herald" subscribers.

As these calendars are a gift of the proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD to wide-awake, prompt subscribers, they do not affect your right to take the fullest advantage of our wonderful Premium Offers published elsewhere.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Public Reading of Scriptures

S. S. Lesson for Nov. 12. Neh. 8: 1-12

Golden Text, Neh. 8: 3

BY MRS. M. BAXTER

THE Persian king, Artaxerxes, as we have already seen, had been much impressed by Ezra, "the scribe of the law of the God of heaven" (Ezra 7: 12), and had charged him to "teach him that knoweth them not" "the laws of thy God." For he knew that Ezra had "set his heart to seek the law of the Lord, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments" (Ezra 7: 25, 10). This Ezra had surely done, both personally and through the "teachers" whom he had brought with him from Babylon. Meanwhile, in spite of all the opposition of their enemies, the wall of Jerusalem was completed by the returned exiles, and the mission of Nehemiah, for which the king had given him leave of absence, was drawing to a close. The time of the feast of tabernacles was at hand—the feast of the seventh month. The beginning of the revival of Ezra and Nehemiah had been in the seventh month, when Jeshua and Zerubbabel had rebuilt the altar, and offered burnt offerings (Ezra 3: 1-6); and now the completion of this external work should be celebrated also in conjunction with the feast of tabernacles.

The teaching of Ezra and his helpers was beginning to bear fruit. "When the seventh month was come, the children of Israel were in their cities, and all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was before the water gate; and they spake unto Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord had commanded to Israel." The love of the Scriptures was in the hearts of the people. Ezra had not now to overcome the indifference and ignorance of the people about the Scriptures. Oh, the joy that it must have been to Ezra and Nehemiah when they saw that the Word of God was precious to the people, and that they valued it thus! Any awakening in which the Word of God does not take a prominent place is void of the elements of duration: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my Word shall not pass away." Eloquence may accomplish great triumphs for an hour, and stir up strongly the emotions of men, but such impressions as it produces have no durability. "Prophecies" and "knowledge," even theological knowledge, must be "done away"; and "tongues" "shall cease," "but the Word of the Lord abideth forever." The Word of the Lord is "able" to make "wise unto salvation"; it is the "sword of the Spirit," with which alone the tempter can be vanquished, even by the Christ of God.

There is, thank God, in these days in which we are living, in the midst of all the pervading sin, and the departing fear of, and reverence for, God, a little flock which are intent upon studying the Scriptures. The Bible schools, in this time, are a precious indication of a deep, solid awakening to their "high calling" among the true children of the living God. He has here and there raised up, not scribes of the law, but teachers of the Gospel, and especially of that which Paul calls "my Gospel," which was not taught him by man, but by "revelation of Jesus Christ," and which is distinct from "the Gospel" of I. Corinthians 15: 1-4, and which he "also received." Paul's Gospel was "the mystery which hath been kept in silence through times eternal." The mystery of the Church, Christ in you, partakership of the Divine nature, not of the world, such is Paul's Gospel, and such is being shown in the Scriptures to-day.

"Ezra the priest brought the law before the congregation, both men and women, and all that could hear with understanding (all the children who were sufficiently advanced) upon the first day of the seventh month." It was an open-air gathering, in "the broad place that was before the water-gate," and it was a prolonged sitting from daybreak till noon, at least six hours, the people sitting, probably on the ground, through all those hours. A spirit of hearing was upon the people: they could not, as we can now, each have his or her own Bible in hand. Printing had not been invented till long after, and the roll of the book was all in manuscript and very bulky and costly; but "the ears of the people were unto the book of the law." They had begun to find out what a treasure they had, in that "to them was committed the oracles of God."

The meeting commenced with the opening of the book, and, in token of respect, the whole audience arose; God was to speak to them. Before venturing to read his word, Ezra "blessed the Lord, the great God. And all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with the lifting up of their hands; and they bowed their heads, and worshiped the Lord with their faces to the ground." But the teachers and Levites must have catechised the people after the reading; they "caused the people to understand the law." The Word of God was not to go in at one ear and out at the other: they must take it in, and know their responsibility towards it. God has never made known his truth to man that it may be to him simply a matter of learning just like any human knowledge, and remain only in the understanding. While we have the light we are to believe in the light, that we may be sons of light.

There was no going in and out of this gathering: "the people stood [or remained] in their place," rivetted to the spot through reverence for God, and through the interest they had in his Word. "And they read in the book, in the law of God, distinctly, and they gave the sense, so that they understood the reading." This is the essence of true preaching: it is not a discourse for which a text is chosen haphazard to suit the thoughts of some preacher.

The word itself did its work: it went home to the people: it always will when those who read it believe and understand it themselves. The people yielded before the Word of God: "all the people wept when they heard the words of the law:" they knew that they had come short, terribly short, of the requirements of a holy God. But Nehemiah, Ezra, and the Levites said to them: "This day is holy unto the Lord your God; mourn not, nor weep." And they encouraged them to keep the day as a feast. "Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions unto him for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy unto the Lord. Neither be ye grieved, for the joy of the Lord is your strength." True, indeed, they were faulty, but the grace of God which had delivered them from captivity, restored them to their own land, rebuilt their temple, accepted their offerings, and led them to love his long-neglected Word, must not be ignored. A holy day is a day on which we appreciate God, and therefore praise him. There is more real holiness in a praising spirit which rejoices in God always, than in one which is always mourning over failures; in the former case the eye is on God, and his grace, which delivers us from sin; in the latter, on ourselves and our unworthiness. In this latter there is not profit to man and no glory to God.

PULPIT STILL STANDING ON THE SITE OF THE TEMPLE IN JERUSALEM

Lesson Points

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers

WHEN the walls of the city were finished, there would naturally be a meeting to rejoice over the completion of the stupendous work. Nehemiah having foreseen this, seems to have sent for Ezra, who was in retirement in Babylon or elsewhere, disappointed and dispirited over the failure of his reforming work. Nehemiah, more a man of affairs than Ezra, perceived that this was a more appropriate time than any that had preceded it for a reformation. The people were elated over the restored defenses, a new feeling of security was prevalent, and they were in the mood to listen to the teaching of their duty. So Ezra comes and brings the sacred scroll containing the law. We judge from the character of the passages read and the effects on the people that this scroll contained the first five books of the Bible as we have them. Ezra read the law to the people, but it was necessary to have men go among them to explain the passages read. This fact and their grief at finding how, unconsciously, they had disobeyed the law, show that they were quite unfamiliar with it. Indeed, they do not appear to have known of its existence. Perhaps it had been in a fragmentary condition, and was now for the first time codified and put in regular order by Ezra. There are indications in some of the earlier books of editorial work which bears a striking resemblance to the literary style of the hand which produced the Chronicles and the book of Ezra. In any case, it is evident that these people gathered together in the open square by the water gate now learned for the first time the provisions of the law and the penalties for its transgression. Their distress when they heard them was deep and sincere. But Nehemiah and Ezra did not wish the people to expend their emotions in idle grief. They reminded them that this was a time of feasting and holiday-making, and bade them dry their tears and enjoy themselves. Afterwards the popular sorrow was turned to practical account by getting their sig-

[illegible] pledged them to a reformation of life. The advantage of this course is obvious. [illegible] change of conduct and a resolve to serve God in the future.

To bring the book of the law. It was [illegible] hear what their duty was. It was an intimation that when they knew it, they would obey. Mr. J. R. Green, the historian, says that the change in the character of the English nation dating from the middle of Elizabeth's reign, was essentially a moral change. The nation became new, an entirely different kind of people. [illegible] ing. The literary and social effects were remarkable, but they were nothing in comparison with the moral effects. A new conception of duty, a new estimate of right and wrong, a sense of justice and right spread through every class. From that time forward men felt their responsibility and when the crisis came in the time of Charles I., Cromwell's Ironsides showed what conscience could do.

Both men and women. This marked a transition in the Jewish life. Before this, women had been regarded as subject creatures who were expected to obey their husbands and to have no share in religious life. Now the book of the law was read to them, too. Libanius, the ancient rhetorician, exclaimed in astonishment, "What women these Christians have!" His surprise was called forth by the conduct of Anthusa, who, left a widow with one son refused the offers of marriage that her charms and wealth attracted and devoted her life to the education of her son Chrysostom. The sacrifice was well repaid in the eminence he attained. In treating woman as the equal of man and giving her the advantages of education the church has learned that she is capable of great things and of angelic service. But it is to the Bible alone that she owes the opportunity; no other religion has placed it within her reach.

Mourn not nor weep. A well-known writer tells the story of a child who wilfully broke a vase which had been his mother's treasured possession since her girlhood. Her sisters were visiting the house at the time, and the boy's conduct was discussed among them that night. They arrived at the conclusion that the child ought to be severely beaten, to teach him the evil of mischievous propensities. One sister said: "He should be whipped until he cries and cries bitterly, otherwise he will go on breaking things." The father was told the decision of the family council, but he did not agree with it. He took his boy aside the next morning and said: "Poor mamma! She is grieving about her broken vase. Let us go around to the store and see if we can get her another." The boy, who really regretted his act, was glad of the proposal. Father and son went to the store together and they fixed on a vase that was as near like the broken one as they could find. But the price was high and the father said he could not afford it. The boy was very sorrowful, but he slipped away to his home and presently returned with his most treasured toy, an expensive gift of some friend of the family, which he valued above all his boyish possessions. "Papa," he said, "we will sell this and then we can buy mamma her vase." "Are you really willing to let this go, my son?" The boy said, "Oh, yes: you know papa I broke the vase and I want her to know I am sorry." The boy was clasped in his father's arms. He had learned more than he knew.

Nehemiah, who is the Tirshatha. That is, the Governor appointed by the king. He was concerned for the moral welfare of the people, and it seems to have been he who arranged this meeting. One of the greatest statesmen of our time said that if all existing laws were abrogated, and all parliaments, legislatures and congresses abolished, and every judge and President, and person in authority were relegated to private life, he would not be afraid to live in such a society, if every man and woman would read the Bible and promise to be guided by its rules. There would be anarchy for a time, but no one would suffer wrong, and in the end there would be stable and just government. There is no security for person and property so reliable as a properly educated conscience intent on pleasing God.

Rescuing the Fallen Ones

"Applied Christianity" as Illustrated in the Work of the Boston Industrial Home—A Helping Hand for the Criminal and the Despairing

ONLY a short trolley ride from Tremont Temple, Boston, one enters an institution that is practically solving, for many at least, the question of practical Christian philanthropy. It is the Boston Industrial School, where only those who show a disposition to industry are welcomed or allowed to remain. No matter how badly broken in health, morals or spirit a man may be, he is never turned away from its doors if he only shows a desire to be industrious and to better himself. The man who has broken down through dissipation or who is fresh from the prisons, there finds a welcome and a chance to work his way to better things. For a number of years the Boston Industrial Home has provided a refuge for homeless men and women, but in a way to continually foster their independence and self-respect. It is an unsectarian institution, thoroughly evangelical in its religious work. Gospel meetings are announced on the bulletin boards in front of the chapel for Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings, and a noon prayer meeting, family prayer and song service on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. Concerts and entertainments are given once a week.

CHOPPING THE KINDLINGS

The moving spirit in the Home is Mr. T. D. Roberts, whose excellent qualities fit him for the work, in which he believes with all his heart. He is a native of Cornwall, England, and as a lad was apprenticed to a ship-builder, but having a natural fondness for horses, he became a professional jockey, which avocation he followed till the time of his conversion. Then he gave up the race track and its life, but not his love of horses. He felt that he had an urgent mission. He wrote to a young lady to whom he was engaged, telling her of his change of heart and purpose, and adding that they "could not be married till she was also a Christian." Her conversion soon followed. Mrs. Roberts entered with zest into the Home at its beginning, in 1888, and has since endeared herself to all by her sweetness and sincerity. Their united joy has been to see men and women reclaimed and brought back to self-respect.

Mr. O. C. Elliott, the assistant superintendent, took pains to show the writer the workings of the home. There is a comfortable chapel in which Mr. Roberts preaches the Gospel. One hundred and fifty will fill the chapel, and not only Home folks, but people in the neighborhood attend. Not far off is heard the buzz of the saws in the wood and kindling department. The support of the Home depends largely on the selling of kindling and coal. Two wheelbarrows full make a task, and pay for a meal or a night's lodging. The bathrooms are fitted up with porcelain tubs and supplied with towels and nightgowns, for the Home directors believe that cleanliness is next to godliness and therefore everything is very neat and tidy.

When a man comes in late at night, though very poor, he is not turned away, but is welcomed and taken to the bath where he has a thorough cleansing. His clothes are hung in a steam chest in the fumigating room. He is given a night gown provided by the Home, and taken to the dormitory. The sleeping rooms are the pink of neatness. A hundred men are provided with beds each night.

In the reading-room, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and other papers lie on the tables for the use of the inmates. In the dining-hall also, care and cleanliness are everywhere apparent.

The Women's Department is separate, but is conducted with equal care and thoroughness, being provided with spacious and well lighted reading-room, sewing-room, bathing and washing facilities and a free employment bureau. Thirty women can be accommodated and many a prodigal has been rescued from a life of sin, and taught "the better way." Girls dismissed in court or having been in prison are welcomed here and kept till homes can be found for them.

Last year the Home sheltered 534 men and 383 women, most of whom had been discharged from penal institutions, a fact not generally known. There is no difference shown them. The past is buried and the aim of the Home is to build up new life and character. Many young men and women who have led sinful lives have been helped and sent back to their homes. Several hundreds signed the temperance pledge last year and began to lead sober and industrious lives through the influence of the Home.

The work has out-grown its accommodations and additional rooms and endowments are needed. "The Industrial Home," remarked a visitor to the place, "fights three great enemies of the race—dirt, debt and the devil. It makes the victim clean, develops the spirit of independent manhood, and brings Christian influences to bear upon all. Men are taken from the gutter to the bath tub, to the workshop, to the chapel and to God. It is a place where their interests for both worlds are looked after."

IN THE INDUSTRIAL HOME READING-ROOM

"It is just the kind of help that many need in their struggle for getting on in the world," said Mr. Elliott, the assistant superintendent. This is borne out by many of the testimonies. "I had forfeited the respect and confidence of friends and relatives by my disgraceful drunkenness," said one man. "To-day, by the grace of God, I am a sober, Christian man, holding a position of trust and responsibility, and having the confidence of my employer. Thank God for the Industrial Home and for the helping influences of those sturdy young Christians known as the Home Rescue Band.

T. D. ROBERTS Superintendent MRS. ROBERTS O. C. ELLIOTT Assistant Superintendent

The evangelical ministers of Boston endorse the work cordially, and many of them are in close touch with it, some being among its officers. The late Rev. A. J. Gordon was a former president, and rejoiced in its uplifting of men to higher and better life.

Mr. Roberts, the superintendent, aided in founding the Calvary Industrial Home, New Haven, Conn.; the Mill Workers Rescue Mission, Omaha; Industrial Homes in San Francisco and Salt Lake City; and also the "Welcome Home" in Albany, N. Y. He has had a rich and varied experience in humanitarian and soul-winning work, and the staff with which he has surrounded himself are all zealous and consecrated men, devoted to the welfare of the unfortunate class among whom they are laboring. Mr. Roberts has the warm cooperation of pastors of all denominations, and while he aims that the Home shall be self-supporting, he trusts that God's people will not fail him in the present effort to increase its usefulness by helping to win back to society and morality more men and women, instead of permitting them to sink deeper and still deeper into the mire.

Mr. Roberts is deserving of all the aid that Christian men and women can render. W. J. P.

EXTERIOR OF THE HOME

Lincoln Memorial University

GEN. O. O. HOWARD, the gallant Christian hero, who is working heroically for the success of the Lincoln Memorial University project, writes us as follows:

Through your subscribers and contributors I have received toward our great enterprise at Cumberland Gap, which we love to call "Lincoln Memorial," several generous amounts. The first instalment, coming in small sums, amounted to $110.00; the second instalment, $15.00; the third instalment, $29.10, the fourth instalment $4.00 and the fifth, sent in by your own special generosity as an advance, $100.00. The total paid is $258.10. Doubtless many other small sums have been sent me more directly in consequence of the publication in your valuable paper. Our group of schools are in good condition and last year showed on the rolls about two hundred and thirty pupils. We furnished work for the boys, that is, for many of them, on the farm, which, you will remember, embraces some five hundred acres of good land, a large proportion being under cultivation; also in making and preparing roads, policing grounds, putting up fences, etc. Other industries are being organized this term for the young men.

The girls have also had work more or less extended which can now be further systematized as our means to effect this come in. It costs about $500.00 a month, over and above what we bring in by the farm and by tuition, to run the institution. We have seven regular teachers and a secretary and treasurer to pay besides a few other essential employees. As you will remember, the grand plant of the University had mortgages which, interest included, with other dues, was in the neighborhood of $15,000. Since that statement we have been able to reduce our indebtedness to a sum inside of $5,000. This sum comes due the 23d of November next. I have secured subscriptions enough to cover this amount, and other subscriptions, contingent upon the whole indebtedness being paid, but several of the largest subscribers asked us to postpone their payments, and one or two are unable to pay, so that I beg of you and through you of your generous patrons and subscribers to come to our rescue. I feel sure I can secure beyond the present plant a good endowment the moment our mortgages are fully paid, because large donors insist on this condition. They say: "We shall be sure of your success when your plant is clear of all indebtedness." Now, as this is in my judgment the last work of my life, I ask my Christian friends whom you reach to send me the means which are so immediately and so imperatively needed. It being a great undertaking in behalf of mountain boys and girls, I ask it in the name of the great Master whom we love and serve.

Sincerely yours,

O. O. HOWARD,
Major-General U. S. Army (Retired);
Managing-Director L. M. U.

CHRISTIAN HERALD readers are already familiar with Gen. Howard's noble work in aid of the Lincoln Memorial University. It is a project that is greatly needed, and which cannot fail to be of far-reaching benefit. Any contributions sent to us for the Memorial University will be acknowledged in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and duly forwarded to General Howard.

The Criminal Side of Life in Our Great Cities

Scenes and Incidents in Metropolitan Police Stations and Behind the Bars in our Great Prisons

A POLICE PATROL WAGON

POLICE HEADQUARTERS, MULBERRY ST.—THE "MARBLE PALACE"

THE "BRIDGE OF SIGHS"

LITTLE is known among honest and God-fearing people at large of that darker side of existence, common to all great cities, which connects the lives of erring men and women—and, alas! of children, also—with criminal courts and prison cells. Upon officers of the law, station-house matrons, rescue workers and prison missionaries alone devolves sad and intimate acquaintance with the processes by which our fellow-beings, who have become a menace to the public, are made its charges, whether they will or no. As in essentials the police and prison system of great cities is practically the same, a sketch of that of the Metropolis of the New World will give some idea of all.

The largest percentage of crimes and misdemeanors occur at night, when drunkards, gamblers, thieves and pickpockets—the unhappy and the evil members of society who sleep by day and wake by night—are abroad, crazed with rum or intent on prey; and it is the night platoons of police who turn out from the various precincts to patrol the city from six P. M. till midnight and from midnight till six in the morning who make most arrests; and it is between these hours that the police patrol wagons are in greatest requisition for the conveyance of offenders who are unable, or violently unwilling, to make the journey afoot under the arresting officer's escort. Prisoners are carried to the various precincts in which the offence occurs, held there over night, and arraigned the following morning in the nearest magistrate's court in that judicial district; and are dismissed, bailed, fined, or committed for short terms of imprisonment in some of the city's institutions on Blackwell's Island, at his discretion, in such cases as are simply made-out for drunkenness or disorderly conduct. If held by the magistrate for more serious crime, prisoners are transferred to the Tombs, there to await the action of the various branches of the higher courts (the Grand Jury, Special and General Sessions), according to the grade of the crime charged. Along the "Bridge of Sighs," which connects the Criminal Court and the Prison, the prisoner goes to trial. If convicted, he is transferred from the Tombs prison to some one of the many penal institutions throughout the State, there to serve out the sentence imposed by the court. Thus, every serious offender against the law is, for a time at least, a guest (albeit an unwilling one), within the "grim gray walls" of this historic prison, which has been for so many years the "criminal clearing house," so to speak, of the great Metropolis. Therefore, the records of the Tombs would be the criminological index of New York City. To Warden James J. Hagan, THE CHRISTIAN

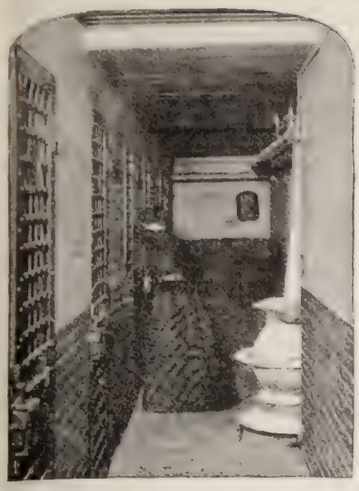
A PRISON STORE-ROOM

A CORRIDOR IN THE COURT-HOUSE PRISON, 54TH ST. AND 8TH AVE.

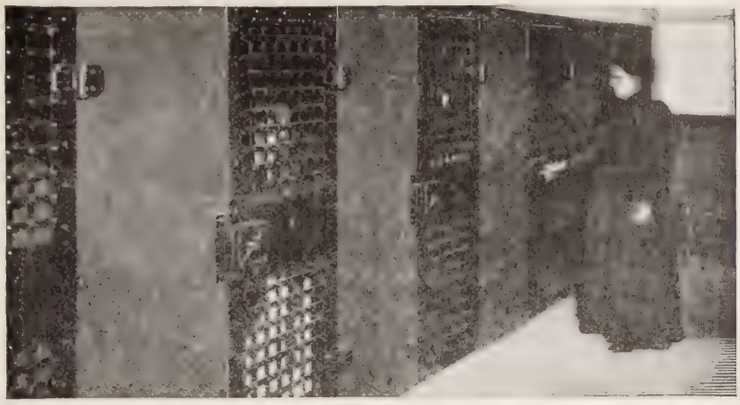
IN THE PRISON CORRIDOR

A MIDNIGHT ARREST IN TENDERLOIN PRECINCT—THE PRISONER A WOMAN

ARRAIGNED AT THE SERGEANT'S DESK IN ELDRIDGE STREET STATION



A GRIEF-STRICKEN OFFENDER



MATRON LOCKING IN THE WOMEN PRISONERS

A SEVENTEEN-YEAR-OLD CRIMINAL

HERALD is indebted for the following statistics and information supplied to its representative. The daily average of prisoners received at the Tombs from October 1898 to October 1899 was 388, the total number of prisoners for this period being 16,490, of whom 13,996 were males, 2,494 females; 7,025 of these prisoners (5,441 males, 1,584 females) were transferred to other institutions, and 9,423 were discharged. These figures show a decrease in crime of from ten to fifteen per cent. over previous years. It is to be hoped that this condition in the Metropolis is a faithful reflex of the moral status of our entire country, of which it is the representative city. In the Tombs but two prisoners have died during the past year; these were suicides; a fact which speaks well for the sanitary condition of the prison and the intelligent and kindly administration of the warden. Prison routine is as follows: Breakfast 7 to 7:30; prisoners "make up" their cells by eight; exercise of various divisions from eight to ten. At ten the warden's tour of inspection, which includes every cell, begins. Prisoners, whose rooms are tidy, are rewarded with an extra hour's exercise. "They all try to earn this reward," says the warden; "when they fail, it is usually because they do not know how to tidy a room, and under our system many prisoners show great improvement. Pathetic decorative attempts are made, and you would be surprised to see how many CHRISTIAN HERALD pictures are cut out and pasted on the walls of these cells." From 10:30 to 12, and 12:30 to 2 are hours when friends and relatives, with proper permits, may see the prisoners. Twelve is dinner hour; supper is at 4:30; all lights out by 10. There is a school-room for boy prisoners, and they also have a chapel, in which Sabbath and a number of week-day services are held by different denominations. The good work which is conducted by Tombs Chaplain Munro, and the Gospel Mission to the Tombs (organized over twenty-two years ago) is familiar to our readers. Surely such servants of the Master may hope to hear his commendation, "I was in prison and ye came unto me." Of a different but equal interest with the Tombs is Police Headquarters (the "Marble Palace" of justice, as policemen nicknamed it years ago), on Mulberry street.

THE OLD TOMBS PRISON

CORRIDOR, WOMEN'S PRISON, TOMBS

THE "BLACK MARIA" AT TOMBS ENTRANCE

A visitor to any of the prisons in our leading cities cannot fail to be deeply touched by the youth of many of the inmates, who are apparently novices in crime. Some are mere lads, who through evil companionships or the lack of Christian influences at home have been led into the paths of sin, and have begun a career whose ending will be dark indeed, unless the light of God's truth and love reaches their hearts meanwhile. In the women's prisons one sees young girls whose possible future it is difficult to contemplate without a shudder. To bring the Gospel of Jesus, with its comfort and helpfulness, to such unfortunates is the office of the prison mission worker, and there is no needier field for such work than in the prisons of New York City.

WOMEN'S PRISON, BLACKWELL'S ISLAND

FORMING LINE FOR MIDNIGHT ROLL-CALL
Typical scene in a New York Station House

MEN'S PRISON, BLACKWELL'S ISLAND

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR.

T. DeWitt Talmage
EDITOR.

F. J. FERNIE, G. B. SANDISON,
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. The subscription price is $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you send by cash.

Foreign Postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the Canadas, and Mexico, foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals. It is always best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers. We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, nor to make good omissions caused by tardy renewals.

Change of Date. It takes two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is received.

Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address. Always give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless these are done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,
Bible House, New York City.

Entered at the Post-office of New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Great Britain and the Transvaal

WE do not like to see the mother-country go to war with any country; least of all, with a Republic, trying to illustrate republicanism in South Africa. Certainly, the Boers have some admirable traits. They are brave, independent, and doubtless will fight for their territory. If Great Britain has made up her mind to absorb that country for the sake of the gold mines, it is on the principle that might makes right. Certainly, we are fighting no such battle in the Philippines. The Boers are maintaining a republican form of government, the Filipinos are rejecting the one this country offers them. If Great Britain conquers she will certainly take possession in the interest of the British Empire. Possibly this might result in a better government than the present, possibly not. Possibly the Boers would submit and accept the situation. It may be there would be a prolonged period of war, and great waste of life and money, even after a nominal conquest. The ease with which the contending parties in our Civil War laid down arms and resumed amicable relations was almost unprecedented. Could it be expected between the conquered Boers and Great Britain? But Great Britain may not conquer. She is far away from her base of supplies. In a long struggle she is not sure of the sympathies of the world. Her cause of war does not seem a perfectly clear one. Fighting may not clarify it.

Recognition of Sin in Preaching

DR. WATSON, of Birkenhead, England, a member of the Pan-Presbyterian, lately in session in Washington City, preached twice. It was edifying preaching. The style was rather after the homiletic; meditative, as against the logical. But the most striking feature of the preaching was the clear admission of the great fact of human sinfulness, and present and urgent need of a Saviour. The man's exhortations seemed to come from a sense of his own needs, and from the fact that he had experienced a supply of those needs. He besought sinners in Christ's stead to be reconciled to God. Now, if we mistake not, this is the source of true power in preaching. You may heal a man of a disease without his knowing the fact or the nature of the disease, but no sin-sick soul was ever cured without admitting the fact of his sickness, without seeking the balm of Gilead and the Physician there. And the man who preaches to men as though he had found the true remedy for sin, and commends it from his own experience, is sure to have a candid hearing.

The Beauty of the Hills

THE Psalmist says, "The strength of the hills is his also." The hills of Palestine are rugged and strong and topped with the dark green of the cedar. The hills of New England are now clothed with autumnal beauty, such as the Psalmist never dreamed of. No one who has never seen the maples and the elms and the sumach in autumnal array can understand the glory of New England hills. The brilliant colors, too, are so attempered to each other, as only a skillful artist could attemper them. Nature does it! The great artist of Nature, who makes the glory of the sunrise and the sunset, does it. We do not wonder that the Green Mountain Boys were ready to fight for the beauty of their hills. We do not wonder at the battle of Bennington.

The Whistling Yankee Boy

WE like the whistling boy. We like to fall in behind him as we go down the street. He has as many tunes as the mocking bird. If it is Monday morning, the Sunday School tunes follow him. If it is after the Dewey parade, the last thing from Sousa. It is the young folks who set the standard in music. The great composer may sigh in vain for recognition until comes the whistling boy and girl at the piano, then his success is assured. If whistling is any index, American boys are full of music. Alone as he drives the cows to pasture or rides the horses to water, or goes on errands, the boy takes up the burden of the latest air and makes his ways melodious. It is not to keep his courage up, as the old proverb implies, it is to communicate his superabundant life to others; it is to bubble over as does the fountain. And these airs go about as by some vocal infection, until every other boy has added them to his catalogue of accomplishments.

Tramps Abroad

THERE are men who try to escape their community obligations. A book has lately been published by The Century Company entitled "Tramping with Tramps." The author, just for curiosity's sake and love of sheer adventure, has tramped pretty well over South ern Europe, spent considerable time in Siberia and Central Asia, and lived two or three years among American outcasts.

A tramp is a man who is determined not to meet his social obligations. He is without employment, without citizenship, without home. God says, "Thou shalt not steal!" God says, "In the sweat of thy brow, shalt thou eat bread." God says, "He that provideth not for his own, has denied the faith, is worse than an infidel." In God's economy, there is no honest return for work without honest work. You will find the tramp class in all kinds of institutions. There are those who are a great deal more anxious as to how much money they can get in the University, than as to how they can do something for self-support. One dollar that a man earns is of great deal more value to him than ten dollars that are given. The tramp is a social shirk. He denies that he belongs to society, to community; that he owes any man anything. The debt is all to him. He leaves his wife to provide for herself, his children to the care of charity. He says he is not of the body politic, the family human, or of God, the faithful Creator.

The Boys Who Go Wrong

THE parable of "The Prodigal Son" merely as a sketch of life—apart from all religious interest—has a perrenial charm for all classes of readers. No other sinner, no other penitent, has ever come so close to the popular heart. For no other experience is so universal. It relates to millions of homes, and fathers and mothers all over Christendom read it the most touching history of their own lives. For there are comparatively few family flocks however well tended" who are without the familiar black sheep of sermon and parable of song and story.

Now, as regards the boys who go wrong, there is no doubt that a large majority are driven wrong by mismanagement, misapprehension and even by the undirected excess of good qualities, inherent in the lad himself. For this is the great mystery of life, that the good and the bad in human nature is so interwoven that wherever any good quality is in excess, it is found to involve bad consequences; thus generosity becomes extravagance, bravery fool-hardiness, carefulness grows to miserliness, courtesy to servility, etc., etc. The great point to remember is that souls are as variable as faces, no two in any family are alike; no two require, for their highest good, the self same treatment.

If a father has two sons, one may be naturally of the same disposition as the elder brother in the parable. He may enjoy his studies, enjoy saving his money, enjoy stepping from school into his father's business and be in all respects what parents call a good son. The other is perhaps a bright, eager lad who is always last in his class, who does not pass his college examination; who will not take the least interest in the family money making machine. Do what he will, the father can not make this boy after his own image.

What must he do then? Just take the boy as he is and make the best and highest of what he is, and of what he has. Say he wants adventure, let him have it in a legitimate way. Send him off to sea, or to a far country with love and blessing; and tell him you expect great things of him there, and it is very likely he will do all you expect and turn out eventually a better, a greater and a richer man than yourself. Many very fine natures have this wild tang in them, and if boys like to wander off in the woods, or into the mountains; if they like to fish and hunt, and wheel and walk and ride, they ought not be compelled to steal away to do these things. That condition turns what is innocent and lawful into what is sinful and dangerous. When their daily tasks are done, they should be allowed to satisfy their nature; sent off with a smile, and some interest taken in their pursuits when they come back. Boys that like good times in the woods and on the water, have often a great deal of good in them. It may not be our kind of good, but it is good in its own kind, and perhaps far better for that particular boy than the sort we would change it for.

Children are not things we can choose a pattern for, and then turn them out by that pattern. Each little child has a soul of its own. Far in the eternal mind of God our boys' souls had a place from everlasting. Before the world was they lay there with God's goodness around them and were the object of a distinct, trancending, unfathomable love. And all thoughtful parents must have noticed that each little child lives in a world of its own, and holds its own secret thoughts that we can never fathom. They are our children after the flesh, they are God's children from everlasting after the spirit, and are only committed to our care for their higher development.

* * *

Then let us be afraid to deal imprudently and unkindly with them; for if we are determined to make our children after our own image we may make cruel mistakes. Consider how very seldom a really great man in any way resembles his earthly father. Of course we have Solomon's advice to train up a child in the way he should go; and it is very good advice, but we must be sure we choose the right way for that particular boy, and not think more of the "way" than of the boy. If a boy wants to go into the navy, why send him into the pulpit? That would not be the way he should go to make a good man or a successful man of him. Nature has fitted him to handle cables and sails and to set his face against the elements, and she has not fitted him for a student. To compel him to be a student then is to lay a burden on the lad's brains we would be ashamed to lay on his back.

Most parents have pet theories about bringing up children, but half a dozen girls and boys knock all theories to pieces. They find out that they can not make them fit their children's natures; and then if they are wise and kind, they abandon all attempts to do so. For boys cannot be "broken" as wild horses are; they cannot even sometimes be "trained" to think as their parents do, to pray as they do, to believe as they do, to like the things that they do, or to be willing to walk in the "way" they think the best way. But with such precedent before them, they may consider the "way" of the good man who brought up such noble Sons as Norman and Dora Macleod. He evidently saw that he had "a charge to keep" over two souls whose withdrawal intellect he might lead, but could not compel; and this is the testimony these sons bear of his training. "Our father taught us by things—truth and love. He made no fuss about trifling failings and omissions. That is he did not make their home "a house of bondage." It was a pleasant place where the individuality was respected, and where true and love ruled.

* * *

It is worth while considering, also, that the boys that go wrong are generally the best beloved of the household. Their mothers hold them closest, their sisters and aunts hide their faults and stand by them in all emergencies, and very often the sweetest and best girls in their circle choose them before all others, and love them with a love that change not. For women divine the good, the grace the natural sweetness of these often misunderstood natures, they feel that they are worthy though they do not understand how to use them; and however far off they wander, they call them home. For in their heart lives that blessed parable which Jesus spoke for the comfort of the households of the whole world and so

> Their place is kept and it will wait
> Ready for them to fill it soon or late.

These poor boys may even get as low down as the swine troughs, and eat there the husk that the mistakes of others and their own unbridled will have brought them to, but just as surely as they are prayed for at home, there will come to them in some blessed hour the desire to go back home, and the faith to believe

> All I could never be,
> All men ignored in me
> This I was worth to God.

And when this thought becomes an individual faith they will arise, each one, and go to the Father in heaven, and their fathers on earth and they will receive love and pardon. How indeed, shall parents dare to refuse it? Are we not all parents and children—the sons and daughters of one heavenly father. Therefore this is the charge to every parent whose dear ones, for any cause, are estranged or "far off."

> The human soul that crieth at thy gates,
> Is thine own self that for admission waits
> Rise, let it in!

Amelia E. Barr

BRIEF NOTES

IMPORTANT NOTICE

We beg to inform our readers that any typographical defects or faults of alignment of the type, which the last printing of the presses employed in the production of the colored inserts in this and other issues, may disclose in the specimen pages of the Red Letter New Testament, do not in any case appear in the book itself, which is absolutely free from any of these imperfections.

The American Volunteers, of whom Ballington Booth is leader, have decided to dispense with the drum in future, in their processions. They have found that it has been a fruitful source of difficulty with the municipal authorities.

Oberlin College, O., has both a Y. M. C. A. and a Y. W. C. A. They extend a hearty welcome to students and will mail a student's handbook to any address on receipt of an applicatiou enclosing postage. Address F. B Emery, Oberlin, O.

The new secretary of the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church is Dr. Arthur S. Lloyd, of Norfolk, Va. He brings to the office a wide experience of mission work and a character for indefatigable energy.

The new president of the American Board of Foreign Missions is Mr. S. B. Capen, of Boston, Mass. He is a direct descendant of John Alden and of Bernard Capen. He is fifty-seven years of age and is a partner in a business house in Boston. His election is a genuine surprise to those members of the Board who are not Bostonians.

The Week of Prayer for young men appointed by the American International Convention of Young Men's Christian Associations, is November 12-18. This will be observed throughout the world. The key-note topic is Our Service its Defects; its Conditions and the needed Grace. Full particulars may be obtained by addressing The International Committee, 3 West 29th St., New York City.

The French people are enjoying the sport of bull-baiting. At a recent exhibition of the sport at Enghien the infuriated bull leaped the barriers, and landing among the spectators caused a general stampede. As there was a way open to the country the bull took it, much to the relief of the people. Prince Henry of Orleans was conspicuous among the aristocratic spectators. The French Republic seems bent on showing by significant signs which way it is going.

Mr. Moody, addressing an audience in Chicago, recently said, in reference to faith-healing Christian Science, etc.: "God heals, and heals through medicine. If I were sick I should get the best doctor in Chicago, trust to him and trust to the Lord to work through him. The doctors have done wonders as their knowledge has grown. They have reduced the danger of death in diseases that once slew all they touched, and, if God helps them, will yet find a way to stop the ravages of other terrors." Mr. Moody further expresses the opinion that "the doctors are doing a work second only to that of the ministers who save the soul.

A Christian Soldier Dead

GENERAL GUY V. HENRY, who passed away in New York City on October 27, after a short attack of pneumonia, leaves behind him the record of a brave officer and an admirable Christian character. He was born at Fort Smith, Ark., in 1839, graduated from West Point in 1861, served through the Civil War with distinction and was afterward in command at various frontier posts on the Yellowstone and Rio Grande, where he had a long record of active service, operating against the Sioux, the Apaches and other Indian tribes. He was repeatedly wounded in border wars with the red men, and his splendid courage no less than his ability as a military leader was rewarded with high honors and well-deserved promotion. At the opening of our war with Spain, he was appointed a Brigadier-General and with his command was assigned to Porto Rico, where on peace being assured, he succeeded Gen. Brooke as Military Governor. His administration of the island's affairs was universally commended. He governed with wisdom and clemency, and exercised a rare consideration for the conquered people, winning their love by his kindness and the Christian sympathy he showed for the poorer classes, who were the objects of his personal solicitude. To the relief work, which was rendered necessary by the widespread suffering among the island peasantry, he gave valuable encouragement, a course in which he was ably aided by his excellent wife, who was one of the founders of the Women's Relief Association, in which a number of influential American and Porto Rican ladies were actively interested with her. Through their united efforts much good was accomplished. Gen. Henry carried his Christianity into his everyday life, and even his military orders gave evidence of his zeal for the moral as well as the material welfare of those under his official charge. "It was to be the 'white man's burden.'" he explained, "to lift these people to a higher plane, to teach them the best ways of the white man, and thus to be better men and women for God's work." He believed that the future prosperity and happiness of the island and its people depended upon its government being conducted upon the lines of honesty, justice and morality, and with a view to spiritual emancipation and enlightenment, as well as to the development of its natural resources. His last written message on the subject addressed to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD contained these characteristic words: "We are to teach them righteousness, and that honesty, and not dishonesty, is the best policy. This is what expansion means to the white man; non-expansion means a failure to carry out God's kingdom on this earth." The loss of such a man at this juncture is very sad. He evidently felt that he had received such a commission as that of God's ancient leader.

After the wisdom of thy God that is in thine hand, set magistrates and judges who may judge the people, such as know the laws of thy God: and teach ye them that know them not (Ezra 7:25).

♣

The Situation in Natal

Costly to both sides, as was the battle at Glencoe, described in this journal last week, it appears to have failed to bring the advantage to the victors that was expected. The Boers, reinforced, returned to their position, and Major Yule, who succeeded General Symons in command of the British, determined to abandon Glencoe and Dundee and fall back on Ladysmith. It was evidently the design of the Boers, by getting between Dundee and Ladysmith, to separate the victors at Glencoe from the main body of the British army under General White. To defeat this strategy, Major Yule quitted Dundee precipitately, leaving behind him many of his stores and all his wounded, among whom was General Symons, who died the following day. It is a marvel that the Boers did not attack the force on its long march to Ladysmith. Not to do so, argues an oversight on the part of the Boers, or a slowness of movement which is unusual with them. Major Yule succeeded in reaching Ladysmith in safety. On Oct. 29, the two divisions were resting there, about fifteen thousand strong The Boers, estimated at from seventeen to twenty thousand, were massed in front about four miles away, and on both sides of the British position. It is expected that a terrible battle will occur when the Boers make the attack which they appear to be contemplating. They do not usually fight in the open if they can avoid it; but if Gen. White remains on the defensive, they may decide to risk an open battle, as their aim is evidently to crush him before the reinforcements arrive, which are now on their way under Sir Redvers Buller. A reconnoisance in force on Sunday evening, Oct. 29, showed that the Boers were not only superior in numbers, but had artillery of longer range than the British, and were planning to capture the camp. A deplorable fact just disclosed is that this war might have been averted but for a suppression on the part of Sir Alfred Milner, the Governor of Cape Colony. It is now asserted that President Steyn, of the Orange Free State, sent him a despatch for transmission to England, in which Mr. Steyn stated that he was authorized by the Transvaal to give satisfactory assurances to England on the question of suzerainty. Sir Alfred Milner did not forward the dispatch. If he had done so, and the assurances had really been satisfactory, it is probable that there would have been no war. Now, the war with its accumulation of horrors will go on and both nations will have to mourn for the dead, the widows, and the fatherless; for war has not changed its character since the day the prophet uttered his warning:

Thy men shall fall by the sword and thy mighty in the war (Isa. 3:25).

♣

Illuminated Nests

A curious fact in natural history is reported by a scientific journal. It relates to the baya bird which is found in India. This little creature builds a very ingenious nest of two rooms, constructed with wonderful skill and protected by remarkable contrivances from the bird's natural enemies, the tree snakes and other reptiles. "The most curious thing about the baya bird, however, is that it lights its nest by sticking fireflies on its side with clay or soft mud." There seems to be little doubt of the fact. Dr. Buchanan says: "At night, each of the habitations is lighted up by a firefly stuck on the top with a piece of clay. Sometimes there are three or four fireflies, and their blaze in the little cells dazzles the eyes of the bats, which often destroy the young of these birds." Perhaps other animals are scared off by the baya bird's electric light, since a writer in Nature records this curious observation: "I have been informed on authority that the Indian bottle bird protects his nest at night by sticking several of these glow beetles around the entrance by means of clay; and only a few days back an intimate friend of my own was watching three rats on a roof rafter of his bungalow, when a glowfly lodged very close to them; the rats immediately scampered off." The instinct of self-preservation has taught the bird that its enemies dread the light, and it makes practical use of the knowledge. The Christian is not always so wise. Though his most formidable enemies are the powers of darkness, he does not always follow the apostle's advice.

Let us put on the armor of light (Rom. 13:12).

♣

Cars Held by Wasps

An accommodation train from New Haven, Conn., for New York, had to be broken up on account of wasps on Oct. 14. It was only a few miles out of New Haven when a few wasps were noticed buzzing around. Not much heed was given to them at first, but as their number increased they began to annoy the passengers. Then it was noticed that they were coming out in swarms from behind the chandeliers in the two rear cars. The men struck at them with their hats and umbrellas, but the few that were killed made no appreciable difference to the swarm. The women went out on the platforms while an effort was made to clear the cars. The number of the pests seemed to increase, so all the passengers crowded into the smoking-car, which the wasps did not enter. Two cars were left to them entirely. Passengers who ventured in were stung, and promptly returned to their refuge in the smoking-car. On reaching Stamford, Conn., the train was sidetracked and the two infested cars were taken off and others substituted to complete the journey. It seemed an insignificant cause for men quitting the train and all the trouble of substituting cars; but no one likes to be stung by a wasp. If people were as prompt to quit places where they are liable to receive moral injury as they are to quit places in which they are in danger of physical hurt, many might be saved from ruin.

THE LATE GEN. GUY V. HENRY

Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men. Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it, and pass away (Prov. 4:14).

♣

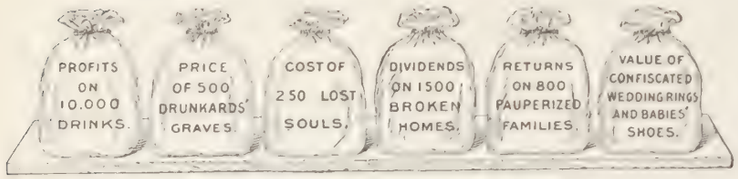
Brothers Reunited

A singular meeting took place in the Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, N. J., a few days ago. A man was brought there who was injured by the falling of a piece of iron, while he was working on the new bridge that is being erected in Somerset County by the Berlin Bridge Company. He has been slowly recovering from his hurt and is on the way to convalescence. During his sickness, there was a firemen's parade in the town, which attracted visitors from other neighborhoods. Among the visitors was a man from Princeton, whose name was the same as that of the injured man. He met an acquaintance and spent an hour talking over old times. In the course of conversation, the accident at the bridge was mentioned by the resident of Plainfield, who said that when he heard the name of the injured man, he at first thought it must be his friend who was hurt. The Princeton man was interested in the strange coincidence, and went to the hospital to find out who the man was who bore his name. To his surprise, he found that it was a brother whom he had not seen for many years, not indeed since his youth, when he went to Texas and dropped out of the knowledge of his relatives. Such romantic reunions do not often occur, but there are many in our hospitals and poor-houses and in homes of poverty and affliction who bear the name of Christian. If all who bear that name would seek them out, they, too, might recognize their brothers in Christ and have the joy and reward of performing a brother's duty to them.

Whosoever shall give you a cup of cold water to drink, in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you he shall not lose his reward (Mark 9:41).

THE MARKET SQUARE OF BLOEMFONTEIN, THE ORANGE FREE STATE CAPITAL

The Saloon-keeper's Money



PROFITS ON 10,000 DRINKS.
PRICE OF 500 DRUNKARDS' GRAVES.
COST OF 250 LOST SOULS.
DIVIDENDS ON 1500 BROKEN HOMES.
RETURNS ON 800 PAUPERIZED FAMILIES.
VALUE OF CONFISCATED WEDDING RINGS AND BABIES' SHOES.

Our Readers Still Weighing the Problem of the Church's Acceptance or Non-Acceptance

"SHALL the Church accept the saloon-keeper's money in aid of spiritual work?" continues to absorb the attention of our readers. Many of the correspondents from whose letters we make extracts assert the belief that this controversy is wielding a strong influence for the destruction of the liquor traffic. On one point, all correspondents—even the saloon-keepers who have written us—agree, however they may differ on others; that point is, that the saloon itself is an unmitigated evil.

Sunday School Supt., Toronto, Can., writes:

How can we? The guide for giving—"as God hath prospered him," "Heartly as unto thy Lord," "Provide things honest"—cannot fit the saloon-keeper's case. The drunkard's children often cannot come to Sunday School unless the church provides them with clothing. They often have not food or fuel unless the church provides them. The church and school using various means to promote temperance among the children, annuls its influence by accepting gifts which embody the earnings of intemperate parents.

A "Brother Editor," R. I., writes:

Who's is the church? To whom dedicated? If the Lord's, why are we asked to judge when there is a distinct command, "Judge not, that ye be not judged." Let the saloon-keeper alone; make no promises to countenance his business in return for his religious gifts, and restrict him not in such giving as the Lord may impress upon him. I would they might cast in their all, for it has been taken from those made in the image of the Lord and for whom our Saviour died. "Let him that is without sin," as the Saviour said, "cast the first stone." I cannot! Can you? We certainly have a right to prescribe by law the business of the usurer, saloon owner and keeper, gambler and every other class of sinners, but we have no right to limit them in spiritual services or gifts, if I read my Bible correctly.

J. K., King's Daughter, W. Va., writes:

If the saloon-keeper has love for the lost souls, it will be seen in hatred for his past life and turning from it unto Christ. The love which prompts a gift to save will not continue to destroy, because such love is born of God.

A. J. H. M., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

Churches, as I understand it, are to save sinners. The just man does not need to be saved. It would be very poor policy if, while trying to save a sinner, you first insult him by refusing to accept his money, which was given honestly and with good intention. There is more joy in heaven over one sinner being converted, than over ninety-nine just men who do not need conversion. Then shall we hesitate doing our duty because the sinner is a saloon keeper?

J. K., Jamestown, N. Y., writes:

The church of Christ is the good Samaritan. Jesus did not teach that the Samaritan was to be reimbursed by thieves. Liquor dealers are the thieves who rob man of all that is best in him, leaving him literally naked, and spiritually, not half but wholly, dead in trespasses and sins. The truth is, all the money that all the liquor dealers in the world have gained could not redeem a single soul of the many millions the infernal traffic has destroyed.

A. M. B., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

Yes, accept the money, and I pray God that with it may be given the heart of the giver to his God. Who knows but that the saloon-keeper in his gift may come to the blessed Jesus? Again, perhaps, with God's help, the man will bring others to the Master in telling them of his gift.

Mrs. M. A. W., Ludlow, Vt., writes:

I can think of only one thing that could justify the church in receiving money from a saloon-keeper. If the rum-seller would pour his rum into the ditch and quit the business forever, and wanted to become a good Christian, then his gift might be used to aid the widows and orphans he has helped to make, and perhaps God's blessing might go with it.

R. J. Han, Ala., writes:

If the saloon-keeper feels duty bound to contribute to the keeping up of church expenses, his gift should be accepted as a contribution to a common cause. The altar sanctifies the gift.

Mary S. Hilliard, Pa., writes:

The woman who came to the Saviour in the Pharisee's house, came to be pardoned of her sins; her gift was the gift of repentance; but the saloon-keeper's gift is to obtain favor with the church that he may more openly extend his traffic with human souls.

Mrs. Emily Goodsell, Ind., writes:

His gift may be the means of bringing the saloon-keeper nearer to the church and God's people. By refusing it we may drive him further into sin.

Chas. A. Bowles, Texas., writes:

No; it is inconsistent. I have heard saloon-keepers say: "My money they want, but they will run down my business."

E. J. M., Artell, Neb., writes:

For conscience' sake we will not ask why he gave the money to the church; but charity covers a multitude of sins; and we will presume that God has stirred a longing within his heart for some better thing than he knows. Can the church accept his money as a gift? Nay, but as a debt.

Township Clerk, Ohio, writes:

Would it be right for a church to accept money from a murderer, who obtained his money by murder? and isn't a saloon-keeper worse than a murderer, for while the former kills the body, the latter destroys both soul and body?

Annie Court, a grandmother, writes:

Wicked persons have been permitted to aid in the accomplishment of some of the most important events in local history. Cruel men nailed to the cross God's own dear son and by his death a lost world was redeemed from a broken law. Those sinful men, by so doing dishonored themselves and shocked the whole world by the terrible deed, yet it lessened not the merits of Christ's atoning blood. On the same principle God can sanctify the saloon keeper's money to sacred uses without honoring or upholding the saloon-keeper. If a saloon-keeper's hand defiles money, a Christian's hand can purify it. Accept it with distinct understanding that it is to be used as a means for suppressing the liquor traffic.

Jane Sandys, Pennsylvania, writes:

If the silver and gold are the Lord's, then he can send them through unquestionable channels for the support of his work. No true Christian will resort to doubtful methods of getting money to carry on God's work. Money as a circulating medium may get into the church indirectly from the saloon, but the church is not responsible for that. If I buy an article knowing it to have been stolen, I am as bad as the thief. If, however, I buy a stolen article not knowing it to have been stolen, I do no wrong.

Charles P. Lang, Pastor, Ia., writes:

Few are engaged in the evil traffic who have not some good in them. When the saloon-keeper contributes to work which is in open conflict with his business, take it. It will help him and the church; and it may be given from a pure, benevolent motive. Reject it when it is given to bribe the church to silence.

Mrs. M. H. Sharpe, Missouri, writes:

Upon the principle of restitution, the question of the disposal of the saloon-keeper's donation can very readily be solved. The families of the drinkers should receive the money.

T. G. Wallace, Iowa, writes:

Take all he offers with the understanding that it is to be returned as nearly as possible to those to whom it belongs—the drunkard's wife and children.

Mrs. J. M. Allen, New York, writes:

We should not deny the saloon-keeper the right or privilege to do a good act if he so desires. We have no right to judge.

Saloon Hater, Portland, N. Dak., writes:

No; take no saloon money. Win saloon-keepers to Christ by living Christ. Stand firm for right; give them cause to respect Christ and his followers. We are partners to their crime if we partake of their ill-gotten gains. We lose the chance of winning them when we accept their aid, for they lose respect for the cause we represent.

Arthur H. E., Mo., writes:

Among any thousand men in each state who keep saloons, possibly not one appears upon any church membership roll, while quite a number of their wives and children attend church and Sunday School and contribute to each. Among a thousand names of the owners of property where these saloons are located, you will open your eyes to find many names appearing on the church membership roll. Which of the two classes is the worst saloon man, and whose contribution is the more questionable? The drug stores are large distributors of whisky, and that mostly on the Sabbath day. Will you reject the druggists' contribution? Take all contributions; thank God for turning them from the current of evil to that which is good.

John McWhite, Md., writes:

Accept the gift and turn the power thus obtained against the saloon, not the keeper, and I believe that we have every right as a Church to expect God's blessing on all involved.

Rev. Job Bass, Chaplain Kings County Penitentiary, writes:

I am an old man and have had much to do in church and missionary work and have never known or heard of a liquor seller voluntarily and unsolicitedly giving to any Protestant Christian cause. Should we ask money from them? Is their calling an honest one? If not honest, then dishonest. What says the word of God? "Thou shalt not be partaker with a thief." Under the former dispensation nothing unholy or unclean should be brought to His altar. I wish dear Brother John Wyburn, the Superintendent of your Bowery Mission, would tell us if the liquor dealers in the Bowery are tumbling over each other to help in the reclamation of the drunkards. No, they know that the Church of God, if true to her mission, is their enemy, and they are not fools enough to offer aid to the enemy.

Men Prowl Because Uneasy—Peace Comes with Good Food—Try Grape-Nuts—Sold by Grocers

Meat Fed to Horses

"Animal food, unless mixed with at least four-fifths of vegetable products, is apt to produce irritable temper and chronic restlessness. Wherever experiments have succeeded in accustoming horses to a diet of flesh food, the results were attested by torn bridles and smashed stable doors. Carnivorous men begin to prowl to ease the feeling of gastric discomfort, and if deprived of that remedy, become fretful and vindictive, especially when the causes of nervous derangements have been complicated by other stimulants," writes Dr. Felix Oswald.

Like produces like; therefore, the nervous dyspeptic should seek food from the peaceful and nutritious grains of the field.

Grape-Nuts made of wheat and barley, most skillfully blended and manufactured, furnish a food fully and perfectly cooked, and supplies the highest form of nourishment combined with delicious flavor. Grape-Nuts are sold by all first-class grocers, and made at Battle Creek, Mich., by the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.

Colds on the Chest

When your cold has settled down deep in your chest, cough syrups will not relieve you. The system must be given strength and force to throw off the disease.

Scott's Emulsion

does just this. It enables you to conquer the inflammation. The lungs soon heal, and all danger is passed. Do not let the disease become chronic because of neglect.

50c. and $1.00, all druggists.
SCOTT & BOWNE-Chemists, New York.

CRAZY WORK 125 Velvet Remnants assorted colors, with Embroidery, Chenille, 42 cts.. 400 Beautiful Heavyweight Silk Remnants, all colors, enough for a large quilt, [illegible] big package, with floss and quilt patterns, 10 cts. 50 Fine Woolen Remnants, suit for Ice Wool, 25 cents. All post-paid LEMARIE'S SILK MILL, Little Ferry, N. J.

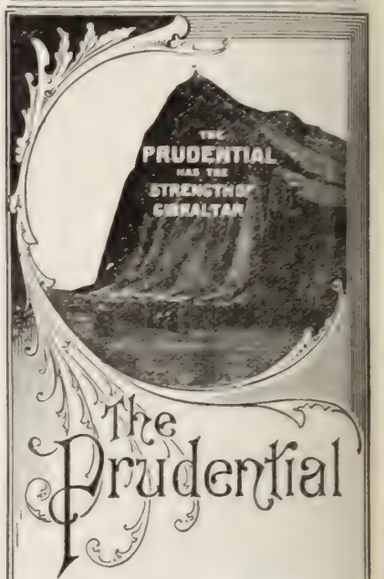
DOUBLE ENTRY BOOK-KEEPING BUSINESS-ARITHMETIC
Approved System, Taught Thoroughly by mail. Send for particulars.
HENRY VON DEVLEN, 314 Clifton Place, Brooklyn, N. Y

"A Good Name At Home

Is a Tower of Strength Abroad." This truth has been perfectly verified by the history of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which effected its first cures in Lowell, Mass., where it is made and where it still has a larger sale than all other blood purifiers. Its fame and cures and sales have spread abroad all over the world, and it is universally recognized as the best blood medicine money can buy.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.



The Prudential

The Man Who Continually Talks

about his love for his wife and children and yet spends nothing for Life Insurance to protect them, lays his sincerity open to question.

Write us for the cost of the best Life Insurance Policy in the world. It will be within your means, and will furnish absolute protection to the whole family.

Write for information.

THE PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE CO.
Of America.
John F. Dryden, Pres. Home Office, Newark, N. J.

WANTED—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S 10 for 5 cents—or twelve packets for 45 cents—may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

STEREOPTICONS Moving Picture Machines & Films
30,000 Lantern Slides for sale or hire.
Send for Bargain List and New Illustrated Hymns and Songs.
Lantern slides made and colored.
Williams, Brown & Earle, 919 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

BOOKKEEPERS, ATTENTION
Do you wish to save time, worry, and annoyance? If so, send for "Infallible Key for the quick finding of mistakes in ledgers." Price 50 cents. Address "T," box 106, station 6, Jersey City, N. J.

MONEY IN IT Splendid chance to make money without risk. For particulars, Address, FIDELITY INVESTMENT CO., SEATTLE, WASH.

Christianity in Business

"COMMERCIAL men" are a class whose active life, full of incessant change, might naturally be expected to make them unsettled and even careless in religious matters. That this view is not justified by the actual facts, however, is shown by the following letter which comes to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD from a friend in Baltimore, Md.:

"Knowing your interest in all branches of Christ's work, and especially that which Christ has blessed, I enclose a card which explains itself. "The Commercial Circle" started in a very small way less than a year ago. Six men connected with a large corporation, deeply conscious of the need of shining Christians in everyday life in their own offices, agreed to meet at a private house and ask God to suggest some practical method by which they could shine and cause others to shine for Christ in the every day business, and right on the spot where they were. God was very manifest at the meeting. All were blessed, energized and filled with a determination to do their utmost. They met several weeks later in the Sunday School room of one of the churches, and the heart-to-heart devotion was accompanied by the Holy Spirit to a degree rarely experienced.

"The Circle can now be found in almost every line of business in Baltimore, the predominating number possibly being in the banks; but when you think of clerks, merchants, lawyers, traveling men, etc., all praying daily to God for one another, you must know there is a marked difference in their Christian experience. It is no small matter to be under the daily prayers of 'The Commercial Circle.'

"What is good for Baltimore, will be of great blessing in other cities. There should be a 'Commercial Circle' in every town and city in the United States, and any reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD who is interested, may write to Mr. H. C. Greene, 1324 McCulloh street, Baltimore, who will furnish any information desired."

The cards issued by this circle of Christian traveling men is unique and practical. Their example should stimulate the formation of Circles elsewhere.

A Boon to the Prisoners

We frequently receive letters from prison chaplains in different parts of the Union, and the following extract from such a letter is a sample of many others that are written in the same strain:

HOBOKEN, Pa., October 17.

Dear Sir:—We are in receipt of three packages of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, which are greatly appreciated by us, and those with whom we labor. There is no religious paper in which the prisoners take so much interest. We make our limited supply go as far as possible by passing them from cell to cell, until the papers are worn out by usage. We trust you will still continue to remember us in this way. Men will read, while incarcerated in prison, and this is our opportunity to bring before their minds the delights and advantages of a better life. D. R. IMBRIE, Chaplain, Allegheny County Workhouse.

Weep Not

Is it well with the child? And she answered, It is well (II. Kings 4:26).

WEEP not for him, who in life's early morning,
While yet its dew-drops sparkled on his way,
Passed from this changing world to meet the dawning
Of an unshadowed and eternal day.

Weep not for those to whom the race is ended,
Ere yet begun the weariness and strife,
Whose earthly joy and hopes of heaven have blended
Before they knew the bitterness of life.

But weep for those, the sad and broken-hearted,
Who bend above a loved and smitten one,
Who mourns another light of home departed
Which for a season on their pathway shone.

And yet, beyond the grave that light is shining,
And they have now an added treasure there
Which they may hail with rapture when awaking,
Its full and perfect blessedness to share.

—E. A. H.

BLAINE'S FIGHT FOR THE PRESIDENCY

Narrated by the statesman's intimate friend, Colonel A. K. McClure. This paper is supplementary to the story of "Blaine's Life Tragedy," as recently told by ex-Senator Ingalls in the POST.

By Colonel A. K. McClure

In this week's number of

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

(OF PHILADELPHIA)

Improving the Postal Service

In the "Making of a Journalist" Julian Ralph told of a literary man, who, when a reporter, ran away with a mail-bag. The offender himself now tells the whole story to POST readers.

By ROBERT BARR

The Czar of Newfoundland

Practically all of the railroads, docks, steamers, street cars and other public conveniences in Newfoundland are under the control of one man, who is the subject of an interesting sketch.

By W. A. FRASER

☞More than 100,000 subscribers and buyers secured within the past year—203,000 copies printed this week.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST was established in 1728 by Benjamin Franklin, and has been regularly published as a weekly paper for 171 years. It is an illustrated magazine, published weekly.

To be had of All Newsmen at 5 Cents the Copy

Or sent by mail 5 months, on trial, for $1.00

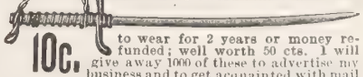
The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

$14 IT COSTS NOTHING to try our Sewing Machines. We ship direct from factory to consumer. Save agents profits. 30 days free trial. 117,500 sold. Warranted 20 Years. All attachments free.

$40.00 Arlington for.....$14.00
$45.00 Arlington for.....$16.00
$60.00 Kenwood for.....$21.50
Other Machines at $8, $9 & $11.50
Illustrated catalogue and testimonials free. Write at once for our special freight offer. Address, CASH BUYERS' UNION.
158-164 W. Van Buren St., B-18, Chicago, Ill.

HOME STUDY FOR BUSINESS We teach Bookkeeping, Business Forms, Penmanship, Com'l Law, Letter Writing, Arithmetic, Shorthand, English & Civil Service branches thoroughly by MAIL at your own HOME. Success guaranteed We give a useful, Money-Making Education. Salaried Situations obtained by our students. National reputation, established 40 years. It will pay you. Try it. Catalog free. Trial lesson 10 cents

BRYANT & STRATTON
175 College Bldg., Buffalo, N.Y.



10c. This is a beautiful Gold filled, hand-made Dewey Sword Pin. Guaranteed to wear for 2 years or money refunded; well worth 50 cts. I will give away 1000 of these to advertise my business and to get acquainted with mail order customers, providing you send me the names of three of your friends, and 10 cts. to pay for postage and packing. But one sword to each person. Dept. 10
VOKES JEWELRY CO., Covington, Ky.

STENOGRAPHY Type-writing, Penmanship, Bookkeeping, etc., thoroughly taught by mail or personally at Eastman, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Situations furnished. Catalogue Free.
C. C. GAINES, Box 236, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

RUPTURE CURED The Improved Elastic Truss is the only Truss in existence that is worn with absolute comfort night and day, and it retains the rupture under the hardest exercise or severest strain, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure. Comfortable Belts made to reduce corpulency. The use of these belts reduces your size and leaves no room for surplus fat to accumulate. They can be used after any operations. Our goods are not sold by agents or druggists. Send for free pamphlets to the Improved Elastic Truss Co., 768 Broadway, N. Y. Established 18 years.

THE TOUCHSTONE

A NEW SERIAL STORY

BY HELEN SHIPTON

CHAPTER III.

IN HOSPITABLE HANDS

THERE was a world of meaning in the sigh which accompanied Martin Hamerton's words. It was, however, the easy sigh of a man who has suffered a reverse of fortune that does not materially affect his happiness, and his sister looked at him with a pity rather disproportionate to his need of it.

When a man loses, through no fault of his own, the money and position that he was brought up to expect, and faces his reverses cheerfully in his own neighborhood, among the old friends of his family, he will generally, whatever the cynics may say, meet with a good deal of respectful sympathy. Every one was sorry for Martin Hamerton, and considered that he did nobly not to be discontented and rebellious; and yet the life that he was now leading was perhaps quite as much to his taste as that which might have been his.

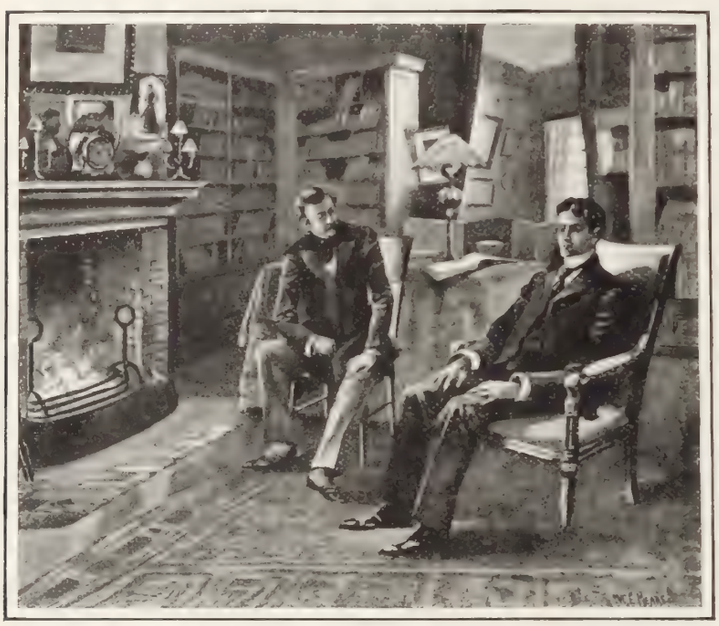
"Squire" Hamerton—perhaps the last owner of Sudbrook Hall to whom any one would ever accord that title—the father of Martin and Celia, had felt the pinch of agricultural depression, like so many other country gentlemen. He had tried—also like many men—to repair his fallen fortunes in many ways that had proved even more disastrous; and when he died, some years before the opening of this story, his affairs had been found in such a state that there was nothing for it but to sell the Hall and the land at once.

No one suffered but his children; his debts were all paid, though his son and daughter were left very slenderly provided for; and they, having, like Sir Lucius O'Trigger, the family honor and the family pictures still remaining, with all that those things signify, were not at all unhappy.

Martin had always wanted to "take up literature," as his neighbors called it, and unlimited leisure for reading and writing suited him better than the busy idleness of a country gentleman's life, with its many calls upon time and patience.

As for his sister, she dwelt among her own people, and in a girlish light-hearted fashion "mothered" Sudbrook and Burntwood and half-a-dozen tiny hamlets besides. If she had less to give than formerly, they never let her feel that she was less welcome; and the only trouble in her life was the knowledge that Martin had a hankering after a flat in some quaint Continental town, and might before long insist upon going abroad for a time and taking her with him. Meanwhile he had had a book to finish, and then another—modest ventures that hitherto had brought little fame and less money; and so for the present they remained in the little "Dower House" which they had reserved to themselves when the rest of the property was sold.

On the Sunday following that eventful Saturday, Miss Hamerton could not but glance anxiously round the church to see whether Mrs. Tomlinson's lodger had put in an appearance. But there were only the familiar village faces, and Mr. Alderdyce, the present owner of the Hall, in the big chancel pew, which he had in vain tried to persuade its former occupants to share with him.



DOUGLAS LINGARD'S HOST LOOKED AT HIM DOUBTFULLY

Young men were not always very regular in attendance at church, thought the girl, half regretfully. At any rate, this one could not have caught the smallpox yet. But she was relieved, after dismissing her class of boys that afternoon, to see her brother return from the mission on which she had sent him with a smiling face.

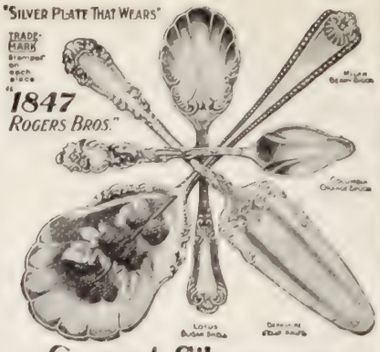
"You are obeyed, O queen!" he said, as he flung himself into his chair, and took his cup of tea from her hand. "I have seen the individual, and he has not been vaccinated since his infancy, to the best of his remembrance, but he solemnly engages to be operated upon to-morrow. And he did not kick me out for interfering in his concerns; not merely because I am the brother of my sister, but because we are old schoolfellows, after all."

"I wish he had gone to the doctor last night—he would if he had had any sense," murmured Celia, discontentedly. "Then he is one of the two brothers you were speaking of?"

"Yes; Lingard minor, familiarly known as Earl Douglas, or Earl. He says his brother is in London. I did not see very much of them; they only came to H—— from somewhere else a year before I left. But they were nice, quiet fellows, with a reputation for having awful tempers, which somehow made them very popular."

(Continued on next page)

"SILVER PLATE THAT WEARS"
TRADE MARK
Stamped on each piece of
"1847 ROGERS BROS."



Correct Silverware

Correct in character, design and workmanship—is as necessary as dainty china or fine linen if you would have everything in good taste and harmony. Knives, forks, spoons and fancy pieces for table use will be correct if selected from goods stamped

"1847 Rogers Bros."

Remember "1847." Send for Catalogue S.
MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO., MERIDEN, CONN.
Sold by leading dealers everywhere.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

Prince of Peace. Concert Exercise for S. S., by Hartsough & Fillmore. Beautiful music and recitations. 5c., 50c. per dozen, post-paid.
Recitations and Dialogues. No. 1. 10 cts.
Santa Claus' Charm. A Christmas Cantata by Chas. H. Gabriel. Bright music and dialogue. 30 cts., $3 per doz. by mail, prepaid.
Mrs. Santa Claus and the Christmas Dolls. By Mrs. J. M. Ross and J. B. Herbert. A beautiful cantata for primary grades. 20 cts., $2.00 per dozen, post prepaid.
Prince of Peace. Anthem by Herbert. 10 cts.
Thy Watchmen shall lift up the Voice. Anthem by Danks. 10 cents.
The above are all new. Our Christmas Music is unsurpassed. We supply every need. Full descriptive catalogue sent on application. A sample of our monthly MUSICAL MESSENGER sent free.
FILLMORE BROS., 119 W. 6th St., Cincinnati. 40 Bible House, New York.

$3.00 $1
Bagster Bible for

To Christian Herald readers. Carefully packed in a box to any address.

INDEX EDGES.

This is not a new venture. We sold thousands of them last year and now renew the offer for those who want a book in even better binding.

This is the famous genuine Bagster comprehensive Teachers' Bible, bevelled, leather lined, leather bound, and under good rules cannot be sold, for less, at retail, for $3.00.

Don't hesitate or you may miss getting one of the wonderful $1.00 Bibles. Likely to be advanced in price without notice. We guarantee satisfaction and will cheerfully refund your money if you are not satisfied. Send your $1.00 now. Add 20 cents if to be sent by post. Address
JAMES POTT & CO., 283 and 285 Fourth Ave., New York

Church Hymns and Gospel Songs

Adopted by Mr. Moody's Northfield Conferences, Ocean Grove Association, and other prominent assemblies this season.

Contains 267 of the Choicest Standard Hymns and Gospel Songs. It is the best Prayer and Revival Meeting Hymn Book published. Board covers $25 per 100. Sample copy, post free, 20 cents.
Send for list of Phonograph Records of Gospel Songs made by Ira D. Sankey.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

EXPANSION....

of business necessitates our employing more General Agents. The duties are to travel and appoint local agents on our Popular Subscription Books. Ladies or Gentlemen. We guarantee $600 to $1000 per year and all expenses. Salary and expenses paid weekly. A very healthful, pleasant and lucrative position, affording many advantages over other agency work. If interested send stamp for Application Blank and full information. If you cannot travel write for terms on home work.
C. W. STANTON CO., 980 Monon Block, Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cleanliness is exemplified in the use of INDIVIDUAL CUPS.
Send for our free book.
SANITARY COMMUNION OUTFIT CO., Box 99 Rochester, N. Y.

50 Calling Cards, 25 Cents. Latest style. Finest quality. Lowest prices for church and society printing. Estimates free. M. B. WATERS, Norwich, Conn.

Consumption, Bronchitis and Bronchial Asthma

Diseases which Cause Almost as Many Deaths as Consumption

BY DR. POTTET HUNTER

A cold settling on the chest or grippe that goes down to the lungs produces bronchitis and when it has continued for several months it becomes chronic bronchitis.

There is at first only trifling cough in the morning with slight chill, followed by a sense of feverishness toward evening. Working rapidly or going upstairs cause shortness of breath with a general sense of tightness and oppression in the chest.

As the disease advances the patient begins to raise yellow, or greenish-yellow matter; has hectic fever and night-sweats and loses in flesh and strength. Even this point unless arrested by treatment, it goes on rapidly, soon exhausts the vitality and causes death with symptoms closely resembling consumption and yet not consumption at all.

By careful observation extending through many years, I am confident that fully two-fifths of all the deaths charged to consumption are really deaths by chronic bronchitis. On examining the sputum and the tissues of the lungs in these cases, we find neither tubercles nor the bacilli germs that are always present in consumption.

This is a most important fact, for bronchitis is much easier to cure than consumption, every case being curable if properly treated. It is only a seated, chronic inflammation of the mucous lining of the air tubes, and at the worst is as certainly curable in the lungs as such inflammation in any other part of the body.

Consumptive bronchitis is not curable by medicine given by the stomach, nor by those hyperdermically injected, for they never reach its seat. It is only by the direct application of medicines to the lining of the bronchial tubes in the lungs that cure is ever effected. The disease is not in the stomach, nor in the blood, but in the lining of the lungs, and there the remedies must be applied.

Before I introduced this local treatment of the lungs, all these chronicc bronchial cases were fatal. The patient either died of exhaustion produced by the filling up of the tubes with muco-purulent matter or the bronchial disease ended in consumption.

The treatment of all lung diseases was formerly a disgrace to the medical profession. Because physicians could not cut open the lungs to get at the seat of the disease, nor reach it by pouring medicines down the wind-pipe, without causing strangulation, they gave up the effort altogether and contented themselves with dosing the stomach by cough mixtures, tonics and opiates to stiffle the symptoms, and then when death came, as it always did, accounted for it by calling the disease incurable.

Nothing but a direct application of healing medicines, antiseptics and germicides to the very seat of the disease will affect the cure of this or any other lung case, and they can be applied only by inhailing them in a gaseous state. The lungs constitute an air cavity and can be reached medicinally only by medicated air. This treatment was discovered, perfected and first successfully applied by me. It is the only natural, scientific and common-sense treatment ever applied for the cure of bronchial and consumptive diseases. If it fails, nothing else could possibly succeed. But it never does fail, unless mortal injury to the lung structures has taken place before it is applied.

"During the past 50 years I have treated many thousands of cases, and, owing to the very large increase in my practice, I have associated with me my son, Dr. E. W. Hunter, under the name of Dr. Robert Hunter Association."

"This arrangement will give me more time to consider the case of my many patients by relieving me of a great number of details involved in the care of a large practice, and is prompted by my desire to do everything possible to benefit and cure each patient under my care."

A few cases are as good as a thousand that we might refer to, Write to any of them. A personal letter from them may be the means of saving your life.

TESTIMONIALS.

Mr. L. A. Peer, 179 Washington Street, Newark N. J., states that seven years ago, while living in Hackettstown, N. Y., he had an oppressive feeling in his throat, and, upon spitting, found that it was blood. This was the first intimation he had that anything was the matter with his lungs. After this he suffered with pains in his left lung, and continued to spit blood. After he moved to Newark he had the grippe badly, which left his lung in a very weak condition, and had hemorrhages frequently. In a short space of time he had 27 hemorrhages, and his condition was critical. He became terribly emaciated, his weight dropping from 170 to 120 pounds. He had great difficulty in breathing and was unable to leave his bed because of weakness. His doctor gave him little encouragement, and it seemed as if he must die. Hearing of Dr. Hunter, his sister-in-law came to New York and engaged treatment for Mr. Peer. From the start he began to improve. His breathing became freer, the hemorrhages ceased altogether, and, to the surprise of everyone, especially his former physicians, he was able to come over to Dr. Hunter's office in a few weeks after he commenced treatment. Mr. Peer now weighs 164½ pounds and is feeling comparatively well, and claims that Dr. Hunter's treatment was the thing that saved his life.

Edward J. Raynor, with Walsh & Co., Confectioners, Newark, N. J.:—"I was a foreman in Seabury & Johnson's when I took sick. I had hemorrhage after hemorrhage and utterly broke down in health, coughed up lumps, yellow matter, had fever and night-sweats, and was brought to my bed from which I never expected to rise again. I am now strong and able to do my work, all shortness of breath is gone, I have gained my flesh back, and can eat and sleep as well as ever. From being a perfect wreck I have been rebuilt by Dr. Hunter's medicated air inhalations. Any one who wishes further particulars of my experience of this wonderful treatment, can write or call on me. I know I owe my life to it, and believe all who suffer ought to know of it."

In order to obtain Dr. Hunter's book, "The Lungs and Their Diseases," free, it is necessary to mention this paper, and address Dr. Robert Hunter Association, 117 W. 45th street, New York.

THE TOUCHSTONE

(Continued from preceding page)

"Boys are queer creatures! What was the charm of the bad tempers?"

"The excitement of the chance of seeing an ebullition, I suppose. Not that we often saw one. You remember that young tutor I told you about—Ashburton?"

"Yes—the one who was so good, was he not?"

"Well, the Lingards were among the chaps that he got hold of. They worshipped him, and did every single thing he told them, and I think he taught them to keep a very tight hand on themselves. I remember his saying once that they were too much alike to quarrel without frightful risk; and I remember, too, the abrupt way they used to shut up and try not to begin a dispute with one another. But Lingard major was the most silent fellow in the school, and went by the name of Mumps."

"I think they sound interesting. Why didn't you ask this one to tea?"

"I did; and he will come next Sunday, probably. He could not to-day—I forget why—letters to write, I think. Give your poor brother more tea, Miss Cecile; don't form designs on wandering young men."

The girl smiled, as little moved by the charge as though she had been really the queen that her brother sometimes called her. She was no coquette, and she knew nothing of Love with the capital letter, while of love with a small l, or affectionate admiration, she was used to plenty. She meant to extend her friendship to Douglas Lingard if—as seemed likely—he proved himself worthy of the privilege; and she did not doubt that he would accept it in the spirit in which it was offered, and with due gratitude.

But the young man did not appear on the following Sunday either at church or at the Dower House, and Celia could not help feeling a little surprised and anxious, though she agreed with her brother that there was no need to look him up again at present.

But when a second Sunday passed without a sign of him she exerted that influence over her brother that most men's "womenkind" can exert when they please, and Martin Hamerton supposed that of his own initiative he resolved to walk up to Highashes and make sure that all was right with the fellow.

On the Monday evening, therefore, he went, and came back looking grave and perplexed.

"I don't quite know whether things are wrong," he said, in answer to his sister's eager inquiry. "They certainly aren't altogether right. Lingard went and was vaccinated, as he promised me, but it didn't seem to 'take.' He let it go till last Friday, and then thought he had better try again. Now, it may be taking properly, but he does really seem to be more seedy than that should account for."

"What does he think himself?" asked Celia, her soft cheek paling a little.

"Oh, he tries to make light of it—says he has never been quite right since he came to Highashes, and that he got a chill down on the line the other day when it was so wet. But I am not sure what he thinks, and he looks very bad."

"What does Mrs. Tomlinson say?"

"Women like that always make the most of things. She complains that he won't eat anything, but I daresay her cookery is not particularly attractive. She had the sense to insist to-day on his seeing the doctor, but she only sent a message to Fosbrook that he was to call when he was up that way."

The brother and sister looked gravely at one another, both evidently considering what was to be done.

Even if Celia had not felt herself responsible for what might have come of her action, they would hardly have felt themselves at liberty to stand aside and do nothing. The old feudal feeling of being more or less responsible for every one in the place, which their father and their father's father had had before them, was not eradicated because they happened to be at the Dower House instead of the Hall. And Martin Hamerton was very tender over the sister who had no one to look to but himself, and tolerably quick to understand her.

"There's only one thing for it," he said after a moment. "I must bring him here. I dare say, as he says, it is only a chill, and he will soon be all right again. But if it should be anything worse, I can look after him, and get him a nurse, and send to his people, wherever they are, better than Mrs. Tomlinson would."

Celia flashed a grateful look at him, and then walked to the window, in the vain attempt to conceal the tears in her eyes.

"Thank you very much, Martin," she said, looking out. "You are always pretty good, but I don't think you were ever quite so good before!"

"Mind!" said her brother as he left the room, "this is simply because he is my old schoolfellow, not because you are responsible or are to blame in any way. No one else is to think so, and you are not to think so either. And I dare say he'll be all right in a day or two."

Martin never told his sister by what arguments he finally overcame Douglas Lingard's extreme unwillingness thus to inflict himself upon comparative strangers, mainly because he was obliged to take precisely the opposite line to that which he had taken with her. The young man only yielded when it was forcibly pointed out to him that Miss Hamerton could not help feeling herself responsible, and that the only way to lessen her anxiety and distress was to allow her, through her brother, to act as she thought best. He had suggested that at worst there was the hospital, but Martin Hamerton flatly declined to further that idea in any way, and as a stranger in the place he would hardly have known where was the nearest hospital, or how to set about gaining admittance to it, even had he possessed his normal amount of energy.

The next difficulty, when a reluctant assent had been given, was as to conveyance; but that Mr. Lingard promptly settled by deciding that he was quite able to walk, and would walk, and that nothing would induce him to enter any vehicle not his own, under the circumstances, even supposing any one had been willing to lend it.

So he did walk, under his host's anxious escort, and if the mile between Highashes and Sudbrook Dower House seemed longer than ever any mile had done before, he did not say so.

But when he was fairly installed in a comfortable little sitting-room with bedroom adjoining—isolated, as he thankfully noted, from the rest of the house by a short passage—with a spark of fire in the grate that even on that bright May evening was pleasant to the chilliness of fever that hung about him, he could not help drawing a long breath of comfort and relief.

Most young men feel themselves excused from "worrying" about their health when there is any one else to do it for them. But most strong men, if they feel ill at all, feel very ill, and are liable at any moment to give up their own case as hopeless, with a ready despondency which at another time they would be the first to laugh at. And it is, no doubt, a dreary thing to feel that no one will know what to do for you unless you tell them, and that if you get worse no one will much care; that you may die without even an acquaintance to say good-bye to, and that the trouble of arranging for your funeral will cause the only grief that any one will feel.

When Douglas Lingard presently lifted his heavy eyes, and saw his host looking at him doubtfully, he was able to speak quite light-heartedly, without any effort, in spite of the racking pain in his temples.

"You must not trouble yourself, and above all, you must not let your sister trouble herself. I do honestly think that I have only got to thank Dr. Jenner's invaluable discovery, and perhaps a chill as well, for this. But if it should be anything else, do make her understand that she is never to think herself to blame. She could not help herself, and she was perfectly and absolutely right."

"It's very good of you to say so," said Martin, but he spoke half abstractedly, for he was thinking.

(To be Continued)

"Winter finds out what summer lays by." Whatever the season, someone is "under the weather" from trouble originating in the blood. They need Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier.

O'Neill's,

Sixth Avenue, 20th to 21st Street, New York.

IMPORTERS and RETAILERS.

TWO GREAT BARGAINS THAT WILL INTEREST EVERY WOMAN READER OF THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Suits!

Women's Cheviot Serge Suits, with Jaunty Fly Front Walking Jacket, Notched Collar, Hip Pockets, and lined throughout with Black Taffeta, New Habit Shape Skirt, Percaline Lined and Velveteen Bound. Worth $14.00.

$9.98

Wrappers!

Women's Flannelette Wrappers, Pointed Yoke Front and Back, Watteau Back, Full Skirt, finished with Hem, Yoke Collar and Sleeves Trimmed with Braid. Worth $1.25.

98c.

H. O'NEILL & CO., Sixth Ave., 20th to 21st St., New York.

A Ferris Form

is a perfect form. The Miss who develops her figure in a Ferris Waist will have something for which to be thankful in years to come. A Ferris form represents the highest type of healthful beauty—of natural grace. Every line of

Ferris' Good Sense Corset Waists

is in harmony with every other line. Every feature of a Ferris Waist is conducive to the perfect development of true womanhood. A book of photographic pictures showing Ferris Waists from childhood to womanhood, sent free.

Ferris' Good Sense Corset Waists are sold by all leading retailers. Do not take substitutes. Ladies', $1.00 to $2.75; Misses', 50c to $1.00; Children's, 25c to 50c.

Made only by

THE FERRIS BROS. CO.,
341 Broadway, New York.

Scrubbing Floors

can never be made a pleasing pastime, but one-half the labor will be saved and the results improved by using Gold Dust Washing Powder.

Send for free booklet—"Golden Rules for Housework."

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY

Chicago St. Louis New York Boston

Dr. Bull's COUGH SYRUP

is the natural remedy for children and cures quickly. It heals and strengthens the lungs. It will not harm the most delicate child and has earned the confidence of thousands of mothers. Have a bottle ready—"a stitch in time saves nine."

Mrs. I. J. Long, of Rossville, Ill., says: "I used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and found it the best cough medicine I ever tried. It cured a terrible cough following lung fever our baby had suffered."

Refuse Substitutes. A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md.

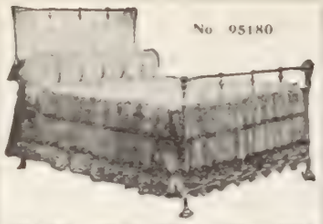
Dr. Bull's Pills regulate the bowels. Trial size, 20 for 5c. At dealers or by mail.



ENAMEL THAT WILL NOT CHIP

The enamel on our white beds is different from that on most other beds.

Our enamel is the very best known. Each coat is rubbed down with pumice stone between each coat so as to produce a regular bicycle finish. The finish on our beds is more like the finish on a white enameled dresser.

The artistic bed that we offer you this month is 2 inches wide by 6 ft. 6 in. long. Height of head 58 in. Height of foot 37 in. 1 in. pillars. Very heavy filling. Very strongly made of malleable iron, [illegible] Claw feet. Rail bearing casters.

Price, bed only, $10.60, freight paid to any point in this country east of the Mississippi River. Your money back if you are not satisfied. If this is not just the bed you want send for our illustrated booklet about other beds: also mattresses and springs.

The best dealers sell our beds. If your dealers can't supply you, order of us.

BARCALO & BOLL MFG. CO.,
(Quality Makers)
Buffalo, N. Y.

WHEN YOU WANT A Baby Carriage
OR A Go-Cart
OR A
Reclining Chair
OR A Rolling Chair
OR AN Invalid Chair
[illegible]
Write for Catalogue
with [illegible] State which is desired. Iron Go-Carts and Carriages, too.

Reclining Go-Cart, $9.75
Children's [illegible] when desired. Baby's Rocking Chairs, other [illegible] $2.50 to $20.00.

Bloch Chair, $14.70
We have [illegible] of Morris [illegible]

Representatives Wanted
PHILADELPHIA BABY CARRIAGE FACTORY
713-715 Spring Garden Street, Philadelphia

The Gem Embroidery Machine

SOMETHING NEW!!
This little machine does the finest grades of embroidering now done by hand. Embroiders on any fabric; uses embroidery silk or cotton; a child can [illegible] with it at home. As a special introductory offer we will send a [illegible] stamping patterns and a beautiful sample of embroidery [illegible] A 50-page book of embroidery designs, containing upwards of 200 illustrations, free with each machine. Agents wanted. GEM MFG. CO., Dept. X, St. Louis, Mo.

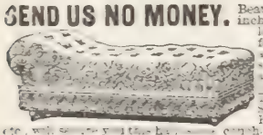
IRON BEDS ALL SIZES $1.95

Price $1.95

Iron Beds, white enameled, made in all widths, price $1.95. This is a specimen bargain of our Great Furniture Department, which contains every thing necessary for the furnishing of a home at 60% less than retail prices. Our 304 page Catalogue contains everything that you Use, Eat and Wear, and that you the prices your dealer pays for his merchandise, and at these prices we will sell you. This book is free. Address this way:

JULIUS HINES & SON,
BALTIMORE, MD. Dept. 218

SEND US NO MONEY.



Beautiful Couch 25 inches wide by 6 feet long. Made with [illegible] Spring Seat and Head. A small order among your [illegible] will secure you this handsome couch. No money required with your order. We pay the express. Illustrated Catalogue Free. G. A. FOLSOM & CO., Dept. S 192 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

...IN HIS STEPS...
By Charles M. Sheldon. We will send this wonderful book, bound in paper cover for 15 cents each or [illegible] Address J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., [illegible] Rose St., New York.

$18.00 a Week and expenses to good [illegible] Permanent position. Also local workers and managers can find profitable employment for part time. Give reference. [illegible] Company, Baltimore.

LITTLE THINGS OF LIFE

* * *

By Margaret E. Sangster

THE little things of life play a very important part in the history of most women. Few of us are permitted to have a share in the great widely known movements of our day. No woman has the chance to rival a great captain or admiral. She does not plan campaigns or command ships; her sphere is rather within the doors of her home, and there she is potential and strong, and her influence will be felt throughout immortality. Sometimes these little pin pricks of daily care hurt and wound like stabs; sometimes the fret of the daily routine wears a woman's patience out, and she breaks down and has nervous prostration. Even such an ever-recurring operation as the washing of the dishes three times a day has been the final straw which made a housekeeper's burden too heavy. The never-ending, still-beginning task of preparing food, serving it and clearing it away is enough to tire out the woman who does her own work, unless she has a good husband and considerate children who are ready to give her their aid. I do not think it beneath any good man's dignity to lighten the load of his wife's housework by bending his own muscles to the task now and then, while surely boys and girls alike should regard it as a real privilege to help mother.

. . .

You have all heard of the lady who rather boasted that she enjoyed poor health, as though invalidism were a thing to be proud of, and also, a thing out of which pleasure might be extracted. Some of us drift into a morbid state in which we do seem to wrest a little complacency out of our disordered nerves, our rebellious stomachs, and our aching heads. The ideal condition for us all, is health, not illness, and as nearly as we can approximate perfection in our bodily condition, we reach the standard our Maker set for us when he sent us into the world. So far as we can discern our blessed Lord when he tarried here had a physical frame exempt from illness; he was weary, but not sick, when he sat by Jacob's well. We, too, must sometimes be very tired; we need seldom, if we observe God's laws, be laid aside by sickness. A physician was the other day called in to attend a sick patient who thought she was threatened with nervous prostration. His advice was that she should dismiss her second servant and do all her upstairs work herself, sweeping, dusting, bed-making, care of the parlor, etc. Practically this is what nine-tenths of our American matrons personally attend to, but Madame was much offended. "You would turn me into a servant?" she said, with an air of resentment. "No," said the doctor, "in three months I would turn you into a well woman. You are suffering from lack of exercise and of interesting occupation. You would be the better for having to do more daily work. You would eat more and sleep better, and think less about yourself."

The obligation of health should so press upon us that we shall avoid unhygienic living, eat nutritious food, and give fine, rich, fried viands a wide berth. The gridiron is superior to the frying pan when the question is one of digestion of well-cooked food.

. . .

UNTIL Chlorinda happened to mention that she was afraid of night air, and only kept her bedroom window a tiny bit ajar, I supposed that everybody had given up that old fright about air hurting one after sundown. There is no other air to breathe at night, and if we do not have our rooms freshened by the current from outside, we must inhale a tainted atmosphere, heavy with our own exhalation. Do not be afraid of night air, and plenty of it, friends. If we could sleep out of doors, we should probably be stronger and less liable to disease.

DICKENS

New University Edition
15 Superb Volumes

Books of Enduring Interest & Value Make the Best HOLIDAY GIFT

This Splendid Edition of Dickens

Fills Every Requirement of the Most Exacting Book Lover

It is complete [illegible] the sketches and short stories reprinted from periodicals, and also his unfinished novel, "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," and the [illegible]

It is beautifully printed on a fine quality of paper, from large, clear type, making continuous or evening reading a pleasure.

It is superbly illustrated—containing more than 150 photogravures and wood engravings, from the celebrated Dickens drawings by Cruikshank, Phiz, and other famous illustrators.

It is handsomely bound so that the volumes are a perpetual delight when even glanced at in library or study, every feature of manufacture thoroughly benefiting a work to last a lifetime.

IT IS AN EDITION YOU WILL BE PROUD TO SHOW YOUR FRIENDS

IT WILL COST YOU NOTHING to get this fine edition of Dickens into your home. You can then examine them for 15 days. If they are not satisfactory return at our expense.

A limited edition is issued in 15 volumes, bound in half leather and in cloth with gilt tops and [illegible] half the regular subscription price, our low club prices being $30 for the half leather and $24 for the cloth binding. Books may be returned if not satisfactory. We pay expressage. We would suggest that orders be sent in at once, delivery to be made on any [illegible]

THIS OFFER LIMITED TO 200 SETS

THE UNIVERSITY SOCIETY,
78 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Gentlemen: Please send me on approval a set of DICKENS' WORKS in half leather binding; if satisfactory I agree to pay $1 within 15 days and $2 per month thereafter till full amount of $30 is paid; if not satisfactory I agree to return them within 15 days.

Signed [illegible]
C. H.
Address [illegible]

In ordering cloth, change $30 to $24.
Not necessary to return coupon if CHRISTIAN HERALD is mentioned.

ABOUT ONE-HALF SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

WE PAY EXPRESSAGE
NO RISK INCURRED

Illustrated Specimen Pages sent on receipt of postal

The University Society
78 Fifth Avenue
NEW YORK

The Purest Soap Afloat

Wool Soap

The soap for the every-day soap tray

Swift and Company, Makers, Chicago

DO NOT STAMMER YOU CAN BE CURED

Endorsed by Prof. Wm. H. Bruning, 25 years Instructor Scientific Dept. of Yale University. Bishop (Chas. D. Foss, M. E. Church, Phila. edition, and Rev. Russell H. Conwell, Baptist Temple [illegible] Pa. Hon. [illegible] Wanamaker, ex-[illegible] Gen., [illegible] Phila. Public Schools, [illegible] Phila. Institute, 1033 Spring Garden St., Philadelphia, Pa. [illegible] [illegible] Professor and Principal [illegible] for Stammering [illegible]

Sewing Machines $5 and Up.

[illegible] first class, 20-year [illegible] Piano $125.00 Sent subject to approval. This Company is perfectly reliable. Address
BROWN-LEWIS CO., Dept. 15, Chicago, U. S. A.

$5.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working for me. [illegible] preferred who can furnish their own team. [illegible] B. F. Johnson, 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

A GREAT RHEUMATIC REMEDY.....

Mr. J. R. Morse, of the American Trading Company, Front Street, New York, writes: "Your TARTARLITHINE for rheumatism is simply GREAT. I want to present some of it to friends of mine. Please send me half a dozen bottles. . . . .

Regular package $1.00.
Of all druggists or post-free by mail.
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

McKESSON & ROBBINS,
91 Fulton Street, . . New York.
SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

It Is a Certainty That Catarrh can be cured. You will believe it after using a sample of Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure. Mailed free. Address Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 50 Broad St., Blosser Building, Atlanta, Ga.

ENTERTAINMENTS
For CHURCHES and SUNDAY SCHOOLS
Magic Lanterns, Stereopticons & Views; [illegible] Lantern Slides to Order. Catalogue Free.
McALLISTER, Mfg. Opticians, 49 Nassau St., New York

The Wonderful Blue Gum Tree of Tasmania

• • •

A Giant Among Trees

The Tasmanian Blue Gum Tree

may well be considered a giant among trees, rising, as it does, to the height of 300 feet, and measuring, in many instances, forty feet in diameter. The leaves are of a curious form unknown in this country. They are large, sickle-shaped, of a smooth, shining, bluish-green color, thick and leathery. By holding the leaf to the light a number of little bright spots can be seen; these are the glands in which "Hyomei" is found. In Tasmania this tree is called the Fever Tree, as when planted in marshy districts it destroys the miasm. It does this, first, by emitting antiseptic odors from its leaves, and by its roots acting as a sponge and absorbing the water from the ground. Thousands of these young trees have been purchased by the English government and transplanted in India during the past five years, where they have almost completely neutralized the marshes.

It is from the fresh green leaves of this wonderful tree that science has succeeded in obtaining

HYOMEI SOAP

The FIRST and ONLY one ever manufactured without the use of FATS, GREASE and ALKALI.

Nothing Like It has ever been made before, and if it were not for the beautiful, creamy lather, one would doubt that they were using soap of any description.

• • •

There is no Soapy smell
No overpowering perfume
No smarting of the skin results from its use.

• • •

Instead, the skin is thoroughly cleaned and refreshed, every pore is opened, and ALL obstruction to perfect circulation removed. The skin soon becomes soft, smooth and entirely free from blemish. In fact, no troubles of any kind with the skin can exist when Hyomei Soap is used daily. Try it once, and no other will ever be found among your toilet requisites.

Sold by all Druggists or sent by mail Price 25c.

THE R. T. BOOTH CO.
No 5 Ave. D, Ithaca, N. Y.

New Anecdotes
BY MR. MOODY

Prayers that Prevailed

I REMEMBER when preaching on one occasion to an immense audience in the Agricultural Hall in London, a father and mother were in great distress about their absent son, who had given up God's ways and had wandered from his father's home to the wild bush of Australia. These poor people asked the united prayers of that vast congregation for their son, and I suppose fully 20,000 rose to the mercy seat. It was ascertained afterward that at the very hour those prayers ascended from the audience in London, that young man was riding through the Australian bush to a town, a day's ride from his camp. Something caused him to think of his home and his parents, and as he sat in the saddle, the Spirit of God descended upon him, and he was convicted of sin. Dismounting, he knelt down by his horse's side, and prayed to God for forgiveness, and in a little while he was assured of conversion. When he reached the town, he wrote the good news to his delighted mother, and asked if they would receive him at home. The answer flashed along the cable beneath the ocean:

"Come home at once."

So afraid were they that he might arrive in the night when they were not awake to receive him, that they fastened a big bell to the door, so that all the family would be awakened as he entered.

• • •

A Fatal Delay

When I was a young boy, before I was a Christian, I was in a field one day with a man who was hoeing. He was weeping, and he told me a strange story, which I have never forgotten. When he left home his mother gave him this text: "Seek first the kingdom of God." But he paid no heed to it. He said when he got settled in life, and his ambition to get money was gratified, it would be time enough then to seek the kingdom of God. He went from one village to another, and got nothing to do. When Sunday came he went into a village church, and what was his great surprise to hear the minister give out the text, "Seek first the kingdom of God." The text went down to the bottom of his heart.

He went away from that town, and at the end of a week went into another church, and he heard the minister give out the same text, "Seek first the kingdom of God." He felt sure this time that it was the prayers of his mother, but he said calmly and deliberately:

"No; I will first get wealthy."

He said he went on, and did not go into a church for a few months, but the first place of worship he went into he heard a third minister preaching a sermon from the same text. He tried to stifle his feeling, to get the sermon out of his mind, and resolved that he would keep away from church altogether, and for a few years did keep out of God's house.

"My mother died," he said, "and the text kept coming up in my mind, and I said I will try to become a Christian." The tears rolled down his cheeks as he continued. "I could not; no sermon ever touched me; my heart is as hard as that stone," pointing to one in the field.

I couldn't understand what it was all about; it was fresh to me then. Soon after I went to Boston and was converted, and the first thought that came to me was about this man. When I got back, I asked my mother:

"Is Mr. L—— living in such a place?"

"Didn't I write to you about him?" she asked; "they have taken him to an insane asylum, and to every one who goes there he points with his finger up there and tells him to 'Seek first the kingdom of God.'"

When I got home again my mother told me he was in her house, and I went to see him. I found him in a rocking-chair, with that vacant, idiotic look upon him. Whenever he saw me he pointed at me and said: "Young man, seek first the kingdom of God." Reason was gone, but the text was there.

The Best Chocolate.

When placing on the market the new product Van Houten's Chocolate (for eating) some time ago, the manufacturers had before them the object of offering buyers a nutritive and digestible Chocolate of irreproachable composition, while at the same time more delicious in flavor than any of the already existing kinds; in other words, a Chocolate which, both from the point of view as to health as well as to flavor, should satisfy the most exacting demands. The universal good opinion concerning Van Houten's Chocolate, seems to prove that this object has been attained; and it is recognised as being as superior to other Chocolates, as Van Houten's Cocoa is superior to other cocoas. When travelling, picnicking, or bicycling, it proves of great service.

Sold in Tins of Croquettes and Tins of Drops.
Also in Square Tablets and Small Bars.

If You

are a sufferer from disease in any form if you have taken drugs and nostrums ad nauseum, you can find certain and permanent cure in the OXYDONOR. This is not faith nor theory; it is an accomplished fact attested to by thousands. This instrument cures all forms of disease, incipient or chronic, in Nature's own manner, by placing the body in a condition that assists in the absorption of oxygen, the great vitalizing force of this element is diffused throughout the system and disease is conquered. It simply cannot exist in an organization that appropriates oxygen in large quantities. The OXYDONOR is small, compact, and by merely applying it during sleep, a complete cure is effected.

Send for our book "GRATEFUL REPORTS," containing hundreds of letters from clergymen, lawyers, business men, etc., who have been cured.

REV. THOS. J. OLIVER CURRAN, St. George's Church, 76th St. & Drexel Ave., Chicago, Ill., July 8th, 1899, writes:

"I have used the OXYDONOR on myself for Catarrh, Colds, Nervousness and Sleeplessness and found it to work like magic.

"I am positive from what I know it has done for myself and others, that it will do all you claim."

Yours sincerely, THOS. J. OLIVER CURRAN,
(In charge of St. George's Mission)

CAUTION! Imitations of OXYDONOR are dangerous to use. Refuse to accept them. Dr. Sanche is the inventor and originator, and has obtained final decision in Supreme Court in Washington, D. C., against imitators. We are operating under the ONLY PATENTS that have been granted on THIS PROCESS and THESE INSTRUMENTS. Nothing can be gained or saved by purchasing spurious articles

Send for prices. Our productions are selling rapidly in this country. We want persons in all sections to sell for us. Many giving only part of their time are making $100 to $200 per month. Others giving all their time are making much more.

DR. H. SANCHE & COMPANY,
261 Fifth Avenue, New York City.
57 State Street, Chicago, Ill.
61 Fifth Street, Detroit, Mich.
Canadian Branch: 2268 St. Catherine Street, Montreal, P.Q.

WE SAVE HALF YOUR MONEY ON
VIOLINS, GUITARS, MANDOLINS, BANJOS ETC.
GET OUR BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED
CATALOGUE IT'S FREE WRITE TO DAY
SYNDICATE MUSICAL INSTRUMENT Co
356 FULTON ST BROOKLYN, N.Y.
IN BUSINESS 20 YEARS

MONUMENTS

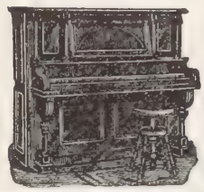
DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE

More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Color greatly improved. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO MOSS GROWING. NO CRUMBLING.
CLEANING. CRACKING.
THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.,
70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

$75 MONTH AND EXPENSES; no experience needed; position permanent; self seller. PEASE MFG. CO., P.O. Box A, Cincinnati, O

One Year's Free Trial
.. THE ..
CORNISH PLAN.



The Unique Cornish Plan of Selling Pianos and Organs

has spread over the entire civilized world, and has been the means of building up a vast business.

PIANOS FROM $155
All Latest Musical Attachments.

Over a Quarter of a Million Satisfied Customers

attest the honesty of this modern method of piano-selling. We Warrant our Pianos and Organs for 25 years. Back of that Warranty is a business worth over a million dollars.

FREE. Our Souvenir Catalogue for 1900 is one of the most comprehensive musical books in the trade. The frontispiece is a masterly reproduction in colors of an oil painting representing St. Cecilia and the Angelic Choir. This catalogue is sent, post-paid, together with a novel reference book—"The Heart of the People"—and our latest special offer, etc. The catalogue describes all our pianos and organs. It tells about The Cornish Patent Musical Attachment for Pianos—imitates accurately Harp, Banjo, Guitar, Zither, Mandolin, etc., while the famous patent Combination Multitone Reed Action makes the CORNISH Organs unequalled in tone—reproduces the power of a full orchestra.

A prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT of $10 on the list prices in our 1900 Catalogue, on any CORNISH ORGAN, or $20 on the list price of a CORNISH PIANO.

Send for particulars of the Cornish Co-operative Plan, showing how you can make money working for us, or a Cornish Piano or Organ ..... FREE.

Makers of High-Grade American Pianos and Organs.

REFERENCES:
Your Bank, Our Bank, Any Bank.

ORGANS $25 FROM
Cash or Easy Payments.

CORNISH & CO.,
Established 50 Years. WASHINGTON, N. J.

EMPLOYED PEOPLE READ N.Y.A.

We furnish samples free to agents. F. S. Frost, Lubec, Me., sold $132.79, retail in 6 days. Write for Catalog, new goods, rapid sellers. RICHARDSON MFG. CO., 6th St., Bath, N. Y.

Earn Christmas Presents

for every member of the family in a week, by selling a few pounds of our high grade Teas, Coffees, Spices Baking Powder, Soaps, etc., to your friends and neighbors. Easy and pleasant work. All goods guaranteed. Your choice of Bicycles, Gold Watches, Rifles, Morris Chairs, Brass Beds, Ladies' Jackets, Suits, Capes and 100 other handsome premiums. The best proposition ever offered. A postal will do. Premiums sent with goods on 30 days' time. We pay the freight. Write for price list, order blank and catalogue at once

CHAPIN MFG. CO.,
Box 30, Rochester, N. Y.

Gram-o-phone

AS A HOME ENTERTAINER

We desire, if possible, to convey to the readers of CHRISTIAN HERALD something like an adequate idea of the Improved Gram-o-phone, an invention which The Ram's Horn, of Chicago, calls

". . . The greatest contribution made by Science to the entertainment of the world."

It is a difficult thing to do, because it seems simply incredible that in one simple machine which a child can operate there should be combined not only the pleasure-giving qualities of all kinds of musical instruments, but the power to reproduce every other sort of entertainment appealing to the ear.

Such, however, is the Gram-o-phone, of which The Churchman, of New York, says:

". . . is the way of entertainment for the home, the [illegible] genius of the 19th century has produced [illegible] wonderful, so practical, and in all respects satisfactory."

But judge for yourself. Take, for instance, the following as one of a hundred different programs:

1 Cornet Solo . . . . . "Serenade"
By H. A. Clarke, Cornet Soloist Sousa's Band
2 Song . . . . . "Marching Thro' Georgia"
By John Tyrell
3 Banjo Duet . . . . "Enjoy Yourselves"
4 Xylophone Solo . . . . . "Whistler and His Dog"
5 Recitation . . . . "A Negro Funeral Sermon"
By George Graham
6 Clarinet Solo . . . . . "La Sonambula"
By J. Schueler, Clarinet Soloist Sousa's Band
7 Soprano Solo . . . . "Home, Sweet Home"
By Miss Inez Barbour
8 Trombone Solo . . . "Love Thoughts Waltz"
By Arthur W. Pryor, Trombone Soloist Sousa's Band
9 "A Flag Without a Stain" . . . . . Sousa's Band
10 Orchestra Selection . . . . . "Stars and Stripes Forever"
By the Metropolitan Orchestra
11 "The Crack Regiment" . . . Sousa's Band
12 The Lord's Prayer . . . . . Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage and AMEN. Pause

Not in any sense imitations.

The marvelous harmony of Sousa's Band.
The silver strains of the cornet.
The "plunk-plunk" of the banjo.
The mellow tones of the trombone.
The spirit-stirring rattle of the drum.
The ear-piercing notes of the fife.
The resonant quality of the xylophone.
The sonorous voice of Chauncey M. Depew.
The staccato utterances of Dr. Talmage.
The inimitable idiom of Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle.

All as natural as life itself—these performances being nothing less than ACTUAL REPRODUCTIONS.

It is already an acknowledged feature in the homes of the wealthy and refined. Hon. Chauncey M. Depew writes:

"I have a Gram-o-phone at my house and another on my car. It's the best thing of the kind I know of to entertain one's family and friends."

Do not confound the work of the Gram-o-phone with the unnatural noises you may have heard from the earlier talking machines. The five great soloists of Sousa's Band unite in a letter, saying:

"We consider the Improved Gram-o-phone the ONLY talking machine which [illegible] the true tone qualities of our respective instruments."

It has, by actual test, been heard in every part of the Metropolitan Opera House, the largest auditorium in New York; its cornet solos two miles.

In its construction everything has been subordinated to its one object—Entertainment of the best and most varied kind. All our records are made in our own laboratories on FLAT INDESTRUCTIBLE DISCS from genuine performances by the most celebrated instrumentalists, bands, singers and orators in the world. As proof of their authenticity, all but a few of the earliest ones are signed.

SPECIAL CONCESSION

To subscribers to CHRISTIAN HERALD the $18.00 Gram-o-phone will, for a short time, be sold on the installment plan—$4.00 cash, $3.00 a month for five months; records, as wanted, 50 cents. Money refunded, less express charges, if instrument is not satisfactory and is returned immediately.

NATIONAL GRAM-O-PHONE CORP.,
874 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

SHERMAN CLAY CO., San Francisco, Cal., Pacific Coast Agents

BRANCHES

BOSTON	178 Tremont Street
PROVIDENCE	155 Westminster Street
PHILADELPHIA	13 North Ninth Street
CHICAGO	161 State Street
CLEVELAND	Colonial Arcade
CINCINNATI	21 and 23 West Fifth Street

. . . Liberty and Love . . .

Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for Nov. 19. Rom. 14:1-23

HOW many church quarrels and personal alienations might be healed by the adoption of the Apostle's principles! He claimed liberty for himself and the right to refrain from exercising his liberty for the sake of others. The difficulties that were perplexing the church at Rome and the difficulties of the other churches of the Apostle's time are no longer an issue, but the principle by which the Apostle solved them may be applied to our own problems with like results. That principle is eternal. It brings all doubtful questions to the test of character. The act itself which seems so harmless to one man and so wrong to another, is not to be condemned in itself, but is to be judged by the character of the doer. There can be no question about the quality of dishonesty, unchastity, mendacity, but there are other lines of conduct about which Christians differ, and these are changing from one generation to another. In our day they are chiefly: the drinking of intoxicants, theatre-going, card-playing, novel-reading, dancing, etc. We believe that if it were possible to submit these questions to the Apostle Paul, as the Roman Christians submitted their problems, his answers would be practically those given in this chapter.

It might be difficult to prove that these things are wrong in themselves. We can conceive of circumstances in which they might be practised innocently and without harmful results. The Apostle would have us first of all, on the one hand, cease to condemn those who indulge in them as wicked, and on the other hand, cease to condemn those who refrain from them as narrow-minded. There must be love on both sides and respect for every man's liberty. Next, there must be no attempt to make one man's rule the law for another. An indulgence that would be injurious to one man may be harmless to another. Every man has the right to govern himself according to his knowledge of his own condition. If I was addicted to liquor before my conversion, I have the right to abstain now, and it is my duty to abstain, but I must not insist on another man abstaining, nor must he compel me to drink. If I find by experience that dancing or card-playing produces in my mind emotions detrimental to my spiritual well-being, it is my duty to abjure them; but I am not to denounce those who indulge in them, nor are they to scoff at my scruples. Individual liberty must be respected.

Having thus cleared the ground of harsh judgment and established the rights of personal liberty, the Apostle gives rules for personal guidance which each may use for his own conduct. If there is any doubt in his mind as to the right of any course of action, the Christian will be wise in refraining from it. He should not run any risks. He must be fully satisfied in his own mind. Another man may say there is no harm in it, but there is harm to any man who sees harm in it. Whatever other men may do, he must refrain. He must not violate the dictates of his own conscience. The man who does what he believes to be wrong is doing wrong; though another man may do the same act innocently because he sees no wrong in it. Then, there is another restriction on his liberty which he should impose. He should consider what may be the effect of what he does upon others. If he can help his weak brother in any way he is bound to do it and on no account must he be the cause of his brother's falling. He may believe that there is no harm in attending the theatre, but if his brother has been an habitual theatre-goer and is striving to break himself of the habit, he will do well to stay away himself lest his example weaken his brother's resolution. If his brother is struggling with the craving for liquor, he should abstain himself that he may encourage his brother in his conflict. So love and sympathy are to be voluntary restrictions self-imposed for the good of others. No man has settled the questions for himself when he has proved that he has the right to these indulgences; we must bear one another's burdens.

IRVING

Historian
Essayist
Novelist

WASHINGTON IRVING enjoys the proud distinction of being the FIRST AMERICAN WRITER to [illegible] of literary [illegible] Over the Tea Cups. [illegible] many years [illegible] to which [illegible] lent an added lustre to his fame. His literary [illegible] deep, well settled and immutable. TO-DAY, [illegible] ary achievement, the name of no one of our [illegible]

"[illegible] Mark Twain

If you have not Irving, your library lacks a set of books which no other set of books ever [illegible] can supply. True, you may have The [illegible] but that is not IRVING.

You Should Own His Complete Works

In whatever realm you delve, this many-sided workman can interest you.

WIT "'Salmagundi' formed a school of wit of a character superior to anything our country has [illegible]

HUMOR [illegible]

ROMANCE [illegible]

ADVENTURE [illegible]

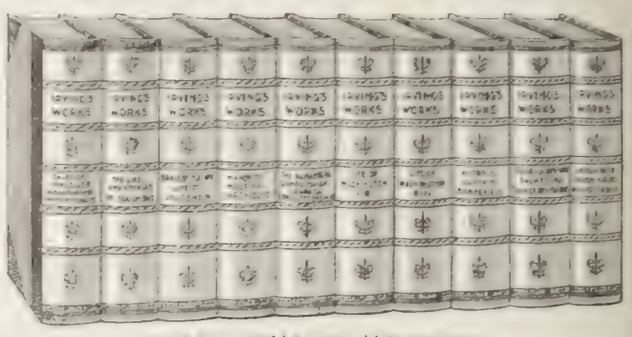
POETRY [illegible]

SENTIMENT [illegible]

HISTORY and BIOGRAPHY [illegible]

"[illegible] Washington Irving should be read by every American."

The New University Edition



TEN SUPERB VOLUMES. 7000 PAGES. BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED.

This is a splendid semi-de-luxe edition of Irving. It contains his complete works, superbly illustrated with photogravures and half-tone plates. It is beautifully printed on a fine quality of paper with [illegible] handsomely and strongly bound. It is an edition you will be proud to show your friends. It is a set of books which should be possessed by every home, for Irving's writings are pre-eminently pure.

SPECIAL 30-DAY OFFER TO "CHRISTIAN HERALD" READERS.

We will send [illegible] entire set of ten volumes, charges prepaid. You will be allowed 15 days for examination. If this edition is not exactly what you want, you can return the set at our expense. If satisfactory, you can make your first payment of $1.00, and remit thereafter $1.00 per month for 16 months, if cloth style is ordered, making a total payment of $17.00. If [illegible] making $20.00 in all. If you want a fine edition of Irving, this [illegible] that you order promptly. Mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A magnificent permanent addition to any library
Beautifully illustrated specimen pages sent on receipt of postal
About one-half subscription price. We pay expressage
No risk incurred.

FREE FOR 15 DAYS

THE UNIVERSITY SOCIETY, 78 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK

IVERS & POND PIANOS.

Strictly First-Class.

Require less tuning and prove more durable than any other pianos manufactured. 250 purchased by the New England Conservatory of Music, the largest College of Music in the world, and over 500 Ivers & Pond Pianos used in two hundred of the leading colleges and institutions of learning in the United States. Catalogue and valuable information mailed free. Old pianos taken in exchange.

Easy Payments.

If no dealer sells our pianos near you, we supply them on time payments to parties living in any city or village in the United States. A small cash payment and monthly payments extending over three years secure one of our pianos. We send pianos for trial in your home, even though you live three thousand miles away, and guarantee satisfaction or piano is returned to us at our expense for railway freights both ways. A personal letter containing special prices and full description of our easy payment plans, free upon application.

Ivers & Pond Piano Company,
110 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass.

ROASTS

ARE GIVEN A MOST DELICATE AND APPETIZING RELISH, IF JUST TOUCHED UP A BIT WITH

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE

THE ORIGINAL & GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

FOR SIXTY YEARS THIS SAUCE HAS GIVEN PERFECT SATISFACTION THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

JOHN DUNCAN'S SONS, AG'TS. NEW YORK.

Libby's Mince Meat

Makes a Pie That Melts in Your Mouth

Those who know Libby's delicious Mince Meat never bother with the labor of making a winter's supply of home-made.

Libby's is so convenient, wholesome, pure.

Put up in packages enough for two large mince pies.

Ask your grocer or write

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago.

Drop a postal for booklet, new edition, "How to Make Good Things to Eat."

BUY THE BEST.

If you want the best low down wagon you should buy the Electric Handy Wagon. It is the best because it is made of the best material; the best broad tired Electric Wheels; best seasoned white hickory axles; all other wood parts of the best seasoned white oak. The front and rear hounds are made from the best angle steel, which is neater, stronger and in every way better than wood. Well painted in red and varnished. Extra length of reach and extra long standards supplied without additional cost when requested. This wagon is guaranteed to carry 4000 lbs. anywhere Write the Electric Wheel Co., Box 136, Quincy, Illinois, for their new catalogue which fully describes this wagon, their famous Electric Wheels and Electric Feed Cookers.

ELECTRIC

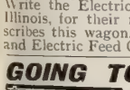
GOING TO FEED CATTLE



or hogs or both this season? There is no better fence made for surrounding feed lots, barn yards, or the farm in general than

THE ADVANCE FENCE

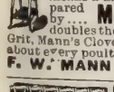
Perfectly smooth, all interwoven, safe for stock. SOLD DIRECT TO FARMERS AT WHOLESALE. Nobody can buy it any cheaper. Write for circulars and special discounts.

ADVANCE FENCE CO., 149 Old Street, Peoria, Ill.

An Egg Maker

means a money maker. Green Cut Bone prepared by.... Mann's New Bone Cutter doubles the egg product. Mann's Granite Crystal Grit, Mann's Clover Cutter and Swinging Feed Tray fit about every poultry requirement. Catalogue FREE.

F. W. MANN CO. Box 29, Milford, Mass.



FENCE! STRONGEST MADE. Bull-strong. Chicken-tight. Sold to the Farmer at Wholesale Prices. Fully Warranted. Catalog Free.

COILED SPRING FENCE CO. Box 47. Winchester, Indiana, U. S. A.

OPIUM MORPHINE and Liquor Habit cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Book of particulars free. Address Dr. J. L. Stephens, Dept. R. 5, Lebanon, Ohio.

Good Causes Helped

THE following sums have been contributed by our readers for the support of the worthy causes mentioned below:

Bella Cooke.

Prev. ack	$5 25
Mrs R N Randall	5 00
Total	$10 25

Philafrican League.

Prev. ack	$106 00
Ella F Backus	5 00
Total	$111 00

Rev. R. Ashley Cake's work among lifesavers.

Prev. ack	$5 00
Mrs C J Andrews	5 00
Total	10 00

Door of Hope.

Prev. ack	$32 50
E W. Lawrence	4 00
Total	$36 50

Foreign Missions.

Prev. ack	$166 55
E W. Lawrence	10 00
Lillie T Smith (China)	1 00
Total	$177 55

Miss Mary Talmage.

Miss L Davidson	$100 00

Mrs. Rose H. Lathrop.

Prev. ack	$44 65
A T. Rantoul	2 00
Total	$46 65

Spanish Testament Fund.

Prev ack	$333 00
Mrs A R Rockhill	25
M B Mitchell	50
Total	$333 75

Gospel Work in Cuba.

Prev. ack	$102 95
C F McKnight	50
Total	$103 45

Bethesda Home.

Prev. ack	$915 44
Ida M Strain	50
Mrs T R Harmon	1 00
Reader, Grand Rapids	1 00
Lillie T Smith	1 00
Mr & Mrs F Wood	2 50
Mrs E L Payne	4 00
In mem Olive Douglas	2 50
G Ladd	2 00
S C Burnham	2 00
Mrs R N Randall	5 00
Cash, Washington	1 00
—, Boyne	3 00
Virginia G Smith	1 00
Mrs E W Ashby	2 00
Mrs G M Richter	2 00
Mrs MW & Mrs WD Lovel	0 00
M M P Reicherter	1 00
Sprague, S Lyon	1 00
Mrs M A Gibbs	3 00
Total	$951 94

Texas Flood Sufferers

Prev. ack	$348 51
Lord's work Beverly	5 00
B F Woodruff	5 00
J F Barbour	2 00
Mrs M VanNest	1 00
M P W, Newark	1 00
D B K Van Raalte	5 00
E L Gillespie	93
Sympr. Cotesfield	1 00
R P Kilpatrick	50
ChessChinn	25
Jay Smith	25
Annie Barnes	25
A M Naperstak	25
Other Friends, Cotes'd	40
Nannie McEwen	1 00
Thos Watkinson	1 00
Subr. Kinsman	1 00
James H Rogers	1 00
C O D, Mechanicsburg	5 00
Mrs M E McKee	1 00
Joseph Smyth	50
A T R, Rantoul	2 00
M H B, Short Beach	50
Friend, Topeka	1 00
Reigate	2 50
John H Chace	50
I H N, E Tilton	15 00
A L R, Los Angeles	1 50
Miss C J Cox	2 50
Mrs A M Ramsdell	1 00
J R Williams	1 00
Total	$409 34

Abanyarra Redemption Fund

Prev. ack	$31 40
Mrs M E Wales	10 00
Girls Aid Soc, Swedish Bapt Ch, Bloominge'20	00
Total	$61 40

Chicago Medical School

Mrs A M Ramsdell	1 26

Porto Rico S. S. Work.

Prev. ack	$575 28
Mrs M S Carmichael	20
M E M, Balto	5 00
C C & R R Bozarth	5 00
C McLennan	5 00
Total	$590 48

Rev. Jos. Norwood.

Prev. ack	$6 10
Eugene F Lang	20
Total	$6 30

Miss Reed's Mission to Lepers.

Prev. ack	$33 60
Mrs R N Randall	5 00
G C Northrop	7 00
Total	$45 60

Lincoln Memorial University

Prev. ack	$149 10
Y P S C E, Candia	4 00
Mrs S Snyder	2 00
Mr & Mrs A Hughes	10 00
Total	$165 10

Bishop Hartzell

Prev. ack	$343 62
Mrs R Parrott	1 00
Mrs R N Randall	5 00
—, Stockton	25 00
Total	$374 62

Nebraska Prairie Church Fund

Prev. ack	$351 40
Mrs M L Ittner	1 00
Total	$352 40

Clinton St. Settlement.

Prev. ack	$102 05
Friend, Soudan	10 00
Total	$112 05

Miss Emma Nason's Work Among Lumbermen.

Prev. ack	$15 00
Mrs R Parrott	1 00
J A W, Tidioute	2 50
Total	$18 50

China Flood Sufferers.

Prev. ack	$107 71
M E T, Providence	3 00
Total	$110 71

Christian Herald S. S. Missionary.

Prev. ack	$50 25
Mrs A R Rockhill	25
J McClun	1 00
Total	$51 50

School for Syrian Girls.

Prev. ack	$17 55
Mary C Austin	12 00
Total	$29 55

Florence Mission.

Prev. ack	$40 60
C H Reader, Washing'n	5 00
Total	$45 60

Any Good Cause.

Prev. ack	$227 08
R O Baggerly	5
B P Fessler	5 00
H Friend, Ceres	1 00
Reader, Portsmouth	11 00
M A Haven	24
Total	$244 37

Miss Mary A. Sharp, Missionary in Africa.

Prev. ack	$21 50
Mrs R Parrott	1 00
Total	$22 50

Armenian Fund

Prev ack	$317 02
Friend to the cause, Lindsay	2 00
Mrs M J Fletcher	2 00
J T Turner	3 00
John Musil	2 00
Mrs N Wayland	1 00
Mary Holshire	5 00
Mrs A R Rockhill	20
Friend, Bechtelsville	10 05
Friend, Middle Falls	1 00
Mrs A M Ramsdell	1 00
A Bonnous	1 00
J M Hall	20
J A W, Tidioute	5 05
Simon A Hershey	1 00
Mrs E M, Allegan	2 00
J A W, Tidioute	3 00
Total	$356 52

The Bubonic Plague

In prevention and treatment of Bubonic plague, the serum for inoculation recently discovered by Dr. Hoffkine, of Austria, has been proven successful within certain limitations. It is impossible to vaccinate a large population with it, as the serum is efficacious for only a very short time, but in circumscribing an outbreak to the locality where it occurs, it is very useful. The Oriental hospitals usually keep it and supply it on proper application. Within the first two days of the attack, the disease is easily cured by inoculation. Scientific students and experimenters have reached the conclusion that the plague is not easily propagated, even in infected towns outside of native quarters; that when an outbreak does occur it is readily controlled and extinguished by means of the serum and heroic measures of disinfection. Rev. Porusse Russell, learned priest, Oriental traveler and expert authority, is reported as saying that there is small danger of infection in Manila under our government and sanitary system In view of the fact that since 1897 this disease has claimed 26,000 victims in Bombay alone, and that it has made disquieting progression westward, the opinions cited are reassuring.

"The Best Poultry Book on the Market."

Profits in Poultry.

352 Pages, 5 1-2x7 1-2 inches, 154 Illustrations, Illuminated Cover, and 18 Color Plates of Cochins, Brahmas, Malays, White and Brown Leghorns, Plymouth Rocks, Leghorns; Golden, Black, and Silver Hamburgs; Rouen and Pekin Ducks; Toulouse Geese; Golden Spanish and Black Polish; Grey Dorkings, Red Games and White Bantams.

By JAMES RANKIN, P. H. JACOBS, T. M. FERRIS, BURR KNAPP, W. H. RUDD, and others. Edited by the Poultry Editor American Agriculturist.

This new, revised and enlarged edition of what has always been recognized as the standard work on poultry, is nearly one-third larger than any previous edition, and has been fully brought up to the requirements of the present day. The ways and means by which eggs or poultry can be grown at a profit are discussed in great detail.

The chapter on artificial incubation alone is worth many times the price of the book to anyone engaged in poultry raising as a business. Care of chicks, diseases and their treatment, feeding and caring for eggs, or for meat, building coops and houses, caponizing, marketing, warfare against pests, raising waterfowl and ornamental poultry, are described at length. The reference matter and tables are a special feature of the book. Experience of breeders and poultry farmers has been drawn upon freely, resulting in that breadth of view which can be obtained only by comparison of successful methods in actual practice.

OUR GREAT FREE OFFER, This great work was never before sold for less than $1, but we have printed an enormous edition (paper covers), and will send it to every subscriber to the weekly American Agriculturist for three months, on receipt of only 35 cents postpaid, provided you mention where you saw this ad. This offer is to new subscribers only. Everybody knows the sterling merit of this great agricultural weekly (formerly monthly). Its poultry department alone is worth the year's subscription price. It is now published in three editions. You get the western edition (Orange Judd Farmer of Chicago) if you live in the west; the American Agriculturist edition if you live in the middle or southern states and the eastern edition (The New England Homestead of Springfield), if you live in N. E. or the Provinces.

Send 35 cents in silver or stamps; the book will follow in a few days, and for three months the edition of the American Agriculturist circulating in your own state, containing the markets and special local features characteristic of your section. Address

ORANGE JUDD COMPANY, 52 Lafayette Place, New York.

FREE COSTS NOTHING

But the asking to get our new 1900 Catalogue of either

PIANOS OR ORGANS

At wholesale prices, thus saving you every penny usually pocketed by agents and dealers.

SEND TODAY FOR OUR NEW

1900 Coupon { It saves you $10.00 on an ORGAN. " " $20.00 on a PIANO.

CASH OR INSTALMENTS.

30 days' trial. No money in advance. Safe delivery at your depot insured. Instalments. Easy payments. Our new due bill certificate shows you how to get an Organ or Piano for little or nothing. Remember, our Catalogue costs you nothing, and will positively save you money.

PIANOS, $155 UP.

ORGANS, $21.75 UP.

We furnish with each Piano a $10 hard wood Piano Chair free, also Plush Scarfs and $10 worth of the latest sheet music. Complete Organ outfit, free. Our factory, with its enormous capacity, enables us to sell you a high-grade instrument at a figure much below that of any other company in the world.

INCORPORATED FOR 50 YEARS.

WE LEAD, OTHERS FOLLOW.

Beethoven Piano and Organ Co.,

Box 741 WASHINGTON, N. J

ENTERPRISE

Meat and Food CHOPPER

Unquestionably the most perfect, most convenient, most durable and most economical machine that has ever been made for chopping—

Sausage and Mince Meat, Tripe, Suet, Hash, Hamburg Steak, Clams, Chicken and Lobster for Salad, Codfish, Cocoanut, Corn for Fritters, Scrap Meat for Poultry, etc.

Does not grind or shred the food, but chops finely, evenly, rapidly. Our trademark ENTERPRISE is on every machine. Prices: No. 5, $2.00; No. 10, $3.00; No. 20, $5.00. Twenty-three other sizes and styles, for hand and power. Sold by all hardware dealers. Descriptive catalogue mailed free.

Send 4c in stamps for the "ENTERPRISING HOUSEKEEPER"—200 recipes.

THE ENTERPRISE MFG. CO. OF PA., 3d & Dauphin Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

PAT. DEC. 30, '90.

300,000

SOLD.

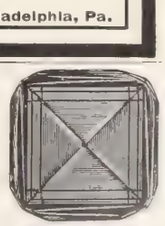
Amazing figures for so small an article,—yet ample proof of its popularity and usefulness. The most roomy and least bulky purse made—lies flat in the pocket.

Ask your dealer for the

Paragon Patent Folding Coin Purse

or I will send you sample at following prices, postpaid

	Calf.	Seal.
No. 011 holds $6.00 in silver	$.25
" 11 " 6.00 "	.40	$.75 $ .90
" 13 x " 10.00 "	.50	.90 1 25



PAT. DEC. 30, '90

JAMES S. TOPHAM, Sole M'f'r, 1232 Penna. Ave., Washington, D. C.

SILK REMNANTS for CRAZY WORK

A big package of beautiful Silk Remnants, from 100 to 120 pieces, all carefully trimmed prepared from a large accumulation of silks especially adapted for all kinds of fancy work. We give more than double any other offer, and the remnants are all large sizes, in most beautiful colors and designs. Send 25 cents in silver or stamps to Paris Silk Company, Box 3045, New York City, N. Y.

To Christian Herald Readers.

Several times during the years 1896, 1897, 1898, and the early part of this year we used the back cover of this paper to call your attention to the plan we offer for home-building and investment at Maywood Colony, which is located at Corning, Tehama County, California. Get an upto-date map of California, and you'll find Corning on the west-side branch of the Southern Pacific Railway, 110 miles north of Sacramento. Maywood Colony is separated from the world-famous Stanford vineyard by the Sacramento River, which shows that the colony is in the region of big and good things. Senator Stanford could just as well have set his 4000 acre vineyard in the central or southern part of the state, but he didn't. He planted where he thought results would be best. Just so in locating Maywood Water melons growing between rows of orange trees at Maywood Colony, California. The melon on wheel, the hand rests weighed 62 pounds.

Colony. We could have started it elsewhere, but as far back as 1891,—the year we laid out the colony,—we saw and appreciated certain conditions at Maywood which, in our judgment, made the location an ideal one for a colony. Time and results have proved that we sized up the situation correctly; for no where else in the big state of California can you raise so good an orchard for so little money as you can at Maywood. Of course you want to know why. All right. In the first place, Maywood is the only colony in California that is located right on a railway and river—thus having the benefit of competitive freight rates between rail and river—in which you can buy first class fruit land—land that is clear and ready for planting at $50 an acre.

In the second place it is the only colony in California that does not have an expensive and uncertain irrigation proposition tacked on to it, yet during the fruit season just closed it led all other California colonies in yield; and the fruit excelled in quality, for it commanded the highest prices. And, in the third place, it is the only colony in California where the resident members have organized and incorporated under the laws of the state for the purpose of planting and developing orchards—as well as harvesting the fruit crops—for both resident and non-resident colonists. There is great economy and efficiency in such an organization. N. G Kent, of Corning, is the Secretary. The fact that first-class fruit land can be had at Maywood Colony in lots of 2½, 5, 10 or 20 acres, and that, through the association referred to, the land can be set to trees, and these trees brought to maturity, has made the proposition a taking one for professional men, and for women. Over 1100 people now own land in the colony. Caring for the orchards of absent owners furnishes employment for the resident colonists. Up to the present time we have advised the non resident colonist to hold his position, or keep his business, and be in no hurry to settle at Maywood. We have said that the place was yet young and small, and the opportunity for employment limited. While this sort of advice has resulted in keeping back the population of the colony, we are satisfied that for all hands concerned the plan was the best one. If, during 1896, 1897 or 1898 we had induced two or three hundred of our eastern colonists to have moved to Maywood there surely would have been trouble all around: for during those Harvesting peaches at Maywood Colony, California. Trees set 22 feet apart and yielded 150 pounds of fruit per tree for season of 1899.

Looking south over a section of Maywood Colony, California. About 2,000 acres of orchard in view from this point.

Looking east over a section of Maywood Colony, California. Fruit-cutting sheds in the distance.

Five-year-old peach trees at Maywood Colony, California. These trees bore four tons of fruit to the acre during season of 1899.

years there was not a great deal of work at the colony—not more than could be done by those already on the ground. With the present year the situation has changed. Not since the beginning of the year have we been able to get help enough for plowing, planting, cultivating, picking, cutting and curing fruit, or for house building. By advertising locally we managed to get help enough to save the colony fruit crop, yet at all times we were short handed. Since July first it has not been possible to get carpenters enough to build houses as they were wanted by new arrivals. We are in position to say that the present demand for help is not only going to continue, but that it is going to increase. Under these circumstances we feel justified in saying that from now on any able-bodied man who can arrive at Maywood with means enough to buy a lot and build a house—say $1000 or $1200—will have no trouble whatever in making a comfortable living, and at the same time developing an orchard. Those with less money had better advise with us before making the move. We think we shall be able to show that it will be to their advantage to acquire land by our popular installment plan, arranging with the association to start their orchard, and care for it until such time as the owner finds himself in proper shape to move to and occupy his property.

Hauling peaches from orchard to dryer at Maywood Colony, California. From this orchard of 40 acres 140,217 pounds were hauled in season of 1899.

For planting an acre to peaches, pears, prunes, apricots, almonds, figs or nectarines, and properly caring for same the first year, the association charges $35. That is to say, the association will furnish trees of any of the varieties named (trees are set 22 feet apart or up to the acre), plant and cultivate them the first year for $35. Any number of acres at the same rate. The expense of having an orchard cared for after the first year—that is, properly plowed, pruned and cultivated—is $12.50 per acre.

Naturally, you want to know something of the size of the settlement, and of its development. In Maywood there are 18,000 acres, or 1,800 ten-acre farms—farms enough, if placed side by side and in a single row, to make a continuous farm 660 feet wide and 225 miles long. Of colony avenues there are 154 miles. Of fruit trees 360,000 have been planted—enough, if set in a single row, to reach 1,500 miles. Of people there are now about 1,000, and each week a few more arrive and settle. Men of good judgment tell us that the population of the colony will run up to ten or fifteen thousand in a few years. We don't think it will—don't predict such growth as an inducement to get new settlers. We do believe, however, that in five years from now the population of Maywood Colony will be 5,000. Already the colony is well supplied with school and church facilities. The colony hotel enjoys the reputation of being the best one north of Sacramento, and affords a comfortable and cheap stopping place for those who go to inspect the colony. While houses are under construction, colonists make their home at this hotel, which is about 200 feet west of the depot at Corning. The home office of the colony is just across the street from the hotel. By this it will be seen that you can go to the colony, get hotel accommodations, and see Mr. Foster, who is at the home office, without any trouble whatever.

Fruit being dried at drying grounds of the Maywood Colonies Fruit Association. Grounds cover 20 acres.

Depot of the Southern Pacific Railway at Corning, the station for Maywood Colony, California.

Now, whether you care anything about Maywood Colony or not, there is one thing you can do for us, and we want you to do it. It is this: Don't judge us by the same rule that you do the ordinary "boomer." We don't boom. "Boomers" always get in, and then get out. We came to stay. We have been telling the same story and doing business at the same stand for nine years. We expect to be at the same stand, doing the same kind of business, for another nine years. We deal with the people in such a way that we can live among them. The money we make out of Maywood we don't invest elsewhere, but put it back into improvements at Maywood. We have orchards ourselves at Maywood, and Hotel Maywood, at Corning, California.

Home office of Maywood Colony at Corning, California. Mr. Foster in charge.

make big money out of them. You see, we take the same medicine that we prescribe for others. Just because some friend of yours, or some friend of your friends, has rushed into some wildcat scheme in California and lost his money, it doesn't follow that he will lose if he invests at Maywood. Maywood is called to mind by any county that has ever been developed in California. We will take pleasure in giving to anyone a ten-acre lot in Maywood if they will establish the fact that we have, in any instance, failed to convey perfect title to land in Maywood Colony that has been paid for in full. Furthermore, if any reader of The Christian Herald thinks that we do not give perfect title to our colony land, or if any have heard that we do not, we ask that a statement of the case be sent to this paper. Our money could not buy space in this paper if the management did not consider our proposition a fair and honest one. We don't want to be where we have no right to be. Notwithstanding that we have sold about 13,000 acres of land in Maywood, we still have about 5,000 acres of first-class fruit land that can be had in lots to suit. If you want some of it we want to sell it to you, and we will try and fit our terms to your purse. A ten-acre lot can be had for $500, a five-acre lot for $250, and a two and one-half acre lot for $125. Terms will be such as anyone can meet. Our prospectus, giving a map of the several Maywood Colonies, together with prices, terms and full details, will be sent you FREE upon request.

Methodist Church at Maywood Colony, California. Rev. T. A. Towner is pastor.

Public school at Maywood Colony, California. Prof. A. W. Glover is principal.

If you want to read up on California, you need a semi-monthly paper which we publish. It deals in detail with the climate, resources and possibilities of that state. Twenty-four issues will go to you for twenty-four cents in stamps.

FOSTER & WOODSON.

Eastern Office,
Corner Broadway & 26th St.,
New York City.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor

COPYRIGHT 1899, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 15, 1899

VOLUME 22 - NUMBER 46

PRICE FIVE CENTS

ADMIRAL DEWEY'S BRIDE, FORMERLY MRS. MILDRED M. HAZEN (SEE PAGE 873)

OUR MAIL-BAG

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Reader, Norwich, Conn. What is the significance of the prediction (Gen. 3: 15) that the seed of the woman would bruise the head of the serpent, but would have his own heel bruised?

That in the conflict with evil, the victor, whom we understand to be Christ, would crush the enemy of the human race, but only at the cost of suffering to himself. It was to be a struggle in which the powers of evil would inflict a wound while in their own death throes.

Student, Brooklyn, N. Y. Who are the children of the kingdom to whom Christ referred (Matt. 8: 11, 12)? Do his words imply that converted persons may be lost?

Christ was evidently referring to the Jews. His remark was called forth by a Roman officer exhibiting more faith in him than had ever been done by a Jew. He therefore warned his Jewish hearers that, although they prided themselves on being children of the kingdom of God, through their descent from Abraham, they might be excluded from the kingdom because of personal unfitness; while others, who could not claim that illustrious pedigree, would be admitted because of their personal fitness. The present application of his words appears to us to be not to converted persons, but to nominal Christians, who have never been converted, but expect to enter heaven because they belong to Christian families, have been baptized and admitted to membership in a Christian church, but have not the spirit of Christ.

Erie W., Waterville, Minn. An editor here states that the Philippine Islands are more civilized than we are, and that they ought to civilize us instead of we them. Is this true?

It is absurd. A considerable part of the population of the Philippines is semi-savage, some wholly so. In the cities there is civilization and education, but even there only to a limited extent. The influence of Spanish rule has been unfavorable to the social and intellectual advancement of the native people.

Troubled One, Oberlin, O. Does not the promise that whatsoever we ask of God in Christ's name hold good now? What am I to think when my prayers are not answered?

God reserves to himself the right to give or withhold the boons for which we pray. It is well that he does so, otherwise we might suffer more than we do. He knows better than we do what would be for our good to receive. As the wise father does not grant every request his child makes, but because he loves the child refuses him things that would be harmful to him, so God does not answer all our prayers. Even so faithful a servant as Paul did not get his thorn in the flesh removed, though he prayed thrice for it (II. Cor. 12: 8). What you are to think when your prayers are not answered is that your heavenly Father has some wise purpose to serve in not granting your petition, and that you should acquiesce in his will, whatever it may be.

D. W. L., Lynn, Ind. There are three ways of delivering lectures: By reading from manuscript, speaking from notes, and without either. Each has its advantages and each its disadvantages. Will it be proper for a lecturer to go before the public and read his lecture and charge ten or fifteen dollars a night?

There is nothing improper about it. A lecture that is delivered from manuscript is very likely in better shape and more instructive than one delivered without manuscript.

Fred. D., Indianapolis, Ind. Does dread of death or a fear of Christ's second coming indicate that one is still outside the fold of safety?

Yes. To the Christian, death is not invested with terrors; he simply regards as the transition to the eternal life the mortal putting on of immortality. Moreover, far from experiencing fear or apprehension at Christ's second coming, he prays for it earnestly and devoutly desires it to be hastened.

M. L., Copenhagen, N. Y. What is the real bone of contention between the English Government and the Boers? The Boers' ultimatum seemed to be very fair.

The British contend that the Transvaal is a suzerainty of Britain, which the Boers deny. In addition to this claim, which is the principal cause of the trouble, there are complaints by the Outlanders of over-taxation, deprivation of franchise, and refusal of political and civil privileges. These the Boers declare their readiness to grant, under certain conditions. Back of all other causes is the determination to secure control of the rich mines at whatever cost. Had there been no mining question, there would have been no Boer war.

Subscriber, Toledo, O. Is the Revised Version of the Bible used in any church or by any large number of individuals? Was it not sacrilegious to produce such a book?

The Revised Version is gradually winning its way into use. It is doing so quite as rapidly as the Authorized Version did. There was a strong prejudice against that version when it was just issued. Probably two generations will pass before the Revised Version comes into general use. We believe no church has adopted it formally, but many preachers read it voluntarily in preference to the old version. It is a more accurate rendering and more in accordance with the most ancient copies of the Scriptures, some of which were not known in 1611 when the former translations were made. There cannot be anything sacrilegious in an attempt to get a better translation than we had before.

Mrs. A. S., Plattsburg, O. Please inform me through the columns of your paper as to who is the author of the following lines:

[illegible]

Wordsworth wrote the verses quoted in his poem, "Lines Upon a Seat in a Yew Tree."

R. A. McC., Germantown, Pa. Did Christ have any sisters or brothers?

The "brothers" of Jesus named in Scripture were James, Joses, Simon, and Judas (See Matt. 12: 46; Matt. 13: 55; John 2: 12 and 7: 3, 5, and 10; Acts 1: 14; Gal. 1: 19; 1 Cor. 9: 5, and Mark 6: 3). They are all named conjointly with the mother of Jesus and with Joseph. There have been many disputations as to whether they were "full" brothers to Jesus, by the same parents, or the sons of Joseph by a former marriage, and therefore half-brothers only, and this view was strongly urged by some of the early Church writers. Still another opinion was that expressed by Jerome, that these were the sons of Mary [illegible] sister (See John 19: 25), as she is distinctly said to have sons named James and Joses (See Acts 1: 13 and Matt. 27: 56). Sisters of [illegible] are mentioned in Mark [illegible] passage is of doubtful authority.

[illegible] version? 2. Is it possible to be entirely sanctified, soul and body, in this life?

1. Conversion is the work of the Holy Spirit. The converted man is in daily need of more grace and it is given in answer to prayer. Conversion is only the beginning of the Christian life. The Holy Spirit is given to impart strength for growth and for service. 2. See I. Thessalonians 5: 23. The apostle would not have prayed for an impossibility.

Anxious, Boston, Mass. I have not had a religious education, but have of late become concerned about my condition after death. I have been to [illegible] with the hope that I might learn how to become a Christian; but their language is technical. Can you tell me what I ought to do?

It would probably disappoint you if we answered in the Scriptural way: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Yet that is the only true answer. Stripped of [illegible] may be described as committing your case to Christ, much as you would commit your case to a physician if you were sick, or your trouble to a lawyer if you were in danger of imprisonment. "Believing on him" is the complete trust you place in him and the profound conviction that he can and will save you. This is the decisive thing, the turning point. That done, several results flow from it. One is sorrow for sin previously committed and a renunciation of it for the future. A second is the endeavor, in the strength that Christ imparts, to follow his example, to cultivate his spirit, and to live his life of purity, holiness and helpfulness. This involves prayer and submission to his will in all things. Then you should join a church to confess him openly. There are other matters that will call for your attention as you go on, but these we have mentioned are the plain, simple duties that you have to do in order to become a Christian.

Schoolboy, Little Rock, Ark. Will you please tell me who said: "Make your work clean and without delays."

Perhaps you refer to this, which was said by Prof. Blackie: "Make clean work and leave no tags. Allow no delays when you are at a thing; do it and be done with it."

J. L. B., Mount Pleasant, Pa. Are mill workers and factory hands justified in working on the Sabbath day, on the ground that if they refuse they will lose their position?

It is a matter for the individual conscience to decide, under such circumstances. There is no possibility of misunderstanding the divine commandment, which says, "Thou shalt do no work." Yet, in such a case, the moral responsibility would seem to rest chiefly with the employer, who compels his subordinates to labor on Sunday under pain of dismissal, [illegible] day labor the better.

[illegible] tell him what he can or cannot do?

[illegible] ing mistakes by being self-sufficient and rejecting well-meant counsel.

Lucinda S., Slaterville, N. Y. Do you think the [illegible]

Porto Rican annexation came about voluntarily; it was the work of the people themselves. The question of a free government there has never been seriously under discussion. [illegible] significant that it would be powerless to take a very good chance of being annexed by some [illegible] control it will realize the largest measure of self-government, and the benefits of development on moral, educational and commercial lines.

[illegible] and he that gathereth not with me [illegible]

Henry S., Toronto, Ont. A sceptical [illegible] are contradictions in the Bible [illegible] have been only eight years of [illegible]

Two explanations are offered. One, that at the age of eight his father associated him in the government, which was a common practice, and that he was eighteen [illegible] The s[illegible] more probable one is that some copyist mistook the Hebrew character for eighteen, for the one denoting eight, which might easily be done, and other copyists of Chronicles copying from him perpetuated the error. At a time [illegible] by hand, such a mistake might easily be made.

Rev. Zerah C. Collins, the Y. M. C. A. General Secretary for Porto Rico, writing to this journal a few days ago from San Juan, says:

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Sunbeams [illegible] Sunbeams. A visit would be an inspiration to the American friends of the work. It is now in the centre of the city.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S Porto Rican Relief Fund is now closed, and no further contributions will be received.

Inquirer. Write to a music publisher.

V. S., North Blenheim, N. Y. See Mark 6: 3.

Mrs. E. L. B., Stevens Point, Wis. Answered in a recent issue.

Chas. G. J. A., Hawk's Park, Fla. You are no doubt quite right.

Mrs. O. D. E., Ithaca, N. Y. Write to American Bible Society, New York.

Belle W., Equinonk, Pa. We do not know to what denomination he belongs.

Mrs. M. C., Mansfield, Pa. It was doubtless copied. She has no such beliefs.

M. E. V., Granton, N. Y. Write to Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, for all information.

Reader, Chesterfield, Va. You will find the information in any good encyclopedia.

Subscriber, Nunda, N. Y. We cannot devote the space to it. See some good almanac.

Mrs. S. F. G., Evansville, N. Y. Address Exchange for Woman's Work, New York City.

A. B. C., Washington, D. C. Write to the Training [illegible] of Nurses, New York City.

Abel T., Ishpeming, Mich. 1. It is wrong if you can do it on other days; otherwise not. 2. Yes.

F. A. Ray, Butler, Ala. No one knows. The knowledge would be worthless if it could be had.

[illegible] of New York State. 2. No, not in the same church.

Pearl B., Beloit, O. Yes, you have a right to make extracts with proper credit, but not to take the article entire.

J. L. B., Weatherford, Tex. Your only source of information must be the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

GATHERING ROSES IN A CALIFORNIA GARDEN IN WINTER

Frost rarely touches the valleys of the Golden State, and though the distant mountains may wear their snowy caps during the winter months, there are no such piercing blasts as are experienced in the East. Our photograph shows a scene in a California garden in midwinter, where the balmy air is laden with the fragrance of flowers, and the whole scene is suggestive of the tropical wealth and exuberant foliage of July rather than December or January.

A Tragedy in India

A Night of Desolation and Heroic Labor :: The Bereaved Missionary Family

IN this journal, on October 11, a brief report, sent by cable, was published of a terrible catastrophe at Darjeeling, India, in which many lives were lost. We have now received by mail from Mr. Benjamin Aitken, of Calcutta, the following graphic story of the calamity. We grieve to learn that Mrs. Ada Lee, whose interesting letter about the orphan children she is sheltering at her institution in Calcutta was published in this journal on October 25, is the chief sufferer. Her six children were in the school which was swept away, and only one was saved alive. Following is Mr. Aitken's story of the calamity:

MISS C. J. STAHL

An appalling catastrophe has taken place at Darjeeling, the great hill sanitarium of Bengal. This place is situated at an elevation of seven thousand feet above sea level, on the southern slopes of the Himalaya mountains, and a twenty-two hours' journey by rail due north of Calcutta. It contains a large population of natives, living in huts and bazaars, and more than a hundred residences of Europeans, both on the lower levels and on the steep hillsides. There are also several first-class schools for European children, who are sent there to be kept out of the trying climate of Calcutta and the plains of Bengal.

On Sunday evening, September 24, a cyclone, accompanied with torrents of rain, struck the "station," as towns like Darjeeling are called in India. It continued all night, and nearly twenty inches of rain fell. Before midnight, houses had begun to collapse in all directions, and the water, soaking into the soil, sent vast avalanches of rocks and earth, mixed with shrubs and trees, rolling down the hillsides with a roar which alarmed all the inhabitants.

The Arcadia Girls' High School stands on a ridge in one of the most popular parts of Darjeeling, and has fifty boarders, besides many day scholars. The lady principal is Miss C. Josephine Stahl, an American, born in Indianola, Iowa. She was a student of Simpson College, Iowa, and of the Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. She was sent to India in 1892 by the Northwestern Branch of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and was principal of the Calcutta Girls' High School in 1896-99. She took charge of the school at Darjeeling in the spring of the present year.

About half past ten o'clock, when the pupils and teachers were in bed, a part of the building fell in, and Miss Stahl made the girls get up and dress, and took them, with the teachers, through the rain and darkness, to a house called Ida Villa, higher up the ridge. Before long, Arcadia was swept away, and a bank of mud covered the site. The girls were accomodated in the main hall of Ida Villa, and most of them lay down on the floor to sleep. But in little more than an hour afterward a great mass of the hill above came down and covered the house, knocking down one wall, but leaving the roof and the other walls as they were. The inmates were thus shut in and drenched with mud, but not crushed. By desperate efforts a number of the girls were pushed or dragged through the ruin out into the deluge, but the danger of a second avalanche, which would have blotted out the school, increased every moment. Very great difficulty was experienced in keeping the terrified girls in order. There was in the school, staying as a visitor, the wife of the Rev. Frank W. Warne, pastor of the American Methodist Episcopal Church, in Calcutta. This lady, with her daughter, who is one of the senior girls in the school, and two of the teachers, scrambled through a window, and got on the road above and walked three quarters of a mile through the tempest to the Union Church Manse in search of assistance. Two gentlemen immediately set out to get help among the neighbors. In a very short time, six or seven gentlemen were at work on the ruin, and forty-five girls were got out alive and nearly all uninjured. But two sisters, aged nine and three, a third girl, and a little boy were taken out dead. The parents of these children are well known in Calcutta, and much sympathy is felt with them in their bereavement. The boy was a son of the Rev. Herbert Anderson, secretary of the English Baptist Missionary Society—Carey's Society.

The rescuing was a work of danger as well as of indescribable labor. The correspondent of one of the Calcutta daily papers says that several of the gentlemen deserve the Victoria Cross. One of them sank up to his shoulders in the mud, and his companions were nearly sucked in after him. But by spreading a water-proof coat on the ground, they secured sufficient buoyancy to drag him up. The rescued girls were distributed in different houses wherever shelter could be found at that hour, about three in the morning, with the wind still raging and the rain pouring, and the landslides filling the blackness with a continual roar.

But worse remains to be told. The Rev. D. H. Lee and his wife are American Methodist missionaries in Calcutta, Mrs. Ada Lee being well known in America as the writer of the thrilling story of "Chundra Lela." Their six children, Vida, Lois, Wilbur, Herbert, Ada, and Esther, the eldest seventeen and the youngest four or five years of age, were day scholars at "Arcadia," but lived by themselves with a native woman servant, in a house on the steepest part of the hill with a precipitous descent of several thousand feet to the Rungeat river below. During that awful night this house was carried away. All we know yet is that the body of the second girl was found, and that the eldest boy was found alive, though badly injured, but he has died of his injuries since he was saved. The other four children and the native woman may never be seen till the Resurrection Day. In the presence of this most terrible calamity the losses of the other bereaved parents appear light. Friends are not wanting who love Mr. and Mrs. Lee for their own sake, and their work's sake, and their Master's sake; and these are doing all that human friendship can do to impart comfort. But God is the real comforter, and surely not often have a father and mother stood in deeper need of the prayers of all who have access to the Throne of Mercy.

Mr. Lee's children were a dear and precious family, generous, kind and helpful. One by one they had given their hearts to God, and, as it seems now by a gracious Providence, their recent letters to their parents in Calcutta were inspired by a growing experience of their Heavenly Father's faithfulness.

The loss of native life has been very great, not only in Darjeeling, but on the tea estates which cover the lower hills for miles all round. A very well-known village of 200 inhabitants, situated some distance below the house occupied by the Lee children, has been overwhelmed. Besides the ten children mentioned, the only Europeans reported lost are three gentlemen who were upset in a boat crossing a stream. But the station of Darjeeling is a wreck; houses, gardens and whole hillsides gone in all directions; the roads are impassable, the water pipes and gas pipes torn out of the earth and broken, and the telegraph destroyed. The mountain railway, too, is breached in many places, so that people cannot leave Darjeeling, nor their friends in Calcutta go up to them. The mails are being sent by foot runners by a way fifty miles round about. News comes to Calcutta slowly and irregularly, and the relatives of the children at school are in a state of distraction. A telegram just received says that, according to what Wilbur Lee said, when the six children found that escape was impossible, they were gathered together to pray by the eldest girl, and were on their knees when the house was swept down the declivity. Another large girls' school, the Diocesan, was completely wrecked, but the children were all rescued without loss of life.

VIDA LEE AND LOIS LEE — HERBERT AND WILBUR — ESTHER AND ADA

THE LEE CHILDREN, ALL OF WHOM PERISHED AT DARJEELING

The funeral of the five children took place on Tuesday morning, and was a very impressive scene. The highest government officers at Darjeeling were present, and the procession was a mile long. Every exertion is being made to attend to the hundreds of wounded natives.

Admiral Dewey Wedded

AFTER Mrs. McKinley, our First Lady of the Land, no woman commands just now such a large share of patriotic interest and warm good wishes from the American public as the lady whom Admiral Dewey recently and suddenly announced in characteristic fashion, as his prospective bride. To a delegation of Tennesseeans who had called to extend him an invitation to be present in Nashville on the occasion of the return of the First Tennessee regiment from Manila, the Admiral in declining, said that he "had just gained the consent of the most charming woman in the world to be Mrs. Dewey," and could not well leave Washington immediately; upon which the importunities of the delegation were turned to congratulations.

In her recent visit to New York, where she purchased an American outfit, Mrs. Mildred Hazen, the bride-elect, was amusingly reminded of public interest in herself by admiring small boys who impeded her way when she walked under the Dewey Arch with the Admiral.

The Admiral has known the woman of his choice for many years. He met her first when she visited Washington as Miss Mildred McLean, daughter of the late Washington McLean, of Cincinnati, Ohio; and the acquaintance continued after she was the wife and widow of Brigadier-General Hazen, who died some twelve years ago. Prior to Dewey's sailing on the eastern trip that made him famous, Dame Rumor began to talk of a probable engagement between the pair who seemed well worthy of each other; later, whispers of a mysterious picture which held the place of honor in Dewey's cabin on the Olympia, and of cablegrams which came from foreign ports to Mrs. Washington McLean's house, while the Admiral was making his long journey home, seemed to confirm the first report. Then, when the people offered him a house in Washington, he accepted it promptly, said he wanted one already built; and as soon as it was selected he moved into it at once, and informed the public that, as quickly as he could win her consent, an American woman should grace it as his wife. Mrs. Hazen is well known and much loved in Washington; and is the sister of John R. McLean, late Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio and sister-in-law of Gen. Ludlow, Governor of Havana. Of her two children, one died in infancy; the other, a son about twenty-three years old, about eighteen months ago. She has lived of late years with her mother, between whom and herself a lovely comradeship exists. The Admiral's first wife, the daughter of a former Governor of Vermont, died in 1872; he has one son, George, who lives in New York. The Admiral is a member of the P. E. Church, and his bride is a Roman Catholic.

The Dewey home, No. 1747 Rhode Island avenue, is a substantial four-story brick building with brown-stone trimmings. It stands on a terrace, has a cheerful bay-window and a pyramidal tower. The large hall is wainscotted in oak, and has an open fireplace. The handsome and spacious parlor, divided into two rooms by fluted pillars, the big dining-room furnished in brown leather and mahogany, and the living and guest-rooms all wear a hospitable and home-like look. The servants' rooms are cheerful and comfortable. There is an admirable kitchen, laundry and store-room; the butler's pantry overlooks a well-sodded little lawn, forty feet deep. A suggestion made by the Admiral to the committee which had the presentation of the home in charge, was that the dining-room should be somewhat commodious as he meant to welcome many friends to his board. Mrs. Hazen's inclinations were also influential in the selection of the establishment; and since she, as well as her gallant sailor, is hospitably minded, we may be sure that their dwelling will be the centre of benefits and happiness to many beside themselves. The wedding occurred Nov. 9 in St. Paul's Church, Washington, D. C. The earnest good wishes of thousands will follow Mrs. Dewey and her husband into the sanctuary of that home which love of the American people has provided for the greatest naval hero of the age, who showed himself in war as wise and humane as he was brave.

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT.

.. SETTLED IN HEAVEN ..

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text, Psalms 119: 89: . . . . . Forever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven

THIS world has been in process of change ever since it was created. Mountains born, mountains dying, and they have both cradle and grave. Once this planet was all fluid, and no being, such as you or I have ever seen, could have lived on it a minute. Our hemisphere turns its face to the sun, and then turns its back. The axis of the earth's revolution has shifted. The earth's centre of gravity is changed. Once flowers grew in the Arctic and there was snow in the Tropic. There has been a re-distribution of land and sea, the land crumbling into the sea, the sea swallowing the land. Ice and fire have fought for the possession of this planet. The chemical composition of it is different now from what it once was. Volcanoes once terribly alive are dead, not one throb of fiery pulse, not one breath of vapor. The ocean changing its amount of saline qualities. The internal fires of the earth are gradually eating their way to the surfaces. Upheaval and subsidence of vast realms of continent.

Moravians in Greenland have removed their boat poles because the advancing sea submerged them. Linneaus records that in eighty-seven years a great stone was one hundred feet nearer the water than when he wrote. Forests have been buried by the sea, and land that was cultured by farmer's hoe can be touched only by sailor's anchor. Loch Nevis of Scotland and Dingle Bay of Ireland and the fjords of Norway, where pleasure boats now float, were once valleys and glens. Many of the islands of the sea are the tops of sunken mountains. Six thousand miles of the Pacific Ocean are sinking. The diameter of the earth, according to scientific announcement, is one hundred and eighty-nine miles less than it was. The entire configuration of the earth is altered. Hills are denuded of their forests. The frosts and the waters and the air bombard the earth till it surrenders to the assault. The so-called "everlasting hills" do not last. Many railroad companies cease to build iron bridges because the iron has a life of its own, not a vegetable life or an animal life, but a metallic life, and when that life dies the bridge goes down. Oxidation of minerals is only another term for describing their death. Mosses and seaweeds help destroy the rocks they decorate.

The changes of the inanimate earth only symbolize the moral changes. Society ever becomes different for better or worse. Boundary lines between nations are settled until the next war unsettles them. Uncertainty strikes through laws and customs and legislation. The characteristic of this world is that nothing in it is settled. At a time when we hoped that the arbitration planned last summer at The Hague, Holland, would forever [illegible] the sound and [illegible] the gun and [illegible] the horizon the world has on hand two wars which are digging graves for the flower of English and American [illegible]. From the pressure of such geological and social and national and international [illegible] we turn with thanksgiving and exultation to my text, and find that there are things forever settled, for in higher latitudes than we have ever trod.

[illegible] O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven.

High up in the sanctuary of the sun at [illegible] there are orbits that nature shall go [illegible] and persistently [illegible] that happens in the realm of spiritual condition and not of earthly environment. [illegible] and the [illegible] or [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] groups filled with gladness, and talking good sense, and rallying each other in pleasantries, and in every possible way forwarding good neighborhood. The social life as perfect as refinement and common sense, and culture, and prosperity, and religion can make it. The earth made better than it was at the start. And all through gospelizing influences, directly or indirectly.

That was an exciting scene after the battle of Bosworth, which was fought between Richard III. and the Earl of Richmond, the King falling and the Earl triumphing, when Lord Stanley brought the crown and handed it to the Earl, seated on horseback, while the dying and the dead of the battle were lying all around. But it is a more thrilling spectacle as we look forward through the centuries and see the last armed and imperial iniquity of the world slain and the crown of universal victory put upon the conqueror on the white horse of the apocalypse, and all nations "hail the power of Jesus' name." That the whole earth will be redeemed is one of the things long ago settled in heaven. Another thing decided in that high place is that all who are adjoined to the unparalleled One of Bethlehem and Nazareth and Golgotha will be the subjects of a supernal felicity without any taking off. The old adage says that "Beggars must not be choosers," and the human race in its depleted state had better not be critical of the mode by which God would empalace all of us. I could easily think of a plan more complimentary to our fallen humanity than that which is called the "plan of salvation." If God had allowed us to do part of the work of recovery, and he do the rest; if we could do three-quarters of it and he do the last quarter; if we could accomplish most of it and he just put on the finishing touches, many could look with more complacency upon the projected reinstatement of the human family. No, no! Not one step of our heavenly throne made by earthly carpentry. Not one [illegible] of our eternal rejoicing. Accept all as an unmerited donation from the skies, or we will never have it at all.

O, Christ, come hither and [illegible]! Here are our [illegible]; here are our burdens—lift [illegible]; here are our sorrows—comfort them. We want the Christ of Bartimeus to open our blind eyes, the Christ of Martha to help us in our domestic cares, the Christ of Christ to help us pray, the Christ of Luke Galilee to [illegible] the Christ of Lazarus to [illegible]. Now we trust it is to come through the [illegible] shoulders so long carried the world's woe, and on the forehead [illegible] may be crowned [illegible].

By the bloody sweat of the mountain on which Jesus died, and by the sepulchre where his mutilated body was enclosed in Arimathean crypt, and by the [illegible] where his unmerited disciples [illegible] by the rage of [illegible] and by the [illegible] and omnipotent [illegible] we entreat, we [illegible] for the coming of all those [illegible] was sealed to [illegible] Kingdom [illegible] your head to [illegible] and final [illegible] come to what you have done and [illegible] to live up what he is doing [illegible] and all to work for both worlds. Then you can swing out defiance to all opposition, [illegible] and darkness. The [illegible] to be conquered [illegible]. And [illegible] that [illegible] of [illegible] that [illegible] "having despoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them, openly triumphing," so bringing before us that overwhelming spectacle of a Roman triumph?

When Pompey landed at Brindisi, Italy, returned from his victories, he disbanded the brave men who had fought under him and sent them rejoicing to their homes, and entering Rome his emblazoned chariot was followed by princes in chains from kingdoms he had conquered, and flowers, such as only grew under those Italian skies, strewed the way, and he came under arches inscribed with the names of battlefields on which he had triumphed, and rode by columns which told of the fifteen hundred cities he had destroyed, and the twelve million people he had conquered or slain. Then the banquet was spread, and out of the chalices filled to the brim they drank to the health of the conqueror. Belisarius, the great soldier, returned from his military achievements, and was robed in purple, and in the procession were brought golden thrones and pillars of precious stones, and the furniture of royal feasts, and amid the splendors of kingdoms overcome he was hailed to the hippodrome by shouts such as had seldom rung through the capital. Then also came the convivialities. It was to such scenes that the New Testament refers when it speaks of Christ "having despoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them, openly triumphing." But, Oh the difference in some respects! The Roman triumph represented arrogance, cruelty, oppression, and wrong, but Christ's triumph meant emancipation and holiness and joy. The former was a procession of groans accompanied by a clank of chains, the other a procession of hosannas by millions set [illegible] free.

The only shackled ones in the procession at Christ's triumph will be Satan and his [illegible] and as our Lord's chariot wheels [illegible] all the abominations of all the [illegible] bound for an eternal captivity. Then will come a feast, to which the [illegible] will be [illegible] with the rare wine of the [illegible]. Upon [illegible] of [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] where the [illegible] crown of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Woes of Intemperance

S. S. Lesson for Nov. 26. Prov. 23: 29-35. Golden Text, Prov. 20: 1

"WHO hath woe? Who hath sorrow? Who hath contentions? Who hath complaining? Who hath wounds without cause?" (Prov. 23: 29). Ask these questions of any child in the slums of our great cities, and the larger number of these poor little ones will answer, "Father." But why should your father have "woe" more than other people? Why should he have "sorrow"? Why should he have so large a share of "contentions," "complaining," "wounds without cause"? And the child would say "he drinks." Everybody knows it is so, and yet thousands of church-goers, and not a few of those who profess to be true children of God, live, get rich, and obtain a high position, through the manufacture of that maddening drink which fills our slums, our lunatic asylums, our poorhouses, and our graveyards with victims! If they earned their living by propagating smallpox, the bubonic plague, or leprosy, the law would lay hold of them as the murderers of men; but because it is the drink, which adds so largely to the revenue, no hand of justice is laid upon them. Does God approve?

And yet where smallpox, plague, or leprosy cut off their hundreds, the drink cuts off its thousands; the Word of God does not shut out those who die of these diseases from salvation; but "drunkards" shall not "inherit the kingdom of God" (I. Cor. 6: 9-10). Can it be that in Christian lands, men, on the principle of self-preservation, are hindered from harming others by propagating infectious diseases, but they are not hindered from manufacturing that which destroys so many, soul and body, because Government fears to lose revenue, and because the power of the drink traffic is such a potent one as largely to influence politics? Alas! "righteousness," which "exalteth a nation," has yielded to a policy which debases a nation. How can it be otherwise? All the temperance societies, all the influence of popular opinion on this question, which among Christians has undergone a great change for the better the last twenty years, have left the Government as strongly in favor of the drink as ever!

But the poor victims? Yes, and the rich victims, for there are large numbers of the educated classes, men and women, who are slaves to the drink curse—what of them? How few hospitals for drunkards are to be found! How do people become drunkards? One and all by self-indulgence. It is an awful fact that the will which God has committed to his creatures wherewith to choose His will, when it is not yielded to him, but allowed to become our master, subjects those who thus yield to it to the most terrible slavery. Woe to that man whose power over his own will has become paralyzed! Christ "died for all, that they should henceforth live, not unto themselves, but for him which died for them, and rose again" (II. Cor. 5: 15). The self-indulgent, "the drunkard and the glutton," are linked together by the wise man. "Hear thou, my son, and be wise, and guide thine heart in the way. Be not among winebibbers, among gluttonous eaters of flesh, for the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty" (Prov. 23: 19-21, R.V.).

Any self-indulgence is a lust of the flesh: eating, drinking, novel reading, needless dress, amusements, tittle-tattle, sight-seeing, boasting, or talking about ourselves; anything and everything in which we seek only our own gratification, is in God's sight as abhorrent as the sin of the poor drunkard. It may not be so disgusting externally, but it is the same tendency in the heart which leads us to indulge ourselves in one way as in another; our tastes may differ, but the principle is the same. And who are we to turn in disgust from a poor, filthy drunkard, when in heart we are doing the same things?

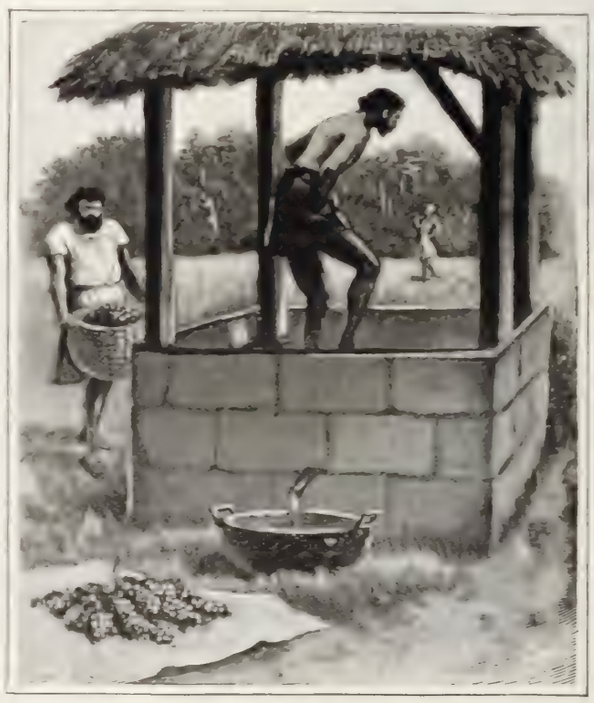
The devil's gospel is, "Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die" (I. Cor. 15: 32). A word which Paul spoke in irony to the shame of the Corinthians, but with a preface, "If the dead rise not." But the dead shall rise; every poor drunkard, every slave of self, shall awake, "some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." A drunkard, and equally any man or woman who has become a slave to self-indulgence of any kind, has become more or less possessed by the enemy. If we are not possessed by God we are in some degree Satan's slaves. When Eve yielded to self-indulgence, it was at the instigation of the enemy, and he entered in with the bait he had laid for her. Eve did not eat the forbidden fruit to allay hunger, nor yet to gain strength, but only because it pleased her to indulge herself. It was "good for food," "pleasant to the eyes," desirable to make one wise—not necessary, but she would like it—and she fell, and involved a race of beings in her fall!

Therefore, says the wise man, "Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright; at the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." This was just what Eve did, she looked upon the fruit, instead of looking away from it up to God. The self-indulgent look at all things in relation to themselves: what they would like, how things suit them, etc. It is dangerous ground: man lost dominion over himself when he lost dominion over the creation, he needs a master, and if he does not yield to God, God's enemy usurps the throne of his being. But this the poor deluded dupes of the enemy cannot see. How often a poor slave of drink says, "I can leave it off when I like: I have complete control of myself," while everyone can see how utterly he has become [illegible].

How are they to be helped, these poor victims? It takes the all-power of God to do it: and he can do it, and does. But the hundreds of thousands who go down into a drunkard's grave make one long for the time when a King shall reign in righteousness, and when revenue shall no longer be received from opium, strong drink, tobacco, or any of those things which tend to demoralize and deteriorate. Meanwhile, a solemn responsibility is upon all of us to throw our influence into the right scale, not only to abstain ourselves for God's sake and the sake of the tempted, but at the same time to walk closely with him about all the details of our own life. This is an age of self-indulgence.

The self-indulgent, and especially drunkards, find themselves at last deceived, but it is too late. Having yielded to the enemy, there is no power to draw back. They cannot see things as they really are: "Thine eyes shall behold strange things." Oh, how awful to be unable to see the truth, or to speak the truth, to be unable longer to discern between truth and falsehood; to declare, "I am not intoxicated: I have not been drinking," at the very moment when the poor frame so grievously sinned against, can no longer bear its weight, and the miserable creature falls all along on the ground! "Thine heart shall utter froward things." Yes; the tongue is the instrument of unrighteousness now. "Wine is a mocker; strong drink is raging" (Prov. 20: 1), but only because the great mocker Satan is behind it.

And then comes the awful end: Delirium tremens. "Thou shalt be as he that lieth down in the midst of the sea, or as he that lieth upon the top of a mast." Oh, the awful, unspeakable horrors of delirium tremens!



ORIENTAL METHOD OF MAKING WINE BY TREADING GRAPES

that water is the best beverage, and that it is to their advantage to have nothing to do with intoxicating drinks, he may save them from a danger that they do not dread. It is to the beginning of the downward career, not the end, that he should direct his efforts. Every child knows that the drunkard is a miserable, despicable creature: what he needs to be told is that it is folly to drink even in moderation of intoxicants and that he would be better in health, purse and morals for abstaining altogether from them.

It biteth like a serpent. Mr. Gough used to tell a fable of a serpent in a circle of fire. A man was passing by and saw it and the snake said to him, "Help me out of my difficulty." "If I do you'll bite me." "Oh no, I won't." "I am afraid to trust you." "Help me out of the fire, or it will consume me and I promise, on my word of honor, I won't bite you." The man took the snake out of the fire and placed it on the ground. Then the snake said, "Now I'll bite you." "But, didn't you promise me you would not?" "Yes, but don't you know it is my nature to bite and I cannot help it?" So it is with the drink. It is its nature to bite: it is its nature to deceive.

I will seek it yet again. The singularity about temperance is that while a man will avoid other things that have done him [illegible] bauch, than he craves more liquor. A worker in one of our missions visited a man who had delirium tremens. The doctor who was attending him seeing a visitor there, called him aside and told him to caution his friend. "If he has [illegible] cians in the world cannot save him." The [illegible] week of his recovery. "I cannot do without it," he said, "and if I knew that I should die to-night, even that knowledge would not keep me from drinking." Infatuation like that could have but one end.

Thine eyes shall behold strange things. (R. V.) No one who has seen a victim of drink in the last stages of his suffering can ever forget the sight. A lawyer in a great city fell under the power of liquor and was prostrated by sickness. His pastor not knowing the cause of his sickness visited him. The sufferer turned to him in an agony of fear. "Keep them off me for mercy's sake," he cried. "Do you not see those slimy snakes writhing on the bed? They keep coming and they are trying to reach me. I see their glittering eye-balls. Oh, keep them off!" The pastor tried to convince him that there were no snakes there. "But I see them," he insisted, "they are all around me." To the sick man they were quite real. His eyes beheld strange [illegible]

Who hath contentions? One of the saddest trials ever recorded is described by an English judge. He says: The charge against the prisoner was murder—the murder of his friend. I never pitied a prisoner so much, but he wanted none of my pity. He clamored for conviction and when I was about to pass sentence he made only one request and that was that an early day be fixed for his execution. The man whom he had killed had been his friend from boyhood. They worked in the same shop and lived in the same boarding-house. One day they went out together to celebrate some holiday and both drank too much. A trivial dispute arose between them which would have been easily adjusted, if they had been sober. But being inflamed with liquor both grew angry. The prisoner went out, armed himself with a bludgeon, and when the other was going home struck him over the head and killed him. When he became sober and was told what he had done, he was overcome with remorse. I never saw greater mental suffering than was imprinted on the young man's face as he stood in the dock and solemnly raising his hand cursed the drink which had caused the crime.

Who hath woe? The woman who marries a man who becomes a drunkard. A couple stood up before a clergyman to be married. The bridegroom leaned over to whisper a few words to the bride. The friends were surprised to see her start back and sink weeping into a seat. She was so hysterical that the wedding ceremony had to be postponed. The bridegroom was asked what he could have said to distress her so much. He replied that it was only a loving word of tender affection and he could not account for her distress. Afterwards the bride explained it. She had once seen him the worse for liquor and she had exacted a promise from him that he would never touch it again. When he whispered to her at the wedding, she smelled liquor on his breath and realized that he had broken his promise. Nothing that he could say or do would induce her to renew the engagement and the sequel showed that she was wise. He married another girl within a year and for a few months behaved himself. But soon he again began drinking. His wife, hoping against hope, tried to reform him, but he broke her heart and ultimately murdered her.

Lesson Points

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers

ONE of the best services a teacher can render to the children in connection with this lesson is to induce them to abstain from intoxicants in early life. The habit thus formed will be a strong barrier against temptation. None of them ever expects to become a drunkard. They do not suppose that "the woes of intemperance" have anything to do with them, and the teacher will waste his time if he tries to scare them into temperance by depicting those woes. But if he can convince them

THE PREMIER OF THE JEWISH WORLD

Dr. Hermann Adler, the Great Rabbi of the United Congregations of the British Empire, and His World-Wide Influence

TIMES have changed since the law went forth from Jerusalem. The sons of Abraham, scattered throughout the world, no longer look to their ancient capital for leadership or guidance in matter of faith and practice. No high priest, no Sanhedrim now utters the final dictum from the holy city. Dear as its name is to the Jewish heart, tender as are the hallowed associations it calls up in the memory, the Jew no longer turns to Zion for decisions on dubious questions, or for authoritative utterances on the duties of life. He looks rather to the representative of numbers, wealth and influence. In all these qualifications the central power has been gradually changing its seat during the past century. The English-speaking Jew is the foremost of his race. On both sides the Atlantic he is in the front rank of all the Jews of the world in culture, intelligence and energy. So it has come to pass that the real leader of the race, the ecclesiastical head and representative of Judaism, so far as such an office can be said to exist, is the chief rabbi of the United Hebrew Congregations of the British Empire. No other man among the Jewish people has a following so large, so wealthy, so influential as he, and the fact is now recognized not only in England and America, but in Germany, Russia and Oriental lands. He possesses no authority over his race, but everywhere the holder of that office is held in reverence.

THE SYNAGOGUE AT ALDGATE, LONDON

DR. HERMANN ADLER

. . .

The present incumbent of that high office, Dr. Hermann Adler, like his father and predecessor, Dr. Nathan Marcus Adler, is a man eminently fitted by his profound learning and brilliant talents to exercise leadership in the Jewish world. He is not only of the priestly tribe, but is the present head of a family of rabbis, famous through many generations for erudition and piety. The early origin of the family dates from Frankfort, in Germany, where tradition credits the Adlers with descent from the famous Rabbi Simeon, who early in the eleventh century, compiled the Valkut, the great treasury of Midrashic literature. Dr. Hermann Adler was born in Hanover, May 29, 1839, whence, in his sixth year, he emigrated with his father to London. He received his early education under Dr. Kalisch, the renowned Biblical scholar, by whom he was prepared to enter the University of London. His career at this institution was exceptionally brilliant. He carried off the first prize for Mental Philosophy and Logic and gained honors in English and Classical Literature. It is an interesting coincidence that in several of the lists of honors his name was bracketted with that of the present Lord Herschell, who became Lord High Chancellor of England and who is also of Jewish descent. In 1859 he matriculated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

. . .

By his father's advice the young student turned his attention to theology. His first sermon was preached at Swansea. A silver goblet presented to him, in memory of that event, he still uses as his "Kiddush Cup." For the purpose of studying the Talmud he entered the University at Prague, where he studied under the famous Rabbi Rapoport and other well-known rabbis, who, when they conferred on him his Rabbinical Diploma, congratulated themselves on having ordained one of the most promising Hebrew students of modern times. In 1862, he entered the University of Leipsic, where he obtained his degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Returning to England, in 1864, he was appointed minister of the Bayswater Synagogue, London, and held that post for twenty-seven years. His sermons constituted the principal features of the Sabbath services there, and attracted many persons outside the community of the Jewish faith. His subjects were generally chosen to emphasize the spirituality of the Jewish doctrines and ceremonies, and were often directed to the tragic and striking epochs of Jewish history.

. . .

In 1879, when the health of his father began to fail, Dr. Hermann Adler was appointed his coadjutor, with the title of Delegate Chief Rabbi. In January, 1890, his father died, and it was recognized by all that no succession so suitable could be found as his son Hermann, but he was not formally elected and installed until June, 1891. The delay was chiefly due to an agitation among a certain section of the Jews for a curtailment of the powers of the chief rabbi, and for modifications of the Ritual of the Synagogue; but the agitation fell through, when Dr. Adler, by the firmness of his character, made it clear that he would refuse the office rather than sacrifice any of his principles.

The installation was in every sense a notable ceremony, there being present some, who, nearly fifty years before had witnessed the installation of his father. Dr. Hermann Adler himself was present on that occasion as a child on his mother's knee, a fact which he recalled in his eloquent sermon on his ideal of what a Jewish rabbi and pastor should be. One very interesting part of the ceremony was when the chief rabbi ascended the stairs leading to the Ark, which was hidden behind gold-embroidered curtains, and took from the sacred receptacle a "scroll of the Law," elaborately mantled in silk and velvet and having silver bells, surmounted with golden crowns, which tinkle-tinkled as, attended by the warden of the synagogue and two of the readers, he slowly carried the scroll up the building to the reading desk.

. . .

Dr. Adler takes a strong personal interest in all social, industrial, charitable and educational movements, and has organized a system of visitation among the poor Jews of the East End of London. In his position as chief rabbi he has been brought into contact with many non-Jewish societies, and his tact and diplomacy have made themselves felt in many ways advantageous to his people. He has represented Anglo-Judaism at Berlin and Paris during crises in the history of Israel. In 1881 Dr. Adler drew attention to the persecution of the Jews in Russia by his essay on "Recent Phases of Judæophobia," and was appointed a member of the Mansion House Committee for the relief of the sufferers. In 1885 he visited the Holy Land to inquire into the condition of the Jewish colonies founded there by various philanthropic agencies, and on his return communicated his impressions in a series of lectures.

Dr. Adler has contributed numerous essays to periodical literature, and is the author of several books of a controversial character, including a reply to Dr. Colenso's "Criticism of the Pentateuch," and "Sermons on Passages in the Bible on which Christian Theologians base their Faith." In 1867 Dr. Adler married Rachel, daughter of Mr. S. Joseph, in whom he finds a most excellent helpmate.

. . .

The Great Cathedral Synagogue of the Jews of London, is situated at Duke's Place, Aldgate, and it is here that Dr. Adler chiefly officiates. The hundredth anniversary of the consecration of the building was celebrated in March, 1890, Dr. Adler preaching a special sermon on the occasion. It is the oldest house of worship belonging to the Ashkenazi, or German section of the Jews of London. A Hebrew congregation worshipped on the site soon after the re-admission of the Jews to England in the middle of the seventeenth century. About 1722, a wealthy and pious Israelite, named Moses Hart, built a synagogue here, which he bequeathed to the congregation at his death. In the year 1790 the building was taken down and a larger one erected, toward which Mrs. Judith Levy, a daughter of the founder, contributed $20,000. In 1790 the building was consecrated by the Rev. David Schiff, the then chief rabbi and great uncle of Dr. Hermann Adler. The post of senior warden is occupied by Lord Rothschild, whose family have held the office for three generations.

London, Eng. BAYARD C. DIXON.

DR. ADLER CARRYING THE SACRED SCROLL AT HIS INAUGURATION

The Anti-Mormon Campaign

NOW, when the question is before the public whether an avowed polygamist shall sit among the law-makers of the nation, is the opportune moment to educate the people as to the real character of Mormonism. Two weeks now are worth two years at any other time. A well-planned effort is being made to so educate public opinion as to stop the rapid spread of Mormonism, move Congress to expel Mr. Roberts, and prepare the way for a constitutional amendment which will root out polygamy.

To this end the League for Social Service (105 East 22nd street, New York City), has issued seven Anti-Mormon leaflets, which, to the number of 700,000, it is enabled to offer the Young People's Societies, free of charge, except express age, on condition that they will pledge themselves to distribute the literature systematically. Ten times the above number ought to be circulated. Money is urgently needed for this work. Usually the cost of handling literature, and of postage is much more than that of the literature itself; but with the cooperation of the young people, we are able to place at least 500 pages in the hands of the people for every ten cents received. All persons desiring to aid in this moral campaign by their contributions should send the same to Spencer Trask, 105 E. 22nd street, New York City.

JOSIAH STRONG.

The prayers of the readers of this journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its proprietor, and also upon those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ, are printed in it; and that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of sinners and the quickening of God's people.

THE
CHRISTIAN HERALD
AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR.
T. DeWitt Talmage
EDITOR.
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. Price, $1.50 per year; postage included.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Foreign Postage. For each year to be paid outside the United States, the Canadas, and Mexico, foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals. It is always best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers.—We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, nor to make good omissions caused by tardy renewals.

Change of Date. It takes two weeks to change the date after your subscription is entered.

Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address. Always give both the old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed:

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,
Bible House, New York City.

The Neglected Sword

THERE is a sword that never wears out. Its edge is never blunted. On its blade no rust ever yet has gathered. It cuts to heal. It smites to save. It kills to make alive. It is the sword of the Spirit. Now is the time when it calls for strong hands and brave hearts to wield it. It has the property of giving skill to the untaught and valor to the once fearful and unbelieving. It can be held by a child and do execution. It may be thrust into the right place, when love directs, and made to flash with the light of its own brightness, even when there is the darkness of an almost despairing eye to trace its pathway to its object.

This sword, however, can do nothing while left in its scabbard. It is for use and not for ornament. Soldiers of Christ, Knights of the Cross, what is the world waiting for? Is it not for aggressive action? The battle-cry is sounding. Bugles are blowing. Trumpets call. The Great Captain gives the word "Forward." The Church has been cold, timid, compromising. Religion has degenerated into a sentiment. It has lost in part the power of conviction. Ministers and newspapers claiming to be orthodox and religious have surrendered to a false liberality. They have yielded up the very ark of salvation to the Philistines. They have mumbled a pleasing rhetoric as a substitute for the old Faith of Calvary. They have betrayed the Master.

Is it not high time, when the land is fainting under its heavy burdens, and the people are lost in the tangled wilderness of worldly disappointment, and corruption reeks in high places and in dark places, to bring back the power of the Bible to bear on the personal character, on family training, on political morals, and on the Church of the Living God?

Clocks Ahead

IN Berne, Switzerland, it was the custom for many years to have the clocks one hour ahead of the real time, and it came from this fact: many years before an army had besieged the city, and they had the stratagem that when the cathedral of that city struck twelve all the forces from all sides should advance. And so they waited for the hour to come. After a while the cathedral tower by mistake struck one instead of twelve, and the surrounding enemy thought they had lost their opportunity, they were an hour short the time. They felt it too late to start, they gave up the stratagem, and the city was saved. And then by public decree, and for many years, in remembrance of that deliverance all the clocks of the city were kept one hour ahead of time.

Christian men and women, set your clocks on, set your clocks on! Better come too early than come too late. "The King's business requires haste!—haste!" If the millennium starts next year there will be six millions of people that it will not touch—six millions of people who will die this year. All the influence we have upon the six million people who will die this year, must be exerted now or not at all. The work with some of them must be within one month, within one week, within one day, within one hour. This may be the hour. Now is the time.

All Must Help

THE Bible declares "If the ear shall say "Because I am not the eyes, I am not of the body, is it therefore not of the body?" The illustration used by the Apostle, is a very beautiful and suggestive one. It is taken from what might be called the commonwealth of our physical nature. It is the Gospel of human anatomy. The human body is made up of bones and nerves and muscles, of organs, separate and distinct, but kindred and related; so that while it is an anatomy, which is wonderful, each part has functions to be distinctly fulfilled by itself. The eye is for itself; and yet it is for the ear also. The hand is for itself; and yet it is for the foot also. The eye sees for itself; yet when its safety is endangered, the hand is lifted as by instinct, for its protection. For every other organ and member recognizes the fact that the eye is not for itself alone, but for the body. The man blind is disabled in the whole commonwealth of his being. The foot needs the eye, that it may walk in the light of day. The hand needs the eye, that it may ply a livelihood. It is the hand of the man that can see, which makes wonderful things in art. The other organs may rally to the defence of the man who cannot see; but, in spite of their contributions, they cannot make good his loss.

YOUR GREAT OPPORTUNITY

We hope all our friends who intend to take advantage of the great World Wide Encyclopedia offer, recently published in this paper, will send in their orders at once. Remember it is the best Encyclopedia Revised to 1899, containing all about the Spanish-American War. There are 12 large volumes with nearly 10,000 large pages and nearly 20,000 columns of condensed information, together with 96 admirably executed maps. This work which weighs nearly 40 lbs., sells regularly at $30, but we have cut the price in two and offer it on the instalment plan for $15, one dollar down and one dollar a month for 14 months, or 10 per cent. discount for spot cash.

The World Wide Encyclopedia has the imprint and endorsement of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and we vouch for the excellent character of the work throughout. It is admirably illustrated and is in every respect a first-class production.

Every set is accompanied by a "Key to Systematic Study" so that the purchaser may be guided in the study of any subject in art, history, literature, science, discovery, or invention. We send it securely boxed by freight or express but do not prepay charges. You cannot make a mistake in securing this admirable work for your library but you must act promptly. Remember one dollar down secures the immediate delivery of the entire twelve volumes.

The Work of Angels

MILLIONS [illegible]

But in our fear of honoring angels too much, perhaps we have fallen into the error of honoring them too little. Yet, if we believe the Holy Scriptures we must [illegible] that spiritual intelligences move the natural world [illegible] summer and winter, wind and storm, fulfilling His will and Word, and that those events we are apt to ascribe to the weather and to the forces of the elements are really duties done to that God "who maketh his angels spirits, and his ministers a flame of fire."

The writers of the gospels, their words and [illegible] men", and certainly we are not told so much about them without a good reason. The knowledge is given to comfort and help us; [illegible] the works of nature and in the lives of men and women is one of the grandest and most encouraging truths revealed unto us. From Genesis to Revelations they are represented as the instruments of God's help, comfort and direction; also of his anger and his chastisement. As soon as man fell they appear, the cherubim being sent with the flaming sword to guard the tree of life. The fiery lava which destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah was the work of the two angels who saved Lot. The hosts of Sennacherib were destroyed by an angel. The pestilence which followed David's faithless numbering of the people was the work of an angel; and how great must have been David's awe and sorrow when, after three days, he lifted up his eyes and saw the angel of the Lord, who had been sent on this message, standing between heaven and earth with a drawn sword in his hand, stretched over Jerusalem! No wonder that the king and the elders fell upon their faces! The pestilence had been terrible while its origin was mysterious; but, oh, how much more terrible when the cause of it was revealed! Again, it was an angel that at Belshazzar's feast wrote his doom on the wall of the banqueting hall; and it was also an angel that, while Herod was making his boastful speech, smote him with dreadful death.

But we read far more frequently of angels bent on works of mercy and help than of anger and of punishment; and how glorious must those days have been, when they came and went among men in the midst of their husbandry, and visibly visited weeping, praying women to console and assist them. Is there anywhere a more moving story than that of Hagar, as it is told to us in the sixteenth and twenty-first chapters of Genesis? In the first instance, the poor, fleeing slave-woman received both counsel and promise, and, full of gratitude, called the name of the Lord, "Thou God seest me." In the second case, when wandering in the wilderness of Beersheba, lost, and perishing with thirst, God heard her cry and sent an angel to show her a well of water and to renew the promise he had previously made her.

I have chosen the history of Hagar to show that God held the slave-woman just as near to his compassion as the Prince Abraham, or the prophet Balaam, or the Apostle Peter. And as I write these words there comes to my remembrance with an irresistible force and clearness some lines I learned many a year ago, written from the verse in the Koran:

"Call him Compassionate.
For he is pitiful to small and great."

[illegible]
Beside God's throne, ten myriads on each hand,
Waiting with wings outstretched and watchful eyes
To do their Master's heavenly embassies—
Bearing the word of power from star to star.
[illegible]
And unto these nought is too high or low,
Too mean or mighty, if he wills it so.

The poem is too long to quote entire, but it shows first Gabriel watching by the gates of gold, sent earthward to King Solomon, who had forgotten his evening prayer in his pride at the brave show one thousand swift war horses out of Nisibis made for him. And these are the closing lines of Gabriel's orders:

"Go in
Save thou my servant from such sin:
Also upon the slope of Arafat,
Toileth a yellow ant, who carrieth home
Food for her nest——her worn feet fail:
But thou, make her way naught:
And help her to her people in the cleft of the black rock."

——Silently, Gabriel left
The presence, and prevented the King's sin:
And helped the little ant at entering in."

The history of the heroic age of Israel is a history of the ministrations of angels; and incidentally in this ministration, they show their power over Nature and the animal world. Thus, to save Daniel, they shut the mouths of the lions; and to save the three holy children, they changed the nature of the fiery furnace into which they had been cast. It was also an angel that gave to the pool of Bethesda its healing quality; and why should we doubt that our own medicinal springs are [illegible] to his ascension. In the wilderness they nour[illegible] an earthquake; they lingered in his empty tomb; they went with him when he ascended into heaven again. And in this connection we may notice the significant fact, that angels do [illegible] strengthen the soul under trial.

[illegible] angels, and we are expressly told that their work is to minister unto us. Many a poor, [illegible] dying, knows and feels their presence and sympathy; and many an anxious man, waking when he should sleep, is comforted and counseled, he knows not how. They go before our faces, they prepare our way, they [illegible] when we are utterly worn out with care or suffering, they put us gently to sleep.

Truly "there remaineth a rest" for the children of God, but it is a rest from sin and sorrow, not from holy service. We shall no longer suffer, we shall do his will; joining, [illegible] angel ministers who wait upon those journeying from earth to heaven.

Amelia E. Barr

TIMELY WARNING

IT is very important that subscribers who intend to renew their subscriptions this month in order that they may receive the beautiful Home Sunshine Calendar, offered as a reward for prompt action, should remember that under no circumstances will any calendars be given for renewals sent in during the month of December. As stated in our last issue, the proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has expended many thousands of dollars to prepare this exceptional and especial treat for all who will cooperate with him in his efforts to avoid the customary rush during the month of December, and therefore of course only those who renew in November will be entitled to a copy of the calendar.

One hundred thousand of these calendars have been prepared, but there are three hundred thousand renewals in view, and such of our friends as are looking forward to the possession of this beautiful gift will do well to act very promptly in order to avoid disappointment.

You lose nothing by renewing a little in advance of the date of expiration as printed on the tab of the wrapper, as on receipt of your renewal we simply extend that date one year regardless of the date on which your renewal was received.

Ten thousand letters a day is an unusually large mail, yet that is just about the size of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD mail during the month of December under ordinary circumstances. But when our subscribers defer renewing until the last day of their subscription it means a large increase in this mail and the employment of inexperienced help to handle it and consequently unavoidable errors, the subsequent rectification of which entails much needless and expensive correspondence. If you will help us, by sending in your subscription this month, to distribute the busy season over a longer period of time, we will reward you with the presentation of one of the prettiest calendars you ever saw. This calendar consists of six egg-shelled card boards, each one nearly the size of a full CHRISTIAN HERALD page, and each containing a different design printed in twelve colors and neatly gathered with a silk ribbon. Altogether, this Calendar is a very pretty wall ornament, the presence of which will lend an additional ray of sunshine to your home. Of course this Calendar is given only for annual subscriptions for both new subscriptions and renewals. New subscribers get the paper free to January 1st, 1900.

The Close of a Public Career

SINCERE sympathy was awakened throughout the country on Nov. 1 by the announcement that Vice-President Hobart had definitely and finally retired from public life. So alarming had been the rumors in circulation, for some weeks previously, as to the condition of the Vice-President's health, that this announcement was recognized as ominous of a still more melancholy statement that might be expected in the near future. The gravity of Mr. Hobart's symptoms was first realized about a year ago, when he was preparing to return to Washington, to officiate at the opening of Congress. The physicians who were consulted at that time were able to give him temporary relief, but were aware that their distinguished patient was suffering from a disease of the heart, for which there was no cure. He was, however, able to resume his duties and did not himself realize how critical was his condition. Early this year he suffered from the prevalent malady of grip, which seems to have the power of intensifying any chronic disease that may be lurking about the system. He was, however, in his place in the Senate, at the closing session of Congress, but was then so feeble that his physicians feared he was on the verge of collapse. Various trips to Thomasville, Ga., to Long Branch, N. J., and to Lake Champlain, were undertaken in the hope of reinvigorating his health, but without satisfactory results. He returned to his home in Paterson, N. J., a very sick man. It was useless to keep from him, or from the public, the knowledge of the serious nature of his disease. In view of the fact that his illness might have a fatal termination, at any moment, the authorized statement of his critical condition was given to the press. It contained no word of hope and plainly intimated that even if the efforts to prolong his life were successful, his public career was closed. Mr. Hobart is in his fifty-sixth year and has been for more than thirty years prominent in the legal and political life of New Jersey. His influence in the legislature and in society has been uniformly on the side of clean politics and of honesty and righteousness in government. In Washington, he won the respect of men of all parties in and out of Congress. But the highest as well as the lowest of men, must pass away. Happy is he of whom it may be said when the time of departure comes as of the poet-king:

After he had served his own generation, by the will of God, he fell on sleep (Acts 13:36).

An Aristocratic Laborer

A visitor to a famous steel mill in Massachusetts recently, was much impressed by the appearance and bearing of one of the workmen. He made his acquaintance and induced him to tell his story. He then learned that the young man is the son of one of the most prominent nobles in Sweden. His father is high in favor with the King who has given him special honors and intrusted him with extraordinary functions. His ancestors in every generation for several centuries past, have been illustrious in their country's service. The young man's object in obtaining employment in an American rolling-mill is to gain experience which will fit him to control a large iron and steel business which his father owns. He came here immediately on leaving the University where he graduated with high honors. He expects to remain a full year in Massachusetts, after which he will go to other rolling-mills for further experience. He works hard and the foreman says that he does not shrink from any duty however laborious, and expects no consideration on account of his rank. He lives with the other men and dresses and fares as they do. Perhaps his experience may teach him other things besides the practical methods which he came to learn. It may give him the power of sympathizing with his own employees which he could not have gained in any way but that of becoming a working-man himself. Even our Lord qualified himself for his exalted office in that way.

We have not a high priest who cannot be touched by the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are (Heb. 4:15).

A Treasured Ring

A lady prominent in Washington society always wears a peculiar ring. The fact was a subject of conversation recently and she consented to tell its story which is published in a Washington journal. It appears that nearly forty years ago when her young husband was setting out for the war, she cut off a tress of her hair and took it to a jeweler to be enclosed in a ring. This she gave to her husband on his departure. It never left his finger through the long days of struggle and nights of watching. One day he was carried desperately wounded into the hospital tent. The surgeon saw that the first thing to be done was to amputate his arm, and it must be done quickly. He cut through the sleeve at the shoulder, removed the arm and sent the limb away with the sleeve and gauntlet still on it. When the sufferer recovered consciousness he was told by a friend at his bedside what had been done. In spite of his agony and distress his first thought was of his treasured ring. "Where was it? It must be found." His friend went out and searched for the arm in a ghastly heap of dismembered limbs. At last he found the arm and removing the gauntlet, found the ring, which he took to the sufferer and put it on his only remaing hand. His mind was immediately relieved and he fell asleep. This is the ring that his wife now wears. To her it is endeared by the affection in which her husband held it for her sake. Its intrinsic value is small, but as the symbol of love which was strong even in that trying hour, it is precious beyond price. The Christian has that assurance of love unquenched by suffering in the record of his Saviour's last hours:

Having loved his own who were in the world, he loved them unto the end (John 13:1).

DAVIS AND SANFORD, COPYRIGHTED 1898

GARRET A. HOBART, VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

A Test for Gems

A trade journal says that a new use has been found for the Roentgen rays, which have proved so valuable an aid to physicians and surgeons. A diamond merchant in Amsterdam has discovered that they may be applied with excellent results to his wares. The makers of imitation diamonds have become so skilful in the use of highly refracting glass, that they can now produce gems which deceive even experienced jewelers. Their frauds can now be easily detected. The diamond merchant has only to submit any suspected gem to the Roentgen rays to find out whether it is genuine or not. The photograph of a genuine stone under the rays is easily recognizable from that of the best imitation gem that can be made. It is even possible to detect spurious gems without photographing them. If they are suspended between the tube, which is the source of the rays, and a screen, their nature is revealed by the shadow they cast. The rays pass clear through the genuine stone, while they are stopped by the glass of a counterfeit, which casts a dull shadow on the screen. It is so with the heavenly light. The counterfeit Christian is often so like the true that he escapes detection, but it is only the true Christian who, receiving the heavenly light, becomes a light to the world.

All things when they are reproved are made manifest by the light: for everything that is made manifest is light (Eph. 5:13 R. V.).

Wedded with a Rubber Ring

After the adjournment of Magistrate Deuel's Court in New York the other day, a bashful couple presented themselves and asked the justice to marry them. The prescribed questions were duly answered, and as no difficulty presented itself, the ceremony commenced. It proceeded smoothly until the bridegroom was told to place a ring on his bride's finger and say, "With this ring I thee wed." The bridegroom blushingly acknowledged that he had no ring, nor the money to buy one. There was some confusion for a minute or two and it looked as if the ceremony would not be completed. But some one made a whispered suggestion to the justice and he evidently accepted it. At his request one of the clerks of the court produced a rubber-band, which was handed to the bridegroom. This he put on the bride's finger and the usual formula was recited. "This is somewhat unusual," the justice said to the bridegroom afterward. "You must not, however, presume on the elasticity of the ring; the marriage is perfectly valid." It was prudent of the justice to give that caution, for some people think so much of the details of a ceremony that they lose sight of the principles they symbolize. Those who are joined in a living union to Christ, of which marriage is a type, have no need of such a caution. The details of the ceremony which makes their union known to the world, whether that ceremony be confirmation, baptism or admission to church membership, are of trivial importance compared with the power which holds them true to him.

I will betroth thee unto me forever; yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in lovingkindness, and in mercies (Hos. 2:19).

An Ungrateful Husband

A prisoner in a New York court last week received an exemplary sentence through a disclosure made by his wife. He had been convicted of petit larceny and was brought before the Recorder for sentence. He was in the midst of a pathetic appeal for leniency on the ground of its being his first offense and having a wife and child dependent upon him, when two women entered the court and addressed the Recorder. The elder said that she married the prisoner five years ago, and had a child four years old. A short time ago he was tried in Judge Newburger's court for thieving and was convicted. The judge, however, in response to her appeal for the prisoner, suspended sentence. As soon as her husband was released he deserted her and went to New Jersey where he married another woman. Her companion in court was the woman he had married, and she corroborated that part of the story. The Recorder imposed the highest penalty the law allows for his crime. Every one feels that the Recorder did right. Such an ungrateful man does not deserve mercy. But what shall be said of the Christian who, having been pardoned through Christ, deserts him and goes back into the world?

For if, after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning (II. Peter 2:20).

BRIEF NOTES

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S Porto Rican Relief Fund is now closed, and no further contributions will be received.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church has sent out 303 missionaries. Of these seven have died on the field and eleven after their return.

A new outgrowth of the Settlement Movement is the organization of a guild for the care of imbecile children, of whom it is estimated there are in London alone over eight thousand. It is called "The Guild of Compassion."

Rev. F. Langham, who has labored thirty seven years in the Fiji Islands, reports that 44,000 Fijians are fully accredited Church members and that ninety-five per cent. of the population are regular attendants on public worship.

The most productive tree in the world in a pecuniary sense is the sacred tree of Tibet near Lionsar. Its leaves are sold for fifteen thousand dollars a year. Each leaf bears a portrait of Buddha. The pilgrims believe them to be miraculous, but they are stamped on the leaves by the priests.

George Smith, one of the first settlers of Chicago, died recently in London in his ninety-second year. He went west in 1834 and bought a small holding before the city was laid out. He speculated in lumber and increased his possession of land. He was a partner in the first bank ever opened in Chicago. By the year 1857 he was a millionaire and has since resided in London, where he was known as "Chicago Smith."

A Chinese Evangelist, who went to a remote town in the province of Shansi, was surprised to find the two men, accounted the most learned in the town, immediately give him their support and finally declare themselves converts. They informed the Evangelist that several years ago the Gospel of Mark in Chinese came into their hands. They studied it, but there were some things in it they could not understand. They solved their difficulties sufficiently to believe that it came from God and ever since they had paid divine honors to the book. They were thus prepared to accept

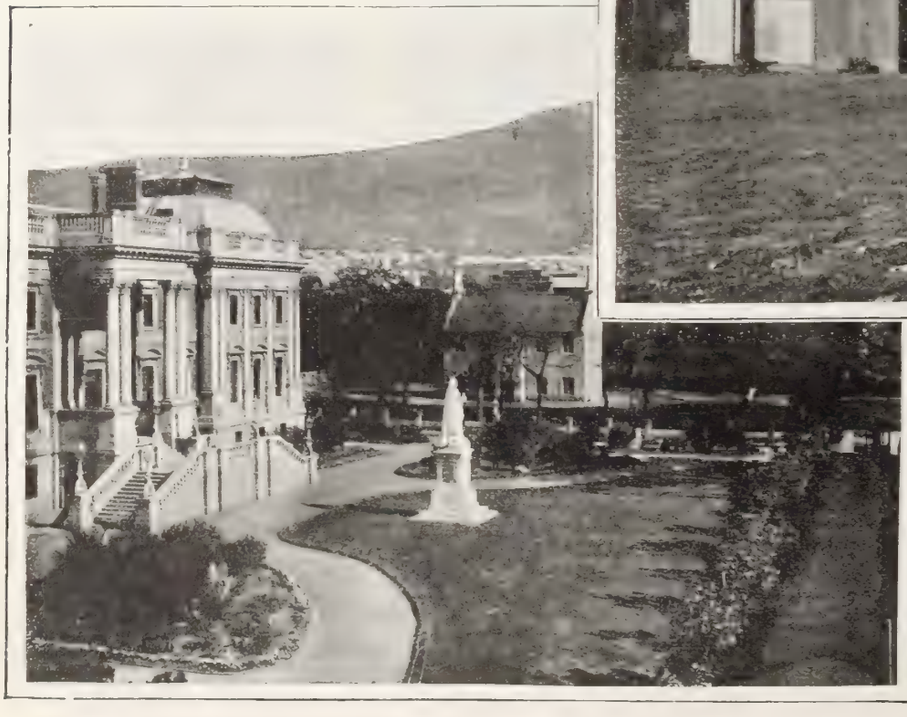
A BRITISH WAR BALLOON

The Great Struggle Betwee

Victorious Burgher Armies Surround Ladysmith and Cut Off Gen. W te's

CONTRARY to the prediction of Gen. Sir Redvers Buller, the British Commander-in-Chief in South Africa, that the war would not prove a serious one, and that he expected to eat his Christmas dinner in Pretoria, the campaign has developed features so formidable as to tax even the great military resources of Queen Victoria's empire. Not only have the Boers proved to be thoroughly efficient soldiers in the open as well as in the natural fastnesses of the hills and kopjes of Natal, but their military leaders have shown qualities of generalship and tactical skill that have confused their opponents. At the same time, British pluck has asserted itself in the face of greatly superior numbers, and against an invasion which might well have discouraged a much larger military force than that at the disposal of Gen. Sir Charles White. At Ladysmith (the British military headquarters in Natal), at Kimberley and at Mafeking, a series of desperate encounters between Boers and British has been going on intermittently for many days. Kimberley and Mafeking, though both completely invested by the enemy and practically isolated, still hold out courageously, hoping for substantial reinforcements soon. So determined has been the resistance by the Mafeking garrison under Col. Baden-Powell that General Cronje's Free Staters have suffered heavy losses, without inflicting serious damage on the enemy, as far as can be learned. Ladysmith, however, has been the centre of military interest. After the retreat of the British from Glencoe, and a junction being effected by the troops of General Yule and the main army under General White, preparations for the defence began in earnest. A naval brigade with two fifty-pounders from the British warship Powerful arrived from Durban, adding greatly to the strength of the defenders. Meanwhile the Boers under General Joubert in person, gathered in force along the hills overlooking Ladysmith, and big Boer batteries of forty-pounders were placed in commanding positions for shelling the city. General White, on October 29, made a reconnaissance, and quickly discovered that the enemy practically surrounded the city on three sides. He made his dispositions accordingly for an aggressive movement, and on the following morning took out from Ladysmith a brigade of cavalry, two of artillery, a field battery and two brigades of infantry to reconnoitre in force the enemy's position to the north, and, if possible, to capture a certain elevation which the Boers had occupied. On the previous night, a column consisting of a mountain battery, a portion of the Gloucester regiment and six companies of the Royal Irish Fusiliers were dispatched to make a march under cover of darkness and turn the enemy's flank. This right column met with disaster. The mules of the mountain battery stampeded, and the field guns and all the reserve ammunition for the troops were lost. The column was surrounded by a large force of Boers, and although not more than four miles from the Ladysmith camp, it was completely isolated. After a six hours' fight, during which the British troops fought determinedly against overpowering numbers, they were compelled to surrender, many having been killed or wounded and the ammunition being completely exhausted. Ne hundred prisoners were taken by the Boers at Pretoria. The victors treated the and wounded with great huma allowed a messenger to b General White for doc ambulances. The this disaster excit sensation in where Gener was sharp cised. a was eve his r from prem mane would volve Gen. bald pending rival of Buller. verse, wh practically th General White left wing in the r he had planned ag enemy, seems to hav disheartened the defenders smith, although it was state would not affect the safety of the which was still able to hold out unti Encouraged by their success, the burgh now began the investment of Ladysm great vigor. A fierce artillery duel took place between the big Boer forty-pou these were unable to cope with the naval fifty-pounders of the British, wh

THE CITY OF BLOEMFONTEIN



ENTRANCE AND GROUNDS OF PARLIAMENT HOUSE, CAPE TOWN

DUTCH HOUSE AT PAPENDORP

In which the capitulation of the Cape was signed in 1806

lyddite shells, and made frightful havoc in the burgher ranks. Gen Joubert is said to have sent a letter to General White protesting agai the use of lyddite as inhuman and not sanctioned by civilized nati ns; the letter, if sent at all, does not seem to have been heeded. Lyd te high explosive, seven times as powerful as gunpowder, and its prep ratio a secret controlled by Great Britain.

Up to November 4, the total British losses in the war were est ated 2,232 killed and wounded, the Boer losses being probably almo equ The latter, however, hold the larger number of prisoners, the m jority whom are quartered at Pretoria. Boer prisoners held by the Brish at Durban and Pietermaritzburg.

Early in November, the campaign assumed another aspect whi bo ill for the success of General Buller's plans. Although only a w th sand troops of the reinforcing army corps sent from England had rriv and General Buller himself had yet taken no steps looking to a ve sonal command, news came that a large Free State Boer force cros the southern frontier at Nooval's Bridge and invaded Cape stroying bridges and railways, and evidently planning to impede th ma

...er and Briton in South Africa

...ret—Cape Colony Invaded—Will Gen. Buller Retrieve British Disasters?

GEN. SIR REDVERS BULLER

...General Buller's army, if it should attempt to invade the Free State by that route, which he had openly declared to be his purpose. Almost simultaneously came the intelligence that Ladysmith was isolated, the railroad and telegraphs being cut and rendered useless by the Boers south of the fortified camp and that Colenso, a most important point between Ladysmith and the coast and on the railroad to Durban, had been occupied by the Free Staters, which would effectively prevent reinforcements coming to Gen. White's command. While these events were occurring there was an ominous quiet-ness around Ladysmith. All the women and children had already been sent to Durban by the last refugee train that left Ladysmith before the railroad closed, so the defenders felt free to act with greater liberty, their dearnes being safe. The silent Boer batteries were again attacked by the British naval guns and soon a tremendous artillery duel was in progress, under cover of which General White sent a strong force of lancers, hussars, carabineers and riflemen with artillery, under General Yule, around the base of the low hills to attack the Boer camp on Bester's mountain, still more tightly around the invested city, which, it was feared, would soon be short of ammunition for its naval fifty-pounders.

STOCK EXCHANGE AT JOHANNESBURG

Dispatches from Cape Town, Pietermaritzburg and Durban give some hint of the panicky feeling which prevails in British South Africa, in consequence of the Boer successes. In Natal, the merchants are apprehensive that the invaders may overrun the country, and some Cape Town business houses even instructed their representatives to leave Pietermaritzburg, which is now crowded with fugitives from Ladysmith, principally women and children. Another cause of uneasiness is the pro-Boer attitude of the Dutch residents of Cape Colony, who are expected to support the invaders, should the latter develop any considerable strength in that territory. The Free State commandos are in full control of the only means of crossing the Orange River, and it is expected that they will soon reach Naauw Poort, south of Colesburg, one of the most important railroad points in South Africa. With that place in their hands, they could make it exceedingly difficult for any British force to move northward.

Stated in a single paragraph, the campaign stands thus: The invading Boers, acting on the aggressive, have seized or invested practically all the important military points in Rhodesia, Bechuanaland, Cape Colony and Natal adjoining the Transvaal and Free State borders. They have "annexed" parts of Natal and Cape Colony and have destroyed telegraphs, railroad lines and bridges, to impede an enemy's advance at those points. In carrying out this bold programme, however, they have greatly divided their forces and are far from their bases of supplies. The British, up to Nov. 4, still held four important military points: Ladysmith, Kimberly, Mafeking and De Aar, any one of which might be made a centre for aggressive military operations with an increased force. Which to choose and where to begin is the problem that awaits Gen. Buller. If it be true, as reported, that that commander has decided to abandon Stormberg, Rosemead Junction and Naauw Poort, and to form the main British camp at Queenstown, fifty miles further south, this would indicate that his campaign will be far more difficult than he could have foreseen, and that a vast army and abundant stores will be needed, and many months of the hardest kind of campaigning must pass, before even what has been sacrificed in the first twenty-five days of the war, can be fully recovered. This accomplished, there will still remain the herculean task of invading and conquering the Free State and the Transvaal. Conjecture is now rife as to General Buller's probable plan of campaign. Will he enter by East London and Port Elizabeth and gradually work northward from a central camp at Queenstown? Military critics say that it will not be surprising if he discards both plans, as he is known to be a commander fertile in resources. From Kimberley to Bloemfontein, the Free State capital, is a straight line, and it is considered not at all improbable that the veteran soldier, upon whose skill and generalship Britain now relies, may be heard from in that quarter. A resolute struggle, if not the first great battle of the war, may soon take place in the section of which De Aar is the military centre, and where Gen. Buller may prepare to make the initial stand of his campaign.

...BLIC LIBRARY AND MUSEUM AT CAPE TOWN

These are the finest buildings in South Africa.

...to the west of Ladysmith, where there was a large and well-fortified laager. The camp was surprised, shelled by the artillery, and swept by cavalry charges, the burghers sustaining heavy losses in killed and wounded, besides abandoning all their camp equipment.

This success, while encouraging to the defenders, did not materially alter the situation. Soon afterward, Brussels and Berlin newspapers published dispatches (said to have been received from Pretoria direct) announcing that Ladysmith had fallen, that Gen. White had surrendered and 9,000 British prisoners were on the hands of Joubert's victorious troops; and these, although they were quickly discredited in London, gave rise to apprehensions of disaster. It was known that in spite of the repeated repulses of the Boers by White's artillery, which is said to have silenced Joubert's big guns, the burghers invariably reoccupied their old position and even moved closer, drawing the network

THE TOWN HALL OF THE CAPITAL CITY OF PIETERMARITZBURG, NATAL

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

Youth and Age

A Novel Plan Mutual Helpfulness The Co-operative Spirit

IN a certain home in which the writer was a guest, a peculiar custom was observed. On the wall of the room which she occupied with a daughter of the house hung a little blank book between pretty covers. Before and after saying her prayers, just previous to retiring, Emily looked thoughtfully in the little book and made some entries. The next morning the same thing was repeated, before and after devotions.

"Is that your diary, my dear?" she was asked.

"Yes, and no," said Emily, smiling, submitting the booklet to her friend's inspection.

Under date of the previous day were two pages, one bearing the words: "What can I do to make the home-folks happy?" the other "What have I done to make the home-folks happy?" Items on the first, almost touching in their triviality, ran like this: "Help Kitty to get her lesson. Put fresh flowers on the breakfast table. Mend mamma's gloves for her. Write the letter papa spoke about to Uncle Ned. Tell Bobby a story. Read a chapter in the Bible to Grandpa. Put a fresh cover on Grandma's pillow." Every item was a small task in itself but summed up the total made a record of no inconsiderable accomplishment. Each task performed was checked off. On the opposite page reasons were given why others had been left undone, or modified in performance. One item read: "Let grandpa help Kitty, prompting him a little. Told Bobby the story in grandma's room, and got grandma interested and her mind off her rheumatism." New items were added as: "Went for a walk with Bobby. Had a chestnut-roasting with all the little ones in grandma's room. Drew grandpa's chair up to the fire, and he had a good time, and told us a lot of stories."

"Now," said Emily, laughing, "every one of us has a booklet like that, and we keep strict record and try to make our list longer and better every day. Grandpa and grandma keep their books as carefully as anybody, and you would be surprised to see how full grandma's pages are, though she's bed-ridden. Some items would make you cry, as 'I didn't let anybody know how bad my back hurt,' or 'Bobby was cross and I loved him into being a good boy.' She keeps mamma's house-keeping accounts—which is a very valuable service. Grandpa loves us to sing for him, and that gives us an opportunity of running our lists up. His eyes are poor and so we read to him a good deal, and as he is a scholar, he makes this very pleasant and profitable by explanations and illustrations as we go along. And he knows so many beautiful stories! We have lots of fun, sometimes, comparing our books."

One of the best features of this unique plan was the companionship kept up between old and young. Our picture of youth and age, bending over God's Blessed Book, is the reproduction of a famous painting by a great artist who saw in such companionship a theme for noble effort. To foster in our homes the spirit of comradeship, and the true co-operative spirit which recognizes that the very feeblest can contribute to the sum total of happiness and prosperity, is surely more worthy of a home-keeper's best endeavor than the very greatest of paintings could be of a master's brush.

♦

A Beautiful Marriage Prayer

One of our readers writes us that a few days after his marriage, he and his wife made a point of offering to God this prayer: "May neither of us ever do anything to wound or offend the other," and that it has continued ever since to be a part of his family worship. We believe that the faithful following of this simple little rule would save many a family circle from the storms that shipwreck the home and be a safeguard against the world's ever asking that sad, sad question, "Is marriage a failure?"

♦

Mother and Teacher

If we are ever to have true cooperation between mother and teacher, says Mrs Vesta H. Cassedy, principal of National Park Seminary, the mother must accompany her child not only to but through the school-room door. She must understand the aims of the teacher, must know the reasons for certain methods, permissions and prohibitions. This vital knowledge cannot be gleaned by occasional verbal messages sent through the child, or by sporadic visits to the school-room. We shall never have perfect cooperation between mother and teacher until the mother is clear-sighted enough to acknowledge to the teacher the blemishes in the nature of her child, and the teacher is large-hearted enough to use them in the right diagnosis and proper remedy of mental and moral disease or shortcomings in the child.

♦

Arctic Homes

On King's Island, South of Behring Strait, some adventurous Californians have discovered a new tribe of Indians. They resemble the Eskimos, but are taller and well made, have yellow skin, high cheek bones and small black eyes. The women are as tall and robust as the men, wear no barbarous ornaments, and possess phenomenal strength. One woman, it is reported, carried a stone weighing 750 pounds to her canoe, and a box weighing [illegible] pounds. These people live on fish and dwell in caves bored into the sides of hills, walled up with stones, and reached by tunnel-like ways. It is a weird sight to see these odd dwellings ranged against the hills, sitting one above the other, the topmost maybe overlooking [illegible]

♦

Hindu Child Stories

The Hindus have hundreds of legends about birds, beasts and fowls of the air which interest the little ones. In a high caste home, the "ayah," or nurse, would tell these to her charges, some sitting in her lap, some gathered round her knee, in the fragrant gardens where the bul-buls sing; or in the nursery, not over-tidy, and heavy with the scent of attar-of-roses, and where the firelight from odorous woods falls on rich, dingy rugs and curtains of many colors. The poor children of a village of mud huts will cluster together, under the starry sky, near where their elders sit and gossip around the fire where the evening meal was cooked, and tell each other over and over again, the old, old stories handed down from ages and ages ago. Sometimes, some of the children have been to a mission school or played with a missionary's children, and then the story will be told, in hushed, reverent voices, of a little baby whose coming was announced, although he was in a manger, by a chorus of angels whom shepherds and wise men sought, and over whose humble cradle a new star shone.

READING TO GRANDFATHER—A QUAINT PICTURE OF LONG AGO

♦

Jack, a Dog Hero

Jack Gill is only a Newfoundland, but he deserves the medal of a life-saver all the same, which honor other Newfoundlands and some St. Bernards, we believe, have won and won worthily. With the flames crackling all round him and handicapped by suffocating smoke, Jack saved his mistress and his playmate, her little boy, from being burned to death in their home on Bourne St., Jamaica Plain, near Boston. Mrs. Gill was awakened early one morning by loud barking and vigorous pulling of the bed clothes. She awoke to see smoke and flames near her bed and near the open door. Jack, with the baby between his massive paws. Taking the baby she followed Jack to the street, and a minute after the dog and his charge reached the sidewalk, the house was ablaze from cellar to attic.

Co-Workers with God

THE day is long and the day is [illegible]
We are tired of the [illegible] keeping guard;
[illegible]
Tired of ourselves and of being alone;
Yet all the while, did we only see,
We walk in the Lord's own company.
[illegible]
He takes the sorrow that seems hardest [illegible]
And out of the storm he brings a calm;
And the work that we count so hard to do,
He makes it easy, for he works, too.
And the days that seem long to live are his—
[illegible]

—[illegible]

♦

Pleasant Home-Sundays

MAKE this day "the pearl of the week." The day "holy unto the Lord" ought to be happy and blessed. Men and women should look back over every Sabbath at home as a day that marked progress in moral and spiritual life. A day is never helpful by being made a day of gloom, a day of enforced repression of youthful spirits, a day of tedious text memorizing. God's Word, like his Sabbath, is too precious to be made distasteful to childhood. How shall we make the home Sabbath pleasant and helpful, and keep it holy? Study your child, and make an effort to interest him on the Sabbath through stories that teach moral and spiritual truths; gather all the little ones about you, and lead them in singing cheerful, hopeful songs, that have ringing, glad choruses. Take the children on woodland rambles, calling their attention to nature's beauties and mysteries—to mosses and lichens, to fallen leaves and acorns that will soon be put to sleep under a blanket of snow, to be waked again when God sends the spring. Teach them to see God, a loving, living Father, in everything. Incidentally, give them texts like "He that waiteth upon the Lord shall renew his strength," and "As the rain cometh down and the snow from heaven and . . . watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth." Give the texts as nuggets of gold, as jewels for breastplates, as staffs for the hand, as dew for refreshing, as something to be greatly desired, to be coveted and kept. And teach the little ones the lesson of "the ox in the ditch": lead them every Sunday of their lives into doing something that will cheer, comfort or in some way help somebody that needs help, and to feel that it is a privilege to do such things—that it makes them like Jesus.

♦

Golden Hints for Parents

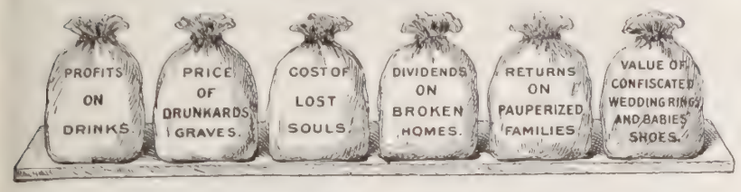
If you correct your child in public, do [illegible] in a way that will not humiliate him—be as careful of his feelings as if he were grown. Never correct in anger. Do not judge hastily. When a misdemeanor is reported, even by an older person, do not condemn the child unheard. Teach politeness in the home, one to another. The small boy appreciates being treated as a little man, who is expected to show deference to mother and sister. Of course, father must set the example. Do not have a set of company manners and another set for home. Teach reverence for the aged, pity for the infirm, kindness to animals. Make Christmas, birthdays, Thanksgiving, Easter, May-day—each and all sweet times to be remembered all through life. Celebration need not be costly; a birthday cake or cookie, a new ribbon, a book, a flower, kisses, good wishes, kindnesses of word and deed, furnish a catalogue from which the poorest can make selection of tributes.

♦

Mothers-in-Law

A reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, whose word carries weight of experience, since he has been "a son-in law for a number of years," writes: "I have come to the conclusion that the surest way to 'get along' with one's mother-in-law is to pattern one's conduct towards her by the Golden Rule." He adds: "Of course, to insure complete harmony, it is important that mothers-in-law follow the same plan."

The Saloon-keeper's Money



PROFITS ON DRINKS.
PRICE OF DRUNKARDS GRAVES.
COST OF LOST SOULS.
DIVIDENDS ON BROKEN HOMES.
RETURNS ON PAUPERIZED FAMILIES
VALUE OF CONFISCATED WEDDING RINGS AND BABIES' SHOES.

Many Conflicting Opinions in Regard to its Acceptance by the Church

THE interest of our readers in the problem: "Shall the Church accept the saloon-keeper's money in aid of its spiritual work?" seems to increase from week to week, and hundreds of letters from conscientious writers, who take various and opposing views of the question are received daily:

J. B., East Orange, N. J., writes:

No—because all the leading denominations declare in their conventions that the saloon is morally wrong, and the greatest enemy to the progress of the Church of God. Give no room for such reflection to be cast on the Church of Christ by the saloon-keeper as when in a convention of liquor dealers one of the speakers boasted that they were large contributors to the Church. I quote Rev. John Wesley on the saloon: "Those who sell this poison murder men by wholesale; neither does their eye pity nor spare. They drive them to hell like sheep, and what is their gain? Who then would envy their large estates and sumptuous palaces? A curse is in the midst of them; the curse of God cleaves to the stones, the timber, the furniture of them! The curse of God is in their garden, their wall, their groves; a fire that burns to the northermost hell! Blood, blood is there! The foundation, the floor, the walls, the roof are stained with blood! And canst thou hope, O thou Man of Blood, though thou art clothed in scarlet and fine linen, and farest sumptuously every day—canst thou hope to deliver down thy fields of blood to the third generation? Not so; for there is a God in heaven. Therefore thy name shall be rooted out like as those whom thou hast destroyed, body and soul. 'Thy memorial shall perish with thee.'"

Osman E. Ryther, Gen. Sec. Y.M.C.A., Norwich, Conn., writes:

If we refuse this money, we single out one particular sin as so much more heinous than all others as to compel us to draw a sharp line of distinction between it and all others. In the light of the Lord's judgment, who classed sinful desire as the equivalent of the sinful act, I cannot see justification of this. Carried to its logical conclusion, this position means that if we refuse contributions from one non-Christian, we must from all non-Christians. Is the church willing to take that stand and give all worldly people no place in helping to pay its bills? It would be the only consistent one. Our Lord sat and watched the givers as they cast their offerings into the Temple strong box. He apparently saw nothing to condemn, though the rich were giving as well as the poor, and probably hypocrites and sinners as well as saints. The motive of the gift was what appealed to his heart, and what won his commendation should win ours.

Mrs. E. F., Ireton, Ia., writes:

I would not willingly wound the feelings of a saloon-keeper's child, but as to accepting the gift of the saloon-keeper for church work—never! The Lord never opened up the way to heaven through the door of a saloon. A woman who marries a saloon-keeper must share his burden of wrong-doing, and the church should not depart from the path of rectitude to keep from hurting her feelings.

E. B. Ringland, M. D., Illinois, writes:

Under no circumstances would I ask a saloon man for money for church purposes, but if he offers it, I could not refuse it. As the Lord's steward, I would have no right either to refuse to take the money given the Lord, or to give the man back the money that is the Lord's. If, however, the church will sink the spear as deeply into the great dragon, intemperance, as it should, very little, if any, money will be offered by saloon-keepers.

J. O. H. Brown, Atty-at-law, Ga., writes:

God loves the cheerful giver. I firmly believe that giving to God's cause is just as much worshiping God as reading the Bible, attending church or engaging in any other religious exercises. Has the Lord ever called on the sinner for tithes? Can the sinner worship God in spirit and in truth? Can a saloon-keeper, who is certainly engaged in a hellish occupation, give unto the Lord as he has prospered him, in spirit and in truth, humbly and cheerfully? If so, then the church should accept his offering.

Rev. W. L. C., Illinois:

The money is no worse than the giver. Would God refuse the saloon-keeper if he came to him in the right spirit? It seems to me that all such affairs must be decided according to the spirit, for Paul says, "Not of the letter, but of the spirit." If this poor sinner would go to the Father in the right spirit, the atoning blood would cleanse him. If the money is presented in the right spirit and for a good purpose, Christ can cleanse it.

S. A. Bowlby, Tremont, N. S., writes:

There is no wonder that the churches are a laughing stock to the ungodly. We read, "the zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." "Make not my Father's house an house of merchandise." If mountains are to be removed with money, take all you can get from saloon-keepers or any other source, as it will all be needed, and even then you will be short of power.

A. M. Waterman, Philadelphia, writes:

I quote this incident from one of our daily exchanges, as it is on the line of your present discussion:

Rev. John P. Snyder, whose little church at Gloucester City was reduced to ashes by an incendiary early last Thursday morning, accepted the offer of Charles Tiffany, and started to hold services in his saloon, at Broadway and Market street, last night. All business at the bar was temporarily suspended while the songs and prayers arose from the sitting room at the rear of the bar, and Tiffany saw that the best of order was preserved.

In view of the fact that this man suspended business for a time, it certainly amounted to a monetary consideration. Who will say that this pastor should have rejected the tender of the rooms by this saloon-keeper? We cannot question but what the motive of the saloon-keeper was to help the church, as he could hardly expect any return in the way of patronage, especially from any converts from among his former customers, should they be brought to see the error of their way through this meeting.

John Carney, Chalk-Talker and Temperance Lecturer, Cisso, Tex., writes:

Never take one dollar from the saloon-keeper or the man who rents his property to the saloon-keeper, or the church member who goes into saloons. There is not one saloon man in a thousand that gives to the church with an honest purpose. I came out from among them. They all make fun of the Church and Christ and his cause.

Rev. W. G. F., Mont., writes:

When right methods are pursued in public, or private solicitation, all money coming into the hands of the solictor, is his, legally and morally. All men and their families are the Lord's; and where protected by Christian government, as in the United States, are under moral obligations to support Christian institutions, which have, in the past, and are still, the means of preserving law and order. See Ezek. 18 and Romans 13.

A Probate Judge, Ohio, writes:

It is wrong for the church, because it would thereby encourage the business; acceptance of his gifts would tend to elevate the saloon-keeper in the estimation of the community; and it would give him a better opinion of himself and his business. By acceptance the church weakens its opposition to the evil which it has been trying to destroy. Acceptance works wrong to the saloon-keeper himself, by leading him to believe that he may merit salvation by good works.

A. T. R., Quincy, Ill., writes:

All gold and silver belongs to the Lord as do also all souls, the souls of the son and daughter of the saloon-keeper as well as the souls of the pastor and his children. Christ came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance; therefore, if we refuse to take the Lord's money when given by those for whom the Saviour died, will not our hands be stained with our brother's blood, whom we have driven from the Sabbath School or sanctuary by refusing to accept the Lord's money which he brings as an offering?

Charles Ribbans, New Jersey, writes:

All glory and honor to the faithful Christian minister reported in your issue of August 30, who, with a large family to support, receiving only a nominal salary, promptly lowered that salary one twelfth rather than accept a saloon keeper's contribution. Were there many examples of such noble sacrifice; the power of the church for good would be increased a hundredfold and the saloon's power would be decreased in like ratio. This traffic but seeks to blunt the conscience of the church by offering a small portion of its ill-gotten returns to further religious work; and, forsooth, to aid the family of some unfortunate drunkard—when for one added one hundred new victims will be found. The saloons are the source of at least 75 per cent. of the misery and crime, yet as Christian men we constantly sanction by our votes this crime of crimes.

Mrs. O. Wright, Ill., writes:

I have no sympathy with the idea that the saloon-keeper's voluntary contribution should not be used for God's glory. I believe God will bless the contribution from the sinner as well as from the saint—according to the motive that prompts the giving: Psalms, 76-10. The Lord will judge the saloon-keeper for the "heart aches" and "broken homes" in his own way.

M. A. B., Devault, Pa., writes:

Will God be pleased for his professing children to ask and accept contributions from those who make their money by the accursed traffic, which has ruined noble and generous fathers, brothers and sons, broken the hearts of wives, mothers and sisters, made beggars of little children, and filled graveyards with the untimely dead? I know that our Father in Heaven can and will take care of his work here on earth, if his children will only trust him. We should not ask money from those engaged in the service of Satan.

"Uneasy Lies the Head That Wears a Crown."

But such are not the only uneasy heads. Overworked housewives, harassed business men, anxious teachers, ambitious students—all ages and both sexes are uneasy with aches, pains, impure blood, disordered stomachs, deranged kidneys and liver. For all such, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the effective and faultless cure. It infuses fresh life and health into all parts of the body through purified, vitalized and enriched blood. Try it.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

MONUMENTS
DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE
More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Color greatly improved. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.
NO MOSS GROWING. CLEANING. NO CRUMBLING CRACKING.
THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.,
70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS
OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS
SCHOOL FURNITURE WORKS
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

are perfect in action. Over 40 years' experience guides the manufacture. Get the improved. No tacks required. To avoid imitations, notice script name of Stewart Hartshorn on label.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

DITMAN'S SEA-SALT
The Natural Salt of Pure Sea Water
TONIC, STRENGTHENING, INVIGORATING
Used for Quarter Century
Address Ditman, 1 Barclay Street, New York

CATARRH INHALER FREE. Dr. Worst will mail his new scientific Catarrh Inhaler with medicine for a year, on three days' trial, Free. If satisfactory, send him $1.00; if not, return it. AGENTS WANTED. Dr. Worst, 211 Main St., Ashland, Ohio

$3.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working for me. People preferred who can furnish their own team. Applicants must furnish satisfactory reference as to character and standing. B. F. Johnson, 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

$18.00 A WEEK and expenses to good parties to travel. No canvassing. Permanent position. Also local workers and managers can find profitable employment for part time. Give references. R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore.

HOW TO HAVE EASY, HEALTHY, SHAPELY FEET
Boston Foot Remedy Co. PAMPHLET FOR 1 CT. Cured
40 VAN BUREN ST., CHICAGO.

YOU can buy a chimney to fit your lamp that will last till some accident happens to it.

Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass" is that chimney.

You can have it—your dealer will get it—if you insist on it. He may tell you it costs him three times as much as some others. That is true. He may say they are just as good. Don't you believe it—they may be better for him; he may like the breaking.

Our "Index" describes all lamps and their proper chimneys. With it you can always order the right size and shape of chimney for any lamp We mail it FREE to any one who writes for it.

Address MACBETH, Pittsburgh, Pa.

RHEUMATISM QUICKLY CURED.

In an article contributed to the London Lancet, a Philadelphia physician says: "Tartarlithine has given me results beyond all comparison superior to any preparation which I have tried. The promptness of its action is in many cases astonishing, a subsidence of distressing symptoms quickly following the administration of three doses of five grains each, taken four hours apart in a half pint of water on a reasonably empty stomach. The use of the preparation in the quantities named has sufficed in all cases so far treated, about twenty in number, to practically cure the disorder, temporarily at least.

Regular package $1.00.
Of all druggists or post-free by mail.
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

McKESSON & ROBBINS,
91 Fulton Street, . . New York.
SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

9 CORDS IN 10 HOURS

BY ONE MAN, with the FOLDING SAWING MACHINE. It saws down trees. Folds like a pocketknife. Saws any kind of timber on any kind of ground. One man can saw MORE timber with it than 2 men in any other way, and do it EASIER. 165,000 in use. Send for FREE illustrated catalogue showing latest IMPROVEMENTS and testimonials from thousands. First order secures agency. Address FOLDING SAWING MACHINE CO., 55-57-59 No. Jefferson St., H-20, Chicago, Ill.

A Good Wagon
begins with good wheels. Unless the wheels are good the wagon is a failure. IF YOU BUY THE ELECTRIC STEEL WHEEL made to fit any wagon—your wagon will always have good wheels. Can't dry out or rot. No loose tires. Any height, any width tire Catalog free.
ELECTRIC WHEEL CO.
Box 186 QUINCY, ILL.

After Thirty Years' Experience
I have the best
Brain and Nerve Tonic
on earth for all weakened conditions regardless of cause. Medicines sent for full month's treatment for one dollar postpaid, or address for particulars A. S. JOHNSON, M. D., BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

ASTHMA SURE CURE
I have a sure, safe and speedy cure for that distressing and dangerous disease, asthma (no matter how deep seated it may be). To convince any sufferer of its great virtue, I will mail a trial package free. Relief is instant and complete cure certain. Write at once to F. G. KINSMAN, M.D., Box 824, Augusta, Me.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP for children teething should always be used for children while teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa.

OPIUM MORPHINE and Liquor Habit cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay if I fail. Book of particulars free. Address Dr. J. E. Stephens, Dept. R. 5, Lebanon, Ohio.

THE TOUCHSTONE

A NEW SERIAL STORY

BY HELEN SHIPTON

CHAPTER II.

Fraternal Estrangement

THE sick young man talked dreamily, as if the pain throbbing through his temples were confusing his mind. Martin Hamerton perceived this, but he did not wish to leave him until one fact had been ascertained. That was the address of the young man's brother, for if he became worse, Caryl Lingard ought to be notified. Yet he did not like to ask him directly for it. It seemed too plain an intimation that his condition was dangerous and Martin did not want needlessly to alarm him.

"By the way," he said, with somewhat simple diplomacy, "you can't have felt up to writing letters this last day or two. Is there any one I could send a line to—your brother, or any one—who might be expecting to hear?"

"No, thank you," said the young man quietly. "Caryl will not be expecting to hear from me just now. And my uncle is dead—I don't know whether I told you that before."

"HE COULD NOT SEE TO READ OVER WHAT HE HAD WRITTEN."

Martin Hamerton dimly remembered that in their school days the Lingards had had neither father nor mother living, only a rich old uncle, who paid their school bills and gave them a very dull time in the holidays. If he was gone they must be left singularly devoid of relations; and whether Caryl would not expect to hear because he had heard recently, or because he never heard, it was of course impossible to ask. But that last speech did not sound cheerful, somehow, to his kind heart. Martin was glad that he and Celia had pushed the obligation of friendship—if such only it was to be considered—a little further than is usual except on a more intimate acquaintanceship.

When Douglas Lingard was left alone that night, upon his urgent request that his host would go to bed as usual, and no one trouble themselves any further about him, he found himself thinking rapidly and vividly of many things that of late he had usually avoided in thought as far as possible. Martin Hamerton's voice and look brought back their school days, but it was not of Martin that he was thinking.

Once more he seemed to see himself and his brother Caryl—constant companions as far as schoolboy etiquette would allow companionship between those whom three years' difference in age divided—more consciously attached to one another than schoolboy brothers often are, if only because left so alone in the world together. He remembered the occasional storms of passion that rose between them, and seemed for the time to make the whole world lonely and desolate, even while both were red hot with anger.

Then came the young tutor, John Ashburton, a saint and a born leader of men, and bewitched them both, firing them with something of his own ardor. He put life into the childish prayers that they had almost left off repeating, and impressed upon them as an obligation, second only to the fear of God, that they must never, under any provocation, suffer themselves to quarrel with one another.

Well, thought Douglas, wearily, they had not quarreled. Not one angry word had passed between them—Ashburton might be content if he knew—but they were [illegible] all the same. A quarrel might have been made up, but can dead love come to life again? Caryl had gone from first as soon as school days were over, sending Caryl to Oxford and then to the bar, while Douglas stayed another year at school, and then went to London to study civil engineering.

It was not given to either of them to write that kind of letter which is almost more intimate and confidential than personal intercourse, but they kept each other well informed of all their doings, and when they met they took up the old boyish affection where they had left it when they had parted.

Then an opening in India suddenly presented itself for Caryl, through the influence of an old friend of their father's, who had spent most of his life in Calcutta, and was likely to be there for a few years yet. And Caryl went, for a period that was certainly to be three years, and might possibly be five. It was with an ache in his heart that Douglas saw him off, but he did not say so—these are things that young Englishmen, as a rule, do not talk about. And Caryl, with the journey to think of, and a new world at the end of it to look forward to, could not be supposed to be broken-hearted at leaving behind him an old uncle and a young brother.

So the years passed on till three of them were gone, and still there was no talk of old Sir Matthew Frost's return, and consequently no likelihood of Caryl's. During the first part of the time Douglas lived with his uncle, and afterwards, his first employment lying near London, was [illegible]

A [illegible] discontent by looking after human housecleaning. Purify the blood, clear the system by taking that excellent blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla.

ABANDONED IT.

FOR THE OLD FASHIONED COFFEE WAS KILLING.

"I always drank coffee with the rest of the family, but I remember [illegible] breakfast I was sick and had to leave the table.

"I had been troubled some time with my heart, which did not feel right. This trouble [illegible]

"Sometimes it would beat fast and at other times very slowly, so that I would hardly be able to do work for an hour or two after breakfast and I [illegible] up a bad spell it gave me a severe pain.

"I had no idea what the trouble was until a friend suggested that perhaps it might be caused by coffee drinking. I tried leaving off the coffee and began drinking Postum Cereal Food Coffee. The change came quickly. I am now glad to say that I am entirely well of the heart trouble, and attribute the cure to leaving off coffee and the use of Postum Cereal Food Coffee.

"A number of my friends have abandoned the old fashioned coffee and have taken up with Postum, which they are using steadily. There are some people that make Postum very weak and tasteless, but if it is boiled long enough, according to directions, it is a very delicious beverage. We have never used any of the old fashioned coffee since it was first started in our house." Mrs L. A. Smith, Blodgett Mills, Cortland Co., N. Y.

A Dainty Breakfast

The morning meal is apt to set the pace for the day. If dainty simple and sufficiently nutritious one leaves the breakfast table with a feeling of well being that fortifies for the day's duties.

Cream of Wheat

contains, in greater proportion than any other cereal food, the elements necessary to brain and muscle making.

Ask your grocer to show you our gravures. High class works of art, entirely devoid of advertising matter.

Cream of Wheat Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

...FOR...
Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Colds, Bronchitis.

For twenty-one years the unanswerable GERMICIDE [illegible] Send for descriptive booklet containing [illegible] testimonials and prices.

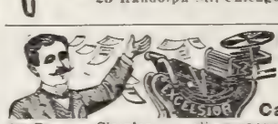
Sold by Druggists Generally.

Vapo-Cresolene Co., 62 Wall St., New York, SCHIEFFELIN & CO., N Y U S Agts.

FAVORITE CAKE SPOON

[illegible] FREE. [illegible] guaranteed

HOUSEHOLD NOVELTY WORKS, 25 Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.



Print Your Own Cards, &c.

$5 Press. Circular or small newspaper press $18. Typesetting easy. Money maker, saver. Stamp for catalog, presses, type, &c. THE PRESS CO., MERIDEN, CONN.

PLAYS Plays for Churches, Sunday Schools, Societies, Recitations, Dialogues, Drills, Tableaux, Speakers, Operettas, Entertainments, Dialect Pieces, Motion Songs, Etc. Send Catalogue Free.

"A Perfect Food."
"Preserves Health."
"Prolongs Life."

BAKER'S BREAKFAST COCOA

"It is at once a delightful food and nourishing drink, and it would be well for humanity if there were more of it consumed and less tea or coffee."—The Homeopathic Recorder.

Walter Baker & Co. Limited.
DORCHESTER, MASS.
Established 1780.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other foods. Ask Grocers.
For book on simple, write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

SAVE ½ Your FUEL wasted up chimney.
BY USING THE ROCHESTER RADIATOR.
COST $2.00 AND UP.
Money refunded if not satisfactory. Write for booklet on economy in heating homes.
ROCHESTER RADIATOR CO.,
15 Furnace Street, Rochester, N. Y.

SALESMEN
NEW OIL GAS BURNER
$100 to $200 PER MONTH easily made
Perfection Burner Co. Dpt Cincinnati, O

INCUBATORS THE CYPHERS.
One Style Only, OUR BEST.
Warranted to last Ten Years without repairs and to out-hatch during three years any other incubator that runs. THIS OR YOUR MONEY BACK. Built for business—sold on honor. [illegible] FREE. Poultry Manual and Catalogue No. 57, (96 pages, 100 illustrations, how to make money in poultry, and "pointers" each worth dollars). Address nearest office.
CYPHERS INCUBATOR CO.,
Boston, Mass. Wayland, N. Y. Chicago, Ill.

GOOD LITTLE INCUBATORS
Many people want a small incubator that will work right, a machine that will only cost a small sum. To meet the demand for a really good thing at a moderate price we have produced the new Reliable 240 EGG BANTLING SPECIAL. It is the best [illegible] incubator ever made, easy to run, and sells the only $5 Incubator with a guarantee. Send 4c for our 20th Century Catalogue and Poultry Book. Sent one poultry.
RELIABLE INCB. & BROODER CO., Box B16 QUINCY, ILL.

SUCCESSFUL INCUBATORS.
Standard [illegible] perfect regulation, [illegible] moisture, automatic ventilation, [illegible] Low prices and fully guaranteed. Hundreds [illegible] Catalogue free. Cash or [illegible]
DES MOINES INCUBATOR CO.,
Box 71. Des Moines, Ia.

THE BEST EGG FOOD for laying hens is Green Cut Bone. Nothing equals MANN'S NEW BONE CUTTERS for preparing bone. Cut fast, fine and turn easy. Mann's Clover Cutter cuts clover the best and fastest. Swinging Feed Trays, Granite Crystal Grit, &c. Illustrated catalogue free. F. W. MANN CO., Box 29 Milford, Mass.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES!

Buy no Incubator and pay for it before giving it a trial. The firm who will not sell on trial have no faith in their machines. We sell the celebrated PREMIER INCUBATOR ON TRIAL. Also nine [illegible] of Simplicity. Catalogue and Poultry Helps, 5c.
Columbia Incubator Co., 12 Adams St., Delaware City, Del.

MAKE MONEY EVENINGS.
Men employed during the day can make money evenings giving [illegible] exhibitions with Magic Lantern or Stereopticon. Little capital needed. [illegible]
McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y.

THE TOUCHSTONE

CONTINUED FROM LAST PAGE

able to visit him tolerably often. But gradually the old man became more and more petulant and querulous, until the less his younger nephew went to see him the more chance there seemed to be of peace between them. He had never been very affectionate, and Douglas had never expected him to become so; but the young man had been as patient as could have been expected of youth, not wishing to be at variance with his only relative, and it was with real regret that he finally decided that the only thing for it was to let his uncle alone until he should be sent for.

Then, when four years had gone by, when the old man had become so infirm that it was a question how far he was responsible for his vagaries of temper, Sir Matthew suddenly returned to England, and Caryl with him. And Douglas, going down to the dock to meet them, was aware that it was a stranger who had come back; that it was not for nothing that his brother's letters had grown briefer and colder of late; that this new Caryl with the bronzed face and the quiet businesslike manner did not know what his younger brother had grown into, and did not greatly care to know.

Caryl took up his abode with his uncle, and was made heartily welcome, apparently, by the old man, and by his lady housekeeper and distant relation, Mrs. Locke; and this in itself almost cut him off from Douglas, who had not been made to feel himself welcome in that house for many a day.

Douglas was very unhappy and restless in those days, vexed with himself for being vexed. Of course, he had not wished Caryl to quarrel with their uncle on his account, especially in the state in which the poor old man was now, but somehow he had not expected that Caryl would step quietly into favor, and contentedly leave him out in the cold.

Whoever was to blame for this state of things, it did not last long. Old Mr. Lingard died about three months after his elder nephew came back to England, and when the brothers met at his funeral, Douglas realized with a dreary sort of incredulity that they had not met before for more than six weeks. It was with the same kind of incredulity, only keener, that he listened to the reading of his uncle's will.

There was a very handsome provision for Mrs. Locke, who had been with him for several years, though she was still comparatively a young woman, and legacies to two old servants. Everything else was left to "my nephew, Caryl Lingard," and Douglas Lingard was not even mentioned.

After the first few moments, during which he was schooling himself not to betray any feeling at all, the young man told himself that he had, perhaps, little reason to be surprised, considering his uncle's persistent dislike during the last few years of his life, nor much excuse for disappointment, since it had always been implied rather than promised that the old man's property was to be shared between his two nephews more or less equally.

The surprise and the disappointment had, in truth, another cause, and went deeper. Hardly, now that he saw it with his own eyes, could he believe that Caryl could be so changed as to take what the old man's caprice had given to him without any hesitation, without even a word of regret for the younger brother, who was thus left to the chances of a not very lucrative profession.

For the moment it seemed all unreal to the young man; he could have cried out, have pleaded that there must be some mistake—not in the will, but in Caryl's acceptance of it. Then pride came to his aid, and he said to himself that if others could forget so could he. He went away with hardly another word, but for some little time after he was haunted by the thought that surely Caryl would come or write—that he could not have lost his brother as well as his share of their uncle's fortune.

But there had been neither word nor letter, and time had made the thing seem credible and even comprehensible, and Douglas Lingard had learned to tell himself that he was not the only man in the world whose nearest or dearest did not greatly care about him, or preferred their own interest.

Rather more than a year had passed since his uncle's death, and before this touch of illness and hint of possible danger he had thought that he was learning to be tolerably content in his isolation, and to think of his brother as seldom as his brother thought of him.

But now—with fever quickening all his pulses, with thoughts that would not be kept in control, but were as vivid and as fantastic as dreams, although he knew all the while that he was awake—now things looked different.

Sometimes it seemed to him as though they were boys together again, and he was pleading with Caryl to "make it up" after some quarrel for which both had been to blame; and when, with a start, he realized that they were boys no longer, he still found himself pleading with Caryl, reproaching, entreating, somehow breaking down the wall of estrangement that had risen up between them.

He was weary, and half angry with himself for these persistent fancies, when another took possession of him. He must write to Caryl—now, while he was able. If he should not be very ill after all the letter need not go, but if things should go amiss with him he would like Caryl to know—he hardly knew what.

With some little difficulty he found writing materials, and steadied his hand to hold the pen, and words seemed to come of themselves much more freely than they generally did when he sat down to write a letter. With that touch of fever in his veins he could protest and plead and set forth his own cause as he had never done in speech, and as, at any other time, nothing would have induced him to do on paper.

But presently the throbbing in his temples conquered even his resolve and his excitement. He began to doubt whether he was not writing nonsense, and he could not see to read over what he had written. For a moment he considered whether he should burn it at once, but finally folded it up and thrust it away, putting off the effort till the morrow.

The doctor arrived at the Dower House early the next day, and relieved the minds of all concerned by making light of the fears that they had all secretly been entertaining. At the same time he scolded Douglas Lingard for complicating a thorough and satisfactory "take" in the way of vaccination by a very severe feverish cold, and sternly ordered the young man back to bed, telling him that if he felt extremely ill it was no more than he might have expected and had well deserved.

Douglas was so thankful to learn that he need not expect to bring danger and inconvenience upon his kind hosts by importing small-pox into their house, that he cared little what else happened to him, and contentedly obeyed orders, with such good results that in four days' time he was allowed to get up and return, as a semi-invalid, to ordinary life.

And thus, of course, he fell in love with Celia Hamerton. The announcement sounds abrupt, but indeed the process was as brief as it was thorough, and it would be a mere waste of words to explain at length why a very young man, whose heart under the circumstances must inevitably have been To Let, should love the first gracious feminine vision that crossed his path. If Celia Hamerton had been far less lovable than she was it would probably have made little difference at the time, though in the end the quality and quantity of the affection she inspired might not have been quite the same.

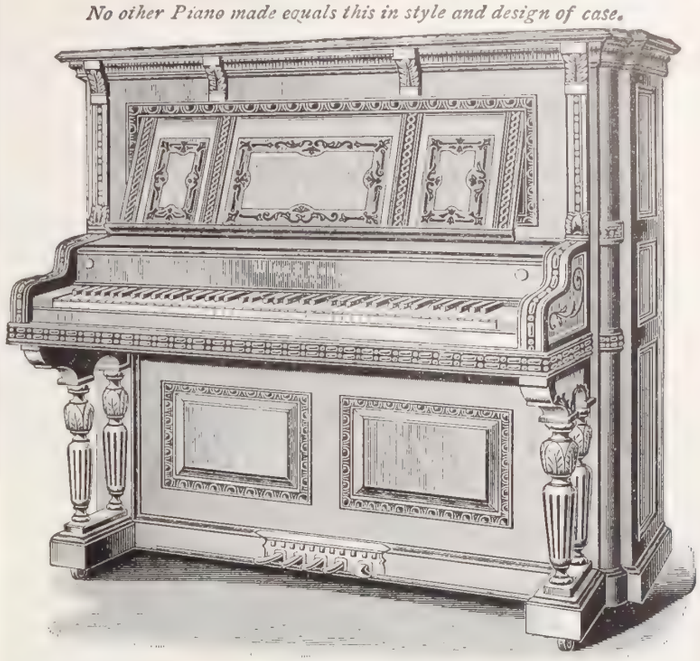
And she for her part helped to bring about the result by her natural interest in the young man, for whose illness she still illogically felt herself responsible and to whom she had besides taken a sincere liking. Celia was no conquering beauty; experience had not led her to suppose that if she smiled upon a man he would immediately fall a victim to her charms, and when she smiled upon this one it was with the intention of making him happy and comfortable, and with an innocent satisfaction in the knowledge that he certainly "liked" her in return.

(To be Continued).

The Wing Piano

STYLE 29. CONCERT GRAND UPRIGHT.

No other Piano made equals this in style and design of case.



We aim to make the best piano possible and to sell it at the lowest price possble. If you wish to buy a fine piano at a low price, write us.

DESCRIPTION OF STYLE 29.

7⅓ octaves.

Double lever, grand repeating action.

Grand scale, overstrung bass; three strings to each note in middle and treble registers.

The scale is the same as in grand pianos, with the largest size of sound board and strings of greatest length, thus giving the greatest volume and power of tone.

Case.—Double veneered inside and outside.

Choice of superior Circassian walnut, rich figured mahogany, genuine quartered oak and ebonized.

Keys.—Of best ivory and ebony.

SPECIAL INFORMATION

Tone.—The one great object for which a piano is made is its tone. The Wing Piano possesses magnificent tone-qualities, durability, sweetness, richness, power, singing quality and evenness.

Action.—The Wing action is patterned after the perfected double lever grand repeating action, to secure the greatest strength and power and greatest repeating qualities. Every note acts instantaneously and recovers promptly, ready for the repeat, so that after a note is played the same note may be sounded again immediately without taking the finger from key.

Improvements.—Wing Pianos have the following improvements, viz.: "Built up" wrest plank construction. "Dovetail" top and bottom frame case construction. Full metal plate, with metal depression bar and metal supports for key bed. Improved noiseless direct motion pedal action. Improved practice attachment. Full length duet music desk. Carved panels. Instrumental attachment.

THE INSTRUMENTAL ATTACHMENT

imitates perfectly the tones of the Mandolin, Guitar, Harp, Zither and Banjo. Music written for these instruments, with and without piano accompaniment, can be played just as perfectly by a single player on the piano as though rendered by a parlor orchestra.

Every Wing Piano is guaranteed for twelve (12) years against any defect in tone, action, workmanship or material . .

SENT ON TRIAL FREIGHT PREPAID. We will send this piano or your choice of four other styles, to any part of the United States on trial (all freight paid by us), allow ample time for a thorough examination and trial in the home, and, if the instrument is in any particular unsatisfactory, we will take it back at our own expense. No conditions are attached to this trial. We ask for no advance payment, no deposit. We pay all freights in advance. Our object in offering these terms is to give everyone an opportunity to examine the Wing Piano free of expense or risk.

Over 18,000 Wing Pianos Manufactured and Sold in 30 Years (since 1868).

We will send free on request "The Book of Complete Information about Pianos," 118 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Everyone who intends to purchase a piano should have this book. Sent free on requst, with twelve (12) pieces of music.

OLD INSTRUMENTS EXCHANGED—EASY PAYMENTS.

WING & SON.

205-207 EAST 12th STREET, NEW YORK.

1868—31st Year—1899

SAMPLES MAILED FREE.

One Hundred Thousand Trial Packages of Catarrh Cure Sent Free to Applicants.

Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure is a pleasant and harmless vegetable compound, which being inhaled by smoking, is applied directly to the diseased parts, and being absorbed, also purifies the blood. It will cure ninety-five of every hundred cases of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc.

A sample will be mailed free, and further treatment, if you desire it, will cost only $1.00 for a box sufficient for one month's treatment. Write at once to Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 50 Broad St., Atlanta, Ga.

California Lands

At Hemet, near Los Angeles. Garden spot of California. Situated on a gently sloping mesa 1,600 feet above the ocean, which is 50 miles away. Water supply certain and goes with the land. Title perfect. No incumberance on land or water. Terms one-third cash. Oranges, lemons, apples, apricots, peaches, etc., in abundance. Potatoes yield two crops, alfalfa six crops each year. Good churches and schools. For map, prices and further information address

HEMET LAND CO., Dept. F,

Hemet, Riverside County, California

TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS,

102 Fulton st., New York, sells all makes under half price. Don't buy before writing them for machine on trial, terms and prices. Exchanges. Immense stock for selection. Shipped for trial. Guaranteed first class. Dealers supplied. 52 page illustrated catalogue free.

$18,000 in Cash To be Given Away

On the fifteenth of next April to all agents sending 20 or more subscribers to

The Ladies' Home Journal
AND
The Saturday Evening Post

One thousand dollars to the agent sending the largest list—$750—$500—$400—and so on.

764 cash awards, together with the general fund of $3000, amounting to $18,000, will be given in addition to the agent's commission and the special rebates for large clubs.

Send for full particulars.

Profitable work all winter.

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

A Piano By Mail

You can buy an IVERS & POND Piano just as cheaply, as safely, and as satisfactorily of us by mail as in person at our warerooms. How? Write and we'll tell you.

We send our pianos on trial at our expense to any part of the United States where they are not sold by a local dealer. Send us a postal card and receive FREE our CATALOGUE and prices for cash and on EASY PAYMENTS.

If you want a Piano, a postal card may save you $75 to $100. Send it to-day.

IVERS & POND PIANO CO.,
110 Boylston Street, Boston.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

Prince of Peace. [illegible] Hartsough & Fillmore. [illegible] per hundred; postpaid.

Recitations and Dialogues. No. 4. [illegible]

Santa Claus' Charm. [illegible]

Mrs. Santa Claus and the Christmas Dolls. By Mrs. J. M. [illegible] J. H. Hartsough. A beautiful cantata for primary grades, 30 cts. [illegible] postpaid.

Prince of Peace. Anthem by Hartsough. [illegible] cts.

Thy Watchmen shall lift up the Voice. [illegible] 25 cents.

[illegible] Christmas Music is unsurpassed. We supply others too. Full descriptive catalogue sent on application. A sample of our monthly Musical Magazine sent free.

FILLMORE BROS. 119 W. 6th St., Cincinnati. 40 Bible House, New York.

FIVE FAMOUS SONGS

"Tell Mother I'll Be There." [illegible] by Mother

"Grander Than all the Banners of the World." Latest Flag Song.

"I Am Going Home to Mother." [illegible] Words Song.

"My Buckeye Home."

"I'm Looking for the Mail-man" [illegible] 50 cts. words and music, 25 cents. [illegible] Stamps taken.

McCALLIP MUSIC CO.
Dept. 9, Columbus, Ohio.

XMAS SERVICES

[illegible] Sunday Schools. Send four cent stamps for one [illegible] 1899 complete service. [illegible] PUBLISHING [illegible] Wabash Ave., Chicago.

MONEY

[illegible] Mexican [illegible] Dollar [illegible] Peso [illegible] Crown [illegible] Franc [illegible] Mark [illegible] Florin [illegible] Lira [illegible] Yen [illegible] Rupee [illegible] Rouble [illegible] Sovereign [illegible] Eagle [illegible] Ducat [illegible] Guilder [illegible] Peseta [illegible] Bolivar [illegible] Milreis [illegible] Dollar [illegible] Dinar [illegible] Piastre [illegible] Kroner [illegible] Tael [illegible] Dollar [illegible] Dollar [illegible] Dollar

IT CAN'T BE DONE.

No One Can Remain Well, No Chronic Disease Can Be Cured Unless the Stomach is First Made Strong and Vigorous.

This is plain because every organ in the body depends on the stomach for its nourishment. Nerve, bone, sinew, blood are made from the food which the stomach converts to our use.

How useless to treat disease with this, that and the other remedy and neglect the most important of all—the stomach.

The earliest symptoms of indigestion are sour risings, bad taste in the mouth, gas in stomach and bowels, palpitation, all gone feeling, faintness, headaches, constipation; later comes loss of flesh, consumption, liver and heart troubles, kidney diseases, nervous prostration, all of which are the indirect result of poor nutrition.

Any person suffering from indigestion should make it a practice to take after each meal one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, allowing it to dissolve in the mouth and thus mingle with the saliva and enter the stomach in the most natural way. These Tablets are highly recommended by Dr. Jennison because they are composed of the natural digestive acids and fruit essences which assist the stomach in digesting all wholesome food before it has time to ferment and sour.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by druggists, full-sized packages at 50 cents. They are also excellent for invalids and children. A book on stomach diseases and thousands of testimonials of genuine cures sent free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

It's the Flat-Ended Teeth

with circular biting edges, that smooth out wrinkles, remove dust caps, cleanse the skin in the bath, open the pores, and give new life to the whole body.

Bailey's Rubber Brushes

are all made this way. It's the right way. Millions in use. Bailey's name on every brush. Accept no others. Beware of imitations. (Agents wanted)

Found at All Dealers, or sent on Receipt of Price

Bailey's Rubber Complexion Brush	$ .50
Bailey's Complexion Soap	.10
Bailey's Bath and Shampoo Brush	.75
Bailey's Rubber Bath and Flesh Brush	1.50
Bailey's Rubber Toilet Brush (large)	.50
Bailey's Rubber Toilet Brush (small)	.25
Bailey's Rubber Glove Cleaner	.10

Catalogue Free of Everything in Rubber Goods

C. J. BAILEY & CO., 22 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

RUBIFOAM

Its delicious flavor and fragrance win the little ones, and promotes the daily habit of cleansing their teeth. Rubifoam is a perfect liquid dentifrice.

Price, 25 cents. At Druggists. Sample vial of Rubifoam mailed free on receipt of postage, 2 cents. Address E. W. Hoyt & Co., Lowell, Mass.

RESTFUL and healthful foot covering for chamber, bathroom, sick room. Warm feet and foot-ease are assured wearers of

PARKER'S Arctic Socks pair. 25c.

All sizes. Best thing in rubber boots. Sold by dealers or by mail. Parker pays postage. Catalog free. J. H. Parker, Dept., E, 108 Bedford St., Boston.

The Coming Antichrist

Conditions Long Existing and Now Intensified which will Prepare the Way for Him

BY BISHOP DEHILE OF NORWAY *

VAGUE hints are given in various parts of Scripture of the appearance, at some future time, of a strange weird figure, who will be as surely the incarnation of evil as Christ was the incarnation of good. It may be useful to collect from the writings of the Apostle Paul the references to this being, that we may understand the conditions out of which he will arise.

The apostle says that the coming of Christ was really not so near at hand as many taught. There were those who even appealed to him as their authority for the view that Christ's advent was nigh, and some did not hesitate to support this by false epistles which they attributed to him. No; great events must still happen before the Lord's return, and of these events one of the most important was the coming of Antichrist. Paul does not call him by that name; he designates him "the son of perdition," "the man of sin" (II. Thess. 2:3); but the context plainly shows that it is Antichrist he means.

Before Antichrist can appear, however, Paul says humanity must be ripe to receive him; in other words, there must first be a great "falling away,"—that is, a falling away from the faith. But even this falling away cannot come to pass before the restraint on ungodliness has been removed. The chronological order will therefore be: first, that which keeps back the full development of ungodliness will be removed, then the great falling away will take place, and finally Antichrist himself will come as the matured fruit of that falling away.

The Antichristian spirit was already in vigorous activity when the apostle wrote. He himself says, "The mystery of lawlessness doth already work"; but he adds, "only there is one that restraineth now, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall be revealed the lawless one" (Antichrist) (II. Thess. 2:7, 8, R.V.). Now, what is it that restrains the development of ungodliness and thereby also the coming of Antichrist?

The most probable explanation is the ancient one, that it was the Roman emperor, or at least the Roman Empire, that restrained. Antichrist is to appear as a ruler overthrowing all law and order, and that could not happen, they thought, so long as the Roman Empire with its legislation still stood firm.

But if the apostle had mainly the Roman Empire and its judicial system in his mind, that is no reason why the same idea may not be applied to the civil authority and judicial system of all ages. We are even disposed to go a step further, and seek that which restrains in the fundamental moral conceptions that underlie every judicial system and form its necessary basis—we mean the conceptions of right and wrong, duty and responsibility. A judicial system can be overthrown; but so long as those conceptions exist and are respected, it can be restored. On the other hand, if these are abolished, all judicial order and all morality become impossible, and the way is paved at once for the "lawless one," as Antichrist is called in II. Thess. 2:8, R.V.

We believe that the very efforts of anarchists to abolish these fundamental moral conceptions of right and justice and duty and responsibility are the most decided antichristian signs in our day, and it must be confessed that the infidelity of our age, to an unpleasant degree, distinguishes itself in this respect from that of former days; and the worst of all is that the main props of all moral order will have been taken away. There will be no longer any moral law to which appeal can be made by the one who seeks to counteract the religious and moral corruption. Here the words of the Psalmist are very applicable: "If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?" (Psalm 11:3). Paul calls Antichrist "the lawless one," for his appearance is the natural result of the lawless conditions, from a moral point of view, existing among men, and his task is to break down what is still left of law and order, so that upon the ruins of all law and order he may establish a kingdom where his will shall be the only law. The propaganda of the Anarchists, Nihilists and Communists is therefore a direct preparation of the world for the triumph of this incarnation of evil.

In complete agreement with this name is the sketch that follows of his active operations. He "exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped" (II. Thess. 2:4; Daniel 7:25); he permits worship neither of the true God nor of idols. All former worship of God must be abolished; mankind is to be a tabula rasa (a tablet from which all writing has been erased), in order that he may inscribe his name upon it as the object of worship. The apostle proceeds in this line to say that he, "as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." This at once recalls what the prophet Daniel has said of the forerunner of Antichrist—Antiochus Epiphanes—only that it is much stronger, since the real Antichrist in this respect also towers above all types of him in the history of the kingdom of God.

* From his article in The Prophetic News, which may be obtained, price six cents, from J. E. Jewett, 77 Bible House, New York.

THE AMERICAN MESSENGER

AN ILLUSTRATED RELIGIOUS MONTHLY

25c. a Year

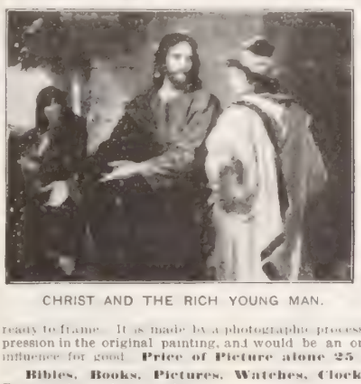
The "American Messenger" is a unique paper. No other like it. Founded in 1858 to meet the demand for a high-class non-sectarian religious paper at a price within the reach of all, it has fulfilled its purpose so well that to-day no other paper of its class compares with it in circulation and influence. Among our contributors are

Rev. Dr. T. L. CUYLER,	FRANK H. SWEET,	Mrs. E. P. ALLAN,
Dr. J. R. MILLER,	HEZEKIAH BUTTERWORTH,	MABEL GIFFORD,
Rev. Dr. F. E. CLARK,	W. EDGAR SIMPSON,	JULIA R. JOHNSTON,
G. B. F. HALLOCK, D. D.,	J. L. HARBOUR,	ANNA B. WARNER,
Rev. O. A. KINGSBURY,	ANNIE HAMILTON DONNELL,	Mrs. JANE ELLIS JOY,
Rev. H. T. MILLER,	JULIA MAGNATH WRIGHT,	ALMA J. NOBLE,
Rev. W. C. STILES,	CORA S. DAY,	AND MANY OTHERS.

Dr. J. R. MILLER.

During the coming year Miss Warner's serial, "Fresh Air" will be completed. This will be followed by a charming short story, "The Shale Pickers," by Mr. W. Edgar Simpson. "Philip Desmond," a serial of absorbing interest, by Cora S. Day, begins in November, 1899, and another new serial will be begun in the early part of 1900.

The American Messenger has for fifty years been the spiritual home and source of inspiration to thousands of American Christian families. It brings each month a message of inspiration, comfort and good cheer. It is non-sectarian, devoted to the upbuilding of a sturdy Christian character, and the promotion of Christian living. If you are a subscriber you know its value. If not, we want you to become one at once and make the following offers to you:



CHRIST AND THE RICH YOUNG MAN.

Free! As a Special Inducement, if you send 25c. at once, silver or stamps, for the American Messenger one year, we will send you this paper FREE from the time your subscription is received to January 1, 1900, including Thanksgiving and Christmas Numbers, and, if you send Five Cents, for packing and shipping, 25c. in all, we will also send, free, a copy of Hofmann's famous painting, "Christ and the Rich Young Man." This magnificent picture is on fine paper, ready to frame. It is made by a photographic process which admirably reproduces the exquisite beauty of expression in the original painting, and would be an ornament in any home, and of the greatest helpfulness and influence for good. Price of Picture alone 25 Cents.

18 x 22 Inches in Size,

Bibles, Books, Pictures, Watches, Clocks, Silverware, etc., given for securing subscribers. Terms and sample copies free.

AMERICAN MESSENGER, Department 5, 150 Nassau St., NEW YORK.

MAKERS OF HISTORY

An Absorbing and by far the Most Instructive ever played with cards. GAME

TEMPTS THE BOY TO "EVENINGS AT HOME"

Great soldiers, statesmen and philosophers all pass before the player in splendid review. Here he may thrill with the early dreams of the Corsican soldier, and here he can watch the world-beleagured Frederick floundering to immortality. Great historic incidents, portraits and scenes are authentic; endorsed by educators and parents everywhere. The "Makers of History" Game and to all members of the family may prove more useful than a library. Every moment of the game gives FUN AND RECREATION and adds to our knowledge of the world's history. It is quickly learned, full instructions accompany every pack. The cards are of fine material and beautifully executed. When all features are considered, no price could be too high.

STIMULATES THOUGHT

We will send you, postpaid, a complete pack containing 36 original pen-and-ink vignette drawings, from illustrations in "Six Thousand Years of History" for ONLY 25c. You should order to-day from nearest office.

INTERSTATE PRESS, Dept. A. 719-723 Locust St., ST. LOUIS, MO. or 109-111 Fifth Ave., New York City and the greatest care should be exercised in its selection.

Cod Liver Oil is a food

Peter Moller's Cod Liver Oil

is the best oil that fifty years of continued scientific research has produced. By the process now employed the oil is kept from contact with the atmosphere from the beginning of the process of manufacture until it is safely corked up in bottles, thus preventing contamination of any kind and excluding all impurities.

Give this new oil a trial. Ask for Peter Moller's Oil, and see that the bottle—a flat, oval one—bears our name as agents. Notice the date in perforated letters at bottom of the label.

Schieffelin & Co., New York.

which unlocks the best opportunities in the Business World is the skilled use of the

Remington Typewriter

because the chief demand is always for Remington operators.

WYCKOFF, SEAMANS & BENEDICT, 327 Broadway, N. Y.

$75 MONTH AND EXPENSES; no experience needed; position permanent; self seller. PEASE MFG. CO., P.O. Box A, Cincinnati, O.

HEADACHE stopped with Ice Inhaler. Free Ice Bear Inhaler Co., 1 5th Ave. N. Y. City

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS

The Life of a Tree*

THE materials upon which a tree feeds are derived from the soil and the air. The minute hair roots which spring from the rootlets take up water from the ground, and with it various substances which it holds in solution. These are the earthy constituents of the tree, which reappear in the form of ashes when any part of it is burned. The water . . . goes straight from the roots to the leaves, in which a most important process in the feeding of the tree takes place. . . . All plants, like all animals, breathe; and plants, like animals, breathe in oxygen and breathe out carbonic acid gas. This process of respiration or the breathing of the tree goes on both day and night, but it is far less active than the assimilation which takes place only in the light. . . . Wood is made up chiefly of very small tubes or cells of various kinds, which have special uses in the life of the tree. Some conduct water from the roots to the crown, some store away digested food, and others merely strengthen the structure of wood and hold it together. . . . In most trees, like the oaks and pines, the wood becomes darker in color and harder after it has been in the tree for some years. The opening of its cells become so choked that the sap can no longer run through them. From living sapwood, in which growth is going on, it becomes heartwood, which is dead because it has nothing to do with growth. This is why hollow trees may flourish and bear fruit. Since water from the roots rises only in the sapwood, it is easy to kill trees with heartwood by girdling them, provided all the sapwood is cut through. . . . A great many theories have been proposed to account for the rise of water into the tops of tall trees, some of which, as in the big trees of California, may be over 300 feet from the ground. But none of these theories are quite satisfactory, and it must be admitted that we do not yet know how the trees supply their lofty crowns with the water which keeps them alive. . . . The life of a community of trees is an exceedingly interesting one. A forest tree is in many ways as much dependent upon its neighbors for safety and food as are the inhabitants of a town upon one another. A forest tree helps to protect its neighbors against the wind, which might overthrow them, and the sun, which is ready to dry up the soil about their roots or to make sun cracks in their bark by shining too hotly upon it. It enriches the earth in which they stand by the fall of its leaves and twigs, and aids in keeping the air about their crowns and the soil about their roots cooler in summer and warmer in winter than it would be if each tree stood alone. With the others it forms a common canopy under which the seedlings of all the members of this protective union are sheltered in early youth, and through which the beneficent influences of the forest is preserved and extended far beyond the trees themselves.

A Primer of Forestry.* Part I. The Forest. by Gifford Pinchot Forester. Pp. 89; 130 Illustrations. Bulletin 21, Division of Forestry, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Books Received

Points for Parliamentarians, a neat little handbook of practical value to debaters. Paper covers; price 10 cents or 15 cents, according to binding. Charles Sheard, Jr., Canton, New York, publisher.

An article by President J. E. Rankin, published in the Bibliotheca Sacra of July, has been translated into the Japanese language and is published in a Japanese quarterly. The subject of the article is "The influence of the Bible on the Human Intellect."

Christian Ethics. By Prof. William L. Davidson, M.A., LL.D., of the University of Aberdeen. A little treatise of inestimable value to the young Christian. Pp. 144. Price 75 cents. Published by The Fleming H. Revell Company, New York, Chicago and Toronto.

The Moral Order of the World in Ancient and Modern Thought, by Alexander Balmain Bruce, D.D. A series of lectures dealing with Buddhism, Zoroaster's Teaching, the Teaching of the Greek Philosophers etc. Pp. 431. Price $2. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, 153 Fifth avenue, N. Y.

Can I Believe in God the Father? The practical argument of the Divine Personality, by Dr. Wm. Newton Clarke. These lectures by so eminent a scholar are specially useful in view of the recent revival of Pantheistic thought. Pp. 215. Price $1. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, 153 Fifth avenue, New York.

THE RULE OF PUBLIC OPINION

By

HONORABLE THOS. B. REED

In this week's number of

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

(OF PHILADELPHIA)

The former Speaker of the National House of Representatives contributes to this number the second of his notable papers.

VANCE THOMPSON. This brilliant writer is the author of an out-of-the-way story of a New York newsboy. The Jensen Boy is much like other street urchins of great cities, but occasionally he has unaccountable impulses—which many of us have shared—that lead to results which are almost uncanny. The Jensen Boy

W. C. COUP, a pioneer in the circus business in this country, tells some of the funniest of the secrets of the circus. Freaks and Fakes of the Circus

ADACHI KINNOSUKÉ, a successful Japanese author, writes, in his own quaint and exotic style, a tale of the Imperial University, at Tokyo. The Jinrikisha Man

HAYDEN CARRUTH, a favorite among the Post's humorous writers, is the biographer of a remarkable hen, whose passion for setting extended to lumps of steam coal, brindled doorknobs and red billiard balls. The Great Setting of Everlasting Hills

Your newsman will serve you regularly at 5 cents the copy
Sent by mail every week for five months on receipt of $1.00

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

"I cannot refrain from saying that it is equal to any $3.00 Teachers Bible that I have ever seen. —E. H. Van Hoeren, 82 Spencer Street, Brooklyn.

Have You a Good Bible?

Why Not When You Can Get One Worth $5.00 for $1.00.

Nelson's Popular Teachers' Bible

contains New Helps, with 68 illustrations, New Concordance to the Authorized and Revised Versions, combined with a Subject Index and Pronouncing Dictionary of Scripture, Proper Names, etc., all in one a, b, c, list, a great achievement and facility. The Dial says: "The concordance is the most complete yet produced."

12 maps, beautifully colored, carefully revised and specially engraved are from the latest surveys with complete index.

Minion type, bound in flexible leather, with overlapping covers, red under gold edges. Size, 7 3-4 by 5 inches.

If You Wish One of Those Wonderful Bibles Do Not Delay. Thumb Index, 35 Cents Extra.

Add 20 cents if to be sent by post. MONEY REFUNDED IF NOT SATISFACTORY.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS, . . . Publishers, . . . 41 East 18th Street, New York.

THE NEW BOOK

Sacred Songs No. 2.

By Sankey, McGranahan and Stebbins,

Will be issued about Nov. 15, 1899.

Price $25 per 100. Sample copy, post free, 20 cents.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

ONE HUNDRED

copies of a letter, piece of music, drawing, or any writing can be made on a Lawton Simplex Printer. No washing. No wetting of paper. Send for circulars and samples of work. Agents wanted.

LAWTON & CO., 30 Vesey St., New York. 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

ALUMINUM AND AGENTS SPECIALTIES Write for particulars and CATALOG FREE. G. VINING NOVELTY CO., 60 Wabash Av. CHICAGO.

TEACH YOURSELF MUSIC

DURING LEISURE MOMENTS AT HOME, Piano, Organ Guitar and Voice.

Anyone can learn at Tunes, Notes, Chords, Accompaniments and the Laws of Harmony in short time. It is the cheapest, easiest, most rapid and correct way on earth to learn music. Over 40,000 strongest kind of testimonials received. Notes to the bottom of music makes it clear to the beginner creates a fondness for music because you succeed from the start. A few days practice and you play perfect Accompaniments in all keys. Circulars Free. Write for them. Worth hundreds of dollars to any one interested in Music. Sample Lessons 10c G. S. RICE MUSIC CO., C-241 Wabash Ave. Chicago

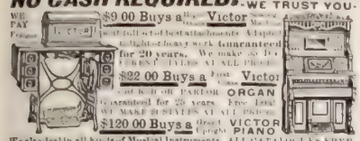
CATARRH RELIEVED at once. Instant FREE TRIAL Boose Inhaler Co., 1170 B'way, N. Y. City

Trial Package Free!

If any reader suffering from rheumatism will write to me, I will send them free of cost a trial Package of a simple and harmless remedy which cured me and thousands of others among them cases of over 40 years standing. This is an honest remedy that you can test before you part with your money. Address: JOHN A. SMITH, 219 Summerfield Church Building Milwaukee, Wis.

NO CASH REQUIRED. 30 DAYS FREE TRIAL. WE TRUST YOU.



$9.00 Buys a Victor Sewing Machine. Guaranteed for 20 years. We make no Discount for Cash. $22.00 Buys a Victor ORGAN. Guaranteed for 25 years. $120.00 Buys a VICTOR PIANO. We also deal in all kinds of Musical Instruments. ALL CATALOGUES FREE. VICTOR MFG. CO., Dept. F51, 161-167 Plymouth Pl. Chicago, Ill.

SEWING MACHINE $13.95

No money in advance. A fine $40 High-Arm Five-Drawer Machine at $13.95 sent anywhere on 8 months' trial guaranteed 20 years—made with Piano Polished Solid Oak Cabinet, beautiful Bent Cover, the best High-Arm Head made, drawers known, improvement, guaranteed the equal of any $40 machine. Don't buy before you see our Big Free Catalog in which we describe and illustrate this machine and many others. Write today. THE G. LOUIS VEHON CO., 157 W. Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.

$3.00 MEN'S SHOES $1.50.

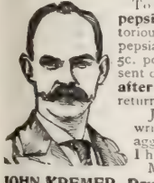
We make this Shoe, and it retails for $3.00. Buying of the manufacturer, you secure a pair for $1.50. Made of genuine satin oil, coin toe, medium round last with tips, medium weight soles, low broad heels, smooth inner soles free from nails, threads, tacks and all imperfections. 100,000 other bargains equally as cheap are contained in our General Catalogue of everything to Eat, Wear and Use, which costs us 69c, but is mailed free to you. Address this way:

JULIUS HINES & SON, BALTIMORE, MD. Dept. 218

REDUCED TO $4.50.

To place our best $10.00 TOLEDO BATH CABINET in every home we send it complete for 30 days with best alcohol stove, directions, formulas to any address upon receipt of $4.50. Face Steamer 25c extra. Order today. Ours best of all Cabinets, has real door, steel frame, top curtains, rubber lined, folds flat 1 in. space. Money refunded after 30 days use if not just as represented. It's a home necessity. Turkish and vapor baths 3c each prevent disease, cure without drugs colds, la grippe, rheumatism, female ills, all blood, skin, kidney, nervous troubles. WRITE FOR CATALOGUE FREE. We make Cabinets from $2.25 up. Agents Wanted. Easy terms. Exclusive territory. TOLEDO BATH CABINET CO., 614 Cherry St., TOLEDO, OHIO.

Free to Bad Stomachs.



To prove that Kremer's Dyspepsia Powder is the most meritorious remedy for all forms of dyspepsia, I will send a large box for 5c. postage, the price (50c.) to be sent only in case you are benefited after a week's trial. Otherwise return powder by mail.

J. RITCHIE, Durant, I. T., writes: "It relieved exceedingly aggravated dyspepsia with which I have suffered for years."

Mention this paper.

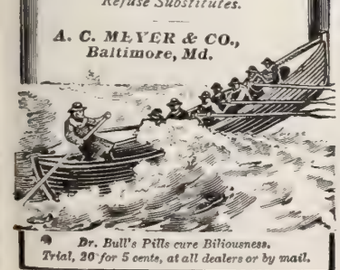
JOHN KREMER, Druggist, 438 7th Ave., N. Y.

Dr. Bull's COUGH SYRUP SAVES LIVES

Don't despair! Many a baby has been saved to its mother by Dr. Bull. Coughs are dangerous—they grow quickly. The little one's life depends on you! Irritated lung passages must be soothed and healed, the racking cough stopped, breathing made easier. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is positive, quick and harmless—it is a sure cure.

Refuse Substitutes.

A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md.



Dr. Bull's Pills cure Biliousness. Trial, 20 for 5 cents, at all dealers or by mail.

Return for the Lord's Benefits

Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for Nov. 26. Ps. 116: 12-19

SOME great danger, or terrible distress, appears to have menaced the man who wrote this psalm. We cannot tell what it was: he gives us no clue to its nature, but he gives expression to his feelings on being delivered from it. So the song of a grateful heart remains on record to become the expression of other thankful hearts to the end of time; and his desire that he might pay his vows to the Lord in the presence of all his people, is fulfilled to a degree that he never conceived. It would have been better for the church and the world if such desire had been more prevalent. We hear more of the complaints, the sorrows and apprehensions of God's people than we do of thanks and recognition of deliverances. There is joy and gladness, of course. Every one is glad when some dreaded peril is escaped or some heavy burden is lifted, but how seldom does the joy take the form of renewed consecration and acknowledgment of the divine love and tenderness. It is as if some mariner suddenly finds his ship is going direct upon the rocks, and he foresees as in a flash all the loss of property and life that will ensue. His heart sinks; but at the last moment a turn of the wind or the current causes him to escape, and he draws a deep breath of relief. Does his deliverance lead him simply to talk of his "luck," or does it make him resolve to be more careful of his course in the future? If that question is answered, we know the character of the man.

Our conception of the power and majesty of the Being who rules the universe with its countless worlds and sustains them all by his wisdom and might, forbids the notion of our making any repayment to him of the benefits he confers. He is, far and away, above any little that we can offer as a gift. Those who profess to know his thoughts and his plans, may tell us glibly what he wishes and thinks; but that is a God of their own making, not he who said: "If I were hungry I would not tell thee; for the world is mine and the fulness thereof." But the higher and better conception of God does not relieve us of our duty. A father, no matter how rich he may be, does not despise the few flowers, or the paltry gift that his child has exerted, or denied himself to give him. He recognizes the love that impelled him to make the gift and that makes it precious to him. We can make no return to God for his benefits; but we can prove in numberless ways that we appreciate them and are thankful for them.

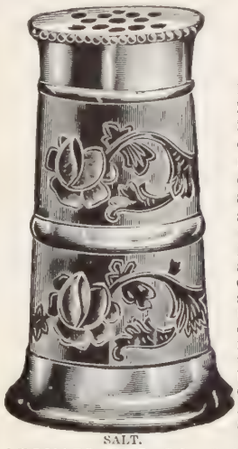
What, then, may we do to show that we are grateful? We ought, first of all, to use the blessing for the purpose for which it was given. The life saved from death should be consecrated anew to usefulness; the property acquired should be used in helping others; the children that come to enrich life and brighten the home should be trained to become intelligent and honorable citizens; even the trials and sorrows, which have proved to some of us our best blessings, should make us more sympathetic and helpful. In this way we show our gratitude in the way that our heavenly Father, like an earthly father, approves, because it is putting his gifts to the purpose for which they were designed. It is as the Psalmist says: "taking the cup of salvation." Then there is the duty of verbal acknowledgment. It is right that the world should know that we ascribe our blessings to God. It may be more gratifying to our pride to have it said that we are "self-made men." that we have "carved our own way upward" by our own talents and efforts, but the inner consciousness of help received and of strength imparted, should make us just, and should evoke our praise. So we may offer what the Psalmist calls "a sacrifice of thanksgiving." Besides this, there is so much that can be done to make God known to people who have never heard of him, to those who misconceive his character. There is not an organization formed for this purpose that is not in need of help in service or in money. To render it is surely a way of showing gratitude that God will approve.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH

The finest polisher—shine is brighter, lasts longer, never burns red—does not stain the hands—most durable and economical.

ALSO IN PASTE FORM—"SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH."

For Both 25 cents For Both

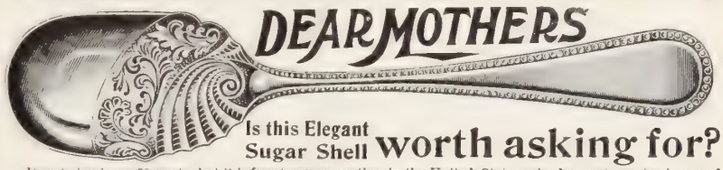


SALT.

If you are looking for a Great Bargain in Fine Silverware never heard of before and that will astonish you, here is one of the Greatest Bargains ever offered by any reliable Manufacturer. For 25 cents we send Prepaid Both the Salt and Pepper Shakers. They are Quadruple Coin Silver Plated. Warranted to wear ten years. Finely engraved and useful as well as ornamental to any table rich or poor. If on receipt of the same you do not think or find them the Greatest Bargain you ever have seen or heard of, return them at once to us and we will refund you your money. We have been doing business in Chicago since 1865. Any Bank or Express Company can tell you our standing. Our Bargain Silverware Catalogue Sent Free.

PEPPER.

LEONARD MFG. CO., 5 & 7 MONROE ST., COR. MICHIGAN AVE., CHICAGO.



Is this Elegant Sugar Shell worth asking for?

Its retail value is 75 cents, but it is free to every mother in the United States who has not received any of our other souvenir gifts. Best sterling silver plate; beautifully engraved; full size—much larger than illustration—a gift that will, we hope, establish an enduring friendship for Quaker Valley people in every home in the land. We will also send, every month, free of charge, a copy of the HOME-FURNISHER, our own publication, wherein we illustrate our latest designs in high-grade silverware and household furniture, and quote lowest factory prices to everyone. Please write to-day and enclose one 2c stamp to pay postage. But one gift to a family. Send your own name only. This is too expensive a gift to send to persons who don't ask for it themselves.

QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO., 313 W. Harrison Street, Chicago.

NO ADVANCE IN PRICES

$15.50 IN SPITE OF RECENT ADVANCES IN RAW MATERIAL.

Will buy our beautiful latest model Arlington Gem Drop Head Sewing Machine possessing all the known improvements, such as Self Threading Vibrating Shuttle, Self Setting Needle, Automatic Bobbin Winder, etc., adapted to light and heavy work. Full set of attachments free. A better machine than some sold at from $25 to $35. Shipped direct from factory at wholesale prices C. O. D. or on 30 days free trial in your own home. No agent's or dealer's large profits to pay. A positive saving of $10 to $20. WARRANTED 20 YEARS. Money promptly refunded if not found as represented. We have over 50 different styles including some as low as..... $8.50

A Good High Arm Machine at $9.75.

Our New Ball Bearing Kenwood Sewing Machines are the easiest running machines on earth. A child can operate them. A $65.00 Kenwood, with decorated wood work, piano finish, $22.00. A $55.00 Ball Bearing Arlington, $19.00. 50 CENTS DISCOUNT ALLOWED ON ALL MACHINES FOR CASH WITH ORDER. As to our reliability we refer to the First National Bank of Chicago or any other Chicago Bank and Dun's or Bradstreet's Commercial Reports. Write at once for our Large Illustrated Catalogue and Special Freight Offer. Address CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 W. VanBuren St., Dept. B-18, CHICAGO, ILL.

AGENTS WANTED FOR "THE STORY OF TWO WARS."

☞ The only Official Standard, High-class History of both "OUR WAR WITH SPAIN" and "OUR WAR WITH THE FILIPINOS, complete in one superb volume. With fine Steel-Portraits of all our Military and Naval Leaders large Colored Maps and many superb Engravings. By Hon. H. B. Russell, and ex-Secretary of War Proctor. Sold Exclusively by Agents. ☞ A book that sells fast and pays big. Hundreds are earning $100 a month and more. Now is the time. No capital required. Freights paid. ☞ The surest chance to make money ever offered to all who want honorable, work that pays big. Write at once for terms and particulars to THE HARTFORD PUBLISHING CO. Hartford, Conn.

RUPTURE CURED

The Improved Elastic Truss is the only Truss in existence that is worn with absolute comfort night and day, and it retains the rupture under the hardest exercise or severest strain, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure. Comfortable Belts made to reduce corpulency. The use of these belts reduces your size and leaves no room for surplus fat to accumulate. They can be used after any operations. Our goods are not sold by agents or druggists. Send for free pamphlets to the Improved Elastic Truss Co., 768 Broadway, N. Y. Established 18 years.

SILK REMNANTS FOR CRAZY WORK

A big package of BEAUTIFUL SILK REMNANTS, 100 to 150 pieces, all cut by hand, trimmed, selected from large accumulation of silks especially adapted for all fancy work. We give more than double any other dealer gives. All large sizes, in beautiful colors and designs. Sent by mail, 25 cents in stamps or silver. Address PARIS SILK CO., Box 3045, New York City, N. Y.

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S 10 for 5 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples of one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce Street, New York.

STEREOPTICONS MAGIC LANTERNS AND SLIDES CONDENSED CATALOGUE FREE RILEY BROS. 16 BEEKMAN ST. NEW YORK.

It was before the day of SAPOLIO They used to say "Woman's Work is never Done."

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION.

Issued Every Week—$1.75 a Year.

FREE—
Every Week to Jan. 1, 1900 ....
☞ See Subscription Offer Below.

Every Week's Issue Equals a 12mo Volume of 175 Pages.

FREE—
The Companion Calendar ....
☞ A Rare Souvenir in 12 Colors.

THE volume for 1900 will again exemplify the unceasing efforts of the publishers to increase the attractiveness of the paper for family reading. It has assembled as contributors not only the most popular story-tellers but also famous soldiers and sailors, statesmen, scientists and travellers. Among them are:

Gen. Wesley Merritt.
Gen. "Joe" Wheeler.
Andrew Carnegie.
Walter Camp.
Reginald de Koven.
Margaret Deland.
Bishop Henry Potter.
John Philip Sousa.

SEND US YOUR ADDRESS ON A POSTAL CARD, AND WE WILL MAIL YOU OUR ILLUSTRATED ANNOUNCEMENT NUMBER OF THE 1900 VOLUME AND SAMPLE COPIES OF THE PAPER FREE .....

GENERAL WESLEY MERRITT.

Now is the Time to Subscribe.

Those who subscribe now, sending $1.75 with this slip, or the name of this paper, will receive

FREE—All the remaining issues of 1899 from the time of subscription, including the beautiful Double Holiday Numbers, and

FREE—The New Companion Calendar, lithographed in twelve colors and gold, the most beautiful Calendar ever given to Companion readers,

And the fifty-two issues of the new volume for 1900—a library in itself. EF 98

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston, Mass.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

VOLUME 22—NUMBER 47

COPYRIGHT 1899, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 22, 1899

PRICE FIVE CENTS

GENERAL PIET JOUBERT, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE BOER ARMIES

(1) British refugees leaving the Transvaal (2) Majuba Hill (3) A pass in the Drakensberg (4) Ladysmith, the British stronghold now surrounded by the Boers

OUR MAIL-BAG

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Reader, Scotts Mills, Ore. Is it wrong for a [illegible] eventually not make good use of them?

Certainly not. There are many uses to which hops may be put besides brewing, just as wheat, corn and barley have better uses than the manufacture of intoxicants.

E. C. B., Oswego, N. Y. Are the Jews of our day descendants of Judah only, or do they represent all the twelve tribes? How were the ten tribes lost?

We have no record of the ten tribes after B. C. 720, when they were carried captive to Assyria by Shalmaneser. It is supposed that they were absorbed into the population of Assyria. Nothing could save them from that fate if they intermarried, as they were likely to do. They do not appear to have been so strict in that matter as were the citizens of the southern kingdom. Among the people who returned to Palestine under the edict of Cyrus there may have been a few descendants of the ten tribes. The bulk of the people, however, were descendants of Judah, Benjamin and Levi, and from these descended the modern Jew. You are probably aware that an attempt has been made to identify the Anglo Saxon race with the ten tribes, but the arguments in its favor are not conclusive.

R. Masson, Birmingham, Ala. What is the average annual yield of the Transvaal mines?

It is estimated at about $70,000,000.

Earnest Student, Detroit, Mich. How is the Christian to reconcile the remarkable conduct of the so-called civilized and Christian nations at the present time with the confident [illegible] nium when war shall be no more? Bible-loving Britain, Catholic France, orthodox Germany, and all the professed God-fearing lands are either slaying or hunting to slay. Where is the reign of the promised millennium? Can one wonder that Unbelief, pointing to the world's wickedness, tauntingly remarks: "Well, you Christians are certainly striving in a queer way to bring about the era of universal peace and goodwill?"

Do not lose heart. The prophecies will surely be fulfilled. The situation is not entirely gloomy. There is growing up in every land a small body of real Christians—"the remnant," as the prophets called them—who by the right and justice of their principles are making their influence felt. It is a slow process, but it will eventually win its way. The governments of the world go their own way now, but there are indications already that they feel the pressure of the public conscience. The time is not far away when the governments will cease to heed the clamor of the loud-voiced, unthinking rabble, which is generally for war and unchristian policy, and will listen to men of conscience and character, who stand for truth and righteousness.

Reader, Town Line, N.Y. 1. What benefit has the Peace Commission been in averting war in South Africa? 2. What is the difference between a saloon and a hotel?

1. None, thus far. 2. A hotel furnishes bed and board and may or may not have a bar attached; a saloon sells liquors only and has no boarders or lodgers.

E. H., Leetonia, O. If a burglar breaks into my house at night and I find him there, am I, as a Christian, justified in trying to kill him?

If you could capture him, or disable him, without killing, it would be better. The Christian naturally shrinks from taking life, and would prefer to suffer loss rather than stain his hands with blood. But usually, in such cases, the question becomes one of self-defence. The police say that the burglar nearly always goes armed, with the intention of killing if he is driven to bay. He is, therefore, a potential murderer, whom it may be necessary to kill to save your own life and the lives of those dear to you.

Nerissa S., Los Angeles, Calif. 1. When was the first American copyright issued? 2. When were dimes introduced as currency?

1. In 1795, Walter Patten, of Rhode Island, copyrighted a theological book, being the first American copyright. 2. In 1792.

A. L. A., Ashton, Ia. Is it right for Christians to have in their homes or to carry on their persons firearms for protection?

If a person lives in a lawless section, or is in actual personal danger; or if he be a watchman or caretaker, in charge of valuable property, it might be justifiable; but under ordinary circumstances firearms are unnecessary. The carrying of pistols is a dangerous and inexcusable practice and a constant menace. A [illegible] in a moment of excitement to become a murderer. We do not believe any real Christian would habitually carry one.

Soldier's Mother, Montpelier, Vt. Is it true that the amount of liquor consumed in our new colonies since we took possession, is much greater than it was under Spain?

It is. During the first five months of 1899, Cuba received $472,272 worth of intoxicants, as against $10,796 during the same period in 1898. Porto Rico, $191,422, as against $3,668, and the Philippines, $80,833, as against $337. We cannot vouch for these figures as official, but they are believed to be pretty near the mark.

Student, Denver, Colo. Do you consider it proper and expedient for a young man to make a practice of accompanying the young lady to whom he is engaged to young people's meeting and church every Sabbath evening? Could it be considered as an encroachment upon the duties of the Sabbath?

It is entirely proper, and not at all unusual, for a young man to accompany his betrothed to church. There is a special charm in two young people so situated uniting in worship.

J. V. L., Caledonia, N. Y. 1. Please tell me the nationality of Peter Cooper. 2. What were his father's and mother's Christian names? 3. What was his wife's name, and how many children had he?

1. Mr. Cooper was an American, and his family was distinguished for devotion to the cause of American independence. He was born in New York city, February 12, 1791. 2. John and Margaret. In his autobiography Mr. Cooper says: "My mother was an excellent woman, and did the best she could with a large family, narrow circumstances and a changing home." Her father was John Campbell, a New York alderman. Of his own naming, Mr. Cooper wrote quaintly: "My father devoutly believed that I should 'come to something,' for he named me Peter, after the great apostle, and maintained that he was told to do so in a sort of 'waking vision.'"

1 Mrs. Sarah [illegible] band and her children, but by many whom she had helped, for she was as enthusiastic and practical a philanthropist as her husband. They had six children, four of whom died in childhood.

[illegible] ca. there are

Do you think this is a true [illegible] ment?

Doubtless, nominal Chri[illegible] are referred [illegible] per preached to them and have nomina[illegible] doctrines, although they [illegible] Christian lives.

[illegible] that Christian ministers should have no

1. He was not in bodily fear of him, though he may have had some apprehension of an outbreak of his followers, John being a popular man. His fear was that which a wicked man may have of some godly minister who warns him of the consequences of his wickedness. Mary Stuart is described as dreading above all things the visits of John Knox. 2. He probably gave the order to strengthen their faith. On a later occasion when he gave exactly opposite instructions (See Luke 22:35-36).

AN INDIAN RAJAH'S PALACE TRANSFORMED INTO A CHRISTIAN SCHOOL

At Narsinghpur, India, the native Rajah's beautiful building, once the scene of pomp and magnificence, has been changed by the Rajah's consent into a Christian school for boys. The little dark-skinned lads may be seen in the photograph, scattered all over the building. They are mostly "famine orphans," and the white people standing among them in front of the entrance are Rev. J. O. Denning and wife, American missionaries, who took an active part in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S India relief work.

Mrs. B. A., Olata, Col. 1. If two church members, professing Christians, have a disagreement, and one, desiring a reconciliation, [illegible] regarded as unchristian? 2. Do you believe any one should denounce the Song of Songs?

1. Not knowing the circumstances of the case, it is impossible to express any opinion, further than to say that the true Christian would display more of the spirit of Him who said, "And as ye stand [illegible] ciples to pray, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those that trespass against [illegible] some one who has read, without fully comprehending, the theories of the "higher critics."

Mrs. H. A. H., Blue Jacket, Ind. Terr. The spruce tree is meant certainly.

Ignoramus, Baldwin, Me. Children are in their "teens" on the completion of their twelfth year.

H. W. B., Lemaster, Pa. You will find it in many of the popular collections of Gospel Hymns.

Reader, 223 Chester, S. C. Robert Morrison was born in England, but his parents were Scotch people.

E. M., Cincinnati, O. We never heard of it. There does not seem much rhyme or poetry in the words you quote.

Reader, Kissimee, Fla. We do not know that the government offers any special reward for the discovery of perpetual motion.

P. Barnett, Tangerine, Fla. You may take it as a settled and certain fact that the first day of the twentieth century is January 1, 1901.

Miss Mattie A. Smith, missionary, Barren Island, N. Y., asks the gentleman who wrote her about her work to write again, as his letter has been mislaid.

Mrs. L. D. Hoffman, Delmont, Westmoreland Co., Pa., has published some very attractive verses with music, dedicated to our returning soldiers and sailors. She will supply copies at 35 cents each.

Mrs. Catherine M., Eldora, Ia. The Court of [illegible] the late war. To describe its functions, etc., in the way you want would occupy too much valuable [illegible] encyclopedia.

J. L. M., Friend's Station, Tenn. Charles Wesley was the author of "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." He is said to have written many hundreds of hymns. As to your other question, we have no special information beyond that accessible to you and all Christians.

N. L., Martin, Toronto, Ont. Your protest is reasonable. The writer (a Y. M. C. A. worker) had no intention, we believe, of ignoring Canada's claims. He wrote simply of the social and religious aspect of the place, giving no attention to the geographical features in the sense you indicate.

Mrs. J. B. [illegible] a correspondent commends General Bates' "peaceful victory" over Sultan of Jolo. Is it true that he allowed the Sultan to have polygamy and slavery continued in his [illegible] credit to the General?

You go too fast. Remember that "Rome was not built in a day." Doubtless, both [illegible] ished in the Sultan's dominions, but to inquire why they were not abolished at the time he gave in his allegiance, seems unreasonable. To have forced such an [illegible] an open enemy and cost us many valuable lives. He is now our friend, and we can teach him the "better way," and indulge the hope of seeing those reforms come to pass in due time.

[illegible] respected.

[illegible] 1. Our Children's Home is undenominational, to which no denomination can possibly take exception. 2. Only those of the very poorest families are taken—waifs who have no chance of getting an outing and many of whom would perish in the stuffy tenements and alleys of mid-summer, if left there. Many national [illegible] 3. Three dollars covers all expenses, including both ways by street car and steamer, food and shelter, and very often garments and shoes, for they come to us in all stages of ragged dilapidation. Our Home is incorporated.

Marietta M., Rahway, N. J. What is the origin of "Hallowe'en" or "All Hallows Eve"?

When Rome abolished Paganism and be[illegible] converted into a Christian church, and dedicated to the memory of the Christian [illegible] was held on May 1, but in the year 834 it was changed to November 1. "Hallows" is derived from an old Saxon word, "haligan" ("to make holy").

J. S. [illegible] a correspondent commends General Bates' "peaceful victory" over Sultan of Jolo. Is it true that he allowed the Sultan to have polygamy and slavery continued in his [illegible] credit to the General?

You go too fast. Remember that "Rome was not built in a day." Doubtless, both [illegible] ished in the Sultan's dominions, but to inquire why they were not abolished at the time he gave in his allegiance, seems unreasonable. To have forced such an [illegible] an open enemy and cost us many valuable lives. He is now our friend, and we can teach him the "better way," and indulge the hope of seeing those reforms come to pass in due time.

Mrs. B. A., Olata, Col. 1. If two church members, professing Christians, have a disagreement, and one, desiring a reconciliation, [illegible] regarded as unchristian? 2. Do you believe any one should denounce the Song of Songs?

1. Not knowing the circumstances of the case, it is impossible to express any opinion, further than to say that the true Christian would display more of the spirit of Him who said, "And as ye stand [illegible] ciples to pray, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those that trespass against [illegible] some one who has read, without fully comprehending, the theories of the "higher critics."

Mrs. H. A. H., Blue Jacket, Ind. Terr. The spruce tree is meant certainly.

Ignoramus, Baldwin, Me. Children are in their "teens" on the completion of their twelfth year.

H. W. B., Lemaster, Pa. You will find it in many of the popular collections of Gospel Hymns.

Reader, 223 Chester, S. C. Robert Morrison was born in England, but his parents were Scotch people.

E. M., Cincinnati, O. We never heard of it. There does not seem much rhyme or poetry in the words you quote.

Reader, Kissimee, Fla. We do not know that the government offers any special reward for the discovery of perpetual motion.

P. Barnett, Tangerine, Fla. You may take it as a settled and certain fact that the first day of the twentieth century is January 1, 1901.

Miss Mattie A. Smith, missionary, Barren Island, N. Y., asks the gentleman who wrote her about her work to write again, as his letter has been mislaid.

Mrs. L. D. Hoffman, Delmont, Westmoreland Co., Pa., has published some very attractive verses with music, dedicated to our returning soldiers and sailors. She will supply copies at 35 cents each.

Mrs. Catherine M., Eldora, Ia. The Court of [illegible] the late war. To describe its functions, etc., in the way you want would occupy too much valuable [illegible] encyclopedia.

J. L. M., Friend's Station, Tenn. Charles Wesley was the author of "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." He is said to have written many hundreds of hymns. As to your other question, we have no special information beyond that accessible to you and all Christians.

N. L., Martin, Toronto, Ont. Your protest is reasonable. The writer (a Y. M. C. A. worker) had no intention, we believe, of ignoring Canada's claims. He wrote simply of the social and religious aspect of the place, giving no attention to the geographical features in the sense you indicate.

Reader, Scotts Mills, Ore. Is it wrong for a [illegible] eventually not make good use of them?

Certainly not. There are many uses to which hops may be put besides brewing, just as wheat, corn and barley have better uses than the manufacture of intoxicants.

E. C. B., Oswego, N. Y. Are the Jews of our day descendants of Judah only, or do they represent all the twelve tribes? How were the ten tribes lost?

We have no record of the ten tribes after B. C. 720, when they were carried captive to Assyria by Shalmaneser. It is supposed that they were absorbed into the population of Assyria. Nothing could save them from that fate if they intermarried, as they were likely to do. They do not appear to have been so strict in that matter as were the citizens of the southern kingdom. Among the people who returned to Palestine under the edict of Cyrus there may have been a few descendants of the ten tribes. The bulk of the people, however, were descendants of Judah, Benjamin and Levi, and from these descended the modern Jew. You are probably aware that an attempt has been made to identify the Anglo Saxon race with the ten tribes, but the arguments in its favor are not conclusive.

R. Masson, Birmingham, Ala. What is the average annual yield of the Transvaal mines?

It is estimated at about $70,000,000.

Earnest Student, Detroit, Mich. How is the Christian to reconcile the remarkable conduct of the so-called civilized and Christian nations at the present time with the confident [illegible] nium when war shall be no more? Bible-loving Britain, Catholic France, orthodox Germany, and all the professed God-fearing lands are either slaying or hunting to slay. Where is the reign of the promised millennium? Can one wonder that Unbelief, pointing to the world's wickedness, tauntingly remarks: "Well, you Christians are certainly striving in a queer way to bring about the era of universal peace and goodwill?"

Do not lose heart. The prophecies will surely be fulfilled. The situation is not entirely gloomy. There is growing up in every land a small body of real Christians—"the remnant," as the prophets called them—who by the right and justice of their principles are making their influence felt. It is a slow process, but it will eventually win its way. The governments of the world go their own way now, but there are indications already that they feel the pressure of the public conscience. The time is not far away when the governments will cease to heed the clamor of the loud-voiced, unthinking rabble, which is generally for war and unchristian policy, and will listen to men of conscience and character, who stand for truth and righteousness.

Reader, Town Line, N.Y. 1. What benefit has the Peace Commission been in averting war in South Africa? 2. What is the difference between a saloon and a hotel?

1. None, thus far. 2. A hotel furnishes bed and board and may or may not have a bar attached; a saloon sells liquors only and has no boarders or lodgers.

E. H., Leetonia, O. If a burglar breaks into my house at night and I find him there, am I, as a Christian, justified in trying to kill him?

If you could capture him, or disable him, without killing, it would be better. The Christian naturally shrinks from taking life, and would prefer to suffer loss rather than stain his hands with blood. But usually, in such cases, the question becomes one of self-defence. The police say that the burglar nearly always goes armed, with the intention of killing if he is driven to bay. He is, therefore, a potential murderer, whom it may be necessary to kill to save your own life and the lives of those dear to you.

Nerissa S., Los Angeles, Calif. 1. When was the first American copyright issued? 2. When were dimes introduced as currency?

1. In 1795, Walter Patten, of Rhode Island, copyrighted a theological book, being the first American copyright. 2. In 1792.

A. L. A., Ashton, Ia. Is it right for Christians to have in their homes or to carry on their persons firearms for protection?

If a person lives in a lawless section, or is in actual personal danger; or if he be a watchman or caretaker, in charge of valuable property, it might be justifiable; but under ordinary circumstances firearms are unnecessary. The carrying of pistols is a dangerous and inexcusable practice and a constant menace. A [illegible] in a moment of excitement to become a murderer. We do not believe any real Christian would habitually carry one.

Soldier's Mother, Montpelier, Vt. Is it true that the amount of liquor consumed in our new colonies since we took possession, is much greater than it was under Spain?

It is. During the first five months of 1899, Cuba received $472,272 worth of intoxicants, as against $10,796 during the same period in 1898. Porto Rico, $191,422, as against $3,668, and the Philippines, $80,833, as against $337. We cannot vouch for these figures as official, but they are believed to be pretty near the mark.

Student, Denver, Colo. Do you consider it proper and expedient for a young man to make a practice of accompanying the young lady to whom he is engaged to young people's meeting and church every Sabbath evening? Could it be considered as an encroachment upon the duties of the Sabbath?

It is entirely proper, and not at all unusual, for a young man to accompany his betrothed to church. There is a special charm in two young people so situated uniting in worship.

J. V. L., Caledonia, N. Y. 1. Please tell me the nationality of Peter Cooper. 2. What were his father's and mother's Christian names? 3. What was his wife's name, and how many children had he?

1. Mr. Cooper was an American, and his family was distinguished for devotion to the cause of American independence. He was born in New York city, February 12, 1791. 2. John and Margaret. In his autobiography Mr. Cooper says: "My mother was an excellent woman, and did the best she could with a large family, narrow circumstances and a changing home." Her father was John Campbell, a New York alderman. Of his own naming, Mr. Cooper wrote quaintly: "My father devoutly believed that I should 'come to something,' for he named me Peter, after the great apostle, and maintained that he was told to do so in a sort of 'waking vision.'"

1 Mrs. Sarah [illegible] band and her children, but by many whom she had helped, for she was as enthusiastic and practical a philanthropist as her husband. They had six children, four of whom died in childhood.

[illegible] ca. there are

Do you think this is a true [illegible] ment?

Doubtless, nominal Chri[illegible] are referred [illegible] per preached to them and have nomina[illegible] doctrines, although they [illegible] Christian lives.

[illegible] that Christian ministers should have no

1. He was not in bodily fear of him, though he may have had some apprehension of an outbreak of his followers, John being a popular man. His fear was that which a wicked man may have of some godly minister who warns him of the consequences of his wickedness. Mary Stuart is described as dreading above all things the visits of John Knox. 2. He probably gave the order to strengthen their faith. On a later occasion when he gave exactly opposite instructions (See Luke 22:35-36).

AN INDIAN RAJAH'S PALACE TRANSFORMED INTO A CHRISTIAN SCHOOL

At Narsinghpur, India, the native Rajah's beautiful building, once the scene of pomp and magnificence, has been changed by the Rajah's consent into a Christian school for boys. The little dark-skinned lads may be seen in the photograph, scattered all over the building. They are mostly "famine orphans," and the white people standing among them in front of the entrance are Rev. J. O. Denning and wife, American missionaries, who took an active part in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S India relief work.

Mrs. B. A., Olata, Col. 1. If two church members, professing Christians, have a disagreement, and one, desiring a reconciliation, [illegible] regarded as unchristian? 2. Do you believe any one should denounce the Song of Songs?

1. Not knowing the circumstances of the case, it is impossible to express any opinion, further than to say that the true Christian would display more of the spirit of Him who said, "And as ye stand [illegible] ciples to pray, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those that trespass against [illegible] some one who has read, without fully comprehending, the theories of the "higher critics."

Mrs. H. A. H., Blue Jacket, Ind. Terr. The spruce tree is meant certainly.

Ignoramus, Baldwin, Me. Children are in their "teens" on the completion of their twelfth year.

H. W. B., Lemaster, Pa. You will find it in many of the popular collections of Gospel Hymns.

Reader, 223 Chester, S. C. Robert Morrison was born in England, but his parents were Scotch people.

E. M., Cincinnati, O. We never heard of it. There does not seem much rhyme or poetry in the words you quote.

Reader, Kissimee, Fla. We do not know that the government offers any special reward for the discovery of perpetual motion.

P. Barnett, Tangerine, Fla. You may take it as a settled and certain fact that the first day of the twentieth century is January 1, 1901.

Miss Mattie A. Smith, missionary, Barren Island, N. Y., asks the gentleman who wrote her about her work to write again, as his letter has been mislaid.

Mrs. L. D. Hoffman, Delmont, Westmoreland Co., Pa., has published some very attractive verses with music, dedicated to our returning soldiers and sailors. She will supply copies at 35 cents each.

Mrs. Catherine M., Eldora, Ia. The Court of [illegible] the late war. To describe its functions, etc., in the way you want would occupy too much valuable [illegible] encyclopedia.

J. L. M., Friend's Station, Tenn. Charles Wesley was the author of "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." He is said to have written many hundreds of hymns. As to your other question, we have no special information beyond that accessible to you and all Christians.

N. L., Martin, Toronto, Ont. Your protest is reasonable. The writer (a Y. M. C. A. worker) had no intention, we believe, of ignoring Canada's claims. He wrote simply of the social and religious aspect of the place, giving no attention to the geographical features in the sense you indicate.

but they are believed to be pretty near the mark.

Student, Denver, Colo. Do you consider it proper and expedient for a young man to make a practice of accompanying the young lady to whom he is engaged to young people's meeting and church every Sabbath evening? Could it be considered as an encroachment upon the duties of the Sabbath?

It is entirely proper, and not at all unusual, for a young man to accompany his betrothed to church. There is a special charm in two young people so situated uniting in worship.

J. V. L., Caledonia, N. Y. 1. Please tell me the nationality of Peter Cooper. 2. What were his father's and mother's Christian names? 3. What was his wife's name, and how many children had he?

1. Mr. Cooper was an American, and his family was distinguished for devotion to the cause of American independence. He was born in New York city, February 12, 1791. 2. John and Margaret. In his autobiography Mr. Cooper says: "My mother was an excellent woman, and did the best she could with a large family, narrow circumstances and a changing home." Her father was John Campbell, a New York alderman. Of his own naming, Mr. Cooper wrote quaintly: "My father devoutly believed that I should 'come to something,' for he named me Peter, after the great apostle, and maintained that he was told to do so in a sort of 'waking vision.'" he asked a question which seems to imply that his motive was of that character. We do not see how such an inference as you suggest can be drawn from the incident, especially as a different system was afterwards adopted. 3. Nothing definite. His sister's son was mentioned Acts 23:16 but only incidentally. We [illegible] not Christians, although even in that passage his "brethren and kinsmen" may have been used to cover the entire Hebrew race.

Mrs. M. G., Mt. Gilead, O. If a person purchases goods of a clerk in a store and hands him in payment a bill larger than the total cost; but the clerk omits to charge for one of the articles and does not notice his mistake, should the purchaser rectify the error?

Yes; if the purchaser be an honest person, he will notify the clerk of the oversight and pay the difference.

H. H., Saltillo, Pa. Should a church make something a condition of membership which Christ did not make a condition of salvation?

Each different denomination has its own special manner of dealing with membership requirements. As a matter of fact, however, if the applicant be sincere in the desire to follow Christ, there are no conditions imposed by the churches that cannot be complied with. No barriers are put in the way. Where the requirements relate to non-essentials (to which some individuals attach undue importance), they are usually asked more as a mat-

A Song that Captured Christendom

The True Story of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," and its Famous Author, Professor J. E. Rankin

All the world over, there is probably no song of parting that is so frequently sung at Christian assemblages as the famous benediction hymn, "God be with you till we meet again." It was written by Professor Jeremiah Eames Rankin expressly to furnish the Master's followers with a Christian good-bye. It is sung everywhere around the globe; whatever the latitude, the climate, the complexion, the language, the parting greeting of believers is the same—"God be with you till we meet again." It is not given to every man to see in his own life-time such honor and recognition paid to the product of his pen as Dr. Rankin has received for this hymn. The great camp-meeting assemblies, the world-embracing Woman's Temperance Union, as well as the Societies of Christian Endeavor, have put upon it their approval. It has been translated into all languages, and it is embraced among the numbers of all the late foreign hymn-books. It is, perhaps, as likely to live as the word "good-bye," of which it is but the Christian unfolding.

The first verse of this hymn, then the only one written, was sent to W. G. Tomer, a New Jersey singing-master, to be set to music. Mr. Tomer sent back the music as it now stands, with this exception, that J. W. Bischoff, the organist of Dr. Rankin's congregation and the associate editor of the volume of Gospel melodies in which the hymn first appeared, made certain rhythmical changes and improvements in the arrangement of the chorus. This is Dr. Rankin's remembrance of the facts. He has made special efforts to recall the whole history of the musical part, so happy and so important to the success of the hymn. The music for the hymn has been written for the piano, and also for the organ, with attractive variations, while the words have been beautifully illustrated by Miss Helen F. Strong.

Dr. Rankin has written many other hymns, among them "Long Live America," and "Great Mother over the Sea"; indeed, scarcely a Sunday goes by without the use of some of his compositions in the Howard University chapel. His hymns have been arranged to music by such composers as J. W. Bischoff, W. H. Pontius, O. H. Evans, Rev. Dr. Lorenz, Rev. Dr. Mallary, Rev. S. Morrison, Thoro Harris, and others.

Dr. Rankin is President of Howard University, Washington, D. C. He was born in Thornton, N. H., where his father, Rev. Andrew Rankin, was Home Missionary Pastor of the Congregational Churches in both Campton and Thornton. His parentage on his father's side was Scotch. James Rankin and Margaret Witherspoone, both from Paisley, two of the early settlers of Littleton, N. H., being the first representatives in this country. They were of an enterprising and sturdy race, giving their decided impress, both in church and in civil affairs, to their period. Repeatedly did James Rankin and his sons, General David Rankin and Captain Andrew Rankin, represent that town and the adjoining towns in the State Legislature; while Melinda, the daughter of David, distinguished herself by planting the first Protestant schools for girls in Texas and Mexico, and several of the sisters taught and settled in the West. Dr. Rankin's mother was Lois Eames, daughter of Colonel Jeremiah Eames, whose father was one of the first settlers of Northumberland, N. H. His great grandfather on his mother's side, was Col. William Williams, who was commended to Congress by Ethan Allen, and who commanded a regiment at the Battle of Bennington, and whose praise is spoken by General Stark, in his report. Colonel Williams married Zilpah Wilder, a descendant of Nicholas Wilder, Esq., of Sulham House, near Reading, Berkshire, England, whose heirs still own the estate given him by Henry VII., for military services at Bosworth Field (1485), and five of whose posterity have been rectors of Sulham Church, the present rector being Rev. Henry B. Wilder, D.D. There is an armorial motto which would seem to imply that the valor of the family had been displayed in the taking of walled towns: Virtuti Moxnia Cedant.

W. G. TOMER
Composer of the Music

Colonel Williams had seen service in the French and Indian wars, was a member of the Colonial Legislature and secured charters for several Vermont towns, and finally removed to one of the eastern townships of (then) Lower Canada. Dr. Rankin graduated at Middlebury College in 1848, and in 1854 at Andover Theological Seminary. His pastorates have been in Potsdam, N. Y., St. Albans, Vt., Lowell, Mass., Boston, Mass., Washington, D. C., and Orange, N. J. His longest pastorate was in Washington City, where he remained fifteen years, where his audience-room was crowded to the doors, and where his church led in revivals, temperance, human rights, and all practical reforms; and he had among his hearers not less than two score of some of the most distinguished men then in the public service, among whom were Luke Poland, Henry Wilson, James G. Blaine and W. A. Buckingham. Dr. Rankin delivered the memorial address in the Senate Chamber on the death of Vice-President Wilson, and assisted as one of the chaplains when President Garfield was buried from the Capitol. Of his ministry in Washington, Prof. Austin Phelps, of Andover, said it was "the coronation of all his Andover instructors." Among these instructors were Professors E. A. Park, W. G. T. Shedd, and Prof. Phelps himself.

In 1889, Dr. Rankin was unanimously elected President of Howard University, having previously served there as Professor of Pastoral Theology, and as a trustee. During his administration, the number of students has advanced more than fifty per cent., four new buildings have been erected, and several new departments have been established. Every month Dr. Rankin publishes The Howard Standard, printed by the students, each number of which contains a sermon of his, especially suited to the wants of young people, delivered in the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, a chapel erected in the memory of his brother, of St. Johnsbury, Vt. He has to-day in press a volume of sermons entitled Elective Affinity, and Other Sermons for Young Men and Young Women. Of his sermons Prof. Park, Joseph Cook, LL.D., and Prof. Austin Phelps have all spoken or written in the most appreciative and admiring terms. His literary style is simple, epigrammatic, sententious, and direct.

PRESIDENT'S HOUSE—HOWARD UNIVERSITY

DR. RANKIN AND HIS FAMILY

RANKIN MEMORIAL CHAPEL

Dr. Rankin's teaches daily in Howard University, conducts the mid-day worship there, and exercises a strict but kindly oversight over all departments. The pupils at present number some 700, and are of many nationalities. The institution is partly supported by the Government, and tuition in most of its departments is free. Among its original founders was Gen. O. O. Howard, whose name it bears, and who, with ex-Commissioner Eaton and President Gallaudet, and other distinguished men, is also a trustee. The late Frederick Douglass and B. K. Bruce were also among Dr. Rankin's parishioners and members of the same corporation.

Dr. Rankin's work has not all been in the pulpit, nor in educational circles. He has published a volume of German translations, and has been a regular contributor to the religious press. He has written Scotch poetry, which George Macdonald, the distinguished Scottish author, has pronounced remarkable. One of his poems, "The Babie,"

"Nae shoe to hide her tiny taes," has been introduced into Bryant's Cyclopedia of Poetry, where it is wrongly attributed to Hugh Miller. Most of these poems are of a domestic character and all are characterized by purity, pathos, and rhythmic beauty.

THE MAIN BUILDING OF HOWARD UNIVERSITY

The prayers of the readers of this journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its proprietor, and also upon those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ, are printed in it; and that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of sinners and the quickening of God's people.

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT.

· · · The Coming Sermon · · ·

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text, Romans 12: 7: . . . . Or ministry, let us wait on our ministerings.

WHILE I was seated on the piazza of a hotel at Lexington, Kentucky, one summer evening, a gentleman asked me, "What do you think of the coming sermon?" I supposed he was asking me in regard to some new discourse of Doctor Cumming, of London, who sometimes preached startling sermons, and I replied, "I have not seen it." But I found out afterward that he meant to ask what I thought would be the characteristics of the coming sermon of the world, the sermons of the future. The word "Cumming" as a noun pronounced the same as the word "Coming" as an adjective. But my mistake suggested to me a very important and practical theme—"The Coming Sermon."

Before the world is converted the style of religious discourse will have to be converted. You might as well go into the modern Sedan or Gettysburg with bows and arrows, instead of rifles and bomb shells and parks of artillery, as to expect to conquer this world for God by the old styles of exhortation and sermonology. Jonathan Edwards preached the sermons most adapted to the age in which he lived, but if those sermons were preached now they would divide an audience into two classes—those sound asleep and those wanting to go home.

But there is a discourse of the future—who will preach it I have no idea; in what part of the earth it will be born I have no idea; in which denomination of Christians it will be delivered I cannot guess. That discourse of exhortation may be born in the country meeting-house on the banks of the St. Lawrence, or the Oregon, or the Ohio, or the Tombigbee, or the Alabama. The person who shall deliver it may this moment be in a cradle under the shadow of the Sierra Nevadas, or in a New England farm-house, or amid the rice-fields of Southern savannas. Or this moment there may be some young man in one of our theological seminaries, in the junior, or middle, or senior class, shaping that weapon of power. Or there may be coming some new baptism of the Holy Ghost on the churches, so that some of us who now stand in the watch-towers of Zion, waking to a realization of our present inefficiency, may preach it ourselves. That coming discourse may not be fifty years off. And let us pray God that its arrival may be hastened, while I announce to you what I think will be the chief characteristics of that discourse or exhortation when it does arrive, and I want to make my remarks appropriate and suggestive to all classes of Christian workers.

First of all, I remark that that future religious discourse will be full of a living Christ, in contradistinction to didactic technicalities. A discourse may be full of Christ though hardly mentioning his name, and a sermon may be empty of Christ while every sentence is repetitious of his titles. The world wants a living Christ, not a Christ standing at the head of a formal system of theology, but a Christ who means pardon, and sympathy, and condolence, and brotherhood, and life, and heaven. A poor man's Christ. A rich man's Christ. An overworked man's Christ. An invalid's Christ. A farmer's Christ. A merchant's Christ. An artisan's Christ. An every man's Christ.

A symmetrical and fine-worded system of theology is well enough for theological classes, but it has no more business in a pulpit than have the technical phrases of an anatomist or a psychologist or a physician in the sick-room of a patient. The world wants help, immediate and world-uplifting, and it will come through a discourse in which Christ shall walk right down into the immortal soul and take everlasting possession of it, filling it as full of light as is this noonday firmament.

That sermon or exhortation of the future will not deal with men in the threadbare illustrations of Jesus Christ. In that coming address there will be instances of vicarious suffering taken right out of every-day life, for there is not a day when somebody is not dying for others. As the physician saving his diphtheritic patient by sacrificing his own life; as the ship captain going down with his vessel while he is getting his passengers into the life-boat; as the fireman consuming in the burning building while he is taking a child out of a fourth-story window; as in summer the strong swimmer at East Hampton, or Long Branch or Cape May, or Lake George, himself perished trying to rescue the drowning; as the newspaper boy one summer, supporting his mother for some years, his invalid mother, when offered by a gentleman fifty cents to get some special paper, and he got it, and rushed up in his anxiety to deliver it, and was crushed under the wheels of the train, and lay on the grass with only strength enough to say: "Oh, what will become of my poor, sick mother now!" Vicarious suffering—the world is full of it. An engineer said to me on a locomotive in Dakota: "We men seem to be coming to better appreciation than we used to. Did you see that account the other day of an engineer who, to save his passengers, stuck to his place, and when he was found dead in the locomotive, which was upside down, he was found still smiling, his hand on the air-brake?" And as the engineer said it to me, he put his hand on the air-brake to illustrate his meaning, and I looked at him and thought: "You would be just as much a hero in the same crisis." Oh, in that religious discourse of the future there will be living illustrations taken out from every-day life of vicarious suffering—illustrations that will bring to mind the ghastlier sacrifice of Him, who in the high places of the field, on the Cross, fought our battles, and endured our struggle, and died our death. A German sculptor made an image of Christ, and he asked his little child, two years old, who it was, and she said: "That must be some very great man." The sculptor was displeased with the criticism, so he got another block of marble and chiseled away on it two or three years, and then he brought in his little child, four or five years of age, and said to her: "Who do you think that is?" She said: "That must be the one who took little children in his arms and blessed them." Then the sculptor was satisfied. Oh, my friends, what the world wants is not a cold Christ, not an intellectual Christ, not a severely magisterial Christ, but a loving Christ, spreading out his arms of sympathy to press the whole world to his loving heart.

But, I remark again, that the religious discourse of the future will have to be short. Condensation is demanded by the age in which we live. No more need of long introductions and long applications, and so many divisions to a discourse that it may be said to be hydra-headed. In other days men got all their information from the pulpit. There were few books, and there were no newspapers, and there was little travel from place to place, and people would sit and listen two-and-a-half hours to a religious discourse, and "seventeenthly" would find them fresh and chipper. In those days there was enough time for a man to take an hour to warm himself up to the subject and an hour to cool off. But what was a necessity then is a superfluity now. Congregations are full of knowledge from books, from newspapers, from rapid and continuous intercommunication, and long disquisitions of what they know already will not be abided. If a religious teacher cannot compress what he wishes to say to the people in the space of forty-five minutes, better adjourn it to some other day.

The trouble is we preach audiences into a Christian frame, and then we preach them out of it. We forget that every audience has some incapacity of attention, and when that is exhausted he is restless. That accident on the Long Island Railroad, years ago, came from the fact that the brakes were out of order, and when they wanted to stop the train they could not stop, and hence the casualty was terrific. In all religious discourse we want locomotive power and propulsion. We want at the same time stout brakes to let down at the right instant. It is a dismal thing, after a hearer has comprehended the whole subject, to hear a man say: "Now to recapitulate," and "a few words by way of application," and "once more," and "finally," and "now to conclude."

Paul preached until midnight, and Eutychus got sound asleep and fell out of a window and broke his neck. Some would say: "Good for him." I would rather be sympathetic, like Paul, and recuscitate him. That accident is often quoted now in religious circles as a warning against somnolence in church. It is just as much a warning to ministers against prolixity. Eutychus was wrong in his somnolence, but Paul made a mistake when he kept on until midnight. He ought to have stopped at eleven o'clock, and there would have been no accident. If Paul might have gone on to too great length, let all those of us who are now preaching the Gospel remember that there is a limit to religious discourse, or ought to be, and that in our time we have no apostolic power of miracles. Napoleon, in an address of seven minutes, thrilled his army and thrilled Europe. Christ's Sermon on the Mount, the model sermon, was less than eighteen minutes long at ordinary mode of delivery. It is not electricity scattered all over the sky that strikes, but electricity gathered into a thunderbolt and hurled, and it is not religious truth scattered over and spread out over a vast reach of time, but religious truth projected in compact form that flashes light upon the soul and rives its indifference.

When the religious discourse of the future arrives in this land and in the Christian church, the discourse which is to arouse the world and startle the nations and usher in the kingdom, it will be a brief discourse. Hear it, all theological students, all ye just entering upon religious work, all ye men and women who in Sabbath Schools and other departments are toiling for Christ and the salvation of immortals—Brevity! Brevity!

But I remark, also, that the religious discourse of the future of which I speak will be a popular discourse. There are those in these times who speak of a popular sermon as though there must be something wrong about it. As these critics are dull themselves, the world gets the impression that a sermon is good in proportion as it is stupid. Christ was the most popular preacher the world ever saw, and, considering the small number of the world's population, had the largest audience ever gathered. He never preached anywhere without making a great sensation. People rushed out in the wilderness to hear him, reckless of their physical necessities. So great was their anxiety to hear Christ that, taking no food with them, they would have fainted and starved had not Christ performed a miracle and fed them. Why did so many people take the truth at Christ's hands? Because they all understood it. He illustrated his subject by a hen and her chickens, by a bushel measure, by a handful of salt, by a bird's flight, and by a lily's aroma. All the people knew what he meant, and they flocked to him. And when the religious discourse of the future appears, it will not be Princetonian, not Rochesterian, not Andoverian, not Middletonian, but Olivetic—plain, practical, unique, earnest, comprehensive of all the woes, wants, sins and sorrows of an auditory.

But when that exhortation or discourse does come there will be a thousand gleaming scimetars to charge on it. There are in so many theological seminaries professors telling young men how to preach, themselves not knowing how, and I am told that if a young man in some of our theological seminaries says anything quaint or thrilling or unique, faculty and students fly at him and set him right, and straighten him out, and smooth him down, and chop him off, until he says everything just as everybody else says it. Oh, when the future religious discourse of the Christian church arrives, all the churches of Christ in our great cities will be thronged. The world wants spontaneity. All who have buried their dead and comfort. All know themselves to be mortal and to be immortal, and they want to hear about the great future. I tell you, the throngs of the people of our great cities who have had no one only thought they could get practical and sympathetic help in a Christian Church, there would not be a street in Washington or New York or any other city which would be passable on the Sabbath day if there were a church on it for all the people would press to that asylum of mercy, that great house of comfort and consolation.

A mother with a dead babe in her arms came to the god Siva, and asked to have her child restored to life. The god Siva said to her: "You go and get a handful of mustard seed from a house in which there has been no sorrow, and in which there has been no death, and I will restore your child to life." So the mother went out, and she went from house to house, and from home to home, looking for a place where there had been no sorrow, and where there had been no death, but she found none. She went back to the god Siva and said: "My mission is a failure; you see I haven't brought the mustard seed; I can't find a place where there has been no sorrow and no death." "Oh," says the god Siva, "understand, your sorrows are no worse than the sorrows of others; we all have our griefs, and all have our heart-breaks."

Laugh and the world laughs with you,
Weep, and you weep alone.
For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth,
But has trouble enough of its own.

We hear a great deal of discussion now all over the land about why people do not go to church. Some say it is because Christianity is dying out, and because people do not believe in the truth of God's Word, and all that. They are false reasons. The reason is because our sermons and exhortations are not interesting and practical and helpful. Some one might as well tell the whole truth on this subject, and so I will tell it. The religious discourse of the future, the Gospel sermon to come forth and shake the nations and lift people out of darkness, will be a popular sermon, just for the simple reason that it will meet the woes and the wants and the anxieties of the people.

There are in all our denominations ecclesiastical mummies sitting around to frown upon the fresh young pulpits of America, to try to awe them down, to cry out: "Tut! tut! tut! Sensational!" They stand to-day preaching in churches that hold a thousand people, and there are a hundred persons present, and if they cannot have the world saved in their way, it seems as if they do not want it saved at all.

I do not know but the old way of making ministers of the Gospel is better—a collegiate education and an apprenticeship under the care and home attention of some earnest, aged Christian minister, the young man getting the patriarch's spirit and assisting him in his religious service. Young lawyers study with old lawyers, young physicians with old physicians, and I believe it would be a great help if every young man studying for the Gospel ministry could put himself in the home and heart and sympathy and under the benediction and perpetual presence of a Christian minister.

But, I remark again, the religious discourse of the future will be an awakening sermon. From altar rail to the front door step, under that sermon, an audience will get up and start for heaven. There will be in it many a staccato passage. It will not be a lullaby; it will be a battle charge. Men will drop their sins, for they will feel the hot breath of pursuing retribution on the back of their necks. It will be sympathetic with all the physical distresses as well as the spiritual distresses of the world. Christ not only preached, but he healed paralysis, and he healed epilepsy, and he healed the dumb and the blind and the lepers.

That religious discourse of the future will be an every-day sermon, going right down into every man's life, and it will teach him how to vote, how to bargain, how to plough, how to do any work he is called to do, how to wield trowel and pen and pencil and yardstick and plane. And it will teach women how to preside over their households, and how to educate their children, and how to imitate Miriam and Esther and Vashti and Eunice, the mother of Timothy, and Mary, the mother of Christ, and those women who, on Northern and Southern battlefields, were mistaken by the wounded for angels of mercy, fresh from the throne of God.

Yes, I have to tell you, the religious discourse of the future will be a reported sermon. If you have any idea that printing was invented simply to print secular books, and stenography and phonography were contrived merely to set forth secular ideas, you are mistaken. The printing-press is to be the great agency of Gospel proclamation. It is high time that good men, instead of denouncing the press, employ it to scatter forth the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The vast majority of people in our cities do not come to church, and nothing but the printed sermon can reach them and call them to pardon and life and peace and heaven.

So I cannot understand the nervousness of some of my brethren of the ministry. When they see a newspaper man coming in they say: "Alas, there is a reporter!" Every added reporter is ten thousand, fifty thousand, a hundred thousand immortal souls added to the auditory. The time will come when all the village, town and city newspapers will reproduce the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and sermons preached on the Sabbath will reverberate all around the world; and, some by type and some by voice, all nations will be evangelized.

The practical bearing of this is upon those who are engaged in Christian work, not only upon theological students and young ministers, but upon all who preach the Gospel, and all who exhort in meetings, and all of you if you are doing your duty. Do you exhort in prayer-meeting? Be short and spirited. Do you teach in Bible-class? Though you have to study every night, be interesting. Study adroitness and use common sense. The most graceful and most beautiful thing on earth is the religion of Jesus Christ, and if you awkwardly present it, it is defamation. We must do our work rapidly, and we must do it effectively. Soon our time for work will be gone.

A dying Christian took out his watch and gave it to a friend, and said: "Take that watch, I have no more use for it; time is at an end for me, and eternity begins." Oh, my friends, when our watch has ticked away for us the last moment, and our clock has struck for us the last hour, may it be found we did our work well, that we did it in the very best way, and whether we preached the Gospel in pulpits, or taught Sabbath-classes, or administered to the sick as physicians, or bargained as merchants, or pleaded the law as attorneys, or were busy as artisans, or husbandmen, we did our wok in such a way that it will stand the test of the judgment. And in the long procession of the redeemed, that march around the throne, may it be found that there are many there brought to God through our instrumentality, and in whose rescue we exult. But let none of us who are still unsaved, wait for that religious discourse of the future! Do not wait for a great steamer of the Cunard or White Star line to take you off the wreck, but hail the first craft, with however low a mast, and however small a hulk, and however poor a rudder, and however weak a captain. Better a disabled schooner that comes up in time, than a full-rigged brig that comes up after you have sunk.

Instead of waiting for that religious discourse of the future—it may be forty, fifty years off—take this plain invitation of a man who, to have given you spiritual eyesight would be glad to be called the spittle by the hand of Christ put on the eyes of a blind man, and who would consider the highest compliment of this service if, at the close five hundred men should start from these doors, saying, "Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not; one thing I know, whereas I was blind, now I see."

Swifter than shadows over the plain, quicker than birds in their autumnal flight, hastier than eagles to their prey, hie you to a sympathetic Christ. The orchestras of heaven have strung their instruments to celebrate your rescue,

"And many were the voices around the throne: Rejoice, for the Lord brings back His own."

To Check the Boer Invasion

General Buller's Efforts to Relieve Ladysmith and Kimberley—Progress of the South African War

DESPATCHES from the seat of war in South Africa uniformly agree that the most important stage of the Boer-British conflict has been reached. General Sir Redvers Buller, on his arrival and assumption of the supreme command, decided to divide his forces (less than a fourth of which had reached Africa up to November 13th) into two parts, one to be landed at Durban, for the purpose of recapturing Colenso and restoring communication with the besieged defenders of Ladysmith, and the other for turning back the tide of Boer invasion in Cape Colony and pushing forward to the relief of Kimberley.

GEN. SIR CHARLES F. WHITE

For many days Ladysmith has been isolated and without means of communicating with Estcourt or Durban except by carrier pigeons. These faithful winged messengers took despatches through successfully, from which it was gathered that the Boers were making strenuous efforts to capture the city before its defenders could be succored by Buller's advance. Additional batteries of formidable guns had been planted on the heights overlooking the city, and a desultory bombardment was maintained daily. Frequent brilliant sorties by the besieged resulted in keeping back the investing forces to a safe distance, but did no material good otherwise. Provisions were abundant, but it was suspected that ammunition for the British naval guns—the principal dependence of the city—was running painfully short. If ordnance supplies were exhausted, nothing could prevent the city's fall. As the situation was almost desperate, it was Gen. Buller's purpose to make an effort to relieve Gen. White, as the only movement that could save the campaign in Natal from utter failure. On the 13th inst. (according to the delayed despatches) the Boers were believed to be preparing to crush White, and capture or annihilate his force, before Buller's troops could reach him. Failing in this purpose, they themselves were liable to be caught between the two British forces. It was expected that a stand would be made at or near Colenso.

Meanwhile, the campaign in Cape Colony seems to be also nearing a crisis. On Nov. 10th, the British advance had reached Belmont, fifty miles from Kimberley, and a sharp skirmish had taken place with little advantage to either side. Col. Keith Falconer and several other British officers were among the killed and wounded. Gen. Buller is massing troops near De Aar Junction and everything points to an aggressive movement with the object of relieving Kimberley. It is now believed that Buller will have nearly 70,000 troops of all grades under his command before the end of November.

On the Boer side the war is being prosecuted with marked skill and courage. Every contingency is provided for and the plans of Gen. Joubert seem to have shrewdly foreseen many things that have already taken place. This sagacity has resulted in placing obstacles in the way of Buller's advance that will be difficult to overcome. The addition of artillery to the Boer equipment, however, had not apparently given the satisfaction expected. Though efficiently served, it has impaired the mobility of the burgher armies and compelled them to adopt a new style of warfare. Joubert and Cronje, it is said, find themselves embarrassed by their big guns. In the event of a retreat, the "Long Toms" and forty-pounders would have to be sacrificed. Another troublesome matter among the Boers is the commissariat. Food supplies are reported to be short among Joubert's troops in Natal, although pluck and ammunition are plentiful. Indeed, the war has already created semi-famine conditions in both Natal and Cape Colony. Bread and all other articles of food have risen in price in some instances several hundred per cent.

BOERS SIGNALING IN THE NATAL HILLS

Every day's delay of the Boers in making their grand assault on Ladysmith and Kimberley is a gain to the British. Before this reaches our readers the assault in force may have been made on General White's position. Should the British reinforcements now on the way from Durban reach within striking distance in time, the whole aspect of the Natal campaign may be changed. Much reliance is placed upon the quick-firing naval guns, a number of which have been forwarded with a strong detachment of bluejackets from the British warship Terrible. An effort is being made to force through food supplies and ammunition, as it is believed that White is short of both. His naval guns may be useless unless this forlorn hope succeeds.

Although Gen. Buller has necessarily diverted a large portion of his command for the relief of Ladysmith, he seems resolved to push ahead on his original line of campaign in the west. On that side, the frontiers of both the Boer republics are comparatively unprotected. There are no mountain ranges, as on the eastern and southern boundaries, and the land is level plain. Should it become necessary the Dutch farmers and burghers will tear up and destroy every bridge and mile of railroad in both Boer republics, rather than allow the British to invade their territory. President Kruger is credited with having said that "if the British won the campaign, it would be at a cost that would stagger humanity." That ominous prediction is now recalled with gloomy foreboding. Meanwhile, Boer strategy has far outrun that of their foes. Every available point of attack has been seized and guarded. Even Zululand, south of Natal, has been invaded by the Transvaal commandos, and is no longer available as an avenue of British attack, which it might have become in certain contingences.

It is now practically assured that there will be no European interference in the South African war. England is taking measures accordingly to place in the field the largest army she has ever mustered for foreign service. Even the Queen's Household Guards are now on the way to Cape Town. Human lives will be poured out like water and the struggle, from present indications, threatens to be a long and sanguinary one.

A Congress of Religions

Outline of the Plan for Holding it in Paris During the Exposition of 1900

THE professors of the University of France, connected with the religious sciences at the Practical School of Higher Education of the Sorbonne, under the patronage of the French government, have undertaken the organization of an international congress on questions belonging to the History of Religions, for the Exposition of 1900. The work of the congress is limited to the scientific study of the history of religions, as it has been developed by the labors of scholars during the past century. The president is M. Albert Reville, of the College de France; the vice-presidents are MM. Alexandre Bertrand, Michel Breal, Maspero, Oppert, and Senart.

The congress will meet from the 3rd to the 6th of September, 1900, forming with four other cognate congresses an uninterrupted series, beginning with psychology on the 17th of August, continuing with prehistoric anthropology, Americanists, and folk-lore until the 16th of September, 1900.

The opening and closing sessions will be held at the Exposition Palais des Congres; the other meetings at the Sorbonne. Communications relating to other questions for the consideration of the congress may also be presented, and may be written in Latin, German (Roman characters), English, or Italian, as well as in French. They must be essentially of an historical character; and, both in papers presented and in the discussions, all dogmatic or denominational polemics are prohibited. The various divisions are as follows:

Section I. Religion of non-civilized peoples; pre-Columbian American Civilizations.

Section II. History of the religions of the Far East (China, Japan, Indo-China, Mongols, Finns).

Section III. History of the religions of Egypt.

Section IV. History of the religions called Semitic.

Section V. History of religions of India and Iran.

Section VI. History of religions of Greece and Rome.

Section VII. Religions of Germans, Clets, Slavs—Prehistoric Archæology of Europe.

Section VIII. History of Christianity.

Correspondence in connection with the congress should be addressed to MM. Jran Reville and Leon Mariller, secretaries of the committee of the Congress of Religions at the Sorbonne, Paris.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Keeping the Sabbath

S. S. Lesson for Dec. 3. Neh. 13: 15-22
Golden Text, Exodus 20: 8

BY MRS. M. BAXTER

THE [illegible] originally for God. He speaks of "my Sabbaths" (Lev. 19: 3, 30; 26. 2). Death was the penalty to Israel of the breaking his holy Sab- [illegible] and twice in these verses God calls his Sabbaths a sign between him and his people: first a sign "that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you," and secondly, "a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever," in remembrance that in the creation, God "rested and was refreshed." Before the Sabbath was a law to Israel, it was a gift to man. "The Sabbath was made for man"—not for Israel only, and it is remarkable that this word occurs in the Gospel of Mark, who represents the Lord Jesus as the Servant of Jehovah. We should expect in this Gospel of service, that the boon of the day of rest should be spoken of as a gift to man in general. It is as Son of Man, also, that our Lord declares himself Lord of the Sabbath (Mark 2: 28; Luke 6: 5). No other man is Lord over it.

It must have been in the very early times of the Christian Church that the first day of the week, called by the apostle John "the Lord's Day" (Rev. 1: 10), came to be observed in the place of the Jewish Sabbath. The first day of the week, the resurrection day, is mentioned in Acts 20: 7, as the time "when the disciples came together to eat bread;" and in I. Cor. 16: 2, as the day in which the saints should lay by in store, as God prospered them, for the maintenance of the work of the Lord. Adventists are seeking to bring back the use of the seventh day, and to bring Christians under the law of the Sabbath. Thank God, we are "not under law, but under grace" (Rom. 6: 14, R. V.). The observing of "days, and months, and seasons, and years" (Gal. 4: 10), is shown by Paul to be a return to the weak and beggarly rudiments of the faith, and to "be in bondage over again." To those who have entered into his rest there is the ceasing from our own works as God did from his, even in the keeping of Sabbaths as a work of law. But this is not that God's day of rest should be done away; rather that every day should be a Sabbath, while the first day of the week is observed as the Lord's Day.

If the law is written in our hearts, and is not an outward system of rules to us, then we cannot take out of our hearts on Monday that which rules our conduct on Sunday. On the first day of the week we do all as unto the Lord; on the second day likewise. We are privileged, whether we eat or drink or whatsoever we do, to do all to the glory of God (I. Cor. 10: 31) every day of the week, and they who would serve God on Sunday and serve themselves the rest of the week, are still under the law of "I must," "I ought," instead of standing fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free which is "I may, I can serve my God every day, in all I do and think and speak." But while the old law does not bind us to the keeping of the Sabbath, the seventh day, the seventh year, the fiftieth year, yet the keeping of the Lord's Day, is a special grace permitted to us, and always specially owned of God. Those who seek to do away with the holiness of it, the Roman Catholics and Ritualists especially, by making it a day of amusement and self-pleasing, are putting a terrible stumbling-block in the way of the salvation of souls.

It is easy to see how from the beginning national blessing has gone much in union with the keeping of the Sabbath or of the Lord's Day. It was one of the charges which God brought against his people of old: "My Sabbaths they greatly polluted" (Ezekiel 20: 13, 16, 24); "Thou hast despised Mine holy things, and hast profaned My Sabbaths;" "Her priests have . . . hid their eyes from My Sabbaths" (Ezekiel 22: 8, 26). And the seventy years' captivity was a judgment upon the Jews, "until the land enjoyed her Sabbaths, for as long as she lay desolate she kept Sabbath, threescore and ten years."

Nehemiah, in the course of his measures for reform, noticed how much Sabbath desecration prevailed in the land of Judah. To his consternation he saw that some trod their wine-presses and some brought home their harvest on the Sabbath day. Others drove a regular market for all kinds of perishable goods: wine, grapes, figs, etc., which they brought into Jerusalem on the Sabbath day. And Nehemiah testified against them. He found that the Sabbath desecration of the Jews had encouraged fish merchants of Tyre and other merchants to have their merchandise regularly sent in and sold in Jerusalem on the Sabbath. Naturally, where there is no market for goods, there will be no trade: and, finding it was the nobles who encouraged this Sabbath trading, the reformer contended with them: he met them face to face, and put it to them. "What evil thing is this ye do, and profane the Sabbath day? Did not your fathers thus, and did not God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? Yet ye bring more wrath upon Israel by profaning the Sabbath."

Having thus testified to the merchants and borne witness for his God to the nobles who bought their goods, Nehemiah proceeded to take stringent measures to enforce the sanctity of the Sabbath. On the eve of the Sabbath he commanded that the gates should be shut and not reopened until the Sabbath be over, and having, as we have seen, servants of one mind with him, always ready to be interrupted in their ordinary work to help their master in his reforms, he set some of them on patrol over the gates to hinder the entrance of any merchandise whatsoever upon the Sabbath day. The merchants, seeing this would be a loss to them, lodged without the gates, hoping, no doubt, to sell to some of the foot-passengers who might be passing in and out by the postern, while the larger gates remained closed. But the faithful servants reported this to their master. Once or twice the merchants persisted, but Nehemiah came in person and testified against them. "Why lodge ye about the wall? if ye do so again I will lay hands on you." This was effectual and the whole thing was stopped. Thus was the abuse done away.

A MARKET OUTSIDE THE JAFFA GATE OF JERUSALEM

Lesson Points

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers

UNDER the rule of Nehemiah, as Tirshatha, or Governor of Judea, the reformation described in the lesson of November 19 continued, he and Ezra working together to keep the people true to their pledges and faithful to their God. Ezra now drops out of the history and we read of Zadok as the scribe. As twenty-six years had elapsed since he went to Jerusalem, he was probably dead. At the end of twelve years, dating from his arrival in Jerusalem, in 444, Nehemiah went back to Persia: but not to stay. After an uncertain period, which he describes indefinitely as "certain days," he again obtained leave of absence from Artaxerxes and returned to Jerusalem. As Artaxerxes died in 425 this new leave must have been given before that date, which proves that Nehemiah could not have been more than seven years absent from Jerusalem. Probably it was less than five years. But during the interval great changes had occurred. The custom of foreign marriages had been resumed, the Sabbath had fallen into neglect, and his inveterate enemy, Tobiah, had secured a footing in the city, being lodged in one of the rooms of the Temple itself. We can imagine his disappointment and indignation. His first act was to turn Tobiah out and restore the chamber he had occupied to its legitimate use. He then proceeded to correct other abuses, notably the desecration of the Sabbath.

I will lay hands on you. There was not much ground for complaint against these fishmongers and peddlers of fruit from Tyre. They were not expected to respect the Sabbath. They were in business and as long as the Jews were willing to buy on that day they were ready to sell. It was no concern of theirs whether it was a holy day or not. But when Nehemiah stopped the traffic and showed the Jews how wrong it was, the case was altered. He applied his check at both ends. The Jews must not buy, they were under his orders; but he would take temptation away from them. So he shut the gates on the Sabbath and kept them [illegible]. But the peddlers set up their stalls outside and the Jews, if they were [illegible] could go out at the postern gate and find such a market as is to be found outside the gates of an Oriental city today. So the Governor went out and ordered them off and thus wisely removed temptation from his own people. A police court justice in a town near New York proceeded on the same principle. A Jew was brought before him for keeping his store open on Sunday. He said: "I do not have any regard for your Sabbath. I keep my own Sabbath and I have a right to sell on yours. Christian people come and buy. They don't care and I sell and I don't care." The judge answered: "I am going to make you care by inflicting a fine and if that will not do, I shall follow it with imprisonment. I mean to have the Lord's Day observed in this town and as you say you have Christians for your customers that is the more reason why I should close your store so as to keep temptation out of their way."

I testified against them. The following parable on Sabbath desecration sets the matter in vivid light. A certain great land-owner said to the tenants on his estate: "I am going to give you six acres of my best land for your own. You can till it to suit yourselves and grow on it whatsoever you like best. But there is one condition. I want you to cultivate a piece of ground near my house with some choice seeds that I have imported. They will grow to beautiful trees bearing luscious fruit. This ground is only one acre, but I want it kept exclusively for these particular seeds, and when they have grown and borne fruit the fruit will be for you. This one acre is mine, but you will gain by cultivating it, because you will have the produce." What would be said of those people if they insisted on planting their own growths on that acre, and taking no notice of the kindly plan of their benefactor? That is the way people act who, not content with the six days God gives them, and not caring for the spiritual blessings they would get by keeping the Lord's day, fill it with work or pleasure.

No more on the Sabbath. There are some people now who want to go back to the old Jewish custom and observe the Saturday instead of the Sunday. An Englishman coming to live in this country is surprised to see that people go about their work on Whit Monday as if it was an ordinary day, and when he asks if it is not kept as a holiday here as it is in his country, he is told that no one pays attention to it. But in a few weeks he finds people can keep holiday here as well as they can in England. On the glorious Fourth there is a holiday with emphasis, and he learns that Americans have a good and sufficient reason for celebrating the day, and any school boy can tell him what that reason is. No American citizen with a spark of patriotism in him would vote to go back to Whit Monday as a national holiday, although it is a more ancient festival.

Profaning the Sabbath. A number of boys are invited to visit at a beautiful house in which there are all kinds of pictures and toys and games. One room is fitted up as a gymnasium, with parallel bars and Indian clubs and apparatus. Other rooms are fitted up for other amusements. There is one room, however, that the owner wishes kept to himself. It has sacred associations for him because it was the room of a very dear son. He keeps everything in it just as it used to be in his son's time, and, while he loves to see boys enjoying themselves and having all the fun they want, he does not wish any romping in that room. It would hurt his feelings. There are lovely books and pictures there and fine musical instruments, but any one going into it must behave. How if the boys rushed into that room and carried on their noisiest sports there and made fun of the owner's scruples. That is the conduct of those who profane the Lord's day.

An Appeal From India

Urgent Request for Help Cabled by American Missionaries in India, Who Are in the Midst of Another Famine

STICK DRILL BY FAMINE GIRLS IN MR. HUME'S SCHOOL IN BOMBAY

LETTERS from the missionaries in India for several weeks past have had a sombre tone, especially from those in the northern and northwestern provinces. They told of the total rainfall in some instances, and, in others, of diminished showers. What this meant, they knew only too well. With millions of people dependent entirely on the produce of their small farms, the failure of the harvest, which is the inevitable consequence of deficient moisture, meant suffering for all and starvation for many. It was clear that trouble was ahead when they wrote, but they were still hoping against hope that the longed-for rains though belated, might yet come. Now, however, that hope has vanished. Last week this cable despatch was received by the proprietor of this journal:

AHMEDNAGAR, INDIA.
Klopsch, New York:
Famine sore. Help!
MARATHI MISSION.

It is evident that the worst fears are realized. Those three words call up a vivid picture of thousands of people unable to get food. Already the missionaries must be witnessing the harrowing spectacle of men, women and children crazed by hunger piteously pleading for a morsel of bread. Among them are many who have become Christians, for the American Board and the Methodist Episcopal Board and the Presbyterian Board have many zealous missionaries in that section. Some help should be sent to them at once, that they may not be compelled to turn a deaf ear to this agonizing appeal for food. We will gladly arrange to send by cable, free of cost, any contributions which may be sent to us by our readers for the relief of the sufferers. Even one dollar may save a life if sent speedily.

The help so nobly rendered by the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in the famine of 1897, is still bearing fruit. Missionaries in all sections of India report the opening of doors to the Gospel that were closed before, and in the orphanages there are hundreds of children who were rescued from starvation, and are becoming Christians, preparing to carry the religion of Christ into all the towns and villages of the land.

GIRLS IN AMERICAN SCHOOL IN CAWNPORE

A photograph of eight of these famine orphans is reproduced on this page. It is sent by Rev. E. S. Hume, of Byculla, Bombay, in whose school they are. So changed are the children from the miserable waifs they were when they were received, so bright and intelligent and healthy are they, that Mr. Hume thought a picture of this specimen group would be gratifying to the generous Christian people in the United States whose gifts kept the children in life. It represents the girls as they are about to begin the evolution which they call "stick drill," a calisthenic exercise extremely graceful and healthful, practised in the intervals of study. Mr. and Mrs. Hume have one hundred and eighty of these children in their orphanage at Byculla. "Many of them," Mr. Hume says, "have become sincere Christians, and give promise of being useful workers." He is anxious that the people who aided in rescuing them, and are still, through the distribution of the balance of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD fund, contributing to their support, will not forget them, but will pray for their mental, moral and spiritual welfare.

Already the results of the present scarcity of food in Northern India are being felt in his neighborhood. Mr. Hume was called, a few days before writing his letter, to see a party of eight miserable creatures who had walked all the way from the Deccan, two hundred miles off, to see if any food could be obtained in Bombay. They were hungry, ragged and footsore when they arrived and were directed to the home of the Christian missionary, where, during the great famine, so many victims found succor. After relieving their immediate need, a proposal was made that a bright, intelligent girl, only six years old, should remain in the school. The child was accordingly received and a place found for her in the institution. Her name is Harana. "I wonder," Mr. Hume writes, "whether among your readers there is not some one who would deny himself some luxury that he might support this beautiful little child. We can clothe, feed and educate her for twenty-five dollars a year. We could not refuse to receive her, for Christ bade us feed his lambs."

Another interesting picture which appears on this page is that of three of the girls in the Mary A. Merriman school in Cawnpore. Miss Beach, of the Woman's Union Missionary Society, who is in charge of it during the absence of Miss Lilian Deitrich on furlough in America, writes most hopefully of the girls under her care. "We are greatly indebted to you," she says, "for your continued interest and support. We would ask you to thank your generous readers for us. You and they are often remembered in the prayers we offer, that the Father's blessing may be richly given to those who, in the time of India's sore calamity, gave money and food to the starving people. Our girls know that you are contributing to their support and they are not unthankful. It is difficult for us who see them daily to realize that they are the poor, miserable creatures who came to us in the famine. They have grown so fast, and are so bright and cheerful. Some of the girls assigned to you are now from six to twelve years old. From the photograph I send of three of the girls, you can see how they dress and look."

THE MISSION HOUSE IN SAN FRANCISCO—REV. JEE GAM

A Chinese Pioneer . . . . . in Gospel Work

Rev. Jee Gam's Labors for His People—The California Chinese Mission

THE successful work of Rev. Mr. Jee Gam, of the Californian Chinese Mission of San Francisco, among his own people, furnishes a striking illustration of the truth of the oft-made statement that the best missionary to the Chinese is an American Chinese convert. Mr. Jee Gam came to America in 1863 from the province of Kwang-Tung, where he was born fifty-one years ago. He was converted at Oakland, California, while employed in the family of Rev. Dr. George Moar, a Congregational minister, according to his own testimony "through their upright Christian example." In 1870, he with two others similarly converted, "were the first Chinese that joined the English-speaking church east of the Rockies." He was at once drawn into the work of the American Missionary Association as a messenger of Christ to his people, and has been laboring continuously along this line for twenty-nine years, although he was not ordained until 1895. He is now the only ordained Chinese Congregational minister in America. His education, which is remarkably thorough, was acquired under Dr. Moar's supervision. He has seven children, five of whom are missionaries, and his wife is a Christian Chinawoman. He adheres to his queue and national dress because, as he states, "I can reach my people better so."

Mr. Jee Gam was instrumental in the organization of the Hong-kong, now South China mission, of whose excellent work our readers are cognizant. The California Chinese Mission, which is an auxiliary of the American Missionary Association, owes much of its success to his devotion and indefatigable labor. During its twenty-nine years of existence this mission has established forty-two mission-schools, of which twenty are in operation; it has reached more than 80,000 Chinese, and has sent a number of native missionaries to China. To work in California, China and elsewhere its four or five hundred resident members have contributed about $5,000 annually. Of the $1,500 cost of the Mission House bought in 1897, $7,000 have been paid through the help of Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor Societies, the A. M. A. and the Chinese themselves, many of whom have given a whole month's wages to it. At the International S. C. E. Convention of 1897, the Y. P. C. E. S. of this mission ranked second, and in 1898 third, in the amount given to missions. Its free schools, reading-room and dispensary activities in Canton and South China have been of notable significance, and warrant Mr. Gam's expressed opinion that "the evangelization of the American Chinese means the evangelization of China's millions." With the full endorsement of Rev. Dr. W. C. Pond, who is at the head of the California Chinese mission, and who has devoted many years of his life to its establishment, Mr. Jee Gam is seeking the help of Christian people in lifting the debt of $8,000 still due upon the Mission House. He will doubtless succeed in this undertaking, for it is one that strongly appeals to the sympathy of the Christian public.

The new Mission House is the headquarters for all Chinese Congregational work in China and America at large as well as California. As the centre of various evangelical and social activities, it is of untold helpfulness to the Chinese of San Francisco. The building contains a gymnasium, school-room, library, reception-room, club-room, pastor's study, etc.; besides, there are several rooms which are rented to young Chinamen who want the environment of a Christian home and who are workers in the Mission.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR.
T. DeWitt Talmage
EDITOR.

Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald [illegible]

Subscriptions may commence [illegible]

Remittances [illegible]

Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, the Canadas, and Mexico, foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals. [illegible] before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers. [illegible] back numbers, nor to make good omissions caused by tardy renewals.

Change of Date. [illegible] the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address.—Always give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald [illegible] the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication

Letters [illegible]

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,
[illegible] New York City.

Entered [illegible] New York Post-office [illegible] Matter.

How to Fill the Churches

A GOOD deal is being said and written nowadays as to the most efficient method of preaching needed in the pulpit and the best method of filling the pews. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has freely invited pastoral opinion on this subject. Some favor expository preaching, some the didactic, some the homiletic, some even the metaphysical. We suppose what is most efficient depends upon the constitution of the preacher himself. Some do best in hortatory efforts; others, again, are wonderfully successful in the simple exposition of the Scriptures; but whatever the method be, it should have the elements of directness, of simplicity and of pungency. When a preacher has his subject, he should go right at it, as if he meant to hit it. The system of using texts by way of accommodation is a most pernicious one, and it is a false system. We have all heard of the minister who preached from the text, "Topknot, come down," and equally absurd illustrations are being constantly met with. So, too, the element of simplicity is a most necessary one. We once heard a minister—and he was of that abused class, the army chaplains—speak of "landing a finny inhabitant of the briny deep upon the dry and parched earth." What he meant was fishing, only he did not have the sense to say so.

Pungency is another essential element. We want more clear, ringing Anglo-Saxon in the pulpit, and less artificiality of language and voice, which makes the preacher seem to be either an improved automaton or a vox humana stop taken out of the organ and set up in the pulpit. This dismal wailing which we sometimes meet with, mixed up with weak metaphor and redundancy of speech, is often put forth as the offspring of culture; but culture does not acknowledge the wayward child. It was with no such uncertain sound that the great Apostle Paul preached the magnificent sermon on Mars Hill, or declared the whole counsel of God all the way from Jerusalem to Rome. Men who employ in preaching a stilted, artificial method never last beyond their little day.

There is still another point: we need more attention to a free, spontaneous oratory. The gestures may be awkward; but let the words burn, let the manner be earnest, and people will come, and the hearers will not be apt to go to sleep. The importance to a preacher of being wide awake in the delivery of a sermon, even if he be liable to the charge of that great bugbear of modern Chadbands, "sensationalism," is well illustrated by an anecdote which Professor Lawson, a theological teacher in England, used to tell of one of his pupils, Andrew Fletcher, who, after completing his theological studies, passed the first two years of his ministry in a colleagueship with his father, a clergyman of Perthshire, Scotland. When the father preached, the listeners were few; when the son discoursed, the house was flooded. The father's sermons elicited no praises; the son's were loudly applauded; whereat the former became jealous and irritable. At length the son borrowed one of his father's sermons, and on the following Sunday preached it from memory with great emphasis and animation. The hearers were louder than ever in praise of the youthful orator, and one worthy remarked, "The old man never in his life preached a sermon that was equal to that!"

So, too, when a friend of Mirabeau complained that the Assembly would not listen to him, that fiery leader asked for his speech, and the next day electrified the Assembly by uttering as his own the words they had refused to hear from another. In either case it was the manner that made all the difference.

This age is a wakening age, a nervous age, a quick age. Men have much to learn and they hear much. The men of to-day are wider awake than their ancestors ever were, and it becomes the successful preacher of to-day to be roused and wide awake. If one of the apostles could leave heaven and drop into some of our churches he would think himself in a first-class dormitory, nor would he be far out of the way. When a house is on fire the alarm comes out as from a clarion. It is some of this wide-awake spirit in manner, in matter, in tone, in voice, in gesture which the pulpit of to-day needs, and without which preaching becomes as lifeless as a stone and as ineffectual as beating the air.

About Idlers

SHUN the companionship of idlers. There are men hanging around every store, and office and shop, who have nothing to do, or act as if they had not. They are apt to come in when the firm is away, and wish to engage you in conversation while you are engaged in your regular employment. Politely suggest to such persons that you have no time to give them during business hours. Nothing would please them so well as to have you renounce your occupation and associate with them. Much of the time they lounge around the doors of engine houses, or after the dining hour stand upon the steps of a fashionable hotel or an elegant restaurant, wishing to give you the idea that that is the place where they dine. But they do not dine there. They are sinking down lower and lower, day by day. Neither by day nor by night have anything to do with the idlers. Before you admit a man into your acquaintance ask him politely, "What do you do for a living?" If he says, "Nothing: I am a gentleman," look out for him. He may have a very soft hand, and very faultless apparel, and have a high-sounding family name, but his touch is death. Before you know it, you will in his presence be ashamed of your work dress. Business will become to you drudgery, and after awhile you will lose your place, and afterward your respectability, and last of all your soul. Idleness is next door to villainy. Thieves, gamblers, burglars, shop-lifters, and assassins are made from the class who have nothing to do. When the police go to hunt up and arrest a culprit they seldom go to look in at the busy factory, or behind the counter where diligent clerks are employed, but they go among the groups of idlers.

During the past few years there has [illegible] Young men have complained that they have little to do. If they have nothing else to do they can read and improve their minds and hearts. These times are not always to continue. Business is waking up, and the superior knowledge that in this interregnum of work you may obtain will be worth fifty thousand dollars of capital. The large fortunes of the next twenty years are having their foundations laid this winter by the young men who are giving themselves to self-improvement.

November 30
THE TIME LIMIT

THE time limit set for the free distribution of our beautiful Home Sunshine Calendars will soon expire. The proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD expended many thousands of dollars on these Calendars as a reward for prompt action on the part of new or renewing subscribers. Our mail in December is about 10,000 letters a day, and this year it promises to be double that number unless many of our friends send in their subscriptions during the present month. Such an arrangement enables us to have the business handled by experienced help, and many errors which might otherwise occur would be avoided.

We are happy to state that, owing to this offer, tens of thousands are renewing earlier than usual, and we believe that by the end of November fully 100,000 will have sent in their subscriptions, and the usual pressure of December will remain normal.

Never have such ample provisions for the expeditious handling of business been provided as this year, and our subscribers may depend on the most prompt and satisfactory service. A huge supply of premium books have been prepared and packed ready for addresses and shipment; express companies have promised heartiest and speediest cooperation, and the busiest season THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has ever experienced has been wisely anticipated so that every call may be promptly and satisfactorily met.

Still, it is always better to be a little ahead of time in sending your order. Premium books will not suffer by being in your own hands a few weeks earlier, and the express companies will handle the business quicker now, by considerable, than when the holiday pressure is on. And then even the most gigantic preparations are sometimes insufficient; but by sending your subscriptions now you guard against the possibility of disappointment.

As stated in a previous issue, new subscribers get THE CHRISTIAN HERALD free to Jan. 1st, and the sooner their subscriptions are received the greater the advantage they derive, while old subscribers get a year added to their present expiry date. Hence they lose nothing and gain the Calendar. Our Home Sunshine Calendar contains six Eggshelled Cards, each about the size of a full CHRISTIAN HERALD page and each containing a beautiful picture in twelve different colors. On the reverse side of each sheet is a carefully prepared Chronology of the XIX Century for the two months which that particular card represents. Nothing like our Calendar is now on the market, the whole arrangement being the Copyright property of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. If you want any premium sent at Christmas subscribe now and get the Calendar, and we will reserve the premium and ship it any day you may designate. Remember, subscriptions postmarked after Nov. 30 will not be entitled to one of these Calendars. Act to-day as you may forget to-morrow.

* * *

We have been greatly cheered by the many letters of hearty commendation from our subscribers. They nearly all say that they never could do without THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. We are striving to make this the most attractive paper in the world for Christian people and we believe we are succeeding. A thousand thanks to the many correspondents whose kind words are a source of constant encouragement to us.

BRIEF NOTES

[illegible]

A. T. [illegible]

Dr. [illegible] been [illegible]

[illegible]

by remitting the money.

[illegible] dence they have dug them up from the places where they buried them

[illegible] Nov. 13-19, a meeting was held at noon each day except Saturday and Sunday, in the rooms of the [illegible] William E. Kingsley, Mr. Robert E. Speer, Mr. [illegible] the leaders on the respective days.

[illegible] Fairmount Baptist Church, at which he has been [illegible] while he preaches. These sermons, like those he delivers and illustrates in his home church in Brooklyn, have proved intensely interesting especially to the young folks.

[illegible] an old family Bible at an auction sale was astonished, on examining his purchase, to find in it [illegible] notes to the amount of $150. On the [illegible] one of the notes there was an inscription [illegible] that the owner had saved the money, and [illegible] no relatives, wished to make the person who [illegible] into the possession of the book her lawful heir.

Mr. [illegible] at Bristol, England, is being carried on by his son-in-law Mr. James Wright and other friends. They [illegible] the sixtieth of the institution. They follow Mr. Muller's rule of making no appeal for funds. Last year they received $145,389. This sum brings the total received since the orphan work commenced to more than five million dollars.

Mrs. [illegible] Armenia, who died in California recently, is gratefully remembered by her former pupils. They relate that once when a band of Turkish soldiers [illegible] sight of it the Turks decamped.

A prominent statistician [illegible] divorce laws are more stringent.

A Christian worker in Brooklyn has organ [illegible] Five Don'ts." The Don'ts referred to, which the [illegible] (save on an ocean voyage) ride in a pub[illegible] ance on Sunday. 3. Don't read a newspaper on Sunday. 4. Don't buy anything on Sunday except [illegible] Sunday.

The General Council of the Evangelical Lutheran Church now consists of nine Synods, with 1,233 ministers, 2,029 congregations, 352,454 communicants. There are three theological semi[illegible] property worth over $300,000. There are seven colleges with about 2,000 students, eleven orphans' homes, seven hospitals, five homes for the aged, epileptic, etc., four deaconess institutions, and three immigrant missions.

Mr. Ira D. Sankey had a magnificent audience in the Massey Music Hall, Toronto, on the occasion of the opening of the winter campaign of [illegible] years since Mr. Sankey had seen his Toronto friends, and they gave him a hearty welcome. In addition to singing some of his new songs and, by request, several old favorites, he related a number of thrilling incidents associated with the composition and singing of the songs.

Rev. Thomas Harrison has been holding successful meetings in Chicago. The St. James Methodist Episcopal Church was crowded every night, and on November 20 there was a great jubilee [illegible] who have made confession of faith. Dr. Robert McIntyre, the pastor of the church, has had the pleasure of writing to several families in various States to announce the conversion of some wanderer who has been brought to repentance

The Countess Schimmelman expects to be in New York early in December. She spoke 112 [illegible] health is still delicate, she is obliged to restrict her work in New York. She is anxious however to reach as large a number of people as possible, so that she will, in considering invitations to speak, choose the largest and most central locations. Invitations should be addressed to her on the Danish yacht Duen, Albany, N. Y.

[illegible] nection with the Memorial Protestant Church at [illegible] on November 8, has met with a cordial welcome in this country. Churches of various denominations [illegible] ranging meetings and forming committees to raise the sum necessary to complete the memorial church. Mr. Louis Tag, treasurer of the American Tract Society, 150 Nassau St., New York, has consented [illegible] the American fund. All contributions should be sent to him.

A Zoological Park . . . . In New York

LATEST of the attractions of New York City, but by no means the least, is the new zoological park, which, after four years of effort, has now been formally opened to the public. It is in the Borough of the Bronx, between Pelham avenue and West Farms. It consists of a beautiful stretch of wooded land three-quarters of a mile long and half a mile wide. As ex-Governor Levi P. Morton, who presided at the opening ceremony, told his hearers, the place was so singularly well adapted by nature for the purpose, that nothing had to be done but to make paths and erect the suitable buildings. The city government has appropriated $150,000 toward the expenses, and private citizens have given the same amount. With this $300,000 it will be possible to provide pavilions and outdoor cages of the most approved type for a large zoological collection. The most conspicuous features of the park at present are the Bird House and the Reptile House, photographs of which are reproduced on this page. Both are already tenanted. In the Reptile House are 293 snakes, representing thirty-six distinct species, among them a huge python twenty-two feet long and weighing 170 pounds. Their house is large enough to contain trees, so that those snakes which are fond of climbing may enjoy their favorite sport. In the Bird House are storks, penguins and several varieties of water fowl from other lands, besides owls, jays and other home birds. A huge cage is in preparation which will be 175 feet long and eighty feet high, and covering three large trees, in which a large collection of birds will enjoy comparative liberty. In another part of the park are the bear dens, the deer range and the wolf dens, all of which are occupied by the nucleus of collections. In all, there are 843 specimens now in the park, and the number will be increased as rapidly as quarters are prepared for them. The design of the managers has been to present every creature, as near as possible, in its natural conditions, and they believe that the park affords such facilities for executing this design as will enable them to make it the finest resort of its kind in the world. It will doubtless be highly appreciated by students of natural history. To the Christian visitor it will be a reminder of that era, yet to come, which Isaiah foresaw, when these animals will dwell together, not, as in this case, caged and separated by strong barriers to keep them from devouring each other, but sharing with men the gentle influence which is to subdue all ferocity.

The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid . . . they shall not hurt nor destroy: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord (Isa. 11:6-9).

THE REPTILE HOUSE

THE BIRD HOUSE

THE NEW ZOOLOGICAL PARK IN NEW YORK

Restored through an Injury

A patient in the Willard State Hospital for the Insane, has recovered his reason in an extraordinary way. He has given the attendants a great deal of trouble since he has been in the institution by his mad tricks and violent outbreaks. Three weeks ago he was out with a squad of lunatics for exercise, when he broke away and ran. The attendants were quickly on his track but he outran them. To escape pursuit, he climbed on the Lehigh Valley Railroad bridge and, dropping through, he hung suspended to the ties by his arms. The attendants followed and called to him to hold on, but to avoid capture he let go and fell to the hard roadbed, thirty-five feet below. Several of his bones were broken, but his most serious injury was a compound fracture of the skull. He was carried to the hospital where his hurts were examined. It was necessary to trepan the skull by a new and delicate operation, and after the broken fragments had been removed the patient soon recovered consciousness. The pressure on the brain, which was responsible for his insanity, has been removed with the portions of the fractured skull, and the insane man has now recovered his reason. His case up to that time had been considered practically incurable. Doubtless the doctors, when they examined the injured man's head, pitied him for this new calamity that had befallen him; but it has proved the means of a great blessing to him. So it has been with many who have suffered from aberration of their spiritual faculties. Like the Prodigal "when he came to himself," the wandering Christian often finds that it was an affliction which restored him.

Before I was afflicted I went away: but now have I kept thy word (Ps. 119:67).

Explosive Dust

A scientific journal makes a recent explosion of flour dust in the New England Mills in Chicago, the text of an article explaining the danger of a single spark in a dust-laden atmosphere. It says: "Finely comminuted combustibles of any kind, when mixed with a proper portion of air, form explosives akin to gunpowder. A spark or open flame which heats a few particles of the dust to a high temperature, causes these to combine with the oxygen of the air in which they are suspended, and the flame shoots through the whole mass with explosive rapidity. Flame has been known to travel for twenty feet or more along a draft of air laden with gasoline fumes, and it will do the same with a dust-laden draft. With dust mixtures, as with those of volatile hydrocarbons or illuminating gas, the explosions are most violent when the amount of air in the mixture is just sufficient to supply the oxygen necessary for the perfect combustion of the suspended matter. When these conditions exist, these mixtures have the ability to do more damage to buildings than would be done by the disintegration of an equivalent amount of dynamite or fulminate." This fact should be made widely known, so that the proper precautions may be taken to avoid a catastrophe, in which lives and property may be sacrificed. These precautions are: ventilation that will clear the air of dust; and care that no spark be kindled in the mill. Analogous precautions might well be adopted to prevent the loss of souls. Many a young man has found, to his cost, that in an impure moral atmosphere, a very slight spark of temptation may be his soul's undoing:

Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereto according to thy word (Ps. 119:9).

A Romantic Marriage

Cincinnati journals publish the notice of a recent marriage which recalls Tennyson's story of Enoch Arden. Twenty-six years ago a young sailor wooed and won a wife in Kansas. The girl stipulated before the wedding that he should give up a seafaring life. But times grew hard, and there was straitness in the home of the young couple. An opportunity of making a large sum of money by a long voyage was brought to the sailor, and by much persuasion he gained his wife's reluctant consent to his accepting it. After the sailing of his ship from San Francisco she heard from him no more, but news came that the vessel had been wrecked on the coast of Africa. The wife struggled hard to make a livelihood for herself and child, but it was very difficult and she sank into poverty. A life-long neighbor, who had loved her before her marriage, and had kept single for her sake, renewed his suit and she accepted him. To be quite sure that the marriage should be valid she procured a divorce from her first husband on the ground of desertion, but she had no doubt that he was dead. Several years elapsed and then her second husband died. She removed to St. Louis and afterward to Cincinnati. There one day recently she was amazed to receive a visit from her first husband. His vessel had been wrecked as was reported, but it was on a lonely isle of the Pacific. He had swam ashore and had remained there for several years, without seeing a ship, or having any opportunity of communicating with his wife. When he was rescued and returned to America, he made inquiries about his wife. Learning that she had secured a divorce and was living happily with another husband, he would not disclose himself. He settled in Kansas City when he went into business and prospered. But he kept track of his former wife and when he heard that she was a widow, he presented himself and persuaded her to remarry him. She probably did not need much persuasion, for his delicate and magnanimous conduct would naturally enhance the love she originally bore him. It is such conduct that God represents himself as showing toward his people, who have proved untrue to their vows. He does not desert them but disciplines them and woos them, following them with his love and offers of restoration, in the hope that they will renew their allegiance to him.

Then shall she say I will go and return to my first husband; for then was it better with me than now (Hosea 2:7).

A Matron's Intrepidity

A fire in an uptown district in New York revealed the courage of a woman in the face of imminent peril. It was a tenement house of five stories that was burning. All the inmates except one man had retired to rest, for it was two hours after midnight. He was reading by the bedside of his sick sister, a girl twenty years of age who is suffering from a complication of diseases and needs constant attention. The man noticed a smell of smoke and opening the door, saw that the staircase and corridor were dense with it. Realizing that the house was on fire, he opened the window and shouted for help. The only person who heard him was a woman who serves as matron at the neighboring police station. She was returning home from her duties when she heard the man's shout. She immediately turned in an alarm and then ran into the burning building and went upstairs to arouse the tenants. She climbed the stairs from one story to another, rapping on the doors to awaken them, and calling to them to come out. They ran into the street in their night clothes, but the sick girl could not move. Her brother was about to go too, leaving his sister to her fate, when the matron called him back. "Wait," she said, "I will stay with you. This poor girl must not be left." She sat down by the bedside and calmed the sick girl, who was frenzied with the terror caused by the clangor of the fire-alarm bells and the shouts of the people. The matron sat still, unmoved by the excitement inside and outside the house, and her presence was so reassuring that the sick girl actually fell asleep. She was still sleeping when, after the danger was over, the matron took her departure. If it had not been for that calm, courageous woman's company, the sick girl might have died of panic. But so long as that woman was beside her she felt that she was not deserted. It is so that the Christian is supported by the presence of his Lord in all the crises of life.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me (Psalm 23:4).

How to Attract People to Church

Many of our Best Known Pastors Freely Express their Views on the Subject Through "The Christian Herald," and Point out the Remedy for the Universal Decline in Church-going

FREE SALVATION FOR ALL

AMONG the great questions of the day, which take hold of the spiritual part of our lives, is that which relates to the widespread falling off in church attendance. How this evil may be remedied, and the people won back to the worship of the Lord in his temple, is discussed in the group of remarkably interesting letters which appear on these two pages. It is undeniable that in a great majority of our cities, and in rural districts also, the churches are having an uphill fight, and that many a faithful and deserving pastor is disheartened by the steady reduction in the number of his auditors. Wherein lies the fault—with the pulpit or the pew?

Those divines who have written on the subject, being themselves notably successful in spiritual work, may well be able to indicate to others how the church may triumph over worldly attractions and regain its old-time popularity. The letters follow:

REV. W. R. HUNTINGTON

Homely Preaching; No Hair-splitting There is no need for a new Gospel. It seems that a careful study of our Master's method of presenting truth will answer the question, "How to induce people to go to church." Christ preached directly to the needs of his hearers. He never became impatient, or he never would have had so many children about him. He always illustrated freely. He seemed rather to prefer to light up some great truth by a homely parable or story than to confuse his hearers by splitting hairs. He did not read his sermons, but spoke out of an overflowing heart. These are a few points which I believe every young Christian worker, be he layman or theologian, may well consider. They have been of immense practical benefit to some.

Northfield, Mass. D. L. MOODY.

Christ the Magnet I believe in the Holy Ghost and the Gospel. We, in our tabernacle, have no other methods and we have all the people we want. God will draw the people if we look to him and preach Christ. I believe that any minister who preaches that Gospel will have all the congregation he wants. It was the secret of Mr. Spurgeon's power, and every successful minister I know is successful in that way. It's easy to gather a political mob or a congregation by worldly attractions, but how quickly they will disband.

REV. A. B. SIMPSON.

[illegible]

A Pastor should be Spiritual Shepherd Let a minister be selected who fills out in his life and conversation, by the help of God, the ideal man, sound in body and mind, and full of the Holy Spirit. He should combine in his work the two elements required by Almighty God in Holy Scripture: 1. The element of office-bearer for God and the dispenser of the means of grace. 2. The pastoral element, as shepherd under the Good Shepherd [illegible] sheep and is [illegible] them. This relationship of tender care, winning loving response, can only be secured by personal intercourse with all the members of the flock, young and old, rich and poor, and giving special attention to the sick and afflicted and needy, and fatherly devotion to the children. When these two elements, which I may call the priestly and the pastoral, are properly combined and balanced in the minister we have in possession nine-tenths of all that is required to make spiritual work successful in any parish or mission. If the minister has in view permanent results, he will avoid sensational sermons and everything calculated to detract from the dignity and sobriety which befit the service and the solemn interests involved.

GEORGE F. SEYMOUR.

Springfield, Ill. Bishop of Illinois.

"THE OLD VILLAGE CHURCH"

A Great Revival Needed It is not a question of attracting an audience and filling an individual church at the services. Judging by our own experience, that is an easy thing to do, and can be done without resort to any cheap device. Let the pulpit ring true, and present winsomely the old Gospel of love and hope and life and heaven, and let the pews be filled with Christians whose characters are the translation of that old Gospel into life and action, and the problem of church audiences is solved for the individual church.

But the question is far deeper and more manly, and therefore more Christian, than that of filling an individual church. It is the question of winning the people who attend and the people who do not attend our churches to Christ and to his church. That is spiritual work, and spiritual work can be done only in a spiritual atmosphere, hence the necessity of a revival of religion in our churches. There the work must begin.

REV. J. F. CARSON.

Central Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn.

A Spiritual Revival Needed "New Ideas in Church Work" do not touch me so much as the feeling that there is a decline in spirituality among us. An effort of repentance and faith that will bring it back and give us clear hearts filled with the Divine Spirit will get an "Amen" from me.

O. O. HOWARD.

Washington, D.C. Major-General, U.S.A.

Fill the Pulpit Well; Its Pews will Fill Themselves Spurgeon was once asked how the pews of a church could best be filled. He replied: "Fill the pulpit, and you will have no difficulty in filling the pews." It seems to me that tells the whole story. The model church can grow only under the model pastor. REV. C. H. PARKHURST.

Madison Sq. Pres. Church, New York.

Mere Preaching Will Not Draw It is not true that the church has drawn people by mere preaching in any age. Chrysostom was, they say, a great preacher, but it was not his preaching that filled the church. During the past summer the [illegible] York that have been fullest have, in most cases, had no preaching at all. Yet some of these churches were crammed full four times before 12 o'clock Sunday noon. What is the explanation? Why is it that this class of churches is full and the "preaching" churches empty? The explanation is that the former class offers what the people cannot get at home and the people have something to go to church for.

REV. J. F. CARSON

The other unfortunate class offers nothing beyond what the people can get at home, and church-going is therefore needless.

REV. B. F. DECOSTA.

Church of St. John the Evangelist, New York City.

A CHURCH SPIRITUALLY DEAD

The Simple Gospel Is Enough Observation teaches me that no attraction can be offered in the pulpit at all equal to the earnest preaching of the simple Gospel by a man whose soul is on fire with love for his fellow-man and love of God. If we cannot attract the people with the Gospel, "preached in the demonstration of the Spirit and of power," the case is hopeless, and great calamities must fall upon the people until they return to God. But the Gospel so preached will not fail. The people are hungry for it. The largest congregations are found in those churches where Christ is preached intelligently and faithfully to the people. Other attractions may draw for a time, but it is doubtful whether the results at all justify them. The church must quicken her zeal, rekindle her faith, and remember that "nothing conquers but the spirit of Christ."

REV. C. C. MCCABE.

Bishop M. E. Church.

The Church Needs New Energy and New Methods We must recognize the fact that Sunday is the only outing time for a large number of young men shut in stores and offices during the week. These young men have the best elements of character to build upon—they are the class we want to reach and bring into the churches. So I conceived the idea of making special provision for their wheels and giving them special welcome, and the result has been very gratifying. My idea is that if they go wheeling Sunday, why not make church their objective point, rather than a roadhouse or a resort of amusement-seekers?

REV. C. H. PARKHURST

The masses will come when the church wakes up, and gives them the fulness of the Spirit, and the fulness of Christ and the fulness of the Father. When the church works to save sinners under the real power of the Holy Ghost in a natural, straightforward, enthusiastic, businesslike way, there will be no trouble about bringing the people. The church is so wrapped up in modish punctilio, that she prefers good form to glorious salvation. This silly squeamishness should be displaced by as much common sense, direct display of truth, intense, intelligent and persistent effort, as the successful merchant evinces in conducting business. The old-time truth and love must be presented with the new-time energy and illustration. Preachers and people must be willing to sacrifice physical ease, worldly pleasure and present popularity, for the sake of the ultimate and eternal good of the people. Efforts must be adapted; people must be approached through things they are thinking as Jesus approached them. The Gospel must be presented in full sweep at close range and driven home with all the accuracy of science.

REV. N. D. HILLIS

REV. JAMES BOYD BRADY.
Grace Church, Worcester, Mass.

. . .

Kindness Will Draw the Multitude The best way to attract people to church is to be kind to them. Kindness is so unusual in a city like New York that it is sensational. Think of a man stopping in the midst of the hurry and self-interest of daily life here to be kind to somebody without expectation of worldly reward—simply to be kind to somebody as a matter of Christian principle! If every church member went about the world being kind to people, it would make a great sensation; it would startle the public; it would begin to revolutionize social conditions and do away with some of the misery in the world. The public would begin to wonder and investigate, and suspect that there was an actual factor for good behind the scenes, the underlying and animating principle of this kindness. And when the public had realized that, more people would come to church to find out about it all, and the plain Gospel of Christ would be sufficient attraction to hold them. Do not mistake me. I would not have Christians kind for the narrow purpose of gaining members for their churches. I would have them be kind because kindness is Christly. I would have them help suffering and relieve poverty for humanity's sake. Disinterestedness is so scarce in a large town that if you stop to perform a kind act you will be sure to make a sensation. Such sensationalism is legitimate. The keynote of such vast organisms as Dr. Russell H. Conwell's church in Philadelphia is sympathy. Church institutionalism is mere organized kindness, and in the long run this will bring people to church.

REV. EDWARD JUDSON.
Memorial Baptist Church, New York.

. . .

All Must Share in the Battle To-day every consideration that makes for the permanence of society asks that every patriot and citizen should formally and publicly unite with some one of the many churches of our city and country. The church has now entered upon one of the most trying periods of all history. The battle is to be fierce, even though the issue is not doubtful. During the Civil War, certain citizens declined to take sides either against slavery or for it, and shame now mantles the cheeks of their children. And when the sunset gun doth boom and the battle end, miserable indeed all those who meet Paul and John, Luther and Livingstone, Milton and Cromwell, the heroes and fathers of yesterday, having had no part in their battle, having received no scar and won no spur, having never sought to correct the weakness of the present church by lending it their example or influence. In this time, when the needs of the church are so many and so important, every patriot and citizen should join not one church, but many. Let the patriot and Christian swear fidelity to conscience and culture. Let him pledge anew his interest to all the forces that make for justice and mercy, for obedience to the citizen man's brother; to Christ, the soul's Saviour; to God, the soul's Father. REV. NEWELL DWIGHT HILLIS.
Plymouth Church, Brooklyn.

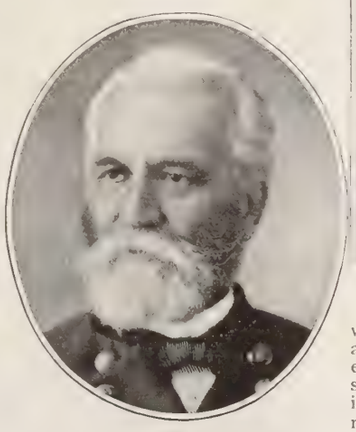
. . .

Plain Gospel, Good Singing, Free Seats The very plainest presentation of the fundamental truths of God's word. There is nothing the people love to hear so well as the Gospel. Carefully trained congregational singing of the very best hymns ever written, set to the best music, led by a choir who thoroughly understand how to lead. Sympathetic pastoral work, largely in the country by the pastor, in the city by men and women chosen because fitted for house to house visiting. Banish all thought from the house of God that it is a place for people to be on dress parade. No private ownership of property in God's house, seats as free as the Gospel.

L. H. COBB.
Secretary Congregational Church Building Society, New York.

. . .

Churches are Too Dignified Fill the pulpits. Sermons, like pudding, must have something in them. Make the sermon a thing of life and beauty. Put something in to glow, brighten, convince, subdue, "thoughts that breathe and words that burn." Don't funeralize religion. Don't whine, don't moan. Let us freshen up and get out of the old ruts. Let us surround our pulpits



MAJ.-GEN. O. O. HOWARD

REV. D. H. GREER

with heaven's fire and send our hearers away aroused, saying: "This man is in earnest. We must come and hear him again." Let us stop reading finished essays, choked full of theological terms which nobody understands and I doubt if anybody ever cares for. Let the preachers' be voices and not merely echoes. Why hold gay tournament with the scribes and Pharisees of Judea who have been dust and ashes for eighteen hundred years, and pass by the living scribes and Pharisees who fill our pews and pay our salaries? Hit hard. Don't smooth down stubborn texts to ears polite. Make things plain. Let us have humanity along with our divinity. Let us come down from our high platforms of empty dignity. Our churches have been dignified to death. Don't serve Christianity on ice.

REV. MADISON C. PETERS.
Bloomingdale Church, New York.

. . .

Three Things Needed in Our Churches In my judgment, the only legitimate methods of attracting people to church is to offer them: (a) A reverent, dignified and, at the same time, hearty service of worship; (b) Such preaching as appeals in about equal measure to the intelligence and conscience; (c) In the case of strangers a courteous reception.

New York. REV. W. R. HUNTINGTON.

. . .

Plain Religion in Modern Language There may be a large number of ways to "induce people to go to church," and a good many of them may be legitimate; but the only way I know anything about is to preach plain religion in the language of to-day, and try to make people feel that you really want to help them to be good.

New York City. REV. HENRY VAN DYKE.

. . .

Each Church Must Do its Best It may safely be said that that church will succeed best which does not aim at success, but simply tries as best it can to do the work which it has to do. REV. DAVID H. GREER.
St. Bartholomew's Church, New York.

. . .

The People Must Aid the Pastor A preacher who is attractive will attract. If he preaches what the people find worth hearing, the people willgo to hear him. People who never go to church and do not mean to go, are not likely to be induced to attend by any ordinary pulpit sensationalism and extraordinary pulpit sensationalism is disgusting to people who regularly attend the church. With a good preacher in the pulpit, giving sermons that are interesting, it is possible to induce people to go to church by inviting them as friends, after you have really made their acquaintance and shown some regard for them. This should be the work of the people and not the pastor. It should be done, not on a large scale by one or two, but by all, each one fastening to a single family or one or two families as may be. I know of no other way.

CYRUS NORTHROP.
President University of Minnesota.

. . .

The Church Should Instruct, Not Amuse A clearer and more elementary preaching of Gospel truth in its adaptation to present circumstances and kindly and affectionate ministrations to the people, in the spirit and after the example of our Lord, will sooner or later prevail over the present indifference or hostility to the church. I have no confidence in amateur shows as rivals to the professional show. The work of the church, as I apprehend it, is not to amuse, but to instruct in the way of righteousness, and bring men to life eternal. Its exalted mission will best be accomplished by unswerving faith in God, and in that faith preaching Christ by word and life. It is an insult to souls for whom Christ died to invite them to a show as a substitute for the Gospel.

REV. B. F. DECOSTA

REV. DR. L. H. COBB

REV. GEO. WILLIAMSON SMITH.
President Trinity College, Hartford.

. . .

Preach the "Golden Rule" Everywhere No one should weary of hearing the "same old story" of Divine love. One particular need to-day is the preaching of practical or ethical Christianity—the duty of man to man in the community. The "Golden Rule" is sadly neglected everywhere. Class distinctions should be obliterated in God's house, so that the poor in worldly goods may feel at home there. On one occasion, when in the Temple, our Lord quoted these words from Isaiah: "Mine house shall be called the House of Prayer for all people." A church should be open every day in the week for public and private worship. It should be well lighted from without and within.

REV. A. W. MANN.
General Missionary to the Deaf Mutes.

BISHOP McVICAR

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

A FAITHFUL LIFE . . . AND LIGHT

Nancy Rose, the Aged Lighthouse Keeper of Historic Stony Point

AS there are big and little churches, so there are big and little lighthouses. Some that meet the mighty waves of the ocean, just as the big churches meet the dangerous waves of wealth and luxury; and some that warn of treacherous rocks and shallows on the river's peaceful banks.

Of the smaller and latter kind is the lighthouse at Stony Point, N. Y. It first sent its rays across and up and down the Hudson in 1826. In those early days, nine lamps and a silver reflector stood guard over the lives and interests of the men and boats upon this waterway, but now one lamp, in a fine magnifying globe, takes their place. The lighthouse and the cottage in which the keeper lives, are built inside of the ancient fortifications, which were baptized with the blood of patriots and soldiers during the Revolutionary War.

A fitting keeper for this historic spot and light is Mrs. Nancy Rose, great-granddaughter of Jacob Rose, who was with Anthony Wayne when this fort was recaptured in 1779. The morning I visited the lighthouse and its keeper, was one of rare autumnal loveliness. The lighthouse stands white and solid on the hill top, 179 feet above sea level. The keeper's cottage is very pretty, painted white and gray, and surrounded by a picket fence, which incloses a little garden, in season full of red and white and yellow dahlias. Mrs. Rose came forward to meet me with a kindly smile. I found her to be a typical American woman, true even in the small dust of the balance to her public trust, and fulfilling with equal rectitude the no less important duties of Christian mother and housekeeper. In her seventy-fifth year she climbs the steep steps to the lighthouse tower with no uncertain tread, and even in the descent and ascent of the hill to the fog tower, where the fog bell is, she hardly uses her staff. Every Sabbath, summer and winter, she may be seen in her seat in the Presbyterian Church of Stony Point, for as she said: "I love to go up to the house of the Lord, because he has been my help and my stay through all the years of my life."

She led me into a parlor whose windows face the Hudson at one of its most beautiful, though most dangerous points, saying as she placed a chair for me: "I have just finished churning." She was as neat as if she had just finished dressing, and the whole house was exquisitely clean.

"You see," she continued, "the first thing I do in the morning after breakfast is to trim and clean the light." Our family have been keepers nearly ever since the lighthouse was built. Mr. Parkson, my uncle, who was a God-fearing, God-loving man, was keeper for years; upon his death my husband was appointed; when he died, leaving me with seven small children, it was secured for me, and even though it is a Government position, and subject to changes in politics, I have kept my place."

AT MIDNIGHT IN THE LIGHTHOUSE

"Because?" I queried.

"Because I have done my duty," she replied with a smile.

"Do you have to attend to the light at night?" I asked.

"Yes, it must be trimmed every night at twelve regularly. Now that they have the new light it is easy to work, but when they had the nine lamps it was of course more tiresome."

We walked down the hill to the river front to visit the bell-tower. The bell, during a fog, sends its warning note out every fifteen seconds.

"At first," said Mrs. Rose, "it took me an hour and a half to wind up the machinery that rang the bell; but now it is easier because of late improvements." When the fog is very thick, either Mrs. Rose or her son remain all night in the bell-tower. As we walked back to the house I learned of the faithful wife's loving care of the dying husband; and her brave effort to make both ends meet while the children were growing up.

As we stood together looking up at the lighthouse I said to myself: "It is not one of the big lights, but it has never failed the river craft since it was first lighted." Then, as I looked at the firm old hands that had trimmed the light for forty-two years, I thought: "A little light, a brave, loving woman, honored by her townsmen and women, living her duty, she deserves the Apostle's commendation: 'Thou doest faithfully whatsoever thou doest.'"

LILLIE L. MCKEE

NANCY ROSE'S COTTAGE

Bird-slayers

A regretable sign in the season's millinery is the abundance of feathers employed. The wholesale slaughter of birds is involved, and the probable extermination of several beautiful species. The entire garniture of one very popular turban consists of the breasts of birds. Very becoming are these bands of pearl-like gray or soft, pale brown to rosy faces and shining tresses. Hardly one of the gentle wearers but would bend in pity above a fluttering, blood-bespattered songster fallen at her feet; hardly one but would cry: "Oh, how cruel!" to the sportsman whose gun had brought the winged musician down. Yet, by wearing feathers, approval is set upon a worse thing than the sportsman's gun, which, at least, gives a bird a chance for its life. Trappers and gunners who hunt from mercenary motives are without a sportsman's scruples. With these, whether it be nesting-time or no, birds are slain for the money their lovely raiment brings the slayer. That our Father, who notes the sparrow's fall, may hasten the end of such wretched business is not beneath the dignity of Christian prayer.

Leaving the Old Home

A recent pathetic story relates the case of an aged, hard-working man, who, bereaved of his wife some twenty years ago, had raised his children up with all possible care, sending them to school and training them in pious ways. As soon as his oldest son was of sufficient age to be a help, he went away to live with a rich relative who had taken a fancy to him, leaving his father almost heart-broken, but unwilling to say a single word against his boy, his whole regret seeming to be centred in the one fact, that in his new home, the boy would not be under religious influences. This is an unusual instance, perhaps; but the case is too frequent, we fear, of sons and daughters, who, as soon as they are old enough to be a comfort and a help, forget obligations to those who have provided for them from helpless infancy. It is hardly honest, much less dutiful for the young, not to make some return in kind to those who have given them love, kindness and care. On the other hand, parents may well take a lesson from the fowls of the air, who, by a God-given instinct, push their young out of the nest, that they may learn to fly and that their wings may grow strong. If we hold our children so fast within the home that they never learn to battle or labor for themselves, the home will become a veritable nursery of weaklings.

MRS. NANCY ROSE

You'll Not Regret

You'll not regret, O, busy man,
[illegible]
You'll not regret, my gentleman,
[illegible]
When the one who heard is dead.

You'll not regret, my lady,
That you tenderly forgave,
[illegible]
Lieth quiet in his grave.

You'll not regret, O, mother,
Love and patience you bestow,
When your little lad or lassie
Sleeps beneath the winter's snow.

—M. L. A.

Vacant Organ Seats

VACANT organ seats in our country churches suggest the question, "Are our young girls 'serving God as they have opportunity' in this particular sphere?" In our little church, in a village where there are several accomplished young lady pianists, not one of them can be regularly depended upon to play simple pieces for the Sunday School or church services. They leave this duty—which should be a privilege—to the busy wives, already overburdened with household cares, of our church deacons or elders. Young ladies, sometimes I think a good training for those who are to play on the harps of heaven is the making of music in little country churches and little neglected Sunday Schools. Making music in the home circle is, too, I think, another way of learning how to make music in heaven.

[illegible] L. B. THOMSON

Work of Blind Girls

A very serious industrial problem confronts the blind girl who is left homeless and helpless by the death of her parents and guardians. Even though she graduates a cultured young lady from an educational institution for the blind, the question is most perplexing. Mr. F. E. Cleveland, Secretary of the Connecticut Board of Education for the Blind, sends us a letter by General Goodrich, of Hartford, Conn., endorsing the excellent work done by blind girls in the printing department of the Industrial Home for the Blind in Hartford. A bright magazine, Talks and Tales, is put forth by the institution at $1 a year, the proceeds being applied to furnishing homes and occupations for the blind. It tells what successful blind people are doing, and shows what they can do. Besides, it carries the Gospel to the blind.

Mr. and Mrs. Wu's Rambles

One of the quaintest and most interesting sights of Washington may be witnessed—if one is an early riser—at about six in the morning, when Mr. Wu, the Chinese minister, his wife, and Mrs. Yung Kwai, his interpreter's wife, are returning from an autumnal exploration of the outskirts of Washington. Mr. Wu is somewhat of a botanist and is very fond of these early rambles with the ladies of his household. The trio wear full national costume, Mrs. Wu and Mrs. Kwai's dress consisting of blue silk tunics reaching below their knees, and wide black silk trousers similar to Mr. Wu's. Mr. Wu's tunic is usually of black silk, and on his little skull cap is the red button which denotes rank. The ladies wear no hats, Mrs. Wu, however, carries an infinitesimal parasol. Their feet are very small. The quaintest part of the whole procession is the wheeled chair, like a baby's perambulator, which Mr. Wu pushes along and in which the ladies ride as they weary of walking.

THE TOUCHSTONE

A NEW SERIAL STORY

BY HELEN SHIPTON

CHAPTER V.

The Missing Letter

ON the first day when Douglas was allowed to go out of doors, the young man found himself strolling alone up the quiet lane which seemed like an extension of the very small garden of the Dower House, so lonely was it, and so unlikely to be frequented by any one but the friends of the Hamertons.

It was almost a surprise, at that hour in the morning, to meet a stout gray haired gentleman also strolling along, with an air of going nowhere in particular; or quite a surprise when he suddenly came to a stop, and held out his hand with a

"A SIDE DOOR OPENED AND CELIA CAME OUT" beaming smile of delight and astonishment.

"Bless my soul, Lingard!" he said, "who'd have thought of meeting you in this way? Not that you aren't most welcome, you know!—but you did say you weren't coming till next week—or at least I thought so!"

The blank surprise on the young man's face was gradually reflected upon that of the newcomer.

"Eh? What?—don't it? I beg your pardon," he said. "I took you for a friend of mine."

"My name is Lingard," said Douglas slowly and with something of an effort. "I think—you must have taken me for my brother."

"What! Are you Caryl Lingard's brother? To be sure, I knew he had a brother, but he did not tell me you were down here. Perhaps you have only lately come?"

"I have been here about five weeks."

"Indeed! I wish I had known it. I must have seemed most inhospitable, but it was your brother's fault. We'll scold him for it when he comes down. When I first caught sight of you I made sure he had arrived a week before his time, but of course I can see a difference now. I was just going to ask him if he had been ill, when it dawned upon me that I had mistaken my man."

"Caryl and I were always considered alike," said the young man rather mechanically. He was trying to think. This was evidently an intimate friend of his brother's, whose very name he did not know. How could he hide from this man that Caryl and he had had no communication with each other for more than a year? Surely honesty did not demand that he should let a stranger know that they had quarreled, especially as, strictly speaking, they had not?

A twinge of embarrassment made him, as often happens, a little more talkative than usual.

"I have been fortunate enough to find friends here," he said. "Mr. Hamerton proves to be an old school-fellow of mine—and Caryl's. I have been staying at his house for the last few days. I was out of sorts, and he was good enough to take me in and see me put to rights."

"I am afraid the cure is not quite complete yet," said the other, with a keen glance at the young man's pale face. "Don't let me keep you standing here. I will walk with you, if you care to turn back now toward the Dower House. Yes! they are kind-hearted folks, the Hamertons, and I don't wonder at the people in the place for still looking up to them, or for bearing a little grudge at me for having turned them out of the Hall."

The last words were a relief to Douglas, for they told him at least the name of the man who was speaking to him. He had not been in familiar talk with the Hamertons for the past few days without having learned who was the rich manufacturer who had bought their father's house and land, and, according to his lights, seemed most anxious to be kind and friendly toward them.

"Of course you know that your brother is coming to my house next week," said Mr. Allardyce, as they walked up the lane together. "And you will have heard from him, of course, the story of our first meeting, but how much I owe him, first and last, he will not have told you, for I am sure he never thinks of it himself. I am more thankful than I can say to have made such a friend, to stand by my boy when I'm gone."

He paused as if expecting some comment, but Douglas was silent, loth to pretend to knowledge, or to admit that he did not know what his new acquaintance was talking about.

"We are going to spring a surprise on the county, your brother and I," said the older man briskly, after a moment. "But if he hasn't told you about that yet, I had better not talk about it either, since it mustn't be mentioned to the Hamertons at present, and you might find it awkward if they began asking questions."

Still Douglas did not know to what the other could be alluding, and he asked no question, though he had hardly been attending sufficiently to gather that he was being warned off from a secret. He was beginning to realize the fact that very shortly his brother would appear in this neighborhood—that they must inevitably meet, and either proclaim their estrangement among all these strangers, or profess an affection that they were far from feeling.

He was so deep in unpleasant thoughts that no name but one would have had much chance of catching his ear, but when he came back to the present it was to discover that Mr. Allardyce was jocosely cautioning him not to fall in love with "Miss Ceelie!" "I have told your brother the same thing," he said. "She is not to be had—not to be spared from here at any price. I'm too old, I'm sorry to say, and I suppose my boy Frank is too young, or I declare one or other of us would have to marry her, and keep her to ourselves."

"Insufferable old cad!" thought Douglas, and perhaps would hardly have been able to control himself to walk peaceably beside the great man of the village if at that moment a sudden turn had not brought them upon the gateway of the Dower House.

"Well!" said Mr. Allardyce good-naturedly, "here we are, and I'm sure you have walked far enough for an invalid. Tell Hamerton I couldn't come in this morning. I shall hope to see something of you as soon as you're well again—when your brother comes down, anyway. My best respects to Miss Ceelie."

Douglas turned in at the gate with the very briefest farewell of which courtesy would permit, passed round the house to the sheltered garden at the side of it, and sat down on a bench beneath a group of blossoming lilacs, feeling that the May sunshine had suffered eclipse.

Perhaps because he was still weak and easily shaken out of his self-control, elementary feelings came uppermost and

(Continued on following page).

SURE TO ASK

The Kind of Coffee When Postum is Well Made.

"Three great coffee drinkers were my old school friend and her two daughters.

"They are always complaining and taking medicine. I determined to give them Postum Food Coffee instead of coffee when they visited me, so without saying anything to them about it, I made a big pot of Postum the first morning, using four heaping teaspoons to the pint of water and let it boil twenty minutes, stirring down occasionally.

"Before the meal was half over, each one passed up the cup to be refilled, remarking how fine the coffee was. The mother asked for a third cup and inquired as to the brand of coffee I used. I didn't answer her question just then, for I had heard her say a while before that she didn't like Postum Food Coffee unless it was more than half old-fashioned coffee.

"After breakfast I told her that the coffee she liked so well at breakfast was pure Postum Food Coffee, and the reason she liked it was because it was properly made, that is, it was boiled long enough to bring out the flavor. I have been brought up from a nervous, wretched invalid, to a fine condition of physical health by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

"I am doing all I can to help the world out of coffee slavery, to Postum freedom, and have earned the gratitude of many, many friends." Myra J. Tuller, 1023 Troost Ave. Kansas City, Mo.

Children

in school? Then you have often heard them complain of headache; have frequently noticed how they go about in a listless, indifferent way, haven't you?

Scott's Emulsion

does grand things for such children. It brings a healthy color to their cheeks, strengthens their nerves, and gives them the vigor that belongs to youth. All delicate children should take it.

50c. and $1.00, all druggists.
SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, New York.

"You Never Miss the Water Till the Well Runs Dry."

So it is with health; we never realize its value until it is gone. When old time strength and vigor are wanting it is the best to look at once to the blood. Purify it by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and restored appetite, perfect digestion, steady nerves and even temper will prove that it is bringing back the glow of perfect health.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

If You

OXYDONOR APPLIED

are a sufferer from disease in any form—if you have taken drugs and nostrums ad nauseum, you can find certain and permanent cure in the OXYDONOR. This is not faith nor theory; it is an accomplished fact attested to by thousands. This instrument cures all forms of disease, incipient or chronic, in Nature's own manner, by placing the body in a condition that assists in the absorption of oxygen, the great vitalizing force of this element is diffused throughout the system and disease is conquered. It simply cannot exist in an organization that appropriates oxygen in large quantities. The OXYDONOR is small, compact, and by merely applying it during sleep, a complete cure is effected. Send for our book "GRATEFUL REPORTS," containing hundreds of letters from clergymen, lawyers, business-men, etc., who have been cured.

REV. THOS. J. OLIVER CURRAN, St. George's Church, 76th St. & Drexel Ave., Chicago, Ill., July 8th, 1899, writes:

"I have used the OXYDONOR on myself for Catarrh, Colds, Nervousness and Sleeplessness and found it to work like magic.

"I am positive from what I know it has done for myself and others, that it will do all you claim."

Yours sincerely, THOS. J. OLIVER CURRAN,
(In charge of St. George's Mission)

CAUTION! Imitations of OXYDONOR are dangerous to use. Refuse to accept them. Dr. Sanche is the inventor and originator, and has obtained final decision in Supreme Court in Washington, D. C., against imitators. We are operating under the ONLY PATENTS that have been granted on THIS PROCESS and THESE INSTRUMENTS. Nothing can be gained or saved by purchasing spurious articles.

Send for prices. Our productions are selling rapidly in this country. We want persons in all sections to sell for us. Many giving only part of their time are making $100 to $200 per month. Others giving all their time are making much more.

DR. H. SANCHE & COMPANY,
261 Fifth Avenue, New York City.
57 State Street, Chicago, Ill.
61 Fifth Street, Detroit, Mich.
Canadian Branch: 2268 St. Catherine Street, Montreal, P.Q.

ONE CENT
for each hour and a

TUXEDO Oil Heater

will make your "cold room" a warm room. No bother, no muss, no smell, no smoke. If your dealer doesn't keep it, send us $4.50 and we will send you one freight paid. Illus. Lamp Catalogue, 150 designs, sent free on application.

Tuxedo Oil Heater

HOLMES, BOOTH & HAYDENS,
37 Park Place, NEW YORK

FACTORY: Waterbury, Conn. Established 1853

SOLID OAK DESK FREE

5 ft. 2 in. high, 2 ft. 6 in. wide. Just go among your friends and neighbors and take orders for Folsom's Teas, Spices, Baking Powder, Coffees, Extracts, Soups, Etc. 30 lbs. for this OAK DESK. New Catalogue sent by mail on receipt of your name and address. We ship the goods and allow you time to deliver goods to your customers before sending us payment. We Pay the Express.

G. A. FOLSOM & CO., Dept. S
192 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

REAL OLD VIOLINS
WRITE TO AND OBTAIN CATALOGUE OF August Gemunder & Sons
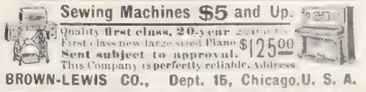
EST'D 1838 42 East 23d St. N.Y.

Sewing Machines $5 and Up.



Quality first class, 20 year guarantee. First-class new large-sized Piano $125.00 Sent subject to approval. This Company is perfectly reliable. Address

BROWN-LEWIS CO., Dept. 15, Chicago, U. S. A.

Dipper, Strainer, coarse and fine; Funnel, Fruit Jar Filler and Clothes Sprinkler combined in one article. Sample free to agents. Other fast sellers. Richardson Mfg. Co., 6th St., Bath, N. Y.

. . The Touchstone . .

(Continued from last page)

expressed themselves as simply as a child protests dislikes and distrusts that its elders for the most part hide even from themselves.

"I cannot bear that Caryl should come here," he found himself saying passionately under his breath. "I don't hate him now, God knows! but I shall hate him if he comes here . . . . he will fall in love with her—that blatant old idiot would put it into his head if it did not come there of itself—and I shall have to look on and see it. . . . I have nothing to offer her. I shall not dare to think that she could ever be anything but my friend: but he will go further than that, and every one will think that he has the right. They will accept him as Martin's schoolmate and my brother, and he will make love to her and win her and marry her, and I shall have to look on!"

A side door opened and Celia came out of the house, standing for an instant with one hand shading her eyes from the sun as they searched the lane and the garden: and then coming across the grass towards him with evident intent to scold him for having stayed out too long.

A grim smile played round Douglas's firmly-closed lips as he realized that he had been marrying this gracious creature in imagination to a man whom as yet she had not so much as seen; but the impression was not to be driven away by common-sense.

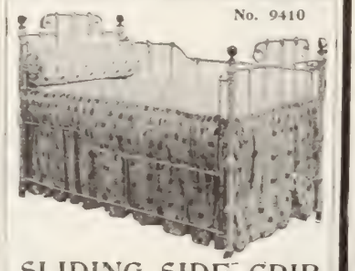
He took Celia's reproof so meekly and spiritlessly that she thought he must be tired indeed, and ordered him indoors to rest; and he obeyed without making excuse to stay and discuss the contents of every flower-bed, and the behavior of the tame doves that haunted the garden, as he would assuredly have done an hour ago.

And as Douglas went something suddenly recalled to his mind that letter which he had written to Caryl on that night when he had felt so unnecessarily and unreasonably ill, and which he had not thought of since. How glad he was now that he had not sent it! Certainly Caryl would not have understood it.

Then it occurred to him to wonder what had become of it. His recollections of that night were of the most confused—had he burnt it, or only meant to do so? He could remember struggling to write, and giving up before he had finished all that he had meant to say, but after that his memory was a blank.

Well, if it was still extant it must be destroyed at once: that was all: and the young man made a thorough search through both the little rooms that were still considered his, and especially among the few personal belongings that had been sent after him from High Ashes. But the letter was not to be found, and he came to the conclusion at last that he had destroyed it, as he dimly remembered having intended to do.

(To be Continued).



No. 9410

SLIDING SIDE CRIB

$7.90—... and your ... satisfied.

Made entirely of steel, malleable iron and brass.

... but hitherto found only in the most expensive ... They make the crib stronger and allow of its standing close to a bed.

... and ... Weight ... pounds.

BARCALO & ROLL MFG. CO.,
Buffalo, N. Y.

Mr. Frank A. Vanderlip

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury

Tells entertainingly the story of our prosperity, and with facts, figures and diagrams shows what we have to show for our year's work.

Our New Prosperity

In this week's number of

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

(OF PHILADELPHIA)

Thanksgiving Number—32 pages and a Handsome Colored Cover

THE HUNTER. Mr. Chambers' heroine is one of the sweetest and most lovable he has ever drawn; and in this fine, subtle love story of outdoor life she is in exquisite harmony with all of the beautiful scenes the author describes so well. By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

AN ELECTRICAL TRANSACTION This is a timely tale of the South African Cable, interesting in that it shows the ease with which war news can be manufactured and the stock market turned upside down. By ROBERT BARR

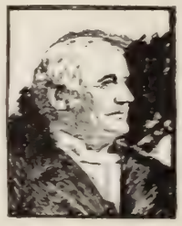
THE LYRIC SEER. By EDWIN MARKHAM Mr. Markham's latest poem.

A SONG OF JOY. By John Luther Long

OLD THANKSGIVIN'. By Joe Lincoln

THANKSGIVING ON CRAWFISH BAYOU One of Mrs. Stuart's pictures of life in the far South. Strong in story interest, and brimming over with kindly humor. By RUTH McENERY STUART

Lincoln as Candidate and President



In this paper Colonel A. K. McClure, the veteran editor, friend and political ally of President Lincoln, gives his personal recollections of Mr. Lincoln's Presidential campaign, and tells some characteristic anecdotes illustrative of his greatness and his sterling Americanism.

By COLONEL A. K. McCLURE

NO INCREASE IN PRICE—5 CENTS THE COPY

Your newsman will serve you regularly, or we will mail it to any address every week for five months on receipt of only $1.00

THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA, PA

Church Hymns and Gospel Songs

Adopted by Mr. Moody's Northfield Conferences, Ocean Grove Association, and other prominent assemblies this season.

... Send for list of Phonograph Records of Gospel Songs made by Ira D. Sankey.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

$18.00 a Week and expenses to good par... Permanent position. ... can find profitable employment for part time. Give ... R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore.

STEREOPTICONS Moving Picture Machines & Films

30,000 Lantern Slides for Sale or Rent

Send for Bargain List and New Illustrated Hymns and Songs. Lantern slides made and colored.

Williams, Brown & Earle, 919 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

ENTERTAINMENTS

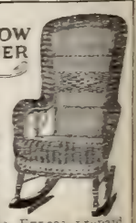
For CHURCHES and SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Finest Magic Lanterns, Stereopticons ...

McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., New York

PLAYS Dialogues, Speakers for School, Club and Parlor. Catalogue free. T. S. DENISON, Publisher, Chicago, Ill.

EARN A WILLOW ROCKER BY SELLING 25 lbs. Baker's Teas, Etc.,



or a cheaper Rocker for 20 lbs., or Ladies' Nickel Chatelaine Watch and Pin, 15 lbs.; Ladies' or Gents' Silver Watch, 25 lbs.; Ladies' or Gents' Gold Watch, 50 lbs.; Boys' or Girls' Bicycle, ... Ladies' or Gents' Bicycle, 10 lbs.; Camera, 3 lbs.; Gold Ring or Crescent Camera, ... Peek-a-Boo Camera, 2 lbs. Express prepaid to any point on a cash order. Write for catalogue.

W. G. BAKER Dept. 76, Springfield, Mass.

If You Have Your Share of $18,000 ahead of you, and the momentum of hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of magazine and newspaper advertising behind you, and the unique prestige of

The Ladies' Home Journal
AND
The Saturday Evening Post

with you, you should be a pretty enthusiastic and successful subscription agent.

We will allow a liberal commission for every subscription sent in by a duly appointed agent. The sum of $18,000 to be distributed among 764 agents is simply a premium on success. This premium money will be paid on April 15, 1900. Full particulars will be sent immediately upon receipt of your application.

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

PIANOS

EASY PAYMENTS.

It is easy to obtain a piano our way. Where no dealer sells them, we will send a piano for a small cash payment, balance in monthly payments. Three years' time to complete purchase if desired. We would like to explain our method. Will send piano guaranteeing satisfaction, or piano may be returned to us at our expense for railway freights both ways. Our CATALOGUE, FREE for the asking, tells all about them. Special prices and full information, if you write.

IVERS & POND PIANO CO.,
110 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

Prince of Peace. Concert Exercise for S. S., by Hartsough & Fillmore. Beautiful music and recitations. 5c., 50c. per dozen, post-paid.

Recitations and Dialogues. No. 4. 10 cts.

Santa Claus' Charm. A Christmas Cantata by Chas. H. Gabriel. Bright music and dialogue, 30 cts.; $3.00 per dozen, not prepaid.

Mrs. Santa Claus and the Christmas Dolls. By Mrs. J. M. Ross and J. B. Herbert. A beautiful cantata for primary grades, 30 cts., $3.00 per dozen, not prepaid.

Prince of Peace. Anthem by Herbert, 10 cts.

Thy Watchmen shall lift up the Voice. Anthem by Danks, 10 cents.

The above are all new. Our Christmas Music is unsurpassed. We supply every need. Full descriptive catalogue sent on application. A sample of our monthly MUSICAL MESSENGER sent free.

FILLMORE BROS., 119 W. 6th St., Cincinnati. 40 Bible House, New York.

THE NATURAL BODY BRACE

CURES AILMENTS PECULIAR TO WOMEN

COSTS YOU NOTHING TO TRY IT.

Thousands of letters like this prove our assertions:

"Curtis, Miss., Sept 1st, 1898. The brace I bought of you two years ago did all you claimed for it. It cured me of the worst forms of illness peculiar to my sex. Before using the Brace I suffered with prolapsus, periodical cramps, inflammation, constipation, headache, and other things of 20 years' standing. I had spent hundreds of dollars for medicines and doctors before trying the Brace.

"Mrs. Susie Woodard."

Send for full information with booklet, mailed free in plain, sealed envelope. Address

THE NATURAL BODY BRACE CO.,
Box 171 Salina, Kansas

SIMPLE IN CONSTRUCTION—COMFORTABLE ADJUSTABLE TO ANY FIGURE.

A Youthful Girl Preacher

MELESIN K. SOWLES, a girl of sixteen years, is probably the youngest woman preacher in the world. In June last she preached a sermon at the yearly meeting of the Baptist

A SIXTEEN-YEAR-OLD PREACHER

Church, Honey Creek, Wis., and she has been granted a license to preach at the quarterly meetings of that church. Miss Sowles' home is at Prospect, Wis., where her father is pastor of a Baptist church. She has spoken frequently from her father's pulpit during the summer. Before she was ten years old she evinced a great interest in theology, and it is said that she outlined a sermon without assistance. She is a phenomenon of precocity, and many come long distances to hear her.

Mission Boys Drowned in Alaska

From Kodiak, Alaska, a missionary reader writes us that a sad accident occurred there recently. It was the first fatal accident in the history of the Baptist Orphanage. "Saturday, Sept. 16, our faithful-man-of-all-work, Conrad Egerter, went with four of the mission boys in a boat, about a mile, for a small load of hay. When almost home, a sudden gust of wind capsized the boat. Their calls were heard, but no boat was near and before help could arrive, Conrad and Michael Oustegoff had disappeared. The others clung to the overturned boat and were rescued. The bodies were recovered and the funeral was held in the chapel, Sunday, Sept. 17. Both were good Christian lads."

A Life Saver's Reward

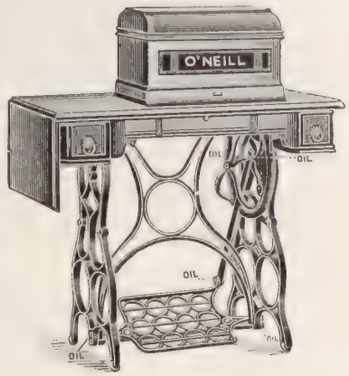
The Life-Saving Department has just awarded to Rasmus S. Midgett, Surfman No. 1, of the Gull Shore Life-Saving Station on the North Carolina Coast, a gold medal for an act of "extreme and heroic daring," which Mr. Kimball, superintendent of our Life-Saving Service says has never been surpassed. Patrolling his beat one night, the surfman found evidences of a wreck, heard voices calling, and running in the direction of the cries, saw a disabled ship close to the shore and on it several people. There was no time to summon help; as the great breakers receded, he shouted to a man to leap forward, caught him and dragged him up on the beach before the next breaker could overtake him. This was repeated until seven men were saved. The remaining three were too exhausted to make the leap but the surfman dragged the half drowned creatures from the wreck and separately rescued them, each journey being at the imminent peril of his life. This is not the first time Surfman No. 1 has distinguished himself. If Christians who are God's life-savers showed one and all such courage and determination in saving men and women from sin, would so many precious souls be lost?

"Pride goeth before a fall." Some people ridicule the idea of disease, neglect health, and their whole system becomes deranged. Do not delay but take Hood's Sarsaparilla now and avoid a fall.

O'NEILL'S

Importers and Retailers

Dry Goods, Fancy Goods, Cloaks, Costumes, House-Furnishing Goods, Men's and Boys' Clothing, etc.



A Reliable ..... Sewing Machine

Something that every Housewife should own

If you haven't one, save your money, and buy an "O'Neill." It doesn't cost much, is thoroughly reliable in every way, and will save you an immense amount of work. The "O'Neill" is made for us by one of the largest sewing-machine manufacturers in the United States, and is guaranteed by us for five years. Here are the prices:

The "O'Neill" B,	three drawers, nicely finished,	$13.80
The "O'Neill" No. 1,	elegantly finished in Oak or Walnut, 3 drawers,	15.00
The "O'Neill" No. 2,	Oak or Walnut, 5 drawers,	16.80
The "O'Neill" No. 3,	Oak or Walnut, 7 drawers,	17.20
	With Novelty Drop Head,	19.60

A Complete Set of Attachments Goes with Each Machine

THREE GOOD REASONS WHY WE SELL THE "O'NEILL" SO CHEAP

FIRST—Because we intend to do the sewing-machine business of New York.
SECOND—Because we employ no expensive agents.
THIRD—Because we're satisfied with a small profit.

This Machine is Superior in Every Way, and Cheaper in Price than any other sold in New York

H. O'NEILL & CO., Sixth Ave., 20th to 21st St., New York

TWO WEEKS' TRIAL FREE

OF THE SLAYTON INSULATION CURE FOR

Rheumatism and Sleeplessness.

Do you suffer with these ailments, or with neuralgia, sciatica, pains in muscles or bones, with nervous weakness or lessened vitality? If so we invite you to make a free trial of our treatment. The great Dr. Brown-Sequard's discovery suggested the method. He proved that in certain conditions of the system there is an excessive and dangerous flow of electricity from the body to the earth, resulting in the above diseases. To stop this flow by insulation is the work of the Slayton Electric Switch Glass Caster, and the Slayton Spun Glass and Silk Insole.

We do not guarantee a cure; but we know that our treatment is daily bringing relief and permanent cure to thousands of cases which seemed desperate. We have hundreds of testimonials from ministers, doctors, lawyers and other persons of highest culture. The following is a fair sample:

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 26, 1899.

THE SLAYTON ELECTRIC CASTER CO., Tecumseh, Mich.

Gentlemen:—After trial of the casters you sent me, I have no excuse for returning them as I am certainly very much improved since putting them on the bed. I have a very peculiar and stubborn case of rheumatism, which has always been worse in summer than in winter. I had already commenced to have the swelling and stiff joints that come on every summer, but after four weeks' use of the casters, the swelling and stiffness is hardly noticeable. Thank you for your liberal treatment in my case. I hope to give you an even better report in the near future.

Very respectfully yours, GEO. E. REED.

FREE TRIAL FOR TWO WEEKS. We will gladly send any one a full set of the SLAYTON ELECTRIC SWITCH CASTERS and SLAYTON INSULATING INSOLES on receipt of 25c. for postage and packing, or separately, 17c. for the Casters and 8c. for the Insoles. Try them for two weeks according to directions. If they do not help you, return them by mail and no charge will be made. If they do help you (and they almost certainly will), send us $3 for the Casters and $2 for the Insoles. These articles can be used separately with great benefit, but to secure the greatest relief both should be used. Be sure to state whether Casters are to be placed on iron, brass or wooden bedsteads, and the size of Shoes Insoles are to fit.

THE SLAYTON ELECTRIC CASTER CO., Ltd., 206 HIGH ST., TECUMSEH, MICH.

PAT. DEC. 30, 90.

"What to Give John?"

The annual Christmas quandary. In the endless maze of the stores you're distracted—don't waste time and patience; just send for a Paragon Patent Folding Coin Purse.

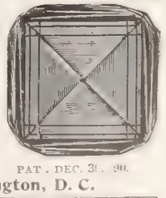
It is neat, durable and folds perfectly flat in your pocket. Ask your dealer for it, or I will send you sample at following prices, postpaid:

		Calf.	Seal.
No. 011 holds $6.00 in silver	$.25
" 11 " 6.00	" .40	$.75	$ .90
" 13 x " 10.00	" .50	.90	1.25



PAT. DEC. 31, 90.

JAMES S. TOPHAM, Sole M'f'r, 1232 Penna. Ave., Washington, D. C.

SILK REMNANTS FOR CRAZY WORK

A big package of BEAUTIFUL SILK REMNANTS, 100 to 125 pieces, all or fully trimmed, selected from large accumulations of silk cuttings only adapted for all fancy work. We give more than double any other offer; remnants of all large sizes, in beautiful colors and designs. Sent for 25c. coin or stamps. Address

PARIS SILK CO., Box 3045, New York City, N. Y.

The Wise Mother's Way

By Margaret E. Sangster

KATHLEEN called me a few moments ago to look at her jelly. She must have been very busy putting up fruits when the strawberries came, and her pantry shows a goodly row of lucent jars, filled with jams and conserves for use next winter. All through the summer and autumn Kathleen has been on the watch to prepare her fruit when at its best, and to preserve, or sweet pickle it for the days when hungry boys and girls find mother's canned fruits, syrups, and jellies very delicious eating, with mother's home-made bread for their dinners and suppers. In some localities women have proved their business ability by building up a trade in home-made preserves, and not long since I met a bright-eyed and clever girl who was taking orders, from ladies in her neighborhood, for a special kind of marmalade of which she knew the secret, and for which her house was famous, her grandmother and mother having made it before her.

I SAW Elsie's bright little head bobbing under the trees awhile back, and I learned that she was picking fall pippins for her mother, and that the child was to be paid for her labor. That struck me as very fair and sensible, besides being encouraging to the little girl, who has a small bank of her own in which she is saving her pennies. When the amount reaches five dollars, this is to be deposited in the town savings bank for Elsie, and she is to keep on adding to her nest egg as she can, until she is grown up. To inculcate thrift and frugality is an all-important lesson in child training, though we often overlook it, and also to show children the value of small sums, and the way little bits count up into great totals is worth doing by thoughtful parents.

CHILDREN should be taught something besides mere hoarding, for to spend judiciously and to give generously are as much duties as not to waste, and to lay up in store. From earliest years our little men and women should be encouraged by precept and example to devote a certain regular sum, no matter how small, to their church collections and to benevolence. If a mother will give a child an allowance weekly (for, whenever it can be managed, a child ought to have a personal allowance), then, in the proportion of the tenth, a specified weekly amount should be the child's own voluntary contribution to the Sunday School treasury, the fresh-air fund, or to the missionary box. As our children grow older, both girls and boys should be taught that money is a responsibility; scrupulous honesty should be exacted, and if Willie or Maggie overdraws the allowance given either, mother should not hasten to the child's relief. One mother punishes her children when they are naughty, untidy, or rude, by fining them; taking a penny or two from their weekly fund as a penalty for wrongdoing. She says the plan works well. I do not myself like it, but I fear, if discipline were left to me, I should never be very successful, for I am always on the side of the little offenders, and have reached the place in life where I believe in gentleness as much more potential than harshness. Example is better than precept with children.

How to make our children love the Bible? This question comes to me in three letters brought by one mail. They will never love it unless they read it, and they will not form the habit of reading it if it is left to their own discretion. Read the Bible daily with the young people, or let them read aloud to you in course, omitting nothing, reading the Old and the New Testament alike. Encourage in them a familiar knowledge of Bible characters; reward them if they learn verses and recite them by heart. Prompt them to read the Bible through in a given time, and have family prayers daily. Insensibly the dear Book will become a lamp to their feet and a light to their path; its words will be their wealth, and its spirit will guide their lives.

You Can Play Them Without Learning

church purposes. Church Choirs Zobo Bands can play any piece of music in all parts by ear or by note as preferred.

READ WHAT PASTORS AND ORGANISTS SAY ABOUT OUR INSTRUMENTS.

CAN BE PLAYED BY ANYONE WHO CAN HUM A TUNE—NO LEARNING.

WITH A FULL BAND A GRAND PIPE ORGAN EFFECT CAN BE OBTAINED.

Sing into the mouth piece. Zobo does the rest.

99 CTS. SPECIAL THIRTY-DAY OFFER. Vocalists. the Musical Marvel of the Zobo Cornet.

STRAUSS MFG. CO., 369 Broadway, New York City.

FREE COSTS NOTHING

But the asking to get our new 1900 Catalogue of either PIANOS OR ORGANS

At wholesale prices, thus saving you every penny usually pocketed by agents and dealers.

SEND TODAY FOR OUR NEW

1900 Coupon { It saves you $100 on an / " " " $200 on a } ORGAN. PIANO.

CASH OR INSTALMENTS.

30days' trial. No money in advance. Safe delivery at your depot insured. Instalments. Easy payments. Our new dollar certificate shows you how to get an Organ or Piano for little or nothing. Remember, our Catalogue costs you nothing, and will positively save you money.

PIANOS, $155 UP

ORGANS, $21.75 UP.

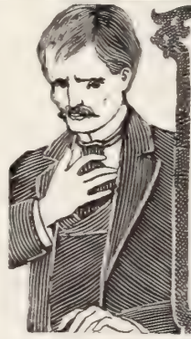
We furnish with each Piano a $10 Lard wood Piano Chair free, also Plush Scarfs and $10 worth of the latest sheet music. Complete Organ outfit, free. Our factory, with its enormous capacity, enables us to sell you a high-grade instrument at a figure much below that of any other company in the world.

INCORPORATED FOR 50 YEARS.

WE LEAD, OTHERS FOLLOW.

Beethoven Piano and Organ Co.,

Box 741 WASHINGTON, N. J



Dr. Bull's

COUGH SYRUP

cures Consumption—the dread scourge of this country. It's easily brought on—rain and snow storms, changeable weather, carelessness. Then you think of stopping the cough. Take Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in time—don't neglect yourself a moment. Have a bottle on hand and you can save your life. This is plain, proved truth—a trial will show it. Has cured thousands—it will cure you —but be sure you get the genuine.

Refuse Substitutes.

A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Bull's Pills cure Sick Headache and Constipation. Trial, 20 for 5 cts. Dealers or mail.

RUPTURE CURED

The Improved Elastic Truss is the only Truss in existence that is worn with absolute comfort night and day, and it retains the rupture under the hardest exercise or severest strain, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure. Comfortable Belts made to reduce corpulency. The use of these belts reduces your size and leaves no room for surplus fat to accumulate. They can be used after any operations. Our goods are not sold by agents or druggists. Send for free pamphlets to the Improved Elastic Truss Co., 768 Broadway, N. Y. Established 18 years.

WANTED—A case of bad health that RIPANS will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word RIPANS on the package and accept no substitute. RIPANS 10 for 5 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples of one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce Street, New York.

DRY BRONCHITIS.

From Dr. Hunter's Lectures on the Progress of Medical Science in Lung Diseases.

[illegible] phlegm, causing great difficulty in breathing.

Of all the forms of [illegible] most [illegible]. In [illegible] says I assume, "fully one-half of the people are found, on careful examination, to have thickening of some portion of the mucous lining of the [illegible] by any [illegible]. In the most [illegible] of lung complaints. From a [illegible] cough: it may be only a trifling coughing spell in the morning; they have a chilly sensation in the [illegible] and toward evening are feverish.

[illegible] always a feeling of more or less tightness and oppression in the chest, which is [illegible] from time to time by coughing up a quantity of the tough jelly like matter before described. Sometimes the cough comes on in paroxysms attended by great oppression and distress, like asthma. On inquiry of a person so affected if he has any lung trouble, he will almost certainly answer, No, and yet during [illegible] will [illegible] has used [illegible] this jelly-like mucus half a dozen times.

Here we have a lung disease which directly tends to consumption, and has most of the symptoms of that disease, and yet is not consumption at all. When it ends fatally, as it often does, an examination of the lungs reveals neither tubercles, ulceration, nor the bacilli of [illegible].

In such cases death generally results from suffocation caused by a sudden attack of congestion, which, supervening on the chronic disease, fills the lungs with viscid mucus that the patient, in his weakened condition, is unable to raise.

Bronchitis is not generally treated with success, because the proper remedies are not applied to the diseased tubes within the lungs. I had the good fortune some years ago to discover and successfully apply a local treatment for this and other lung complaints. I made the air which the patient breathes the carrier of the [illegible] about way through the stomach and general system. I introduce them directly into the air [illegible] and all the danger lies, and I know by ample [illegible] there is for the cure of any form of bronchial or lung diseases.

During the past 56 years I have treated many thousands of cases, and, owing to the very large increase in my practice, I have associated with me my son, Dr. E. W. Hunter, under the name of Dr. Robert Hunter Association.

This arrangement will give me more time to consider the cases of my many patients by relieving me of a great number of details involved in the care of a large practice, and is prompted by my desire to do everything possible to benefit and cure each patient under my care.

A few cases are as good as a thousand that I might refer to, Write to any of them. A personal letter from them may be the means of saving your life.

TESTIMONIALS.

Edward J. Raynor, with Walsh & Co. Confectioners Newark, N. J. — "I was a foreman in Seabury & Johnson's when I took sick. I had hemorrhage after hemorrhage and utterly broke down in health, coughed up lumpy, yellow matter, had fever and night sweats, and was brought to my bed from which I never expected to rise again. I am now strong and able to do my work, all shortness of breath is gone, I have gained my flesh back, and can eat and sleep as well as ever. From being a perfect wreck I have been rebuilt by Dr. Hunter's medicated air inhalations. Any one who wishes further particulars of my experience of this wonderful treatment, can write or call on me. I know I owe my life to it, and believe all who suffer ought to know of it."

In order to obtain Dr. Hunter's book, "The Lungs and Their Diseases," free, it is necessary to mention this paper, and address Dr. Robert Hunter Association, 117 W. 45th street, New York.

My next article will be devoted to the treatment of Bronchial Consumption.

WE SAVE HALF YOUR MONEY ON

VIOLINS, GUITARS, MANDOLINS, BANJOS ETC.

GET OUR BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE IT'S FREE WRITE TO DAY

SYNDICATE MUSICAL INSTRUMENT Co

356 FULTON ST BROOKLYN, N.Y.

IN BUSINESS 20 YEARS

Individual Communion Outfits. Send for free catalogue and list of users.

SANITARY COMMUNION OUTFIT CO., Box 22 Rochester, N. Y.

NEW BOOKS.

Father Jerome. A Story of the Spanish Inquisition. By MRS. H. A. CLARK, author of "Pro Christo." 12mo. Illustrated. 293 pages. $1.

Tense to life, with the thrilling interest of a romance. The reader will follow the narrative eagerly and be stirred to emulate the courage and faith of Christian heroes.

At Opening Doors. By HOWE BENNING 12mo. Illustrated. 351 pages. $1.25.

Many a young person setting out in life longs to find the path that leads to success. This story shows how Providence opens the door to the highest prosperity.

A Bonnie Boy. A story of Happy Days. By JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT. 12mo. Illustrated. 205 pages. $1.

Young lads and misses will be charmed by its fascinating incidents, and will learn new ways of enjoying life.

Sabbath Nights at Pitcoonans. By the author of "SANDY SCOTT'S BIBLE CLASS." 8vo. 94 pages. 50c.

Tells of vivid pictures of Scottish incident and character. "The talks run mainly on evangelical lines, are marked by a homely humor, and manifest a shrewd knowledge of human nature, and an intimate acquaintance with Scripture."

Heart Life Classics

Size of Book, 6¼ x 4¼ inches.

New edition of this popular series containing 12 additional titles. Over 70,000 copies sold last year. Price reduced to 30 cents each, postpaid.

LIST OF TITLES:

Abide in Christ
Advice to a Young Christian
Anone in London
Angel's Christmas
A Bag of Stories
Blood of Jesus
Blue Flag, The Bob Tinker
Christian Living
Christie's Old Organ
Daily Food
Dawn Light, Morning Hour
Dusk Light, Evening Hour
Dairyman's Daughter, The Down in a Mine
Expectation Corner
Gold Dust
Heart Life
Help's Over Hard Places, Boys
Helps Over Hard Places, Girls
Home Song
Imitation of Christ
Jessica's First Prayer
Jesus Only
John Ploughman's Talk
John Ploughman's Pictures
Kept for the Master's Use
Like Christ
Lane Upon Lane
Little Captain, A Little Meg's Children
Mark Steadman
Mind and Words of Jesus
Miss Toosie's Mission
New Life and New Heart
Nobody Loves Me
Olive's Story
Peep of Day
Pilgrim's Progress
Royal Commandments
Saved at Sea and Little Faith
Scripture Promises
Shepherd Psalm
Wee Davie
Whiter Than Snow
With Christ
Wise as a Kindling Depot
Young Man Setting Out in Life

NEW POCKET EDITION
NEW TESTAMENT
WITH NOTES AND INSTRUCTIONS

On fine thin paper, leather, divinity circuit, red under gold edges, 5¾ x 4¾ x ¾ in., $1, postpaid.

American Tract Society, 150 NASSAU STREET, NEW YORK.

BOSTON, 54 Bromfield St. CHICAGO, 100 Wabash Ave.
CINCINNATI, 420 Elm St. SAN FRANCISCO, 536 Market St.

WILL CARLETON'S

MAGAZINE "EVERY WHERE"

Only Magazine for which Will Carleton, "Josiah Allen's Wife" (Marietta Holley), Fanny Crosby (World's greatest hymn-writer) and other famous authors write in every number. Best of additional literature.

50 Cents a Year. SPECIAL OFFER 3 Mos. for 10c.

if you mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Address Every Where Pub. Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.

HOME STUDY

of BOOK-KEEPING, SHORTHAND, BUSINESS FORMS, PENMANSHIP, Etc. with our Private Lessons BY MAIL open up to Young Men and Women good paying positions. We give just the training needed for success in business. No interference with work—only spare time required. The cheapest and best method of study. Highly endorsed, national reputation, established 45 years. We also teach English, Civil Service and other courses by mail. Trial lesson 10c. A fine Catalog free.

BRYANT & STRATTON, 175 College Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Famous LIGHTNING NEEDLE

TAPERED

Superior in Quality—New in Shape

LIGHTNING NEEDLES are easy to thread, easy to sew with. Send 10 Cents for Sample Case.

Agents Wanted to sell Lightning needles in every home. Will be bought nine time of ten. Send for terms, circular, and free sample.

THE LIGHTNING NEEDLE CO.
DEPT. G, 650 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

ONLY ONE CENT invested in a postal card will enable you to investigate our remarkable offer to agents. All of them are making money. Why not you? Exclusive territory here bit given; freight paid. Write to day.

THE WOOLFALL CO., Dept. 2, 114 5th Ave., NEW YORK

DOUBLE ENTRY BOOK-KEEPING BUSINESS-ARITHMETIC

Approved System, Taught Thoroughly by mail. Send for particulars.

HENRY VON DEYLEN, 314 Clifton Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.

A NEW AID FOR THE DEAF

Sent on trial absolutely FREE of expense or risk. Address, S. G. Tiemann & Co, 107 Park Row, N. Y.

OPIUM MORPHINE and Liquor Habit cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Book of particulars free. Address Dr. J. L. Stephens, Dept. R. 5, Lebanon, Ohio.

Gems from New Books

BOY HEROES OF SAN JUAN*

WHEN Lieutenant Ord, at the head of his men, started on the rush up San Juan Hill, there was by his side a boy private from Ohio, who had joined the regiment just before it left for the front. He ran close to Ord until he fell, mortally wounded, a few yards from the summit. Ord heard him give a faint cry, and paused in his rush to say kindly as he saw the dying pallor on the boy's face, "My poor fellow, I can do nothing for you."

"I didn't call you back for anything like that, Lieutenant—I am done for, but I thought you had better take my steel nippers, there may be still another wire fence beyond the hill, and I won't be there to cut it for you."

The boy did not die until he heard the shout of victory; but he never knew that his gallant leader, to whom he had given such unselfish devotion, was lying dead not many yards away.

The third of the trio was even younger, and he, happily, did not die. He was a little flute-player, and was found sitting by the body of Lieutenant Ord, whom he had followed that day with manly daring and devotedness. Another officer came by and scolded him for sitting at a spot which was no place for children, and ordered him back to the hospital.

"I was going back," said the little boy. "I wanted to go back to the hospital and look after Colonel Egbert when he fell wounded, and I was doing no good at the front for my flute is ruined with the mud and the rain. But just as I started back, I heard Mr. Ord say, 'Now, all the boy who's brave, follow me!' and then he rushed ahead. So, all the boys followed him, and as I was lighter, I got further ahead than most." A cavalry colonel, who had just seen his own son die, listened to the little fellow's narrative, and patted him on the back.

The Rescue of Cuba.* An Episode in the growth of Free Government, by Andrew S. Draper, LL.D., President of the University of Illinois. Pp. 186; 23 illustrations. Publishers, Silver, Burdett & Co., New York City.

Books Received

Yvonne. By Rev. L. M. Zimmerman, author of How to Be Happy When Married, Daily Bread for Daily Hunger, The Family, etc. This story of an unhappy home, of Christian forbearance and forgiveness, may convey a lesson to some heedless ones. While illustrating the truth of the text, "The way of the transgressor is hard," it also shows that the righteous receive their reward. Pp. 333. Publishers, Williams & Wilkins Co., Baltimore, Md.

A Bonnie Boy. A Story of Happy Days: by Julia McNair Wright, author of A Boy of To-day, The House on the Bluff, etc. A very charming book is this for the entertainment of children. It is thoroughly wholesome. With its pretty binding, attractive illustrations and delightful reading, it will be sure to make happy the little lads and lassies who may receive it as a gift book. Pp. 296; price $1. Published by the American Tract Society, 150 Nassau St., New York City.

Biographical Sketches of Some Ancient People; by S. M. Burnham, M.A., author of The Roman's Story and other works. This book, intended as a sketch of the lives and characters of men who lived in remote antiquity, was written with the object of awakening an interest in the study of Bible characters. Descriptive and historical matter concerning the countries and nations of ancient times is interwoven with the story of their struggles and victories or struggles and failure. Pp. 572; price $2. Publisher, A. I. Bradley & Co., Boston, Mass.

The House That Jack Built. And Other Essays; by Adam Ebey. This booklet makes pleasing and helpful reading for the evening hour around the family fireside. The old and young will appreciate the quaint and wholesome sketches, "Grandma's Loom," "Grandpa's Orchard," and "Auld Lang Syne," which are among the most wholesome and readable of this very entertaining little collection of sketches, essays and poems, which have been "sent forth," the writer says, "to cheer and help everybody, but especially young people." Pp. 86; paper covers. Published by the author at Wawaka, Ind.

Fisherman's Luck, And Some Other Uncertain Things; by Henry Van Dyke, author of "Little Rivers," "The Story of the Other Wise Man," etc. The writer has cast his line not only in the streams and lakes of his own country, but also in those of Canada and Norway, among the mountains and fjords of which latter land he and "Lady Graygown" (to whom the work is dedicated) went on their honeymoon journey. The charm of the angler's art lies not so much in angling as in the close walk with nature and the look through nature up to nature's God that is brought about by rambles in quiet places by sequestered streams. The reader will find, besides good entertainment, much moral and spiritual help in the perusal of this book. The literary style is of that charm and excellence which characterizes all the works of Rev. Dr. Van Dyke. Pp. 247; illustrated; price $2. Publishers, Charles Scribner's Sons, New York City.

Unparalleled Offer to Christian Herald Readers

OUR LAST NOTICE—YOUR LAST CHANCE

Encyclopædia Britannica

In Thirty (30) Superb Single Volumes

A LIBRARY that cost over $1,500,000 to prepare.
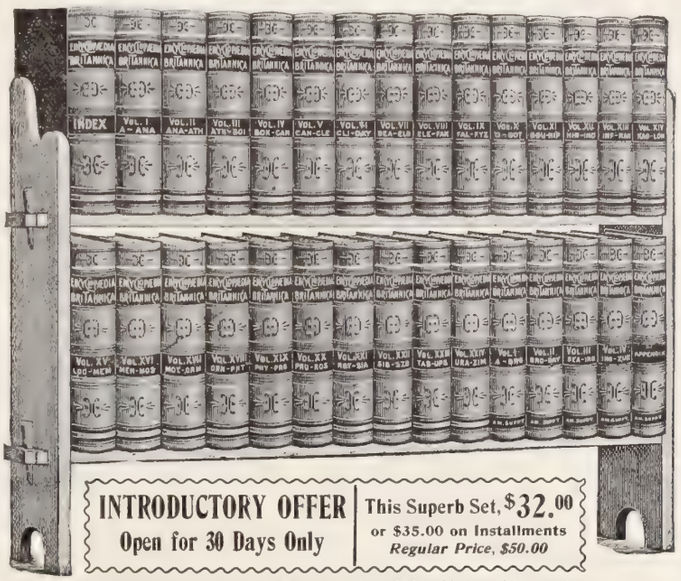
A LIBRARY so complete that it covers the entire range of human knowledge.
A LIBRARY so reliable that it is the standard of all English-speaking countries of the world.
A LIBRARY so compact that it places readily before you complete knowledge of every subject.

Entire Set Sent on Payment of Only $1.00
Balance payable in seventeen monthly payments of $2.00 each



INTRODUCTORY OFFER
Open for 30 Days Only

This Superb Set, $32.00
or $35.00 on Installments
Regular Price, $50.00

Bindings.—The volumes are handsomely and durably bound in genuine silk-cloth binding, double-hinged. Printed on high-grade book paper.

REMEMBER

THE ALLEN EDITION IS THE ONLY REPRINT published in the world that is not altered, mutilated or abridged in some way.

THAT IT IS ABSOLUTELY COMPLETE, containing every one of the 8000 illustrations, 700 maps, and 25,000 articles found in the original, and while at less than one-third the price, it is far more valuable to American readers because of our Five-Volume American Supplement.

THAT OUR NEW APPENDIX VOLUME, with our exhaustive American Supplement, takes every important title in the work and gives all that is recent concerning it, bringing information down to date. It contains also 52 New Maps, including the new Government Map of Klondike, Hawaii, Cuba. Thus, with our supplemental volumes, the Britannica becomes the latest, as well as the greatest.

Consider the advantage of a family which has these volumes over one which has not, or which has a cheap, three-or-four volume, unreliable, so-called encyclopædia. When information is wanted by parents or children here it is close at hand, and above all, it is reliable. The members of the family become accustomed to refer to its pages; in a few years they possess a fund of knowledge worth many times the price of the work.

NO RISK.—The set may be returned to us any time within ten days if not satisfactory, and the money will be returned.

ORDER NOW and take advantage of this splendid chance to secure this unrivaled fund of universal knowledge.

Sign this application or write for fuller particulars

The Encyclopædia Britannica is the standard of all English-speaking countries of the world.

GREATEST GENERAL HISTORY GREATEST SCIENTIFIC WORK
GREATEST THEOLOGICAL WORK
GREATEST BIOGRAPHICAL WORK GREATEST ART WORK
GREATEST GEOGRAPHICAL WORK

Every article upon these and every other subject is treated exhaustively by the greatest known specialists, hence every article is the best, most reliable and satisfactory that the whole world can furnish.

HENRY G. ALLEN & CO.
150 Fifth Avenue, - New York

Gentlemen: I desire to take advantage of your special offer on the Encyclopædia Britannica to Christian Herald readers, and inclose $1.00 as initial payment. Send full particulars, and if found satisfactory I will order the set, paying for it in monthly payments of $2.00; otherwise the money to be returned to me.

.....

.....

HENRY G. ALLEN & CO., Publishers, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York

THE PRUDENTIAL

"Life Insurance"

it has been said, "is a mere matter of dollars and sense." Common sense and good business judgment both dictate that protection should be provided for individual, domestic and partnership interests.

Write for information.

THE PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE CO. OF AMERICA.

John F. Dryden, Pres. Home Office, Newark, N.J.

Wool Soap

is made from the purest fats—the best grade of pure mutton tallow. It is just the soap

For Toilet and Bath

Swift and Company, Makers, Chicago

OAK CHINA CLOSET $10.95.

This China Closet, made of quartered oak, 70 in. high, 38 in. long, has beveled edge French plate glass 16x16 in. has removable shelves and retails for $20.00. Our price is $10.95. Just think of the money you had our immense 304 page Catalogue. Use and Wear. It saves you money. 69c but we send it free to you.

Price $10.95 Address this way:

JULIUS HINES & SON,

BALTIMORE, MD. Dept. 218

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE

More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices ly improved. Write for designs and information. Costs

NO MOSS GROWING. CLEANING NO CRUMBLING CRACKING.

THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO., 70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

STAMMERING I cured [illegible] mering School, Room 50, Mass. Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

How Nellie Got . . . . . Her New Shoes

"SISTER HADLEY, how will I ever get a new pair of shoes?"

The speaker was a beautiful girl about twenty years old, with sky-blue eyes, auburn hair, a lovely complexion and faultless form. She was sitting by the tiny stove in our one room, just after we had come from the Cremorne Mission. Jerry McAuley had tried to show us how to trust God for the simplest things in life.

It was the first year of my conversion and I had no steady employment. My wife and I were doing "light housekeeping;" so light, indeed, that we did not have to hire a go-cart when we moved, as sin and rum had robbed us of all our possessions. But we were very happy and hopeful.

There was ample evidence that Nellie needed a new pair of shoes. Those she wore had been a light, thin pair at best, with the high heel well under the middle of the foot, as is usually the case with shoes worn by girls of the Tenderloin. She had come in the Mission one evening with a girl comrade, both under the influence of drink. The other found a back seat, but as the house was crowded, Nellie wandered up the aisle and finally got a seat near the platform. It was a hot place for a sinner.

Nellie had fallen in sin at her New England home, had fled to this great city and was supported by a wealthy man, who lavished money upon her. She was richly dressed and wore a profusion of diamonds. As the service proceeded she was smitten with a powerful conviction of her sins, and when sinners were invited to come forward she knelt weeping at the altar. Jesus met her there and gave her glorious, instantaneous salvation and cleansing from her sins. Ah, how happy she was! How she smiled! Everybody shook hands with her; all the women kissed her. She stripped herself of her jewelry and gave it to the Mission.

A grand Christian gentleman gave her work in his store on Fourteenth street, at five dollars a week. A convert who lived on the floor under under us gave her board and room at four dollars and a-half a week. She had the munificent sum of fifty cents a week for laundry and the many things a young lady needs. And this is how things were with Nellie, as she sat by our fire.

"Oh, Sister Hadley," she repeated, "how am I going to get a pair of new shoes?"

My wife looked at her with tearful eyes and answered:

"Nellie, ask Jesus for a pair of shoes. He loves you and knows your needs."

She kissed my wife good-night and went down to her room, where she knelt and said:

"Dear Jesus, you know what a bad girl I have been and how you led me in the Cremorne Mission and saved me, and how you found me a job at five dollars a week; and now, dear Jesus, I need a new pair of shoes. Won't you get them for me?"

She jumped into bed and was soon asleep. The next evening as she left the store the gentleman who employed her came up as she was passing out of the door and said:

"Nellie, here is five dollars. It is not your salary; I thought you might need some things."

She tucked the bill in her glove, fairly flew up the street and burst into our room. She threw her arms around Lizzie's neck and kissed her, saying: "Here, Sister Hadley, see my new shoes!" and then produced the new, crisp five dollar bill.

Oh, how glad she was! How she cried and thanked God for remembering even her little needs, and what a good time we all had going out to help Nellie buy her shoes!

S. H. HADLEY.

McAuley Mission, 316 Water St., New York.

The Gospel in France

French Christians are preparing for a Gospel campaign among the visitors to the Paris Exposition next year. They propose to erect a large hall [illegible] the Exposition as possible. Protestant congregations throughout France are being asked to contribute to the building fund.

The Age of Inquiry.

The present has been described as pre-eminently the century of inquiry.

The constant and universal question that is echoed from every side, is "Why?" Ask any of your friends why they prefer Van Houten's Cocoa to any other, and one will immediately tell you "it has the highest nutritive value;" another will reply "it is more easily digested and assimilated than other cocoas;" and a third will probably answer "it is perfect in flavor, and rich in healthy stimulating properties."

In reply to the question "Why?" The Lancet says:—"Van Houten's Cocoa yields a maximum proportion of the valuable food constituents of the bean."

Why is it the best for children, for mothers, and for family use?

Because it is rich in that digestible Albumen which nourishes the body, and in the Phosphates which build up bones and tissues; because it repairs waste; and also because you can get out of it more strength and nourishment than out of any other.

HAVE YOU TRIED VAN HOUTEN'S Eating CHOCOLATE?

Housework is Hard Enough with even the best soap which needs hard muscular rubbing to make things clean. Gold Dust does all that soap does and saves time and much rubbing.

Send for free booklet—"Golden Rules for Housework"

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY

Chicago St. Louis New York Boston

THE IDEAL SIGHT RESTORER

IN WHAT DISTRESS WE NOTE THIS LASS IS DISFIGURED WITH HER HIDEOUS GLASSES

WE RESTORE SIGHT!

GLASSES RENDER DEFECTIVE VISION CHRONIC.

Write for our ILLUSTRATED TREATISE mailed free.

THE IDEAL COMPANY 239 Broadway, New York.

SEE HOW THE FACE BRIGHT AS AURORA DUE TO USE OF THE SIGHT RESTORER.

A SURE CURE.

Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure Has Cured More Cases of Catarrh Than Any Other Remedy—Samples Mailed Free.

This is the only remedy that goes directly to the diseased parts and is at the same time "constitutional." It reduces the inflammation, heals the ulcerated surfaces, stops the discharge, restores the hearing when impaired by Catarrh, prevents the disease from going to the lungs, or removes it if already there. It gives speedy relief and effects a permanent cure.

This is the best season of the year to begin the treatment of Catarrh. Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure is put up in boxes containing enough medicine for one month's treatment, which is sent postage paid for $1.00. If you have not had a sample, we will send one free by mail, postpaid. Address: Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 50 Broad St., Atlanta, Ga.

MONEY IN IT Splendid chance to make money [illegible] Address, FIDELITY INVESTMENT CO., SEATTLE, WASH.

The Gem Embroidery Machine

SOMETHING NEW!!

[illegible] operate it; an independ- [illegible] with it at home. As a spe- [illegible] chine with a full set of [illegible]

GEM MFG. CO., Dept. X, St. Louis, Mo.

CRAZY WORK 126 Velvet [illegible] Embroidery, Chenille, [illegible] and beautiful [illegible] with Remnants. [illegible] Fine Worker Remnants, [illegible] 25 cents. All postpaid. [illegible] N. J.

$20 GOLD PIECES GIVEN to Ladies, Girls and Boys, [illegible] using our Soaps. We [illegible] premiums & Catalog of over 300 Free Premiums. Watches, Dress Goods, Suits, Bicycles, Couches, Cloaks, Etc. F. Parker, 306 S. Clinton St., Chicago.

The Slave of Circumstance and Condition Suffers if he Uses the Wrong Kind of Food. He Thrives on Grape-Nuts.

NATURAL FOOD.

For Highly Organized People.

How to select food that will make a sick body well is a problem. There are food experts that make that question the study of their lives; to know what the human body is built of, and just where to look for the active elements in the grains, fruits and other forms of food furnished by Mother Nature.

The food Grape-Nuts was originated for a reason, and with the above facts in view. It is perhaps the most popular food on the American table to-day, for while it has been in use but little over a year, many of the best people have discovered its unquestioned value.

It is pre-digested and ready for immediate assimilation. It is also thoroughly cooked at the factory, and therefore ready for instant service. Grape-Nuts can be digested by a child in arms, and is appreciated by the athlete because of its flavor and strength. Sold by all first-class grocers, and made by Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., at their factories in Battle Creek.

Libby's Mince Meat

Makes a Pie That Melts in Your Mouth

Those who know Libby's delicious Mince Meat never bother with the labor of making a winter's supply of home-made.

Libby's is so convenient, wholesome, pure.

Put up in packages enough for two large mince pies.

Ask your grocer or write

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago.
Drop a postal for booklet, new edition, "How to Make Good Things to Eat."

Farm Wagon Economy.

The economy of this proposition is not all found in the very reasonable price of the wagon itself, but in the great amount of labor it will save and its great durability. The Electric Wheel Co., who make this Electric Handy Wagon and the now famous Electric Wheels, have solved the problem of a successful and durably low down wagon at a reasonable price.

ELECTRIC

This wagon is composed of the best material throughout—white hickory axles, steel wheels, steel hounds, etc. Guaranteed to carry 4000 lbs.

These Electric Steel Wheels are made to fit any wagon, and make practically a new wagon out of the old one. They can be had in any height desired and any width of tire up to 8 inches. With an extra set of these wheels a farmer can interchange them with his regular wheels and have a high or low down wagon at will. Write for catalogue of the full "Electric Line." Electric Wheel Co., Box 136, Quincy, Ill.

Highest Price FOR EGGS comes in the winter when eggs are scarce. Green Cut Bone prepared by... Mann's New Bone Cutter makes hens lay at any time. It doubles the egg product. "Mann's Granite Crystal Grit, Clover Cutter and Swinging Feed Tray mean hen comfort and hen profit." Catalogue free. F. W. MANN CO. Box 29, Milford, Mass.

AFTER HARVEST, FENCING.

Now that your crops are all in, you will have time to attend to that fencing. The best farm fence you know, is

THE ADVANCE FENCE.

It's the one that is sold direct to the farmer at wholesale prices. Nobody can buy it cheaper than you can. Entirely interwoven. No loose ends. Circulars and special discounts free. ADVANCE FENCE CO., 149 Old Street, Peoria, Ill.

$3.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working for me. People preferred who can furnish their own team. Applicants must furnish satisfactory reference as to character and standing. B. F. Johnson, 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

$75 MONTH AND EXPENSES; no experience needed; position permanent; self seller. PEASE MFG. Co., P.O. Box A, Cincinnati, O.

Until He Come

Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for Dec. 3. I. Cor. 11: 23-28

SAD it is to think of the various ways in which the simple ordinance of the Lord's Supper has been misunderstood. Christ was so careful, in all his acts and teaching, to keep clear of ceremony and formalism that he must have been sorry to see his followers erect out of this ordinary meal an edifice of misconception. Nothing could have been further from his idea than the magnificence of the Mass in the Roman Catholic Church; nor do we think he would approve the rules and regulations and stipulations with which many Protestant churches fence it around to keep away those who would like to join in it.

The circumstances of its institution were of the most informal, most sociable kind. Jesus, knowing that he was about to die, aware that the malignity of his enemies had reached the culminating point, and disdaining to seek safety from their plots, has the natural pathetic desire to partake once more of the annual national feast with the men who had been his friends and companions for three years past. His desire is fulfilled, and the party sit down in the room hired for the occasion. There was, and still is, a ritual to be observed at the meal. One of the children of a Jewish family is taught to ask the meaning of the meal, and the head of the household explains it to him. Then, as certain customs are observed at intervals of the meal, the child asks why this and that is done, and the head of the household answers in prescribed terms. This was ordered so that the meaning of the customs might never be forgotten, and that every Jew from his childhood should understand that the ceremony of the Passover was full of significance, and should be reminded of the event it was instituted to commemorate. On this occasion, when that stage of the feast was reached when the child was to ask the meaning of unleavened bread being used, and why a cup of wine was solemnly drunk, Christ made a change in the ritual. According to the usual custom, he would have replied to the questions put by the youngest of his disciples by saying that the bread was to remind them of the unleavened bread eaten on that night when the Israelites came out of Egypt, and that the wine represented the covenant in which the people pledged themselves to God. Instead of saying this, Christ gave a new significance to the bread and wine. In future they were to think, when they ate the bread, of his broken body, and when they drank the wine, of the blood which was to be shed for their salvation. He had already told them that he was about to leave them and that he would return, and by this simple ceremony they were to keep alive his memory until he did return.

Many a man conscious of approaching death has had a similar feeling, and has tried to establish some means of keeping alive his memory. Some have identified it with a home, or with some other place. "When you come here remember me." But Christ took a better course than one that would have involved a pilgrimage. "Let those who love me," he said in effect, "come together and eat bread and drink wine in memory of me." Not in a family gathering. Family ties counted for nothing in this case. The one tie that was to bring them together and make them one, was love of him. Those who do not love him, have no right there; those who do love him, ought never to be excluded. Love for him is the one and only title of admission. What that love involves he explained, again and again. "If ye love me, keep my commandments." "If a man love me, he will keep my words." And he taught us how we might test and prove our love, by loving and helping others. So the ceremony was entirely a personal matter. It was not teaching, but a plea for personal love and fidelity. Even the Apostle Paul, in restating the circumstances, directs no restrictions. The man who eats and drinks unworthily receives condemnation in himself. He is there under false pretenses, he knows it and must take the consequences. It is not for the others to exclude him.

GRAVY—DO NOT SERVE IT ON THE DINNER-TABLE BEFORE YOU HAVE ADDED A TABLE-SPOONFUL OF

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE

The Original and Genuine Worcestershire.

LEA & PERRINS' IS THE FAVORITE TABLE SAUCE THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.—SEE SIGNATURE ON WRAPPER.

JOHN DUNCAN'S SONS, AGTS., NEW YORK.

DEAR MOTHERS

Is this Elegant Sugar Shell worth asking for?

Its retail value is 25 cents, but it is free to every mother in the United States who has not received any of our other souvenir gifts. Best sterling silver plate; heavy fully engraved; full size—much larger than illustration—a gift that will, we hope, establish an enduring friendship for Quaker Valley people in every home in the land. We will also send, every month, free of charge, a copy of the HOME-ET ENTSIER, our own publication, wherein we illustrate our latest designs in high-grade silverware and household furniture, and quote lowest factory prices to everyone. Please write to-day and enclose one 2c stamp to pay postage. But one gift to a family.

Send your own name only. This is too expensive a gift to send to persons who don't ask for it themselves.

QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO., 313 W. Harrison Street, Chicago.

Sausage meat, Mince meat, Hamburg steak, Tripe, Hash, Suet, Chicken and Lobster for salads, Clams, Codfish, Cocoanut, and many other articles of food, as well as scrap meat for poultry, can be easily, quickly, perfectly chopped with the

ENTERPRISE
Meat and Food Chopper

It is guaranteed to chop—not grind—the food. As easy to clean as it is to use. Our trade-mark ENTERPRISE is on every machine.

28 sizes and styles—hand and power—for families, hotels, meat markets, etc. Prices from $1.50 up. Sold by all hardware dealers. Descriptive catalogue mailed free. The "Enterprising Housekeeper" with 200 recipes mailed for 4 cents in stamps.

THE ENTERPRISE MFG. CO. OF PA., THIRD and DAUPHIN STREETS, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

EUCALOL Cures Catarrh

Sir Morell Mackenzie says:

Moisture of the mucous membrane of the nose is as essential to the sense of smell as that of the tongue is to taste.

For twenty-five years the most successful treatment of nasal and throat catarrh has been in the New York and Philadelphia Nose and Throat Hospitals. Years of careful observation and experiment led them to put supreme confidence in the treatment of cleanliness and antisepsis.

Eucalol

is a treatment based on antiseptic cleanliness as used in these hospitals. No catch-penny quack remedy but the essence of the combined knowledge of the greatest physicians of the world. It is pleasant to use, the effect instantaneous, and is a sure cure for Nasal Catarrh, Dry Catarrh, Grippe, Colds in the Head.

FREE OFFER EUCALOL has cured thousands and will cure you. To prove its merits we will send free, on request, a large package of EUCALOL. Don't delay, write at once.

THE EUCALOL COMPANY, 108 Fulton Street, N. Y.

A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM...

DR. J. G. CONNOR, Ionia, Mich., writes:

DEAR SIRS:—An old friend of mine handed me a couple of small vials of your TARTARLITHINE some time ago and I tried it on myself, having suffered from rheumatism for several years. I assure you I was so pleased with its effects that I procured a full sized bottle, and since taking it I have been entirely free from rheumatism during the past year. I also observed that it is not surpassed by any other preparation as a PROMPT and EFFICIENT diuretic; besides it is pleasant to administer. Please send me a few bottles for use among my patients afflicted with Rheumatism.

Regular package $1.00
Of all druggists or post-free by mail.
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

McKESSON & ROBBINS,
91 Fulton Street, . . New York.

SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

SHOEMAKER'S BOOK on POULTRY

and Almanac for 1900, two colors, 160 pages, 110 illustrations of Fowls, Incubators, Brooders, Poultry Houses, etc. How to raise Chickens successfully, their care, diseases and remedies. Diagrams with full descriptions of Poultry houses. All about Incubators, Brooders and thoroughbred Fowls, with lowest prices. Price only 15 cents

C. C. SHOEMAKER, Box 848, FREEPORT, ILL.

CANCER, SALT RHEUM, RHEUMATISM, PILES and all Blood Diseases

Cured by that rare, sovereign remedy

Red Clover Blossoms.

Best Blood Purifier known, not a patent medicine but PURE RED CLOVER. Our 48 page book sent free. Write us to-day. Mention this paper.

D. McDONALD & SONS, 10 Inter Ocean Building, Chicago.

50 CHICKS From 50 EGGS

$5

The BANTAM Does it. Over 15,000 in use. Thousands hatch 45 to 50 chicks from 50 eggs.

30 DAYS' Trial Before you pay a cent. Hot Water or Hot Air

Send 4 cents for No. 60 Catalog of valuable information and testimonials. BUCKEYE INCUBATOR CO., Springfield, Ohio.

FENCE! STRONGEST MADE.

right. Sold to the consumer at Wholesale Prices. Fully Warranted. All sizes. Write for Catalogue. COILED SPRING FENCE CO., Box 47. Winchester, Indiana, U. S. A.

A MOST WONDERFUL OFFER!

Greatest Offer Ever Made to Bible Students . . . . Of a Complete Religious Reference Library.

Only $6 for 6 Standard Bible-Study Books. All New and Perfect.

We Are Closing Out our great editions of these Bible study books all newly made amounting to 18,000 copies at this marvelously low price and offer "The Christian Herald" readers one more chance to secure a set before the supply is exhausted.

30,000 are already in the hands of Bible students who have purchased them from us not only in all portions of the United States but from Canada, Mexico and Hawaii, West Indies, Cuba, England, Norway, Egypt, Italy, China, Brazil, South Africa, Etc., and that they are HAPPY, GRATEFUL and SATISFIED is evidenced by the thousands of glowing testimonials which have been voluntarily sent to us.

The Former Price of These Standard Books was $24.00. . . . . .
We Now Offer them for $6.00. Just One Quarter of the Former Price.

Bible Students Will Surely Make No Mistake in securing these great books at once at the present low price as we expect to close out what is remaining of our great editions before the holidays.

Order at Once So As to Be in Time. You run no risk as we guarantee safe delivery of every box of books, either by express or freight, and also guarantee that the books will be just as represented and perfect in paper, printing and binding.

CHOICE OF TWO PLANS AS GIVEN BELOW. . . . .

ONE-QUARTER OF FORMER PRICE. . .

1524 pages 9¼x6½x3 inches | 756 pages 9¾x7½x1⅝ inches | 1380 pages 11x8 inches | 1024 pages 9½x6½x2½ inches | 914 pages 9½x6½x2¼ inches

We have sold 40,000 copies of the "Commentary," and our list price for the one volume, cloth, has been $7.50. You are getting six books for less than the price of one. . . Notice the great amount of matter contained in these six books, written and compiled by some of the greatest Biblical scholars in the world. . . . . .

We have never asked for a testimonial, but are receiving them by the thousands from wholly satisfied purchasers. Notice what they say;

[illegible] Penn.
S. S. SCRANTON & Co., Hartford, Conn.:
SIRS—I have received your Bible Study Books." They are all right. We have [illegible] Yours truly, J. R. SCHAFF [illegible] Ind.

S. S. SCRANTON & Co., Hartford, Conn.:
GENTLEMEN—I have received your Bible Study Books. I am delighted with them. I found the paper, the type [illegible] Yours truly, JAMES R. GILLEY

[illegible] Ill.
S. S. SCRANTON & Co., Hartford, Conn.:
GENTLEMEN—I have received your Bible Study Books. They are, indeed, splendid.—much better than I expected. I may [illegible] them to my friends. Very truly, A. A. ATKINSON

Hellman, Penn.
S. S. SCRANTON & Co., Hartford, Conn.:
GENTLEMEN—I have received your Bible Study Books. They are all right. We have [illegible] the purchaser at twice the price. Your books have my most hearty recommendation. Yours truly, JAMES GEE [illegible] Mass.

S. S. SCRANTON & Co., Hartford, Conn.:
GENTLEMEN—I have received your Bible Study Books. I am much pleased with the books, and [illegible] for the benefit of anyone interested in books that [illegible] Yours very truly, L. L. [illegible] State Normal College.

Hellman, Penn.
S. S. SCRANTON & Co., Hartford, Conn.:
GENTLEMEN—I have received your Bible Study Books. I am much pleased with the books, and [illegible] to be. With such good printing and binding, they are a [illegible] Yours respectfully, FRANK R. SALLEE.

FORMER PRICES:

J., F. & B. COMMENTARY, ...	$7.50
EDERSHEIM'S LIFE OF CHRIST (2 Vols.).	6.00
SMITH'S BIBLE DICTIONARY, ...	4.50
LIFE AND EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL, . . .	4.50
CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE, ...	1.50
Total, ...	$24.00

Now only $6 Cash or $7 on the monthly payment plan. . . .

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE

By Alexander Cruden, M.A. Complete in two parts.

Contains the large number pages, handsomely and strongly bound in cloth. Christians of all denominations, as A. A. Nelson, a [illegible] volume better deserves a place in the library of the Bible Student than Cruden's Concordance to the Holy Scriptures.

JAMIESON, FAUSSETT, AND BROWN'S BIBLE COMMENTARY

By Robert Jamieson, D.D., St. Paul's, Glasgow, Rev. A. R. Fausset, A.M., St. Cuthbert's, York, and David Brown, D.D., Professor of Theology, Aberdeen. A complete commentary—critical, explanatory and practical—on the Old and New Testament—1380 pages, bound in cloth.

It is enriched with the results of learning, the researches of travelers who have visited every region in which the sight of revelation originally shown, and the expository labors of scholars and critics. Far in advance of the older works now in use, this explanatory and practical commentary has been prepared by three eminent divines, distinguished alike for their scholarship and their piety. [illegible] country, its compact form and convenient size, together with the immense amount of matter it contains, forming an encyclopædia of biblical knowledge render it also at once the cheapest and most economical.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon: "I think it the best commentary upon the whole Bible which has been issued within the last fifty years, and I should be very sorry to be deprived of the pleasure of consulting it."

Rev. John H. Vincent, Bishop M. E. Church: "This immense book deserves a place on the table of every Bible student. It is the cream of the commentaries carefully collected by the three eminent [illegible]

EDERSHEIM'S LIFE AND TIMES OF JESUS THE MESSIAH (2 Vols.)

The Authorized American Edition. By Alfred Edersheim, M.A., Oxon, D.D., Lecturer Oxford University.
Two volumes, regular price $6.00. Royal 8vo, 1,524 pages, handsomely bound in silk cloth.

A fascinating book for the [illegible] reader. It [illegible] and the manner in which [illegible] a full [illegible] as a frame and background for the picture of Christ. The fresh study of the text of the Gospels makes the book a historical commentary on the Four Gospels.

The Sunday School Times recommends it: "It is positively refreshing to read a life of the Saviour which is critical in the best and truest sense of the word, and is biblical at the same time. The book is written not for the learned [illegible] intelligent Christian reader."

THE LIFE AND EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL

By the Rev. W. J. Conybeare, M.A., of Cambridge; and J. S. Howson, D.D., of Liverpool.

Contains 1024 large octavo pages, many fine illustrations, maps, charts, etc., is printed on the same quality of paper, and is the same in size as "Smith's Dictionary of the Bible," and bound in uniform style. There is no work that will compare with this in giving a life-like picture of the great apostle and the work which he did.

SMITH'S DICTIONARY OF THE BIBLE

Edited by William Smith, LL.D., Classical Examiner of University of London.

Contains 1024 large octavo pages, [illegible] and strongly bound in cloth. An indispensable and [illegible] families, Sunday School superintendents and Bible readers generally. This is, undoubtedly, the best work of its kind in the English language.

HOW TO GET THE SIX BOOKS ALL SENT AT ONCE. CHOICE OF TWO PLANS.

1. Send $6.00 and we will forward at once the six books securely boxed, and guarantee safe delivery, you paying freight or express charges.
2. Send $1.00 and promise, in your letter, to pay $1.00 a month for six months, making $7.00 as complete payment, and we will forward the six books at once, securely boxed, you paying freight or express charges.

Take Notice! Mention The Christian Herald and order quickly to be sure of getting these six books for less than the price of one. Our offer is a plain bona fide one. We have been before the public as publishers of standard works for over thirty years and our reputation for good work and fair dealing is unquestioned. You run no risk, as we guarantee satisfaction and safe delivery of the books. Send the money the way safest and most convenient for you and we will forward at once. We have sold thousands of these great books to Bible students, and the continued voluntary testimony is "Do not see how you can furnish so much for so little." We guarantee the books to be made up in excellent manner, and perfect in paper, binding and printing. We will take back any or all books that are not satisfactory in ten days after examination, and will return money, deducting only the return freight or express charges. This marvelous offer is limited to the balance of our edition, and money will be returned if the books are exhausted and we cannot fill your order. ☞As to our responsibility, we refer to any commercial agency. Established 1866.

S. S. Scranton & Co., Publishers, Hartford, Conn.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES BIBLE HOUSE NEW YORK

VOLUME 22—NUMBER 48

COPYRIGHT 1899 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor

Thanksgiving Number, 1899

PRICE FIVE CENTS

Getting Ready for the Thanksgiving Feast

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

to the mental faculties of the operator and sleeper?

and to operate injuriously, in a mental sense, upon the sleeper. As yet, it is only a pseudo-science and is not accepted by professional scientists, being thus left chiefly in the hands of charlatans.

Miss L. L., Lewiston, Mo. What is the salary of the United States soldiers and officers?

A major-general receives $7,500 annually during his first five years of service, a brigadier $5,500. The maximum pay of colonels is $4,500, and of lieutenant-colonels $4,000. Majors receive from $2,500 to $3,500; captains, mounted, from $2,000 to $2,800; captains, not mounted, $1,800 to $2,526. A lieutenant's pay ranges between $1,400 and $2,240. The duration of service has a determining effect upon the salary received by our army officers. A private's pay is $13 a month.

Mrs. J. H. R., Knoxboro, N. Y. Why was the room where the Peace Congress was held at The Hague [illegible]?

The royal family of Holland are of the house of Orange. Frederick Henry, who in the [illegible] built the "House in the Wood" as a gift to his beloved wife, Amalia, was a prince of Orange, and the grandfather of William III. of Holland and England. The "House in the Wood" was finished by Amalia, after her husband's death, as a monument to him, and the beautiful "Orange Hall" was called by her the "Hall of Peace."

L. G. L., Monroe, Wis. 1. What force and effect will the Presidential Thanksgiving proclamation have in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines this month? 2. Do any European nations [illegible] 3. Did Agassiz write anything refuting Darwin's evolution theory?

1. The Presidential proclamation does not render the observance of Thanksgiving compulsory anywhere; and, of course, people in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines who do not choose to unite with us in this annual custom will be at liberty to follow their inclinations. 2. Harvest festivals are very commonly observed in Europe, and returning thanks to God for the blessings of the year is usually a part of the celebration. 3. He did, although he held some things in common with Darwin. Darwin was an agnostic; Agassiz believed in God, the creator of man. For fuller information in regard to his works write to the Museum of Natural History, Cambridge, Mass., which was founded by him.

Mrs. D. A., Norfolk, Va. Professor Dean C. Worcester, of the Philippine Commission (who, prior to the war, spent several years on the islands), declares that our public is not accurately informed as to events there. He defends the American troops on the ground of humanity, and declares that they are really "protecting the peaceably-disposed inhabitants from the depredations of the lawless." Under any conditions, however, the loss of human life is to be deplored.

L. C. D. Whatever your husband may be, he is your children's father, and therefore is entitled to their respect. Lead a consistent Christian life yourself; read the Bible with them daily and pray for and with them, especially at bedtime. Your husband will refrain from sneers if he sees that you are patient and forgiving. And you will have the help of the Holy Spirit if you ask it in confident expectation and strong desire.

R. L. G., Memphis, Ala. 1. How do you pronounce Transvaal? 2. Boer? 3. What are the meanings and derivations of these words? 4. To what religious denomination does Oom Paul belong? 5. Is that the established church in the Transvaal? 6. Did the Dutch or the English first settle in the Transvaal? 7. How long have the Boers had a Republic? 8. What [illegible]

1. Transvaal, with the a as in ah. 2. Bo-er, the o pronounced nearly as oo in cool. 3. Boer means farmer; and Transvaal means "across the Vaal" River which forms the Southern boundary of the South African Republic as the Transvaal was formally named in 1883. 4. The Dutch Reformed Church. 5. Yes. 6. The Dutch, who emigrated to the Transvaal from Cape Colony and Natal. The "Great Trek" as this movement was called began in 1836. 7. The settlements of the four original trekking parties, being far apart, were organized into miniature republics for a time, but in 1864 combined and formed a single republic. For protection against the natives, [illegible] of many Boers to the last step culminated in the [illegible] Republic by a triumvirate composed of Bok, Kruger and Pretorius. Conflict with England followed, and resulted in England's recognition, in 1883, of the practical independence of the South African Republic, under a nominal suzerainty. 8. Traveling from place to place in ox-wagons.

Vera. You state a peculiar and unusual case of moral obliquity. The person of whom you speak, and with whom you necessarily have close relations, is probably a kleptomaniac; in other words her temptation to steal and her yielding to it are the results of a diseased condition of the mind. Apparently she steals without special discrimination or desire to acquire articles or money for her own use. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

. . . THANKSGIVING AT THE FOLLANSBEES . . .

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER

"THERE 'll be no Thanksgiving here this year. Not in my house." Mr. Follansbee spoke with bitter emphasis, and shook his mane of gray hair like an angry lion. He had been reading his weekly paper beside the fire. The day was cold, and there were scattering flakes of snow; the wind raved in the chimney with a wierd uncanny sound "like a pack of wolves on the forest's edge." Inside of the Follansbee house all was cheerful comfort; the chintz-covered lounge with its heaps of soft cushions, the easy chairs and rockers, the shelves filled with books, and the open piano with the mandolin lying near it, spoke of ease, refinement, and taste. Flowers were blooming in the windows, and there were braided rugs of home manufacture here and there, covering worn places in the carpet. The little daughter, Elsie, was moving to and fro, setting the table for supper. Jim, the son of the house, had just come in from the farm, his cheeks rosy with health, his black eyes dancing with fun.

A ludicrous change came instantly over Jim and Elsie as they heard their father's words. Elsie's delicate face clouded, and tears filled her blue eyes; Jim looked amazed, and incredulous, but neither spoke. They knew their father.

Mrs. Follansbee and her older girls had been conversing in low tones and planning their Thanksgiving dinner, whom to invite, what to do, how to end the evening with a gay gathering of the young people of the neighborhood, and the fierce explosion of Mr. Follansbee, for which they were almost altogether unprepared, took them by surprise. They exchanged glances of dismay.

Mrs. Follansbee, a brisk little brown-haired woman who was not in the least afraid of her big, quick-tempered husband, exclaimed:

"Why Jack! what has come over you? Not keep Thanksgiving! I never heard of such a thing!"

"Mother," said Mr. Follansbee more quietly than he had previously spoken, "I have my reasons: it is sufficient for me to say this. If you wish to know more, I'll tell you in private."

"I am afraid" said Emily, persuasively, "that you are angry with Mr. Dix about the choir, and so you mean to punish us all, and the whole town too. Mr. Dix is obstinate, but so are some of the rest of us. Think better of it, father dear."

"Emily Follansbee," the old gentleman looked at her with keen eyes, "it ill becomes you to take the part of Mr. Dix, particularly after last Sunday. If you are willing to be insulted before the whole congregation, I am not willing to have you; we have never had a Thanksgiving dinner here without inviting the minister. I won't invite him this year, nor go to hear his sermon on Thanksgiving day, and so we'll just omit the whole thing. Another year I hope we'll have another pastor. God send us a man of sense!"

The Follansbee's were a musical family, and in their hands had been the control of the church music, Emily, who had a silvery soprano, leading the women and singing solos frequently. Her voice had been well trained, and it was her father's pride. But Mr. Dix, the pastor, had no ear for music, and preferred congregational singing. In every possible way Mr. Dix had abridged the singing service, and he was now at open war with the choir.

On the Sabbath morning referred to, Mr. Dix, after the performance by the choir of a very elaborate piece, in which Emily Follansbee had sung a particularly fine solo, had risen in the pulpit and said, pointedly:

"The morning concert being over, you may now worship the Lord in the following hymn," announcing it and reading:

"Awake and sing the song
Of Moses and the Lamb."

The choir, with praiseworthy meekness, had led in the hymn, and the people had joined in, all but Mr. Follansbee, who had taken his hat and stick, and very deliberately had marched down the church aisle and gone home.

"I'll not forgive that man in a hurry, and I'll forbid Emily to enter that loft again," he stormed to himself as he stalked through the quiet streets.

"I'll worship God at home, till Mr. Dix gets through his term here."

Days passed, but Mr. Follansbee grew ever more vehemently wrathful, and the expression of his rage culminated when he heard his wife and the girls discussing their Thanksgiving feast. It should be added that the Follansbee connection was not large, and the gathering at their home was rather of neighbors and friends than of kinsfolk on any great day, like the one impending. Always the pastor and his family, always the bachelor deacon, and the five or six lonely and unattached people in the district—to all of these, Mr. and Mrs. Dix excepted, the change at the Follansbees would mean a disappointment. The Dixes, of course, could stay at home, or could go somewhere else.

"OVER THE THRESHOLD, IN THE ARMS OF MR. FOLLANSBEE"

The girls talked the thing over that night in their own room, Cicely sitting on Emily's bed, and Elsie curling up on a rug at her mother's feet. The mother was one of the girls whenever there was perplexity.

"Father's put his foot down." "Yes, Cicely, but we may coax him to lift it up," said Emily.

"No, he'll not change," the mother remarked positively, "but I'm sure in my own mind that we'll have our good time as we always have had. The Lord will bring it round all right. Why, darlings, if you'll believe me, I'm much more distressed to see father so unforgiving, than to think of going without Thanksgiving dinner. We could have that another week; but he's like a stone, he's so relentless. He won't let you sing again, Emily, while Mr. Dix stays—think of it, for a whole year!"

"Don't worry over that, dear," said the daughter. "I'm sure the Lord knows best. Such a little thing to make such a fuss!"

"The little things do make the worst fusses, as a rule," said Elsie.

"It's as well that we are provisioned against a siege," said Mrs. Follansbee. "We're going to have a regular old-fashioned snow-storm. The Dixes drove over to her mother's this morning. I wouldn't wonder if they had to stay there and couldn't get back for Thanksgiving." This was Friday evening. Thanksgiving was almost a week off.

"Oh!" said Emily, "then we couldn't have meeting on Sunday and everything would come round all right."

"Mr. Dix would try to get through."

"No mortal man could get through the Grey Ravine, in a desperate snow storm."

So they all went to bed.

The next morning the mother's prediction was fulfilled. There was a furious blizzard abroad. Land-marks were obliterated. The white, thick, blinding veil of snow hid every familiar object. With difficulty Mr. Follansbee and James made their way to the barn to feed the horses and cows, and the hens and chickens were brought into the laundry and kept there. Great fires blazed in the Follansbee home, and they were warm and comfortable and as remote from the world as if neighbors lived across the mountains, and not a few rods away.

The absolute stillness of the storm was like death. Indoors, the Follansbees were bright and lively, and their laughter and talk were as merry as usual, except that Mrs. Follansbee was anxious about travelers out in the tempest.

"I do hope Mr. Dix won't try to come back for to-morrow's services," she said. "He'd be lost on Grey's Mountain or in the ravine, as sure as fate."

"I think you may rest easily, Molly," her husband answered. "Anybody would tell him what our storms are. Of course, being from the city, he might not know the danger. We'll just have a good Sunday by ourselves to-morrow, and our morning concert without any trouble."

The day waned and night came early. At four o'clock the snow ceased, but its white high-piled drifts were a dead wall around the house. And the cold was Arctic, a biting, sharp, bitter cold!

"Emily, go to the piano and sing for me," said Mr. Follansbee, at last. "I want some of my old favorites, 'Ben Bolt,' or 'Robin Adair,' or 'Roy's Wife.' Sing something simple and sweet and clear, with a sound of bugles in the night."

"Oh, you romantic old father!" said Emily, smoothing back his hair and kissing him. He was a dear father. Though he had a hot temper, and was not easily managed, his children adored him with all his crotchety ways.

Emily sang, one and another and another of the lovely old Scotch ballads in which there is so much pathos, and so much deathless melody. Suddenly her mother arrested her:

"Hush-sh-sh!"

"What is that?" exclaimed Jim, springing to his feet. His father followed.

"It is somebody calling for help. Some body lost in the snow. There it is again, he's almost wearied out, whoever it is!"

. . .

Baffled, beaten, well nigh frozen stiff, covered with snow, and so exhausted that he fainted as he was carried over the threshold, in the arms of Mr. Follansbee, was borne in Mr. Dix. Nothing had sufficed to keep him from battling over the hills to reach his church, but death had almost clutched him, and but for the Follansbee lights, and Emily's singing, he must have perished.

"If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink," quoted Mr. Follansbee to his wife, as after hours of rubbing and wrapping in hot blankets, and giving of hot broth by the spoonful, he left Mr. Dix in a sleep which was restful and not perilous.

"Not that the poor man was my enemy, Molly, but he made me very mad, and that's the plain truth. But if it was foolhardy to cross Grey's Mountain in a blizzard, it was plucky, and I like pluck."

"He is a good man, dear," Mrs. Follansbee answered, "and so good that he sometimes offends us by want of discrimination. It's providential he ever reached our door. An hour more and he must have perished, and his horse as well."

"Well, Molly, I'm thankful he did win to safe quarters. Now I'm tired, and some of your hot coffee will taste good. I'm afraid I'm a cross-grained old husband to you, Mary, but one can't stay cross when one's saved a man's life. I guess you can go right straight ahead and have your Thanksgiving, turkey, cranberry sauce, and all the rest of it."

"It was Emily's heavenly singing that I heard, and that brought me to your door," the minister said later. "Never will the angels' songs above sound sweeter in my ear. I ask your pardon for having made some great mistakes, and, God helping me, Mr. Follansbee, I'll try to listen in a different way, and to see from the other man's standpoint after this. Emily's singing! I shall hear it in my dreams as long as I live!"

The storm cleared away, and by Thanksgiving Day paths were broken and Mrs. Dix was at home. Everybody came to dinner, the Misses Leland, Deacon Brown, Archie Paine, Mr. and Mrs. Dix, and old Mother Antrim. In the evening, there was an old-fashioned merrymaking, with the young folks from far and near playing games and telling stories. But, before the festal part, there was the solemn part, and the church was crowded. Mr. Dix preached and prayed, earnestly and with deep humility. Choir and minister were in accord with love in their faces and understanding in their souls. Emily, in the organ loft, sang a Te Deum. And the whole congregation before they left joined rousingly in Praise God from whom all blessings flow!

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT.

Mission of the Wheel

A THANKSGIVING SERMON
By Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text, Ezekiel 10: 13 . . . .

As for the wheels, it was cried unto them in my hearing, O Wheel!

NEXT Thursday will, by proclamation of President and Governors, be observed in Thanksgiving for temporal mercies. With what spirit shall we enter upon it? For nearly a year and a half this nation has been celebrating the triumph of sword and gun and battery. We have sung martial airs and cheered returning heroes and sounded the requiem for the slain in battle. Methinks it will be a healthful change if this Thanksgiving week, in Church and homestead, we celebrate the victories of peace: for nothing was done at Santiago or Manila that was of more importance than that which in the last year has been done in farmer's field, and mechanic's shop, and author's study, by those who never wore an epaulette or shot a Spaniard or went a hundred miles from their own door-sill. And now I call your attention to the wheel of the text.

Man, a small speck in the universe, was set down in a big world, high mountains rising before him, deep seas arresting his pathway, and wild beasts capable of his destruction; yet he was to conquer. It could not be by physical force, for, compare his arm with the ox's horn and the elephant's tusk, and how weak he is! It could not be by physical speed, for compare him to the antelope's foot and ptarmigan's wing, and how slow he is! It could not be by physical capacity to soar or plunge, for the condor beats him in one direction, and the porpoise in the other. Yet he was to conquer the world. Two eyes, two hands, and two feet were insufficient. He must be reinforced, so God sent the wheel.

Twenty-two times is the wheel mentioned in the Bible. Sometimes, as in Ezekiel, illustrating providential movement; sometimes, as in the Psalms, crushing the bad; sometimes, as in Judges, representing God's charioted progress. The wheel that started in Exodus rolls on through Proverbs, through Isaiah, through Jeremiah, through Daniel, through Nahum, through the centuries—all the time gathering momentum and splendor, until, seeing what it has done for the world's progress and happiness, we clap our hands in thanksgiving, and in the apostrophe of the text, cry, "O Wheel!"

To arouse your gratitude and exalt your praise, I would show you what the wheel has done for the domestic world, for the agricultural world, for the traveling world, for the literary world. "As for the wheels, it was cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel!"

In domestic life the wheel has wrought revolution. Behold the sewing machine! It has shattered the housewife's bondage and prolonged woman's life, and added immeasurable advantages. The needle for ages had punctured the eyes and pierced the side, and made terrible massacre. To prepare the garments of a whole household in the spring for summer and in the autumn for winter was an exhausting process. "Stitch! stitch! stitch!" Thomas Hood set it to poetry, but millions of persons have found it agonizing prose.

Slain by the sword, we buried the hero with "Dead March in Saul" and flags at half-mast. Slain by the needle, no one knew it but the household that watched her health giving way. The winter after that the children were ragged and cold and hungry, or in the almshouse. The hand that wielded the needle had forgotten its cunning. Soul and body had parted at the seam. The thimble had dropped from the palsied finger. The thread of life had snapped and let a suffering human life drop into the grave. The spool was all unwound. Her sepulchre was digged, not with sexton's spade, but with a sharper and shorter implement—a needle. Federal and Confederate dead have ornamented graves at Arlington Heights and Richmond and Gettysburg, thousands by thousands; but it will take the archangel's trumpet to find the million graves of the vaster army of women needle slain.

Besides all the sewing done for the household at home, there are hundreds of thousands of sewing women. The tragedy of the needle is the tragedy of hunger and cold and insult and homesickness and suicide—five acts.

But I hear the rush of a wheel. Woman puts on the band and adjusts the instrument, puts her foot on the treadle and begins. Before the whirr and rattle, pleurisies, consumptions, headaches, backaches, heartaches are routed. The needle, once an oppressive tyrant, becomes a cheerful slave. Roll and rumble and roar until the family wardrobe is gathered, and winter is defied, and summer is welcomed, and the ardors and severities of the seasons are overcome.

No wonder that at some of the learned institutions, like the New Jersey State Normal School, and Rutger's Female Institute, and Elmira Female College, acquaintance with the sewing-machine is a requisition, a young lady not being considered educated until she understands it. Winter is coming on, and the household must be warmly clad. The "Last Rose of Summer" will sound better played on a sewing-machine than on a piano. Roll on, O wheel of the sewing-machine! until the last shackled woman of toil shall be emancipated. Roll on!

Secondly, I look into the agricultural world to see what the wheel has accomplished. Look at the stalks of wheat and oats, the one bread for man, the other bread for horses. Coat off, and with a cradle made out of five or six fingers of wood and one of sharp steel, the harvester went across the field, stroke after stroke, perspiration rolling down forehead and cheek and chest, head blistered by the consuming sun, and lip parched by the merciless August air. At noon, the workmen lying half dead under the trees. One of my most painful boyhood memories is that of my father in harvest time reeling from exhaustion over the doorstep, too tired to eat, pale and fainting as he sat down. The grain brought to the barn, the sheaves were unbound and spread on a thrashing-floor, and two men with flails stood opposite each other hour after hour and day after day, pounding the wheat out of the stalk. Two strokes, and then a cessation of sound. Thump! thump! thump! thump! thump! thump! Pounded once and then turned over to be pounded again. Slow, very slow. The hens cackled and clucked by the door, and picked up the loose grains, and the horses, half asleep and dozing over the mangers where the hay had been.

But, hark! to the buzz of wheels in the distance! The farmer has taken his throne on a reaper. He once walked, now he rides. Once worked with arm of flesh, now with arm of iron. He starts at the end of the wheat field, heads his horses to the opposite end of the field, rides on. At the stroke of his iron chariot the gold of the grain is surrendered: the machine rolling this way and rolling that, this way and that, until the work which would have been accomplished in many days is accomplished in a few hours. The grain-field prostrate before the harvesters.

What quick, clean work the wheel of the reaper does make! Soon after, the horses are fastened to the thrashing-machine back of the barn. The iron-toothed cylinders are ready for their prey. The horses start, the unbound wheat is plunged into the vortex, and the broken straw is in one place, and the pure St. Louis wheat is in another place. The driving-wheel strapped, the cylinder humming with terrible velocity, the inexperienced warned off for fear of accident, the ground aquake with the mighty revolution, I stand in awe and thanksgiving at the agricultural conquest, and cry out [illegible]

Can you imagine anything more beautiful than the Sea Island cotton? I take up the unmelted snow in my hand. How beautiful it is! But do you know by what painstaking and tedious toil it passed into anything like practicality? If you examined that cotton you would find it full of seeds. It was a severe process by which the seed was to be extracted from the fibre. Vast populations were leaving the South because they could not make any living out of this product. One pound of green seed-cotton was all that a man could prepare in one day; but Eli Whitney, a Massachusetts Yankee, woke up, got a handful of cotton, and went to constructing a wheel for the parting of the fibre and the seed.

Teeth on cylinders, brushes on cylinders, wheels on wheels. South Carolina gave him $50,000 for his invention, and instead of one man taking a whole day to prepare a pound of cotton for the market, now he may prepare three hundred weight, and the South is enriched, and the commerce of the world is revolutionized, and over eight million bales of cotton were prepared this year: enough to keep at work in this country fourteen million, three hundred thousand spindles, employing two hundred and seventy thousand hands, and enlisting two hundred and eighty-one million, four hundred thousand dollars of capital.

Thank you, Eli Whitney, and L. S. Chichester, of New York, his successor. Above all, thank God for their inventive genius, that has done so much for the prosperity of the world.

Thirdly: I look to see what the wheel has done for the traveling world. No one can tell how many noble and self-sacrificing inventors have been crushed between the coach-wheel and the modern locomotive, between the paddle and the ocean steamer.

I will not enter into the controversy as to whether John Fitch, or Robert Fulton, or Thomas Somerset was the inventor of the steam engine. They all suffered and were martyrs of the wheel, and they shall be honored. John Fitch wrote:

[illegible] time of bringing me into existence. I know of nothing so perplexing and vexatious to a [illegible] boat building. I experienced the former and quit in season, and had I been in my right senses I should undoubtedly have treated the latter in the same manner, but for one man to be teased with both, he must be looked upon as the most unfortunate man in the world.

Surely John Fitch was in a bad predicament. If the steamboat boiler did not blow him up, his wife would! In all ages there are those to prophesy the failure of any useful invention. You do not know what the inventors of the day suffer. When it was proposed to light London with gas, Sir Humphrey Davy, the great philosopher, said that he should as soon think of cutting a slice from the moon and setting it upon a pole to light the city. Through all abuse and carricature Fitch and Fulton went until yonder the wheel is in motion, and the Clermont, the first steamboat, is going up the North River, running the distance—hold your breath while I tell you—from New York to Albany in thirty-two hours. But the steamboat wheel multiplied its velocities until the Lucania of the Cunard, and the Majestic of the White Star line, and the New York of the American line, and the Kaiser Wilhelm of the North German Lloyd line cross the Atlantic Ocean in six days or less. Communication between the two countries so rapid and so constant, that whereas once those who had been to Europe took on airs for the rest of their mortal lives—and to me for many years the most disagreeable man I could meet was the man who had been to Europe, despising all American pictures and American music and American society, because they had seen European pictures and heard European music and mingled in European society—now a transatlantic voyage is so common that a sensible man would no more boast of it than if he had been to New York or Boston.

All the rivers and lakes and seas have turned white with rage under the smiting of the steamboat wheel. In the phosphorescent wake of it sail the world's commercial prosperities. Through the axle of that wheel nations join hands, and [illegible] Give me your Sheffield knives and Nottingham [illegible] and I will give you all I have to spare, and transatlantic and cisatlantic nations grasp each other's hands in brotherhood.

What a difference between John Fitch's steamboat, sixty feet long, and the Oceanic, seven hundred and four feet long! The ocean wheel turns swifter and swifter, filling up the distance between the hemispheres, and hastening the time spoken of in the Book of Revelation, when there shall be no more sea.

While this has been doing on the water, James Watts' wheel has done as much on the land. How well I remember Sanderson's stage-coach, running from New Brunswick to Easton, as he drove through Somerville, New Jersey, turning up to the post office and dropping the mail-bags [illegible] pers: Sanderson himself on the box, six feet two inches, and well proportioned, long lash-whip in his hand, the reins of six horses in the other, the "leaders" lathered along the line of the traces, foam dripping from the bits.

It was the event of the day when the stage came. It was our highest ambition to become a stage-driver. Some of the boys climbed on the great leathern boot of the stage, and those of us who could not get on shouted "Cut behind!" I saw the old stage-driver not long ago, and I expressed to him my surprise that one around whose head I had seen a halo of glory in my boyhood time was only a man like the rest of us. Between Sanderson's stage-coach and a Chicago express train, what a difference! All the great cities of the nation strung on an iron thread of railways!

At Doncaster, England, I saw George Stephenson's first locomotive. If in good repair it could run yet, but because of its make and size it would be the burlesque of all railroaders. Between that rude machine, crawling down the iron track, followed by a clumsy and bouncing train, and one of our Rocky Mountain locomotives, with a village of palace-cars, becoming drawing-rooms by day and princely dormitories by night, what bewitching progress!

See the train move out of one of our great depots for a thousand miles' journey! All aboard. Tickets clipped and baggage checked, and porters attentive to every want. Under tunnels dripping with dampness that never saw the light. Along ledges where an inch off the track would be the difference between a hundred men living and a hundred dead. Full head of steam, and two men in the locomotive charged with all the responsibility of whistle and Westinghouse brake. Clank, clank! go the wheels. Clank, clank! echo the rocks. A city on the wing! Thrilling, startling, sublime, magnificent spectacle—a rail train in lightning procession.

When, years ago, the railroad men "struck" for wages our country was threatened with annihilation, and we realized what the railroad wheel had done for this country. Over one hundred and eighty thousand miles of railroad in the United States. In one year over a billion dollars received from passengers and freight. White Mountains, Alleghany Mountains, Rocky Mountains, Sierra Nevadas bowing to the iron yoke. All the rolling stock of New York Central, Erie, Pennsylvania, Michigan Central, Georgia, Great Southern, Union Pacific, and all the other wheels of the tens of thousands of freight cars, wrecking cars, cabooses, drawing-room cars, sleeping-cars, passenger cars, of all the accommodation, express and special trains, started by the wheel of the grotesque locomotive that I saw at Doncaster. For what it has done for all Christendom, I ejaculate in the language of the text, "O wheel!"

While the world has been rolling on the eight wheels of the rail car, or the four wheels of the carriage, or the two wheels of the gig, it was not until 1876, at the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia, that the miracle of the nineteenth century rolled in—the bicycle. The world could no:

believe its own eyes, and not until quite far on in the eighties were the continents enchanted with the whirling, flashing, dominating spectacle of a machine that was to do so much for the pleasure, the business, the health, and the profit of nations. The world had needed it for 6,000 years. Man's slowness of locomotion was a mystery. Was it of more importance that the reindeer or the eagle rapidly exchanged jungles or crags than that man should get swiftly from place to place? Was the business of the bird or the roebuck more urgent than that of the incarnated immortal? No! At last we have the obliteration of distances by pneumatic tire. At last we have wings. And what has this invention done for woman? The cynics and constitutional growlers would deny her this emancipation, and say: "What better exercise can she have than a broom, or a duster, or a churn, or rocking a cradle, or running up and down stairs, or a walk to church with a prayer book under her arm?" And they rather rejoice to find her disabled with broken pedal or punctured tire half way out to Chevy Chase or Coney Island. But all sensible people who know the tonic of fresh air, and the health in deep respiration, and the awakening of disused muscles, and the exhilaration of velocity, will rejoice that wife, and mother, and daughter may have this new recreation. Indeed, life to so many is a hard grind that I am glad at the arrival of any new mode of healthful recreation. We need have no anxiety about this invasion of the world's stupidity by the vivacious, and laughing, and jubilant wheel, except that we always want it to roll in the right direction—toward place of business, toward good recreation, toward philanthropy, toward usefulness, toward places of divine worship, and never toward immorality or Sabbath desecration. My friend, Will Carleton, said what I like when he wrote:

We claim a great utility that daily must increase;
We claim from inactivity a sensible release:
A constant mental, physical, and moral help we feel,
That bids us turn enthusiasts, and cry, God bless the wheel!

Never yet having mounted one of those rolling wonders, I stand by the wayside, far enough off to avoid being run over, and in amazement and congratulation cry out, in Ezekiel's phraseology of the text, "O wheel!"

Fourthly: I look into the literary world and see what the wheel has accomplished. I am more astounded with this than anything that has preceded. Behold the almost miraculous printing-press. Do you not feel the ground shake with the machinery of the New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, and Western dailies? Some of us remember when the hand ink-roller was run over the cylinder, and by great haste eight hundred copies of the village newspaper were issued in one day and no lives lost; but invention has crowded invention, and wheel jostled wheel, stereotyping, electrotyping, taking their places, Benjamin Franklin's press giving way to the Lord Stanhope press; and the Washington press, and the Victory press, and the Hoe Perfecting press have been set up. Together with the newspapers come the publication of innumerable books of history, of poetry, of romance, of art, of travel, of biography, of religion, dictionaries, encyclopedias, and Bibles. Some of these presses send forth the most accursed stuff, but the good predominates. Turn on with wider sweep and greater velocity, O wheel! Wheel of light, wheel of civilization, wheel of Christianity, wheel of divine momentum.

On those four wheels—that of the sewing-machine, that of the reaper, that of the railroad locomotive, that of the printing-press—the world has moved up to its present prosperity. I call on you to thank God for the triumphs of machinery as seen in our home comforts and added national grandeur.

At different times in Europe they have tried to get a congress of kings at Berlin, or at Paris, or at St. Petersburg; but it has always been a failure. Only a few kings have come. But we have a convention of all the kings—King Corn, King Cotton, King Rice, King Wheat, King Oats, King Iron, King Coal, King Silver, King Gold, and they all bow before the King of Kings, to whom be all the glory of this year's wonderful production.

Romana Carrea's Thanksgiving

How "Christian Herald" Readers Brought Joy and Gladness Into a Poor Porto Rican Home

"SHE BUILT A RUDE BOOTH OF PALM BRANCHES"

"I KISS your hands," are the closing words of a grateful letter which comes to us from Porto Rico as a Thanksgiving greeting. Romana Carrea, the writer of the letter, is a poor little dark-skinned Porto Rican mother, with two small children. All three lived in San Turce, where Romana, who found life a hard struggle at best, made a brave fight to support her little ones. Her rickety cabin, a small wooden affair, built on leased ground, was to them the dearest spot on earth, because it was home. She worked for the Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., and her income from that labor was her main reliance.

But a great calamity was in store for Romana and the children. Along came the dreadful hurricane, tearing up the trees and huge buildings and sweeping away hundreds of unfortunate natives to death, and poor Romana's cabin fell beneath its fury. When the storm had passed, not a trace could be found of the little home nest of the Carrea family. Romana herself was away at work when the hurricane began, and she had left her two children in the care of a sister-in-law in the little house at San Turce. When the storm had lulled sufficiently for Romana to venture out, she hastened home and gazed with speechless terror on the vacant spot where her building had stood. Her children! Had they, too, been swept off by the cruel flood? The thought was agony. But soon she found that a kind Providence had provided shelter for them with an English family, and they were all quickly reunited.

Then Romana took courage. Her dear ones were safe, thank God! and she must again have a roof to cover them. So, with the aid of a few good neighbors, she soon constructed a rude booth of palm branches on the ruins of the old home. This served to shelter them from the sun's heat, but was not sufficient to keep out the tropical rains.

The mails soon brought the news of Romana's misfortune to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and in a short time sufficient money was forwarded from the relief fund to provide the little folks with a better structure than the original and to stock it with some simple comforts.

Of this good fortune, however, Romana at first knew nothing. It came upon her like a great surprise, and when she was told that the good readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD would build her a cabin that would keep out the heat and the rains and which would withstand the gales, her eyes opened in wonderment. Surely the good Jesus must have touched their hearts, to be so kind to her, a poor creature, with two little children! It was beyond understanding, and with the thought of it all, her eyes welled up with tears and her lips almost refused to utter the thanks she wanted to speak.

She watched the native workmen as they built the new cabin—really a nice, comfortable and home-like structure, cheap, yet strongly and neatly put together. When they had driven the last nail in the solid, though rude building, Romana and her children took possession. While our friends in the North may not be satisfied with its architectural beauty, the average Porto Rican who works for a living and needs no fireplace in his tropical climate would consider it a very satisfactory dwelling-place, far better than nine-tenths of his friends possess. Still further surprised was Romana to find that the forethought of her new American friends had not only provided her with a home, but had even fitted it up in a simple and inexpensive fashion. To her eyes, it seemed a veritable palace. Romana is now dwelling in the new home, contented and happier than she has ever been. It is her Thanksgiving gift and, from a full heart, she has written this letter to the kind friends who, learning through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of her misfortunes, came to her rescue, and sent to that journal the money which has been the means of giving her so much happiness. The home cost $50, all its simple furnishing included; so it will be seen that a Porto Rican household has been rendered supremely happy by a very small expenditure indeed. Here is Romana's letter; (we give a free translation):

"I have received the present which has been sent to me by the good people in the United States. I give you many thanks for what you have done and many remembrances. I am your affectionate servant who kisses your hands.

"ROMANA CARREA."

ROMANA AND HER CHILDREN IN THEIR NEW HOME

Late reports from San Juan give encouraging accounts of the progress of our Sunday School work. Mr. Collins writes that there is much hope for the children, who are committing the Scriptures to memory and learning the Gospel songs. The old folks are set in their ways, and loath to adopt new ideas and customs; but the next generation will grow up with a training that will fit them for American citizenship. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Sunday School is playing an important part in this development of the young.

We shall soon hope to have regular reports from Rev. James Jamieson, who has now arrived at San Juan as the representative of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and who will give his time to the Sunday School work exclusively.

The following contributions in aid of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S Sunday School work in Porto Rico have been received:

Porto Rican Sunday School Work

Prev. ack	$590 48	R B Sutphen	3 00
Mrs M B Duvall	1 00	I H N, Evanston	50
Mrs T J Bentley	1 00	Lilla C. Cochrane	1 00
Carrie B Pine	2 00
I H N, Manchester	1 00	Total	$599 98

Porto Rican Relief Fund

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S Porto Rican Relief Fund closed Nov. 15. The contributions below were received previous to the date of closing:

Prev. ack	$5,788 49	Howell, E	1 00
Hall, A L	5 00	Hubbard, Geo D	1 00
Hall, Mrs Harriet	1 00	Hubbel, Mary L	1 00
		Hughes, D D	5 00
		Hunn, Alice	3 00
		Hunn, Emma	2 00
		Hunn, Fred	5 00
		Hunt, B L & mother	40
		Hunt Ida M	60
		Hutchinson, W S	50
		Hyde, Ethel N	1 00
		Idler, Mrs Christina	2 00
		Ingalls, Wm	5 00
		Ink, Mrs W B	1 00
		Jackson, Mrs M L	1 00
		James, Mrs J A	1 00
		Jaycox, Mrs R L	1 00
		Johns, Mrs	25
		Johnson, Miss Ada	2 00
		Johnson, Edw M	2 00
		Johnson, Mrs Orin	25
		Johnson, Victor	2 00
		Johnson, Mrs Walter	25
		Johnston, R A	1 00
		Jones, Mrs C A	1 00
		Jones, D A, Sr	5 00
		Jones, E W, M A & Alva Simpson	40
		Jones, R W	5 00
		Joseph, L V	1 00
		Joseph, Nathan	2 00
		Joslin, Lydia	2 00
		Joss, Mrs Hattie	5 00
		Kelley, Tom	10 00
		Kennedy, Edw A	5 00
		Kennedy, Mrs Sarah	50
		Kenyon, Mr & Mrs M T	5 00
		Kimball, Ethel M	1 00
		Kindermann, H	5 00
		King, Miss B H	2 00
		King, Donald & Ruth	1 00
		King, Mrs E H	2 00
		King, Mrs J L	1 00
		King, Susan B	1 00
		Kiamount, Mrs R C	1 00
		Knapp, Mr	25
		Knapp, N W & wife	3 00
		Knapp, R H	5 00
		Knight, Richard	25
		Korb, Henry	1 00
		Korb, Mrs Henry	1 00
		Kregel, Anna	1 00
		Lambert, J R	1 00
		Lane, Dorothy H & Mille M	2 00
		Langs, Jennie H	1 00
		Lawrence, F	1 00
		Lee, Mrs Elijah	2 00
		Lee, Mrs P W	1 00
		Lehman, Mrs J J	2 00
		Leibold, Jos	27
		Leighton, Andrew	5 00
		Lent, A F	5 00
		Leonard, Hattie M	1 00
		Lerch, O W & family	3 00
		Lewis, Alice B	5 00
		Lewis, Lillian	1 00
		Lindlay, Mrs	20
		Lindsley, Mrs L P	2 00
		Litt el, Frank B	5 00
		Little, Jos T	2 00
		Loomis, Mrs A R	5 00
		Loomis, W I	5 00
		Lotee, H A	3 00
		Lucy, Edward W & Elizabeth W	2 00
		McAllister, Silas	1 00
Hall, Mrs Nelson	1 00	Total	$6,008 86
Hall, Sue	2 00
Halliday, J C	5 00
Hallows, A C	50
Hand, Mrs M L	1 00
Hanlin, J P & family	5 00
Hardy, Mrs A S	1 00
Hargrove, W C	1 00
Hargrove, Mrs W C	1 00
Harman, Mrs Mellie	50
Harrell, Mrs Rosa F	2 00
Harrison, Ann	50
Harrison, J	1 00
Harrison, J W	3 00
Hawkins, Lydia F	1 00
Hays, Florence B	1 50
Heath, Fred	1 00
Henderson, A G	3 00
Herrick, A P & A P S	1 00
Hill, Mrs G C	5 00
Hill, John B	3 00
Hillett, Annie	25
Hills, Cordelia M	1 00
Hoag, Mrs D G	1 00
Hobbs, W H	2 00
Holbrook, J C	1 00
Holmes, Mrs A	1 00
Holmes, S	1 00
Hood, R M	5 00

And about 1,000 others, to be acknowledged later.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lessons in Giving

S. S. Lesson for Dec. 10. Mal. 1: 6-11; 3: 8-12. Golden Text, II. Cor. 9: 7

BY MRS. M. BAXTER

IT was the law in Israel, a law of which Jacob seemed to have some premonition, that the tenth of all their possessions should be given to the Lord. "Of all that thou shalt give me," said Jacob, just after his vision of the ladder, "I will surely give the tenth unto thee." It became a law in the wilderness, when God said to Moses: "All the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land or of the fruit of the tree, is the Lord's: it is holy unto the Lord." Thus particular was God in a dispensation of far less privilege and glory than this dispensation of the Spirit, and of the church, the body of Christ.

What, then, shall we say when believers, who claim to have been born again of the Spirit of God, to be new creatures in Christ Jesus, to have the Son of God and eternal life dwelling in them, yet give the refuse of their time, strength, attention, money to the God of whose very nature they claim to be partakers, and with whose very Spirit they claim to be one? There is a mistake somewhere. Where is it? Are not such mistaken altogether in their claim that they are children of God? Neither John the Baptist nor the Lord Jesus would let pass as children of God any whose lives did not prove them to be so. "Begin not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father," said John, "for God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham: and now is the axe laid unto the root of the trees. Every tree, therefore, which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire" (Luke 3: 8, 9). And the Lord Jesus said to them: "He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God" (John 8: 47).

If the Jews were bound by law to offer the tenth of all their possessions to the Lord, what is consistent in those who have the law written in their hearts, and who, taking the position which Scripture gives them, "crucified with Christ," can say also with Paul, "Not I live, but Christ liveth in me"? How much does the Christ of God value his Father? Just so much does Christ dwelling in our hearts by faith value and honor God. Nothing less than to offer our bodies a living sacrifice is our "reasonable service," our "spiritual worship" (Rom. 12: 1). How, then, can we give ourselves and yet retain anything that is ours? It is not a question of the tenth for us. We are not Jews: we are not under the law. We are members of the body of Christ (I. Cor. 12: 12, 13). Neither can we say that aught of the things which we possess is our own, for all is his and at his disposal, to be given or used as he shall direct.

God appeals to his people of old: "Would you offer to your governor, your prince, what you offer to me? Would you offer at court on earth 'polluted bread,' 'the blind,' 'the lame,' 'the sick,' as a present to King Herod or to any other reigning prince?" Let us enter into judgment with ourselves. Are we offering to God what we would be ashamed to offer to some earthly potentate? Do our ministers, our relatives, the society in which we mix, perhaps too often our own children, exercise claims upon our time, strength, money, etc., which we deny to the living God, who is our very life?

There were among his professed people of old some who sought personal gain in all they did for God. "Who is there even among you that would shut the doors for naught? neither do ye kindle fire on mine altar for naught." Oh, are there not many who look at monetary considerations or at the personal gain in the way of popularity which may accrue to them from the offering of time, strength, money, etc., to the Lord? What does he say to such? "I have no pleasure in you, saith the Lord of hosts, neither will I accept an offering at your hand." Reader, how many of your offerings have never been accepted by God? How stand your accounts with him? He speaks strong words: "Cursed be the deceiver, which hath in his flock a male, and voweth and sacrificeth unto the Lord a corrupt thing; for I am a great king, and my name is dreadful among the heathen." Cursed, unaccepted offerings!

The time will come when the Jews' Messiah, God's Christ, shall reign on earth. Like a returned lesson, the Jews must go back to their ceremonial worship. The Church will have been caught up to be with Christ (I. Thess. 4: 13-16); and then "from the rising of the sun unto the going down of the same," says God, "My name shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place incense shall be offered unto me, and a pure offering. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord as in the days of old, and as in former years." Before this time the Lord must return—must come suddenly to his temple; "And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver, and shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in rightousness." (See also Zech. 12; 13: 31, 2, 9; Jer. 31: 9; 50: 4, 5).

But what shall we learn from this Scripture? Is it not to let God have his rights with us? "Will a man rob God?" What a question for the living God to ask of those who profess to honor him, and the first of whose prayers is daily, "Hallowed be thy name"! "Ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation." Spoken to Israel, how applicable it is to Christian lands! If all the money spent on intoxicants, tobacco and cigars, theatres and other amusements, were turned into direct offerings to God for missionary work, and for relieving and setting up in useful labor the many unemployed who live from hand to mouth, it would be nothing less than God has a right to expect. He is robbed by this reckless, wicked waste of money over hurtful lusts. Here is the remedy: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, whether I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

Systematic giving, self-denying giving, is according to the mind of God. Tithes, the tenth of what we have, may be a minimum—and I have never known one who gave God the tenth without receiving blessings in things temporal and spiritual: and it is certainly true that "he that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly: and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully" (II. Cor. 9: 6): for our Lord has taught us that with what measure we mete, it shall be measured to us again (Matt. 7: 2). But the Apostle Paul touches the core of the matter when he says, "Let each man do according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver." The measure of our appreciation of Christ, of our knowledge of his will, and of our faith in him, will alone be the limit of our gifts for his service. And thus the urgent entreaties of men will bias us in no way, but the quietly and surely ascertained will of God. There are people who ask gifts for the work of the Lord, and who try to shame Christians into giving; but this pressure is not according to the will of God.

"BRING YE ALL THE TITHES INTO THE STOREHOUSE"

Lesson Points

Suggestions and Illustrations for the Use of Sunday School Teachers

WHO was Malachi? The question will probably remain forever unanswered. The word Malachi is not a proper name, but is simply a Hebrew word meaning "my messenger." The writer of the book, therefore, was anonymous. He appealed to his people simply as a messenger from God. A careful analysis of his book, however, has led to the discovery of clues to its date. The reference to gifts to the governor, shows that at that time Nehemiah was not governor, because Nehemiah tells us that he did not accept gifts. Other references and allusions show that it must have been written before 445, and probably about 458. The abuses which the prophet denounces, were those that Ezra set himself to extirpate. Its argumentative style, so different from that of the other prophets, is very much after the manner of Ezra, and this fact with other clues, suggests the suspicion that the great scribe was himself the author. Whoever it may have been, he was evidently a disappointed, disheartened man. He complains that the people are making marriages with the heathen; that the priests did their duty perfunctorily and would not do the most trivial work, unless there was to be pay for it; and that the people neglected the services of the temple and failed to provide properly for it. The tithes were not paid, and those who did give, gave the refuse of their flocks and were careless about the ceremonies appointed under the law. All this is deplorable in the prophet's eyes, and he warns his people that God, who has already chastised them, will again lose patience and will come upon them with judgments.

A son honoreth his father. At this time and down to the time of Christ, the Jews were very insistent in claiming God as their Father. That claim was justified [illegible] people who make it must not forget that the relationship calls for special filial duties. [illegible] to give him at least as much honor as a father has the right to expect from his son. A distinguished writer tells the story of a man of singular purity of character, brave and honorable, and proud of his descent from a long line of illustrious statesmen and soldiers. But his son cares nothing for these things, mixes with the lowest and most degraded young men of the town, steals his father's money out of his desk and, finally, after a disgraceful escapade, runs away. The father casts him off for disgracing a stainless name, and the only condition on which he agrees to send him money is that he take a new name and never bear his old one again. The youth agrees and goes his way to live a dissipated life. But his father's brother is not content to have him thus lost. He goes after him, finds him and undertakes his rescue. He does not scold him, but he tells him the story of his great ancestors. After getting the young man interested, he tells him the story of his father's early life, of the sacrifices he made to maintain the honor of the family name, and of the hopes he had built on his son's talents and education. The son had never understood his father before, and he listened to his uncle's recital of the facts with a strangely troubled mind. Finally he sees how ungrateful he has been, and of his own motion offers to go with his uncle to his father and beg his forgiveness.

My name is great among the heathen (R. V.). The future tense of the verb in the Authorized Version completely changes the prophet's meaning, and is not justified. It makes the passage a prediction of the conversion of the heathen, while the prophet was really declaring that, even then, God was honored by the heathen more than by his own people. Recently two missionaries visited a town in China where the Gospel had never been preached. To their astonishment the two most honored and learned men in the town at once gave in their adhesion to Christianity and asked for instruction. Being asked how it was that they had been so easily convinced, they said that one of them had accidentally become possessed of a Gospel of Mark in Chinese. They could not understand some parts of it, but they had studied it, and found that it inculcated the very principles on which they conducted their own lives. They tried to follow it more closely, and for more than a year they had practically been Christians without knowing it.

Will a man rob God? God has a right to offerings. If a man retains all the money he gets to spend it on himself and his family and makes no acknowledgment to God of his obligation to him, he robs God. He applies to his own use money which of right belongs to God. Our own government would not stand such treatment. The government provides police and sanitary appliances and gives the citizen the boon of civilization, and in return it demands that the man pay his taxes, and he does pay them to avoid losing his property. Now God loads us with benefits: the very air we breathe, our own mental and physical powers, are his gift, and if no acknowledgment is made, he would be within his rights if he administered punishment by withdrawing his gifts.

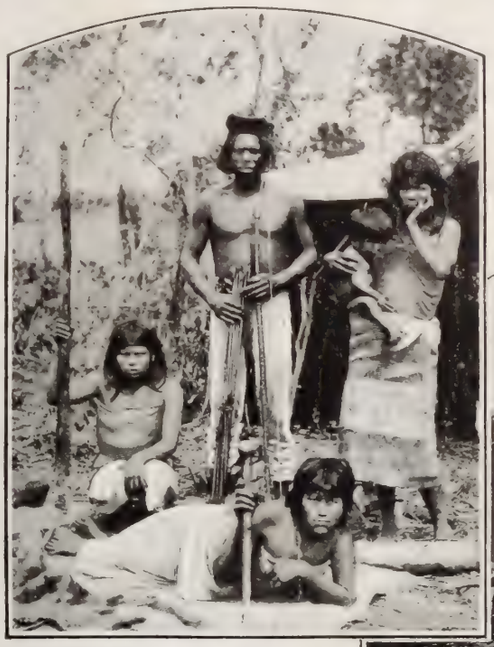
A YOUNG BOLIVIAN SAVAGE

Four Thousand Miles Among Savages

Carrying the Bible to the Strange South American . . . Peoples—Remarkable Journeys Among Wild Forest Tribes

AN AMAZONIAN CHIEF IN WAR DRESS

IN connection with my work, a few words concerning myself and the way God led me into my wide and perilous field of labor may not be amiss. I was born, 1859, in Goteberg, Sweden, and at an early age broke away from my dear mother's arms, and, shipping aboard a merchant vessel, with one of whose owners I was acquainted, began, as an apprentice, learning the art of navigation (with ambition set upon becoming a sea-captain), the wanderings through which the Lord mercifully brought me, and which have by his grace been turned to good account in his service. Twice I suffered shipwreck; once I had to swim for my life; often my lot was cast among evil men, but, in terrific storms, through hardships almost unendurable and dangers imperiling soul and body, I felt the need of my mother's God, and the knowledge that her faithful prayers followed me was inspiration and protection. I visited many countries of Europe; also India, Java, Australia, North and South America, and at last God's providence brought me to the Falkland Islands, where I was converted. On the mainland, where I began to preach, one of my first converts was my own wife, and together we started a sailors' mission, which became a mighty power, also a Spanish mission which has sent forth many branches of Christian work. Spanish is the principal language of civilized South America; but there is a great aboriginal population speaking various languages and dialects of its own.



A TOBAS FAMILY

RANCHOS OF CIVILIZED INDIANS

At this time a desire to carry God's Word to the tribes of the vast and neglected interior of South America took possession of me, and since then over 20,000 copies of the Holy Scriptures, in many languages, have passed through my hands. My travels have covered over 50,000 miles, 3,000 of which I made mule-back and horse-back, and much of it on foot—always carrying my Bibles. To forty-two different nationalities and tribes I have presented the Word of God, and I have reached with the Gospel over one million souls. Six times have I crossed the great Andes; have visited many places where hardly a white man had ever been before, and encountered numerous tribes unknown to the civilized world; and, altogether, my journeyings from Patagonia to the Amazon, and along its tributaries, might be compared to those of Stanley and Livingstone in Darkest Africa. Truly, Darkest Africa is better known to-day than darkest South America, our sister continent. I have journeyed 3,000 miles through the interior without meeting a single Protestant missionary.

Wild, savage tribes there are many, roaming about through the great forests like wild beasts, unclad, untaught, uncared-for, speaking a babble of strange tongues, and practising in pathetic ignorance cruel and revolting customs; yet eager for something better than they know. When among a tribe of Chiquitanos, to whom I was preaching through an interpreter, I said: "The Bible is the Word of God," some wanted to kiss the book and to kiss my hand. A man of seventy years said: "Blessed be God for this good news. It is the first time I have heard it in all my life." A young man, semi-civilized, to whom I gave a Bible, had heard some vague story of a "Book of Life," had been seeking it for three years and received it with unspeakable delight. In Bolivia alone there are over 1,000,000 Indians; in the depths of Brazil 5,000,000 more. And this mighty host are as sheep without a shepherd! In New York you have one preacher to every 600 people; in South America, with its 7,000,000 square miles and 40,000,000 population, we have only about 200 Protestant preachers—one to every 200,000 souls.

The tremendous difficulty of reaching these inland tribes and the dangers attendant furnish explanation of the world's ignorance concerning them. My last journey, covering some 4,000 miles, from Buenos Ayres to the Amazon—a journey that has never been made before by a missionary of the Cross—occupied many months, during which I had no news from family or friends. I went through trackless forests, where deadly serpents hung overhead or crawled under foot. Wild beasts howled around our camp at night and tigers crept almost upon us.

Among the forty-two tribes encountered, the Chiriguanos, Tobas and Sirionos are particularly interesting, since they are typical of many related tribes. The Chiriguanos, numbering 46,000, live under despotic chiefs, and are fierce and shiftless. The garment sometimes worn by those living near semi-civilized tribes is a square of cloth with a hole in the centre for the head. In courtship, the suitor piles wood in front of a girl's door. If her father duplicates the pile he is accepted; otherwise, he must pile wood elsewhere for a wife. Women are abject slaves. The dead are buried under the rancho, in sitting posture. Wailing begins at sunset and lasts till sunrise. In epidemics the sound is horrible—as of a vast number of souls in torment. They have no idols and appear to worship nothing, although they speak of "Timpa," a sort of "Great Spirit," and of "Ana," a demon, and attribute extraordinary powers, such as stopping the rain, causing and curing plagues and raising the dead, to their Brujos (medicine men). Among the Tobas the Brujos are tyrants. The sick and weak, often submissive, it is strange to say, are clubbed to death, and the aged buried alive, the women performing this fearful office as a sacred duty at the command of the Brujos. On a tree by a grave one will see a bunch of fruit hung by a woman who loved the dead, yet who assisted at his execution. The Tobas are magnificent horsemen and throw spears with marvelous accuracy. Through their neighbors, the Guisanais, a semi-civilized tribe, they might be Christianized. I know of an Indian chief who walked 1,000 miles barefoot in search of a missionary for his tribe. The Chiquitanos chief embraced me at parting and wanted to keep me. Among them all, photography was attended with difficulties; even the Chiquitanos distrusted my camera, afraid I would carry "souls" off in my "black box." Slavery exists in connection with the india-rubber trade. Many Indians lose their lives in the forests while looking for the india-rubber milk; and also while shooting the rapids of the Madeira Falls in canoes loaded with rubber. I nearly perished in the Falls.

On the lecture platform and in the religious press I am pleading for the dying millions of South America. I am going back, and I hope to journey again into the heart of South America, carrying my Bibles and preaching through an interpreter wherever possible. My wife is now at work in our little mission at Adrogue, Buenos Ayres, doing all in her power for native children. Here and there, as best we could, we have established little missions all over the continent. We purpose starting an Indian school wherein we may gather children of benighted races, train them up as missionaries and send them back to their people. We also hope to found a school of interpreters, who are greatly needed in the work. In this work, which is one of faith, we are depending wholly upon the kind cooperation of God's people in the United States and elsewhere, and all the material aid they can give us will be gratefully acknowledged. All contributions should be sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and letters regarding the work may be addressed to the undersigned at Adrogue, F. C. S., Buenos Ayres, South America.

EMILIO OLSSEN.

A GROUP OF SEMI-CIVILIZED SOUTH AMERICAN INDIANS

An Unrivaled Picturesque Panorama

A Sunday in France's Beautiful Capital

A Visit to Mission and Evangelistic Centres

IN PARIS AGAIN! Is there any city on earth that so thrills the visitor and entrances him? Coming hither direct from London with its solemn, serious life, its streets crowded with business men who, preoccupied with business cares, hurry along without a smile or a radiant glance—the contrast is startling. Here, everyone seems to be gay, light-hearted, not to say frivolous. The Parisian crowd seems bent on enjoying itself. On the boulevards, in the stores and cafes, around the entrances to the theatres, there are groups of loungers, well dressed and polite, who seem by their manner to have no occupation in life but pleasure. They stroll around as if time with them were one long holiday. Doubtless plenty of work is done in the great city. The clerks in stores, the waiters in the cafes, the cab-drivers and all the other men and women whose business it is to minister to the wants and pleasures of the idle, must have a busy time, and there are artisans and mechanics who, in their own sections of the city, do their share of the work that is needed by a city of two and a half million persons; but even these, when their work is done, insist on their share of the pleasures that are going. I have seen hundreds of them dancing gaily in the squares and open places, as gay and light hearted as the wealthy pleasure-seekers. A merry, laughing, child-like populace it seems to the stranger, on all faces the gaiety that takes no thought for the morrow. It is hard to believe that this frivolous people could become the frenzied mob that, in 1871, burned the magnificent palace of the Tuileries, overturned the Vendome Column, and prepared to destroy the world-famous Cathedral of Notre Dame. Yes, this light-hearted, pleasure-loving people are capable of fierce passions, and perhaps because of their shallowness are more easily fired by the contagion of destructive ferocity. But at present we see no symptom of such ebullitions, and they saunter along the boulevards in the evening, or sit under the trees, drinking, laughing, joking and making merry.

INTERIOR OF A RESCUE MISSION HALL IN PARIS

The Paris of to-day is a very different city from the Paris immortalized by Victor Hugo and the historians of the Great Revolution. Napoleon III. could not have uttered the boast of Augustus that he found the city brick and left it marble, but he could boast of transforming its highways and making it a city of magnificent streets and beautiful thoroughfares. People said of him that when he set Baron Haussman to work to lay out these wonderful avenues, his chief desire was to have long, straight streets that could be swept by his artillery, and to lay them with asphalt so that the Communists might have no granite blocks with which to make their barricades. But, be his motive what it might, the results are here to-day—beautiful, noble and impressive. What a wonderful spectacle, for instance, is the avenue of the Champs Elysees from the immense Place de la Concorde, with its beautiful fountains and its Egyptian Obelisk at one end, to the Triumphal Arch at the other, its outline almost lost in the hazy distance. Noble trees with their overhanging branches line the long stretch of promenade, and overlooking all on each side are the palaces of the aristocracy. Then there is that other glorious avenue which starts as the Boulevard de la Madeleine and, without a turn, becomes the Boulevard of the Capucines, and then the Boulevard of the Italians, but is all one long tree-shaded, mansion-lined thoroughfare. Besides these there is the grand avenue, one of the finest driveways in the world, called the Avenue of the Bois de Boulogne. This roadway, one hundred and forty yards wide and nearly a mile long, is a continuation of the Champs Elysees, beyond the Triumphal Arch. A sidewalk on the one hand for pedestrians and a riding path on the other for equestrians present a scene of gaiety on a sunny afternoon not to be equaled in any capital in the world. To get a general idea of this magnificent city one needs to ascend a tower of the Trocadero palace, 270 feet in height, or to climb to the upper platform of the famous Eiffel tower, 904 feet above ground, the highest building in the world. This extraordinary structure was erected as the supreme effort of the Exposition of 1889, and still stands a conspicuous object in the landscape from every section of the city. From this elevation the whole city is spread out like a map before the spectator. One sees the great cathedral of Notre Dame, with its three great Gothic doors symbolizing the Holy Trinity, and its great circular windows symbolizing eternity, its two great towers and the marvelous tracery of its facade. Most extraordinary of all are the horrible creatures, half human, half bird or beast at its corners, the grotesque products of the sculptor's imagination, which glare down as if in diabolic mockery from the balustrades of the cathedral roof. Conspicuous in the panorama, too, is the graceful column which marks the site of the Bastille, that hoary dungeon of pre-revolutionary days when favorites of royalty could send an enemy to rot in its cells without accusation or trial for the remainder of his life. It was taken by the revolutionists in July,

RUE DE RIVOLI AND TERRACE OF THE TUILERIES GARDEN

PARIS FROM ST. GERVAIS, SHOWING THE SEVEN BRIDGES

CHURCH OF THE MADELEINE IN PARIS

1789, and demolished, and the "Column of July" now commemorates its destruction. From our point of elevation we see also the famous cemetery of Pere-La-Chaise, the last resting place of some of the most illustrious of French citizens. The cemetery occupies 110 acres, and being laid out on the side of a hill, has the appearance of a city of the living, the entrance to the vaults being like tiny houses. Here, too, we descry the dome of the Pantheon, the magnificent mausoleum, in the vaults of which one hundred men famous in French history have been laid to rest. Farther on rises the dome of the Hotel des Invalides, one of the finest buildings ever erected for the shelter of military heroes. It has apartments capable of accommodating five thousand men, though now some five hundred distinguished soldiers are all that are gathered under its roof. Beneath its gilded dome is the sarcophagus in which is the body of the great Napoleon. Conspicuous also is the light, graceful spire of Sainte Chapelle, a beautiful church of the thirteenth century, the most perfect example in Paris of Gothic architecture. Near and far the eye is caught by glittering domes, towers and spires marking the location of the churches and public buildings of this wonderful city, while through it all, flows in graceful curve the river Seine, spanned by its beautiful bridges and alive with craft

M. ALFRED PICARD
President of the Exposition

THE ARCH OF TRIUMPH

M. POUYAER
Director of the Exposition of all descriptions. It is now Sunday morning. Blessed day of spiritual communion and invigoration! The Christian traveler can never forget it, wheresoever he may be. But there is nothing in the aspect of the Parisian streets to remind him of the fact. The stores and cafes are open all day as usual; I notice that the masons are at work on the great building in the Rue de Rivoli; squads of soldiers are marching here and there; there is the usual throng of carriages on the streets, and all the pleasure resorts are doing a roaring trade. In seeking a church of my own faith I am not successful, so I enter the Church of the Madeleine, one of the most fashionable in the gay city. There is a high altar before me, and on either hand are the boxes for confession. A singularly beautiful interior; but the congregation is sparse, and the priests are droning out their Latin prayers in the most perfunctory fashion. This is not my idea of worship, so I speedily quit the church. Outside there is a mountebank performing his tricks, and I notice that he has a larger crowd to watch him than the priests have within. Their robes are more gorgeous and the music is much finer, but the mountebank seems to be in higher favor.

VIEW OF THE RIVER SEINE AND CITY ISLAND

THE TROCADERO PALACE FROM THE EIFFEL TOWER

THE PLACE DE LA CONCORDE

Nearby, almost in the shadow of the Madeleine, my ear is gladdened by familiar sounds. A few voices are singing one of Mr. Sankey's hymns. I cannot catch the words, but the tune is like a message from home. I soon find the hall whence it comes. It is one of the Mc'All Missions, which have done so much for the poor of Paris. There are not more than a hundred present, but the heartiness of the singing, the earnestness of the preacher, a bright young Frenchman, and the testimony of the workers give the impression of sincerity and purity of worship which I did not get in the ornate service of the Madeleine. I visited also the Salle Rivoli, where a similar service was in progress. The people here had a weary, despondent aspect, as of people with whom life went hard. There were about one hundred and eighty present. Pastor Brown gave an earnest address lasting about ten minutes, and two other speakers gave short addresses, all very simple and pointed. Night after night, the year round, these meetings are held, and the Gospel light is kept burning. It is so little in this great, indifferent, atheistical city that one wonders that the workers are not discouraged; but Christ cheers them by giving them souls as seals to their ministry and they go on in faith and hope. As I left the hall, I met at the door a beautiful college-bred American girl who has consecrated her life to the work of which the Salle Rivoli is the centre. She visits the women and girls in their homes, ministers to them in sickness, comforts them in bereavement, invites them to the meetings and welcomes them at the Salle. She said the work was often discouraging, but there were miracles of grace wrought there and she was glad to go on. I thought as I looked at her that she was breaking the alabaster box of her precious life over the Saviour's feet in that godless city.

One other memorable scene that I witnessed was a meeting on board the Bon Messager, the boat which plies on the Seine and other French rivers. Pastor M. Huet and his wife and children live on the boat, and as they go from place to place preaching the Gospel to the river towns, they have won many souls. The boat is becoming well known now, and when it ties up at some wharf in Paris or in country towns a number of people are sure to come on board. There is good singing, a plain presentation of the Gospel and a tract for every visitor. So my Sunday in Paris ended.

W. J. PECK.

A SUNDAY GROUP AT ST. CLOUD

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR.

T. DeWitt Talmage
EDITOR.

B. J. FERNIE, G. H. SANDISON,
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald [illegible]

Subscriptions may commence [illegible]

Remittances [illegible] manner available to the remitter. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed [illegible] Mexico, foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year [illegible]

Renewals.—It is always best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers. [illegible] by tardy renewals.

Change of Date.—It takes two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address. [illegible] and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,
Bible House, New York City.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York as Second-class Matter

Why Not Mediate?

WHY SHOULD not President McKinley mediate? Doubtless he would like to do so. He did not want war in Cuba, he does not want war in the Philippines. He believes in the sweetness of the beatitude: "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." But he recognizes the rights of the two parties in arms in South Africa. They have made an appeal to the God of battles. We think they might have settled their differences without bloodshed. But they failed to do so. For President McKinley to offer to mediate between them would imply a judgment adverse to one or both of the parties at strife, which would be construed as unfriendly. If, however, Great Britain, seeing nothing but a long and bloody war before her, should intimate a willingness to submit the case as it now stands, or as it may at any future moment stand, to the judgment of the Powers, and especially to the judgment of the Chief Executive of this nation, and if the Afrikanders should be willing to do the same, this would be precisely what such meetings as that at the Hague were intended to promote.

The "Christian Herald" contains twenty-four pages this week, or four pages more than usual. These additional pages have been provided in order that the extra pressure of our advertising columns might not encroach on the rights of our readers.

Tardy Justice

THE Sultan of Turkey has issued a proclamation to the effect that all wives and families of officials, who were killed during the massacres, shall be pensioned, while the churches, schools and monastries destroyed at the time, shall be rebuilt, and fifty-four prisoners shall be pardoned and set at liberty. It is tardy justice, and does not restore to the Armenians the lives and property sacrificed at that time. But the Sultan fears a stampede of Armenians from his dominions, such a migration being encouraged by their ecclesiastical authorities. It is supposed that this pledge will prevent the threatened exodus.

Matters in Alaska

EX-SECRETARY FOSTER has made a very exhaustive discussion of the boundary question between the United States and Great Britain. It is in the form of a lecture before the National Geographical Society, and has now been issued in their organ. The lecture is accompanied by maps and diagrams and seems to be a strong argument in favor of the American claim. The London papers taunt us with the insincerity of our friendship. If Great Britain would come down from her high horse, admit the justice of our claim, and then propose some material consideration for what she wishes, in the way of a sea-port, doubtless Uncle Sam would treat the matter in a business-like way. Sentiment is one thing and business is another. We are not going to quarrel with the "Great Mother over the Sea," nor are we going to give away for nothing what is ours by purchase from Russia, and what Great Britain has so recognized, until the Klondike gold discovery.

Next week's "Christian Herald" will consist of twenty-eight pages, and the edition will exceed one and a half million copies, weighing 480,000 pounds. Some of our subscribers express the hope that our subscription list for 1900 will contain a million names. If all would make good use of next week's issue it might contain even more.

Final Warning

OUR beautiful Home Sunshine Calendar is evoking universal commendation, and tens of thousands have already found their way into as many happy homes. It pays to make one's home bright and cheerful, and it is truly surprising how much sunshine this bit of bright color, tastefully hung against the wall, diffuses.

We have taken great pains to make this gift to our subscribers as attractive as possible, and it is generally admitted that we have succeeded thoroughly. Next month you will pay a dollar for just such a Calendar as we give free to all who may be kind enough to subscribe or renew in November, and who thus cooperate with us in having our business expeditiously handled by experienced help.

We employ in our office about two hundred clerks to attend to details; but this season promises to excel anything in our previous experience, and we are putting forth this special effort to insure for every subscriber that careful, business-like treatment which must result in satisfaction to all and disappointment to none.

We have no misgivings as to our old subscribers. They know us and cordially appreciate all we are doing, and in response to our request to aid us in the manner proposed would gladly send in their renewals without the special incentive of a beautiful Calendar; but during the year we have taken into our family over 130,000 New Subscribers, and they are the particular ones to whom we make this final urgent appeal to renew their subscriptions before December, in order that they may share all the good things provided for the large family to which we are now catering.

These Home Sunshine Calendars, as already stated in previous issues, consist of six eggshelled cards, each about the size of a page of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, beautifully lithographed in twelve colors, each containing a different design, and on the reverse a carefully arranged and accurate chronology of all the important events which have taken place during the Nineteenth Century, in the two months which that particular card may represent.

As this chronology is arranged according to the days of the month, one can tell at a glance just what great things occurred on any particular day, together with the year in which they took place. It is well worth a year's subscription.

Remember that your subscription must be postmarked November, and as the last day of this month will be Thanksgiving Day—a legal holiday—it may be necessary that you get your subscription in the mail on Wednesday, the 29th. In order that no one entitled to this Calendar may be disappointed, we have arranged, should our stock run out, to have as many more lithographed as may be needed to supply the demand. Hence if you renew or subscribe in November you will surely get your Calendar. No disappointment possible.

The Uprising .. Against Polygamy ..

BY [illegible] our cities, with a singer he was selected to go on a mission to the leading eastern cities. He thus became personally informed of the feeling in eastern centres. He knows the disposition on the part of many to palliate faults; he understands their disposition to sympathize [illegible] He defies the American sentiment to preserve the purity of the home and declares his purpose to sit as a member of the National House of Representatives.

He knows that his followers have elected him as a proclaimed polygamist; that he has by law the majority vote of his Utah constituency and that by the order usual in the organization of the House, the clerk of that body has been required to put his name on the roll of membership. He knows too that if he should thus, without objection being made, take the oath of a member of the House that the House of Representatives has absolute control over all questions affecting its organization and can expel him; but he counts first, upon such a compliance with forms that no technical objection can be raised to his membership; secondly, that the question can be so mixed in partisan politics as to secure to him certain cooperation in his plans; and, third, that there will be a measure of indifference on the part of many to taking any such positive action as that of his expulsion; fourth, familiar with the sympathetic feeling of the American people he and his friends are now trying to create the belief that he is only living with his polygamist wives to save them from suffering. He does not deny that he is a polygamist; he does not repent of it. He does hope with his firm purpose and these several conditions, that no contest will appear against him and that by the employment of eminent legal talent (for which the Mormons would willingly pay largely, if he has to meet the bald question of his expulsion), his appeal to the kind sentiment of the country will accomplish the rest. His friends apparently hope to turn attention away from his practising and teaching polygamy, by concentrating thought upon the idea that he is a very kind-hearted man, and that his polygamy consists only in supporting and saving from poverty and suffering the women who [illegible] marriage.

Mr. Roberts leaves it to be inferred that, if he did not practise polygamy and continue his relations with his two plural wives, they would suffer. There has been a great deal of this sort of talking. Mormons claiming that they are not polygamists if they are not taking new wives, but are only supporting their old "plural wives." This deception can not long deceive the American people. They will see the principle is the same as in cases of bigamy. The correction of any crime involves suffering. In the imperfection of human affairs, the suffering cannot be meted out exactly according to the measure of guilt of the parties involved. The bigamist may support the woman with whom he has committed bigamy, but the law does not tolerate his living with her longer as wife. Nor will any sentiment of kindness in the hearts of the people palliate his doing so. He must forever after obey the law, and all concerned must suffer the consequences.

Mr. Roberts' continuance in polygamy is no less a crime than his first step in it, and the public judgment—and especially the noble women of the country—will rise up to protect the purity of the home, whatever appeal he may make directly or indirectly to their sympathy for his wife number "two" or number "three."

The public expression of sentiment in protection of the purity of the home has been most wide-spread and emphatic. Resolutions have been passed by Presbyteries, Synods, Conferences and Associations all over the country. The religious bodies who have said anything have pronounced against polygamy. The women of the land have been specially active and determined. The stand taken by Miss Helen Gould in her resolution in defense of the American home has been followed by great outbursts of cooperative sentiment.

Mr. Roberts has treated all these as so many paper balls fired at him, which do not bring blood; but he begins to wince as affidavits giving the facts in his case are taken. It is hoped the legal record will be fully made up so far as possible before the assembling of Congress. If it is settled that a polygamist cannot sit in Congress, that will go far towards making it impossible that a polygamist may hold office under the United States. Now the law specifically forbids the admission of polygamists to our country and our immigration officers report that ninety-five per cent. of the Mormons admitted are women.

Washington, D. C. GEN. JOHN EATON.

"Best of All Testaments"

From D. L. Moody

[illegible]

I am delighted with the Red Letter New Testament [illegible] it will do much good [illegible] demand on both sides of the water.

[illegible]
D. L. MOODY.

From Pres. National W. C. T. U.

[illegible]

I heartily thank you for the Red Letter New Testament you so kindly sent me. It is in convenient and handsome form. I shall greatly prize it, for I am sure the work will prove very helpful to all who wish to study the life of our Saviour, and I wish everyone might have a copy of it.

LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.

From Commander Booth Tucker

THE SALVATION ARMY, New York.

I am in receipt of a very handsome copy of your Red Letter New Testament. It certainly seems to me a splendid idea which you have hit upon, and trust that it may be more than ever helpful in the glorious cause of salvation. Praying the Lord to abundantly bless you in all your efforts, believe me,

Faithfully yours,
[illegible]

From Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman

FOURTH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
New York.

I have just received by your kindness the Red Letter New Testament. I have looked it over carefully, and without any hesitation [illegible] best thing of the kind ever published. I shall certainly use it in my work, and have already called the attention of my friends to it. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN

BRIEF NOTES

The venerable Bishop William Taylor is passing the closing years of a long and active life [illegible]

A bill has been prepared, and will be introduced in Congress, providing for a number of chap[illegible]

[illegible] during the past year the enrollment of children in the Public Schools aggregated 16,687,643 being an [illegible]

The Pulpit Supply Committee of the Fifth [illegible] chosen Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, of New Court Congregational Church, London, to succeed the late Rev. John Hall.

Evangelistic meetings are being held in the Calvary Baptist Church, Brooklyn. Mr. Phillips Hall, the successful business man evangelist, is assisting the pastor in the preaching, and Mr. Weeden conducts the singing.

We are requested to acknowledge the receipt of the following sums for Mr. Norwood's work in Colombia, South America: Addie Bene[illegible] reported by Miss Norwood, Bucaramanga, $6.00.

The General Missionary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church is able to report an increase in the total receipts for the fiscal year just closed of $54,754 over the receipts of the previous year. The total amount contributed was $1,230,544.

Prof. George B. Herron has resigned his chair of Applied Christianity in Iowa College at Des Moines, his reason for this step "being that the churches and wealthy men do not support the college because of my interpretation of the teach[illegible]

The Rev. Richard Salter Storrs, D.D., has resigned the pastorate of the Congregational Church of the Pilgrims, in Brooklyn, where he has served for fifty-three years. Failing health is the cause of this step, which took the congregation by [illegible]

Twelve secretaries, representing the Baptist, Congregational, Episcopal, Methodist, Presbyte[illegible] have formulated a protest against the recent regulations put in force by the new Japanese min[illegible] in the schools of Japan.

The Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, New York, has arranged to visit the Holy Land, and will leave [illegible] for Egypt and Palestine. Dr. Chapman will be accompanied by a large number of fellow-pastors and religious associates.

The venerable Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, the veteran founder of Roberts College, Constantinople, is now eighty-eight years of age. He had the joy recently of being present at the ordination of his son, Rev. Christopher R. Hamlin, over the Congregational Church at Canton Centre, Conn., and of offering the ordination prayer.

The Dowager Empress of China, whose power is now supreme in that country, is manifesting her dislike of Christian missions. Under her rule persecution has broken out in several districts. The American Bible Society has received reports [illegible] outrages are reported from other provinces.

Miss [illegible] that men at Woods Holl, in collecting gulls' wings [illegible] the living birds, and then leave the birds to live or die as they may. Speaking of a walk along the [illegible] upon one of those lovely white birds flapping upon the ground, with one or both wings torn off."

The Wrecked Cruiser

DETAILS of the wreck of the United States cruiser Charleston indicate that none of the officers were to blame for the catastrophe. The vessel was cruising around the north coast of Luzon, one of the Philippine Islands, on November 7. About six o'clock in the morning she struck a coral reef off the uninhabited island of Font. No such reef is marked on the charts, and it was therefore through no carelessness that the vessel ran upon it. An immediate examination of the hold was made, and it was found that the injury was so serious that there was danger of the vessel foundering, if she should slide off the reef. The bow was well out of the water, but the stern was sunk to within two feet of the upper deck. As a high sea was running, there was a strong probability of the vessel sliding down, stern foremost. No time was lost in abandoning the cruiser. Provisions and arms were quickly put on board the boats and the crew rowed away. A landing was made on a rocky island, but the next day the crew again took to the boats and reached Kaniguan Island. Three days were spent there, and then the launch, with an officer and seven men, started for Manila to secure assistance for the others. They had a hard and perilous voyage, lasting four days, before they fell in with the transport Aztec, homeward bound. This vessel towed them to the Oregon, which took them on board. The gunboat Helena was then provisioned from the Oregon and dispatched to Kaniguan Island to bring off the remainder of the Charleston's crew. Admiral Watson does not seem to have been sure at the time of sending his dispatch that the cruiser would be a total loss. Should the weather prove favorable, an effort will undoubtedly be made to save some of the stores on board, if not the ship itself. The Charleston was launched in 1888 and cost $1,017,500. As is customary when a vessel is lost, an official inquiry will be held to determine the responsibility for the disaster. In this instance it will probably be a mere formality. The captain and his officers cannot be held accountable if, as is stated, the submerged reef is not marked on the charts. That plea can never avail in cases of moral shipwreck. The cause of spiritual disaster is always neglect to study the Bible and to follow its precepts.

For the commandment is a lamp and the law is light; and reproofs of instruction are the way of life (Prov. 6:23).

Surgical Operation on a Buffalo

Among the animals in the new Zoological Park in New York, is an enormous buffalo which has been sent from Texas. On the railroad journey from his native State he made a determined and persistent attempt to kick out the side of the car. He did not succeed, but hurt himself so badly that when turned loose in the park on his arrival, he was quite lame, and in a few days three large abscesses developed on one of his legs. They grew so much worse that an operation was necessary to save the animal's life. He was caught after a chase and thrown down. Stout rails had been prepared, to which strong ropes had been attached. The buffalo struggled viciously while he was being tied. Several times he regained his feet and broke boards and straps before he was overcome. When at last he was secured, the surgeons quickly performed their work of cleansing the sores and applying antiseptic dressing. After it was over, the buffalo was released and allowed to roam. He appeared to be well pleased with the result and became more tractable. Should there be need for another surgical operation, perhaps the buffalo will not offer such fierce resistance. Having found that the first did him good he may more willingly submit to another. Men, however, are slow to learn the lesson though they have scriptural assurance that afflictions are beneficial.

Be ye not as the horse, or as the mule, which have no understanding: whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle (Ps. 32:9).

Telegraphing at Sea

A remarkable test by Signor Marconi's system of telegraphing without wires, took place on his voyage home from New York. When the steamship St. Paul, by which he traveled, was sixty-six miles from the English coast, he sent a message asking the latest news from the Transvaal. A short summary of the situation was sent in reply and an announcement of the wreck of the United States cruiser Charleston. Signor Marconi then reported to the shore that all was well on board and asked that certain messages from passengers to their friends should be dispatched. One passenger desired to celebrate his arrival by a supper-party, and Signor Marconi asked that the guests whose names and addresses he gave should be notified. By this time the vessel was forty-five miles away, but all the names were correctly received and the invitations forwarded as requested. He made up the news he had received from the shore in the form of a newspaper sheet, copies of which were sold to the passengers for a dollar each, and the proceeds were given to the seamen's fund. That a message should be sent and received without wires, a distance of sixty-six miles, would seem incredible if it were not a fact. It indicates that we are on the verge of discoveries still more wonderful, which will bring the whole world into instant and close communication. It will be well if it suggests also a firmer belief in communication with God who has under his control forces of nature that we, as yet, know nothing of.

The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth (Ps. 145:18).

Killed while Fighting

A double fatality is reported from Shamokin, Pa. There was a celebration at the adjacent village of Enterprise, on Saturday night. Among the party were two Hungarians who patronized the bar freely In the course of the evening these two men quarreled, and after a great deal of abuse expressed in strong Magyar, had been vented, they determined to fight. They walked down to an open space beside the railroad tracks, and throwing off hats and coats were soon belaboring each other vigorously. In the course of the struggle they strayed on the tracks. While they were there, the night express, which does not stop at Enterprise, approached at a speed of forty miles an hour. The engineer saw the men on the tracks and whistled and put on the brakes, and bade the fireman ring the bell. The men stubbornly stayed on the track, each trying to throw the other, until the train struck them and killed them both. This is not the first time, by many, that men have been so possessed by anger and malignity that they have been heedless of their own safety. In one way or another, evil passions are the cause of destruction to those who cherish them.

He that sinneth against me wrongeth his own soul: all they that hate me love death (Prov. 8:36).

Forgot His Child

The chambermaid of a hotel in Jersey City, N. J., was astonished, the other morning, to find a little two-year-old girl sitting, fast asleep, on a chair in one of the rooms of the hotel. The child, on being awakened, was too dazed to give an account of herself. She said her papa had brought her there, but could not give his name or residence. Thinking it was another case of child desertion, the police were notified and they took the little girl to headquarters. In the afternoon a worried man called there to ask if anything had been heard of a lost child. The little girl was brought to him and he recognized her instantly and kissed her. He said he had come from a town up the State and had registered at the hotel. He left the child there while he went out to see a friend. He and his friend had several drinks, and when they parted, he set out to find his hotel. But his potations had affected his mind and he could not remember its name. Forgetting all about his child he had gone to another hotel, and not until he awoke in the morning did he remember her. Then he made a thorough search which finally led him to police headquarters. Happily no harm came through his forgetfulness in this instance, but we may hope he will not continue a habit which notoriously leads people to be recreant to their duty, otherwise he may lose not only his child, but his own soul.

For though they may be like tangled thorns, and be drenched as it were in their drink, they shall be devoured utterly as dry stubble (Nahum 1:10, R.V.).

THE UNITED STATES CRUISER "CHARLESTON," WRECKED IN THE PHILIPPINES ON NOV. 7

Afraid of Astronomers

An extraordinary proof of ignorance was given a few days ago by high officials in Peru. Thirty foreigners mainly Germans went to Peru to study the meteoric display expected about the middle of November. They climbed the San Cristobal mountain near Lima carrying telescopes, photographic apparatus and scientific instruments. Some of the citizens of Lima watched the ascent and speculated on the object the men had in climbing the mountain. Various suggestions were made, but the one that found favor with the crowd was that they belonged to a revolutionary party who were plotting the overthrow of the Government. This suspicion was communicated to the mayor and governor of the city, who immediately dispatched a military force to arrest the party. The officers and soldiers reached the summit of the mountain three hours after midnight and found the astronomers with their telescopes mounted and all in readiness to observe the expected shower of meteors. Explanations were made to show the inoffensive nature of the expedition, but the ignorant men were not satisfied. The whole party were arrested and marched back to Lima and the next day were arraigned in court. The judges were as much in ignorance of the scientific phenomenon as were the citizens and soldiers for they sentenced each astronomer to pay a fine. They were glad to escape with that punishment. Among such a people they might have suffered bodily harm. They fared better than Christian missionaries have sometimes done, when they have encountered ignorance and prejudice which always lead to injustice, and were responsible for the worst crime in human history.

Which none of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory (I. Cor. 2:8).

Transvaal Tidings

The week ending November 18 was a week of suspense and anxiety for the public of Great Britain. Scarcely any reliable news was received from the scene of conflict in Natal, and such items as did come, were not of a character to allay apprehension. General White was effectually surrounded in Ladysmith, and the Boers, from the hills all around the camp, were pouring in a perfect hail of shot and shell. No serious attempt appears to have been made to carry the position by assault. It would appear to be the Boer policy to get General White to exhaust his ammunition by answering their fire, and also, if possible, to blow up some of his magazines. As no fresh supplies of ammunition have reached Ladysmith in several weeks, it is generally believed that the Boer policy of waiting has fair prospect of success. British reinforcements are now arriving daily. At the close of the week about 27,000 men had landed. Some of these were dispatched to the relief of Kimberley, which is surrounded and hard pressed, and the remainder sent to Estcourt, to take part in the movement for raising the siege of Ladysmith. The Boers are taking bold and vigorous measures to prevent this relief force reaching General White. They have massed a large force to the north of Estcourt and have destroyed the great bridge over the Tugela river, which flows between Estcourt and Ladysmith. This will make it very difficult for General Buller to reach Ladysmith from the south, while the route from the east is barred by a large Boer force at Helpmakaar. All the Boer camps appear to be thoroughly on the alert and to be managed with remarkable strategic skill. An instance in point is that of an armored train which pushed out from Estcourt toward Colenso on the north. The Boers suffered the train to proceed without molestation, but as soon as it had passed Frere, half way to Colenso, they tore up the rails to prevent its return. When the train, coming back toward Estcourt, reached the obstruction, they fired upon it and there was a sharp engagement, in which the British suffered heavily. About one hundred officers and troopers are missing, including the dead and wounded. Among the missing is Mr. Winston Churchill, son of Lady Randolph Churchill, who behaved with great heroism, working under a hot fire to get the forward part of the train clear of wreckage and safely on its way back to Estcourt. On both sides there have been deeds of valor which compel admiration for the men engaged in this bloody strife. It is deplorable that such men should be killed or maimed. If the statesmen and diplomatists, who are responsible for this conflict, could be forced to witness one of these cruel battles and to visit afterwards the hospitals where the wounded are taken, they might learn a useful lesson, which might make them more reasonable in future negotiations.

From whence come wars and fightings among you? Come they not hence even of your lusts? (James 4:1).

THE FAMILY AND HOME CIRCLE

Thanksgiving, Old and New

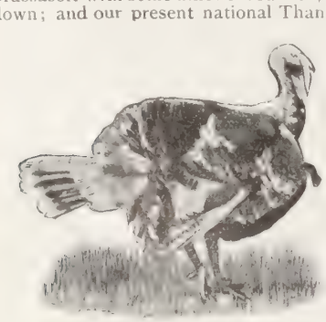
The American Turkey—Thanksgiving in the States, Alaska and the Philippine Islands

OUR illustrations reproduce scenes that are very characteristic of Thanksgiving times. For weeks before the eventful day, the good housewife takes unusual interest in her poultry-yard. To the children when they come home from school, to the hired man and his wife, and even to the neighborly caller, the duck, the chicken, the guinea and the goose selected to grace the Thanksgiving board are fowls of distinction. Of more importance than any of these, however, is the lordly gobler that struts the lawn or reigns in a coop to which choice tid-bits and the best corn are brought for his delectation. Even the "'possum and taters" (which they like so well in Georgia, and of which Frank Stanton, the Southern poet, sings in a way to make anybody hungry), and the nice fat pig (that we like anywhere and that may have a stately garnished dish all to himself and carry a fine red apple in his mouth), must give place to this regal bird which has been king of the board ever since his election at Plymouth, in 1621, when he took precedence of "fine Deere" which Indian guests provided.

He well deserves admiring regard and epicurean honors as he reposes, crisp and brown, with stuffing of chestnut and oysters, on a noble platter, the dish of rich gravy and the tempting red cranberries at hand, wherewith to further flavor the toothsome slices of juicy meat when the skilful knife shall carve them. For one day of the year, turkey rules the world, even the imperial eagle bowing to his superior claims. He ruffles his plumage on magazine covers and in newspaper pages; and even in Europe commands particular regard, for there are American colonies in London, Paris, Munich and other cities who eat Thanksgiving dinners.

There is a vast difference between that first American harvest feast, to which only one hundred and forty persons, including the Indian's "greatest King Massasoit with some ninetie" red men, sat down; and our present national Thanksgiving, in which people of fifty-one States and Territories, and of every clime and many races unite; but the spirit is the same. Our African brother we have long had with us. Then there is the Alaskan Eskimo, the Hawaiian, the Porto Rican and Cuban of the sunny West Indies, and the almond-eyed Filipino of our Pacific islands, who all share, so far as we can make it possible, in the advantages for which we render thanks to God this last day of November, 1899. Already a number of these peoples have taken up the custom, which the little band of Pilgrim Fathers inaugurated so long ago, after their first scant harvest.

While the good New England farmer, when gathering his crop of apples, filially set aside a barrel of his choicest crimson beauties and from his store of golden pumpkins selected the largest that the crisp crust of the immemorial pie might have a royal filling, and while he charged the lads and lassies to save up a goodly supply of butternuts and chestnuts for roasting on Thanksgiving afternoon and evening, our folks in the West Indies and the East have needed to take no such thought, for the nuts and the fruits of the Tropics hung ready for the plucking, and vegetables, more delicious than the humble pumpkin, were in season. Still, many a mother's boy in those South lands will think lovingly of the board at home, of the homely dainties "that mother made," and will yearn for the dear companionship of brothers and sisters, nephews and nieces and cousins and friends, who come from far and near to the dear, old-fashioned Thanksgiving at the blessed country homestead, where everyone felt that the truth indeed was uttered when the gray-haired father or grandfather—or may be, a beloved pastor—pronounced above the bountiful board, the words: "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord."



THE BIRD OF HONOR

AMONG THE ARISTOCRATS OF THE FARM YARD

Transvaal Courtship

The prosperous wooer comes a-riding on the finest horse he has: he wears new clothes, and an ostrich feather in his hat. He enters the house, shakes hands with "Tante," the mother, and "Oom," the father, and lastly to his beloved. Oom says "Sitz" (be seated); a bowl of coffee is brought; a few words pass, such as neighborly inquiries after the welfare of the suitor's parents, the cattle, crops, etc. Presently the lover rising, offers to the beloved a little gift of confectionery. If she declines it he rides away, for that means his rejection. But, we will suppose that, blushing and laughing, she takes it. Then the family considerately drop out, leaving the twain to talk matters over without restraint. [illegible] sticking-needle on the wax candle that lights the room, and the wooer endeavors that his visit may not outlast the burning of the candle down to that point.

Mrs. McKinley's Room

Our President's well known devotion to his wife reveals a side of his character which has much endeared him to his people. The pressure of his official duties and cares would have rendered it impossible for him to be with her a great deal, if he had not, by careful forethought, arrangement and division of his labors, managed to perform much of his work in her room. Those portions of his next message to Congress not dictated to a stenographer have been written while near her. Whenever the summarizing of official reports was dropped, and he began to express his own ideas, he went at once to her sitting-room, and thus contrived to spend many moments in her company. His custom of always putting her into her carriage and lifting her from it himself when he could go with her on her airings has frequently evoked pleasant comment. It is well known that our gentle First Lady is an invalid, and that there has been much suffering in her life which has been so full of kindly helpfulness to others; and this fact emphasizes public pleasure in the knowledge that such thoughtful affection waits upon her.

♦

It grieveth God to see his children sad
For his great bounties worship and be glad.

Women at the Ohio Centennial

OHIO women are planning for full representation at the [illegible] Centennial in Toledo [illegible]. Mothers' Clubs and other feminine orders [illegible] out the Union will be invited to hold conventions in Toledo during the celebration. As for the Department of Domestic Science, that, the ladies hope, will have a building all to itself and receive more intelligent and comprehensive attention than has yet been devoted to this important phase of womanly activity at any previous exposition. Dr. Georgia Merriman, who is spoken of as a probable leader and director, is a well-known church and W. C. T. U. worker, and the only woman ever invited to deliver an address before the Ohio State Board of Agriculture.

CHOOSING THE FINEST OF THE PUMPKINS

♦

Housewifery

There is great cause for congratulation that organized bodies of women are seriously concerning themselves with the servant question. This paper long ago suggested that the only promise of solution lay in this direction, and is therefore particularly pleased with this utterance of the November issue of the official organ of the General Federation of Women's Clubs:

> The girls of the country have been reared almost to a serf[illegible] every conceivable thing except upon matters belonging to the management of a home. Their mothers have left all these things to some possible servant, not pausing to think that in all likelihood the servant would prove utterly incompetent to assume, in a proper manner, the directing of a house. The best domestic is, as a rule, the one whom her employer trains, but a woman herself ignorant of household affairs and especially of cookery, cannot manage or train another. Germany, Scandinavia, Holland, and perhaps other European countries long ago recognized the utility of schools teaching housewifery.

♦

Corn Song

HEAP high the farmer's wintry board!
Heap high the golden corn!
No[illegible] her garners fitlier poured
From out her lavish horn!

Ah! let the good old crop adorn
The hills our fathers trod:
Still let us, for his golden corn
Send up our [illegible] to God!—WHITTIER.

♦

"Sweet Thankfulness"

A little girl's papa called her that because she was always bubbling over with gratitude. "It's Thanksgiving Day at our house the whole year round," he would say laughingly. Every home and life would be happier if infused with a like spirit of appreciation. Let us miss no opportunity of returning thanks to our Heavenly Father, to our parents, our kindred and our friends.

THE TOUCHSTONE

A NEW SERIAL STORY

BY HELEN SHIPTON

CHAPTER VI

Fraternal Greetings

IT seemed to Douglas that the first effect of Caryl's coming, before it ever took place, was to drive himself out of Paradise. Figuratively, because in the half-jealous dread that Mr. Allardyce's words had awakened, he had been compelled to look his own feelings in the face and to admit to himself that he was falling in love with Celia Hamerton while he had neither position nor prospect to offer her. And literally, because, under the circumstances, he felt himself obliged to cut short his stay at the Dower House, which must in any case have soon come to an end, and to go back to his lonely rooms at High Ashes.

Before speaking to Martin Hamerton of his own departure, he mentioned, in as natural a fashion as he could, his meeting with Mr. Allardyce, and the news which that gentleman had told him.

"So he has found you out, has he?" said Martin reflectively. "Now he will begin to shower hospitalities on you as well as the rest of us. He really is not a bad sort, though, and we, for our part, can never refuse him with any comfort, because he is so much afraid that it may be painful to us to see him in our father's place. Moreover, sturdy as he looks, he has some mortal complaint, I believe, and it is always possible that in declining one of his many invitations to dinner one might be refusing a last request."

"How did he make his money?" asked Douglas, feeling that even the pathos of this information could not make him altogether in charity with the man who had warned him not to fall in love with Celia.

"A special kind of chemical manure—I won't attempt to tell you the name of it. He has one son, who is now about nineteen, who will, I suppose, come in for the whole of it, and is expected by his father to be a great man some day. They were away from Sudbrook for six months last year seeing the world, with a tutor to point the morals, for the young man's benefit."

"Do you know—did you ever hear how he made my brother's acquaintance?"

"No. It must have been while they were abroad. Now I come to think of it, there was a rumor of some one whom they fell in with who got young Frank Allardyce out of some scrape into which he had contrived to get himself, in spite of father and tutor. I suppose that must have been Caryl. But it is a strange coincidence that Mr. Allardyce should have met him abroad just at the time when fate was bringing you down into these parts."

"A strange coincidence—and a stroke of great ill luck!" thought Douglas, but naturally could not say so, and consequently felt that he had nothing to say, especially as Celia was sitting near her brother, with silent lips but interested eyes.

But he knew that it was time to take the farewell that he had resolved upon, and in words whose very tameness witnessed to their sincerity he spoke his thanks to his host and hostess for all the kindness that he had met with at the Dower House, and explained that the next day he must leave them.

Martin Hamerton protested with all the warmth of an extremely hospitable soul, and procured the grant of one day more from his guest, mainly because Douglas was hampered in continuing to refuse further kindness by a reason for declining it which he dared not mention.

Celia said very little; no more than courtesy demanded from the mistress of the house; but a man would have been over modest who had failed to see that she was a little sorry that he should go, a little glad that he had consented to stay another day. Douglas could have found it in his heart to cry out to her not to forget him for Caryl—not to share with Caryl the new-born friendship that, such as it was, was his own greatest treasure—but he was not quite crazy yet! What he did was, with smiling lips, but eyes that were earnest and wistful enough, to press Martin to come and see him at High Ashes, and to plead that he might not be quite forgotten when he was no longer interesting as a possible small-pox patient.

To Celia, when he was alone with her the next day, he said almost the same words that he had spoken to the brother and sister together: and how time and blundering they seemed to him! But perhaps Celia understood him not amiss, as his look and tone pointed his meaning, when he spoke of "kindness" and of "never forgetting." The girl was almost nervous, and glad when something happened to break off the conversation. It was nice of him to be so grateful; she liked him all the better for it; but there was something behind it that half frightened her—that she was not ready for, and would not understand.

Douglas saw it and controlled himself—very creditably for a young man in love for the first time. It was too soon to hope to gain a lover; he must not risk losing a friend; and he so behaved himself that he was granted one more day of friendship and tranquility before he went back to the loneliness which, however agitated by doubts and fears, could never now be so uninteresting as it had been till lately.

Only two days later, on returning from work, Douglas found a note awaiting him, at the mere sight of which his heart misgave him. It was as he had expected. Mr. Allardyce, very ceremoniously and in the third person, requested the pleasure of Mr. Douglas Lingard's company at dinner on Thursday in the following week.

"Caryl will be there, of course, by that time," thought the young man, as he wrote his acceptance, in a mood of quiet desperation. "We shall have to meet, I suppose, and as well sooner or later. She will be there, too, no doubt, and so I need not pretend to myself that I would rather keep away."

Reluctance to meet his brother and longing to be again in the same room with Celia were so inextricably blended, however, that Douglas did not really know which predominated, and, perhaps, it was the former that got the upper hand and made him linger on his walk to the Hall on the Thursday evening, so he could be fairly sure of not entering the drawing-room until dinner should be on the point of being served.

Martin Hamerton and Celia were early guests, the young man, for reasons best known to himself, having hurried his sister off with unusual promptitude.

"Here's another old schoolfellow for you to meet," said his host in a gleeful whisper, meeting them at the lower end of the long room. "I haven't told Lingard yet that his brother is coming here to-night. A bit of a pleasant surprise for him, don't you know; and then I shall chaff him a little for not letting me know at once that the young fellow was in the neighborhood."

"Just what I expected!" said Martin Hamerton to himself. "And absolutely unallowable. Social surprises ought to be penal. Now I should like to see a dramatic effect just as much as my good host would, and perhaps rather more; but 'Lingard minor' is too good a fellow to deserve that we should be indulged at his expense."

It was a little strange to see the politely-blank look of a stranger on a face so like that with which the past two weeks had made them so familiar, but when Caryl Lingard recognized his old schoolfellow he warmed up into a cordiality less shy and better expressed than that of his brother. And as they stood talking together, while Mr. Allardyce fidgeted about the room and addressed flowery old-fashioned compliments to Celia, Martin Hamerton quietly and ruthlessly destroyed his hosts chances of a sensational meeting.

Caryl Lingard had been long enough in the world to make it difficult to read in his face any feeling that he did not choose should appear there. He was evidently and naturally interested to hear that his brother was in the neighborhood, but if he was annoyed he did not mean to show it, and he did not trouble himself to profess to be glad.

"Have they quarreled, or only drifted apart?" thought Martin, watching him. "I think I would rather they had quarreled! It is rather sickening to have to believe that life and time of themselves could chill such a love as there was between those two when I saw them last."

"DOUGLAS COULD NOT FAIL TO KNOW HIS UNCLE'S HOUSEKEEPER"

He was forced to believe, however, that there had been no quarrel when presently Douglas was announced, and in the course of his greetings was brought face to face with his brother. Their hands just met, their faces wore the conventional smile that goes with the handshake, and which it needs a special effort, at such a moment, to banish from the lips. Caryl made some obvious remark about the strangeness of their meeting in that particular place, and Douglas answered with some equally unmeaning commonplace.

There was nothing to satisfy the eager student of human nature who was watching them, but Martin set himself to make the most of his evening's opportunities with an expectation of interest and enjoyment that evenings at the Hall did not often afford.

And he saw something that surprised him a good deal, and gave him some food for reflection. Mr. Allardyce was evidently not only very fond of his new young friend, but more—he looked up to him with an admiration and even reverence that mingled oddly with his usual habits of kindly patronage. It was not only the ex-manufacturer's respect for the man of good family, or that which a half-educated elderly man sometimes feels for his juniors who have had all the advantages that he has lacked; but something deeper than either.

"Now, what does this mean?" thought Martin. "Is it possible that Caryl Lingard has turned out the pure, good man that John Ashburton would have liked to make of him?—and if so, how in the world did old Allardyce come to find it out, and to bow down himself before it?"

Douglas Lingard came away not less distraught. The pleasure of meeting Celia had been almost neutralized by the bitterness of being in the same room with Caryl and feeling once more that they two had less than nothing to say to one another. There had been some blissful moments when he and Celia had talked together, saying nothing that the whole room might not have heard, but saying it in the confidential undertones of friendship. But even some of these he had missed, in listening uneasily to catch what Caryl might be talking about. There had been a piquant and delightful strangeness in the sight of Celia in evening dress, with her pretty plump arms and neck milk-white against the ivory-white of her gown, and decked with some of the heirlooms saved from the wreck of the family fortunes. But even this had sometimes been forgotten in the mournful strangeness of the other side of the situation, in the kind of shame with which he watched Mr. Allardyce's behavior to his brother.

Douglas too had seen what Martin Hamerton had noticed, and he too wondered what it meant. How proud it would have made him once to see Caryl so looked up to; and now—how difficult it was not to remember that almost the last time they had met Caryl had been prime favorite with another rich old man!

It was sickening; it made him feel degraded even to have such thoughts and suspicions, and yet how was it possible to help it? How could Caryl be what Mr. Allardyce evidently thought him? And if he was not, why was he taking the trouble to play the part? It seemed to Douglas that he was doomed to stand by and see a subtle spiritual imposture practised upon this kindly, unsuspicious old man, perhaps upon Celia, too, and that he could not say a word to expose it without appearing to be moved by the meanest and most sordid jealousy.

Appearing? Nay, it was true enough; he was jealous even now, before Caryl had shown any sign of giving him further cause.

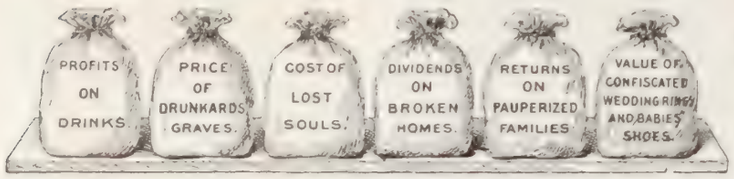
But that there was another side to the question was abruptly borne in upon him about two days after Mr. Allardyce had failed in bringing about the dramatic meeting which his simplicity had devised. This time the meeting really was almost dramatic, but Mr. Allardyce was not there to enjoy it.

Coming home from his work one evening, full of thoughts that, though they were not joyous, made the long miles seem short, the young man came suddenly upon a figure as unexpected as a ghost by daylight. A tall, slender woman, with a thin, rather worn face, and fine dark eyes; a distinctly good-looking face, wreathed just now in a pretty smile.

Douglas could not fail to know his old uncle's late housekeeper and his own cousin, little as he had expected to meet Miss Locke in this neighborhood. But if he had not been a man, and rather a simple one, he could have perceived that the change in her appearance that had come about since they met last, and that vaguely puzzled him, was due to dress much smarter and more girlish than that which she had worn in his uncle's house, and, moreover, that though she professed to be surprised to see him, the lady was not surprised at all, and was, in fact, there for that very purpose.

(To be Continued).

The Saloon-keeper's Money



PROFITS ON DRINKS
PRICE OF DRUNKARDS' GRAVES
COST OF LOST SOULS
DIVIDENDS ON BROKEN HOMES
RETURNS ON PAUPERIZED FAMILIES
VALUE OF CONFISCATED WEDDING RINGS AND BABIES' SHOES

More Letters on the Great National Controversy

THE TWIN BALLOTS

ALONG in November, when chill was the weather,
Two ballots were cast in a box together:
Two ballots were cast in together.
They nestled up close, like brother to brother;
You couldn't tell one of the votes from the other—
You couldn't tell one from the other.

CHORUS: They were both of them rum votes;
They sanctioned the license plan.
But one it was cast by a jolly old brewer,
And one by a Sunday School man.

The Sunday School man—no man could be truer—
Kept busy all summer denouncing the brewer.
But his fervor cooled off with the change in the weather,
And late in the fall they voted together—
In autumn they voted together.

The Sunday School man has always been noted
For fighting saloons—except when he voted—
For temp'rance except when he voted.
He piled up his prayers with holy perfection.
But knocked them all down on the day of election—
But knocked them all down on election.

The foxy old brewer was cheerful and mellow.
Said he: "I admire that Sunday School fellow—
I admire that Sunday School fellow.
He's true to his church; to his party he's truer.
He talks to the Lord, but he votes for the brewer.
He faithfully votes for the brewer."

Oswego, N. Y. —A. P.

COUNTLESS letters from people who have thought, suffered, prayed and striven in the interest of the temperance cause, and, who yet give opposing answers to the question: "Shall the church accept the saloon-keeper's money in aid of its spiritual work?" continue to flood this office. The publication in full of the hundreds fully worthy of public print would fill every page of many issues of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD:

The Lord Wants No "Blood-money" Seeing the discussion in your paper concerning retaining gifts of money from saloon-keepers and the ungodly generally, a personal experience might prove helpful if quoted. When waiting upon the Lord definitely for $15,000 for the removal of the mortgage on the Door of Hope, and as definitely taking it by faith with thanksgiving, one morning I was summoned to the sick-bed of a woman who for years had wrecked lives by an infamous business and had acquired quite a fortune, and who desired to present me with $5,000 in cash, with furniture to furnish another Door of Hope.

The evil one whispered: "Answered prayer;" but such a loathing and repugnance came with the suggestion, that I was made to feel that, much as the money might mean toward liquidating our debt, if that offer was accepted, in the sight of God I would be regarded in a measure as a partner in her crime, it being principally "blood-bought" money and wrung out of the lives of poor creatures.

Going to the hospital, in much prayerfulness and as delicately as possible, my reasons were explained to the sufferer, who heard them without offence, as the justice of such a refusal was recognized. Not many moments later I had the joy of helping her accept the forgiveness of Jesus, on the strength of the promise, "Whosoever will call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

In less than two weeks from that date, from a most unexpected source, by the scratch of a pen and without solicitation, $15,000 was presented for the home from one of the Lord's very own—proving to me more forcibly than ever that God was not so poor as to require the devil's possessions to be employed in carrying on his work.

MRS. E. M. WHITTEMORE.
Founder of the Door of Hope.

Suggests Social Substitute For the Saloon Take the money with thanks. Jesus was the friend of publicans and sinners. Good people condemn the saloon; but so long as there is money in the business the saloon will prosper. I think it a mistake to condemn the owner of a saloon while the United States makes the saloon business honorable. A poor man can go to a saloon, get something to eat and drink for five cents; if he wishes he may sit down and rest awhile. Now, what will any other institution give him for five cents? If he went inside most places to rest an officer would be telephoned for and the man put out. I believe that seventy-five per cent. of the men who enter saloons would not if they could go to some better place. Man is a social being and he will go where he is best entertained; and if the good people would furnish something better than the saloon, it would be but a little while before saloons would be as scarce as stage coaches are alongside of Pennsylvania railroad trains. Until this is done the saloon will flourish because it pays.

Mount Kisco, Pa. GEORGE RUSSELL

Non-Acceptance May Be a Sin Shall we be free from censure if the means are provided us to send the Gospel to those who know it not, and we decline to accept it because it comes through such a channel? Let us take every dollar we can out of the soul-destroying business, and make its influence and power felt in the salvation of souls. Never accept it as a bribe to influence the Church. But unless the giver evidently offers it as such there should be no hesitation in acceptance, and we would be but following the precedent of God's chosen people, the Israelites, and of Christ himself, in acceptance.

Calgary, Canada. W. J. R.

Acceptance Cannot Glorify God We do not glorify the Lord by accepting such money. We are "not to be partakers of other men's sins." God says to such donors: "If I were hungry, I would not tell thee, for the world is mine and the fulness thereof." He desires "first that we give our own selves to him, and then, that "we abound in this grace also."

Knoxville, Tenn. MRS. H. A. D.

A Hard Question; Reject Hush Money If the saloon-keeper gives to the church as a "hush-money" investment—as in my opinion he does in nine cases out of ten—I say a thousand times No! The church cannot afford to receive it. But if the sight of one of his victims—of some drunkard's hapless wife and children—has softened his heart and turned his mind to holier purposes, I say take his gift and use it for church work, or to relieve the distress of drunkards' families. As only the man himself and his God can know his motive in giving, the question is a hard one.

South Deerfield, Mass. O. S. A.

Devote it to Temperance Work If the churches see fit to accept the offering of money from saloon-keepers, it would seem that such offerings should be devoted to one special object—the downfall of the liquor traffic. In that case, figuratively speaking, Satan could be made to work to his own undoing. As soon however as this was understood by the saloon-keepers, I think offerings would cease. Let all churches combine the receipts from saloon-keepers, so far as practicable, and use them to fight the traffic.

A Temperance Home. READER.

Fight the Traffic to the Death The saloon-keeper contributes in taxes to the public school fund. This contribution is coolly accepted by a Christian community. Can the saloon-keepers' money curse the Church and bless the school? Can it be possible that our religion is so elastic that it permits us to tolerate in our civil polity things that we condemn in our Church polity? If evil hands can taint money and if the Church decides to accept money from clean hands only, there will be a multitude of empty pulpits and missionary boxes. When Evil places weapons in the hands of good men and women, sound morals dictate acceptance and use in mitigating the evil. The problem presented by the liquor traffic—an admitted evil—has escaped solution. So long as the evil exists, take all the money taxation wrings from it—take all it will give—and use it in the cause of suffering humanity. Meanwhile, fight the traffic to the death. If your votes and prayers do not agree, disperse of the other.

Telford, Tenn. R. L. PATTON, M.D.

The Saloon Had Swallowed Up Her All Could a mother receive money from the [illegible] was paid to destroy her child, even though it were to procure food for the hungry surviving ones? The account was printed recently of a woman who publicly related her sad story before an audience, met to consider refusing a license to a certain hotel. She recalled to her hearers the time when she had been prosperous and reminded them that the saloon in that hotel had swallowed up her farm, her happiness and the lives of her husband and her three sons, and had left her a wreck. Suppose the keeper of that hotel had made a present to the church in that place of a very handsome pulpit, the admiration of the neighborhood. How could that woman profit by religious service, with that pulpit before her? Could she feel God's special presence there?

[illegible] W. C. FLEETS

What Would Jesus Do? God, not the devil, influences men to give money for Gospel purposes. There are men in the rum business who are not devoid of every good feeling. Circumstances have had to do largely with their being in the business and they are in it to make a living; and probably do not know how to turn their hand to any thing else. While ignorant of salvation and barren of the principles that cause a man to abandon wrong and do right when it costs him his all, yet they look favorably on Gospel effort and are inclined to support it. Shall we crush this disposition? Would Jesus, if he were here? The attitude of the church and church people toward men in the liquor traffic is such that it shuts out all possible chance of helping them to a better life and the breach is constantly widening. The church has lost her hold because she depends on legislation rather than on God.

Mechanicville N. Y. DAVID VINES.

Which Was the Better Way? Is it not right to take spoil from the enemy and use it against him? Now, I will tell an incident that came to my notice some time ago: A captain of the Salvation Army walked along the street, and a saloon-keeper met him and said: "Here is a dollar for you." The captain thanked him and said: "God bless you and cause you to give your heart to Jesus as you gave this dollar to me, and you will never regret it. Would the other way have been better?

Curtiss, Wis. A. K. BERY.

The Saloon is Satan materialized The saloon-keeper's gift formally offered can only be accepted on his repentance and abandonment of the business. His gift merely dropped in the contribution box loses its identity and significance as a saloon keeper's offering. The saloon is Satan materialized; a gift to the Church is in the nature of worship to God; God does not permit Satan to worship him. I was disappointed that THE CHRISTIAN HERALD did not speak out at the start on the saloon-gift question, but I see now that this free discussion will be an immense help to the cause of temperance.

Tennessee F. P. CAMPBELL.

♦♦

Best Things from American Literature

ADDISON IRVING BACHELLER has produced a book under the above title that will live a century. He has illustrated it with portraits of authors and fac-simile manuscripts that make it well worth $10. Just think of reading a story in the author's original manuscript, and of having a fac-simile page of the original draft of Ben Hur in Lew Wallace's own handwriting! It is almost too good to be true: yet it is true. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD knows how to prepare great treats for its subscribers—we love to do it. Our subscribers are members of our large family, and it affords us pleasure to contribute to their happiness. In this instance we have succeeded beyond measure.

Best Things from American Literature is the greatest book of its kind of this age. You cannot buy anything like it for ten times its cost anywhere. We own the copyright, as we do of all our books, and we confine their circulation absolutely among our subscribers.

The book weighs almost three pounds. Expressage on it is 25 cents—yet we send it prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for a whole year, on receipt of only $2.00. The edition is limited to 10,000, but we could sell five times that number. Act to-day and make sure of getting one.

"The Prudent Man Setteth His House in Order."

Your human tenement should be given even more careful attention than the house you live in. Set it in order by thoroughly purifying your blood by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Erysipelas "My little girl is now fat and healthy on account of Hood's Sarsaparilla curing her of erysipelas and eczema." MRS. H. O. WHEATLEY, Port Chester, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Dr. Bull's COUGH SYRUP

cures small or large people. It's neglect of little things that causes trouble. A little cough is dangerous if left alone. Cure it right at the start and prevent serious consequences by using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. For over fifty years it has cured coughs. It is quick, sure and harmless.

Started to take Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and before the third bottle was finished my cough was entirely gone.

Refuse Substitutes.
A. C. MEYER & CO.
Baltimore, Md.

TAILOR MADE SUIT $5.98

Silk Lined Jacket

All Wool Material

THE SUIT is made by Expert Men Tailors from Ford's Best All Wool Fast Color Ladies' Cloth famous for its rich, soft tones and beautiful appearance. The Jacket is made in latest single breasted style, superbly trimmed with fine satin bands, beautifully silk faced and elegantly lined with real French silk. The skirt is lined and interlined, has many seeded seams, new style flare, cut full width and finished with velvet grain and bands. Guaranteed stylish tailor made and worth fully $10.00. Choice of black or blue colors.

SEND NO MONEY but send us your address and we'll send Free a large sample of the cloth and our Big Catalog of other Suits, Jackets, Capes and Skirts or send us $1, with color desired, give bust and waist measure, length of skirt desired, if tall or short and we'll send the suit to you C.O.D. subject to examination, when it arrives examine it carefully, try it on, see that it fits perfect, then pay the express agent the balance, $4.98 and express charges. Send today quick for free sample and catalogue or suit.

REFERENCES The Royal Trust Co. Bank, Chicago, any Chicago wholesale house or any express company in America.

THE C. LOUIS VEHON CO. 157 W. Jackson St. Chicago.

$10 DRESSING TABLE $3.95

This Dressing Table is made of either quarter sawed oak, bird's eye maple or finished in mahogany. It is 30 in. long, 18 in. wide, 32 in high, has a 14x10 in. plate glass and French front legs. Retail price $10.00, our price $3.95. Every one of the 384 pages of our General Catalogue of everything to Eat, Use and Wear, contains dozens of Bargains like this table, and with this book in your possession you can save money on every purchase you make during the year. It costs you nothing. Address this way:

Price $3.95 does not include freight.

JULIUS HINES & SON,
BALTIMORE, MD. Dept. 214

DITMAN'S SEA-SALT

TONIC. STRENGTHENING. INVIGORATING

Address Ditman, 1 Barclay Street, New York

Dishes and Doxologies

Reflections for the Housewives in Busy Thanksgiving Time

"CAN there any good thing come out of Nazareth?" asked Philip of old. Man's answer was, "Come and see." God's answer is, "Yes, the best that ever was. Jesus, of Nazareth, the Saviour of the world."

It is well that Christ was neither born nor brought up in Jerusalem. Had he been, it might have been said that the great city helped to make the glorious Man. Bethlehem could not make Jesus, nor Nazareth by aught in itself produce a Christ. The Redeemer gives glory, but borrows none. His birth in Bethlehem has given undying lustre to the little town and he has bestowed fadeless glory on Nazareth. He is to-day still the Man of Nazareth. We, who are of lowly birth and humble condition and uninspiring environment, should live so as to make the place of our abode the better for our sojourn, if not memorable for our association with it.

"Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" asks the Christian who wants to honor God and win a crown, but whose life is lowly and narrow, whose sphere of usefulness is the house kitchen, or the office desk, or the single loom in the mill, or other monotonous round of daily toil. To all such comes the heartening assurance that no Nazareth is so constraining, so despised, that even in it the soul may not build up a character and career resplendent for eternity.

"It's one continuous round of washing dishes and setting and removing crockery!" says some one pathetically. "What chance is there to glorify God in that?" Great chance to weave a crown! The dishes of earth may be linked to the doxologies of heaven, and pity it is, if the link is a missing one. The crockery may be the veritable ancestor or forerunner of the crown. In the case mentioned, a few figures showed the appalling aggregate of dishes handled in a year, in a decade, in a lifetime. It looked like queer work for an heir of glory, an unpromising mine when one was seeking gold of Ophir for an enduring diadem.

Yet may the housewife's kitchen prove a good field for the cultivation of patience and perseverance, and these are among the most brilliant jewels of the heavenly crown. Our friend of the dishbowl might have filled a more attractive field, for she is bright and intelligent and a delightful woman.

But if God means her to toil where she is, she will do well to seek to grow in grace there. She can bend her energies resisting the devils of doubt and discontent, while she routs out grease and dirt from fragile kitchenware and learns to pray the prayer that made Gethsemane sublime, that climax of all supplication: "Thy will be done!" Even the Man of Nazareth could not pray better than that or learn a holier resignation.

R. M. O.

Two Books Worth Having

ALTHOUGH not illustrated in the Premium Sheet recently sent out, there are two books which we shall continue to offer as long as the demand continues. One of these books is Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster's incomparable work, The Art of Home-Making, which makes earnest friends wherever it goes, and which has helped thousands and tens of thousands of mothers and fathers to make home beautiful and attractive, and has guided them wisely and well in the management of domestic affairs.

The other book is William M. Thayer's great work, Onward to Fame and Fortune. Many thousands of men and women, young and old, are everlastingly indebted to its author for helpful advice, inspiration, and practical assistance. None can read this superb volume without being profited and made more useful and valuable to themselves, their employers, their families, and to the world.

These books contain nearly 500 large pages each, and are beautifully bound, profusely illustrated, and just the books for elaborate Holiday gifts. Either of them is sent, all charges prepaid, with a year's subscription to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, on receipt of only two dollars.

A Unique Free Tour of the World

With a Month at the Paris Exposition

THE enterprise of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will enable every reader to enjoy a trip around the world without the inconvenience of leaving his home and it will also permit him, without additional expense, to take his family with him. It is a great idea to travel for fifty-two weeks with Aunt Samantha, better known as "Josiah Allen's Wife," and while so traveling to enjoy all the conveniences and comforts of one's own home. And yet that is just what THE CHRISTIAN HERALD enables its readers to do, and nearly Three Hundred Thousand have already joined the party and are looking forward with joyful anticipation to the delights in store for them.

Aunt Samantha has arranged matters on a grand and generous scale. She has planned great things, and those who are acquainted with her books know that she can provide enough genuine enjoyment to go round, even if all the world were to accompany her. Of course the trip is purely her own creation, and so are the characters, but Miss Holley—that is her real name—knows how to make the imaginary so real that the reader, for the time being, will actually suppose himself in Honolulu, in Japan, China, Manila, Ceylon, or wherever else this unique tour may happen at the time to lead him.

Among the many pleasant features which this tour will embrace will be a whole month at the Paris Exposition, a wedding to which all the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will be invited, a glimpse of Buddha's tooth in its jeweled shrine at Kandy, Ceylon, a ceremonious audience with the Grand Turk at Constantinople—in fact, no feature of modern journalism will excel in intense interest, in healthful jollity, in solid instruction, this great treat which THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has in store for you.

"Every path hath a puddle." The puddle in the pathway of most lives is a defective circulation of the blood due to its impurity. Hood's Sarsaparilla will purify the blood and regulate the system.

THE plague of lamps is the breaking of chimneys; but that can be avoided. Get Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass."

The funnel-shaped tops are beaded or "pearled"—a trade-mark. Cylinder tops are etched in the glass—"MACBETH PEARL GLASS"—another trade-mark.

Our "Index" describes all lamps and their proper chimneys. With it you can always order the right size and shape of chimney for any lamp We mail it FREE to any one who writes for it.

Address MACBETH, Pittsburgh, Pa

CHRISTMAS MUSIC.

Prince of Peace. Concert Exercise for S. S., by Hartsough & Fillmore. Beautiful music and recitations. 5cs., 50c. per dozen, post-paid.

Recitations and Dialogues. No. 4, 10 cts.

Santa Claus' Charm. A Christmas Cantata by Chas. H. Gabriel. Bright music and dialogue. 30 cts.; $3.00 per dozen, not prepaid.

Mrs. Santa Claus and the Christmas Dolls. By Mrs. J. M. Ross and J. B. Herbert. A beautiful cantata for primary grades, 30 cts., $3.00 per dozen, not prepaid.

Prince of Peace. Anthem by Herbert, 10 cts.

Thy Watchmen shall lift up the Voice. Anthem by Danks, 10 cents.

The above are all new. Our Christmas Music is unsurpassed. We supply every need. Full descriptive catalogue sent on application. A sample of our monthly MUSICAL MESSENGER sent free.

FILLMORE BROS. 119 W. 6th St., Cincinnati. 40 Bible House, New York.

JUST OUT,

Sacred Songs No. 2.

By Sankey, McGranahan and Stebbins.

A large majority of the pieces in this book are entirely new, and never before published. It contains the new solos, "The Story that Never Grows Old," "I'm A Pilgrim," "If I were a Voice," "Do They Know?" etc., now being sung by Mr. SANKEY. Same styles and prices as "SACRED SONGS NO. 1," of which 685,000 copies have already been sold. Price $25 per 100. Sample copy, post free, 20 cents.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

TEACH YOURSELF MUSIC

DURING LEISURE MOMENTS AT HOME, Piano, Organ Guitar and Voice.

Anyone can learn all Tunes, Notes, Chords, Accompaniments and the Laws of Harmony in a short time. It is the cheapest, easiest, most rapid and correct way on earth to learn music. Over 40,000 strongest kind of testimonials received. Goes to the bottom of music, makes it clear to the beginner, creates a fondness for music because you succeed from the start. A few days practice and you play perfect Accompaniments in all keys. Circulars Free. Write for them. Worth hundreds of dollars to any one interested in Music. Sample Lessons 10c

G. S. RICE MUSIC CO., 241 Wabash Ave. Chicago

BOYS & GIRLS Earn a Watch in an hour, stem wind and stem set, by selling a few packages of Crown Bluing at 10 cents. Sell 30 packages for Punching Bag or Girls' Gold Plated Watch; 20 packages for Boys' Gold Metal Watch, Foot Ball, Catcher's Mitt, or Girls' Solid Gold Ring. No money required. Send name and premium wanted, and we will forward bluing post-paid. Don't wait.

Crown Bluing Co., Box 139, Rochester, N.Y.

ONE HUNDRED

copies of a letter, piece of music, drawing, or any writing can be made on a Lawton Simplex Printer. No washing. No wetting of paper. Send for circulars and samples of work. Agents wanted.

LAWTON & CO., 30 Vesey St., New York. 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS

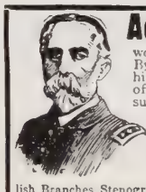
NOTICE NAME THUS, Edward Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

STAMMERING I make a legal contract to cure Stammering in FIVE DAYS, or get no pay. Free Pamphlet. Gibbon's Stammering School, Room 50, Mass. Bldg, Kansas City, Mo.

Thrice Armed

for business is he who uses the Remington Standard Typewriter.

Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict, 327 Broadway, New York



Admiral Sampson worked on a farm when a boy By study at night, he prepared himself for a brilliant career. We offer you greater advantages for a successful future if you will study "between times," through

Education by Mail

in Electrical, Mechanical, Steam, Mining and Civil Engineering; Metallurgy, Art, Architecture, Practical Newspaper Work, English Branches, Stenography, Machine Design and Mechanical Drawing. Low price; easy terms. The most thorough and complete course of any correspondence school in the world. Send to The United Correspondence Schools. 154-158 Fifth Ave., New York, for free catalogue No. 30

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

"A fascination for youth."

A fascination carrying a powerful influence for good is the story of

Young People's Weekly.

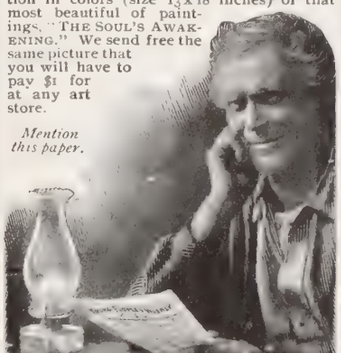
It is the kind of paper that is accepted by every conscientious parent feeling the moral responsibility and duty of giving to the son and daughter reading material that will build a good character. The favorite story paper is an index of the reader's future and YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEKLY readers are not being educated in the ways and means of crime. It is a foe to the trashy, sensational reading that undermines so many young lives. Its eight to twelve pages, all handsomely illustrated, whet the appetite for the best in fiction, and develop a strong love for the traits that enoble and make good men and women great and famous. Every line is read, because every line is interesting. Among many other good treats for the coming year are several new serials of exceptional worth and interest, by Edgar Simpson, Mary Almira Parsons, Ida Reed Smith and others.

Excellent short stories by popular authors, special papers on special subjects by special writers, and a score of other attractions will continue to make the YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEKLY, price considered, the best paper of its class. Subscribe now and get special Christmas Issue FREE. Three month's trial for 20 cents or one year for 75 cents.

An Art Gift.

All who subscribe for one year and remit the price will receive absolutely free and ready for framing, a magnificent reproduction in colors (size 13x18 inches) of that most beautiful of paintings, "THE SOUL'S AWAKENING." We send free the same picture that you will have to pay $1 for at any art store.

Mention this paper.



Copyrighted by Bamley, Lockport, N. Y.

"A heart warmer for the old."

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO.

36 Wahington St., Chicago.

Dr. West's Premiums

Handsome Premiums, Value FREE $10.00 Each—Choice of Writing Desk, Morris Chair, Book Case, Brass and Steel Bed, Oil Heater. Lamps, Watch, etc., for selling 48 bottles of at 25 cents a bottle, the quality of which is widely known and indorsed by the Dental and Medical Professions.

Dr. WEST'S

..ANTISEPTIC TOOTH POWDER..

15 DAYS' FREE TRIAL.

Beautiful, illustrated booklet free to all who ask. It tells how to earn Dr. West's premiums.

B. R. WEST, D. D. S.,

(Dept. C) 2122 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia.

The Natural Body Brace advertised in this paper in the first issue of this month, is a delight to the sufferers from ailments peculiar to women and girls. It makes every step and work easy, gives good figure and right step. Write the Natural Body Brace Co., Salina, Kan., for free illustrated book.

Songs that Won Souls

TO many beautiful hymns the commendation applies (and surely it is the highest music can merit) that under God's blessing they have been the means of saving men from their sins. How true this is of two familiar Gospel songs, the following incidents attest:

MR. SANKEY, in response to request, related at a recent Northfield convention this story of a memorable occasion on which he sang "The Ninety and Nine," with P. P. Bliss, the author of the beautiful hymn, beside him, praying that it might bring some lost sheep to the fold. Across the Connecticut River, in full view of the church windows and of the out-door platform, where Mr. Moody and the musicians stood, a man who scorned religion sat on his front porch, angry because his family were at the meeting. The wonderful song in the marvelously magnetic voice of the inspired singer floated clear and distinct through the still summer air and over the quiet water. The listener, Mr. Caldwell, afterward testified that that song pierced his heart and converted him. He began to lead a Christian life, and when Mr. Moody started his school work he helped in every way he could. Nine years after his conversion the corner-stone of the new Congregational church was laid, and Mr. Sankey, at Mr. Moody's request, stood upon it and sung "The Ninety and Nine." In one of the Seminary buildings, some distance from the church, Mr. Caldwell lay dying. He said to his wife: "I hear singing; open the window." She did so; and listening to the song that had brought him to Christ he passed into rest.

THE son of excellent Christian parents had been thrown into bad company, and had gone astray; but, with the assistance of his tempters, had hid his weaknesses for so long a time that when the revelation came it was with the force of a crushing blow. He was missed at home: uneasiness followed, and investigation uncovered the sorrowful fact that he was off on an accustomed debauch. The evening of the discovery his mother was to sing in the choir of which she was a member and her husband the leader, the hymn, "Where Is My Wandering Boy To-night?" Putting her public obligations before her sorrows, she was in her place to carry out the programme, and the pent-up anguish of a mother's breaking heart rang forth as she sang the hymn. To the last words came the response:

"Here I am, mother!" And the people saw a young man, convulsed with sobs, making his way with outstretched arms to the choir stairs, down which the mother hurried to fold him to her breast. The organist played "Old Hundred," choir and congregation sang "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow," father, pastor and friends welcomed the penitent, and from that moment a new and a true life began for the reclaimed wanderer.

A Song of Thanks

FOR sowing and reaping, for cold and for heat,
For sweets of the flowers, and gold of the wheat,
For ships in the harbors, for sails on the sea,
O! Father in heaven, our songs rise to thee.

For parents who care for us day by day,
For sisters and brothers, for work and for play,
For dear little babies, so helpless and fair,
O, Father, we send thee our praise and our prayer.

For teachers who guide us so patiently on,
For frolics with mates when our lessons are done,
For shelter and clothing, for every day's food,
We bless thee, our Father, the giver of good.

For peace and for plenty, for freedom, for rest,
For joy in the land from east to the west,
For the dear starry flag, with its red, white and blue,
We thank Thee from hearts that are honest and true.

For waking and sleeping, for blessings to be,
We children would offer our praises to thee:
For God is our Father, and bends from above
To keep the round world in the smile of his love. —MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

A World of Good Things.

The Christian Endeavor World

CONTINUING THE GOLDEN RULE.

Rev. F. E. CLARK, D. D., Editor. AMOS R. WELLS, Managing Editor JOHN WILLIS BAER, Secretary's Corner.

The ablest writers of the day contribute to the columns of THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WORLD. It is the international representative of the young people's movement, and you cannot keep informed concerning this important department of church work without consulting its pages.

A list of the well-known writers who have been engaged to contribute to the present volume would fill this page.

The following are a few of the special features: "The Children of the Resurrection," a series of seven splendid articles by Ian Maclaren (Rev. John Watson, D. D.); four brilliant articles on the Essentials of the Christian Life, Grace, Gratitude, Grit, Growth, by Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.; three helpful articles on beginning the Christian life, How? Where? When? by Rev. J. R. Miller, D. D.

Among the special numbers arranged for, to which experts in their different lines will contribute, are: A Pastor's Number, a Temperance Number, a Purity Number, a Revival Number, a School Number.

52 TIMES A YEAR FOR ONLY $1.00.

THE REMAINDER OF THIS YEAR FREE.

Three Scenes in the Life of Christ

Our Wonderful Picture Premium with The Christian Endeavor World. These Pictures Are Made by the Beautiful Photo-Chrome Process and are Perfect Copies of the Famous Original Paintings. The Size of Each is 13 1-2 x 16 1-2 Inches.

CHRIST IN THE MANGER.

CHRIST IN THE TEMPLE.

The world is just awakening to the wonderful educative influence of pictures. The bare walls of school-rooms and church vestries are being adorned with reproductions of the world's masterpieces. Parents are placing in their children's rooms pictures that will appeal to the imagination of the child and give him beautiful ideals and an inspiration for pure and holy living.

Dead indeed must be the spirit of that one who can look at the Babe in the Manger, the Youth in the Temple, and the Man in Gethsemane without a heart-throb of love and a desire to do "whatever He would like to have me do."

CHRIST IN GETHSEMANE.

These beautiful pictures should find a place in every home. They should hang on the walls of every prayer-meeting room. They should have a place in every public school. Their silent influence is more powerful than any sermon. They preach to the heart through the eyes, and make an impression that cannot be effaced. We have issued them in the popular size for framing, 13 1-2 x 16 1-2 inches. When framed in antique oak they are worthy a place in any home. We are so confident that they will give perfect satisfaction that we promise to refund the money in every case when request is made.

OUR PREMIUM OFFER. We will send the three pictures, postpaid, and The Christian Endeavor World for the remainder of this year and the year 1900 for $1.10.

NOTE.—The pictures are absolutely not for sale at any price except in connection with a subscription for the paper. Orders will be filled as rapidly as possible, but do not get anxious if there should be a slight delay.

Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass. THE GOLDEN RULE COMPANY, 155 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

PUBLISHERS OF THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WORLD.

SLUGGISH INTELLECT

Caused By Coffee.

"Careful inquiry in the school-room developed the fact that those children who are habitually given coffee to drink have sallow complexion, are nervous, more or less irritable and very sluggish intellect or an overwrought and abnormal imagination, results of extreme nervousness. My own experience with coffee drinking kept me afflicted for some years with severe and constant headaches, with extreme nervousness at times.

"I was compelled to abandon coffee altogether, and was quickly relieved of the head aches and other troubles. I was fortunate enough to secure a package of Postum Food Coffee, but my first attempt at making it was a failure. After another trial and following directions (which are very easy, by the way) I secured a delicious drink, far superior in my mind to coffee. I have continued to use it from the start, and my improvement has been steady, with no ill effects at all."

The above was written by a school teacher, Miss E. Barnard of Oxford, Kan.

It is an easy matter to leave off the coffee habit, if Postum Cereal Food Coffee is used in its place, particularly when attention is given to its proper preparation. The whole secret of the preparation is in allowing the Food Coffee to boil long enough to bring out the taste and food value.

All first-class grocers sell Postum.

"A Perfect Food,"

"Preserves Health,"

"Prolongs Life."

TRADE-MARK.

BAKER'S BREAKFAST COCOA

"It is at once a delightful food and nourishing drink, and it would be well for humanity if there were more of it consumed and less tea or coffee."—The Homeopathic Recorder.

Walter Baker & Co. Limited.

DORCHESTER, MASS.

Established 1780.

Dyspepsia

One of the many causes of dyspepsia is the use of cereal foods improperly prepared. People fancy that grain food is simple, and consequently healthful. Whole grains, wheat, oats, etc., contain quite largely an element as indigestible as wood and no more nutritious.

CREAM OF WHEAT

being entirely free from indigestible matter is peculiarly adapted to such as require an easily digested diet.

When buying Cream of Wheat ask for our beautiful gravures of northwestern scenery. Your grocer gives one with each purchase of two packages.

Cream of Wheat Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

Gluten Grits AND BARLEY CRYSTALS,

Perfect Breakfast and Dessert Health Cereals.

PANSY FLOUR for Biscuit, Cake and Pastry.

Unlike all other Goods. Ask Grocers.

For book of sample, write

FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

UNIQUE CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

Sparkling Operettas, Captivating Drills, New Songs and Recitations, and other exercises. 15 cents.

MARCH BROTHERS, - Lebanon, Ohio.

Evangelist Moody's Illness

IN almost every English-speaking land on the globe, the voice of Dwight L. Moody, the greatest of modern evangelists, has been heard proclaiming the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The news of Mr. Moody's illness, therefore, will be received with universal regret. For many years, as he admits, he has had a mild form of heart trouble, but it never became specially pronounced until recently. In the middle of November Mr. Moody was in Kansas City, Mo., preaching nightly in Convention Hall, to vast audiences. It had been a remarkable Gospel movement, and it is said that on several occasions the audience numbered 15,000. The strain upon the evangelist was a most unusual one, and it was observed on several occasions at the meetings he spoke with difficulty. At night, after these great meetings he suffered from exhaustion. On Friday, November 17, he was unable to go to the hall. After a brief consultation it was decided that the evangelist should return to his home at Northfield, Mass., which he did, traveling in a special car, in the care of Dr. Schauffler, of Kansas City, and Mr. C. M. Wining. Before leaving, Mr. Moody said to friends that while he felt very weak, he did not consider his condition serious. It is the hope of his physicians that a long rest, with complete abstention from public effort, for a time, may result in restoring Mr. Moody to health. He is naturally strong and rugged and was been wonderfully free from sickness during a long and active career. He is now in his sixty-third year, and God's people everywhere will pray that he may yet be spared to see many years of further service in the Gospel vineyard.

EVANGELIST D. L. MOODY

400 Ministers Sang the Chorus

At a recent meeting of Methodist ministers in New York City, Mr. Moody was expected to speak, but could not attend. Mr. Ira D. Sankey, who came in his stead, found about four hundred preachers assembled. "Brethren," Mr. Sankey began, "I have heard that the Gospel is getting too old, and that we need a new Gospel. Now, I am going to do all I can to keep the old Gospel going, and so I will sing about the story that never grows old." And soon the hall was filled with the roll of the organ accompaniment and the music of these words in Mr. Sankey's wonderful voice:

O, tell me the story that never grows old,
The story of One whom the prophets foretold;
The Horn of Salvation, the Sceptre and Star,
The Light in the darkness they saw from afar;
It never grows old, it never grows old.
The story of Jesus will never grow old.

Nearly the whole four hundred ministers took up the chorus, singing it again and again, while those who could not sing shouted, "Glory to God!" and "Hallelujah!" "I'm a Pilgrim," and "The Ninety and Nine," followed. According to Mr. Sankey's November programme, he speaks and sings at Massa Hall, Toronto, Canada; and gives his "Service of Sacred Song" at Rochester, N. Y. He writes to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD: "A new field is opening up for me—for which I am devoutly grateful to God. I love to speak and sing of 'the story that never grows old.'"

Pictures on the Life of Christ Free

For eighteen months from the end of '99, the International Lessons will be on the Life of Christ. All subscribers to The Sunday School Times will receive, without charge, a handsomely printed and distinctly choice set of pictures on these lessons for use during 1900. Appearing as Quarterly Supplements, they will be printed on fine enameled paper, and grouped so that they may be cut out one by one for exhibition by the teacher to the class from week to week. In order to secure the first of the Supplements, subscriptions should be mailed without delay.

The Sunday School Times

Contains 16 pages,—sometimes 20 or 24,—and is issued every week.

60 cts. Five or more copies in a package to one address, 60 cents each, per year
75 cts.—Five or more copies to separate addresses, 75 cents each, per year.
A free copy given with every ten copies paid for at club rates.
$1.00.—Less than five copies, and more than one, to separate addresses, $1.00 each, per year.
$1.50.—One copy, one year. To ministers, missionaries, and theological students, $1.00.

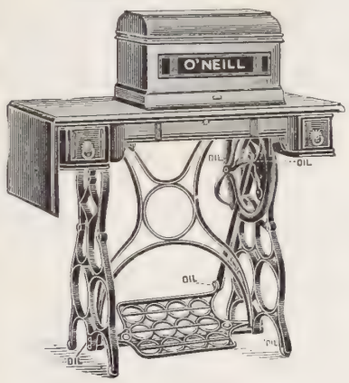
SPECIMEN COPIES FREE.

John D. Wattles & Co., 1031 Walnut St., Phila., Pa.

O'NEILL'S

Importers and Retailers

Dry Goods, Fancy Goods, Cloaks, Costumes, House-Furnishing Goods, Men's and Boys' Clothing, etc.



A Reliable ..... Sewing Machine

Something that every Housewife should own

If you haven't one, save your money, and buy an "O'Neill." It doesn't cost much, is thoroughly reliable in every way, and will save you an immense amount of work. The "O'Neill" is made for us by one of the largest sewing-machine manufacturers in the United States, and is guaranteed by us for five years. Here are the prices:

The "O'Neill" B,	three drawers, nicely finished,	$13.80
The "O'Neill" No. 1,	elegantly finished in Oak or Walnut, 3 drawers,	15.00
The "O'Neill" No. 2,	Oak or Walnut, 5 drawers,	16.80
The "O'Neill" No. 3,	Oak or Walnut, 7 drawers,	17.20
With Novelty Drop Head,		19.60

A Complete Set of Attachments Goes with Each Machine

THREE GOOD REASONS WHY WE SELL THE "O'NEILL" SO CHEAP

FIRST—Because we intend to do the sewing-machine business of New York.
SECOND—Because we employ no expensive agents.
THIRD—Because we're satisfied with a small profit.

This Machine is Superior in Every Way, and Cheaper in Price than any other sold in New York

H. O'NEILL & CO., Sixth Ave., 20th to 21st St., New York

KEE-LO Why suffer agony with Corns or Bunions, when you can positively make them shrivel up and disappear in one night by using Kee-Lo Corn and Bunion Cure? By mail only, postpaid, on receipt of 25c. in Stamps or Coin. A positive cure. DOWNES MFG. CO., COOPER UNION, N. Y. CITY.

OPIUM MORPHINE and Liquor Habit cured in 10 to 20 days. N. B. [illegible] Book of particulars free. Address Dr. J. L. Stephens, Dept. R. 5, Lebanon, Ohio.

STAMMER [illegible] Most Speedy [illegible] Least Expense Address Voice School, Salem, W. Va.

No. 95251

ENAMELED BED

sign, has made it one of our most popular heavy brass trimmings and rolls on ball bear white porcelain. There is not a rough spot on can be made. Double-deck. Made of heavy, oil-tempered steel springs, finely japanned and

REGAL SPRING

Freight paid to any point in this country east of Mississippi river. Order of us or your dealer. Your money back if you are not perfectly satisfied. Send for booklet, "Beds of Quality."

BARCALO & HOLL MFG. CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

Moller's Oil is different from other cod liver oils, as it is never sold in bulk. It is bottled when manufactured, thus passing direct to the consumer without the possibility of adulteration. Each bottle of bears on the label, in perforated letters, the date of manufacture, so that the purchaser may always insist on having oil of the latest season's production, and know that he is getting it.

Peter Moller's Cod Liver Oil

Moller's Cod Liver Oil is put up only in flat oval bottles, and bears our name as sole agents.

Schieffelin & Co., New York.

RESTFUL

PARKER'S Arctic Socks

pair. 25c.

Free J.H Parker, Dept. K, 108 Bedford St., Boston.

THE Washable Hair Sole . . . .

Remedy for Sweaty Feet. Ease for Tender Feet. Cures RHEUMATISM

Draws the perspiration from the foot to bottom of sole and shoe. Stops perspiration.

15c. by mail Postpaid.

H. A. ROBERTS Shoe Dealer 16 Bible House New York City

Her Life Spent for Christ

Since [illegible] a new interest attaches to an effort made long [illegible] of the British and Foreign Bible [illegible] pointed out the needs of tribes wandering over [illegible] and Siberia, the London Missionary Society in [illegible] missioned Rev. [illegible] and Sarah Stallybrass to go to that remote and little-known region. A journey to the heart of Africa to-day is a holiday trip compared to that journey then.

MRS. STALLYBRASS.

Mr. Stallybrass won a lovely and accomplished young woman to share his arduous and self-denying mission, Sarah, the daughter of Thomas and Sarah Robinson of Stepney, then a suburb of London.

The young couple's wedding journey lasted a year, and extended through six thousand miles. Four weeks were passed on the sea, when they reached St. Petersburg, and journeyed on to Moscow. The Czar, Alexander I., granted them the honor of an interview. Mrs. Stallybrass calls him an "an enlightened and pious monarch," and writes: "In the most friendly and lively manner he conveyed his ideas, and when alluding, as he frequently did, to the prophetical writings relative to the universal spread of the Gospel, his eye and action spoke the language of the genuine Christian." Before they withdrew, and after pledging himself to serve them in every possible way, he added that his ardent prayer should follow them for success in their undertaking.

Letters were given them to officials which opened doors everywhere as they traveled, and they were honored with a special courier as an escort. On their journey they received marked courtesy from priests in various places and from an archbishop. The long journey was made in a kabitka, a closed carriage on runners, traveling often upon frozen rivers.

For sixteen years they labored. Mr. Stallybrass preaching and his wife teaching; but hearers were heedless and pupils fickle. The tribes roved, and the missionaries, following them, shifted their home from Irkootsk to Selingsk, and thence to Khodon. Once, in midwinter, their home was burned to the ground. Two other English couples successively shared their labor. The wife of each missionary ultimately fell a victim to hardship and disease. Six children were born to Mrs. Stallybrass, one of whom died in infancy. While she lived no clear conversion of a native gladdened her heart, though the mission did not lack a witness to God's power in his own time. But discouragement in their work only drove her into closer communion with her divine Master.

The whole Bible was translated into the Mongol tongue and printed, the Old Testament appearing in St. Petersburg in 1840. But about the same time the Holy Synod reversed its former policy of friendliness. The policy of the new government was reactionary. Missionaries were ordered out of the empire, and the printing and circulation of their translation of God's Word forbidden. Mr. Stallybrass and his children returned to England, leaving the remains of their loved ones, his wife included, in a far-off land.

There are many to say to-day, as Judas said of old: "Why this waste?" Was it a waste? A lovely life was spent, like the Master's, seeking the lost; and, like his, with little visible result. Surely it was not a waste. Such heroines of faith are the ointment which the church, like Mary of old, pours forth on the Lord's feet, and the perfume fills the world.

REV. JOHN H. THOMAS.

THE LEDGER MONTHLY CALENDAR FREE

This beautiful Calendar is 10½ x 13½ inches, the picture (His Only Friend) being reproduced in the same colors as the....

Original Painting by J. G. Brown of the National Academy of Design, who is in such close touch with the hearts of the American people. The illustration gives but a faint idea of the size and beauty of this Calendar, showing only the picture in the center. This Calendar, worthy of a place in the most attractive boudoir, can be obtained from us only. When sold without the LEDGER MONTHLY the price is 50 cents. ☞ To all readers of this paper who send 50 cents for a year's subscription to the LEDGER MONTHLY for 1900 we will send this beautiful Calendar FREE.

THE LEDGER MONTHLY

"The marvel of the age for low price and high quality of matter"

FREE! Those who send 50 cents for a year's subscription for 1900 will receive the beautifully illustrated November and December, 1899, numbers FREE and a full year's subscription to January, 1901, in addition to the unique LEDGER MONTHLY CALENDAR. FREE!

The vol. for 1900 will surpass all former ones in excellence of matter and artistic embellishment, and will more than sustain the reputation gained by the LEDGER MONTHLY.

Contents of the Nov. and Dec. Numbers:

"IAN MACLAREN: HIS HOME-LIFE IN LIVERPOOL" is a refreshing article, with 14 illustrations of the home surroundings of the author of "BESIDE THE BONNIE BRIER BUSH," especially prepared by a member of our staff who visited Ian Maclaren in his home for the purpose. MRS GESINE LEMCKE, of the Brooklyn Cooking School, furnishes an article on "NEW IDEAS FOR DAINTY BREAKFASTS." "THE MAID OF BOCASSE," a novel of the age of chivalry, is by that close student of French history MISS MAY HALSEY MILLER. GEORGE R KNAPP'S illustrated article tells how the home may be artistically and inexpensively decorated with flowers and plants. The "MEMORIES OF THE RED EAR," a reproduction in colors of J. G. BROWN'S painting, forms the cover of the November number. "THE D LINE," an absorbing story of safe time-locks, by L. T. MEADE and ROBERT EUSTACE. ANNETTA HALLIDAY-ANTONA relates her experiences during a camel-back journey in the Canary Islands, with 5 illustrations. Six reproductions of HARRY ROSELAND'S story-telling pictures. "WASHINGTON'S BATTLE-CHARGERS," by GEN. JAMES GRANT WILSON, is replete with stories of famous horses. The Christmas cover is a delightful portrayal in color of child-life. IAN MACLAREN'S article, "WHEN SCOTCHMEN HAVE THEIR FULL RIGHTS," is one of his most humorous productions. WALDEN FAWCETT'S illustrated contribution, "REALM OF THE WINTER GIRL," treats of winter-life in Montreal. Also 7 Complete Stories, Household Departments and a vast amount of entertaining reading.

Club Raisers Read This....

Our Premium List of 20 pages, each 10 x 14 inches, describes and illustrates the beautiful, useful and valuable articles we give free to those who raise small clubs of subscribers to the LEDGER MONTHLY. You can get subscribers to the LEDGER MONTHLY easily, for at 50c a year the magazine has no rival. Send a postal card for the Premium List. It is sent free and with it an outfit explaining an easy method of getting up clubs.

For Free Sample Copy and other information address

ROBERT BONNER'S SONS, 109 Ledger Building, New York.

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

In its Various Attractive Bindings it Makes the CHOICEST GIFT FOR CHRISTMAS.

What better, wiser, or more acceptable gift could be made than a copy of the International? It is a vast storehouse of valuable information arranged in a convenient form for hand, eye, and mind. It is more widely used than any other lexicon in the world. It should be in every household.

GET THE BEST

We also publish Webster's Collegiate Dictionary with a Valuable Pronouncing Glossary of Scottish Words and Phrases, etc.

Specimen pages, etc., of both books sent on application.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers, Springfield, Mass., U. S. A.

CHRISTMAS CARDS . . Large and Handsome. 10 for 5c. Finer Cards 1, 2, 3 and 5c. each. Elegant Booklets, 4, 5 and 10c. Artistic Calendars, 10c. Our goods are the finest and cheapest ever offered. Catalogue free. Samples of all kinds 25c., worth double.

MARCH BROTHERS, 48 East Mulberry Street, LEBANON, OHIO.

...IN HIS STEPS...

By Charles M. Sheldon. [illegible] Price, 50 cents. For sale by all booksellers, or sent by mail on receipt of price by J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 57 Rose St., New York.

1000 MENUS

The most complete and practical cook book in existence in the world. Sent by mail for 25 cents to Cook Book Calendar Co. 383 West St., New York.

The Best Paid Agents are the energetic ones who secure subscribers to

The Ladies' Home Journal
AND
The Saturday Evening Post

We allow liberal commissions for all subscriptions, special rebates for large clubs, and at the end of the season (April 15, 1900) we shall distribute $18,000 among the 764 best agents.

As the JOURNAL alone has over 800,000 subscribers, and as we allow a commission on renewals, it is obvious that a part of an agent's work is very easy, while, in view of our extensive advertising, none of it is "uphill" work.

Write for full particulars.

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

NEW BOOKS.

Father Jerome. A Story of the Spanish Inquisition. By MRS. H. A. CLARK, author of "Pro Christo." 12mo. Illustrated. 203 pages. $1.

True to life, with the thrilling interest of a romance. The reader will follow the narrative eagerly and be stirred to emulate the courage and faith of Christian heroes.

At Opening Doors. By HOWE BENNING. 12mo. Illustrated. 351 pages. $1.25.

Many a young person setting out in life longs to find the path that leads to success. This story shows how Providence opens the door to the highest prosperity.

A Bonnie Boy. A story of Happy Days. By JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT. 12mo. Illustrated. 295 pages. $1.

Young lads and misses will be charmed by its fascinating incidents, and will learn new ways of enjoying life.

Sabbath Nights at Pitcoonans. By the author of "SANDY SCOTT'S BIBLE CLASS." 8vo. 94 pages. 50c.

Tells of vivid pictures of Scottish incident and character. "The talks run mainly on evangelical lines, are marked by a homely humor, and manifest a shrewd knowledge of human nature, and an intimate acquaintance with Scripture."

Heart Life Classics

Size of Book, 6½ x 4½ inches.

New edition of this popular series containing 12 additional titles. Over 70,000 copies sold last year. Price reduced to 30 cents each, postpaid.

LIST OF TITLES:

Abide in Christ	John Ploughman's Talk
Advice to a Young Christian	John Ploughman's Pictures
Alone in London	Kept for the Master's Use
Angel's Christmas	Like Christ
A Bag of Stories	Line Upon Line
Blood of Jesus	Little Captain, A
Blue Flag, The	Little Meg's Children
Bob Tinker	Mark Steadman
Christian Living	Mind and Words of Jesus
Christie's Old Organ	Miss Toosie's Mission
Daily Food	New Life and New Heart
Daily Light, Morning Hour	Nobody Loves Me
Daily Light, Evening Hour	Olive's Story
Dairyman's Daughter, The	Peep of Day
Down in a Mine	Pilgrim's Progress
Expectation Corner	Royal Commandments
Gold Dust	Saved at Sea and Little Faith
Heart Life	Scripture Promises
Helps Over Hard Places, Boys	Shepherd Psalm
Helps Over Hard Places, Girls	Wee Davie
Home Song	Whiter Than Snow
Imitation of Christ	With Christ
Jessica's First Prayer	Wilson's Kindling Depot
Jesus Only	Young Man Setting Out in Life

NEW POCKET EDITION
NEW TESTAMENT
WITH NOTES AND INSTRUCTIONS

On fine thin paper, leather, divinity circuit, red under gold edges, 5⅜ x 4¼ x ¾ in., $1, postpaid.

American Tract Society, 150 NASSAU STREET, NEW YORK.
BOSTON, 54 Bromfield St. CHICAGO, 169 Wabash Ave.
CINCINNATI, 420 Elm St. SAN FRANCISCO, 637 Market St.

The Force behind the force is the educated mind which plans and directs the work of others. You can rise to a higher position without interrupting your work or leaving home. You can get

A Technical Education BY MAIL.

We have prepared successful Mechanical or Architectural Draughtsmen, Electrical or Steam Engineers, Architects, Surveyors, Chemists, Correspondents, Stenographers and Bookkeepers. Write for circular. Mention the occupation you wish to enter.

The International Correspondence Schools, Box 861, Scranton, Pa.

The Indwelling Presence

Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for Dec. 10. Col. 1: 21-29

ONE of the most common experiences of the Christian worker is that of finding young converts, a few weeks or months after a revival, depressed and discouraged, and in danger of reverting to their old life. Under the preaching of an evangelist a young person may become anxious about his soul's salvation, may pass through a period of distress, and then, grasping the doctrine of salvation by faith, be filled with joy and peace. Afterwards, mixing in the world, resuming business occupations, the new convert loses much of the ecstacy that he felt, and recognizes that he is very much the same kind of man that he was before. He is liable to conclude that there is not so much power in religion as he thought there was, and may turn back to his old way of life disappointed. This is no new experience. Paul's converts did so, as we learn from numerous allusions in his Epistles, and it has been so with newly converted persons ever since. But it need not be so. There is a remedy for such relapses, and this remedy is that which is described in such passages as those associated with the topic—the remedy of "the indwelling presence."

At first sight such an idea seems to savor of the occult and mysterious. We cannot understand how Christ can live in a man; but there are relations in life which may help to make it clear. A young man falls in love with a pure, noble girl. He may have been to vicious resorts, may have enjoyed hearing and telling vile stories, but as he comes from her presence he feels how alien to her pure nature is all that kind of thing and in proportion to his love for her, is his repugnance to everything vicious or degrading. She might never hear of his mixing with his old companions, nor of the pollutions of his life; but he feels that they are degrading to her, that he would be unworthy of her if he stooped to them, and so her influence raises him to a higher level of life. The more her image is enshrined in his heart the less of struggle is there to resist temptation and the more easily does he put it away from him. It is so all through life. There have been men who have loved one of their children so intensely that they have been redeemed from vice by their love. "How can I go home," said one of these, "and feel those dear little arms clasped about my neck and those sweet pure lips kissing my cheek and know that she thinks me the wisest and best of men, if I go to my old haunts and associate with my old vicious companions? I would not take her in my arms after being in the room of a fever stricken man lest I carry infection to her, and it seems to me that moral contagion would be worse."

This is what Christ promises to those who are willing to yield themselves to him. He will dwell in them, will take up his abode in their hearts. No man can change himself; he must have help, and this help Christ stands ready to give. It is this which makes Christianity so different from other religions. It tells us of a divine power within us that can change and purify the life. In that wonderful passage (II. Cor. 3: 18) in which Paul compares men to mirrors reflecting an image, we get the secret of the possession of this presence. It is the contemplation of Christ's character, the admiration for his gentleness and goodness and love and compassion which brings us nearer to him. We bring to him a nature full of evil passions, evil propensities, of mean thoughts and ways, and we see how great is the contrast. But as we dwell on the beauties of his character and long to be like him, we are drawn still closer to him and a new power begins to work in the soul. The evil that was once so pleasant and the sin that was so dear, become repulsive. They are alien to the new nature that is within. Loving and reverencing him we do the things that will please him, so that at last we are able to say, as Paul said, "I live; yet not I but Christ liveth in me." Redeemed from sin, emancipated from the power of evil habit, we become like him and his power sustains and develops our spiritual life.

These thirty-two interesting volumes provide the way for all to become acquainted with the makers of the world's history. They are not dull-hard-to-read books, but, on the contrary, most instructive, and written in an exceptionally entertaining style.

That these are books whose ownership is appreciated is best evidenced by their unequalled sale of over....

Alfred the Great
Margaret of Anjou
Richard I.
Richard II.
William the Conqueror
Alexander the Great
Cyrus the Great
Darius the Great
Genghis Khan
Peter the Great
Xerxes
Hannibal
Julius Caesar
Nero
Pyrrhus
Romulus

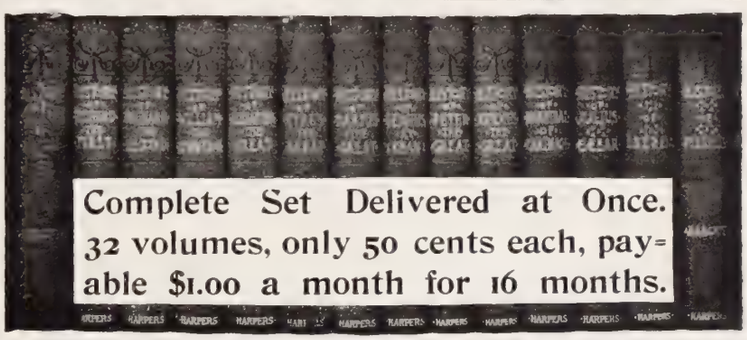
650,000 VOLUMES

This publication, Abbott's Biographical Histories, has been adopted by Boards of Education in many states, and no library can be termed complete without this work.

The complete set, thirty-two volumes, well printed upon extra quality of paper, illustrated, durably and artistically bound in buckram, with appropriate design in two colors on cover, will be forwarded for inspection upon request. If, upon examination, you decide to retain the work, remit us one dollar a month for sixteen months. We prepay delivery charges, and if not satisfactory you return at our expense.

Charles I.
Hortense
Josephine
Madame Roland
Marie Antoinette
Henry IV.
Hernando Cortez
Joseph Bonaparte
King Philip
Louis XIV.
Louis Philippe
Charles II.
Mary Queen of Scots
Queen Elizabeth
Richard III.
Cleopatra

HARPER'S HISTORY CLUB, 142 Fifth Ave., New York



Artistic Monuments...
COST NO MORE THAN PLAIN ONES in White Bronze

Marble is entirely out of date. Granite soon gets moss-grown, discolored, requires constant expense and care, and eventually crumbles back to Mother Earth. Besides it is very expensive. White Bronze is strictly everlasting. It cannot crumble with the action of frost. Moss-growth is an impossibility. It is more artistic than any stone. Then why not investigate it? It has been adopted for nearly one hundred public monuments. We have designs from $4.00 to $4,000.00. Write at once for free designs and information. It puts you under no obligation. We deal direct and deliver everywhere.

The Monumental Bronze Co., 70-90 Howard Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.

FREE

We will present to the first 500 ladies sending 50c for UTILITY HOUSE APRON (see cut) our Iron or Utensil holder. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Lady Agents can make $5.00 daily.

UTILITY CO.
772 Gates Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

70 HOUSE PLANS FOR $1!

If you are thinking about building, don't fail to get the new book, Palliser's American Architecture, containing 104 pages, 11 by 14 inches in size, consisting of large 9 by 12 plate pages, giving plans, elevations, perspective views, descriptions, actual cost of construction, progress work, and instructions how to build 50 Cottages, Villas, Double Houses, Brick Block Houses, suitable for cities, suburbs, town and country, costing from $300 to $6,000, together with specifications and form of contract. Sent in paper cover, by mail, postpaid, on receipt of $1.

400 Recitations and Readings. We will send to any address on receipt of 50 cents, a handsome book bound in paper cover, and containing 400 of the best recitations ever issued. Address all orders to J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 57 Rose St., N. Y. City.

$18.00 a Week and expenses to good parties to travel and advertise. Non-canvassing. Permanent position. Also local workers and managers can find profitable employment for part time. Give references. R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore.

$3 FOUNTAIN PEN FOR $1

To introduce our regular $3 Acme Fountain Pen we are making this wonderful offer. It is by all odds the most remarkable you to secure for lady or gentleman a most appropriate . . . XMAS PRESENT

We are making this wonderful offer. It is by all odds the most remarkable you to secure for lady or gentleman a most appropriate . . . XMAS PRESENT A solid gold 14k pen engraved, holder hard rubber, gold feed, never drops. Postpaid for only $1.00. Money back if not satisfactory.

ACME PEN CO., 150 NASSAU STREET, NEW YORK.

AFTER 30 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
I HAVE THE BEST

BRAIN & NERVE TONIC

on earth for all weakened conditions, regardless of cause.

After my injuries in the railroad accident in 1896, I suffered from nervous prostration, and derived immediate and permanent help from the use of Dr. A. S. Johnson's Brain and Nerve Tonic. Small doses do it. Large blessing.
PETER HOFFMASTER, Battle Creek, Mich.

It is my work in school as music teacher my brain feels it was well out of balance. A short time after taking the Brain and Nerve Tonic I felt it was restored. I like it and like it whenever I've worked. MISS CLERIE YOUNG, Benton, Mich.

FITS OR EPILEPSY CURED.

My daughter when about seven years old began to suffer with nervous spells. We called them faintings, but it was said by some to have it said she had fits or epilepsy. After trying most everything we heard of, and consulting several physicians, and finding no relief, I was advised by Dr. A. S. Johnson to use his Brain and Nerve Tonic, which we did, with happy results. She has had no spells since ten years of age. She is now eighteen, and in perfect health. MRS. JULIA CUMMINGS.

A Full Month's Treatment Sent for $1.00

Address, for particulars, A. S. JOHNSON, M. D., BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

If in any doubt about its merit, write to any bank or business house in Battle Creek, Mich.

...FOR...
Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Colds, Bronchitis.

For twenty one years the most successful GERMICIDE in contagious disease.
Send for descriptive booklet, containing physicians' testimonials and price list.
Sold by Druggists Generally.
Vapo-Cresolene Co., 69 Wall St., New York,
SCHIEFFELIN & CO., N. Y. U. S. Agts.

EUCALOL CURES Catarrh Grippe Colds

Eucalol is a treatment that is based on antiseptic cleanliness. It has cured thousands and will cure you.

FREE OFFER To prove its merit we will send free on request a large package of Eucalol. Don't delay. Write to-day

THE EUCALOL CO. 108 Fulton St., New York.

SAVE ½ Your FUEL wasted up chimney.
BY USING THE ROCHESTER RADIATOR.
COST $2.00 AND UP.
Money refunded if not satisfactory.
Write for booklet on economy in heating homes.
ROCHESTER RADIATOR CO., 15 Furnace Street, Rochester, N. Y.

$9.00 Buys A High Arm Sewing Machine

Adapted for light or heavy work. Makes double lock stitch, has self-threading shuttle. 20 YEARS GUARANTEE. Without any money in advance we will send to your home on thirty days FREE TRIAL your choice of our Desk Cabinet sewing machines as illustration, or our 3, 5 or 7 drawer machines with best solid steel attachments. WE PAY FREIGHT. Buy direct and save agents and dealers profits. CATALOGUE FREE. Address
H. SHEPHERD MFG. CO., 300 E. 22nd St., Chicago.

EARN A CAMERA!

By selling 12 packages of our superior Bluestone at 10c. each. When sold send us the $1.20, and we send Camera prepaid. No risk to you; goods sent at our expense. You can also earn a Watch, Jewelry, Toys, Books, etc.
Brockstedt Mercantile House, 806 Broadway, Box 13, St. Louis, Mo.

HOW TO HAVE EASY, HEALTHY, SHAPELY FEET
A Bunion Cures
PAMPHLET FOR FEET
FOOT REMEDY CO., 40 VAN BUREN ST., CHICAGO.

Three Little . . . . Sunday School Maids

THESE three little girls are going to Sunday School, and they are making the journey in the only way possible to many frontier children, whose papa has no vehicle in which to send them, and but one nag gentle enough to entrust with such a burden. The Sunday School to which our little maids are bound is, as is usually the case with frontier Sunday

THE FAMILY PONY

Schools, too far from the homes of most of its attendants to be easily reached by walking, even where the pedestrians are sturdy little frontier folk. In the present instance, a stream known as "Rock Creek" has to be crossed, and the little riders must go quite a round-a-bout journey to do this at the ford, below the twenty-foot falls, above which stones are loose and footing treacherous. The children wear the best attire; their lessons are nicely learned; they have their "Golden Texts" "trippingly on the tongue." Sunday School is the event of the week, and they would not miss it for the world. The American Sunday School Union with whose good work on the frontiers our readers are familiar, have made such a blessing possible to them. As they grow up they will doubtless be members of a flourishing church which had its beginning in the little Sunday School to which old Bess kindly carried all three Sunday after Sunday.

♦

A Touching Gift

From far-off Morocco comes this letter, which proves that our Fresh-Air work among the poor tenement children has friends even in that distant land:

TANGIER, Morocco, August 13, 1899.
To The Christian Herald Children's Home:

We are six little American missionary children living among the Moors in Morocco. We feel very sorry for the tenement waifs of New York, and have saved our spending money to send out one poor child to the Home. Herewith twelve shillings in foreign money order. (Signed)

ALDA, CORAL, FAY, PAUL NATHAN, REX, and TRACY NATHAN.

Among the contributions for our Fresh-Air Home received since the last acknowledgment are the following:

Prev. Ack.	$7180 04	Payne, Thomas H.	3 00
Bachelor, Mrs Amos	2 00	Pillsbury, L. R.	3 00
Baker, Albert	3 00	Pope, Thomas, Jr	4 00
Blurton, Clara	1 00	Robbins, Mary E	3 00
Bottome, Mrs Ellen	1 00	Robie, Miss E F	3 00
Brown, Juliette	1 00	Rockhill, Mrs A R	1 00
Brown, J E	1 00	Sherman, Miss M. A.	4 00
Brown, Mrs J E	50	Stoney, Warren	1 00
Burns, Mrs John	1 00	Summers, Mrs I A	3 00
Burrill, Mrs Herman R	2 00	Swift, Mrs. G. H	3 00
Clark, Mrs J C	5 00	Taylor, Mrs L M	1 00
Cunningham, Aman'a	50	Thompson, I. M.	50
Cushman, C M	3 00	Tress, Mrs R C	2 00
Davenport, J	1 00	Woodrow, H. S	1 00
Dickson, collected by Mrs E H	10 00	Payne, Mrs E L	6 00
Eberhard, Ethel	2 00	Shelham, Mrs D W	1 00
Fannell, T	1 00	Turner, Mrs V	3 00
Gensemer, Geo W	10 00	Warner, Fannie & May	1 00
Gibbs, Mrs Mary A	6 00	Weiffenbach, Bettina	2 00
Gordon, Miss A	1 00	Wade, Mrs C	1 00
Grove, Miss H	3 00	Walbran, J P	5 00
Hart, B E	2 00	Woodside, Mrs F	3 00
Hine, Emma E	3 00	Young, H	50
Irwin, S	50	Miss B P, Fisherville	50
James, S	50	Irene, J Ill	6 00
Jones, Mrs W A	1 00	A O, Auburn	3 50
Linton, M A	3 00	F, Billings	1 00
Longmaid, Mrs F	1 00	M J	1 00
Love, Mrs M W & Mrs W D	1 00	M L H, Keeseville	6 00
McKinnon, Mrs L	50	Mrs. A. L. G., Johnsonville	1 00
Mallery, H N	2 00	H. K., Marion	1 00
Mapsen, Jethro	3 00	M. J. V., Garber	3 00
McGee, C C & family	2 50	Mrs. S. W., Paxton	1 00
Menzies, Porteous	3 65	Mrs. W. F. W. and family, Waltham	7 00
Morrison, Bernice	3 00	Z. E. P., Richmond Mills	50
Newitt, Hattie A	1 00	—, Reeds Ferry	2 00
Payne, Mrs W O	1 00	Total	$7,352.19

FREE for 15 DAYS

A COMPLETE MUSICAL LIBRARY FOR THE HOME.

300 Instrumental selections for the piano
350 Songs for all voices with piano accompaniment.

OVER 2200 PAGES.
20 Editors and Special Contributors.

This valuable permanent collection of musical masterpieces can be obtained by those who act promptly at

Less than one-tenth the cost in sheet form.

"The most complete and valuable Musical Library ever published. . . . Its Encyclopedia . . . is alone worth buying the entire work. . . ." — Musical Editor Harper's Bazar.

"It is a publication we can recommend. . . . something that will interest and . . . [illegible]

"A vocal and instrumental library of rare excellence and comprehensiveness."—The [illegible]

SIZE OF VOLUMES, 9 X 12 INCHES

LIBRARY OF THE ... WORLD'S BEST MUSIC

New Enlarged Edition of 8 Volumes: 4 Vocal, 4 Instrumental.

Instrumental selections by the greatest composers; melodious, not too difficult, and including popular and operatic melodies, dances, funeral marches, nocturnes, adagios, military pieces, and classic and romantic piano music. The best old and new songs, duets, trios, quartets and choruses upon every subject: Upon friendship, admiration, love, and home; upon absence, sorrow, reminiscence, and revery; upon humor, patriotism, nature, and morality; no hymns, however. 400 portraits and illustrations, over 500 biographies of musicians, and more than 100 new and copyrighted selections by American musicians. The work is planned for cultured Christian homes and sympathetic performers. Not a single selection is coarse or trivial.

All these and over 400 other Composers represented in this matchless collection	Strauss	Liszt	Rubinstein	Paderewski	Chopin	Wagner
	Mozart	Saint-Saens	Balfe	Hadyn	Gounod	Emmett
	Beethoven	Gottschalk	Sullivan	Schytte	Handel	Buck
	Schumann	Grieg	Smith	Bizet	Benedict	Damrosch
	Schubert	Chaminade	Bishop	Rameau	Mattei	De Koven
	Lover	Bendel	Chwatal	Rachmaninoff	Czibulka	Faure
	Moore	Henselt	Cowen	Goldmark	Mollov	Gilbert

Every Home in Which There is a Piano

Should possess this Musical Library. The music that pleases mother, father, young and old, is here. The collection is crowded with the best selections for every occasion. When friends are invited, or drop in unexpectedly, how often does it happen that there can be little or no music, because the favorite pieces of the players are not at hand. With this collection of music in the house, no one will be excused from playing or singing, because "I have no music with me." And thus an evening passes delightfully which, without such a collection, might have been a musical, if not a social, failure.

IT WILL COST YOU NOTHING To get this Treasury of Music, Art, and Biography into your home: Let us send you the volumes for 15 days. If they are not satisfactory return them at our expense. If satisfied, make payments as stipulated below.

Special Offer to The Christian Herald Readers.

Send us your application at once, stating which style of binding you prefer, cloth or half leather. We will forward the entire set, charges prepaid. We will allow you 15 days in which to examine this wonderful collection of music. If you are not satisfied, you can return the set at our expense. If satisfactory, you can make your first payment of one dollar, and remit thereafter $1.00 a month for 17 months, if cloth is ordered, making a total payment of $18.00. If you select the half-leather binding, which we recommend, there will be three more monthly payments of $1.00, making a total payment of $21.00. We assume all risk. We suggest that you apply at once if you desire to obtain a set of this limited edition. Don't fail to mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Address

ABSOLUTELY NO RISK TO YOU.
WE PAY TRANSPORTATION CHARGES.
SEND POSTAL FOR BEAUTIFUL SPECIMEN PAGES.

THE UNIVERSITY SOCIETY,
78 Fifth Avenue, New York.

There are none so deaf as those who won't buy
Wilson's Common Sense Ear Drums

The only scientific sound conductors. Invisible, comfortable, efficient. They fit in the ear. Doctors recommend them. Thousands testify to their perfection and to benefit derived.

Information and book of letters from many users, free.
WILSON EAR DRUM CO.,
223 Trust Bldg. Louisville, Ky.

RHEUMATIC GOUT.....

A physician in Malden, Mass., writes:

"I have been a sufferer from rheumatic gout for many years; have taken preparations of all kinds, but TARTARLITHINE commended itself to my judgment and I am more than satisfied with the results. I am happy to introduce it to others."

Regular package $1.00,
Of all druggists or post-free by mail
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

McKESSON & ROBBINS,
91 Fulton Street, . . New York.

SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

IT CAN'T BE DONE.

No One Can Remain Well, No Chronic Disease Can Be Cured Unless the Stomach is First Made Strong and Vigorous.

This is plain because every organ in the body depends on the stomach for its nourishment. Nerve, bone, sinew, blood are made from the food which the stomach converts to our use.

How useless to treat disease with this, that and the other remedy and neglect the most important of all—the stomach.

The earliest symptoms of indigestion are sour risings, bad taste in the mouth, gas in stomach and bowels, palpitation, all-gone feeling, faintness, headaches, constipation; later comes loss of flesh, consumption, liver and heart troubles, kidney diseases, nervous prostration, all of which are the indirect result of poor nutrition.

Any person suffering from indigestion should make it a practice to take after each meal one of Stuart's Dy-pepsia Tablets, allowing it to dissolve in the mouth and thus mingle with the saliva and enter the stomach in the most natural way. These Tablets are highly recommended by Dr. Jennison because they are composed of the natural digestive acids and fruit essences which assist the stomach in digesting all wholesome food before it has time to ferment and sour.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by druggists, full-sized packages at 50 cents. They are also excellent for invalids and children. A book on stomach diseases and thousands of testimonials of genuine cures sent free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

ALL WOOL SUIT $5.95

Man's Suit made from rich Black Cheviot, woven by America's best Woolen Mill from fine picked wool yarns, dyed by a new process and cannot fade; famous everywhere for its perfect weave and deep black color.

SKILLED SUIT TAILORS will make the suit in latest sack style to fit perfect, line it with fine heavy Farmer satin and sew it with pure silk and linen thread, guaranteed far better in quality, style and looks than others best $10 suit.

SEND NO MONEY but send this adv. and we'll send Free a sample of this beautiful Cheviot and our big book of cloth samples of other suits from $6.95 up and overcoats from $5.95 up, or send us your Height, Weight, Chest, Waist and Crotch measure with $1.00 deposit and we'll express the suit to you C O D., subject to examination; examine it carefully, try it on, see that it fits perfect, then pay the express agent the balance ($4.95) and expressage, only after you find it exactly as represented, a perfect fit and far better than others best $10.00 suits. Send today quick for suit or free sample book.

REFERENCES The Royal Trust Co. Bank, Chicago—any wholesale house in Chicago or any express Company in America

THE C. LOUIS VEHON CO., 157 W. Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.

Send $1.00 and we will (for 30 days) send you our best $10.00 TOLEDO BATH CABINET complete with best alcohol stove, directions, formulas by express C. O. D. subject to examination. If you find it the best Cabinet you ever saw, worth a dozen of the cheap affairs pay express agent $3.50 more and express charges. Ours is the best of all Cabinets, has a real door, opens wide, strong steel frame, galv'd, rubber lined, top curtains, folds flat 1 in. space. Face Steamer, 75c extra. Order today. Provides Turkish and vapor baths at home 3c each, beautifies complexion, prevents disease, will benefit every ailment. Money refunded after 30 days use if not just as represented. WRITE FOR CATALOGUE FREE. We make Cabinets from $2.25 up. Agents Wanted. Big wages. Exclusive territory. TOLEDO BATH CABINET CO., 612 Cherry St., TOLEDO, OHIO.

To Troublous Stomachs.

To prove that Kremer's Dyspepsia Powder is the most meritorious remedy for all forms of dyspepsia, I will send a large box for 5c. postage, the price (50c.) to be sent only in case you are benefited after a week's trial. Otherwise return powder by mail.

J. A. HISEY, Newburgh, N. Y., writes: "It did me more good than anything else I have ever taken." So say hundreds.

Mention this paper.

JOHN KREMER, Druggist, 428 7th Ave., N. Y.

NO CASH REQUIRED. 30 DAYS FREE TRIAL. WE PAY Freight. WE TRUST YOU.

$9.00 Buys a High Grade Victor Sewing Machine with full set of attachments. Adapted to light or heavy work. Guaranteed for 20 years. We make 35 DIFFERENT STYLES AT ALL PRICES.

$22.00 Buys a First Class Victor CHURCH OR PARLOR ORGAN Guaranteed for 25 years. Free Trial. WE MAKE 24 STYLES AT ALL PRICES.

$120.00 Buys a Great VICTOR PIANO Upright

We also deal in all kinds of Musical Instruments ALL CATALOGUES FREE. VICTOR MFG. CO., Dept. P51, 161-167 Plymouth Pl. Chicago, Ill.

ASTHMA SURE CURE

I have a sure, safe and speedy cure for that distressing and dangerous disease, asthma no matter how deep seated it may be. To convince any sufferer of its great virtue, I will mail a trial package free. Relief is instant and complete cure certain. Write at once to F. G. KINSMAN, M.D., Box 824, Augusta, Me.

MUSIC SALE To close out our stock we send by mail 70 pieces, full sheet music size, all parts complete, all for 20c.; or 4 lots 50c. Money back if not suited. HOT TIME IN THE OLD TOWN, and 100 Songs with Music, 5 cents. A.B. Hathaway, 339 Wash. St., Boston, Mass.

Rulers of the World at Home

A MORE fascinating book than Rulers of the World at Home has never been offered to the American public. There is a peculiar charm about this work that will endear it to the hearts of all its readers. No book ever issued contains so many accurate life-like portraits of royalty and rulers, and none has ever attempted to give such a realistic description of the domestic life of the men and women who have been called, either by birth or popular choice, to occupy the high places in the world.

The possession of this volume invests the news of the day with new life, as it enables the reader to look upon the faces of the men and women who are most prominently in the public eye. It gives accurate pictures of their homes, it tells how they live, what they wear, what they eat, what fads they follow, how their children are trained, what salaries they receive, how they are regarded in their own communities, and a mass of other information, pictorial and literary, which no book ever heretofore published in the world, contained.

Rulers of the World at Home stands unmatched. Hundreds of different books may perhaps afford you the same information, but it would take months to read them and require a small fortune to purchase them, provided you knew just where to get them. Yet this one volume, sold with a yearly subscription to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, at only $2.00, gives the sum and substance of them all within 416 large pages; and once in possession of it your winter evenings will be delightfully filled with entertainment and instruction which otherwise would have entailed a hundred times the expense. The edition is limited strictly to 10,000 volumes and they are now selling at the rate of 500 a day. Act quickly or you will be compelled to do without it.

Best Teachers' Bibles

WE sell nearly 50,000 Teachers' Bibles a year. We have now sold almost half a million. Before we began to offer them as premiums very few people could afford the luxury of possessing one, but THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has so stimulated their circulation that now every one of the importing houses is compelled to have a domestic plant and work night and day to supply the demand.

None issued, however, are equal to those offered by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Our large type and beautifully bound Bibles stand unequaled for quality and price. They are set in Long Primer type, twice as large as that employed in this article and can be read by people of all ages. Don't take a small print Bible when you can get a Long Primer, and don't take a paper-lined Bible if you can afford to give one dollar more for a leather-lined book. The life of the latter is ten times the former; besides this, the leather-lined books are thumb-indexed.

The type in both editions is the same, and so is the size and general binding, but leather inside and out is worth much more than the difference in price.

A Long Primer Bible, bound in American Levant, and a year's subscription to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will cost you Two Dollars. The same Bible, leather-lined and Thumb-Indexed, with a year's subscription to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, will cost you Three Dollars. Take our advice and secure the Leather-Lined Thumb-Indexed Bible. Both have the Concordance. Maps and all the Helps.

Be sure to state whether you want the Revised or the Authorized Version. Both are in Verse form, but you must state which you want.

Books Received

Lady Blanche's Salon. By Lloyd Brice. Pp. 229: Publisher, F. Tennyson Neely, 114 Fifth ave., New York City.

A Primer of Forestry. Part I.—The Forest. By Gifford Pinchot Foester. Bulletin 24, Division of Forestry, United States Department of Agriculture. This little book contains much valuable matter, stated in a clear and interesting manner concerning forestries. It has 130 illustrations. Pp. 89; published by the Government Printing Office Washington, D. C.

THE LARKIN SOAPS

THE LARKIN PLAN saves you half the regular prices, half the cost. You pay but the usual retail value of the soaps after thirty days' trial and all middlemen's profits are yours in a premium, itself of equal value.

Our Great Combination Box.

Enough to last an Average Family one Full Year.

This List of Contents Changed as Desired.

100 Bars "Sweet Home" Soap. Gold Medal Winner. For farm dry and household purposes it has no superior. Large bars.	$5.00
10 Bars White Woollen Soap. A perfect soap for flannels.	.70
12 Pkgs. Boraxine Soap Powder. Full pounds. An unequalled laundry luxury.	1.20
5 Bars Honor Bright Scouring Soap	.25
1-4 Doz. Modjeska Complexion Soap. Perfume exquisite. A matchless beautifier.	.60
1-4 Doz. Old English Castile Soap	.30
1-4 Doz. Creme Oatmeal Toilet Soap	.25
1-4 Doz. Elite Glycerine Toilet Soap	.25
1-4 Doz. Borated Tar Soap. Unequalled for washing the hair.	.25
1-4 Doz. Sulphur Soap	.25
1 Bottle, 1 oz., Modjeska Perfume. Delicate, refined, popular, lasting.	.35
1 Jar, 2 ozs., Modjeska Cold Cream. Soothing. Cures chapped hands.	.25
1 Bottle Modjeska Tooth Powder. Preserves the teeth, hardens the gums, sweetens the breath.	.25
1 Stick Witch Hazel Shaving Soap	.10
The Contents, Bought at Retail, Cost	$10.00
The Premium, Worth at Retail	10.00
All for $10. . .	$20

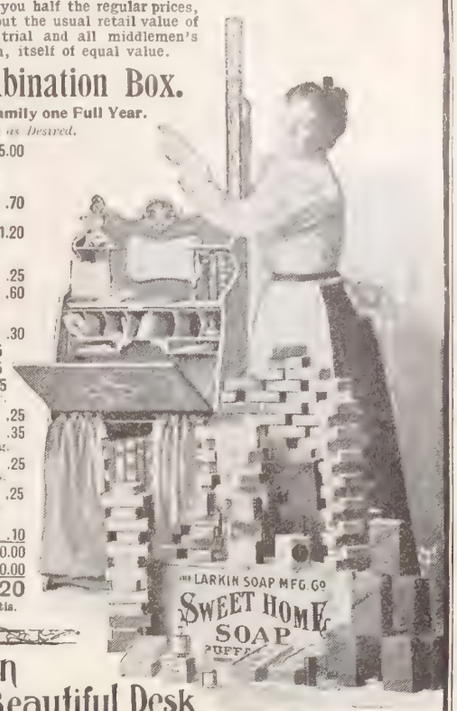
You get the premium you select, gratis.



The Larkin Plan GIVES You the Beautiful Desk

The Whole Family supplied with Laundry and Toilet Soaps for a year at Half Price. Sent Subject to Approval and Payment after Thirty Days' Trial.

THE FIRST AWARD OF THE OMAHA EXPOSITION WAS GIVEN THE LARKIN SOAPS.

THE "CHAUTAUQUA" DESK. Solid Oak throughout. Hand-rubbed finish. Very handsome carvings. Beveled plate mirror. Desk is 5 feet high, 2½ feet wide, writing bed 24 inches deep. Drop leaf closes and locks. Brass curtain rod.

It is Wise Economy to Use Good Soap. Our Soaps are sold entirely on their merits, with our guarantee of purity. Thousands of Families Use Them, and have for many years, in every locality, many in your vicinity. Ask us for your neighbors' testimonials.

AFTER 30 DAYS' TRIAL, if the purchaser finds all the soaps, etc., of excellent quality and the premium entirely satisfactory and as represented, remit $10; if not, notify us goods are subject to our order. We make no charge for what you have used.

If you remit in advance, you will receive in addition a nice present for the lady of the house, and shipment day after order is received. Money refunded promptly if the Box or Premium does not prove all expected. Safe delivery guaranteed. The transaction is not complete until you are satisfied.

☞ Many boys and girls easily earn a "Chautauqua" Desk or other premium free, by dividing the contents of a Combination Box among a few neighbors who readily pay the listed retail prices. This provides the $10.00 needful to pay our bill, and gives the young folks the premium as "a middleman's profit." The wide success of this plan confirms all our claims.

Booklet Handsomely Illustrating Twenty Premiums sent on request.

THE LARKIN SOAP MFG. CO., Larkin St., Buffalo, N. Y.

See Notes Below. Established 1875. Capital, $500,000.

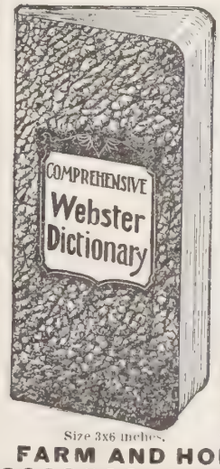
The Christian Work, New York, says: From personal experience with the Larkin Soap Manufacturing Co. and their premiums, we can recommend them with confidence. Their offer is genuine; the soaps as advertised and the Company reliable.

From Northwestern Christian Advocate, Chicago: For the Soaps manufactured by the Larkin Soap Mfg. Co. we have heard many expressions of satisfaction and commendation. Knowing what we do we recommend the Company with confidence.

This Dictionary CONTAINING 50,000 Words FREE.



Size 3x6 inches.

12 DEPARTMENTS IN ONE VOLUME.

A work of extraordinary interest to all classes of progressive people. In quality it is unexcelled, even by the great standard works of to-day. In quantity it contains nearly every word in common usage, and fully answers the purpose of at least three out of every four people. Worcester Dictionary has 105,000 words, Century 225,000 and Standard 300,000. These cost from $10 to $60 each. Ours with 50,000 words may now be had upon terms heretofore unheard of.

A new device shows the plural forms of all the nouns. Another point sets out about 5000 especially difficult words; but the greatest of all achievements in modern dictionary making is the addition of 25,500 words to this dictionary by means of a single page, called the "Columbian Word-Builder."

DEPARTMENTS. Besides the Dictionary it also contains twelve departments, as follows: 1. Abbreviations; 2. Pronouncing Dictionary; 3. Proper Names; 4. Gazetteer of the World; 5. Large Cities; 6. Parliamentary Rules; 7. Business Instructor; 8. Social Etiquette; 9. Letter Writer; 10. Use of Capitals; 11. Punctuation; 12. Postal Guide.

It contains 192 pages, handsomely bound in imitation leather covers.

GIVEN AWAY. To introduce Farm and Home, our national semi-monthly, which already has a circulation of 350,000, into thousands of homes where it is not now taken, we make the following Remarkable Offer: The regular price of Farm and Home is 50 cents a year, but we will send it to those mentioning this paper, three months on trial for only 10 cents (in silver or stamps), and without further charge send "The Comprehensive Webster Dictionary," as above described, by mail, postpaid. All accepting this offer will receive our magnificently illustrated 40-page premium list, containing over 500 useful articles and some of the most remarkable offers ever made. Agents wanted everywhere. Liberal commission for good work. Address all orders to

FARM AND HOME, Springfield, Mass., or Chicago, Ills.

NEW INVENTION

A $12 Bath Cabinet For Only $5.00

Our New 1902 Style Square Quaker Folding Turkish Bath Cabinet

GUARANTEED TO BE THE BEST OF ALL CABINETS AT

Any Price, or Your Money Cheerfully Refunded

Engraved from photograph.

Ready for use when received.
No Frame to set up.
No trouble: No bother.
WE HAVE BEEN MAKING GENUINE BATH CABINETS FOR YEARS.

COULD NOT BE BETTER MADE.
MORE CONVENIENT.
MORE DURABLE, MORE HANDSOME.
MORE SATISFACTORY.
IF YOU PAID FOUR TIMES THE PRICE WE ASK FOR IT.

27,000 physicians and 1,000,000 happy users recommend our Cabinet in the highest and strongest terms.

We are the largest manufacturers of Bath Cabinets in the world. Our annual sales 300,000 Cabinets. Value $1,500,000.00. Hundred times more than all other firms.

IT IS THE ONLY GENUINE CABINET MADE.

HAS A REAL DOOR.

FRAMEWORK EIGHT

UPRIGHTS

DURABLE COVERING MATERIAL, RUBBER LINED TOP.

CURTAINS LARGE ROOMY

INSIDE. Knees arms and body do not touch the sides

FOLDS FLAT

WEIGHS

There is no Man, Woman or Child in the World Whom Turkish and Vapor Baths will not Benefit.

pure air one enjoys at home for 3c each, all of the fumed or medicated, if desired. Better and cheaper

SO SIMPLE TO OPERATE.

and lock door, sit down and you enjoy a temperature All done in one minute. open top curtains, cool of gradually while you sponge

DON'T BE DECEIVED

by imitations. We do not make it our business to find number of unreliable, irresponsible concerns who have whatever of the laws of hygiene, and have no regard dangerous to use, on the strength of satisfaction given, and the enormous demand created for our genuine Quaker, and as we have many letters from persons who have bought such goods, are unable to use them, and obliged to throw them away and secure a genuine Cabinet from us, we feel it our duty to warn the public so that no one else may be imposed upon.

If our Cabinet is not the best in every way do not want you to keep it.

Don't use a Cabinet which has no door, no frame.

Remember a wooden frame Cabinet about as valuable as a wooden stove would be. Do not pay $7.50, $12.50 or $15.00 for inferior, bunglesome and incon-

Place your order with us and you have the satisfaction a responsible and reliable firm capital $100,000.00 who know the requirements of a first-class Cabinet, do

Write to-day for full particulars and our valuable book, also testimonials from thousands of wont be deceived or disappointed as we guarantee not just as represented. We ship the same day your DO NOT FAIL TO SEND FOR BOOKLET.

IT IS THE ONLY BATH which PRESERVES PREVENTS Colds Fevers Lagrippe. Disease. CURES bodily ailments. Makes clear skin pure blood strong nerves, clear brain, healthy bodies. Makes you sleep sound. Beautifies complexion.

WE POSITIVELY GUARANTEE RESULTS.

it will cure Nervous Troubles Debility, Sleeplessness, Obesity, Lagrippe, Neuralgia.

CURES RHEUMATISM—we have offered for four years a standing reward of $50.00 for a case not relieved. Cures Woman's Troubles, Headache, Gout, Piles, Dropsy, Diabetes, all Blood Skin Diseases, Liver Kidney Troubles.

IT WILL CURE A HARD COLD with one bath.

the Cabinet, if desired, is a

HEAD AND COMPLEXION STEAMING ATTACHMENT

WE SEND IT ON 30 DAYS TRIAL

to be returned at our expense and your money refunded if not just as represented. What could be more fair? We could not afford to have a Cabinet out which was not just as represented and satisfac-

ORDER TO-DAY.

hol stove, plain directions and valuable formulas and

AGENTS AND SALESMEN WANTED—MEN AND WOMEN—BIG WAGES. $30.00 to $50.00 weekly

an enormous demand right in your locality. You carry small stock and supply it. Most liberal terms and commissions. Be your own boss. Any energetic man or woman can make $5.00 to $10.00 clear daily.

WRITE FOR OUR NEW PLAN, TERMS ETC., FREE.

The World M'f'g Co., 754 World B'ld'g, Cincinnati, O.

$13.75 FOR XMAS or BIRTHDAY Elegant Gondola Couch $13.75

A HANDSOME PRESENT

It is extra size and extra quality. 6 ft. 3 in. long, 30 in. wide, full Gondola shape,

FREE.

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL

FREE

$13.75.

PILLOW FREE WITH COUCH.

Established 1857.

G. LOUIS SCHULTZE'S SONS, 1051-1053 Milwaukee Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Print Your Own Cards, &c.

$5 Press. Circular or newspaper, $18. Type, cards, paper, &c. to do printing for others. Money in it. Rules, press, type, &c. sent. THE PRESS CO., MERIDEN, CONN.

$3.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working for us. Steady employment; you furnish their time. A couple hours in the evening will do it. Send for particulars and sample free. B. F. Johnson, 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP

It relieves the child, softens the gums, allays all pain; cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa.

SUN PASTE

STOVE POLISH

A labor saver—quick and easy shiner—polishes brightest, without odor, dust or muss—up-to-date—it's a sunshine!

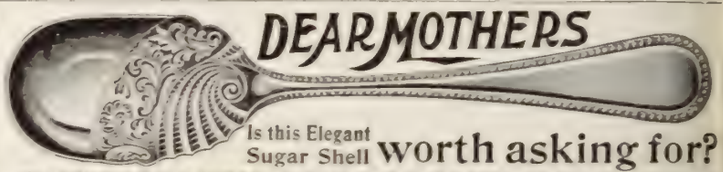
MADE BY PROPRIETORS OF "RISING SUN STOVE POLISH"

For Both 25 cents For Both

If you are looking for a Great Bargain in Silverware you have never heard of before and find it on this page, here is one of the Greatest Bargains ever offered by any reliable Manufacturer. For 25 cents we will Prepaid Both the Salt and Pepper Shakers. They are Guaranteed Quadruple Silver Plated. Warranted to wear for years. Handsomely and useful as represented in every home or office. If on receipt of the same you do not think or find these the Greatest Bargain you ever saw or heard of, return them at once to us and we will refund you your money. We have been doing business in Chicago since 1868. Any Bank or Express Company in good standing. Our Bargain Silverware Catalogue Sent Free.

SALT PEPPER

LEONARD MFG. CO., 5 & 7 MONROE ST., COR. MICHIGAN AVE., CHICAGO.



Is this Elegant Sugar Shell worth asking for?

Its retail value is $1.00 each, but if you will write us at once to the United States who has not received one of our silver spoons. Send your name and address plainly, and we will send you free of charge, one of these handsome Sugar Shells, and tell you how you can get a full set of six, also one of our Beautiful Silver Thimbles, and Souvenir Spoon, Free of charge, as a premium for a little of your spare time. Send your name and address at once, as we can only give away a limited number of these premiums, and they will be sent out in the order in which the letters are received. Write to-day. Address

QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO., 313 W. Harrison Street, Chicago.

NO ADVANCE IN PRICES

$15.50

IN SPITE OF RECENT ADVANCES IN RAW MATERIAL.

Will buy our beautiful, latest model Arlington Gem Drop Head Sewing Machine possessing all the known

WARRANTED 20 YEARS.

$8.50

A Good High Arm Machine at $9.75.

Our New Ball Bearing Kenwood Sewing Machines are the easiest running machines on earth

$22.00.

$19.00. 50 CENTS DISCOUNT ALLOWED ON ALL MACHINES FOR CASH WITH ORDER.

Address CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 W. Van Buren St., Dept. B-18, CHICAGO, ILL.

AGENTS WANTED FOR "THE STORY OF TWO WARS."

RUPTURE CURED

The Improved Elastic Truss Co., 768 Broadway, N. Y.

SILK REMNANTS FOR CRAZY WORK

PARIS SILK CO., Box 3045, New York City, N. Y.

WANTED—A case of bad health that RIPANS will not benefit. Five cents will buy one. Ten cents will buy a case containing twelve. Nearly one hundred million RIPANS have been sold in the past year

A PREACHER'S DISCOVERY.

Dr. Blosser, the well-known Minister of the Gospel, and catarrh specialist, is the originator of one of the world's most valuable means of curing disease. It is a fact well known among physicians, as well as by sufferers, that while there are many proposed remedies for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., heretofore there has been known no reliable cure.

Dr. Blosser, in his regular practice, had under his care many patients suffering from these diseases, and after trying all the remedies recommended in the medical books, without satisfactory results, he was driven to the necessity of devising an entirely new mode of treatment. He discovered a combination of medical plants, which destroys the germs of the disease and heals the ulcerated mucous membrane, without injury to the most delicate constitution.

Having demonstrated in his practice the wonderful curative properties of this remedy, he publicly announced his discovery, and during the past twenty-five years thousands of helpless sufferers have been cured. He cured one case of 45 years' standing, and others of 15, 20 and 25 years' standing. These facts warrant us in announcing to sufferers the world over that a positive cure has been found for catarrhal diseases.

50,000 Trial Packages FREE.

We have recently given away 100,000 trial packages of Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure to persons afflicted with Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrhal Deafness, etc., and now offer another 50,000 trial packages, absolutely free. If the trial package does not impress you favorably, you will have been at no expense. If you wish to give the remedy a more thorough trial at once than the sample affords, inclose us $1.00 for one month's treatment, by mail, postpaid. If you wish a free package, write a letter or postal card to

DR. J. W. BLOSSER & SON, 50 Broad Street, Atlanta, Ga.

Below are Letters from Ministers, Physicians and other Prominent Men, Recommending this Great Remedy:

Prominent Minister Cured Bronchitis and Ulcerated Throat 15 Years' Standing

I had bronchitis and ulcerated sore throat of fifteen years' standing having spent hundreds of dollars for medicine that did not cure me. I use boxes of your Catarrh Cure, used according to directions, cured me sound and well. I have never known it to fail to cure in a single case of nasal catarrh if the afflicted did not stop using the remedy as soon as partial relief was obtained. (Rev.) M. G. MILLIGAN

Choccolocco, Ala.

Note.—Mr. Milligan was cured 12 years ago, and states in a recent letter that he has had no symptoms of the disease since.

Certificate of an Eminent Physician

Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son.

Gentlemen: I tender you my sincere thanks and take great pleasure in recommending your remedy to the profession and to the public as a safe, pleasant and most reliable remedy for catarrh. I have purchased and sent you Catarrh Remedy to several of my friends who suffered very much as I did, and they have reported to me as having received the same good results which attended my own case. I have received many letters during the past year from various sections of the United States asking me as to the certificate I gave you being a genuine one. I have replied to each and have advised them to give the remedy a fair trial, and I believed they would be cured. I have used it in my practice whenever a case presented. I have been cured by your remedy and again tender you my sincere thanks. Very respectfully,

Greensboro, N. C. R. K. GALLOWAY, M. D.

Deafness Cured.

Dear Mr. Blosser: My little boy, now twelve years old, suffered severely for nine years with nasal catarrh, which also impaired his hearing to such an extent that we had serious apprehensions of its entire loss. But we now bless the day when we first saw your Catarrh Cure advertised in the Arkansas Methodist, for our boy has used four boxes of it, and we now rejoice in the happy results of his hearing being perfectly restored, and the nasal trouble, of so many years continuance, which was so severe that the bridge of his nose was eaten through has almost wholly disappeared, so that we can only see slight symptoms of it when he has contracted a severe cold. I heartily commend your remedy to others. Yours truly,

Green Forest, Ark. Rev. D. C. Ross.

Catarrh Cured.

Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sirs: I received the packages of Catarrh Cure all right. It proved to be much more than you advertised. It cured my wife of a severe case of catarrh. She had tried various remedies, but never found relief until she tried yours. I would advise any sufferer to give your remedy a fair trial. I have recommended it to many of my friends who are troubled in the same way. I remain yours very truly,

East Raymond, Me. HOWARD WITHAM.

Evangelist Cured 18 Years Ago—No Return.

Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen: I was a sufferer from nasal catarrh for twelve years, and it developed into the worst form, impairing my eyesight and injuring my hearing. It also affected my bronchial tubes, serious. My nervous system gave way, unfitting me for the duties of life. By the constant use of Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure, I was permanently cured in the year 1881, making eighteen years to-day that I have never had a return of the disease nor have I felt the effects of it. I most heartily recommend to all sufferers Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure as one that cannot be excelled. Fraternally,

Waxahachie, Tex. Rev. J. CARUTHERS, Evangelist.

A Minister of the Gospel Cured of Asthma.

Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, Atlanta, Ga.

I have used five boxes of your Catarrh Cure since last April, when I was suffering almost constantly from asthma. I had paroxysms every night, so that I could neither sleep nor lie down even while taking medicine from our home doctor. Four days after smoking your medicine I began to improve so much that I could lie flat on my back and sleep as well as anybody. I think I am cured of Asthma. I thought before I began using your medicine that my preaching was over, but I now have three regular appointments each 1th monthly. My head has troubled me very little from catarrh; have had less pains in my head than for years. I must speak in highest terms of your medicine. I am recommending it everywhere I go. Yours truly, Thomaston, Ga. (Rev.) JNO. W. A. WATTER.

Catarrh Cured Permanently.

Dr. J. W. Blosser, City.

Dear Sir: In reply to your favor asking about the permanency of the cure of catarrh effected by your remedy on myself years ago, I will state that there has been no return of the disease, and I am now absolutely free from any affection of the kind. Should I ever have a return of it, I know of nothing that I would resort to with so much confidence as Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure. Yours truly,

Atlanta, Ga. L. A. HAWES, 295 Marietta Street.

A Minister Cured.

Dr. J. W. Blosser, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir and Brother: In 1894 I contracted a severe cold which came near developing into pneumonia. We broke it up, but it left me with nasal catarrh. It continued for nearly two years, growing worse all the time, until it affected my whole system and became really distressing. I then ordered a box of your Catarrh Cure, and before it had all been used I felt I was well, but I continued using it at intervals, until it was used. I have had no further trouble with the disease. I am grateful to God and obliged to you for the remedy and the cure it wrought. I have been well for more than a year. If my testimonial will help some other poor sufferer from this loathsome disease to get cured, I will rejoice. Your brother in Christ,

Paris, Tex. (Rev.) C. M. KEITH.

ONE YEAR'S FREE TRIAL

BRIGHTEN YOUR HOME WITH THE CELEBRATED CORNISH AMERICAN PIANOS & ORGANS.

A prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT of $10.00 on the list prices as quoted in our 1900 Catalogue on any CORNISH ORGAN or $20.00 on the list prices if you buy a CORNISH PIANO.

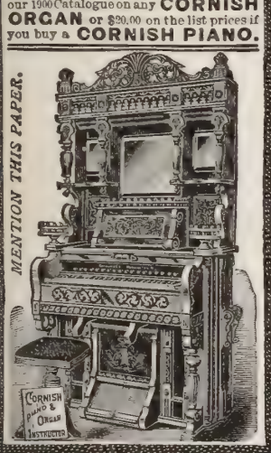
MENTION THIS PAPER.



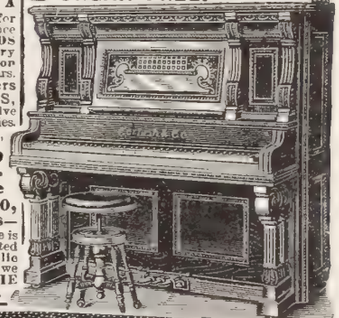
WE WILL ship a Cornish Piano or Cornish Organ anywhere upon the distinct understanding that if it is not satisfactory to purchaser after 12 months' use, we will take it back and refund purchase money, freight charges and six per cent. interest. Thousands have taken advantage of this, THE ORIGINAL CORNISH PLAN, of doing business, during the time this really wonderful offer has been in force, and the immediate success of this iron clad guarantee decided us to continue it so that thousands more can participate in its object of INSURING THE PURCHASER OF A CORNISH PIANO OR A CORNISH ORGAN AGAINST ANY RISK. It would be impossible for us to make public this offer were it not backed up by the strongest evidence of our absolute responsibility. THE CORNISH AMERICAN PIANOS AND ORGANS are warranted for twenty-five years and every warrant is a personal guarantee endorsed by a business reputation of fifty years, and plant and property worth over one million dollars. There are over a Quarter of a Million satisfied purchasers of the CORNISH PIANOS and CORNISH ORGANS, and so great has been the demand for our instruments during the last twelve months that we have just completed very extensive additions to our factories.

FOR FULL PARTICULARS of the WORLD FAMOUS CORNISH PLAN and for a complete description of the instruments made by us, see new Jubilee Catalogue for 1900, HANDSOMELY ILLUSTRATED in Colors— the most comprehensive musical catalogue in the trade. The frontispiece is a masterly reproduction of an interesting oil painting designed and executed for us by an eminent artist, representing "St. Cecilia and the Angelic Choir." This beautiful catalogue is sent FREE, charges prepaid, and we also include our novel reference book "THE HEART OF THE PEOPLE" and our latest special offers free. WRITE TO-DAY.

REFERENCES.

Our bank, your bank, any bank, or any of the multitude of patrons who have purchased millions of dollars' worth of instruments from us during the past fifty years.

Send for particulars of the Cornish Co-operative Plan, showing how YOU CAN SECURE a CORNISH PIANO or ORGAN FREE.



ORGANS FROM $25.

CORNISH & CO.
ESTABLISHED 50 YEARS.
WASHINGTON, N.J.

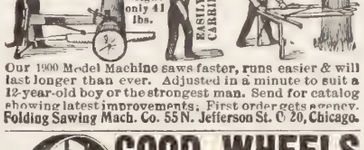
PIANOS FROM $155.

SAWS

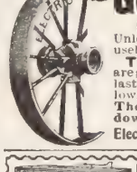
ANY WOOD IN ANY POSITION ON ANY GROUND 4 in. to 5 ft. Through

1 MAN with a FOLDING SAWING MACHINE BEATS 2 MEN with a Cross-cut Saw

5 to 9 cords daily is the usual average for one man.



Our 1900 Model Machine saws faster, runs easier & will last longer than ever. Adjusted in a minute to suit a 12-year-old boy or the strongest man. Send for catalog showing latest improvements. First order gets agency. Folding Sawing Mach. Co. 55 N. Jefferson St. C 20, Chicago.

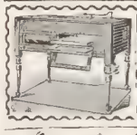


GOOD WHEELS

MAKE A GOOD WAGON.

Unless a wagon has good wheels it is useless. THE ELECTRIC STEEL WHEELS are good wheels and they make a wagon last indefinitely. They are made high or low, any width of tire, to fit any skein. They can't get loose, rot or break down. They last always. Catalog free.

Electric Wheel Co., Box 136 Quincy, Ills.



NO BETTER INCUBATORS

at any price than Each is a greater percentage of good eggs with less attention or at less expense. Our catalogue PRINTED IN 5 LANGUAGES tells all about it—contains testimonials, descriptions and prices. Sent for 6c.

DES MOINES INCUBATOR CO., Box 74, Des Moines, Ia.

$5 50 EGG SIZE

A MILLION TESTIMONIALS are not so convincing as the 30 DAYS' TRIAL FREE we offer on every incubator we make. Every one self-regulating and guaranteed. Over 15,000 BANTAMS in use; hatching 45 to 50 chicks from 50 eggs. Send 4 cents for No. 10 catalog.

Buckeye Incubator Co., Springfield, O.

DON'T WORRY

about results in hatching chickens or about the success of the poultry business. Buy The Petaluma Incubator and set your mind at rest. It will turn all previous failures into positive success. Regulates perfectly. Hatches 5 chicks to 5 eggs, 50 to 500 eggs. We pay freight in the U.S.

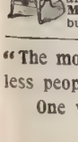
Catalog free. Petaluma Incubator Co. Box 709 Petaluma, Cal.

DON'T BUY AN INCUBATOR

and pay for it before giving it a trial. We will send the celebrated NEW PREMIER INCUBATOR on trial. This evidences our confidence. No simpler machine can be used. Lowest price World's Fair. Also sole manufacturers of Simplicity Incubator. Catalogue and Poultry Helps 5 cts. Book for Poultry Houses etc., 25 cts.

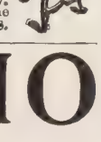
COLUMBIA INCUBATOR CO. 12 Adams St. Delaware City, Del.

LOTS OF EGGS MEANS LOTS OF MONEY.



If you can double the eggs you double the money. Green Cut Bone is the only thing which will double the egg product. It is easily secured, easy to prepare and feed and is cheap.

MANN'S NEW BONE CUTTERS



are the difference between profit and loss in the poultry business. Cut fine, fast and easy. Mann's Clover Cutters, Granite Crystal Grit and Swinging Feed Trays make the business profitable. Catalogue free. F. W. MANN CO., Box 29 MILFORD, MASS.

GOOD LITTLE INCUBATORS

Many people want a small incubator but don't want a mere toy, a plaything that will only spoil good eggs. To meet the demand for a really good little incubator we have perfected the now famous Reliable 50 EGG BANTLING SPECIAL. It is the equal of any hatcher ever made, only smaller, and sells for only $5

Send 10c for our 20th Century Catalogue and Poultry Book. Best ever published.

RELIABLE INCB. & BROODER CO., Box B16 Quincy, Ill.

"The more you say the less people remember." One word with you, SAPOLIO

$75 MONTH AND EXPENSES; no experience needed; position permanent; self seller. PEASE MFG. CO., P.O. Box A, Cincinnati, O.

ALUMINUM AND AGENTS SPECIALTIES Write for particulars and CATALOG FREE. VINING NOVELTY CO., 130 Wabash Av. CHICAGO.

The Youth's Companion

Fifty-Two Weekly Issues. $1.75 a Year.

THE Volume for 1900 will again exemplify the endeavors of the publishers to increase the attractiveness of the paper for general reading. Among the features of the new volume of exceptional value will be the following:

Ambitions: True and False,	Bishop Henry C. Potter
Story of a Highland Industry,	Duchess of Sutherland
Mary Darl, Heroine,	Elizabeth Stuart Phelps
How I Acted the Missionary,	Henry M. Stanley
The Modern Girl's Ambitions,	Margaret Deland
The Habit of Thrift,	Andrew Carnegie
Are There Too Many College Men?	Pres. James B. Angell
Houses of the Future,	Felix L. Oswald
The Rebellion of Anne,	Mary E. Wilkins
Country Boys Who Come to New York,	S. A. Nelson
The Stage Tavern,	Sarah Orne Jewett
A Baritone Among Famous People,	Victor Maurel
Photographing Stars,	Prof. C. A. Young
Can We Prolong Our Lives?	Dr. Cyrus Edson
My First Survey,	Prof. John Trowbridge
About Lawyers,	Atty.-Gen. John W. Griggs
With the Pretoria Horse,	Rider Haggard
Taste in Music,	Reginald de Koven
Pulpit Eloquence,	Dean Farrar

Send your address on a postal card and we will mail you our Illustrated Announcement Number, containing a full prospectus of the Contributors and Contributions engaged for the new volume.

A Christmas Gift for All the Family.

A subscription to The Companion is a gift that preserves its freshness and power to delight all the year through, till Christmas comes again. It is a gift in which all the household have a share. In more than half a million American homes it is now a welcome weekly visitor, a constant source of pleasure and of inspiration.

50-Cent Calendar Free.

The New Calendar for 1900 is exceedingly attractive, both in conception and as a work of art. Three exquisite figure pieces embellish it, reproducing in twelve-color lithograph all the character and beauty of the original paintings, which were done expressly for The Companion. The Calendar is given to every one paying the subscription for the 1900 volume.

BISHOP HENRY C. POTTER.

Our Christmastide Offer to New Subscribers.

THOSE who subscribe at once, sending $1.75 with this slip or the name of this magazine, will receive all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1899 FREE from the time of subscription, and then all the issues for the 52 weeks of the new year, until January 1, 1901.

This offer includes the gift of the New Companion Calendar for 1900—the most beautiful one ever presented by The Companion.

NR 99

The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass.

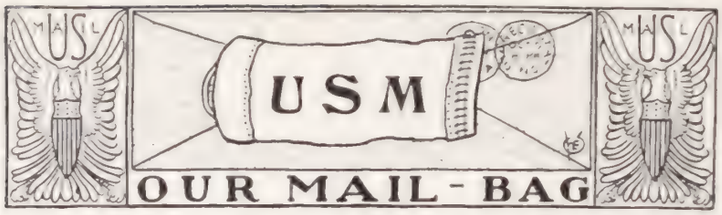
VOL. XXII. NEW YORK, DECEMBER, 6, 1899 No. 7

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

I love Thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of Thine abode,
The Church our blest Redeemer saved
With His own precious blood.

I love Thy Church, O God!
Her walls before Thee stand,
Dear as the apple of Thine eye,
And graven on Thy hand.



QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

1. These questions are printed Four weeks in advance so as to afford all our readers an opportunity to answer them.
2. For answers to the questions which appear below, when accepted, we will allow compensation for the matter used at the rate of One Dollar a hundred words.
3. Answers must be received at this office two weeks in advance of the date for which they are intended.
4. The editor reserves the right to condense accepted answers when necessary, and compensation will be based on the matter as printed.
5. Do not write inquiring if your material has been accepted. If it appears on this page, you may know that it has been accepted.
6. We cannot return any MSS. sent to the Editor of THE MAIL-BAG—not even when stamps accompany them.
7. Write only on one side of the sheet and never send on the same sheet anything intended for any other department of the paper.
8. Address all communications intended for this department.

EDITOR THE MAIL-BAG.
The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York.

Questions to Be Answered Dec. 20

[illegible]
exerted the greatest influence in behalf of Christianity?
3. What book is next in importance to the Bible?
[illegible]
ble to God for its actions?
[illegible]
him there, am I, as a Christian, justified in trying to kill him?
6. [illegible]
7. [illegible]
or excavation?
8. Does a person who compounds a felony to shield a friend offend God?
9. The Lord's prayer teaches us to pray, "Forgive [illegible] against us." Can a father who dies, deliberately disinheriting his son because of disobedience, himself expect divine forgiveness?
10. How can a million dollars be best expended to accomplish the greatest good?

Questions to Be Answered Dec. 27

1. Who may be justly considered the most important character of the nineteenth century?
2. Is it right to keep the house of God closed all the week, except for services on Sunday and the weekly [illegible]
[illegible]
States?
4. [illegible] the judgment day?
5. What was the religious belief of Abraham Lincoln?
6. Is marriage a help to success in life?
7. [illegible]
8. Which nations have made the greatest advance [illegible] tional and material progress?
9. What is the present rank of France among the nations of the earth?
10. Which was the largest contribution ever made to charity?

Questions to Be Answered Jan. 3

1. What investment of capital do the combined higher [illegible] represent, respectively?
2. Is it wiser to relieve the destitute poor ourselves or to do so through the medium of an organized charity?
3. Who may be considered the leading religious char[illegible]
4. [illegible] the longest?
5. Which is the most deserving of the foreign mission fields at the present time, and why?
6. Ought a Christian to insure his life, or to insure his premises against fire? Is such a course in violation of Christ's injunction to "Take therefore no thought for [illegible]
7. Is there any well-authenticated instance of dreams coming true, or directing the mind and waking energies to any practical results?
8. Ought a man to contribute to the Lord's work when he is in debt, or should he first pay his creditors?
9. Is a Christian woman justified in wearing jewelry, other than her watch and wedding ring?
10. Is there any real reason, physiological or religious, why cousins should not marry?

Questions of the Week

1. What is the Higher Criticism of the Bible, and why is it called Higher?

The ordinary criticism concerns itself with the meaning and significance of Bible texts. The higher criticism goes back of all that and analyzes the books themselves. It is higher in the sense of being more radical. It tries to find out the date of authorship from a comparative study of literary style and the character of the words employed. It also tries to discover by analysis whether the books have been worked over by later editors and how far they are based on earlier records. It is obvious, for instance, that such a passage as Gen. 36: 31, "Before there reigned any king over the children of Israel," was not written by Moses, [illegible] time when some king had reigned over Israel.

2. Was Christ ever mentioned in the ancient editions of the Talmud?

Yes; in the copies of the Hebrew Talmud, written or printed prior to 1631 A. D., the arrest, trial, conviction and crucifixion of Jesus were referred to in that portion known as the Gemara (or Commentary). After 1555 A. D. all Hebrew books, and especially the Talmud, were subjected to rigid censorship, and in 1631 a Hebrew Synod in Poland adopted a resolution to expurgate from the Talmud in future "any passage in which any of the deeds of Jesus of Nazareth are described," and to insert instead, "a circle like this: O."

3. What disaster during the present century has resulted in the greatest loss of life?

The greatest loss of life occasioned by any single disaster was probably that caused by the memorable disaster at the Sunda Islands, in the East Indian archipelago, in 1883, when a frightful eruption of the volcano of Krakatoa occurred, destroying an island of that name and two others, and throwing up several new islands. It is estimated that between 40,000 [illegible]

4. What is the depth of the Atlantic Ocean?

The greatest depth on record is that determined by the steamship Challenger in its deep sea soundings 100 miles north of St. Thomas, where 3,875 fathoms were found, or about 4.4 miles.

5. What are the principal points of difference between the Presbyterian, Baptist, Congregationalist, Methodist and Campbellite denominations?

The differences in doctrine are not so pronounced as they formerly were. The Presbyterians and the Methodists were once at the two extremes and, in theory, they are so still, the former holding the Calvinistic system of theology and the latter the Arminian. Calvin, as you may be aware, emphasized the doctrine of election, divine sovereignty and predestination, while Arminius emphasized the [illegible] government in the two denominations is much alike. In the Baptist, Congregational [illegible] body. Each individual church is a little republic, managing its own affairs. Some of the Congregationalists and Baptists are Calvinists, but they now generally lay less stress on those doctrines. The chief point of divergence in their case is on baptism. The Baptists and Campbellites administer the rite by immersion, and only on profession of faith. In the other denominations the rite is administered by sprinkling, or immersion, and at any period, but usually in infancy, as an act of dedication on the part of the parents.

6. What evidence have we that the soul is immortal?

Outside of the Bible, the evidence is meagre. It amounts only to a hope, an idea that it is a credible possibility. There is in every intelligent man a sense that he is something more than mere matter. He speaks of "my body," "my brain," as if he regarded those material parts, as not so much parts of himself, as machinery belonging to him, by which he made himself operative in the world. This universal conception is significant, and counts for something, if not as evidence, at least as presumptive cause, for suspecting an existence independent of the body. There is, besides, a conviction that if this life were the end of all, there would be in man a disappointing [illegible] when the course of [illegible] the father of John t[illegible] course, it is pos[illegible] favor of the end of December in the year B.C. [illegible]

8. Are the verses John 3: 16-21 comments of John or were they spoken by our Lord?

It would need some very cogent reasons to convince us that Christ ended his talk with Nicodemus with the fifteenth verse. The next six verses form so natural a sequence to the earlier verses, and contain truth which Christ would be likely to impart to an inquirer of the type of Nicodemus, that the probabilities are in favor of their being Christ's words. The reasons which Tholuck and others urge for their being the words of John, are not convincing. It is true that such phrases as "the [illegible] are peculiar to John, but he may, and probably did, derive them from Christ. If they had been John's comments, he would surely have [illegible] in the speaker.

9. What was the age of the oldest MS. at the disposal of the Committee on Revision of the Bible?

The most ancient was the Sinaitic manuscript, which is in the Imperial Library at St. Petersburg. It was found in the Convent of Mount Sinai in 1859. It contains the New Testament and part of the Old. It is in Greek and is believed to have been written 331 A. D. The next in age is the Vatican Manuscript which contains most of the Old Testament in Greek and the New as far as Heb. 19-14 in Hebrew. The third is the Alexandrian Manuscript in the British Museum which is believed to have been written in the fifth century, A. D.

10. What invention, in your opinion, has proved of the greatest advantage to mankind?

[illegible] who could not have been reached otherwise, and has outrun all the missionary agencies. 3. It has done much to raise man from the lowest level, socially and intellectually, and has inspired him with a love and admiration of the beautiful, the heroic and the useful. 4. It is the greatest agency in the world to-day for the advancement of God's kingdom.

MRS. T. DE WITT TALMAGE
From her latest photograph, published by request of many readers of this journal

Miscellaneous Questions

[illegible] all blessings flow?"

They form the concluding verse of a "morning hymn," written nearly 200 years ago by [illegible] is considered a masterpiece of clear and graphic expression, and is doubtless sung more widely by Christian people than any other verse in any language.

W. B. R., Bolivar, Mo. What kind of people are the Boers? Are they Europeans in Africa? Do they use the Bible as we do?

They are Dutch farmers settled in Africa. Many of them were born there, descendants of emigrants from Holland. They are a Bible-reading people. Indeed, one reproach frequently heard against them is that they read no other book, and consequently do not know anything of modern civilization. Mr. Kruger, the President of the Transvaal, has a wonderful knowledge of the Bible and frequently preaches in the Dutch church of Pretoria, the capital of the republic.

[illegible] I am [illegible] tious of rising in the world, but have few opportunities. I do not wish to make sacrifice of home associations, though at times I have been strongly tempted to do so, for the sake of advancement. Can you advise me?

There are thousands of youth of both sexes in your predicament. The question of leaving home and making a start is one which each must decide for himself or herself; and if the home has been a Christian one, the principles there inculcated will go with you and govern your life wherever you go. You might be materially helped, also, by reading [illegible] assist young people in achieving their aim in life. It is the most helpful and inspiring periodical published for American youth. Any of our readers can get a specimen copy of Success free by sending address on a postal to the publishers, Cooper Union, New York City.

Reuben, Dayton, O. "Alma mater" means "fostering mother."

Owing to our Premium Announcement in this week's issue, we are compelled to postpone till next week the publication of our Sunday School Lesson page, taking up the International lesson for Dec. 17. This is the first omission of the kind for twenty years. The current instalment of the serial story is omitted for the same reason.

Two hundred copies Columbia's War for Cuba, formerly sold at $2.00, are now offered at 60 cents, all charges prepaid, by P. B. Bromfield & Co., 4th Ave. and 9th St., New York.

THE LITTLE LAMBS OF PORTO RICO

BY MAJOR-GENERAL GUY V. HENRY, U. S. V.

This Eloquent Plea in Behalf of the Little Children of Porto Rico Was the Last Article Ever Penned by the Distinguished Christian Soldier, Who Was the Warmest Friend of the Island People, and Who Governed Them with a Gentleness and Humane Consideration That Won Their Undying Love. Gen. Henry Sent it to "The Christian Herald" Only a Few Days Before His Death.

PORTO RICO is something over 150 miles long and about 50 miles wide as the crow flies. It is a beautiful landscape with not an ugly spot. The low flatlands run from the sea-coast of the Atlantic Ocean, or the Caribbean Sea, and gradually rise toward the mountain range which extends along the centre of the island. This flat or gradually rising ground extends back about six miles on the south, or Caribbean side, and about ten on the north or Atlantic coast side; and on this land are cultivated tropical plants, bananas, oranges, sugar-cane, pineapples, and fine grasses for feeding the numerous cattle. The mountains are covered with beautiful trees and verdure, and through the many canons flow fine streams of water which in the rainy season become torrents, and carry death and disaster in their progress to the sea.

The emblem of the island is the lamb, and, like the lamb, the people are gentle and easily led. They are anxious to work and not to beg. They came to us loyally, and have given us no trouble, and we should do our best for them. The better class live and dress like ourselves. They have homes well furnished, but lacking those sanitary arrangements and comforts essential to a properly built home, all of which the Latin race do not appreciate as fully as we do. The food of this class is, for the early meal, coffee and bread; for breakfast at noon, coffee, vegetables, eggs, meats, fruits and dulces, or sweets. The night meal is about the same. They are great meat-eaters, it being cooked in various ways. The objection to the meat, for an American, is that, having no place to keep beef after being killed, it has to be put in the pot in a hot, quivering condition: and I believe this made many an American soldier ill.

The poorer classes, who are in the immense majority in cities, are packed in the lower parts of buildings like sardines in a box, the conditions most unsanitary, and worse than any of our poorest neighborhoods. The men of this class wear a shirt and trousers, the women a sack and petticoat, the younger children, nature's garb. Their food is the banana, bread, and cod fish, and of the latter large quantities are shipped to the island. The places of living of the poorest in the country are miserable huts or "shacks," made of the bark of trees and matted grasses. Beds are made of poles raised from the ground, and in rainy weather the water inundates the occupants. The Spanish had imposed taxes on everything, so that food was very high, and almost out of the reach of the poor. The absence of meat is shown by the anæmic or bloodless condition and appearance of the poor. Upon rum, which was cheap (only about half a cent a glass), no tax was imposed, and this cheapness was a curse to the island.

THE LATE GEN. GUY V. HENRY

If cleanliness is next to godliness, the Porto Ricans ought to be godly, so far as washing clothes go, for the streams are lined daily by women washing garments. In the use of water they are economical; a glassful suffices for all purposes.

Only about fourteen per cent. can read and write, and while schools existed on paper, practical results, similar to our own, were not found. The children had no amusements; their life was a serious one. A boy worked as soon as he could toddle, and the girls became women or mothers at or near twelve years of age. The natives do not appreciate a joke; they smile, but lack a hearty American laugh. They gamble, and cock-fight. The boys I saw flying kites, with knives at the tail so as to cut the kite-string of others.

The children are bright, and upon their proper education our success will depend. They are the Latin seeds, to be nurtured into American fruit. At Ponce, an assembly of seven hundred children when asked what they wanted for Christmas, staggered us by their quick reply, "Send us teachers!" We opened our eyes to what would be expected from the American. It was to be "the white man's burden," to lift these children to a higher plane and teach them the best ways of the white man, and thus to be better men and women for God's work.

The climate is enervating. One loses flesh and cannot work. The siesta, or mid-day rest, is essential, and but for the cool breezes which prevail in summer, the heat would be intolerable. In winter, the thermometer does not go below 70°, and in the months of December, January, February and perhaps March, the climate is superb. With proper facilities, the island will be some day the winter resort for the United States.

As to morals, they are not so bad as might be expected from the tutelage they have been under for hundreds of years; and, as a Porto Rican aptly remarked to me, "There are just as bad people in the United States as we, and they have been taught better ways."

The faith of the gentle people of Porto Rico certainly has been shaken in the Americans by the condition of the island, with a heavy custom tariff, no markets for their crops, and no investment of capital. This faith in improved and better conditions under the American government—as compared with their former one—would have been entirely destroyed but for our generous response in giving prompt aid, by food and money, to the sufferers from the recent tornado; and but for this thousands would have died.

I want to say right here that the work done by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD was grand, and every cent given by its readers was in a noble cause. When I read in its columns, from time to time, the small amounts given by the poor—"the widow's mite, in Christ's name"—it greatly touched me, and this went further to teach me the real nobility of the gift and its Christian donor than any words of mine can express. As the late Governor-General of Porto Rico, and attached to the people as I am, I gratefully thank THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and those who contributed in the Christian cause.

One condition which caused trouble was the impossibility, in translating an order, of conveying the idea from English into Spanish. In closing one of my orders enforcing morality of action, I wrote "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people." When this came to the translation there was no such word in the Spanish vocabulary as "righteousness" and it was translated "homade" (honesty) or "justicia" (justice). While righteousness includes honesty and justice—the greater the lesser—they do not convey to the American mind "righteousness," or freedom from sin. It is not to be wondered that a nation whose vocabulary does not contain the word "righteousness" should be so remiss in its teachings of others. This is one of our burdens: to teach them righteousness, and that honesty and not dishonesty is the best policy. This is what expansion means to the white man; non-expansion means a failure to carry out God's kingdom on this earth. The customs of four hundred years cannot be changed in as many days, but with a careful official supervision, and the example of the best Americans on the island, the people of Porto Rico will soon be fitted for a proper form of self-government. The better element of the population is as reformed and educated as its corresponding class in the United States, and will be of great assistance in the political and commerical redemption of the island. Governing Porto Rico on these lines, and those of honesty, justice and morality, it is certain that in a few years a successful colonial possession will be ours, and with it, a prosperous, loyal and contented people.

GUY V. HENRY,
Brigadier Gen. U. S. Army; late Maj. Gen. U. S. Vols. and Governor of Porto Rico.

LITTLE SCHOOL CHILDREN OF SAN JUAN, PORTO RICO, PHOTOGRAPHED SPECIALLY BY THE U. S. GOVERNMENT PHOTOGRAPHER, FOR "THE CHRISTIAN HERALD"

The New Earth

—OR—

THE WORLD AS IT WILL BE

A New Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text II. Peter 3: 13, ... | A new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness

DOWN in the struggle to make the world better and happier we sometimes get depressed with the obstacles to be overcome and the work to be accomplished. Will it not be a tonic and an inspiration to look at the world as it will be when it has been brought back to paradisaical condition? So let us for a few moments transport ourselves into the future and put ourselves forward in the centuries, and see the world in its rescued and perfected state, as we will see it if in those times we are permitted to revisit this planet, as I am sure we will. We all want to see the world after it has been thoroughly gospelized and all wrongs have been righted. We will want to come back, and we will come back, to look upon the refulgent consummation toward which we have been on larger or smaller scale toiling. Having heard the opening of the orchestra, on whose strings some discords traveled, we will want to hear the last triumphant bar of the perfected oratorio. Having seen the picture as the painter drew its first outlines upon canvas, we will want to see it when it is as complete as Reuben's "Descent from the Cross," or Michael Angelo's "Last Judgment." Having seen the world under the gleam of the star of Bethlehem, we will want to see it when, under the full shining of the Sun of Righteousness, the towers shall strike twelve at noon.

There will be nothing in that coming century of the world's perfection to hinder our terrestrial visit. Our power and velocity of locomotion will have been improved infinitely. It will not take us long to come here, however far off in God's universe heaven may be. The Bible declares that such visitation is going on now. "Are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation?" Surely, the gates of heaven will not be bolted, after the world is Edenized, so as to hinder the redeemed from descending for a tour of inspection and congratulation and triumph.

The exact date of the world's moral restoration I cannot foretell. It may be that through mighty awakenings it will take place in the middle of the nearby twentieth century. It may be at the opening of the twenty-first century, but it would not be surprising if it took more than one hundred years to correct the ravages of sin which have raged for six thousand years. The chief missionary and evangelistic enterprises were started in this century, and be not dismayed if it takes a couple of centuries to overcome evils that have had full swing for sixty centuries. I take no responsibility in saying on what page of the earthly calendar it will roll in, but God's eternal veracity is sworn to it that it will roll in: and as the redeemed in heaven do as they please, and have all the facilities of transit from world to world, you and I, my hearer or reader, will come and look at what my text calls "A new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

I imagine that we are descending at that period of the world's complete gospelization. There will be no peril in such a descent. Great heights and depths have no alarm for glorified spirits. We can come down through chasms between worlds without growing dizzy, and across the spaces of half a universe without losing our way. Down and farther down we come. As we approach this world we breathe the perfume of illimitable gardens. Floralization that in centuries past was here and there walled in, lest reckless and dishonest hands pluck or despoil it, surges its billows of color across the fields and up the hillsides, and that which was desert blossoms as the rose. All the foreheads of crag crowned with flowers; the feet of the mountains slippered with flowers. Oh! this perfume of the continents, this aroma of hemispheres. As we approach nearer and nearer we hear songs and laughter and hosannas, but not one groan of distress, not one sob of bereavement, not one clank of chain.

Alighted on the redeemed earth, we are first accosted by the spirit of the twenty-first century, who proposes to guide and show us all that we desire to see. Without his guidance we would lose our way, for the world is so much changed from the time when we lived in it. First of all, he points out to us a group of abandoned buildings. We ask this spirit of the twenty-first century, "What are those structures whose walls are falling down and whose gates are rusted on the hinges?" Our escort tells us: "Those were once penitentiaries filled with offenders, but the crime of the world has died out. Theft and arson and fraud and violence have quitted the earth. People have all they want, and why should they appropriate the property of others, even if they had the desire? The marauders, the assassins, the buccaneers, the Herods, the Nana Sahibs, the ruffians, the bandits are dead, or, transformed by the power of the Christian religion, are now upright and beneficent and useful."

After passing on amid columns and statues erected in memory of those who have been mighty for goodness in the world's history, the highest and the most exquisitely sculptured those in honor of such as have been most effectual in saving life or improving life, rather than of those renowned for destroying life, we come upon another group of buildings that must have been transformed from their original shape and adapted to other uses. "What is all this?" we ask our escort. He answers: "Those were almshouses and hospitals, but accuracy in making, and prudence in running, machinery of all sorts have almost abolished the list of casualties, and sobriety and industry have nearly abolished pauperism, so that those buildings, which once were hospitals and almshouses, have been turned into beautiful homes for the less prospered; and if you will look in you will see the poorest table has abundance, and the smallest wardrobe luxury, and the harp, waiting to have its strings thrummed, leaning against the piano, waiting for its keys to be fingered.

"Hospitals and almshouses must have been a necessity once, but they would be useless now. And you see all the swamps have been drained. The sewerage of the great towns has been perfected. And the world's climate is so improved that there are no pneumonias to come out of the cold, or rheumatisms out of the dampness, or fevers out of the heat. Consumptions banished. Pneumonias banished. Diphtheria banished. Ophthalmia banished. Neuralgias banished. As near as I can tell from what I have read, our atmosphere of this century is a mingling of the two months of May and October of the nineteenth century."

But I say to our escort: "Did all this merely happen so? Are all the good here spontaneously good? How did you get the old shipwrecked world afloat again, out of the breakers into the smooth seas?" "No, no," responds our twenty-first century escort. "Do you see those towers? Those are the towers of churches, towers of reformatory institutions, towers of Christian schools. Walk with me, and let us enter some of these temples." We enter, and I find that the music is in the major key, and none of it in the minor. Gloria in Excelsis rising above Gloria in Excelsis. Tremolo stop in the organ not so much used as the trumpet stop. More of Ariel than of Naomi. More chants than dirges. Not a thin song, the words of which no one understands on the lip of a soloist, but mighty harmonies that roll from outside door to chancel and from floor to groined rafter, as though Handel had come out of the eighteenth century into the twenty-first, and had his foot on the organ pedal, and Thomas Hastings had come out of the early part of the nineteenth century into the twenty-first, and were leading the voices. Music that moves the earth and makes heaven listen.

I ask again of the interpreter: "Has death been banished from the world?" The answer is, "No, but people die now only when the physical machinery is worn out, and they realize it is time to go, and that they are certainly and without doubt going into a world where they will be infinitely better off and are to live in a mansion that awaits their immediate occupancy." "But how was all this effected?" I ask our escort. Answer: "By floods of Gospel power. You who lived in the nineteenth century never saw a revival of religion to be compared with what occurred in the latter part of the twentieth and the early part of the twenty-first century. The prophecy has been fulfilled that 'a nation shall be born in a day'; that is, ten or twenty or forty million people converted in twenty-four hours. In our church history we read of the great awakening of 1857, when five hundred thousand souls were saved; but that was only a drop of the coming showers that since then took into the kingdom of God everything between the Atlantic and the Pacific, between the Pyrenees and the Himalayas."

As you and I see in this terrestrial visitation of the coming centuries that the church has, under God, accomplished so much, we ask our escort, the spirit of the twenty-first century, to show us the different kinds of churches. So we are taken in and out of the churches of different denominations, and we find that they are just as different in the twenty-first century as they were different in the nineteenth, when we worshiped in them. There is unity in them as to the great essentials of salvation. But we enter the Baptist church, and it is baptismal day, and we see the candidates for membership immersed. And we go into a Presbyterian church, and see a group of parents around the baptismal font holding up their children for the christening. And we enter the Episcopal church, and hear the solemn roll of her liturgies, and her ministers are gowned and surpliced. And we enter the Lutheran church, and we hear in the sermon preached the doctrines of the greatest of German reformers. And we go into the Methodist church just in time to sit down at a love feast, and give audible "Amen" when the service stirs us. At least fifty kinds of churches in the twenty-first century, as there were one hundred and fifty different kinds of churches in the nineteenth century.

As in company with our escort we pass down from the heights on which these buildings stand, I see a dismounted cannon planted on the side of the hill, and I go to examine it, and I read the inscription, cut in letters of bronze: "This is the last gun that was fired in the last battle of the last war that will ever be fought. Presented by the last regiment of war just before disbanding. Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will to men." Then I look up, and our escort says: "Do you see that large structure on our right? That was a fortress, but now it is a college, and instead of guns aiming out of the port-holes are looking the students of a higher literature and a wiser science and a grander civilization than the world ever before imagined. And those students are taught by a professorate of men as renowned for piety as for science. Archæologist's hammer, and geologist's crowbar, and chemist's laboratory, and explorer's journey, have joined in a confirmation of the truth of the Holy Scriptures until there is not an unbeliever in all the earth. The astronomer through his telescope has seen the Morning Star of the Redeemer, and the geologist has found the Rock of Ages, and the geometrician has demonstrated that heaven is the city which "lieth four square, and the length and the breadth and the height of it are equal."

"What!" I say to our escort, "no sceptics? No infidels? No agnostics?" His reply is: "Absolutely none. The last fool who 'said in his heart there is no God' was buried a half century ago, without any liturgical service, although perhaps a quartet of unbelievers may have stood around the casket and sung a verse or two out of the closing of Poe's 'Raven':

"'Prophet still, if bird or devil!
Only this, and nothing more.'"

In response to my question as to what had wrought all this change—obliterated all the evil and fully inaugurated all the good—our escort, the spirit of the twenty-first century, tells me that gospelization had directly or indirectly done it. It was a practical Gospel that not only changed the heart, but made the man honest. A practical religion, which did not expend all its energy in singing "Fly abroad, thou mighty Gospel," but gave something to make it fly.

The good work was helped on by the fact that it became a general habit among millionaires and multi-millionaires to provide churches and schools and institutions of mercy, not to be built after the testators were dead, but built so that they might be present at the laying of the corner-stone and at the dedication, and leave less inducement for the heirs at law to prove in orphans' court that when the testators made their last will and testament they were crazy. The telegraphic wires in the air, and the cables under the sea, thrill with Christian invitation. Phonographs charged with Gospel sermons stand in every neighborhood. The five thousand million of the world's inhabitants in that century are five thousand million disciples.

"But," I say to our escort, the spirit of the twenty-first century, "you have shown us much of the world emparadised, but what about international conditions? When we lived on earth it was a century that bled with Marengo, and Chalons, and Lodi-Bridge, and Lucknow, and Solferino, and Leipsic, and Waterloo, and San Juan." Our escort replies: "Come with me to this building of white marble and glittering dome." As we pass up and on we are taken into a room where the mightiest and best representatives of all nations are assembled to settle international controversies. As we enter I hear the presiding officer opening the Council of Arbitration, reading the second chapter of Isaiah: "They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Questions which in our long-past nineteenth century caused quarrel and bloodshed, as when Germany and France were deciding about Alsace and Lorraine, as when the United States and Spain were deciding about Cuba—such questions in this twenty-first century settled in five minutes, one drop of ink doing more than once could have been accomplished by a river of blood.

"But," I say to our escort, the spirit of the twenty-first century, and you and I say to each other, "we must go home now, back again to heaven. We have stayed long enough on this terrestrial visitation to see that all the best things foretold in the Scriptures, and which we read during our earthly residence, have come to pass, and all the Davidic, Solomonic and Paulinian and Johannean prophesies have been fulfilled, and that the earth, instead of being a ghastly failure, is the mightiest success in the universe. A star redeemed! A planet rescued! A world saved! It started with a garden, and it is going to close with a garden. What a happiness that we could have seen this old world after it was righted and before it burned, for its internal fires have nearly burned out to the crust, according to the geologist, making it easy for the theologian to believe in the conflagration that the Bible predicts. One element taken from the water and that will burn, and another element taken from the air and that will burn, and surrounding planets will watch this old ship of a world on fire and wonder if all its passengers got safely off. Before that planetary catastrophe, hie us back to heaven. Farewell, spirit of the twenty-first century. Thanks for your guidance! We can stay no longer away from doxologies that never end, in temples never closed, in a day that has no sundown. We must report to the immortals around the throne the transformations we have seen, the victories of truth on land and sea, the hemispheres irradiated, and Christ on the throne of earth, as he is on the throne of heaven."

And now you and I have left our escort as we ascend, for the law of gravitation has no power to detain ascending spirits. Up through immensities, and by stellar and lunar and solar splendors, which cannot be described by mortal tongue, we rise higher and higher, till we reach the shining gate as it opens for our return, and the questions greet us from all sides: "What is the news? What did you find in that earthly tower? What have you to report in this city of the sun?" Prophetic, apostolic, saintly inquiry. And standing on the steps of the House of Many Mansions, we cry aloud the news: "Hear it, all ye glorified Christian workers of all the past centuries! We found your work was successful, whether on earth you toiled with knitting needle, or rung a trowel on a rising wall, or smote a shoe last, or endowed a university, or swayed a sceptre; whether on earth you gave a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple, or at some Pentecost preached three thousand souls into the Kingdom. In that world we have just visited the deserts are all abloom, and the wildernesses are bright with fountains. Sin is extirpated. Crime is reformed. Disease is cured. The race is emancipated. 'The earth is full of the knowledge of God, as the waters cover the sea.' 'The redeemed of the Lord have come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads.' 'The Lord God Omnipotent reigneth, and the kingdoms of the world have become the kingdoms of our Lord Jesus Christ.' Let the harpers of heaven strike the glad tidings from the strings of their harps, and the trumpeters put them in the mouth of their trumpets, and the orchestras roll them into the Grand March of the Eternities, and all the cathedral towers of the great capital of the universe chime them all over heaven."

And now I look up and see the casting down of the bejeweled and radiant crowns at the sacred feet of the enthroned Jesus. Missionary Carey is casting down before those feet the crown of India saved. Missionary Judson is casting down the crown of Burmah saved. Missionary Abeel casting down the crown of China saved. David Livingstone casting down at those feet the crown of Africa saved. Missionary Brainerd casting down the crown of this country's aborigines saved. Souls that went up from all the denominations in America in holy rivalry, seeking which could soonest cast down the crown of this continent at the Saviour's feet, and America saved.

But often you and I who were companions in that expedition from heaven to earth, seated on the green bank of the river that rolls through the paradise of God, will talk over the scenes we witnessed in that parenthesis of heavenly bliss, in that vacation from the skies, in our terrestrial visitation—we who were early residents in the nineteenth century, escorted by the spirit of the twenty-first century, when we saw what my text describes as "a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." "Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost, as it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen."

* * * * *

Mrs. Crossley's Pious Vow

"The Poor Shall Have Their Share"

By AMELIA E. BARR

Which Blessed Four Generations

AMELIA E. BARR

CHARITY gives itself rich, and I am going to relate the true history of a famous living family to prove this axiom. My story begins nearly one hundred years ago, when a young girl, the daughter of a small farmer in the West Riding of Yorkshire, left her home to make her own living. She obtained a situation with a family in the town of Halifax, where she was cook, kitchen-maid and house-maid, besides milking six cows morning and evening, and spinning in spare minutes great quantities of wool, thirty-six hanks to the pound, an achievement in which few could rival her.

No wonder that John Crossley, an industrious and pious carpet-weaver, coveted her for a wife. The girl's father threatened never to speak to her again if she married him, but she took the matter to the Lord in prayer, and the father relented and the marriage took place. In their humble cottage God reigned, and the man gradually raised himself from one position of trust to another, until finally he thought it safe to rent a small wool mill, with a dwelling house attached, and begin business for himself.

. . .

NOT without great fears and misgivings did the prudent wife and mother take possession of her new home. But she was a woman who fed her soul daily on the Bread of Life, and who was so blessed as to believe, without one doubt, every word in the Holy Bible. So, rising while it was yet night, she entered the yard of her new home before four o'clock in the morning, and kneeling down there, with the steadfast stars and the glorious night angels as her witnesses, she vowed this vow unto the Lord her God:

"If thou, O Lord, do bless us at this place, the poor shall have a share of it."

It was no secret vow; her husband and sons were told of it, and one and all they accepted it with her, and the youngest of them, when a Baronet and a Member of Parliament, said publicly on one interesting occasion:

"It is to this vow, made with so much earnestness and kept with so much fidelity, that I attribute my father's great success in business. My mother was always looking how best she could keep her vow."

John Crossley died wealthy and greatly respected, but still occupying the same humble home, and his wife lived on to a green old age in the yard where she had made her vow; nor could her sons induce her to remove to a grander mansion. She had been blessed of her God in that place, and she would not leave it. When she died she gave to her sons the obligation of redeeming her vow, and they solemnly and cheerfully accepted it.

. . .

THEY had begun before their mother's death to build gigantic mills, and to greatly extend their business; and the mother's heart feared, until the eldest, speaking for the rest, said: "Never fear, mother. We are well insured."

"But how, my lads?" she asked.

"I'll show thee," was the reply; and he opened the big family Bible and read aloud: "'Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first-fruits of all thine increase: so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst with new wine.' Isn't that 'security' good enough, mother?"

"It is that," she answered confidently, "and I warrant that the Lord will do His part if thou doest thine," she added.

"KNEELING DOWN, WITH THE STARS AND NIGHT ANGELS AS WITNESSES"

And every one of her sons have done their part cheerfully. The town is literally full of the monuments of their generosity and their prosperity. Two handsome, spacious almshouses, built and endowed by two of the brothers, provide, in separate apartments, homes and a comfortable living for the sick and helpless poor. Nearby is a beautiful orphanage, and many streets of workmen's dwelling-houses on the very noblest models, the building of which is due to the brother who raised the orphanage. Their benefactions to their "hands" are beyond recalling in this short paper, for they are continuous and always in the last upward movement of the times. Their gifts to chapels, schools, infirmaries, missions, and religious societies of all kinds can not be counted: but of one of their noblest charities which had an American inception, I must speak.

. . .

SOMETIME in the year 1855 one of Mrs. Crossley's sons, with his family, visited America, and one evening at the close of a day's journey he found himself in a neighborhood of great natural beauty. He went out alone to take a walk, just as the sun was setting, and he saw the whole land flooded with an inconceivable glory. He felt the presence and the goodness of God as he had never before done, and his heart was lifted heavenward on a tide of glad and grateful emotion. "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits to me?" he cried, and this question was quickly followed by another, "Lord what wilt Thou have me to do?" The answer immediately came into his heart, and in the following sentence I copy his own words:

"Thou canst not bring the many thousands in thy native country to see this beautiful place, but thou canst take it to them. It is possible for thee to so arrange art and nature that they shall be within the walk of every working-man and woman in Halifax; that they may go and take their stroll there after their hard day's work, and be able to get home again without being tired."

This seemed to him a glorious thought, and when he went back to the hotel he asked his wife where, in the Bible, these words were to be found: "The rich and the poor meet together and the Lord is the Maker of them all." He prayed that if this scheme was only an idle thought it might be gone from his mind in the morning; but that if it was wise and practicable, he might have no doubt about it. The morning found him without a doubt; and then without hesitation and in the face of many difficulties he went straight forward to accomplish his design. The result is the magnificent People's Park of Halifax, which at a first cost of $150,000 he gave to the town. Since his death there has been erected, by the people of Halifax, a statue of the donor in the park he gave, and above it are these three noble texts:—

"Let no man seek his own but every man another's wealth."

"Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits."

"The rich and the poor meet together."

For nearly a century, unto the third and fourth generations, the vow made by Mrs. Crossley has been faithfully kept, and the blessing of it has been sure. As she warranted, they have done their part, and God has done His. The little mill has grown to mills covering acres, rising story above story in solid grandeur, and giving employment to at least ten thousand workers. The humble home has become a palace; the simple weaving men legislators and nobles, companions and entertainers of princes; and above all, the very name of Crossley has been made so illustrious by its wise and benevolent owners that it is at this day the synonym for all that is judiciously and magnificently beneficent.

How then has this tremendous work of benevolence been regulated and accomplished for generations without a lapse or or a difficulty? It never could have been done with the prudence and regularity which have marked it but for one grand power: systematic giving; the regular setting apart of a definite portion of their income as the share of the poor. Continually and conscientiously, as their wealth increased, they have decided what portion of it was the share of the poor, and have paid it as faithfully as if it had been a bill for machinery or yarns. And this "storing for God," is the very course enjoined in I. Corinthians 16: 2.

. . .

I WISH to notice particularly one fact with regard to the charities of the Crossley family. They have not been done merely as a duty. They have given themselves, their time and their sympathy as well as their money; for doing our duty to the poor is not charity. Let us remember that the word "duty" is only used in the New Testament twice, but that the words "love" or "charity" may be found on nearly every page. Neither is compassion to be called charity. Charity is an attribute of a good and gracious soul; compassion is an animal instinct, one which, in fact, we share with the animal.

They who give unto the poor, lend unto the Lord, and he has promised to pay them again. If the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD like this divine security; if they believe God will keep his part of the engagement, let them begin at once to "give the poor their share." Often we wonder to see the rapid melting away of great fortunes—the fathers die rich and their sons die poor—but the reason may be found in this fact, the salt of charity was wanting in the money and it did not keep. Old Andrew Fuller has the same thought in another form: "Riches make to themselves wings and fly away. To be sure," he adds, "the men who had charge of the riches did not clip the wings of riches with charity."

The Gift of the Roses.

By Mary C. Francis.

AMID the prevailing joyousness, Paul Harrington walked as miserable as the proverbial skeleton at the feast.

The acrid kernel of his secret inner life seemed to expand until it swelled to his own proportions and absorbed within its substance all softer elements. At last it had come to this. For a year he had vibrated between two forces, and though he knew it not, heaven and hell had contended for him. What he did know was that he loved a woman with a soul as white as new-fallen snow, a woman pure and delicate, yet strong of soul. She loved him also—she had told him so—yet, with that unearthly look of renunciation in her eyes, she had said that unless he could give up the wine cup they must go their separate ways.

"We shall be severed wider than the poles," she had said, "unless we can meet on this common ground. Yes, for your sake, for the sake of what you may be to the world, I would have you conquer this habit and give you up, rather than keep you and know you forever enslaved."

He knew she was a saint, an angel on earth, and knowing this, he went straight-way to that fashionable home where ever another woman, beautiful, daintily sarcastic, airily brilliant, awaited him.

"Ah, you are chilled!" she cried. "Here, take this," and so saying, she would hold out to him that destroyer of men's souls and bodies.

He was only a man, and he drank it. Then, having drank it, he repented and began the struggle all over again. He loved the saint, yet the fair temptress had a certain ascendancy over him, and between the two he wavered until his manhood trembled in the balance.

Evening closed in, and a scented cloud of air poured out of a florist's shop; he paused and looked in.

There they were, side by side in the window, great American beauty roses and chaste, spotless lilies, symbolical of the two women whose influences battled for his life. The roses seemed to beckon, but from the pure hearts of the lilies there seemed to emanate a tender, wistful reproach.

"I will end it all," he said to himself. This cannot go on any longer. The lily-woman is cold, spiritual, and I must have the world and the things of the world. Who knows whether it will make any difference in the end, after all!"

He stepped inside and bought two dozen of the roses, superb, long-stemmed blooms, and as their rich fragrance drifted through his senses, his spirits rose. Yes, he had chosen aright. He drew a card from his pocket and hastily scribbled: "With love. Will see you this evening. Yours forever." He thrust the card deep among the roses. "The address, sir?" queried the attendant.

"Ah, Paul! Lucky that I should find you buying just what I want," said a voice at his elbow. He turned. It was his cousin, a woman who went about bringing into darkened lives gleams of sunshine. "Don't deny it," she continued, laughing. "I am a little short of flowers for my hospital, and to see a man who has nothing to do but spend his money getting just what I should choose is quite too good an opportunity to be missed."

"Right, as usual, cousin," he responded gallantly. Then the old mood of bitterness suddenly possessed him again, and he added gloomily: "I can only hope that the recipient will get more pleasure out of them than I have in buying them."

"Fie, fie, Paul!" cried the woman. "Why will you miss the secret of happiness when you might have it for nothing? Come to the hospital to-morrow and go with me to whoever may be the fortunate one to receive these exquisite roses, and I will show you such joy on a narrow pallet that you will be initiated into the great secret of life—always to find something to be thankful for."

"Thank you; hospitals are not in my line. Not that I do not believe you in a way. But until I have to go there myself and be so fortunate as to have you for my nurse I think I shall choose my club. Are you going up the avenue? I will carry your parcels for you."

"The address, sir?" again asked the waiting attendant.

"St. Mary's Hospital, care of Sister Mercedes," said the woman, in reply to his look. You will send them to-night?"

"Yes, madam," replied the obsequious servitor.

They walked up the avenue together. He had forgotten the card.

"HAD FELL ON HIS KNEES BY THE SIDE OF THE [illegible]"

* * *

It was midnight in St. Mary's Hospital. In one of the cots lay a woman who was a mystery to the officials. She had been brought in late in the afternoon, the victim of a street accident. The hospital [illegible] her over to the tender mercies of the nurse. The beauty and evident refinement of the woman had attracted the attention of Sister Mercedes, and when a quantity of exquisite flowers had come earlier in the evening, she had taken a magnificent [illegible] her senses," she had said.

[illegible] seemed to deepen. About midnight the eyes of the silent occupant of the cot opened and she looked up vaguely. Only a wax taper burned, dimly revealing the watchful figure of Sister Mercedes. The eyes that rested on her were vacant; they held no knowledge in their depths.

The nurse approached her and spoke softly, bearing in her arms the roses. "You are better now. See these flowers. They have been sent you by a friend."

The eyes of the half-awakened patient turned inquiringly upon the roses, and a faint gleam came into them.

"How beautiful," she said slowly. "But I do not understand. Why am I here? Who sent them?"

"Never mind," replied the nurse, gently. "You will soon be well. All you have to do is to look at the flowers and rest."

As she spoke she lifted the fragrant burden closer to her, and out of their glowing, sumptuous hearts there fell a card. The weak fingers of the sick woman felt for it. "Hold the candle for me, please," she said. When she did so the woman gave one look at the name, and cried out faintly, "Ah!" in a voice that thrilled. Then, recovering herself quickly, she grasped the nurse by the sleeve and said: "Oh, send for him—will you not?"

And the nurse, knowing that her patient would recover now, gladly assented, and with tears of joy streaming down her cheeks the unknown pressed the roses tightly to her heart and fell into a light slumber as easily as a child.

The messenger found him in the gray hours of the early morning, as he was returning from his club.

When they permitted him to go to her, after cautioning him not to excite her, he was trembling, for he knew now that she had barely escaped death. He fell on his knees by the side of the cot, not daring to speak; but she smiled and laid her hand on his head.

"I could not keep the engagement with you last evening," she said, with a faint effort to smile; "but will this do as well? I know now that you have made your final resolve."

He lifted a pale face whereon shone the light of a new manhood, and replied: "I thank God that the engagement is kept here. I am not only yours forever," he added, earnestly, "but we will be one, in the purpose of our lives."

* * *

Pretty Feminine Customs

Social Life in the Land of the Chrysanthemum

Quaintest of Costumes

THE Japanese woman has been called "the crown of the charm of the Mikado's empire"—quiet, gentle, undemonstrative, with a pretty propriety of demeanor, a pleasing, smiling face and the heart of a child. Usually she can read and write a little, play the samisen, preside at tea-parties, and train flowers. She usually marries quite early. The wife lives in seclusion and is addressed as O-Ku-Sama ("the honorable lady of the house"). At the present time the question whether the beautiful native costume—the kimono and hoso-obi (dress and sash)—shall be superseded by that of the foreigner, is uppermost in the feminine mind. Christianity in recent years has found many adherents among Japanese women.

[illegible] A MORNING GREETING PLAYING AT KOKKWEIKI RESTING BY THE WAYSIDE BRINGING BREAKFAST

Beautiful QUEEN WILHELMINA of Holland, and Her Efforts in Behalf of the World's Peace . .

MRS. BIRD, Mother of the Bowery Boys, and Her Rescue Work Among New York Tenement Children

A ROYAL PEACE ANGEL

A LIFE OF LOYAL SERVICE

IF THERE is one woman in all the world who has come prominently before the eyes of the nations during the year, it has been Queen Wilhelmina of Holland. This young ruler filled the important role of hostess to a gathering without a parallel in modern times and probably the most august assemblage in Europe during the present century. By all accounts, she discharged this function to perfection, her charming manner and fresh, youthful loveliness winning every heart. Possibly there was never a more picturesque function than that in which she welcomed her guests to her capital at The Hague, or that in which she bade them godspeed when the Chinamen, Persian, Japanese, Siamese and Turk vied with American, Briton, Frenchman, Spaniard, Russian and German in honoring a Christian queen. Possibly, too, on these occasions Wilhelmina performed, if unconsciously, a double office; her character and position, her power, intellect and culture, combined with her freedom and gracious hospitality must have been a forceful object lesson to representatives of countries where woman has been virtually a slave.

Queen Wilhelmina has lately supplemented her role of royal entertainer of the Peace Congress in a way that has won universal admiration. Whatever may be said of the sincerity of other monarchs in their protestations, it is at least true of the Queen of Holland that she has proven her belief that "the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance." When it became apparent that war in the Transvaal was imminent, she pleaded eloquently and with a royal dignity for the intervention of the great powers who, cold and unheeding, seemed to have forgotten the declarations and resolutions which were passed with such unanimity in the quaint old "House in the Wood." When war was seen to be unavoidable, no one was so energetic as she in making arrangements to help the wounded among her compatriots in the African struggle, her heart naturally going out sympathetically to them. Queen Dowager Emma does not deserve the charge which has been brought against the feminine heads of reigning houses, of being a royal match-maker. There has certainly been no haste in choosing a husband for Wilhelmina, a matter which she has assured her counselors would be within her own discretion.

Holland, however, has too much at stake in the marriage of Queen Wilhelmina not to entertain a lively interest and an influential voice in her selection of a life partner. It has been frequently said that Hollanders think no man, however great a prince, quite good enough for the beloved Queen. Prince William of Wied, her cousin, has been spoken of with most authority as the suitor who, for reasons of state as well as because of his personal worth, would be most acceptable to her subjects as the Queen's Consort, and it has been said that the Queen would be following the dictates of her own heart, as she has said she would, in conferring her hand upon Prince William. Whoever her choice may be, the world hopes that the Prince Consort of Holland will be as helpful to his wife in the furtherance of good works as was the Prince Consort of England to another queen whom all the world reveres.

QUEEN WILHELMINA

Our photograph on this page was procured specially for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD from the royal photographer at Amsterdam, and is, therefore the very latest portrait of Queen Wilhelmina, the "Royal Peace Angel," whose noble efforts in behalf of the abandonment of war have won her the love of God's people everywhere.

MANY of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, by their generous gifts, have allied themselves very closely to the work of the East Side Gospel Settlement in Clinton Street, New York. The heart of the Settlement is in its social influence, and the one desire of its founder has been to gain the confidence of the parents of the children, who swarm about the Settlement door day and night. The Home is the one spot where they always find an atmosphere of peace and love. For years our country has permitted an excessive immigration, which has brought to New York the worst element from all the nations of the earth. It is the strong and thrifty who pass on to Western homes; it is generally the sickly, the indolent, the criminal who hide away in the alley ways and courts of our East Side. Here, in dark, smoky rooms, sunless and airless, crowded in with dirt and disease, they rear their large families. Out of these dens come all kinds of vice and misery, which if the same existed in heathen lands would soon be met by a band of missionaries. Our Gospel Settlement is situated in the midst of the most congested district, a never-ceasing throng passing its door day and night; thousands of little waifs continually chasing the patrol wagon or ambulance, and wherever and whenever a crowd gathers, their little tired feet must go.

Unless they are now led by some loving handin to paths of purity these children will soon be on the swift road to destruction. I must tell you where the Gospel Settlement first came into existence. My experience in rescue work had shown me the great need of preventive work, and nearly four years ago I thought perhaps if I were to live in the midst of this East Side world I might sow some seed that would save poor homeless children. I rented two rooms in a crowded tenement in Eldridge street. A young friend who taught the kindergarten in the Bowery Mission made her home with me. Our thought was to investigate the upper stories of our house. Without any delay, we invited everybody from "all sorts and conditions" into our little rooms. The mother, with a big family of little ones, would run up from her dark basement to ask our advice on all occasions of household struggles. One night a tap came on our door, and her face appeared, saying: "Would youse come down and show my boys how to make a prayer before they go to bed, for I'se forgotten my prayers long ago."

Next morning a young woman was taken suddenly ill in a little furnished hall room. I had now seen enough to show me where my life should be spent and, putting my Bible and Gospel songs on my little pine table, I said, "This shall be the beginning of a Gospel Settlement." It was indeed but a grain of mustard seed, but it has become a "tree," in the form of an old-fashioned house, so that the street children come and "lodge in the branches thereof." Our photographer gives you a glimpse of our little back yard, which the children call "Our King's Garden." We have an order of "King's Children" to whom the spot seems the dearest on earth. The young girls in our kindergarten represent a large class in training for domestic work: bed-making, washing, sweeping, setting the family table, etc.

Could our kind friends spend a night in our Settlement they would see how impossible it is to adequately describe it. We need better equipment for our work, and if every reader would send a mite to us through THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, our needs would be abundantly supplied.

SARAH J. BIRD.

MRS. BIRD'S TRAINING CLASS FOR DOMESTIC WORKERS

"THE KING'S CHILDREN" IN THE CLINTON ST. SETTLEMENT, NEW YORK

AROUND THE WORLD WITH AUNT SAMANTHA

COPYRIGHT 1904, BY MARIETTA HOLLEY

I HAD felt, since I first hearn on't, that I ort to go to Paris to the Exposition. I knowed I ort not to hurt the feelin's of France by slightin' 'em. Of course France knew that I had been in the habit of 'tendin' such things, and it wuz no more than nateral for 'em to feel hurt if I didn't pay no attention to their doin's, and I knew that there wuz always enough that stood ready to make trouble, and if I didn't go, to twit 'em on't, and mebby tell 'em I felt above 'em.

"DOROTHY WAS A SWEET YOUNG GIRL."

Of course I had been out of patience with 'em when France wuz up on trial before Dreyfus and the world, and it beats all how much that jury of thiern made me think of how we used to play funeral at the old Risley schoolhouse. One of the children stretched out on a board as a body, covered with a shawl, and the others mournin' under their ma's long aprons put on for veils.

Good land! France knew Dreyfus wuzn't guilty just as well as we knew the corpse wuzn't dead. And it madded me to hear it go on. I have been dretful provoked at America time and agin, but that never hendered me tendin' her big fairs, etc. But I hated to set off agin on a tower; I hated to like a dog; and I don't spoze that I should have got started at all if it hadn't been for what took place in our family. Our son, Thomas Jefferson, and his wife, Maggie, have been wadin through a sea of trouble. He down with inflamatory rumatiz so a move or jar of any kind, a fly walkin' over the bed-clothes, would most drive him crazy; and she with nervious prostration, brought on I spoze by nussin' her pardner and her youngest boy, Thomas Josiah (called Tommy), through the measles, that had left him that spindlin' and weak-lunged that the doctor said that the only thing that could tone up his system and heal his lungs and save his life would be a long sea voyage. And there could be no waitin' for the Exposition, for he had got to be got away from the cold fall blasts of Jonesville to once. Oh! how I felt when I heard that ultimatum and realized his danger, for Tommy wuz one of my favorites. Grandparents ort not to have favorites, but I spoze they will as long as the world turns on its old axletrys.

He looks as Thomas J. did when he wuz his age and I married his pa and took the child to my heart, and got his image printed there so it won't never rub off through time or eternity. Tommy is like his pa and he hain't like him: he has his pa's old ways of truthfulness and honesty, and deep—why good land! there hain't no tellin' how deep that child is. He has got big gray-blue eyes, with long dark lashes that kinder veil his eyes when he's thinkin': his hair is kinder dark too, about the color his pa's wuz, and waves and crinkles some, and in the crinkles it seems as if there wuz some gold wove into the brown. He has got a sweet mouth, and one that knows how to stay shet too: he hain't much of a talker, only to himself: he'll set and play and talk to himself for hours and hours, and though he's affectionate, he's a independent child: if he wants to know anything the the worst kind he will set and wonder about it the calls it wonner). He will say to himself, "I wonner what that means." And sometimes he will talk to Carabi about it—that is a child of his imagination, a invisible playmate he has always had playin' with him, talkin' to him, and I spoze imaginin' that Carabi replies. I have asked him sometimes, "Who is Carabi. I hearn you talkin' to out in the yard? Where duz he come from! How duz he look?"

He always acts shy about tellin', but if pressed hard he will say, "He looks like Carabi, and he comes from right here," kinder [illegible]

"NEVER WOULD HE STIR ONE STEP"

arms round. But he talks with him by the hour, and I declare it has made me feel fairly pokerish to hear him. But knowin' what strange avenoos open on every side into the mysterious atmosphere about us, the strange ether world that bounds us on every pint of the compass, and not knowin' exactly what natives walk them avenoos, I hain't dasted to poke too much fun at him, and 'tennyrate I spozed if Tommy went a long sea-voyage Carabi would have to go too. But who wuz goin' with Tommy? Thomas J. had got independent rich, and Maggie has come into a large property: they had means enough, but who wuz to go with him? I felt the mantilly of responsibility fallin' on me before it fell, and I groaned in sperit—could I, could I agin tempt the weariness and danger of a long trip abroad, and alone at that? For I tackled Josiah on the subject before Thomas J. importuned me, only with his eyes, sad and beseechin' and eloquent. And Josiah planted himself firm as a rock on his refusal.

Never, never would he stir one step on a long sea-voyage, no indeed! he had had enough of water to last him through his life, he never should set foot on any water deeper than the creek, and that wuzn't over his pumps.

"But I cannot see the child die before my eyes, Josiah, and feel that I might have saved him, and yet am I to part with the pardner of my youth and middle age? Am I to leave you, Josiah?"

"I know not!" sez he wildly, "only I know that I don't set my foot on any ship, or any furren shore agin. When I sung 'hum agin from a furren shore' I meant hum agin for good and all, and here I stay."

"Oh dear me!" I sithed "why is it that the apron strings of Duty are so often made of black crape, but yet I must cling to 'em."

"Well," sez Josiah, "what clingin' I do will be to hum: I don't go dressed up agin for months, and hang round tarvens and deepos, and I couldn't leave the farm anyway."

But his mean wuz wild and haggard: that man worships me. But dear little Tommy wuz pinin away: he must go, and

DOROTHY, MISS MEL[illegible]M AND THE MAID ARRIVE

[illegible] nobody but [illegible] grandma would they trust him, and I knew that Philury and Ury could move right in and take care of everything, and at [illegible] I will try to go. Thomas J., I will try to go way off alone with Tommy and leave your [illegible] here my voice choked up and I hurried out to [illegible] some tears and groans that I wouldn't harrow Thomas J. [illegible]th. But strange, strange are the workin's of Providence! wonderful are the ways them apron strings of Duty will be padded and embroidered, strange to the world's people, but not to them that consider the wonderful material they are made of, and how they float out from that vast atmosphere jest spoke on, that lays all round us full of riches [illegible] glory and [illegible] and [illegible] surprises for them that cling to 'em whether or no. Right at this time, as if our sharp distress had tapped the universe and it run comfort, two relations of Maggie's, on their way home from Paris to San Francisco, stopped to see their relations in Jonesville on their own sides.

Dorothy Snow, Maggie's cousin, wuz a sweet young girl, the only child of Adonirum Snow, who left Jonesville poor as a rat, went to Californy and died independent rich. She wuz jest out of school, had been to Paris for a few months to take special studies in music and languages; a relation on her ma's side, a kind of gardeen, travelin' with her. Albina Meechim wuz a maiden lady from choice, so she said and Id'no as I doubted it when I got acquainted with her, for she did seem to have a chronic dislike to man, and havin' passed danger herself her whole mind wuz sot on preventin' Dorothy from marryin'.

"HE WAS FILING A SAW TO HIDE HIS GROANS"

They come to Maggie's with a pretty, good natured French maid, not knowin' of the sickness there, and Maggie wouldn't let 'em 'go, as they wuz only goin' to stay a few days. They wuz hurryin' home to San Francisco on account of some bizness that demanded Dorothy's presence there. But they wuz only goin' to stop there a few days, and then goin' to start off on another long sea-voyage clear to China, stoppin' at Hawaii on the way. Warm climate! good for measles! My heart sunk as I hearn 'em tell on't. Here wuz my opportunity to have company for the long sea-voyage. But could I — could I take it? Thomas Jefferson gently approached the subject ag'in. Sez he, "Mother, mebby Tommy's life depends on it, and here is good company from your door." I murmured sunthin' about the expenses of such a trip.

Sez he, "That last case I had will more than pay all expenses for you and Tommy, and father if he will go, and," sez he, "if I can save my boy—" and his voice trembled and he stopped.

"But," I sez, "your father is able to pay for any trip we want to take." And he says, "He won't pay a cent for this." And there it wuz, the way made clear, good company provided from the doorstep. Dorothy slipped her soft little white hand in mine and sez, "Do go, Aunt Samantha. May I call you Auntie?" sez she, as she lifted her sweet voylet eyes to mine. She's as pretty as a pink—white complected, with wavy, golden hair and sweet, rosy lips and cheeks.

And I sez, "Yes, you dear little creater, you may call me aunt in welcome, and we be related in a way," sez I.

Sez Miss Meechim, "We shall consider it a great boon if you go with us. And dear little Tommy, it will add greatly to the pleasure of our trip. We only expected to have three in our company."

"Who is the third?" sez I.

"My nephew, Robert Strong. He has been abroad with us, but had to go directly home to San Francisco to attend to his business before he could go on this long trip; he will join us there. We expect to go to Hawaii and the Philippines, and Japan and China, and perhaps Egypt, and on to the Paris Exposition."

"And that will be just what you will enjoy, mother," sez Thomas J.

Sez I, in a strange axent, "I never laid plans for going to China, but," sez I, "I do feel that I would love to see the Empress, Si Ann. There is sunthin' that the widder Heintong ort to know."

Thomas J. asked me what it wuz, but I gently declined to answer, merely sayin' that it was a matter of duty, and so I told Miss Meechim when she asked about it. She is so big feelin' that it raised me up considerable to think that I had business with a Empress. But I answered her evasive, and agin I giv vent to a low groan, and sez to myself, "Can I let the Pacific Ocean roll between me and Josiah? Will Duty's apron string hold up under the strain, or will it break with me? Will it stretch out clear to China? And oh! will my heart strings that are wrapped completely round that man, will they stretch out the enormous length they will have to and still keep hull?" I knew not. I wuz a prey to overwhelmin' emotions, even as I did up my best nightgowns and sheepshead night-caps and sewed clean lace in the neck and sleeves of my parmetty and gray alpaca and got down my hair trunk, for I knew that I must hang onto that apron string no matter where it carried me to. Waitstill Webb come and made up some things I must have, and as preparations went on my pardner's face grew haggard and wan from day to day, and he acted as if he knew not what he wuz doin'. Why, the day I got down my trunk I see him start for the barn with the accordeon in a pan. He sot out to get milk for the calf. He was nearly wild.

He hadn't been so good to me in over four years. Truly, a threatened absence of female pardners is some like a big mustard poultice applied to the manly breast drawin' out the concealed stores of tenderness and devotion that we know are there all the time, but sometimes kep' hid for years and years.

He urged me to eat more than wuz good for me—rich stuff that I never did eat—and bought me candy, which I sarahuptishly fed to the pup. And he follered me round with footstools, and het the soap stun hotter than wuz good for my feet, and urged me to keep out of drafts.

And one day he sez to me with a anxious face:

"If you do go Samanthy, I wouldn't write about your trip—I am afraid it will be too much for you—I am afraid it will tire your head too much. I know it would mine."

And then I say to him in a tender axent, for his devotion truly touched me:

"There is a difference in heads, Josiah."

But he looked so worried that I most promised him I wouldn't try to write about the trip—oh! how that man loves me, and I him visey versey. And so the days passed, little Tommy peleted pimpin', Thomas J. lookin' more cheerful as he thought his ma wuzn't goin' to fail him, Maggie tryin' to keep up and tend to havin' Tommy's clothes fixed; she hated to have him go, and wanted him to go. She and Thomas J. wuz clingin' to that string, black as a coal, and hash feelin' to our fingers. Miss Meechim and Dorothy wuz as happy as could be. Miss Meechim wuz tall and slim and very genteel, and sandy complected, and she confided her rulin' passion to me the first time I see her for any length of time.

"I want Dorothy to be a bachelor maid," sez she. "I am determined that she shall not marry anyone. And you don't know," sez she fervently, "what a help my nephew, Robert Strong, has been to me in protectin' Dorothy from lovers. I am so thankful that he is going with us on this long trip. He is as good as gold and very rich; but he has wrong ideas about his wealth. He says that he only holds it in trust, and he has built round his big manufactory, just outside of San Francisco, what he calls a City of Justice, where his workmen are as well cared for and happy as he is. That is very wrong, I have told him repeatedly. It is breaking down the Scriptures, which teaches the poor their duty to the rich, and gently admonishes the rich to look down upon and guide the poor. How can the Scriptures be fulfilled if the rich lift up the poor and make them wealthy? I trust that Robert will see his mistake in time, before he makes all his workmen wealthy. But, oh, he is such a help to me in protecting Dorothy from lovers." "How duz he protect her?" sez I.

"Oh, he has such tact. He knows just how opposed I am to matrimony in the abstract and concrete, and he has managed gently but firmly to lead Dorothy away from the dangers about her. Now, he don't care for dancing at all; but there was a young man at home who wuz just winning her heart completely with his dexterity with his heels, as you may say. He was the most graceful dancer and Dorothy dotes on dancing. I told my trouble to Robert, and what should that boy do but make a perfect martyr of himself, and after a few lessons danced so much better that Dorothy wuz turned from her fancy. And

(Continued on page 956)

THE PARTING—"AT THE LAST MINUTE I LEANED OUT OF THE CAR WINDER"

"THE HARD-HEARTED ENGINE SNORTED AND PUFFED, AND WE WUZ OFF"

The . . . Bedtime Hour. . .

AROUND THE EVENING LAMP

CONDUCTED BY MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER

The Man of the House . .

MARGARET E. SANGSTER

THE sweetest and dearest time in the whole day comes for mother and child when evening shadows gather, and the little one sits on the mother's lap and with tiny hands folded lisps its "Now I lay me down to sleep." It was with the deepest insight and truest wisdom that our dear Lord said to his disciples, "Except ye turn and become as little children, ye shall in nowise enter into the kingdom of heaven." What are the characteristics of childhood? One is absolute faith in the parents who care for the family. There may be no money in the pocketbook, no food in the pantry, and the father and mother are worried. Not so the child. Food and clothing have always been forthcoming when wanted, and the child plays as usual. The child lives in the present moment, and has no anxiety about the future. Our blessed Lord bids us emulate the child in this, for he tells us that our Heavenly Father knoweth what things we have need of before we ask him. He who cares for the great worlds swinging in their orbits through the vast spaces can and will care for us, however great our need. Let us behave toward our Father as our little ones do to us.

A CHILD'S love is spontaneous. The little one on the mother's lap has no room in her heart for anything but love. Malice, hate, lack of charity, these are not in the sweet nature of a child. Children are very forgiving. We are impatient with them; we are often unfair; we say "no," when we could say "yes;" we nag them and find fault, and "don't" springs to our lips a hundred times a day. "I have counted," said one lady to another, "the number of times you have said 'don't' this morning, and you may be surprised to know that you have said it eighty times." Think of that! Eighty don't's in one nursery, in one morning, to a group of little children!

As a rule, we resent having "don't" said to us, we grown-up people; but not so must our darling little lads and lasses who are under seven, and whose happiness or misery is entirely in our care. They pardon us, come with their kisses and small arms twined around our necks, no matter how cross and unreasonable we are in our dealings with them.

A little child has no doubt that God is able to take care of it all day long. Then too, a little child remembers prayers and hymns and texts, and they sink into its mind and stay there. The bedtime hour should always belong to the mother. She ought not to forego the pleasure of putting her baby into the crib herself. Her face should brood over the little one before sleep sifts down upon the drowsy eyes. Never one angry word at bedtime! Never a punishment then! It is a blunder; it is almost a crime to weave sorrow into a child's bedtime hour. This is the mother's best opportunity for confidences. She may then listen to her child's story of the day; her boys and girls should tell her everything freely and fearlessly, and she may give them advice and counsel and comfort them, but never punishment. If she will begin to pray with her darlings while they are in the nursery, she will not feel timid about doing this when they are older, and life with its trials and temptations is upon them.

THE old familiar "Now I lay me" should be on every child's lips at bedtime. Then, a child may also say

> Gentle Jesus, meek and mild,
> Look upon a little child;
> [illegible]
> [illegible]

or

> Jesus loves me, this I know,
> For the Bible tells me so.
> Little ones to him belong;
> They are weak, but he is strong.

In all the wonderful development of children there is nothing more extraordinary than the mental growth which takes place in the first years. Then, indeed, the mind is wax to receive and marble to retain. It is well that this period should be taken by mothers to impress divine truth on the little hearts, and to store the memory with hymns and words of Scripture, that will be treasured in after years, when those who taught them have long passed from earth.

♦

Courtesy in Home Life

People otherwise well-bred permit themselves an uncommon and unjustifiable degree of license in the intercourse of the home. An observer seated in a little park in a Western city for two afternoon hours said: "I saw husbands join their wives with words of tenderness and deeds of grace that made knightly their farmers' garb. Others came with words so rude and tones so brutal that the park seemed to fade into a forest primeval, where primitive man was sheltered in his savagery."

Politeness or the reverse is largely dependent upon habit. When in the household group we suffer ourselves to speak brusquely, to interrupt each other, to indulge in fits of sulky temper, to scold or to vituperate, we are inflicting a wound on the well-being of the home. A good plan for the easily irritated is to speak as politely to home folks as to strangers.

THE family circle is older than the nation; the home is as old as Eden. A real home, where all dwell together in love and confidence, is a type of heaven. About the style of the home it matters little. Home, sweet home, may be in a palace or in a hut. To be perfect in either there are needed people who love one another, and people who are faithful, true and self-denying. Love makes the home. The happy home is filled with contentment. Children are in it, in training for useful maturity. Middle age is there, bearing brave burdens. Dear aged ones, grandfathers, grandmothers, aunts, cousins, friends are there, and all together, full chorded, they strike the anthem of Home!

♦

Prudence Payson's Catch-All

[illegible]

THE BABY'S EVENING PRAYER

[illegible] would probably arrange to sell your embroidery on favorable terms. Nearly all the large cities now carry on a Woman's Exchange. A small percentage is charged on consignments.

—ELEANOR BROWN B. Your Aunt Prudence Payson would not lose her temper with a child or a servant. She has found out that you gain nothing by a loss of self-control. Never speak when you are angry. Try the effect on yourself of entire silence when you are disturbed. It is very tranquilizing.

—W. T. I quite agree with you that it is very absurd for people to hesitate about marrying simply because the husband is two or three years younger than the wife. A trifling difference of that kind does not constitute disparity. Happiness in the married state depends upon congenial qualities and high principle.

ONE day, not long ago, when the early winter darkness had fallen and there was the hint of a cold storm in the air, I [illegible] just in time to be caught in the great rush of people who crowd our New York trains on the elevated and surface lines, and who cross Brooklyn Bridge in the twilight. We speak of the rush hours with reason. You who dwell in quiet, country homes [illegible] nothing of this tremendous and terrible crowd which packs every city conveyance twice a day; once in the morning, when men and women go to their work, and again in the evening when they are returning to their homes.

The crowd bears all before it. Men push and fight as if they were on a battlefield. As I was borne along, as helpless as a chip in a torrent, this thought came to me about the crowd: that it was made up of individuals, each one of whom had his separate loves and hopes and fears, each one of whom was toiling for dear ones and doing his best to keep up a household fire. Working that the pot may boil, working that the chicks may be fed, working that the wife may have a new bonnet and a new gown, that the boys may go to school, that the mortgage may be lifted, that the family may be respectable and respected, too.

Now, the man of the house has his part, and, to give him credit, he does it very well. How hard men work, how few holidays they have, how unselfish they are. What should women do?

For one thing, they should see that the man of the house is well fed. When he comes home, family worries should not be poured into his ear. Don't tell him how naughty Willie has been nor how fretful Louis is.

A very successful lawyer, who has accumulated a fortune, lately told me that he owed his rise in life to the fact that his wife had kept his household moving so smoothly that his meals had always been on time, and he had never had the least anxiety about her share in the home firm.

SPEAKING of the habit which some wives have of greeting the man of the house with complaints of the children's misdoings, I heard a funny little story the other day. Johnnie had been very disobedient, and finally mamma decided to whip him. She turned to get the switch, but Johnnie not only refused to come for her, but ran away, hiding himself under the great mahogany four poster in the spare bedroom. Mamma could not move the bed, and the little culprit refused to come from under its cover. When papa came home, a little later, his wife said, "Dear, I want you to whip Johnnie. He ran from me, and is in the spare room under the bed. He has been a very naughty little boy, and must be well chastised." "All right, my love," said papa, "I'll settle the young man," and so without further dinner he rushed upstairs and threw open the locked door.

A little voice piped up from the darkness under the bed. "Oh, papa, is she after you, too? Come right in here by me."

Johnnie was not whipped that night.

♦

If You Knew

IF you knew that to-morrow
[illegible]
The loss of the mother, the child or the wife,
You would make to-day sweet
With the fullness complete
Of the love which is best in this troublesome life.

No word of swift anger,
No fau't finding clangor
Would break on the peace of your happy estate.
Each heart you would bless
With a tender caress:
Oh, friend, take the warning, ere yet 'tis too late.

To-day with its dower
Of moment and hour,
Is here in your hands, but a last day must dawn:
Make every day glad,
For you'll wish that you had
When the tale is all told and the last day is gone.

The Christian Herald for 1900!

T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for 1900, the closing year of the 19th Century, will, in every sense of the word, surpass its very best efforts in the past.

Dr. Talmage will devote much more time than was heretofore possible to the Editorial Management, and in addition to his usual weekly sermon, he will vigorously discuss Momentous Questions of the Day in his own vivid, terse and epigrammatic style.

Dwight L. Moody, the greatest living Evangelist, will take Bible Characters of old and show how they, if alive to-day, would live and act under 19th Century conditions.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER

Mrs. Amelia E. Barr, the Queen of American Authors, will consider numerous interesting Head and Heart problems for the exclusive benefit of "her dear CHRISTIAN HERALD readers" in the masterly style for which she is deserved famous.

Margaret E. Sangster, ever popular and universally beloved, will continue her Talks to Mothers and Daughters, and the words of wisdom that flow from her pen will be as manna to their souls.

MARY LOWE DICKINSON

Hon. Selah Merrill, American Consul-General in Jerusalem, will throw new light on affairs in the City of Peace, and report the progress of the Zionist Movement, its relation to the Holy Land, and the bearing on Prophecy of the Return to Palestine of its Ancient People, the Jews.

Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts and his talented wife will handle the Sunday School Lesson in an original, helpful, and peculiarly attractive manner, that cannot fail to invest the subject with new life and increased interest, and to aid every Sunday School worker in its more acceptable presentation.

HON. SELAH MERRILL

Rev. Thomas Spurgeon, the worthy son of a noble father, will take for his subjects various phases of Christian Life and Inspire the Believer to the Higher Attainments, and Stimulate Him to Greater Achievements on Spiritual Lines.

John Willis Baer, the General Secretary of the Society of Christian Endeavor, is preparing for our readers a series of notable articles in connection with the Daily Life and Work of Men and Women who Sway Multitudes and Wield World-wide Influence.

JOHN WILLIS BAER

Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson, of the King's Daughters and Sons, known the world over as a leader of the highest order, will contribute a series of articles that will charm the reader and Awaken Aspirations Toward Nobler and Better Things.

Her Grace, the Countess Schimmelmann, Marion Harland, Harriet Prescott Spofford and others, will discuss "Young Men Who Make the Best Husbands"; while Bishop Vincent, Dr. Joseph Parker and Rev. Thomas Spurgeon will consider "Young Women Who Make the Best Wives."

"Josiah Allen's Wife" will take all THE CHRISTIAN HERALD readers and their families on a Tour Around the World, stopping for a whole month at the Paris Exposition, and will show them the wonders of the world as only Aunt Samantha can do it, and she has planned to have us spend a whole year abroad. We leave by way of San Francisco, spend our Christmas in Honolulu, take in the Philippines, Japan, China, India, Ceylon, Africa, etc., returning November 29th, 1900, Thanksgiving Day, to the best land under the sun, just in time for our Thanksgiving Dinner. The delights of the trip will be greatly enhanced by the presence of a young couple who, before the trip is ended, will enter the state of matrimonial bliss, not forgetting, however, to extend to all readers a cordial invitation to attend the wedding.

Gospel Work, the world over, especially new methods of reaching the masses, will be interestingly and accurately described by Missionaries and Correspondents.

Photographers and Artists in every section of the globe will contribute literally thousands of bright and beautiful pictures with which to illustrate these and numerous other features, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to maintain the high reputation of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD as the breeziest, most attractive, most entertaining and most elevating family journal of modern times. There is no paper in all the world just like it, and you will find it pre-eminently the one paper above all others which will please, interest and benefit every member of your household.

T. L. NICOLS

HARRIET P. SPOFFORD

MARIETTA HOLLEY
(Josiah Allen's Wife)

DR. WILBUR F. CRAFTS

COUNTESS SCHIMMELMANN

Yearly Subscription $1.50. Every Issue Worth More

IRA D. SANKEY

AMELIA E. BARR

HANNAH G. JOSEPH

REV. THOMAS SPURGEON

MARION HARLAND

GEN. JOHN EATON

A Gift That Lasts All the Year!

A YEARLY Subscription to The Christian Herald—with or without one of our Matchless Premium Books—Constitutes a Charming Holiday or Birthday Gift, and one that will surely cause the Generous Giver to be Gratefully Remembered the Whole Year round.

* * * * * * * *

Parents, Friends, Uncles and Aunts often have the Happy Faculty of bringing, by means of an Acceptable Gift, Sunshine into other Lives; and what can be Better Adapted to carry out this Laudable Intention than a Subscription that will ensure the delivery of 52 Bright and Beautiful Issues of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD?

* * * * * * * *

Then there are the Old Folks at Home. Nothing could please them more than a little Tender Thoughtfulness on your part that would result in the Regular Weekly Visits of The Christian Herald, and, week after week, as they open its Attractive Pages so full of beauty and interest they will pray for Heaven's Choicest Blessing to rest on those who are thus Contributing to Cheer and Brighten their declining years.

* * * * * * * *

And, finally, let us remember the Pastors, Sunday School Superintendents, Teachers and others who spend their days in faithful, loyal labor of love, interested perhaps in your own or your children's spiritual welfare. Now, a yearly subscription to The Christian Herald, with a Red Letter New Testament or one of our Superb Bibles, would demonstrate to them in a practical manner that you are not unmindful of them and their good work, and that you appreciate what they are doing to make the world brighter, better and happier.

* * * * * * * *

Thus at a little expense—less than Three Cents a week—you can gladden the heart, for a whole year, of some one in whom you may be interested and make an investment on which you will receive the Interest on Earth and the Principal in Heaven.

Our Presentation Certificate

The Illustration below Represents the Certificate, which, Printed on Heavy Plate Paper, in Beautiful Colors and Gold, we send, Suitably Filled out, FREE, direct to the Person who is to Receive the Paper; or, if Preferred, to the Person Sending in the Subscription.

* * * * * * * *

Be Sure to State the Date when the Certificate is to Reach, also be careful to give, 1st, name of person who is to receive THE CHRISTIAN HERALD; 2nd, date on which the subscription is to commence; 3d, name of person who donates the subscription.

* * * * * * * *

Remember, no extra charge is made for this Certificate where one person subscribes for another.

Edited by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.
CHRISTIAN HERALD
AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
Over 1,000 Large Pages
Full of Beautiful Pictures
Published Every Wednesday, 52 Times a Year, at the Bible House, New York. Louis Klopsch, Proprietor
This Certifies that Mrs. Lucy Roberts is entitled to A Yearly Subscription (52 Numbers) to The Christian Herald, Commencing with Thanksgiving Issue, 1899, the same being the Gift of Uncle Stephen
In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my Hand and Seal at the Office of "The Christian Herald," Bible House, New York City, this 10th day of November, A. D. 1899
Proprietor

Life Size of Our "Gift Presentation Certificate"

A Masterpiece of a Masterhand!

HERE is a volume born to succeed and bound to win. Wherever it may go, a hearty welcome surely awaits it. This Masterpiece of a Masterhand adds another Laurel to the Wreath of its Editor, Addison Irving Bacheller, the gifted Poet and Novelist, who, in "Best Things from American Literature," has Prepared for our Exclusive use a Work that will prove an Unfailing Source of Genuine Pleasure to the many whose Good Fortune it will be to Possess this Priceless Treasury of the Choicest gems of American Literary Genius. The reproductions of Authors' original Manuscripts, contained in this volume, are in full keeping with the high character of the work.

Treasury of Literary Masterpieces

Beautifully Illustrated with Numerous Rare, Artistic Pictures, including Several Accurate Reproductions of Authors' Manuscripts

WITH THE CHRISTIAN HERALD FOR ONE YEAR—52 TIMES—FOR ONLY TWO DOLLARS

We congratulate our readers that it was possible for us to arrange with Mr. Addison Irving Bacheller, the poet and novelist, for the volume which we offer under the title, "Best Things from American Literature." This beautiful book, embellished with Portraits, Autograph Reproductions, and numerous other choice artistic features, will, for many years to come, be regarded as a standard work of its class, and its every fortunate possessor will find it, from cover to cover, one Continuous yet ever varying Succession of Literary and Artistic Surprises.

Over Seventy Authors are represented in this Exquisite Literary Mosaic, and in each case the selection is the choicest that could be made. In this book of over 400 Large Pages, there are Upwards of Eighty Stories in prose and poetry, and in such instances where copyrighted material was required, permission was cheerfully accorded Mr. Bacheller to exercise the utmost freedom in making suitable selections.

Occasionally the author very kindly prepared his contribution in Autograph Manuscript, and in some instances this manuscript has been Reproduced, in whole or in part, by photo-engraving, that the reader might enjoy the privilege of practically reading it in the Authors' Own Handwriting. Accurate Portraits and other interesting pictures illustrate most of these stories, investing them with an additional charm to the appreciative reader.

ADDISON IRVING BACHELLER, POET AND NOVELIST

Not a single Contribution from any Foreign Author is contained in this volume, which, to that extent at least, is a book by Americans and for Americans, and the family that secures a copy will never regret having made the choice.

No book ever offered by us was sent out with a greater degree of satisfaction than "Best Things from American Literature," and we feel confident that our subscribers will share this feeling with us.

It contains over 400 Pages, embellished with Numerous Beautiful Pictures, Superbly Printed on extra fine paper, and artistically bound in Vellum de Luxe. Its weight is about three pounds. It is sent all charges prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the brightest and best family weekly in the world, for one year—52 times—on receipt of only $2

New Subscribers get THE CHRISTIAN HERALD FREE from date to the end of the year, including our Magnificent Christmas Issue; hence Every Day's Delay Means Loss to You. Therefore, subscribe to-day.

Address: The Christian Herald, 892 to 906 Bible House, New York

Our THUMB INDEXED LONG PRIMER, Red Under Gold, LEATHER-LI E

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the Brightest and Best Weekly Family P

This Beautiful Large Type Bible, Bound in Soft Flexible Leather, with Overlapping Edges, Divinity Circuit Binding, and LI T
Young People, Pastors, Evangelists, and Y. M. C. A. Members. IT OPENS FLAT WHEREVER YOU CHOOSE, a

Read This

You may take your choice between a Revised Bible or the Authorized (King James) Version. WE OFFER THE ONLY Revised Bible...

In Verse Form, with References, Helps and Maps

Published Anywhere in the World.

The Revised Version is rapidly coming into favor, and no lover of the Word of God can afford to be without it. It throws much additional light on hitherto obscure passages, and helps the student over many difficulties.

The page printed herewith is from the Revised Version. Understand, please, that we give you your choice. You may have the one or the other; but as thousands of people are longing for the Revised Version in verse form (never before published) with References and Helps, we are prepared to meet an extensive demand.

Remember also that our Bibles are

Self-Pronouncing

enabling a child to read difficult Scripture Names Correctly at Sight.

When you Order state whether you want the Revised Version, or the King James Version.

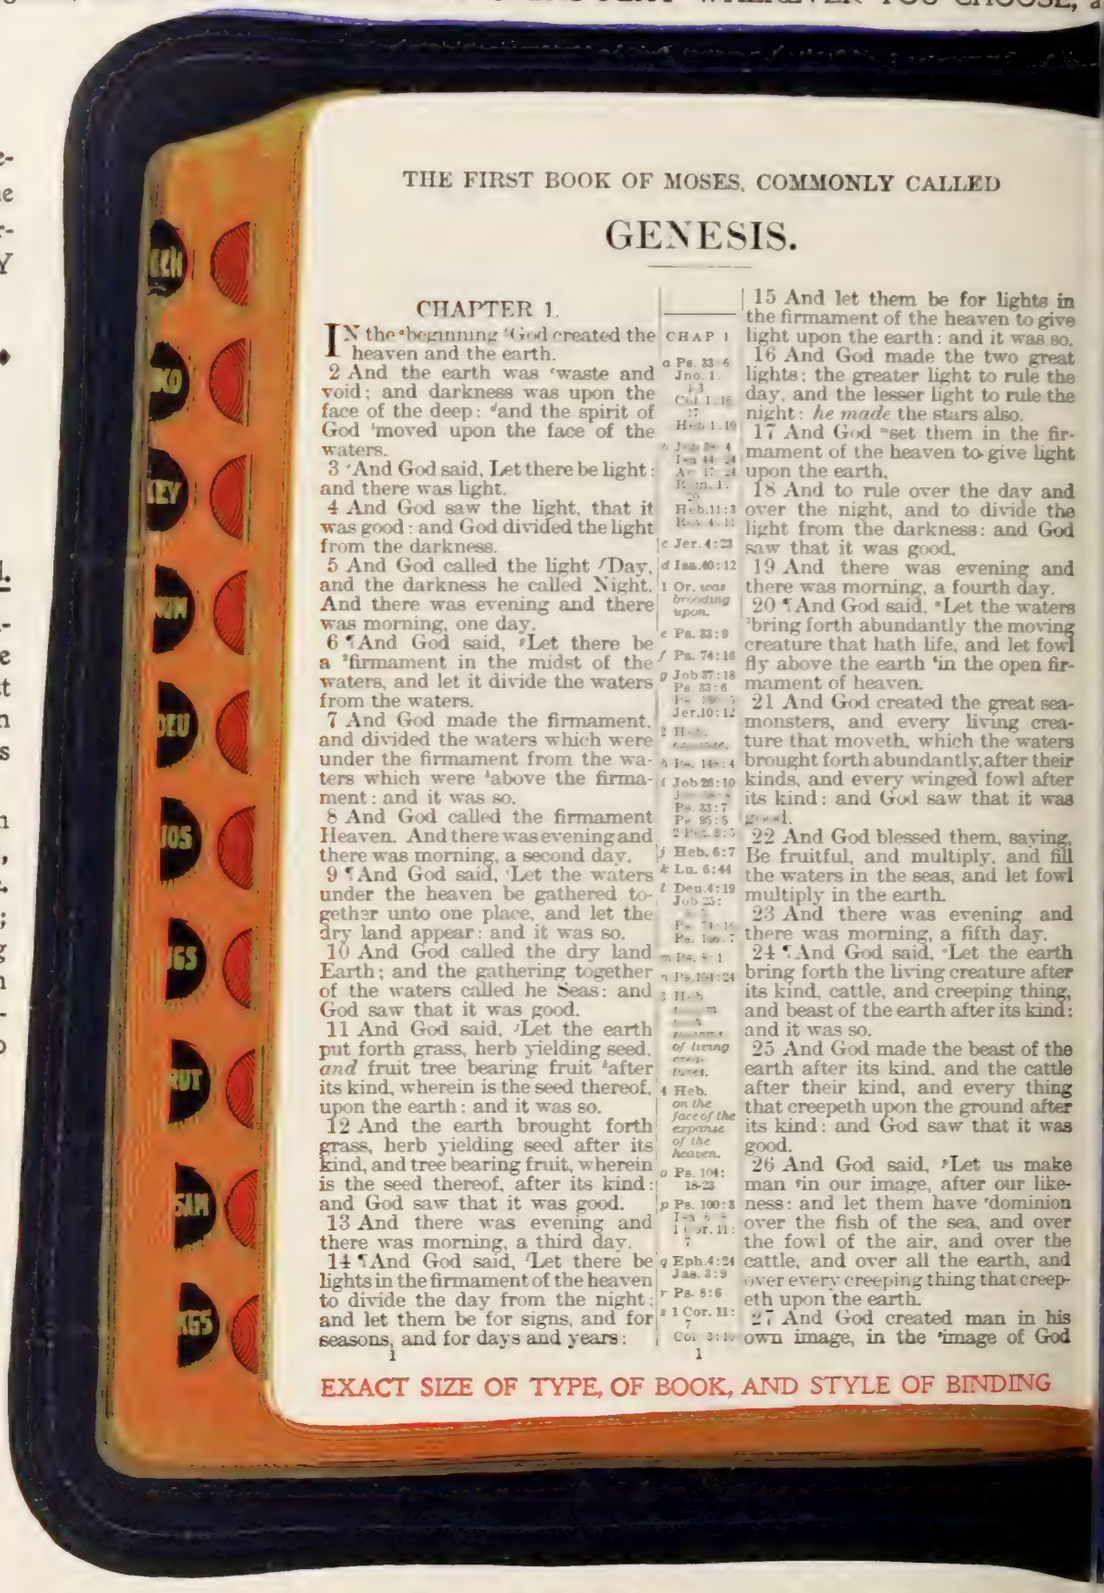
All our Bibles are Bound in Rich AMERICAN LEVANT, with Silk Head-bands and Silk Book-mark.



THE FIRST BOOK OF MOSES, COMMONLY CALLED

GENESIS.

CHAPTER 1.

IN the [a]beginning [b]God created the heaven and the earth.
2 And the earth was [c]waste and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep: [d]and the spirit of God [1]moved upon the face of the waters.
3 [e]And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.
4 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.
5 And God called the light [f]Day, and the darkness he called Night. And there was evening and there was morning, one day.
6 ¶And God said, [g]Let there be a [h]firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.
7 And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were [i]above the firmament: and it was so.
8 And God called the firmament Heaven. And there was evening and there was morning, a second day.
9 ¶And God said, [j]Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so.
10 And God called the dry land Earth; and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: and God saw that it was good.
11 And God said, [k]Let the earth put forth grass, herb yielding seed, and fruit tree bearing fruit [l]after its kind, wherein is the seed thereof, upon the earth: and it was so.
12 And the earth brought forth grass, herb yielding seed after its kind, and tree bearing fruit, wherein is the seed thereof, after its kind: and God saw that it was good.
13 And there was evening and there was morning, a third day.
14 ¶And God said, [m]Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days and years:
15 And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth: and it was so.
16 And God made the two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also.
17 And God [n]set them in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth,
18 And to rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.
19 And there was evening and there was morning, a fourth day.
20 ¶And God said, [o]Let the waters [p]bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life, and let fowl fly above the earth [q]in the open firmament of heaven.
21 And God created the great sea-monsters, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly, after their kinds, and every winged fowl after its kind: and God saw that it was good.
22 And God blessed them, saying, Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth.
23 And there was evening and there was morning, a fifth day.
24 ¶And God said, [r]Let the earth bring forth the living creature after its kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after its kind: and it was so.
25 And God made the beast of the earth after its kind, and the cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the ground after its kind: and God saw that it was good.
26 And God said, [s]Let us make man [t]in our image, after our likeness: and let them have [u]dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.
27 And God created man in his own image, in the [v]image of God

CHAP 1
a Ps. 33:6; Jno. 1:1-3; Col. 1:16, 17; Heb. 1:10
b Job 26:13; Isa. 44:24; Acts 17:24; Rev. 4:11; 10:6; Heb. 11:3; Rev. 4:11
c Jer. 4:23
d Isa. 40:12
1 Or, was brooding upon.
e Ps. 33:9
f Ps. 74:16; Job 37:18; Ps. 33:6; Isa. 40:22; Jer. 10:12
g Heb. expansion.
h Ps. 148:4
i Job 26:10; Ps. 33:7; Ps. 95:5; 2 Pet. 3:5
j Heb. 6:7
k Lu. 6:44
l Deu. 4:19; Job 25:5; Ps. 74:16; Ps. 136:7
m Ps. 8:1
n Ps. 104:24
2 Heb. swarm, abundance of living creatures.
3 Heb. on the face of the expanse of the heaven.
o Ps. 104:18-23
p Ps. 100:3; Isa. 6:3; 1 Cor. 11:7
q Eph. 4:24; Jas. 3:9
r Ps. 8:6
s 1 Cor. 11:7; Col. 3:10

EXACT SIZE OF TYPE, OF BOOK, AND STYLE OF BINDING

The same Bible as above, without Thumb Index and without Silk-

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the Brightest and Best Weekly Family Paper

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE TWO BIBLES OFFERED ON THIS PAGE is not in the Paper, Quality of Leathe or in all these respects the same. They are BOTH Divinity Circuit with RED UNDER GOLD EDGES, but the Cheaper Bible has n Le get the SAME TYPE you will get far GREATER VALUE by accepting the $3 Proposition. NEVER BUY A BIBLE NOT LA

Silk-Sewed TEACHERS' BIBLE, - - Worth $6.00
...er in the World---52 Times, - - Price $1.50

TOGETHER FOR ONLY $3.00

...ER-LINED is the Most Perfect Bible ever Offered to Sunday School Workers, Christian Endeavorers, Epworth Leaguers, Baptist ...t THUMB INDEX Makes it the Best Bible for Quick and Ready Reference now on the Market. It will Last a Lifetime.

Note the Difference

Between the Authorized and Revised Versions, as Illustrated by the following familiar Quotations:

Authorized Version

For what shall it profit a man, f he shall gain the whole world, nd lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?—Mark 8: 36, 37.

A man that hath friends must show himself friendly: and there s a friend that sticketh closer han a brother.—Proverbs 18: 24.

Blessed be the Lord, who daily oadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation.—Ps. 68: 19.

. . . Extol him that rideth upon the heavens.—Psalms 68: 4.

Fools make a mock at sin; but among the righteous there s favor.—Proverbs 14: 9.

Authorized Version

. . . All is vanity and vexation f spirit.—Ecclesiastes 1: 14.

For thou hast made him a lit- le lower than the angels. —Psalms 8: 5.

. . . Beware lest he take thee way with his stroke: then a reat ransom cannot deliver hee.—Job 36: 18.

And that they may recover hemselves out of the snare of he devil, who are taken captive y him at his will.—II. Timothy 2: 26.

. . . And we hid as it were our aces from him; he was despised. —Isaiah 53: 3.

Revised Version

For what doth it profit a man, to gain the whole world, and forfeit his life? For what should a man give in exchange for his life? —Mark 8: 36, 37.

He that maketh many friends doeth it to his own destruction: but there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother. —Proverbs 18: 24.

Blessed be the Lord, who daily beareth our burden, even the God who is our salvation. —Psalms 68: 19.

. . . Cast up a highway for him that rideth through the deserts. —Psalms 68: 4.

The foolish make a mock at guilt: but among the upright there is good will.—Proverbs 14: 9.

Revised Version

. . . All is vanity and a striving after wind.—Ecclesiastes 1: 14.

For thou hast made him but little lower than God.—Psalms 8: 5.

. . . Beware lest thou be led away by thy sufficiency; neither let the greatness of the ransom turn thee aside.—Job 36: 18.

And they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, having been taken captive by the Lord's servant unto the will of God.—II. Timothy 2: 26.

. . . And as one from whom men hide their face he was despised. —Isaiah 53: 3.

NOTE THAT OUR NEW THUMB INDEX DOES NOT REQUIRE THE BOOK TO BE TURNED SIDEWISE

...Thumb Index

...Long Primer

Leather-Lined
Silk-Sewed

Teachers' Bible

NEW TYPE, JUST OUT.

This Bible Contains all the HELPS Beautifully ILLUSTRATED.

Its... Word-Book

Contains the CONCORDANCE, Subject-Index, Persons, Places and Things, Gazetteer, and Dictionary, all under ONE Alphabetical Arrangement, together with Helps and Maps.

Our Thumb Index

Is LEATHER TIPPED and the Lettering is in PURE GOLD. No Aluminum or Composition Metal, which quickly tarnishes, is ever used on THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Bibles.

Our Bibles are Now Ready for Delivery and should be ordered at once to avoid possible disappointment later on.

Sewing or Leather Lining, - - Worth, $3.50 in the World, for One Year--52 TIMES--Price, $1.50

TOGETHER FOR ONLY $2.00

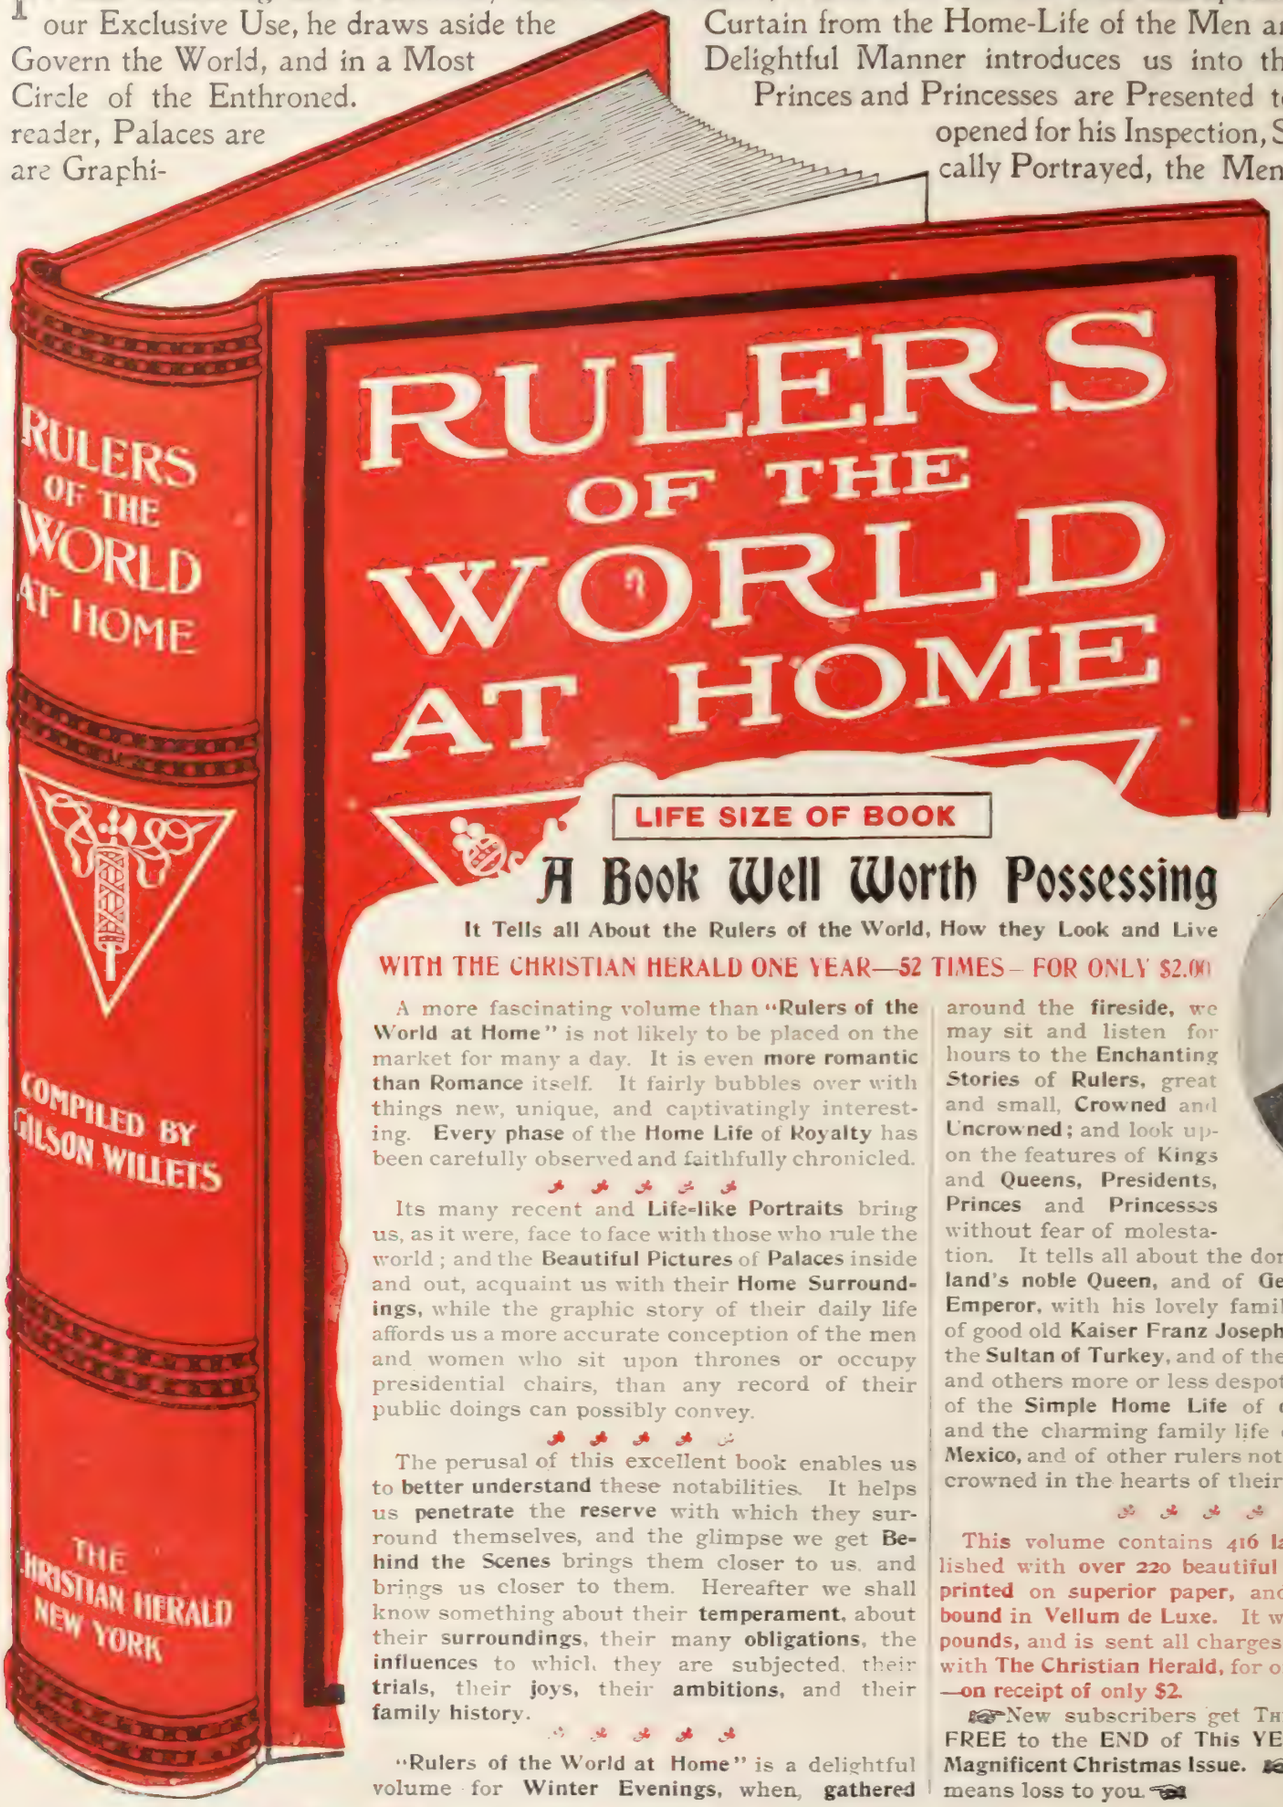
...e of Type, as the two Bibles offered at the top and bottom of this Page are ...ther Lining, is not Silk-Sewed and has NO THUMB INDEX. While you ...ER LINED, if you can Afford THE EXTRA DOLLAR for one that is.

The Christian Herald
892 to 906 Bible House, New York

A Royal Book for the Home Circle!

IN this Charming and Beautifully Illustrated Volume, which Mr. Gilson Willets has specially prepared for our Exclusive Use, he draws aside the Curtain from the Home-Life of the Men and Women who Govern the World, and in a Most Delightful Manner introduces us into the very Family Circle of the Enthroned. Princes and Princesses are Presented to the enchanted reader, Palaces are opened for his Inspection, Social Functions are Graphically Portrayed, the Menu of the Royal Table is Submitted, the Wardrobe unlocked, and the Domestic side of Royalty is Revealed. Life at the White House makes a delightful chapter, which will prove Interesting Reading to all Lovers of Democratic Simplicity.



LIFE SIZE OF BOOK

A Book Well Worth Possessing

It Tells all About the Rulers of the World, How they Look and Live

WITH THE CHRISTIAN HERALD ONE YEAR—52 TIMES—FOR ONLY $2.00

A more fascinating volume than "Rulers of the World at Home" is not likely to be placed on the market for many a day. It is even more romantic than Romance itself. It fairly bubbles over with things new, unique, and captivatingly interesting. Every phase of the Home Life of Royalty has been carefully observed and faithfully chronicled.

Its many recent and Life-like Portraits bring us, as it were, face to face with those who rule the world; and the Beautiful Pictures of Palaces inside and out, acquaint us with their Home Surroundings, while the graphic story of their daily life affords us a more accurate conception of the men and women who sit upon thrones or occupy presidential chairs, than any record of their public doings can possibly convey.

The perusal of this excellent book enables us to better understand these notabilities. It helps us penetrate the reserve with which they surround themselves, and the glimpse we get Behind the Scenes brings them closer to us, and brings us closer to them. Hereafter we shall know something about their temperament, about their surroundings, their many obligations, the influences to which they are subjected, their trials, their joys, their ambitions, and their family history.

"Rulers of the World at Home" is a delightful volume for Winter Evenings, when, gathered around the fireside, we may sit and listen for hours to the Enchanting Stories of Rulers, great and small, Crowned and Uncrowned; and look upon the features of Kings and Queens, Presidents, Princes and Princesses without fear of molestation. It tells all about the domestic life of England's noble Queen, and of Germany's energetic Emperor, with his lovely family of children, and of good old Kaiser Franz Joseph, of Austria, and of the Sultan of Turkey, and of the Autocrat of Russia, and others more or less despotic; also the story of the Simple Home Life of our own President, and the charming family life of the President of Mexico, and of other rulers not enthroned and yet crowned in the hearts of their countrymen.

GILSON WILLETS
AUTHOR AND JOURNALIST

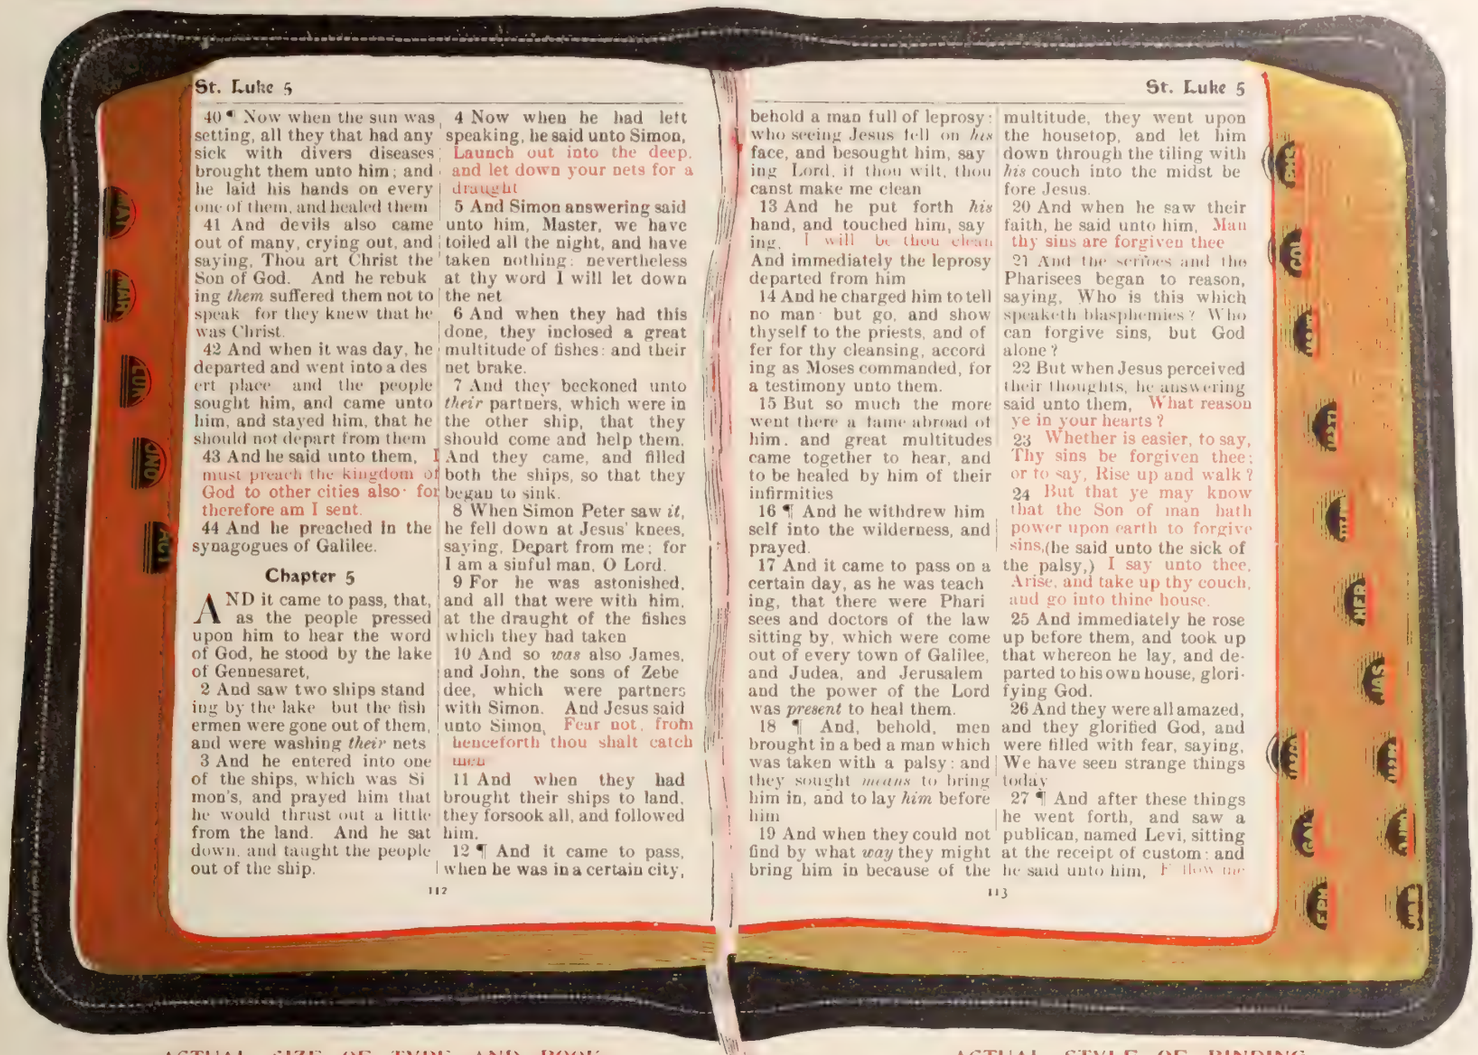
This volume contains 416 large pages, embellished with over 220 beautiful pictures, superbly printed on superior paper, and very artistically bound in Vellum de Luxe. It weighs about three pounds, and is sent all charges prepaid, together with The Christian Herald, for one year—52 times—on receipt of only $2.

☞New subscribers get THE CHRISTIAN HERALD FREE to the END of This YEAR, including our Magnificent Christmas Issue. ☞Every day's delay means loss to you.☜

Address: The Christian Herald, 892 to 906 Bible House, New York

The Red Letter New Testament

Every Word Spoken by Our Lord Printed in Red!



St. Luke 5
40 ¶ Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them
41 And devils also came out of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ the Son of God. And he rebuking them suffered them not to speak for they knew that he was Christ.
42 And when it was day, he departed and went into a desert place and the people sought him, and came unto him, and stayed him, that he should not depart from them
43 And he said unto them, I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also for therefore am I sent.
44 And he preached in the synagogues of Galilee.
Chapter 5
AND it came to pass, that, as the people pressed upon him to hear the word of God, he stood by the lake of Gennesaret,
2 And saw two ships standing by the lake but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets
3 And he entered into one of the ships, which was Simon's, and prayed him that he would thrust out a little from the land. And he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.
4 Now when he had left speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught
5 And Simon answering said unto him, Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing: nevertheless at thy word I will let down the net
6 And when they had this done, they inclosed a great multitude of fishes: and their net brake.
7 And they beckoned unto their partners, which were in the other ship, that they should come and help them. And they came, and filled both the ships, so that they began to sink.
8 When Simon Peter saw it, he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord.
9 For he was astonished, and all that were with him, at the draught of the fishes which they had taken
10 And so was also James, and John, the sons of Zebedee, which were partners with Simon. And Jesus said unto Simon, Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt catch men
11 And when they had brought their ships to land, they forsook all, and followed him.
12 ¶ And it came to pass, when he was in a certain city,
112
St. Luke 5
behold a man full of leprosy: who seeing Jesus fell on his face, and besought him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean
13 And he put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will: be thou clean. And immediately the leprosy departed from him
14 And he charged him to tell no man: but go, and show thyself to the priests, and offer for thy cleansing, according as Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.
15 But so much the more went there a fame abroad of him: and great multitudes came together to hear, and to be healed by him of their infirmities
16 ¶ And he withdrew himself into the wilderness, and prayed.
17 And it came to pass on a certain day, as he was teaching, that there were Pharisees and doctors of the law sitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem and the power of the Lord was present to heal them.
18 ¶ And, behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with a palsy: and they sought means to bring him in, and to lay him before him
19 And when they could not find by what way they might bring him in because of the multitude, they went upon the housetop, and let him down through the tiling with his couch into the midst before Jesus.
20 And when he saw their faith, he said unto him, Man, thy sins are forgiven thee
21 And the scribes and the Pharisees began to reason, saying, Who is this which speaketh blasphemies? Who can forgive sins, but God alone?
22 But when Jesus perceived their thoughts, he answering said unto them, What reason ye in your hearts?
23 Whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk?
24 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power upon earth to forgive sins, (he said unto the sick of the palsy,) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy couch, and go into thine house.
25 And immediately he rose up before them, and took up that whereon he lay, and departed to his own house, glorifying God.
26 And they were all amazed, and they glorified God, and were filled with fear, saying, We have seen strange things today
27 ¶ And after these things he went forth, and saw a publican, named Levi, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he said unto him, Follow me
113

ACTUAL SIZE OF TYPE AND BOOK

ACTUAL STYLE OF BINDING

No Book Like it Has Ever Been Produced

The Red Letter New Testament, here illustrated, is an Innovation that has long been vaguely wished for, but which has only in the present day found practical expression in its actual production. Though at the time of this writing issued less than two weeks, tens of thousands of these New Testaments have already found their way into the hands of our Subscribers, and the demand is such that, to satisfy it, the printing presses must work day and night for many months to come.

* * * * * * *

A more Exquisite Gift cannot be conceived, nor one that will afford more genuine Satisfaction and more intense Pleasure.

Nothing like this book has ever before been produced. The arrangement originated with Dr. Louis Klopsch, Proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, in May last, and four months were spent in its careful preparation. It is absolutely free from typographical imperfections of any kind, and is in the highest sense of the word a Veritable Gem. The type is very large and very clear, and every word recorded as having been spoken by Our Lord is printed in Red. For real convenience, legibility and serviceableness, it is unsurpassed.

It is beautifully bound, in American Levant, soft and flexible, with overlapping edges, Red under Gold, and the Only Testament in the world with a Thumb Index. Wherever a Testament can be utilized this Book will be found more acceptable than any other on the market.

For Home Reading, for pocket use, for Church and Sunday School work, it is the Ideal Testament. The International Sunday School Lessons, for the next Eighteen Months, concern themselves with the Life of Our Saviour, and the Red Letter New Testament will prove of Inestimable Value to every one interested in Sunday School Work.

* * * * * * *

The Price of this Testament is $1.75, but it will be Sent, all Charges Prepaid, together with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, on receipt of only $2; in other words, $3.25 in value for only Two Dollars.

* * * * * * *

The Red Letter New Testament cannot be procured elsewhere. It is copyrighted in the United States and in England, and is the exclusive property of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Address: The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York

Holiday Combination Offers

Best Things from American Literature, by A. Irving Bacheller, Rulers of the World at Home, by Gilson Willets, The Christian Herald One Year,	"Best Things from American Literature," "Rulers of the World at Home," 2 PREMIUMS FOR $3.00 And "The Christian Herald" 52 Times.
The Art of Home-Making, by Margaret E. Sangster, Onward to Fame and Fortune, by William M. Thayer, The Christian Herald One Year,	"The Art of Home-Making," "Onward to Fame and Fortune," 2 PREMIUMS FOR $3.00 And "The Christian Herald" 52 Times.
Teacher's Bible, Long Primer, Thumb-Indexed, Leather-Lined,* Best Things from American Literature, by A. Irving Bacheller, Rulers of the World at Home, by Gilson Willets, The Christian Herald One Year,	Long Primer Teacher's Bible, "Best Things from American Literature," "Rulers of the World at Home," 3 PREMIUMS FOR $5.00 And "The Christian Herald" 52 Times
Red Letter New Testament, And Any Other Premium Book, Except the Leather-Lined Thumb-Indexed Teacher's Bible, The Christian Herald One Year,	Red Letter New Testament And Any Other Premium Book Except the Leather-Lined Thumb-Indexed Bible, 2 PREMIUMS FOR $3.00 And "The Christian Herald" 52 Times.
Teacher's Bible, Long Primer, Thumb-Indexed, Leather-Lined,* And Any Other Premium Book, The Christian Herald One Year,	Long Primer Teacher's Bible, And Any Other Premium Book, 2 PREMIUMS FOR $4.00 And "The Christian Herald" 52 Times
Teacher's Bible, Long Primer, Thumb-Indexed, Leather-Lined,* Red Letter New Testament, And Any Other Premium Book, The Christian Herald One Year,	Long Primer Teacher's Bible, Red Letter New Testament, And Any Other Premium Book, 3 PREMIUMS FOR $5.00 And "The Christian Herald" 52 Times.
Teacher's Bible, Long Primer, Thumb-Indexed, Leather-Lined,* Red Letter New Testament, Best Things from American Literature, by A. Irving Bacheller, Rulers of the World at Home, by Gilson Willets, Onward to Fame and Fortune, by William M. Thayer, The Christian Herald One Year,	Long Primer Teacher's Bible, Red Letter New Testament, "Best Things from American Literature," "Rulers of the World at Home," "Onward to Fame and Fortune," 5 PREMIUMS FOR $7.00 And "The Christian Herald" 52 Times.

*For SAME BIBLE in every respect, but WITHOUT Leather Lining, and WITHOUT Thumb-Index, DEDUCT ONE DOLLAR

Read These .. Instructions

1. [illegible]

2. You may have THE CHRISTIAN HERALD sent to one address and each premium sent to a different address, without extra charge.

3. We always [illegible]

4. For THE CHRISTIAN HERALD with or without Premium, if sent to any other country than the United States, Canada, and Mexico, add $1 per annum for additional foreign postage.

5. If your subscription does not [illegible] wish NOW to avail yourself of any Premium Offer, send the money required and we will extend your present subscription [illegible] send the Premiums immediately.

6. We ship Premiums the very day on which the order is received, consequently you can always depend upon their reaching their destination exactly on time.

7. Use Subscription Blank printed below.

• • •

If for any reason any of our Premiums should fail to give entire satisfaction we will, on their return, and without asking any questions whatever, cheerfully and promptly refund the full amount involved.

To The Christian Herald, 892-906 Bible House, New York City

Find enclosed_____ Dollars ($_____), for One Year's Subscription and Premiums as entered below, which Send, all Charges Prepaid, to the following Addresses:

	NAME.	STREET AND POST OFFICE.	STATE.
SEND . . THE CHRISTIAN HERALD The Best Family Paper in the World, FOR ONE YEAR—52 TIMES, to Without Premium $1.50 per year.		Give ALSO Nearest Express Office
Send Long Primer Teacher's Bible Divinity Circuit, Overlapping, but WITHOUT the THUMB-INDEX or LEATHER LINING, to With CHRISTIAN HERALD $2.00. Without the Paper $1.00.	*Do you want the Authorized or the Revised Version?	Give ALSO Nearest Express Office
Send Long Primer Teacher's Bible Divinity Circuit, Overlapping Edges, THUMB-INDEXED and LEATHER LINED, to With CHRISTIAN HERALD $3.00. Without the Paper $2.00.	*Do you want the Authorized or the Revised Version?	Give ALSO Nearest Express Office
Send "Rulers of the World at Home" How They Look and How They Live, By Gilson Willets—416 Large Pages, to With CHRISTIAN HERALD $2.00. Without the Paper $1.00.		Give ALSO Nearest Express Office
Send "Best Things from American Literature" Embellished with facsimile Manuscripts, By Addison Irving Bacheller—416 Large Pages, to With CHRISTIAN HERALD $2.00. Without the Paper $1.00.		Give ALSO Nearest Express Office
Send Red Letter New Testament EVERY WORD SPOKEN BY OUR LORD PRINTED IN RED, Divinity Circuit, Red under Gold Edges, Thumb-Indexed, to With CHRISTIAN HERALD $2.00. Without the Paper $1.75.

☞CROSS OUT the BOOK you DO NOT WANT☜

Send "Onward to Fame and Fortune,"
Or, "Climbing Life's Ladder,"
By William M. Thayer—464 Large Pages, to Send "The Art of Home-Making"

In City or Country, Mansion and Cottage,
By Margaret E. Sangster—448 Large Pages, to Either One with CHRISTIAN HERALD $2.00—Either One without the Paper $1.00.

Name _____

Address _____ GIVE ALSO NEAREST EXPRESS OFFICE

If you select a Bible, be sure to state here whether you desire the Authorized or the Revised Version! _____

Is this a New Subscription or a Renewal? _____ Name of Sender _____

Date _____ 189 Address _____

Onward to Fame and Fortune

A Helpful and Inspiring Volume for Aspiring Men and Women Who Desire to Make Their Lives Successful

WM. M. THAYER

WM. M. THAYER'S stirring book is worth its weight in gold to every man and woman, young or old, who aspires to rise in the world and to make life a grand, triumphant success. It is full of action, full of enthusiasm and of inspiration. From cover to cover it reads like a romance. Every page thrills the heart and irresistibly impels the reader to greater and nobler achievement. Had every word been penned in liquid fire it could not have been more intensely, more absorbingly interesting. The 20th Century will feel the impulse which this book will give to thousands of energetic, wide-awake, enterprising young men and women who are bound to succeed. "Onward to Fame and Fortune" will prove a stimulus and an uplift to tens of thousands of men and women, young and old, who, but for the inspiration of its pages, would have been content to live lives of humdrum mediocrity, instead of pressing forward, determined to take their places among the successful and the well-to-do.

"Onward to Fame and Fortune" was written not for Men alone, but for Women as well: for the same elements of character that make the young man successful on the farm, in the shop, at the bar, in the forum and pulpit, will make the young woman successful in the kitchen, counting room, school room, or learned profession, and as daughter, wife, mother, or public benefactress. Womanhood has an Equal Chance with Manhood. With the same opportunities, the same occupations, and equal remuneration, the former may prove a match for the latter.

"Onward to Fame and Fortune" holds up to contemplation the examples of men and women who have achieved success and analyzes the why and wherefore of their illustrious achievements, and thus it paves the way for the reader's own personal success, filling him with lofty ambition, and urging him to enthusiastically press Onward to Fame and Fortune.

"Onward to Fame and Fortune, or Climbing Life's Ladder," by William M. Thayer, is Beautifully Illustrated with over 125 Unequalled Engravings. It is set in Large Type, printed on Fine Paper, and Bound in Rich Cloth, with Emblematic Decoration. It is printed from new electro-plates, and makes a book of 446 large pages. It weighs Three Pounds and is Worth double the money asked. Sent, All Charges Prepaid, with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD One Year—52 Times—together for Only Two Dollars. Money Refunded if not satisfactory. Same size as books on pages 945 and 948.

Moody's New Departure

FOR two years we have carried on a sort of Northfield Extension movement by arranging for leading Northfield speakers to hold meetings in different centres throughout the country. In 1897 and 1898 Rev. F. B. Meyer, of London, was the lecturer. This year Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, of London, has given over six weeks to this work, and has visited more than a dozen principal cities of the states and Canada. Everywhere the meetings have had marked success and blessing. Urgent requests have come for a repetition of the meetings; and other centres and smaller towns not yet visited have begged for the same teaching. We have thus been led to make this a permanent branch of our work, under the name of "The Northfield Extension Movement." Rev. H. W. Pope, of New Haven, Conn., will act as superintendent, devoting his entire time to it. It will be the object of this Extension movement to arrange short series of meetings for Bible study in different centres; encourage the dissemination of good literature; and further the cause of Christ by every possible means.

Pastors who desire to avail themselves of this opportunity should correspond with Rev. W. H. Pope, at New Haven, Conn., or with myself at East Northfield, Mass.

Yours in the work,

D. L. MOODY.

Only One Dollar Down

This will probably be the last call in behalf of the World Wide Encyclopedia, the best work of its kind, revised up to date, and including the Spanish-American war. The twelve large volumes, substantially bound in the best cloth, containing about Ten Thousand large pages with nearly 20,000 columns and 93 Modern Maps, besides many illustrations, heretofore sold at $30, are at your disposal for $15—payable One Dollar down and One Dollar a month for fourteen months, or 10 per cent. off for spot cash. We send the entire set, weighing nearly 40 pounds, on receipt of only One Dollar.

The World-Wide Encyclopedia has the imprint and guarantee of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Every set is accompanied by a "Key to Systematic Study" which guides the purchaser in the study of any subject in Art, History, Literature, Science, discovery or investigation.

You cannot make a mistake purchasing this great work. We send it securely boxed, by freight or express, but do not prepay charges: we cannot afford it. You save at least $15—and you will be delighted when you inspect the magnificent volumes that constitute this accurate and marvelously helpful work. Address The Christian Herald Book Department, Bible House, New York.

The Art of Home-Making

A Superbly Illustrated and Exceptionally Elegant Book which Points the Way to Genuine Domestic Happiness

IN The Art of Home Making, the author has in a kindly, yet practical manner, brought true home happiness within the reach of the humblest reader, and the many thousands who have already learned to love her will love her still more when they have finished reading the work to which this warm-hearted, genial authoress has given months of patient, careful, and prayerful toil, weaving chapter after chapter into a grand, noble, enduring monument to her undying interest in the welfare of the plain people, who constitute the rank and file of this, the greatest, happiest and most prosperous country in the world.

MRS. LOUIS KLOPSCH AND HER DAUGHTER MARY.
FROM "THE ART OF HOME-MAKING." (BEAUTY AND BEAUTIFUL.)

"The Art of Home Making," by Margaret E. Sangster, is Beautifully Illustrated with over 200 Unequalled Engravings. It is set in Large Type, printed on Fine Paper, and Bound in Rich Cloth, with Emblematic Decoration. It is printed from new electro-plates, and makes a book of 463 large pages. It weighs Three Pounds and is Worth double the money asked. Sent, All Charges Prepaid, with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for One Year—52 Times—together for Only Two Dollars. Money Refunded if not Satisfactory. Same size as books on pages 945 and 948.

London Art Bible—Genuine Edition

THIS Great Work Originally Sold by Subscription at $12.00 and then Owing to the Substantial Advantages secured through an Unusually Large Purchase for Spot Cash, sold by The Christian Herald at $5.00, at which Price Many Thousands were Disposed of, is now Offered at a Great Reduction to Close out a Small Lot which has become almost Imperceptibly Dusty. The Bible is as Good as New—in fact it is New—never having been Removed from the Original Package, but as we Carried it a Year we consider it Imperfect Stock and are Closing it Out at $2.00, all Charges Prepaid. This Bible is Printed from Large Type, Twice the Size of the Type used in this Article, It has Text and Illustrations only.

It is bound in American Levant—Red Under Gold Edges—contains 1,400 Large Pages, and Weighs nearly Six Pounds. It cannot be Manufactured at the Price here asked. We make no Reduction whether you Buy One or a Hundred, and no Discount is Allowed if taken with The Christian Herald. The Combined Price of Paper and Art Bible is $3.50, cash, or if purchased on the instalment plan, one dollar down and one dollar a month for three months, making a total of $4.00.

The large type makes this Bible acceptable to persons of all ages, and the 852 Beautiful Pictures which it contains, elucidate the text more than references and an extensive commentary could do, and invest the Holy Scriptures with new life to old and young. To many, this Bible will prove a New Book, with its numerous Attractive Pictures to illustrate Scenes and explain Orientalisms which heretofore were but imperfectly understood. The Sunday School Teacher will find it of incalculable assistance in interesting and enlightening the scholars and holding their attention. * * * * * *

You cannot find a richer or more acceptable Holiday Present in all the world than this exceptionally attractive Art Bible. It is the grandest gift in existence for a pastor, a superintendent, a teacher, a Bible scholar, or Christian worker in any capacity. Beautiful to the eye, and delightful to the touch, there is nothing like it anywhere.

Altogether we have sold nearly twenty-five thousand of these Bibles, most of them with an annual subscription to The Christian Herald, at Five Dollars. We are now enabled to make a substantial reduction, and offer this Bible, together with The Christian Herald, for only $3.50. Of course, they will sell quickly, and the stock will soon be exhausted. In that case we immediately refund your money; but we do not believe that any one who really desires this beautiful Bible will delay until it is too late.

This book is the Only Genuine London Art Edition offered. It was illustrated, set and electrotyped in London, England. And its pictures illustrate, they explain, they expound, they make clear, and they render the text additionally attractive, because now it is more easily understood. Pictures are object lessons which prove of more assistance to a correct understanding than [illegible] memory is far more apt to retain what the eye has seen than what the ear has heard.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR

T. De Witt Talmage

EDITOR.

B. J. FERNIE AND G. H. SANDISON,
Associate Editors

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday [illegible] $3.00 per year, payable in advance.

Subscriptions may commence [illegible]

Remittances [illegible] manner available to the remitter. Post-office and [illegible] may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Renewals.—It is always best to renew two weeks before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Change of Date. [illegible] the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration [illegible] per indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address. [illegible] your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,

[illegible]

The prayers of the readers of this journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its proprietor, and also upon those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ, are printed in it; and that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of sinners and the quickeneng of God's people.

10,000,000 Readers!

THIS edition of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD consists of one and a-half million copies, of twenty-eight pages each. As every copy will be read by many persons, it is reasonable to estimate an average of seven readers to each, the whole thus forming a stupendous aggregation of over Ten Millions of Readers. This is the greatest number ever reached simultaneously by any publication at any period of the world's history.

A few facts concerning this mammoth edition will be interesting. Half a million pounds of white paper—equal to 30 ordinary railway car-loads—have been consumed in its production. If the edition were extended in a continuous roll, the width of an ordinary page of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, it would reach a distance of over 9,000 miles, and the shining band of Christian literature would be almost long enough to go three times across the American continent.

If the same amount of reading matter that is contained in this phenomenal issue as a whole, were presented in book form, it would make a great library, hardly second to any on the globe, of 1,000,000 average volumes of 300 pages each. The printing of this edition, if finished in one week, would have required the services of 40 bronzing machines, 160 color presses, and 67 black-and-white presses. The total expense of the 1,500,000 edition was $60,000, postage alone involving an outlay of $5,000.

We believe our readers, without exception, will be delighted with the literary and artistic qualities of the number which has been produced with such mechanical perfection. It is the result of much love and care in behalf of those into whose hands it will come, and whom it is specially designed to interest and help. We trust that a blessing may go with it into every home, and that it may be productive of increased happiness and great spiritual good to all who read it.

The Benediction of Sorrow

EVERYBODY is trying to get rid of sickness and sorrow. In addition to the regular practitioners, we have all sorts of healings and restoratives, some of them physical and more of them metaphysical. The modern study of psychology has opened new avenues of approach to the sick. In spite of all this the typical man is the Man of Sorrows and acquainted with Grief. And it is a suggestive thought, that this Man of Sorrows is the very Man who became sin for us, that we might be the righteousness of God in him.

On the other hand, we should not forget the benediction of sickness and sorrow. It is on a sick bed that a man is brought to reflection. Any sickness may terminate in death. "And after death cometh the judgment." A man in perfect health does not think of death or the judgment. Then, what a multitude of kind offices are fulfilled in the sick-room! There neglected affections are quickened and broken domestic ties are knit anew. It was a father who pleaded with the Great Physician: "Come down ere my child die." It was the Phœnician mother who besought Him he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter.

The Ideal Woman

THE recent study of Esther in the Sunday School Lessons reminds us of the Scripture's ideal woman. She stands for others, pleads for others, takes the burden of others. What Esther did when she took her life in her hand and went in before Ahasuerus, woman does in her lot as woman. In the nursery, in the family, her lot is a vicarious one. In fashionable circles she may try to escape from it, turning over the children to the care of others, treating the sacred duty of maternity as a burden, which she would shift upon foreign servants, who may teach the little ones foreign morals at the same time they are taught foreign letters; and only waking up, when it is too late, to find she has not built up her own home, but left it to go to pieces. But in the country, in the humbler families, where the luxury of many servants cannot be indulged, it is still the mother who cares for the husband and the children alike, and brings up her daughters to be ministering angels. Thank God for the mother who teaches the little ones to pray.

The War Against Polygamy

IT is the duty of every man and woman in this nation—a duty owed to religion, to society, to good government and to the home—to enter a solemn and emphatic protest to Congress against permitting Brigham H. Roberts, the confessed polygamist Congressman-elect from Utah, to occupy a seat among the nation's lawmakers. Congress has the constitutional right to expel any member whose presence is regarded as offensive to that body. The highest living authority on this question—ex-Senator Edmunds of Vermont, the author of the anti-polygamy law—has declared that the House, with the concurrence of two-thirds, may expel a member. The Constitution has imposed no limitation upon this right, which is granted for the sole purpose of protecting the dignity and good name of Congress from reproach.

Tendency to Individualism

THE tendency of American life is to individualism. Therefore, society disintegrates; humanity goes back to its original elements. The question whether man and woman shall keep their marriage vows; whether, having plighted themselves to each other for better, for worse, until death do them part, they shall so far repress their individualism as to live for each other, and for their children, and for society; this is one of the vital questions which confront us in our national future. Is individual man the unit, or is it the family? Is the individual that which the family is for; or is the individual for the family?

We have made very emphatic the rights of man; meaning the individual man, such as Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson, John Adams. But, were these men raised up for themselves, or for their country? Were they at their best when living for themselves or when living for their country? There is in New York a statue of the young man Hale, who was shot as a spy in the Revolution. His arms are pinioned, ready for the gallows. And on the entablature are engraved his last words: "I only regret that I have but one life to give for my country." It is giving life for others which ennobles it. The father chopping down trees in the wilderness or working in the harvest field, the mother in the nursery or kitchen, for the family's sake; how much nobler is this than the man at the club-house or the woman in the ball-room; man and woman living for individual interests, individual pleasures, pulling apart from each other, instead of working together to fulfill social relations ordained of God to benefit the race.

An Editorial Reminiscence

A TELEGRAM from Fire Island announced in sight the ocean steamer on which Martin Farquhar Tupper, the distinguished English poet, was a passenger. He had accepted the invitation to be my guest for three months, and a lovelier man never crossed my threshold. Having been a classmate of William E. Gladstone, and a frequent guest of Queen Victoria in her palaces, and having mingled in many scenes of national and international interest, he was to me a constant charm of entertainment. It so happened that I received the telegram concerning his arrival off Fire Island the morning I was to go to Boston to meet an engagement, so that I could not welcome the poet at the steamer's wharf. But taking the midnight train from Boston and returning the next morning I found Mr. Tupper in my house at Brooklyn. He was surrounded by newspapers, tossed here and there, containing accounts of his arrival, and of interviews with our friends, the ever-present reporters. Some of them, not understanding him any better than he understood them, had written him up in a style more irritating than complimentary, and I found the poet in a state of perspiration, consequent upon his perusal of the morning newspapers. As soon as we had greeted each other, he asked what these newspaper articles meant. I assured him that it was only harmless facetiousness, and that a man in America did not amount to much until he had been vigorously rubbed down with a coarse Turkish towel which always improves the circulation. The fact was that notwithstanding his large equipment of mental faculties there was one sense he lacked, and that was pointed out to me by Henry W. Longfellow, in the only conversation I ever had with that great American poet. After he had spoken in admiration of Tupper, Longfellow said, "There is only one thing lacking in Mr. Tupper's make-up and that is a sense of the ludicrous." Sure enough, Mr. Tupper's was a deeply earnest and religious nature and did not see much in the world to laugh at. But what a sceptre of power he wielded for many years through out Christendom, during which time he was quoted more than any living poet.

* * *

At the first appearance of his book some plagiarists made his verses their own. In our private school of five or six boys, presided over by an excellent clergyman, a prize of two volumes was offered for the one who would write the best essay, the prizes, as near as I can recollect, being Edwards on the Hill and Doctor Dick's Theology. We were very anxious to win them, for summer was coming on and we were in need of some light reading. In great agitation our compositions were handed in after much midnight study. When they were read, Joe carried off the prize as easily as the Columbia beat the Shamrock. The dear old clergyman who offered the prizes did not hesitate a moment, for Joe's composition was incomparably the best, being distinguished by here and there a sentence that blazed with splendor. His victory was as complete as our chagrin was utter. After school hours I said: "Joe, you did not compose that composition. You stole it. I believe you got those fine sentences from Tupper." Well, that night I spent mostly in reading Tupper, and I discovered the mine from which Joe had dug his treasures. But it was too late to change the possession of the prizes, and never did I own Edwards on the Hill or Doctor Dick's Theology till I paid for them in hard cash. But I mention this to show how much Tupper had to do with those days. It was Tupper here, there, and everywhere.

* * *

But the scene that I expected to mention when I began this article was witnessed at my home, on an especial night in Brooklyn, while Mr. Tupper was my guest. I had invited twenty or thirty literary men to meet Mr. Tupper at a levee, and among others who came was William C. Bryant, everyone's favorite. I had contrived a plot by which to have both Mr. Tupper and Mr. Bryant read us something from their own poems. Mr. Tupper, who always carried in his pocket some of his writings in small volumes, took out a book, and then brought to sight his large and somewhat clumsy spectacles, and began to read some of his favorite passages. The taking of his spectacles out of the case in which they were lodged, and the right adjustment of them upon his nose was observed by all. He read well, deeply interesting all present, and then closed the book. But now came the effort to put Mr. Bryant gracefully into the unprinted programme. I had taken from my library a collection of poems containing, among others, Bryant's Thanatopsis, and had the leaf turned down at the right page. I said:

"Mr. Bryant, we would all like to hear you read Thanatopsis: will you oblige us? I have it here in this book upon the table." Mr. Bryant blushed like a girl and said, "I would rather read you anything than my own poetry, but if it will really please you I will read that which you ask for." Mr. Bryant took up the book and stood under the chandelier, about to begin, when Mr. Tupper approached him with the aforesaid spectacles and said: "Here are my spectacles, Mr. Bryant; you cannot read without spectacles." "Oh," said Mr. Bryant, I never use spectacles." "But take them," said Mr. Tupper, "you need them if you are going to read." "No!" said Mr. Bryant broadly smiling, "they would be of no use to me and I want our friends here to understand that I read and do not quote from memory. I could not recall this poem." The fact was that he had composed Thanatopsis when he was eighteen years of age and he was at the time of his reading in my house eighty-two or three years old. Mr. Tupper, who was only a little way in the seventies, could not understand how a man in the eighties could read without optical reinforcement, and seemed somewhat perturbed because his offer was declined. But what a tender and expressive reading by Mr. Bryant it was that night! We had all heard Thanatopsis quoted again and again, until it seemed a worn-out recitation, and some of us had ourselves murdered it at school; but when Mr. Bryant read it he brought out a new revelation of meaning in his emphasis, and there was in his utterance of the last two lines, which describe a good man's departure from this world, something that seemed the commingling of a mother's hush with the last sob of a storm:

Like one that draws the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE.

IMPORTANT NOTICE! We beg to inform our readers that any typographical defects or faulty alignment of type which the great speed of the presses, employed in the production of the colored inserts in this issue, may develop in the specimen pages of the Red Letter New Testament, do NOT in any case appear in the book itself, which is absolutely free from any of these imperfections.

THE BIBLE AND THE NEWSPAPER

New York's Sky Line

TO THE visitor who has not been in New York before in twenty years, there is no sight more impressive than that he gets from the deck of a Hudson River ferry boat as it crosses from the New Jersey side to the Metropolis. Back of the forest of masts that line the shore, rise, high against the sky, breaking the low line of roofs, the towering buildings familiarly called "sky-scrapers." During the past few years, the Tribune building, formerly the most conspicuous object in view, with its well-known clock-tower, has been dwarfed and hidden among edifices which overtop it by many feet. It has been an era of lofty structures in the architectural history of the city. The enormous value of land in the southern section of the city, where it is sold by the foot, combined with the vastly increased demand for accommodation, inevitably suggested the "sky-scraper." Nature having restricted the growth of the city laterally, by surrounding it with water, there was no way of providing the required room for the rapidly developing business interests but in a vertical direction. A man holding a lot in that section of the city, remembering that he owned all below it and above it, proceeded to make the most of his opportunities by digging deep for the foundations of his building and then running it as high as he dare venture, within the limits imposed by the Fire Department. So we now have the Syndicate Building in Park Row with its twenty-nine stories towering 382 feet from the pavement to the top of its tower; the St. Paul Building at Broadway and Ann Street with twenty-six stories, its roof 308 feet above the level of the street; the Tract Society's Building and the American Surety Building, each having twenty-three stories and being 306 feet high; the Pulitzer Building conspicuous with its glittering dome, 375 feet high; the Potter Building at Broadway and Rector Street, twenty stories and 293 feet high, and a score of other office and bank buildings, all over two hundred feet in height and varying from fourteen to twenty stories. They are not, as a rule, particularly beautiful, though some of them have made an effort in that direction, but rear their heads in plain unrelieved ugliness above their neighbors. They are built to afford a maximum of accommodation with a minimum of ground space, and no other objects seem to have entered the minds of the owners and builders than that of turning every inch to account. But they are wonderfully impressive, standing firmly in their unadorned strength, a type of the active business life carried on beneath their roofs, which in New York as in other cities of the nation, has grown so fast and so far. It may be hoped that the city which has become so wealthy, may never forget the God of its founders, nor turn in pride and arrogance to the wickedness which was the ruin of ancient cities, for the God who judged them still rules over man and says to the proudest city, if it becomes wicked, as he said to Babylon:

Thou hast said in thy heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; yet thou shalt be brought down (Isa. 14:13).

The Decaying Obelisk

The condition of the obelisk in Central Park, New York, is again causing a great deal of apprehension. The cracks toward the top have lately become more conspicuous, and it is evident that before long some radical means will have to be adopted, if it is desired to preserve the monument for succeeding generations. Exactly the same kind of trouble is being experienced with regard to Cleopatra's Needle in London. The idea current when the two obelisks were removed from Egypt, that because they had existed in that country for so many centuries without decaying, they could be erected in the open air in New York and London with equal safety, was soon proved to be a mistake. The atmosphere here and in England causes them to crumble. It is probable that it will be found necessary to remove the New York obelisk to the interior of some public building. It is thus evident that the proudest monuments man has ever raised, are dependent for their preservation on atmospheric conditions. The imperceptible action of the air can, it appears, disintegrate the stately memorial the Egyptian monarch doubtless believed would stand to the end of time, and so unless measures are taken, the warning of the prophet may be fulfilled:

Their memorial is perished with them (Ps. 9:6).

A Heroic Shepherd

An incident of the recent blizzard on the ranges of Montana is told by a journal of Helena. It appears that a large sheep owner, near Healy, Butte, employed a man of considerable experience as his shepherd. He was out with the sheep in the "coulee" when the storm came on. He did his utmost to get them into camp, but they were too widely scattered, and he was unable to get them together. Evidently knowing the danger of trying to save them, he went into his tent and wrote a brief note which he left behind him, saying that he was just about to start up the "coulee" after the sheep, although he was almost exhausted. His body was found the next day stretched on the snow. He had followed them a long distance but had perished in trying to bring them into camp. Everyone admires a hero capable of such self-sacrifice, but how few show any appreciation of that self-sacrifice by which eternal salvation was won for them.

I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep (John 10:11).

Introduced to his Family

A citizen of Angelica has had the novel experience of seeing his wife and children for the first time, in his old age. A press dispatch to a New York journal from that place describes the recent celebration of a golden wedding which has attracted general attention. It appears that fifty years ago a girl in Pennsylvania consented to become the wife of a young man who was totally blind. He had been able to see until his seventeenth year, when cataracts began to form over his eyes. Gradually his sight left him and by the time he was twenty he could not see at all. He was twenty-three when he married, and being frugal, a total abstainer from liquor and tobacco, he managed, in spite of his affliction, to make a living. He acquired some land which subsequently proved to be rich in oil. This he sold for a large sum and retired with a competence to enjoy life. Eleven children were born, ten of whom survive. They grew up and married and reared families, but he had never seen their faces. The possibility of a recovery of sight was at last given to the old man. A skillful occulist operated on the darkened eyeballs and then, for the first time in many a long year, the man saw. His first sight of his wife and children and grandchildren was a strange experience. He knew their voices but had never seen their faces. He gathered them all around him recently to celebrate his golden wedding. Few men, if any, have ever had such an experience, but there are many who, looking back to their conversion, can realize something of what he felt. When spiritual light breaks on the dark soul, a new love for all men, especially for other members of the household of faith, springs up, and men who were strangers before, are recognized as brothers in the Lord.

To open their eyes and to turn them from darkness to light, that they may receive inheritance among them who are sanctified (Acts 26:18).

A Peculiar Divorce

A remarkable divorce suit has been commenced in the courts of St. Louis, Mo. It is brought by the husband against his wife whom he married at her home in Connecticut. They went to live at the bridegroom's home in St. Louis, but, as he says in his affidavit, his wife "became unutterably and uncontrollably homesick and refused to be comforted." She begged piteously to go home to her family and he finally consented to her return for a brief visit, but as she has written to him declaring that she will never come back to live with him, he has decided to apply for a divorce. He declares that he loves her ardently and would do all in his power to make her happy, but he is fully convinced that she would never be content to live away from her former home. As the wife does not oppose the divorce, it must be inferred that his statement is true. It is a pity that the marriage should ever have taken place. The husband would have saved himself from trouble and chagrin if he had ascertained beforehand whether the girl loved him well enough to leave all her old associations for his sake. In that spiritual marriage to which Christ invites us, that stipulation is explicitly made:

He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me (Matt. 10:37).

Infection in Books

A press dispatch from Albany, N. Y., reports that a warning has been sent to the State Board of Health from Michigan based on a remarkable fatality which has occurred in that State. It appears that the Michigan Board of Health ordered some time ago, the preparation of some statistical tables. This work involved the examination of some old books of records in order to secure the necessary data. Time and again the work was begun but was suspended owing to the illness of the clerk who undertook it. One clerk after another began the work only to fall ill in a short time. Several healthy clerks were employed, but all succumbed and some of them have since died. The disease in all cases was consumption. The singular coincidence led to an investigation. It was learned that the old record was prepared by a consumptive clerk, who had the habit of moistening his fingers with his tongue whenever he turned the leaves of his book. The pages were submitted to a bacteriologist, who pronounced them alive with tubercular bacilli. There was no doubt that the clerks had thus become infected with the disease from handling the consumptive's books. A similar case is reported from Hanover, Germany, and the facts elicited are stated by the Michigan Board in its report as a warning to other public bodies. It is well that such a warning be given. The fact that these deadly bacilli may be inadvertently deposited on the pages of a book, and may infect some one else at a later day, ought to be widely known, so that people may be put on their guard against the danger. But the number of books which may cause their readers to contract the deadly malady is small compared with the number of those which convey moral disease. Against this danger it is important that all readers be warned, for it may cause them to lose their souls. Some of the books issued in our day are so pernicious that their owners might consult their spiritual safety by following the example of the Ephesians:

Many of them brought their books together and burned them before all men (Acts 19:19).

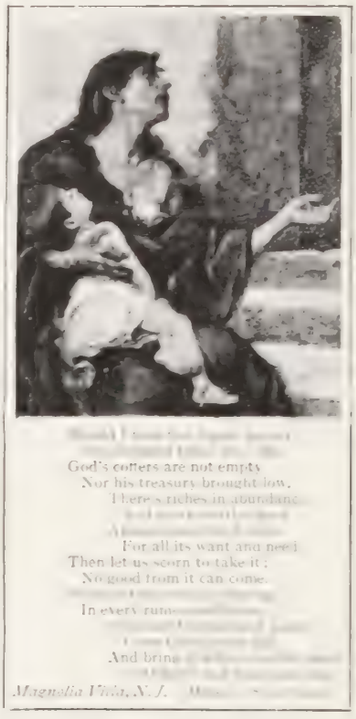
PANORAMA OF CONSPICUOUS BUILDINGS IN THE DOWNTOWN SECTION OF NEW YORK CITY, PHOTOGRAPHED FROM A HEIGHT OF 306 FEET

Shall the Church Accept the Saloon-Keeper's Gift?

The Great Controversy which is Now Agitating Our Churches . . .

. . . Both Sides of the Question Heard . . . Through Eloquent Advocates

THE great controversy on the question, "Shall the Church accept the Saloon-keeper's contributions for its spiritual work?" which began in these pages several weeks ago, is now at its height. In the letters published below both sides to the controversy are fairly represented. The discussion, which promises to continue for some time to come, will at its close be submitted to the judgment of a jury of eminent Christian men and women for final decision.



God's coffers are not empty
Nor his treasury brought low,
There's riches in abundance
For all its want and need
Then let us scorn to take it;
No good from it can come.
In every rum
And bring

Magnolia Villa, N. J.

Dedicate it to the Lord's Work The saloon-keepers are asking, "Where is the consistency of church members who, by their ballots, make the selling of liquor in saloons a legal business, then refuse to accept our contributions because our business has contaminated the money?" I believe the saloon is the greatest curse the world has at the present time. But if saloon-keepers have a desire to contribute of their means for spiritual purposes, I say, by all means accept it, and with clean hands and a pure heart dedicate it to the Lord, praying that His blessing may attend it wherever it goes. The great sin lies back of all this by legalizing the saloon. MRS. J. S. HUNT.
Erie, Pa.

A Pastor who Refused Saloon Gifts The writer knows one minister who humbly believes he was led of the Holy Spirit upon one occasion to return $146.65, being money paid on salary and the missions of the church by members running drug stores used as saloons, or renting their property for drug stores where liquor was sold illicitly, or doing a Sunday desecrating business. God used his decisive action to revolutionize the business conduct of one drug store with reference to the sale of liquor as a beverage. This minister never receives a direct gift from the liquor traffic for church work, and thus maintains a clear conscience and a clean record.
[illegible] REV. [illegible]

Saloons That Helped a Sunday School The Sunday School of which I am a member, for a number of years on Children's Day made a contribution to the Sunday School mission fund, generally amounting to from two to four dollars. Finally a lady member of the church and Sunday School, who was a strong, unflinching advocate of temperance, an active, earnest Christian worker, took hold of the work, and visited the saloon-keepers, who gave cheerfully each year. She asked them, and thus raised that contribution to twenty odd dollars, and only one person objected. Now, if that money assisted in establishing Sunday Schools in waste places, and thus spreading the Gospel of Christ, where does the wrong come in? Is it not rather causing the wrath of men to serve and praise Him?
Lawrenceburg, Ind. W. H. BAINBRIDGE.

The Man's Soul the Issue, Not the Money I cannot believe the money has anything to do with the man. Suppose, while the discussion is going on, the saloon keeper should become converted. The man changes, but the money remains the same. Therefore, if the money made while a saloon keeper, is tainted, as some think, it would always remain the same, and the only way he could contribute after his conversion would be to make money from another source for church purposes.
Belfast, Pa. E. J. HENZ.

Old Granny and the Loaf Some years ago, up in what New Yorkers call "Shantytown," there lived alone in a tumble-down shanty a poor old widow, who earned her living by washing for her better-off neighbors. Year by year the shanties, one by one, were torn away to make room for larger buildings, until "old Granny," as the children called her, was left alone, with only a few neighbors around her. Her work, as her neighbors grew less, was taken from her, and many a day poor "old Granny" went hungry. She was a true Christian, and never for a moment doubted that God would not take care of her. So one day, as she was kneeling in prayer, two young boys, hearing her voice outside the shanty, wondered who "old Granny" was talking with. They went and peeped in the window, saw "Granny" kneeling, and heard her say, "Father, give us this day our daily bread." "Oh, Harry," says George, "she's praying for bread, so let's have some fun. I have two pennies and you one, so run down to the store and get a loaf, then I will let it down the chimney on a string; then we will see what she says." Of course Harry hurried to the store and returned with the bread, so George climbed on the roof and silently let it down the chimney. "Old Granny" was still kneeling in prayer, and when she saw the bread dangling in the fireplace, she slowly rose, got the knife, cut the string, and laid the bread down on the bare table. She then knelt again in thanks to the Lord for his goodness. The boys, who had hurried to the window to see "the fun," heard "old Granny" thank the Lord "for sending the bread," thought their joke complete, into the shanty, laughing, and as "old Granny" got up from the floor, told her how they had fooled her. "Granny" first looked at the boys, then at the bread on the table, then she slowly answered: "Well, if the devil did bring it, I know the Lord sent it."

Now, I wonder how many of us are able to say that "old Granny's" theory was not correct? I know there are many who do not think as others do; but when we, as true children of one God, get down on our knees and pray for funds to carry on Christ's work, are we authorized to say which is acceptable and which is not?
Philadelphia, Pa. W. H. THOMPSON.

A Trade that Ruins Souls In accepting the money we encourage a trade that has ruined, is ruining, and will ruin countless precious souls as long as it is allowed to exist. I do not believe that churches supported by money obtained by ruining lives can prosper.
Bath, N. Y. CAROLINE FAULKNER.

A Temperance Woman's View While discussing whether saloon money should be received and paid for church purposes, I would say, I am strictly a temperance woman, and do not believe in the sale of intoxicants, but their money, in my opinion, is as good as any. I do not know why it might not be used as well as money paid by those who have occupied positions as deacons and Sabbath School teachers, when their money has been obtained by wronging the widow and orphan.
Mexico, N. Y. MARY A. BISSELL.

Decide the Question by Prayer I would suggest that we let this matter rest with God as to whether or not it is right to receive money from the saloon-keeper for church purposes, and I would further suggest that all Christians offer up an earnest prayer for this particular saloon-keeper's soul. Remember, Jesus died for sinners, and he teaches us to love our enemies. Some of our greatest workers are sometimes rescued from Satan's strongest forts.
Bayard, Mo. READER.

Can the Church Refuse It? A church should not ask anyone for money, at least outside of its membership. The Bible teaches that Christians should give of their means as they have been prospered, and as a freewill offering. When an offering is laid on God's altar the Church cannot refuse to use it. They should not judge. There are church members who make money by oppressing the widow and orphan. Should we accept their money more readily than the saloon-keepers'? I do not think a saloon-keeper will be seen very often going into a spiritual church to give money.
Aurora, Ill. G. C. HOWE.

The Gift is Blood Money. God says, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver," and "he that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth unto the Lord." Knowing the opposition of the Church of Christ to the soul- and body-destroying agency, the [illegible] stroy that business? Second, knowing that the mission of the Church, among other things, is to benefit the poor, and admitting (as [illegible] hostile to all the interests and welfare of the poor, saloon-keeper choose the better method of assist[illegible] honorable in the sight of God, and then aid the poor by giving, in the true spirit, of his substance? I cannot conceive of any pure motive on his part in offering to Christ's Church a portion of his ill-gotten means. Do not accept any of his blood money until he has surrendered himself and his means into the Lord's hands.
Va. MRS. J. G. TAYLOR.

A Saloon Gift that Was Rejected [illegible] paired. The financial resources were limited, $1,700 was a very heavy burden. The new[illegible] ing property which was leased for a saloon, offered to put in a memorial window. Other donors were connected, so that to decline the gift of the saloon-owner would be a loss of $250 promised. The pastor kindly but firmly declined and alienated the whole amount. The church stood together. Outside sentiment sustained the decision and $760 was given in a few days for the window. That pastor believes that God sanctioned the decision. But he does not want any other pastor to go through such an experience to get the belief. If the illegal saloon-keeper, or any other sinner, will come to my church and let me faithfully preach to him, I will let him pay for his seat or give to current expenses, but I draw the line at a permanent memorial and decline a gift which will perpetuate his name as a benefactor of the Church.
Concord, N. H. REV. I. H. ROBBINS.

A Saloon-keeper who Built a Church The magnificent church I now regularly attend [illegible] occupying a one-story structure. Time developed the town, and incidentally increased considerably the members of the mission, whose structure became very inadequate. Suggestions were made to the effect that they purchase the ground and build a larger structure. How to obtain money to commence operations was the question. One evening, after service, and after the most influential members had offered plans, an old man, never seen there before, respectfully requested the privilege of suggesting a plan. He desired to know the lowest estimate for a suitable place of worship, and being informed, offered to contribute the entire amount on condition that they would not desire to know who he was, which condition they all gladly accepted. Years afterward we were told who he was, and that his business was selling strong drink. In this you will perceive why I suggest acceptation of all contributions.
Philadelphia, Pa. LYDIA JOHNSON.

Take It and Pray With the Giver Suppose the wife and the daughters of the saloon-keeper are members of your church (and they are supported by the saloon), would you refuse their contributions and give them a free pass to heaven, or deny them the blessings of the Church? No; take their offerings and that of the saloon-keeper, and talk and pray with him until he will not only give his money, but himself to God.
Lowell, Mass. A. A. FOSTER.

A Compromise With the Devil [illegible] because their c[illegible] yet if they were anxious to do good would [illegible] entirely clear of any questionable thing is to "Abstain from all appearance of evil." The Church can get along without it, and when it becomes necessary to accept money acquired in an unjust way, knowing it to be so, then she [illegible] ter quit business.
Wilkesbarre, Pa. BYRON C. ALLEN.

The Quaker and the Privateer A certain man, in 1812, owed well known. The debtor had been engaged on board a privateer. Bringing a crony with him as a witness, they called upon the Quaker, by appointment, to liquidate the debt, and as he paid over the amount, remarked that the money had been gained by helping to capture a British vessel upon the high seas, supposing that the conscience of the Quaker would forbid his acceptance of money thus obtained, and having an eyewitness to the legal tender of the money, in case of refusal, he would be released from payment. The Quaker counted the gold carefully, and after locking it in his safe looked complacently at the sailor, remark[illegible] must answer for it." Is not the principle involved in the present controversy identically [illegible]
Narberth, Pa. SYLVESTER J. BAKER.

Would a Barrel of Whiskey be Accepted? Suppose the saloon-keeper should offer a barrel of whiskey. The [illegible] that any church [illegible] is-key.
Cedargrove, Va. J. THEODORE FRIES.

In the Category of Judas The first instance of money accursed in the Christian era was Judas' money when he sold Christ to the priests; and that money even the priests themselves rejected, and it was thrown on the floor, not even allowed to be returned to the Lord's treasury. The saloon-keeper is in the same category—selling Christ. All the money that goes into his till from the sale of intoxicants becomes accursed, and it cannot be returned to the Lord's treasury without bringing its curse with it. The church cannot preach one thing and practise another. If the church militant is to represent heaven on earth (and I believe it should), it has no right to accept or use anything—money or other consideration—coming from a questionable source. Let all the churches follow the admonition of the Bible, given in I. Thess. 5:22: "Abstain from all appearance of evil." Do not accept any money from any wrong source knowingly, nor use it.
Middleburg, Fla. REV. G. R. FRISBEE.

The Saloon is Legal; Take the Gift Yes, by all means take [illegible] keeper for church put[illegible] The people, by their votes, have created and uphold it. The churches hold the balance of ballot power. They can and will crush the saloon power if they consider it an evil. They do not crush it; therefore they consider it worthy and approve it. This makes the saloon a church institution and the saloon-keeper an agent of the church. As the saloon could have no existence without the vote of the church it should pay a very liberal share toward the support of the church and the church should accept the money.
Lodi, Wis. S. W. MERRICK.

Use It for Saving Souls Take it. It might save his soul and thousands of other saloon-[illegible] Take it, for there are thousands of little waifs that might be benefited by it. Take it, for there are thousands of heathen over yonder who would gladly accept the Bread of Life it would buy for them. Take it, and throw it out as a life-line to those lost souls that are [illegible] this world.
[illegible] J. D. [illegible]

..Everyday Heroism..

BY MARY LOWE DICKINSON

HEROISM is a thing that hardly needs a definition in words. The best, indeed, the only sure way to know it is to live it, but we can only live out a grand characteristic, like faith or courage or truthfulness, one moment at a time. That is the true process, but it is a slow one, and we do not like to wait to see things grow, either in other people or in ourselves. Yet true heroism is worth knowing wherever we find it. People unacquainted with the real thing experimentally, are apt to confound it with a very cheap imitation that might be called heroics. Yet the two are as unlike as are a silver dollar and a tin one.

GENUINE heroism is always the same thing, though it finds various modes of expression. That wife and mother, Polly McGrail Sampson, who, in order to feed her baby and to care for her sick husband, dared to take a loom in the Paterson mill after the union weavers went on strike, has proved that she knows the difference between heroism and heroics. It meant pluck to dare to take the place, and more to dare to keep it, in the face of personal violence and insult, and letters that threatened her life.

Passing to and fro to her task, abuse and muttered curses were her greetings by the way. Yet she had the courage to go on. Harder test still, she carried all day while at her work the uncertainty as to what might happen in her absence to the helpless ones at home. Yet she had the courage to stay. When they threatened to burn her home, she moved her family to her mother's house. When a delegation of strikers called on her and offered a large sum to leave her work, she had the courage to refuse.

And all this, apparently, without consciousness of special heroism, but with a modesty that does not understand why outside people should write to her and send her encouragement and gifts. On this point she is quoted as saying:

"I can't understand why everybody is so good to me. I haven't done anything to deserve it. All I've done is to try to earn a living and to hold my job. I've succeeded so far, and I intend to keep right at it, so long as I have health and strength. While I have these and a job, I don't need to have folks give me money; but it is pleasant to know, when you've got a hard load to pull, that folks are ready to give you a boost. I can't thank people as I should; I don't know how. But I know how to appreciate kindness, and I can say a good word for them when I say my prayers, just like I do for my man and my baby. That's the best I know how to do."

We know well that instances of heroism like this are only types. The same spirit is astir in many a soul that has not yet found the deed that shall reveal itself to other souls.

* * *

A FEW DAYS ago there was unveiled a monument that had been placed by patriotic women on the grave of Reubena Walworth, a heroine of our war with Spain. For women to rear a monument to her was most beautiful and fitting, but a memorial that could never crumble was reared to her long ago in the hearts of the brave boys she nursed back to life, and in the hearts of the many mothers whose sons she tried in vain to save. Writing of her, one who knew her well said:

"Miss Walworth was a mother-girl, living close to the heart and sharing the life of her mother at an age when girls are apt to care chiefly for the companionship and pleasures of youth. She was a student and an artist, with a nature singularly open to the changing beauty of earth, responsive to the highest in literature and art, yet her heart sprang ever to comfort human suffering. After her first glimpse of its awful reality, as seen in hospital and camp, she put herself at once under training for nurse's duty, and, when at Camp Wikoff, in the helplessness and horror of the first struggles to care for the countless sick, an officer said to her mother: 'We have six hundred men out there in the detention hospital, who need suitable food, ice, nurses—in fact, who need everything,' the girl at once said: 'I am ready to go.'

"'But there is not a woman there, and no other woman to go with you,' urged her mother. 'It cannot be your duty to put yourself in such danger.'

"'It is because there is no other, because the need is so great, that I wish to be there,' she answered. 'I am sure it is my place.'"

* * *

FROM that hour began a patient ministry that never after faltered. She went, realizing that to be shut in with sick and dying was to be shut out from friends and visitors, and even from the sight of her mother's face. Yet she entered upon her work with a spirit so brave and a face so bright that her presence was a benediction at every bedside, and her voice was the only comfort of many a dying boy. And when the contagious ward filled up and there were no volunteer nurses, she again offered to go, and went alone where it meant isolation and danger and possible death. And there she stayed, while a few wasted creatures crept back to life and home, and many more passed away with their dying eyes fixed on her patient face. Through all that dread experience no one ever heard her utter one word that showed a shrinking from her task. When it was over and the "boys" mostly gone away to their homes or to the grave, and the fever began to burn its fiery way into her own life, she owned that she "was tired," but said she only "needed rest."

THE LATE REUBENA WALWORTH

And when the rest came by the awful road of fever, delirium and thirst, those who loved her best thought to have a quiet funeral in the old family home. But the army was proud to do her honor. The church was decorated as for their soldier dead; and, with soldiers as her escort, to the sound of martial music, they placed her under the drooping flags of her country. They gave her the burial honors that belong to heroes, and crowned her memory with the victor's crown.

* * *

TO FEW of us are given great deeds like this to do, yet everywhere the daily common life is full of heroism. Too many of us need to get into a way of seeking for the best things in others' lives. We are all quick enough to detect the evil things, but we should get new strength to battle with the evil by searching out the world diligently for the good. Out of the millions of readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD think, for example, what an army could be gathered of brave souls living out such heroism as has rarely found a chronicler. They are everywhere, fighting loneliness, and poverty, and sickness; in the lodging-houses and boarding houses of great cities, in the stagnation of the dreary country, toiling and suffering that others may suffer less—silent, out of sight, seemingly of small account to God or man.

That we may have our eyes opened to the good, we ask all readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD who know or have seen real acts of heroism in daily life to send brief accounts thereof to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, marked "Everyday." Do not copy them out of books, but you may send in addition the names of five living persons whose lives and deeds you consider the most heroic that you have ever known. Send soon, that we may have time to compare lists, and so to find out who are the real heroes and heroines of our own later everyday life.

Trifling with Mercy

JOHN BOARDAN hated all Christians and everything good. He disliked to see people go to churches on Sunday. It annoyed him, and he tried to express his disgust and contempt for them whenever it was possible for him to do so. At times he would work about his house on Sundays, as openly as he dared to in defiance of the laws of the town in which he lived. He would time himself, so as to be very much in evidence about church time. The church-goers would have to see him and feel offended at his actions. Again he would sit in front of his residence and mock and ridicule those whom he knew.

One morning the residents of the place awoke to the dread fact that the Asiatic cholera, that plague of all plagues, had come to their homes. The daily papers contained flaming headlines, reporting the spread of the disease and the names of its victims, and at last the dead could hardly be properly interred, nor the sick suitably attended to.

It was while the scourge was at its worst that John felt its touch and became a changed person. The scowl and frown faded from his face, the blasphemy died on his lips. In their places came the ghastly pallor and the moans and groans of the sick. There was something more than simple physical suffering that caused this change in John. He suddenly realized that he was a very wicked person; that he had led a bad life. His relatives inquired if he did not wish for spiritual advice, and to their great surprise he was very anxious to get it. John implored God Almighty to give him another chance in life, that he might be a different man and yet live a Christian life. He promised to join the little church and do what he could for the Lord's cause.

To the amazement of all, he grew better. The disease left him and once more he became well and strong. As soon, however, as he realized that he was out of danger, the great anxiety for reform left him. When he was finally restored to health, he was also cured of his good intentions. Not only did he mock his religious friends, but he jested about his own anxiety for his soul, calling it "down-right foolishness, caused by the weakness due to sickness," etc.

After one such outburst of vilifying remarks, he felt a strange feeling pervading his system, and before long he was in the throes of another attack of the cholera. Again John's religious friends were sent for in a hurry. This time, however, it was against his will. "Do not send for them," he cried, "they can do me no good." "Go home! go away!" he shrieked when they came; "let me alone. It is too late for repentance. I am going to die and I am lost." All attempts at persuasion proved unavailing, and John's unrepentant spirit passed away. He had trifled with God's mercy. Truly, God will not be mocked.

Washington, D. C. W. A. NESTLER.

"He That is Warm Thinks All So."

Thousands are "cold" in that they do not understand the glow of health. This implies disordered kidneys, liver, bowels, blood or brain. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes "warm" because it gives all who take it perfect health.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla

Although we supply seeds direct every year to many more planters than do any other seedsmen, there are thousands who have not yet learned the satisfaction of having a garden planted with

Burpee's Best
"Seeds That Grow"

To make acquaintance, we shall be pleased to send you, in response to a postal card application, "The Leading American Seed Catalogue for 1900." Simply address

W. Atlee Burpee & Co.
PHILADELPHIA

WE SAVE HALF YOUR MONEY ON
VIOLINS, GUITARS, MANDOLINS, BANJOS ETC.
GET OUR BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE IT'S FREE WRITE TO DAY
SYNDICATE MUSICAL INSTRUMENT Co
356 FULTON ST BROOKLYN, N.Y.
IN BUSINESS 20 YEARS

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS
OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS.
SCHOOL FURNITURE WORKS
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

MONUMENTS
DON'T buy marble or granite till you have seen WHITE BRONZE
More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Color greatly improved. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.
NO MOSS GROWING. CLEANING NO CRUMBLING CRACKING.
THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.,
70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn

ENTERTAINMENTS
For CHURCHES and SUNDAY SCHOOLS
Finest Magic Lanterns, Stereopticons
all prices. Illustrated catalogue free.
McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 19 Nassau St., New York

Sewing Machines $5 and Up.
Quality first class, 20 Year
First Class new Piano
Sent subject to approval.
This Company is perfectly reliable. Address
BROWN-LEWIS CO., Dept. 15, Chicago, U. S. A.

We furnish samples
RICHARDSON MFG. CO

Around the World with Aunt Samantha

Continued from page 941

one of her suitors had such a melodious voice. he wuz fairly singing his way into her heart, she is so passionately fond of music: and I confided my fears to Robert. and he immediately responded. dear boy. He just practised self-denial again, and commenced singing with her himself, and his sweet. clear tenor voice entirely drowned out the deep basso I had feared. Of course. Robert did it to please me and from principle. I taught him early self-denial and the pleasures of martyrdom. Of course, I never expected that he would carry my teachings to such an extent as he has in his business life. I did not mean it to be more what the Bible calls 'the workings of the spirit.' But he will doubtless feel different as he gets older. And. oh, he is such a help to me with Dorothy. Now. on this trip he knows my fears. and how sedulously I have guarded Dorothy from the tender passion, and it wuz just like him to put his own desires in the background and go with us to help protect her."

"How did you git such dretful fears of marriage?" sez I. "Men are tryin' lots of times. and it takes considerable religion to git along with one without jawin' more or less. But. after all. Id'no what I should do without my pardner—I think the world on him. and have loved to think that I could put out my hand any time and be stayed and comforted by his presence. I should feel dretful lost and wobblin' without him." sez I, with a deep sithe. "though I well know his sects shortcomin's. But I never felt towards 'em as you do. even in my most maddest times. when Josiah had been the tryinest and most provokinest."

"Well," sez she. "my father spent all my mother's money on horse-racin', save a few thousand which he had invested for her. and she felt wuz safe, but he took that to run away with a bally girl. and squandered it all on her and died on the town. My eldest sister's husband beat her with a poker, and throwed her out of a three-story front in San Francisco. and she landin' on a syringea tree wuz saved to git a divorce from him and also from her second and third husbands for cruelty, after which she gave up matrimony and opened a boarding-house. bitter in spirit, but a good calculator. I lived with her when a young girl. and imbibed her dislike for matrimony. which wuz helped further by sad experiences of my own, which is needless to particularize. (I hearn afterwards that she had three disappointments runnin', bein' humbly and poor in purse).

"And now." sez she, "I am as well grounded against matrimony as any woman can be, and my whole energies are aimed on teaching Dorothy the same belief I hold."

"Well." sez I, "your folks have suffered dretful from men and I don't wonder you feel as you do. But what I am a goin' to do to be seperated from my husband durin' this voyage is more than I can tell." And I groaned a deep holler groan.

"Why, I haven't told you half." sez she. "All of my sisters but one had trouble with their husbands. Robert's step-ma wuz the only one who had a good husband, but he died before they'd been married a year. and she follered him in six months, leaving twins. who died also, and I took Robert. to whom I had got attached. to the boarding-house. and took care on him until he wuz sent away to school and college. His pa left plenty of money," sez she. "and a big fortune when he came of age. which he has spent in the foolish way I have told you of. or a great part of it."

Well. at this juncture we wuz interrupted. and didn't resoom the conversation until some days afterwards. though I wuz dretfully interested in the big manufactory of Robert Strong's. that big coworking scheme. (I had hearn Thomas J. commend it warmly).

At last the day come for me to start. I waked up feelin' a strange weight on my heart. I had dremp Philury had sot the soap stun on my chest. But no soap stun wuz ever so hard and heavy as my grief. Josiah and I wuz to be parted! Could it be so? Could I live through it? He wuz out in the wood-house kitchen pretendin' to file a saw. File a saw before breakfast! He took that gratin' job to hide his groans: he wuz weepin': his red eyes betrayed him. Philury got a good breakfast which we couldn't eat. My trunk wuz packed and in the democrat. The neighborin' wimmen brung me warm good-byes and bokays offen their house plants, and sister Sypher sent me some woosted flowers. which I left to home, and some caraway seed to nibble on my tower which I took.

She that wuz Arvilly Lanfeare brought me a bottle of bam made out of the bark of the bam of Gilead tree. to use in case I should get bruised or smashed on the train, and also two pig's bladders blowed up, which she wanted me to wear constant on the water to help me float. She had painted on one of 'em the Jonesville meetin'-house. thinkin', I spoze. the steeple might bring lofty thoughts to me in hurrycains or cyclones. And on the other one she had painted in big letters the title of the book she is agent for—The Twin Crimes of America: Intemperance and Greed! I thought it wuz real cunning in Arvilly to combine so beautifully kindness and business. There is so much in advertising. They looked real well. but I didn't see how I wuz goin' to wear 'em over my bask waist. Arvilly said she wanted to go with me the worst kind. Says she:

"I hain't felt so much like goin' anywhere sense I deserted." (Arvilly did enlist in the Cuban army. and deserted. and they couldn't touch her for it—of which more anon.)

And I sez to her: "I wish you could go. Arvilly: I believe it would do you good after what you have went through."

Well. the last minute come and Ury took us to the train. Josiah went with me. but he couldn't have driv no more than a mournin' weed could.

I parted with the children. and—oh! it wuz a hard wrench on my heart to part with Thomas J.: took pale little Tommy in my arms. like pullin' out his pa's heart-strings—and his ma's. too—and at last the deepo wuz reached.

As we went in we see old Miss Burpy from 'way back of Loontown. She wuz never on the cars before. or see 'em. but she wuz sent for by her oldest boy who lives in the city.

She was settin' in a big rocken'-chair rocken voyolently. and as I went past her she says:

"Have we got to New York yet?"

"Why," sez I "We haint started."

She sez, "I thought I wuz in the convenience now a-travelin'."

"Oh no," I sez, "the conveyance haint come yet, you will heer it screechin' along pretty soon."

Anon we hearn the train thunderin' towards us. I parted with Tirzah Ann and Whitfield, havin' shook hands with Ury before. and all others being parted from. I had to, yes. I had to. bid my beloved pardner adoo. And with a almost breakin' heart clum into the car. Miss Meechim and Dorothy and Aronette having preceeded me before hand. Yes. I left my own Josiah behind me, with his bandanna pressed to his eyes.

Could I leave him? At the last minute I leaned out of the car winder and sez with a choken voice:

"Josiah. if we never meet again on Jonesville sile, remember there is a place where partin's and steam engines are no more."

His face wuz covered with his bandanna. from whence issued deep groans, and I felt I must be calm to boy him up. and I sez:

"Be sure. Josiah, to keep your feet dry. take your cough medicine reglar, go to meetin' stiddy, keep the pumps from freezin'. and may God bless you." sez I.

And then again I busted into tears. The hard-hearted engine snorted and puffed. and we wuz off.

(To be Continued)

"In union there is strength." True strength of the human organism cannot be obtained if the blood is impure. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the stand-

To Achieve Your Aim in Life, Read

SUCCESS

The Most Helpful and Inspiring Family Journal in the World.

1,500 Pictures—1,000 Large Pages Yearly

SUCCESS Points the Way to Victory in Life; Shows how to make Stepping-stones of Obstacles. How to Win Without Heavy Things. How to Be Worth More to Yourself, to Your Family, and to Your Business. It is a [illegible] ambition; a Wise Counselor to Parents, and an Invaluable Companion to their Sons and Daughters. Whatever your Age, Sex or Occupation, SUCCESS is the Paper you Most Need. Better, by far, Leave Unread all Other Periodicals rather than miss reading SUCCESS. It may Make all the Difference in your Life between success and Failure. 52 Times a Year. $1.50 per Annum.

Admiral Dewey says: "Success is a GREAT paper for all striving for success."
Admiral Schley says: "Success is the BEST publication I have ever seen."
Dr. Withrow says: "Success is the MOST USEFUL periodical in the world."

Specimen Copies Free!

SUCCESS so Commends Itself to Intelligent Readers, especially to Parents and their Sons and Daughters, that we Desire to Send Specimen Copies to Every Probable Subscriber. Once You Have Examined this Magnificent Weekly Magazine, you Will Surely Subscribe. Send us your Address, and if Convenient, Names of a Few Others who would Appreciate the Most Helpful and Inspiring Publication in the World.

SPECIAL OFFER—ACT QUICKLY.

We are willing to make a big sacrifice now to induce you to send to-day a trial subscription to SUCCESS, for we know that it is just the paper you need, and once a subscriber, always a subscriber. Therefore, if you will send us $1.50 at once (and 25 cents extra for shipping expenses on the book), you will receive SUCCESS every week from now to January 1, 1901, including this year's splendid Thanksgiving and Christmas numbers, and Dr. Orison Swett Marden, Editor of SUCCESS, will send you free, all charges prepaid, a copy of his famous book, "Pushing to the Front" (containing 416 large pages, elegantly bound in cloth), with his autograph inscribed on the fly-leaf, if so desired. The price of this book alone is $1.50 a copy. Your money refunded if not more than satisfied.

☞ This special offer is good only to those who answer this advertisement quickly. ☜

Club-Raisers Wanted

EVERYWHERE, to whom we give extraordinary rewards—choice of thousands of premiums, anything anyone may want. By special arrangements, we can give them anything in John Wanamaker's Mammoth New York Store FREE as premiums for SUCCESS Clubs. Everyone can have a chance to get his or her

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS FREE!

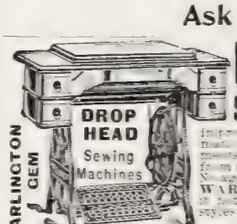
Send for Free Sample Copies, Premium List, and Full Particulars. Address

THE SUCCESS CO., 6 to 28 Cooper Union, New York City.

GOLD DUST

The Best Washing Powder.

Ask Your Laundress to Try It.



NO ADVANCE IN PRICES

$15.50 IN SPITE OF RECENT ADVANCES IN RAW MATERIAL.

We buy our beautiful latest model Arlington Gem Drop Head Sewing Machine [illegible] and sell it to you [illegible] improvements, such as Self Threading Vibrating Shuttle, Self Setting Needle, Automatic Bobbin Winder, etc.; adapted to ordinary family use, [illegible] guaranteed twenty years. [illegible] from factory at wholesale prices [illegible] from retail in your own home. No agents' or dealers' profits to pay. A positive saving of [illegible]

WARRANTED 20 YEARS. Money promptly refunded if not found as represented. We have over 50 different styles and sizes of sewing machines at prices ranging as low as $8.50

A Good High Arm Machine at $9.75.

Our New Ball Bearing Kenwood Sewing Machines are the easiest running machines on earth. A child can operate them. A $65.00 Kenwood, with decorated wood work, piano finish, $22.00. A $55.00 Ball Bearing Arlington, $19.00. 50 CENTS DISCOUNT ALLOWED ON ALL MACHINES FOR CASH WITH ORDER. As to our reliability we refer by permission to the First National Bank of Chicago or any other Chicago Bank, and to any Express Company doing business in Chicago. Write at once for our Large Illustrated Catalogue and Special Offer.

Address, CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 W. VanBuren St., Dept. B-18, CHICAGO, ILL.

SILK REMNANTS for CRAZY WORK

A large package of beautiful Silk Remnants, from [illegible] pieces of [illegible] [illegible] large enough for [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

GAME IS MANY TIMES TOO "GAMY" TO GIVE THE NICEST
TASTE TO ALL GAME USE
LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE
The Original & Genuine Worcestershire
IF YOUR GROCER ATTEMPTS TO SUBSTITUTE AN IMITATION
SEND IT BACK NONE SO GOOD.
John Duncan's Sons, Agents,
NEW YORK

Reversible
LINENE Collars and Cuffs.
Stylish, convenient, economical. Made of fine cloth, finished in pure starch, and exactly resemble fashionable linen goods.

No Laundry Work
When soiled discard.
Ten Collars or five pairs of Cuffs, 25cts.
By mail, 30cts. Send 6 cts. in stamps for sample collar or pair of cuffs. Name size and style.
REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. S, Boston, Mass.
RUBENS DANTE TASSO MURILLO ANGELO RAPHAEL

30 INCHES HIGH

ONE CENT
for each hour and a
TUXEDO Oil Heater
$4.50 FREIGHT PAID
will make your "cold room" a warm room. No bother, no muss, no smell, no smoke. If your dealer doesn't keep it, sent us $4.50 and we will send you one freight paid. Illus. Lamp Catalogue, 150 designs, sent free on application.
$4.50
HOLMES, BOOTH & HAYDENS,
37 Park Place, NEW YORK
Tuxedo Oil Heater
FACTORY: Waterbury Conn. Established 1853.

70 HOUSE PLANS FOR $1!

If you are thinking about building, don't fail to get the new book, Palliser's American Architecture, containing 104 pages, 11 by 14 inches in size, consisting of large 9 by 12 plate pages, giving plans, elevations, perspective views, descriptions, actual cost of construction no guess work, and instructions how to build 70 Cottages, Villas, Double Houses, Brick Block Houses, suitable for city, suburb, town and country, costing from $300 to $6,500, together with specifications and form of contract. Sent in paper cover, by mail, postpaid, on receipt of $1.
400 Recitations and Readings. We will send to any address on receipt of 35 cents, a handsome book bound in paper cover, and containing 400 of the best recitations ever issued. Address all orders to J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 57 Rose St., New York.

Church Hymns
and Gospel Songs
Adopted by Mr. Moody's Northfield Conferences, Ocean Grove Association, and other prominent assemblies this season.
Contains 367 of the Choicest Standard Hymns and Gospel Songs. It is the best Prayer and Revival Meeting Hymn Book published. Board covers, $25 per 100. Sample copy, post free, 20 cents.
Send for list of Phonograph Records of Gospel Songs made by Ira D. Sankey.
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

SELF-SEALING PIE TIN
has a crimped rim which holds both crusts firmly together and prevents the rich juices from escaping. It is so constructed that the crust will always bake crisp and brown. Sample sent on receipt of retail price, 25c. We are the largest manufacturers of Pure Aluminum, Scotch Granite and TinWare in the world. AGENTS, write how to get this and four of our other best selling household novelties. —Outfit worth $2 00 FREE. All goods guaranteed to give satisfaction. Address Dept. T
HOUSEHOLD NOVELTY WORKS, 25 Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

...IN HIS STEPS...
By Charles M. Sheldon. We will send this wonderful book, bound in paper cover for 15 cents each or $1.50 per dozen; bound in cloth, 35 cents per copy. Address J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 55 Rose St., New York.

$18.00 a Week and expenses to good parties to travel. No canvassing. Permanent position. Also local workers and managers can find profitable employment for part time. Give references. R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore.

How My Grandfather Saw General . . Washington

O noble brow, so wise in thought!
O heart, so true! O soul unbought!
O eye, so keen to pierce the night
And guide the "ship of state" aright!
O life, so simple, grand and free,
The humblest still may turn to thee.
O king, uncrowned! O prince of men!
When shall we see thy like again?

The century, just passed away,
Has felt the impress of thy sway,
While youthful hearts have stronger grown
And made thy patriot zeal their own.
In marble hall or lowly cot,
Thy name hath never been forgot.
The world itself is richer, far,
For the clear shining of a star.
And loyal hearts in years to run
Shall turn to thee, O Washington.

* * *

ALL nations, even savage tribes, have their heroes, and we, as Americans, are especially rich in having had great and good men for our leaders. Their names are not only written on the historic page, but are very deeply engraven on the hearts of their countrymen. Foremost among these will ever stand the name of the Father of his Country.

Yet the young people of the present day can hardly understand how large the place and how great the reverence accorded him before the Civil War. He was the hero of the schoolbook, and if the children who used to answer to the catechism "Who was the first man?" "Who was the wisest man?" "Who was the meekest man?" etc., had been asked "Who was the greatest and best man since Bible times?" doubtless the answer would have been promptly given in the words: "George Washington."

My paternal grandfather was a soldier in the Revolution, and may have fought under Washington's command. My maternal grandfather, Elder John Boden, a much younger man, I remember well. It was on the occasion of one of his visits to our house, when we were gathered in the "spare room," with its big fireplace and andirons to hold the great firestick in place, that I remember hearing him tell how, when he was a lad at home in Salem, he saw the great Washington. I remember distinctly his tones as he made this announcement, and the feeling of awe that thrilled me to think he should ever have seen and heard such a wonderful man. As I do not recollect many of the words of his story, I can only tell of the impressions I received of the event.

Washington and his officers, on their beautifully caparisoned horses, were being escorted through the streets by the grateful and admiring citizens. The children, whom he always so kindly noticed, of course had a holiday. The lads removed their caps and made their very best bows in his honor, while the little maids dropped their most graceful "courtesies" beside the way.

General Washington acknowledged the honors paid him in his usual dignified and courtly manner, and then he ordered a man-in-waiting to distribute gingerbread among the crowd of little folks. I do not know whether or not this was the famous "Training ginger-bread" used on "Training Day," when the militia used to meet on military parade. The custom of using ginger-bread at festivals in England dates back to the time of Henry IV., and met with much favor from the people. Among the books that grandfather left us was a Life of George Washington, and as he preached or "exhorted" "without money and without price," making shoes and selling simple home-made salve to help pay his way, I know he could not have had much money to invest in books. I think it was the only book, excepting those of a religious nature and perhaps some schoolbooks with their queer old-fashioned s's that looked so much like ff's, which came to us from his small library. He evidently revered those old books and had preserved them with the greatest care. So I think Washington must have been his ideal of a noble and gallant Christian hero.

E. Corinth, Me. MRS. MARY B. WINGATE.

"THE LITTLE MAIDS DROPPED THEIR COURTESIES"

Trusting Jesus

"COME unto me, ye weary ones,
And I will give you rest."
How many souls the Saviour's words
Have comforted and blessed!

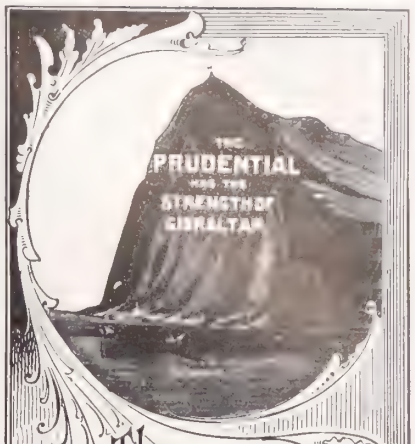
Then let us ever trust in him,
And comfort he will give,
And teach our ever-seeking souls
The truest way to live

—MARTHA SHEPARD LIPPINCOTT.

Moorestown, N. J.

Our Philippine Schools

In our newly established public schools in the Philippines, the course in English occupies one hour daily. The Manila Times voices the public complaint that the time is insufficient for proper instruction, as even the natives recognize that English must soon become the civil and commercial language of the islands. The merchant class of Manila are principally Chinese, and the Chinese consul has displayed his business ability by starting an English school for Chinese children. Mrs. Prautch, the missionary who, with her husband, has been conducting a good work at the Sailor's Institute, is the teacher of the schools.



The Prudential
The Man Who Continually Talks
about his love for his wife and children and yet spends nothing for Life Insurance to protect them, lays his sincerity open to question.
Write us for the cost of the best Life Insurance Policy in the world. It will be within your means, and will furnish absolute protection to the whole family.
Write for information.
THE PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE CO.
Of America.
John F. Dryden, Pres. Home Office, Newark, N. J.

..HEALTH..
Trade marks

Registered Nov. 24, 1896.
OXYDONOR APPLIED
is one of the easiest things in the world to lose and one of the most difficult to regain, unless you go about it in the right manner.
Oxydonor cures disease in a natural manner by compelling the system to absorb oxygen in large quantities. At any reasonable age, every form of disease is cured, by the application of Oxydonor during sleep. This is not theory nor mere claim. It is demonstrated by the thousands of cures made by this wonderful instrument.
Our Book "Grateful Reports" contains hundreds of letters from those who have been restored to vigorous health.
A 170-page book of directions with each Oxydonor, and we instruct our patrons in the proper use.
RHEUMATISM, COLDS.
Rev. Henry L. Phillips, 1422 Lombard St., Philadelphia, Pa., writes Oct. 21, 1899: "For Colds and Rheumatism, I find Oxydonor a most helpful servant. Have used it successfully in my family. As a tonic after Sunday's hard work and exhaustion, it is simply invaluable."
Reverend Phillips is Rector of Crucifixion Protestant Episcopal Church, Philadelphia.
Caution: Imitations of Oxydonor are dangerous to use. Refuse to accept them. Dr. H. Sanche is the inventor and originator, and has obtained final decision in Supreme Court, in Washington, D. C., against imitators. Also on Oct. 16, 1899, the United States Court granted us an Injunction restraining agents from selling an imitation of Oxydonor.
We will send full particulars of Oxydonor when requested
DR. H. SANCHE & COMPANY,
61 Fifth Street, Detroit, Mich.
261 Fifth Avenue, New York City.
57 State Street, Chicago, Ill.
Canada Office: 2268 St. Catherine Street, Montreal, Quebec.

MADE TO ORDER CLOTHING
High Art Catalogue of Clothing, with Linen Chart. Samples attached. FREE. We pay expressage. Address
JULIUS HINES & SON, Baltimore, M. D. Dept. 218.

PLAYS
Plays, Speakers, Dialogues, Recitations, for Church, Sunday School, Day Schools, Recited, Exhibition, Celebration, FREE

Wool Soap

For Toilet and Bath

Answers every household purpose. It is just the soap for the bath room and the every-day soap tray. Sold everywhere. Made by

[illegible] Company, [illegible]

15 Packets SEEDS. FLOWERS 20 Fine BULBS for 25c Postpaid

SEEDS and BULBS

1 Pkt. Salvia, mass of

3 " Pansy, red,

1 " Verbena Mixed, new and dwarf, very fine.

20 BULBS

3 Gladiolus, 1 Butterfly, 1 dwarf white, The Bride.

10

15 Packets Seeds and 20 Bulbs 25c.,

J. ROSCOE FULLER & CO., Floral Park, N. Y.

Larkin Premiums FREE.

HANDSOME PREMIUMS,

Value $10.00 each, for selling or using $10.00 worth of the

LARKIN SOAPS.

Choice of Writing Desk, Morris Chair, Bookcase, Brass and Steel Bed, Silver Tea Set, Oil Heater, Lamps, Watch, etc.

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL.

Beautifully illustrated booklet free to all who ask. It tells how to earn the Larkin Premiums.

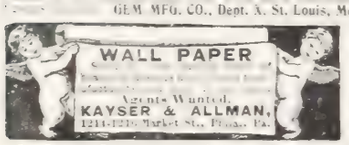
THE LARKIN SOAP MFG. CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Gem Embroidery Machine

SOMETHING NEW!!

broidering now done by hand. Embroiders on any silk or cotton; a child can operate it; an independent living can be made with it at home. As a special introductory offer we will send a sample [illegible] stamping patterns and a

GEM MFG. CO., Dept. X, St. Louis, Mo.



It Is a Certainty That Catarrh

can be cured. You will believe it after using a sample of Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure. Mailed free. Address Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 50 Broad St., Blosser Building, Atlanta, Ga.

310 First Premiums

A [illegible] PRAIRIE STATE INCUBATOR. [illegible]

PRAIRIE STATE INCUBATOR CO., Homer City, Pa.

$5.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working [illegible]

B. F. Johnson,
901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

... Leading Men to Christ ...

In the Old ... Bowery Mission

[illegible]

WHEN the record of humble, unostentatious, self-denying Christian service, rendered in the very lowest levels of human society in our great cities is fully written, the Bowery Mission stands out prominently among the soul-winning agencies of our day and generation. Like a Gospel beacon, founded upon a rock, it has stood bravely nearly a score of years, lighting the wanderers to a haven of safety. It is one of the grandest missionary influences on this continent and each passing year has witnessed the rescue of many human wrecks through its blessed instrumentality.

To the Bowery Mission come the waifs and strays of humanity, in every degree of wretchedness and misery, to hide their degradation and seek encouragement and counsel. They are always welcome. They come at all hours of the day and night, and many a sinner has been brought to the Saviour and there found peace in believing.

Recently a man in great distress came into the superintendent's office. "I have come nearly a hundred miles to see if you can help me," he said. "I am not a Christian. I have often heard of the good work done through the Bowery Mission, and I want you to help me to become a Christian." The tears rolled down his cheeks as he added, "I have annoyed and abused my wife and daughter because they spend so much time in the Church. I have made their lives miserable, and now I am ashamed and unhappy. If I can only find Jesus, seek his forgiveness and atone for my past conduct to my family." Kneeling, he implored God, for His Son's sake, to take him just as he was. He found the peace that the world cannot give, and went to his home with the joy of salvation in his heart.

"Another visitor," said Superintendent Wyburn, "was a woman who, after much hesitation, told me between her sobs the sad story of her only son going astray. 'My heart is breaking,' she said. 'His father talks of turning him away from home; it is almost impossible for me to endure the agony and shame. We have impoverished ourselves to give him a good education. He is a graduate of a medical college, just started in business, but he is a drunkard and we cannot save him. We believe so thoroughly in your prayers, and we want you to pray for our poor boy.'

"'Almost a year ago I found awaiting me a man who began, 'I have been sent to you by Mr. ——, who has promised me work if I can keep sober. I'm a printer, and have lost every position I ever held through drink, and have been a drunkard for twenty years.' I told him the only cure—the way of the Cross—and persuaded him to try it. Lifting his heart to God, he earnestly sought forgiveness. He is now one of the most active workers in an uptown church, and delights in helping others as he himself has been helped. He has already been the means of leading another poor drunkard to the Cross."

The spiritual work of the Bowery Mission is not local. Its influence is felt in every part of the world. Loving and grateful letters are constantly received from converts in other lands who have found Christ in the Bowery Mission. Mr. Colin E——, of London, England, writes: "I shall never forget the Bowery Mission. Tell Dr. Klopsch I pray God may bless him for keeping the light burning on the Bowery, for through it I have been restored to manhood by being brought in touch with Jesus Christ. I am frequently reminded of the night in the Bowery Mission when I gave my heart to God. I have been reunited to my wife and child, and God has wondrously blessed us. My wife and daughter, too, have sought and found forgiveness, and I am sure God dwells in our house."

From India, recently, there came the glad tidings of a reunion of father and son, brought about through the influence of the Bowery Mission, the story being given in a letter by Helen H. Holcomb, a missionary at Jhansi.

At the converts' prayer meeting, held every Saturday night, requests for prayers are read from nearly every state in the Union, and often from foreign countries. Many requests have been answered, and frequently those who have been benefited write expressing thankfulness for the Divine goodness.

Mothers frequently write to the Mission about their sons and daughters who have left their homes in the country to live in the great metropolis. Some of them have run away from home, and the writers plead so earnestly asking the Mission workers to seek for lost ones and tell them of the welcome that awaits if they will only return. In other cases they ask the superintendent to find their children, direct them to some good church and throw around them an influence that will keep them from straying from God. Many lost ones have been found and restored to the dear ones at home.

Every evening the mission services are largely attended, and the earnest testimonies there delivered are a witness of the blessing which God has been pleased to bestow on the humble efforts of the workers. Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD are welcomed as visitors to the Mission at No. 55 Bowery. Their prayers and support have done much towards furthering the work of the Mission in the past, enabling it to greatly widen its field of spiritual activity, and their cordial co-operation is invited by the management of the Mission in its soul-winning and rescue work during the coming year.

The following sums have been received, since last acknowledgment, in aid of the spiritual work of the Bowery Mission:

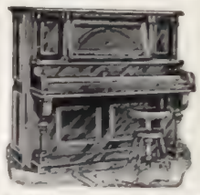
[illegible]	$ 174 [illegible]	[illegible]	50
Austin, Mary	10 00	Peet, Abraham S	1 00
Blackwood, Marie R.	10 00	Pine, Carrie B	3 00
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Burnham, S C	2 00	Reed, Mrs. Julia A	2 00
Dutton, Adell	1 00	Schanwecker, Sarah E	1 00
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Estill, Sarah	2 00	Sherer, Mary A	1 00
Ferris, B K	2 00	Smith, Miss Sarah E	1 00
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	50
Gensemer, Geo W	15 00	Strain, Ida M	50
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Griffiths, Owa n	2 00	Wood, Mrs W	10 00
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Gaengerich, S D	1 00	C S C, Phila	25 00
Haines, E S	3 00	I H N, Plainfield	1 00
Harmon, Mrs T R	1 00	L E B, Salem	75
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Hatcher, Harold	50	M E M, Baltimore	5 00
Hatcher, Mrs A B	1 50	Mrs F M Allegan	1 00
Howland, Mrs Geo H	1 00	Mrs M J K, Fredonia	50
Jones, Mrs Alida J	3 50	Delaware	1 00
Kerr, M A	4 00	—, Millheim	1 00
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Love, Mrs M W & Mrs M D	[illegible]	In memory of Jennie,	[illegible]
McClun, J	1 00	A friend, Athens	23 88
Muilenburg, J W	3 00	A reader, Grand	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Parsons, Mrs I I	[illegible]	Total	$ 871 [illegible]

All contributions sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for the spiritual and rescue work of the Bowery Mission will be acknowledged in these columns.

One Year's Free Trial

.. THE ..

CORNISH PLAN.



The Unique Cornish Plan of Selling Pianos and Organs

[illegible] up a vast business

PIANOS FROM $155 With Latest Musical Attachments.

Over a Quarter of a Million Satisfied Customers

We Warrant our Pianos and Organs for 25 years. [illegible] a million dollars.

FREE. [illegible]

St. Cecilia and the Angelic Choir.

The Cornish Patent Musical Attachment [illegible]

CORNISH [illegible]

[illegible]

$10 [illegible]

CORNISH ORGAN, $20

CORNISH PIANO,

Cornish Co-operative Plan, [illegible] working for us, or a Cornish Piano or Organ ..... FREE.

Makers of High-Grade [illegible]

REFERENCES: Your Bank, Our Bank, Any Bank.

ORGANS $25 FROM Cash or Easy Payments.

CORNISH & CO.,

Established 50 Years. WASHINGTON, N. J.

Rheumatism...

[illegible] great catarrh [illegible] solid [illegible] [illegible] from poisoning [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] organic [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the waste products. Uric acid and [illegible] deposits accumulate in the muscles and around the joints.

Tartarlithine...

regulates the action of the kidneys, [illegible] and removes the uric acid and chalky deposits, and relieves indigestion [illegible] [illegible] the stomach, and can be taken by the most delicate. Prescribed by many leading physicians.

Regular package $1.00.
Of all druggists or post-free by mail.
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

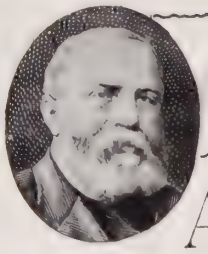
McKESSON & ROBBINS,
91 Fulton Street, . . New York.

SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

THE FASHION MACHINE

ONLY $18

It is the latest improved [illegible] positively [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]



New Anecdotes . .

. . . By Dwight L. Moody

A MINISTER who had lost his child asked another minister to come and preach for him. He came and told how he lived on one side of a river, and felt very little interest in the people on the other side until his daughter was married and went over there to live. Then every morning he went to the window and looked over that river and felt very much concerned about that town and all the people there. "Now," said he, "I think that as this child has crossed another river, heaven will be dearer to my friend than ever it has been before."

. . .

One Good Quality A child once said to his mother: "Mamma, you never speak ill of any one. You would speak well of Satan."

"Well," said the mother, "you might imitate his perseverance."

. . .

God's Searchlight When I was going through the land of Goshen, in Egypt, a few years ago, as I came near the city of Alexandria, I saw the strangest sight I had ever seen. The heavens were lit up with a new kind of light, and there seemed to be flash after flash; I couldn't understand it. I had heard that the Khedive had died, and that a new Khedive was coming into power. I found later that England had sent over some war vessels, and the moment that darkness came on they had turned their searchlights upon that city; it was almost as light as noonday. Every street was lit up, and I do not suppose that ten men could have met in any part of Alexandria without being discovered by that searchlight. May God turn His searchlight upon us, and see if there be any evil way in us!

. . .

All Kinds of Hearts A lady told me once that she was so hard-hearted she couldn't come to Christ.

"Well," I said, "my good woman, it doesn't say 'all ye soft-hearted people come.' Black hearts, vile hearts, hard hearts, soft hearts, all hearts come. Who can soften your hard heart but Himself?"

. . .

Sowing Tares I was at the Paris Exhibition in 1867, and I noticed there a little oil painting, only about a foot square, and the face was the most hideous I have ever seen. On the paper attached to the painting were the words "Sowing the Tares." The face looked more like a demon's than a man's. As he sowed these tares, up came serpents and reptiles, and they were crawling up his body, and all around were woods with wolves and animals prowling in them. I have seen that picture many times since. Ah! the reaping time is coming. If you sow to the flesh you must reap corruption.

. . .

Frozen or Melted? There are two ways of being united—one is by being frozen together, and the other is by being melted together. What Christians need is to be united in brotherly love, and then they may expect to have power.

. . .

The Atheist's Boast In the town of Hanover, in Germany, I am told that there is buried a German countess who denied the existence of God and ridiculed the idea of the resurrection. To show her contempt for Christianity she ordered that on her death her grave should be built of solid masonry and covered by large stones bound together by iron clamps. On this tomb was engraved her defiant challenge that through eternity this tomb should never be disturbed. One day a seed from some tree, either blown by the wind or carried by a bird, became lodged in a small crevice of the tomb, where soon it sprouted and began to grow. And then, as if Nature mocked the haughty infidel, she quietly extended the delicate roots of that seedling under the massive blocks of stone and slowly raised them from their place. Although scarce four generations are passed since that tomb was sealed, that most insignificant seedling has done what God Himself was challenged to accomplish.

. . .

"Oh, Mother!" I knew a child whose mother died so early that she could not remember the mother. She did not have a photograph, and never saw her face; but after she had come to years of understanding, she was taken sick, and when she was dying suddenly her face lit up. She seemed to see her mother, and said: "Oh, mother!"

I think that when I see my Master I shall know him. I have an idea that when I see Moses and the Prophets and the Patriarchs and Apostles, I shall know them. Do you ask how? I don't know.

. . .

The Omitted Word The London Times some years ago told the story of a petition that was being circulated for signatures. It was a time of great excitement, and this petition was intended to have great influence in the House of Lords; but there was one word left out. Instead of reading, "We humbly beseech thee," it read, "We beseech thee." So it was ruled out. My friends, if we want to make an appeal to the God of heaven, we must humble ourselves; and if we do humble ourselves before the Lord, we shall not be disappointed.

. . .

Grace in Heels or Heart? A Christian mother said she wanted her son to go to a dancing-school because he was so awkward; she wanted him to be more graceful. Wanted him to get grace in his heels, you see, instead of his heart. After six weeks he had made such poor progress she took him out in disgust and chided him. Said he:

"I'm sorry, mother, I'm so stupid about it, but I can't seem to do any better. You see, it's one of the things I can't pray over."

. . .

Our Faith Not in Man How often we hear a man say: "There is a member of the Church who cheated me out of five dollars, and I am not going to have anything more to do with people who call themselves Christians." But if the man had had faith in Jesus Christ you do not suppose he would have had his faith shattered because some one cheated him out of five dollars, do you? What we want is to have faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. If a man has that, he has something he can anchor to, and the anchor will hold; and when the hour of temptation comes to him, and the hour of trial, the man will stand firm. If we are only converted to man, and our faith is in man, we will certainly be disappointed.

God is Good to Me

I lift my heart to-day in praise
To Him who loves me so,
Whose mercy crowneth all my days,
And makes my cup o'erflow.
I have not loved Him as I should—
Yet pitiful is he—
And God, who giveth naught but good,
Oh, He is good to me!

I thank Him for unclouded skies—
For love beyond my ken—
That when my path in shadow lies,
The sunshine comes again.
I thank Him for the hopes fulfilled—
For every answered plea,
That tho' life was not all I willed,
My God is good to me.

I thank Him for the lifted load,
And for the doubts dispelled;
I thank Him for the gift bestowed,
And for the gift withheld.
In all the joys of time and sense,
In largess grand and free,
In sorrow's pitying recompense,
My Lord is good to me.

I go to meet another year,
With faith no doubt shall dim.
God reigneth, and I will not fear,
But trust my way with Him.
Then if that way be bright or dark,
Let peace unshaken be!
And let me, like the soaring lark,
Sing, God is good to me!

Vineland, N. J. —MRS. FRANK A. BRECK.

IRREPROACHABLE.

Sometimes it is difficult to know what to give the children as a tit-bit, or what to take when starting for a journey, a picnic, or a spin on the wheel.

But if you choose

Van Houten's Eating Chocolate

you know that you have a wholesome snack of splendid flavor. The irreproachable composition, and nutritive, highly digestible ingredients, render Van Houten's Chocolate preferable to the cheap chocolates and confectioneries (which are often of very questionable composition), while it far exceeds all similar products in the delicious cocoa-flavor.

Sold in Tins of Croquettes and Tins of Drops.
Also in Square Tablets and Small Bars.

FREE COSTS NOTHING
But the asking to get our new 1900 Catalogue of either
PIANOS OR ORGANS
At wholesale prices, thus saving you every penny usually pocketed by agents and dealers.
SEND TODAY FOR OUR NEW
1900 Coupon { It saves you $10.00 on an ORGAN. / " " " $20.00 on a PIANO. }
CASH OR INSTALMENTS.
30 days' trial. No money in advance. Safe delivery at your depot insured. Instalments. Easy payments. Our new due bill certificate shows you how to get an Organ or Piano for little or nothing. Remember, our Catalogue costs you nothing, and will positively save you money.

PIANOS, $155 UP.
ORGANS, $21.75 UP.
We furnish with each Piano a $10 hard wood Piano Chair free, also Plush Scarfs and $10 worth of the latest sheet music. Complete Organ outfit, free. Our factory, with its enormous capacity, enables us to sell you a high-grade instrument at a figure much below that of any other company in the world.
INCORPORATED FOR 50 YEARS.
WE LEAD, OTHERS FOLLOW.
Beethoven Piano and Organ Co.,
Box 741 WASHINGTON, N. J

Dr. Bull's COUGH SYRUP

Look Out for Lung Troubles in changeable weather! A cough is the danger signal! Take the warning—act quickly—but make no mistake in the medicine you take! Get a Doctor's prescription that has not failed in 50 years—Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.
"It gives me great pleasure to endorse such a reliable Medicine as Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. A friend had a cold which grew worse and developed severe coughing spells, spitting up of phlegm and clots of blood. One bottle of your cure gave relief. Four bottles cured. Dr. E. J. BEERS, Palace Hotel, Lebanon, Pa." Refuse Substitutes. A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md.
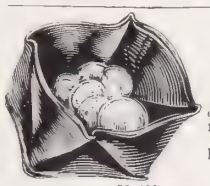
Dr. Bull's Pills cure Liver Troubles. Trial, 20 for 5c. At Dealers, or sent by mail.



PAT. DEC. 30, '90.

Ideal Christmas Gift
USEFUL, HANDSOME, DURABLE.
Paragon Patent Folding Coin Purse
combines all these qualities. It is neat and holds perfectly flat in your pocket.
Ask your dealer for it, or I will send you sample at following prices, postpaid:

			Calf.	Seal.
No. 011 holds $6.00 in silver		$.25
" 11 " 6.00	"	.40	$.75	$ .90
" 13 x " 10.00	"	.50	.90	1.25

PAT. DEC. 30, '90.
JAMES S. TOPHAM, Sole M'f'r, 1232 Penna. Ave., Washington, D. C.

We Save You Money

on every rod of fencing you buy from us. Why? Because we sell you the
ADVANCE FENCE
Direct from the Factory at Wholesale.
Dealers cannot buy it any cheaper than you can. We save you the middle man's profit. You get a good fence at a low price. Beats a hand fence machine all to pieces. No loose ends to unravel. All closely interwoven—cross wires cannot slip. Write at once for our free circulars and special discounts.
Advance Fence Co. 149 Old St., Peoria, Ill.

WINTER EGGS ALWAYS BRING THE BEST PRICE.
It's merely a question of proper food. Green Cut Bone fed to hens makes them lay in winter. Mann's New Bone Cutters, the original bone cutters lead all others. Mann's Clover Cutters are the cheapest and best for preparing clover. Mann's Crystal Grit, Swinging Feed Trays, &c. make poultry success. Catal F. W. MANN CO. Box 29, Milford, Mass.

FENCE! STRONGEST MADE.
ight. Sold to the Farmer at Wholesale prices. Fully Warranted. Catalog free.
COILED SPRING FENCE CO.
Box 47. Winchester, Indiana, U. S. A.

WINTER WORK. FARMER AGENTS and others take orders for my seeds. Make money each. Get your own seeds FREE. New plan. Qr. Lessles. Large assortment. Good terms FREE. Frank H. Battles, Seed Grower, Rochester, N. Y.

500 Sermons by Dr. Talmage

The Event of the Century in Sermonic Literature

NEVER since the days of Peter and of Paul has it been given to any one man to Preach through Pulpit or Press to such Vast Audiences as Dr. Talmage for the past Forty Years has been privileged to Address. His Sermons reach the uttermost ends of Civilization, and are Read in their Native Tongues by the people of every land. His utterances regularly translated into Russian, Greek, Swedish, German, French, Italian, Syrian, and other Languages, literally Encompass the Globe, while in our own country nearly every important village has its daily or weekly paper in which Dr. Talmage's Sermon forms a Prominent Feature. Over 3,000 Different Publications, Aggregating 12,000,000 Readers, Print his Discourses every week, many of them having made a specialty of their Regular and Consecutive Publication for over Twenty Years. The Christian Herald three years ago arranged with Dr. Talmage for the personal revision of his most notable sermons, and now after Two Years of Continuous and Careful Labor, we are ready to announce the Publication of 500 Sermons by Dr. Talmage, in Twenty Volumes of 400 pages each, the most extensive work of its kind in the world.

LIFE SIZE OF BOOKS

20 Large Attractive Volumes—8000 Pages

Beautifully Printed and Richly Bound in Art Vellum with Gilt Top

We offer these twenty volumes at the low price of $20 for the set, One Dollar Down and $1 a Month for 19 Months; or 10% discount for spot cash. 500 Sermons by Dr. Talmage are thoroughly Indexed and Cross-Indexed: 1st, Alphabetically; 2d, Topically; 3d, Textually. The Anecdotes, Incidents, Persons, Places and Things mentioned in this Great Sermonic Work are Indexed: 1st, Alphabetically; 2d, Topically, thus affording an Exhaustive Ready Reference which must Prove Invaluable to Preachers, Students, Exhorters, Sunday School Superintendents and Teachers, and Christian Workers of every kind and character. The work abounds in Helpful Anecdotes and Incidents, the Value of which to the Worker in the Master's Vineyard, in whatever sphere, is simply beyond Calculation.

Only One Dollar Down and One Dollar a Month Until Paid

The Best Holiday Gift for Your Pastor

Congregations that wish to give practical expression to their appreciation of their Pastor's services cannot find in all the world a gift which would be more highly prized than this Notable Series of Dr. Talmage's Sermons, representing the very cream of the life work of the most Eloquent and most Popular Preacher of the 19th Century.

These Sermons cover an unusually wide range of thought and are unsurpassed for originality, versatility, terseness, splendor of diction, glowing imagery, and wealth of Incident and Anecdote.

Each Volume measures 5 x 8 inches when closed, and the whole set requires shelf space 30 inches long, 8 inches high, and 5 inches deep; the weight of the set is about 35 pounds. The entire set will be sent securely boxed, either by freight or express, charges not prepaid, on receipt of only One Dollar Down.

Christian Herald Book Department, Bible House, New York

VOL. XXII.—NO. 50 NEW YORK, DECEMBER 13, 1899 PRICE FIVE CENTS

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT 1899 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

The Three Wise Men and the Star SEE PAGE 963

OUR MAIL-BAG

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mr. S. G. Shroyer, Oklahoma City, writes:

Mr. Andrew Carnegie has just presented to our city $25,000 for a public library. Our people are rejoicing and feel very thankful.

Oakland City is to be congratulated on the gift which we have no doubt is both appreciated and deserved.

Anxious One, New York. Is it possible that impure and wicked thoughts can constitute the sin against the Holy Ghost? Such thoughts come into my mind and I cannot keep them out, and of late, since I have been trying to come to Christ and failing, it has occurred to me that these thoughts may be the sin that Christ said was unpardonable.

There is not the slightest ground for your fear. Whatever the sin against the Holy Ghost was, it was not that. If you read the context to the passage in which that sin is spoken of, you will see that it does not relate to wicked thoughts. You are not responsible for such thoughts entering your mind, but only if you welcome and encourage them. They should be resisted. If you have some subject to which you can turn, a subject that interests you, these intruding thoughts may be expelled by turning to it whenever they arise. A brief prayer, "Cleanse me of secret faults, O Lord," uttered when such thoughts intrude, will frequently cause them to leave you. If you do not dwell on them, they will soon cease to trouble you.

Apropos of a recent inquiry concerning the marriage of cousins, a reader sends this note:

According to the Bible, Isaac and Jacob took their own cousins for wives, and were blessed of God; and if I am not mistaken the marriage of cousins is not condemned anywhere in the Bible. Will you please tell me why the marriage of cousins is looked upon as objectionable by most people nowadays?

The reasons, as we have already stated, are purely physiological. The offspring of intermarriages are apt to be deficient physically or mentally, or both.

J. C., Alma, Wis. If I find a quantity of money that has the appearance of having been lost a long time, and I publish in our county paper requesting the loser to describe and claim the same, and no claimant appears, will that money become mine after a given length of time? How long should I hold it for the loser?

If after every effort has been employed to find the loser, the money is still unclaimed, you may be justified in regarding it as yours to use; but a conscientious person would restore it to its owner, even though he did not appear until years afterward.

Reader, Batemantown, O. 1. Is it right to get up a "box social" or supper of any kind, for the purpose of getting money to meet the expenses of the church? 2. Is it always the best preacher who gets the largest salary?

1. While we believe heartily in the value of sociable relations among church members, affairs of the kind you mention are not calculated to add to the influence or spiritual life of the church. They are un-Biblical and undesirable as a means of promoting the church's best interests. Usually, the less religion there is at a social, the more money will be taken in. There are many very good people, however, who view these things with a more lenient eye. 2. By no means. The best is not always the most eloquent or attractive, but he whose heart is filled not with ambition for the world's applause or its rewards, but with divine grace and love for his fellow men and who faithfully gives them the Gospel.

Subscriber, Plessis, N. Y. 1. How large a population has the City of Washington, D. C.? 2. How many churches are there in the city?

1. Between two and three hundred thousand. 2. Nearly two hundred churches.

M. H. C., Hyde Park, Pa. Ours is a union Sunday School. One Protestant denomination is building a church here, and has invited the Sunday School to move up there and continue to run the school the same as heretofore. This is the first church built in our town, and there are not enough scholars to have two schools.

Where a denomination is too weak—numerically or financially, to maintain a separate Sunday School—it is far better to join with some other denomination (holding the same faith), in a union Sunday School, than to go on struggling hopelessly, perhaps to ultimately give up the effort after all.

Schoolgirl, Midway, Va. Please tell me something about the mistletoe. I want to know in what countries it grows; how it came to be used as a Christmas decoration; and why it was sometimes considered a plant of ill-omen.

It grows in the colder parts of Asia, almost everywhere in Europe, and is found in the United States. The American species, however, is not exactly like the European plant. Many ancient peoples considered it sacred. Among the Druids, it was held in peculiarly high regard. They used it in the celebration of their new year. Five days after the new moon the white-robed priests went in stately procession into the forests until they came to the "robur" (sacred tree), upon which mistletoe grew. Two milk-white bulls were tethered to the tree; a priest ascended and released with a golden sickle the mistletoe, which was received in a white mantle beneath. The bulls were sacrificed, and the mistletoe distributed among the people as an antidote against witchcraft, etc. When Christianity prevailed over paganism, the plant, with better significance, was utilized as a Christmas decoration. In Scandinavian mythology it was held as a sacred plant, but since, by an arrow made of it, Balder the Good was slain, it possibly came to be regarded as ominous of evil.

Student, Biddle, N. C. Do you consider it proper, and in keeping with the spirit of his office, for a young unmarried minister of the Gospel to take with him for evening walks or to social entertainments young ladies in his community?

A minister should be careful at all times to do nothing that will detract from the dignity of his office or lessen his influence with his flock. This necessity may sometimes interfere with actions that are wholly innocent in themselves, yet which might be wrongly construed or may be apt to excite gossip. At the same time there is no good reason why he should be deprived of the society of his friends. His own good judgment will tell him what is expedient in such matters. There is unfortunately too great a tendency to undue criticism where a pastor is concerned.

Reader. Is it right for a Christian mother to go to church with her children and cause ill-feeling with the father who will not go, or should she submit to his ways, stay away from church, and keep her children at home out of Sunday School or church society?

It is deplorable that any husband should be so indifferent to his responsibility for the moral and spiritual welfare of his family as to seek to deny them the commonest religious privileges. No husband has a right to do this, and no wife should be subjected to such deprivation. She is bound by the duty she owes to God, even in opposition to her husband.

C. G. A., Valley Crossing, O. Why are citizens of the District of Columbia not allowed to vote for President? What form of government prevails [illegible]?

It is the only portion of the United States which is not under home rule. Its laws are enacted by Congress, and its commissioners and judges appointed by the President, but the people have no voice in the management of public affairs, beyond the privilege of petition and protest. This singular exception was made in order that the functions of the general government at its principal seat, might not be disturbed by the influence or interference of local, state or national politics in the District.

J. T., Jersey City. In what part of the United States [illegible]?

Sunday School work in the United States dates from Dec. 19, 1790, when a meeting was held in Philadelphia to "take into consideration the establishment of Sunday Schools in the city." The persons present were Bishop White, Dr. Benjamin Rush, Dr. William Currie, Thomas Mendenhall, Peter Thompson, Matthew Carey, Thos. P. Cope, Joseph Sharpless and Captain Nathaniel Falconer, and they organized "The Society for the Institution and Support of First-Day or Sunday Schools in the city of Philadelphia, and the Districts of Southwark and Northern Liberties." The purpose was almost wholly educational, benefits being intended for children of parents too poor to pay for their instruction. Primers and spelling-books were used, and Bible texts were memorized, read and copied, as the children had ability. The teachers were salaried. The Second Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia was the first to adopt the Sunday School as a part of Church work, organizing one in April, 1815. With this innovation, teachers began to serve gratuitously. The idea spread to other States and cities; local and State unions were organized, and finally, in 1824, the American Sunday School Union was established.

NATIVES OF INDIA TAPPING A PALM TREE FOR ITS SAP

Among the various products of the palm is a sap or juice which in some parts of the East is used as a beverage, and also instead of yeast in bread-making. One species of palm yields a juice from which a vile spirituous intoxicating liquor is distilled. The natives, however, are exceedingly temperate, and it is said to be rare to find one who is given to the use of intoxicants. Our photograph shows how even the most graceful of all tropical trees may be put to a degraded use, just as the finest field of wheat or corn may be converted into an agent of physical and spiritual destruction—God's blessings perverted by man to ignoble ends.

To a Host of Inquirers

No; the defects which you have noticed in the advertisements of the Red Letter New Testament do not appear in the Testament itself. It was impossible to obtain from the dozen different printing establishments, who were entrusted with the preparation of our large edition of last week, as careful and accurate presswork as is done on THE CHRISTIAN HERALD presses. The Red Letter New Testament itself is printed in our own pressroom, by experienced workmen and under conditions most favorable to accuracy and good workmanship. It has no typographical defects, the alignment of the red and black lines is perfect, and the book is in every sense of the word a truly workmanlike and eminently satisfactory production.

THE FINAL ... OPPORTUNITY

To Get OUR HOME SUNSHINE CALENDAR FOR 1900, with an Exhaustive Chronology of Leading Events of the 19th Century Arranged According to DAYS

A Lovely Holiday Gift

WE have been literally deluged with earnest appeals from renewing and new subscribers, who have seen our beautiful Home Sunshine Calendar on the walls of other homes, to please send them a Calendar. An additional supply has just been received, and on receipt of ten cents additional, we will include, so long as the supply may last, a copy of this Calendar, securely packed and prepaid. We cannot send this Calendar to non-subscribers at any price. This provision is made only for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD family, and the additional ten cents are charged for handling, tubing and postage.

The Home Sunshine Calendar is beautifully lithographed in Six Different Copyrighted Designs on Six Eggshelled Art Cards, each nearly as large as a CHRISTIAN HERALD Page, in twelve bright, cheerful Colors, and on the reverse side of each card is a carefully prepared Chronology of the Leading Events of the 19th Century, for the two months represented by that particular card, arranged according to days—so that each day exhibits at a glance the important events which took place on that date.

Nothing like this Calendar is now on the market. It was specially prepared for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and is secured by copyright against infringement. We make this offer of the Calendar at ten cents additional, as an accommodation to our subscribers, which, we feel sure, they will heartily appreciate.

We are informed by the lithographers that no new orders can be filled before February next. Hence the present supply is positively the limit, and such of our subscribers who may fail to take advantage of this last opportunity, or who may come too late, must acquit us of all blame in the matter. Should your order for the Calendar be received too late, we will add one month to your time, giving you thirteen months instead of twelve, and thus avoid the trouble of refunding the additional ten cents.

Subscribers who have recently renewed without receiving a Calendar, may get one, if so desired, by forwarding immediately ten cents. Don't wait. Delay is apt to result in disappointment.

Reader, Krumroy, O. No: we know of none.

I. T., Everett, Mass. Nothing has yet been done.

J. A. C., Reading, Pa. Write to a numismatist.

H. Gilmanton, N. H. Pronounce as in "poor."

John W., Cambridge, Neb. Answered in another issue.

Reader, Williamsport, Ind. Question already answered.

Jane A. M., Shelburne, Vt. Laurence Sterne is the author.

Mrs. S. B. M., Goldsboro, N. C. The author is General Lytle.

A. J. A., Clarendon, N. Y. The matter is one for legal advice.

C. S., Webster City, Ia. Send them to Rev. Mr. Sharp, Kirksville, Mo.

M. P. D., Alumine, Va. Write to the Chief of Police, New York City.

Old Subscriber, Maine. Write to Boston Belting Co., 100 Reade St., N. Y.

Robert W., Lonsdale, R. I. The two continents form a single hemisphere.

L. A., Bourbon, Mo. 1. Yes. 2. You will find it in any good encyclopedia.

Constant Reader, Harrisburg, Pa. Already answered in THE MAIL-BAG.

J. E. T., West Sarem, Wis. 1. No, not now. 2. From November to March.

J. W. M., Altoona, Pa. Already fully explained in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

To Brighten Syrian Homes

The Ramallah Training School and its Christian Influence.

A Noble Institution which Americans Support

BY HON. SELAH MERRILL

IT is far away from America, high up among the hills of Judea, and in a most delightful and picturesque situation. North, east, and south are billows of mountains; ten miles southeast the suburbs of Jerusalem appear; twenty miles away the vast Plain of Sharon; beyond stretches the coast and the Mediterranean, one hundred miles of which, together with Sharon itself, seems to be lying at our feet. These are not the least of the attractions of which the village of Ramallah has to boast. Yet, except for the situation, the scenery, and the noble educational work going on here, this village of 4,000 souls is not specially unlike hundreds of other towns of Palestine.

A THRESHING FLOOR IN THE VILLAGE OF RAMALLAH

Here, for some years, English and American Friends carried on medical work for the benefit of this and of neighboring villages. It was found that the people were sadly in need of mental and spiritual enlightenment. There are Greek priests in the village, but they are about as dirty as the Arabs. They may know better, but they do not do any better than the ignorant people about them. Their influence does not tend to elevate any one. One woman, who had been under Greek "teaching" all her life, said to the visiting missionary, "We never before heard of any salvation through Jesus."

There are kinds of degradation. Degradation in America would certainly imply intemperance and licentiousness. From these vices the poor people of this country are generally free; but the vices which come more under the head of meanness abound here. Such vices as hatred, revenge, selfishness, lying, cheating, profanity, vile language, and some others have been practised before their eyes from infancy; and, in many cases, strange as it may seem, they are actually taught to the children. The need of the reformatory work that has been attempted here could be illustrated in a great variety of ways.

Martha, the visiting missionary referred to, goes from house to house among the women and children, chiefly among those that are sick, showing them how to wash their bodies—which some of them have not done for five, ten or even twenty years; how to clean their clothing, how to make their beds comfortable—how to take the medicine which is prescribed—it is astonishing how much instruction they need in such simple matters—and how to prepare plain, but nourishing food. In regard to the most ordinary things of life, they are ignorant and utterly helpless. The great majority of the peasant and village people of this country, care for themselves and their children, whether sick or well, just about as they care for the donkeys, who share with them their wretched hovels.

Those whose appreciate Martha's work give her a name which may be translated "The Apostle of Cleanliness." The happy thought occurred to those who were carrying on the medical work, to found a school where young women could be taught how to make homes cleaner and more comfortable in every way and their own lives better. This Training Home, wholly under the care of American teachers and supported entirely by American money, is one of the permanent results. For other permanent results one can point to the changed character of many a native home and to many a young woman who has been lifted up from degradation and ignorance, and whose life has been transformed into one of Christian usefulness.

THE RAMALLAH TRAINING HOME, FROM THE WEST

The buildings erected for the Training Home are the surprise and delight of every American traveler who sees them. Pure air, pure water, and absolute cleanliness were the first things thought of—very difficult ends to secure anywhere in the East.

The girls are taught to be skilful with the needle, making and keeping in repair their own clothes. Each is taught how to serve at table in the neatest and most orderly manner, the proper care of beds and bedrooms, and how to cook. About the Home is a large yard and garden in which the girls have plots of ground which they care for and where they learn to cultivate different sorts of flowers. They have many forms of outdoor recreation which they greatly enjoy. Their schoolroom is a model of neatness and good order; and the earnestness and reverence with which they join in prayer is very touching. No school in America can surpass this one in the solicitude exercised by teachers and managers for the welfare of the pupils; and the girls themselves say, "We try to practise at home what we are taught in school. On the street, when others shout bad words at us, we do not answer back, but say in our hearts, 'God forgive them.'" The girls have a Christian Endeavor Society which they manage entirely by themselves as they do their Peace Society, which corresponds to a literary society in an American school. The spirit pervading this Training Home, whose means allow of there being accommodated only about twenty-six girls in a year, is delightful. Christianity is being lived in the daily lives of the inmates; there is no ostentation, no extravagance; everything is plain, but convenient, comfortable, and substantial; there is gentleness in all that is said or done—kindness always and everywhere. Silently and effectually the idea of the founders is being carried out.

The Friends' Mission carries on in its immediate district seven schools which are taught by graduates of the Training Home. Here over two hundred children, both boys and girls, are taught to read, write, and also to sing; for it is believed that by the singing of Christian hymns some joy and comfort can be introduced into wretched homes. There is a Sunday service at which the attendance is from one hundred to one hundred and fifty souls. Those who wish are allowed to make some request, to state some incident in their daily experience, or to make some comment on what has been said by the leader of the meeting. By their dress many of the men look as though they had been "compelled to come in from the highways and hedges," from work of drudgery and homes of poverty; but their simple, earnest words show that a new and strange light has dawned upon their minds.

Story of the Magi

Gentiles Who Watched for the Lord—Vigil of Centuries—The Star—The Quest

(See First Page Illustration).

WHO were the Magi? Legend and tradition have twined many facts and fancies around these Oriental pilgrims and their guiding star. Both unite in affirming that they were Chaldean or Persian astrologers or astronomers of the day; that they belonged to the ancient order which Zoroaster had founded, for whom Daniel had interceded and over whom he had held the office of "Master" by Nebuchadnezzar's appointment. They had a famous college in Babylon; princes were their students and members of their brotherhood; and thus writers and artists have, with reason, depicted the wise men as kings. Zoroaster had predicted the advent of a great interpreter of God to man, and through association with Daniel and other Israelites they had imbibed the Hebrew Messianic expectations with which the Orient was permeated. On the "star-gazers," who were but one branch of the order, devolved the office of watching the heavens for the celestial herald which should announce the Christ; and the office was hereditary. Night after night, century after century, observations were held on a high and lonely mountain, and generation after generation passed away, saying to its successor, "Be faithful! What if ye should sleep and the star should come and ye should not see it?" One night, the legend tells, three watchers studying the heavens and conversing about those who had watched before them for the star suddenly ceased to speak, and laid their hands upon one another almost fearing to breathe. Their eyes filled with tears of awe and gladness; and at last, as with one voice, they said: "The star!"

The brotherhood were waked; preparations were quickly made, and the pilgrims set forth for Judea, the star guiding. "Who shall he be?" they asked themselves. "A great Prince of course." "Where shall we find him?" "In the King's Palace at the Capital City, Jerusalem!" Thus speculating, they lose sight of the star, and enter Jerusalem asking, "Where is he that is born King of the Jews?" Herod sets them on the way to Bethlehem. But their hearts are heavy. They humbled themselves before God and prayed for renewal of the beatific vision. How else shall they know the King when they find him? How can they go back to their brethren on the mountain and tell them that the star, the hope of ages, has been lost through the worldliness and unfaithfulness of the Chosen Messengers? Near Bethlehem there is a well called the "Well of the Magi," and the tradition says that one of the Wise Men, athirst and faint, yet drawing water for a weak and footsore traveler, and praying as he drew, saw, at midday, reflected in this well—the star! Joyously, giving thanks to God, and asking counsel of no man, the Magi followed it. When it paused above a stable, they entered, and bowed themselves before the babe in the manger, offering the consecrated tribute, held in trust for ages, to him, born King of the Jews, of whom it was promised: "Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising." Balthasar, Melchior and Caspar, tradition names them, one legend saying that they came from different countries, Egypt, Arabia [illegible] Greece.

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT.

Forgiveness Before Sundown

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text, Ephesians 4: 26: . . . . "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath.

HAT a pillow, embroidered of all colors, hath the dying day! The cradle of clouds from which the sun rises is beautiful enough, but it is surpassed by the many-colored mausoleum in which, at evening, it is buried.

Sunset among the mountains! It almost takes one's breath away to recall the scene. The long shadows stretching over the plain make the glory of the departing light, on the tiptop crags, and struck aslant, through the foliage the more conspicuous. Saffron and gold, purple and crimson commingled. All the castles of cloud in conflagration. Burning Moscows on the sky. Hanging gardens of roses at their deepest blush. Banners of vapor, red as if from carnage, in the battle of the elements. Paul, in prison, remembers some of the gorgeous sunsets among the mountains of Asia Minor, and how he had often seen the towers of Damascus blaze in the close of the Oriental days: and he flashes out that memory in the text when he says, "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath."

Sublime all-suggestive duty for people then and people now! Forgiveness before sundown! He who never feels the throb of indignation is imbecile. He who can walk among the injustices of the world inflicted upon himself and others, without flush of cheek, or flash of eye, or agitation of nature, is either in sympathy with wrong or semi-idiotic. When Ananias, the high priest, ordered the constables of the court-room to smite Paul on the mouth, Paul fired up and said: "God shall smite thee, thou whited wall." In the sentence immediately before my text, Paul commands the Ephesians: "Be ye angry and sin not." It all depends on what you are mad at and how long the feeling lasts, whether anger is right or wrong. Life is full of exasperations. Saul after David, Succoth after Gideon, Korah after Moses, the Pasquins after Augustus, the Pharisees after Christ, and every one has had his pursuers, and we are swindled, or belied, or misrepresented, or persecuted, or in some way wronged, and the danger is that healthful indignation shall become baleful spite, and that our feelings settle down into a prolonged outpouring of temper displeasing to God and ruinous to ourselves; and hence the important injunction of the text: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath."

Why that limitation to one's anger? Why that period of flaming vapor set to punctuate a flaming disposition? What has the sunset got to do with one's resentful emotions? Was it a haphazard sentiment written by Paul without special significance? No, no! I think of five reasons why we should not let the sun set before our temper.

First: Because twelve hours is long enough to be cross about any wrong inflicted upon us. Nothing is so exhausting to physical health or mental faculty as a protracted indulgence of ill-humor. It racks the nervous system. It hurts the digestion. It heats the blood in brain and heart until the whole body is first overheated and then depressed. Besides that, it sours the disposition, turns one aside from his legitimate work, expends energies that ought to be better employed, and does us more harm than it does our antagonist. Paul gives us a good, wide allowance of time for legitimate denunciation, from six o'clock to six o'clock, but says: "Stop there!" The morning will pass by, and the afternoon will arrive, and the sun will begin to set, and, I beg you, on its blazing hearth throw all your feuds, invectives, and satires.

Other things being equal, the man who preserves good temper will come out ahead. An old writer says that the celebrated John Henderson, of Bristol, England, was at a dining party where political excitement ran high and the debate got angry, and while Henderson was speaking, his opponent, unable to answer his argument, dashed a glass of wine in his face; when the speaker deliberately wiped the liquid from his face and said, "This, sir, is a digression; now, if you please, for the main argument." While worldly philosophy could help but very few to such equipoise of spirit, the grace of God could help any man to such a triumph. "Impossible," you say. "I would have either left the table in anger or have knocked the man down." But I have come to believe that nothing is impossible if God help.

Aye, you will not postpone till sundown forgiveness of enemies if you can realize that their behavior towards you may be put into the catalogue of the "all things" that "work together for good to those that love God." I have had multitudes of friends, but I have found in my own experience that God so arranged it that the greatest opportunities of usefulness that have been opened before me were opened by enemies. So you may harness your antagonists to your best interests and compel them to draw you on to better work and higher character. Suppose, instead of waiting until thirty-two minutes after four this evening, when the sun will set, you transact this glorious work of forgiveness at meridian.

Again: We ought not to let the sun go down on our wrath, because we will sleep better if we are at peace with everybody. Insomnia is getting to be one of the most prevalent of disorders. How few people retire at ten o'clock at night and sleep clear through to six in the morning! To relieve this disorder all narcotics, and sedatives, and morphine, and chloral, and bromide of potassium, and cocaine, and intoxicants are used: but nothing is more important than a quiet spirit if we would win somnolence. I give you an unfailing prescription for wakefulness: spend the evening hours rehearsing your wrongs and the best way of avenging them. Hold a convention of friends on this subject in your parlor or office at eight or nine o'clock. Close the evening by writing a bitter letter expressing your sentiments. Take from the desk or pigeonhole the papers in the case to refresh your mind with your enemy's meanness. Then lie down and wait for the coming of the day, and it will come before sleep comes, or your sleep will be worried quiescence, and, if you take the precaution to lie flat on your back, a frightful nightmare.

Why not put a bound to your animosity? Why let your foes come into the sanctities of your dormitory? Why let those slanderers who have already torn your reputation to pieces or injured your business, bend over your midnight pillow and drive from you one of the greatest blessings that God can offer — sweet, refreshing, all-invigorating sleep? Why not fence out your enemies by the golden bars of the sunset? Why not stand behind the barricade of evening cloud, and say to them: "Thus far and no farther." Many a man and many a woman is having the health of body as well as the health of soul eaten away by a malevolent spirit. I have in time of religious awakening had persons night after night, come into the inquiry room and get no peace of soul. After a while I have bluntly asked them: "Is there not some one against whom you have a hatred that you are not willing to give up?" After a little confusion they have slightly whispered, "Yes." Then I have said: "You will never find peace with God as long as you retain that virulence."

There are hundreds of domestic circles where that which most is needed is the spirit of forgiveness. Brothers apart, and sisters apart, and parents and children apart. Solomon says a brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city. Are there not enough sacred memories of your childhood to bring you together? The hour of sundown makes to that family no practical suggestion. Thomas Carlyle, in his biography of Frederick the Great, says the old King was told by the confessor he must be at peace with his enemies if he wanted to enter heaven. Then he said to his wife the Queen: "Write to your brother after I am dead that I forgive him." Roloff, the confessor, said: "Her Majesty had better write him immediately." "No," said the King, "after I am dead: that will be safer." So he let the sun of his earthly existence go down upon his wrath.

Again: We ought not to allow the sun to set before forgiveness takes place, because we might not live to see another day. And what if we should be ushered into the presence of our Maker with a grudge upon our soul? The majority of people depart this life in the night. Between eleven o'clock P. M. and three o'clock A.M. there is something in the atmosphere which relaxes the grip which the body has on the soul, and most of people enter the next world through the shadows of this world.

Shall we then leap over the roseate bank of sunset into the favorite hunting-ground of disease and death, carrying our animosities with us? Who would want to confront his God, against whom we have all done meaner things than anybody has ever done against us, carrying old grudges? On the night of our departure from this life into the next, our one plea will have to be for mercy, and it will have to be offered in the presence of him who has said: "If you forgive not men their trespasses neither will your Heavenly Father forgive your trespasses." What a sorry plight if we stand there hating this one, and hating that one, and wishing that one a damage, and wishing some one else a calamity, and we ourselves needing forgiveness for ten thousand obliquities of heart and life.

"But," says some woman, "there is a horrid creature that has so injured me that rather than make up with her I would die first." Well, sister, you may take your choice, for one or the other it will be—your complete pardon of her, or God's eternal banishment of you. "But," says some man, "that fellow who cheated me out of those goods, or damaged my business credit, or started that lie about me in the newspapers, or by his perfidy broke up my domestic happiness, forgive him I cannot, forgive him I will not." Well brother, take your choice. You will never be at peace with God till you are at peace with man. Feeling as you now do, you would not get so near the harbor of heaven as to see the lightship. Better leave that man with the God who said: "Vengeance is mine, I will repay." You may say: "I will make him sweat for that yet; I will make him squirm; I mean to pursue him to the death," but you are damaging yourself more than you damage him, and you are making heaven for your own soul an impossibility. If he will not be reconciled to you, be reconciled to him. In five or six hours it will be sundown. The dahlias will bloom against the western sky. Somewhere between this and that, take a shovel and bury the old quarrel at least six feet deep. "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath."

Again: We ought not to allow the passage of the sunset hour before the dismissal of all our affronts, because we may associate the sublimest action of the soul, with the sublimest spectacle in nature. It is a most delightsome thing to have our personal experiences allied with certain subjects. There is a tree or river bank where God first answered your prayer. You will never pass that place or think of that place without thinking of the glorious communion. There was some gate or some room or some garden wall where you were affianced with the companion who has been your chief joy in life. You never speak of that place but with a smile. Some of you have pleasant memories connected with the evening star, or the moon in its first quarter, or with the sunrise, because you saw it just as you were arriving at harbor after a tempestuous voyage. Forever and forever, O hearer, associate the sunset with your magnanimous, out and out, unlimited renunciation of all hatreds and forgiveness of all foes.

I admit it is the most difficult of all graces to practise, and at the start you may make a complete failure, but keep on in the attempt to practise it. Shakespeare wrote ten plays before he reached "Hamlet," and seventeen plays before he reached "Merchant of Venice," and twenty-eight plays before he reached "Macbeth." And gradually you will come from the easier graces to the most difficult. Besides that, it is not a matter of personal determination so much as the laying hold of the almighty arm of God, who will help us to do anything we ought to do. Remember that in all personal controversies the one least to blame will have to take the first step at pacification, if it is ever effected. The contest between Aeschines and Aristippus resounds through history: but Aristippus, who was least to blame, went to Aeschines and said: "Shall we not agree to be friends before we make ourselves the laughing stock of the whole country?" And Aeschines said: "Thou art a far better man than I, for I began the quarrel, but thou hast been the first in healing the breach;" and they were always friends afterwards. So let the one of you that is least to blame take the first step toward reconciliation. The one most in the wrong will never take it.

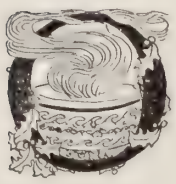
Oh, it makes one feel splendidly to be able by God's help to practise unlimited forgiveness. It improves one's body and soul. It improves the countenance by scattering the gloom and makes you somewhat like God himself. He is omnipotent, and we cannot copy that. He is independent of all the universe, and we cannot copy that. He is creative, and we cannot copy that. He is omnipresent, and we cannot copy that. But he forgives with a broad sweep all faults, and all neglects, and all insults, and all wrong-doings, and in that we may copy him with mighty success. Go harness that sublime action of your soul to the sunset—the hour when the gate of heaven opens to let the day pass into the eternities, and some of the glories escape this way through the brief opening. We talk about the Italian sunsets, and sunset amid the Appenines, and sunset amid the Cordilleras: but I will tell you how you may see a grander sunset than any mere lover of nature ever beheld: that is, by flinging into it all your hatreds and animosities, and let the horses of fire trample them, and the spearmen of fire stab them, and the beach of fire consume them, and the billows of fire overwhelm them.

Again: We should not let the sun go down on our wrath, because it is of little importance what the world says of you or does to you when you have the affluent God of the sunset as your Provider and Defender. If that God of such infinite resources that he can put on the wall of the sky each evening more than the Louvre and Luxemburg galleries all in one, is my God and your God, our Provider and Protector, what is the use of our worrying about any human antagonism? If we are misinterpreted, the God of the many-colored sunset can put the right color on our action. If all the garniture of the western heavens at eventide is but the upholstery of one of the windows of our future home, what small business for us to be chasing enemies! Let not this Sabbath sun go down upon your wrath.

And now, I wish for all of you a beautiful sunset to your earthly existence. With some of you it has been a long day of trouble, and with others of you it will be far from calm. When the sun rose at six o'clock it was the morning of youth, and a fair day was prophesied, but by the time the noonday or middle-life had come, and the clock of your earthly existence had struck twelve, cloud-racks gathered, and tempest bellowed in the track of tempest. But, as the evening of old age approaches, I pray God the skies may brighten and the clouds be piled up into pillars as of celestial temples to which you go, or move as with mounted cohorts come to take you home. And as you sink out of sight below the horizon, may there be a radiance of Christian example lingering long after you are gone, and on the heavens be written in letters of sapphire, and on the waters in letters of opal, and on the hills in letters of emerald: "Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw itself, for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended." So shall the sunset on earth become the sunrise of heaven.

A Great Gospel Singer Gone

Rev. Robert Lowry, Author of "I Need Thee Every Hour," "Where is My Wandering Boy?" and "Shall we Gather at the River?" Passes Away at Plainfield, N. J.



ON Tuesday afternoon, November 28, a company of Christian men and women, many of them from remote cities, met in a pleasant, roomy mansion in Plainfield, N. J., to pay the last tribute of respect to the mortal remains of a very dear friend who had passed away. The Rev. Robert Lowry—over whose flower-covered casket the silent mourners hung as they took a last look of the noble features of the dead—had reached the ripe age of seventy-four when he was called from earth to heaven on November 25. His life work as the most distinguished composer of sacred song our country has ever produced was a remarkable one, and the influence he exercised over the hearts of his fellow men was precious and far-reaching. In the intervals of his musical work, which kept him closely confined to his study, he displayed a bright and genial side that won friends everywhere. By his more immediate associates he was greatly beloved.

The songs by which he will always be most widely known and which are familiar to Christians everywhere are: "Shall We Gather at the River," "I Need Thee Every Hour," and "Where is my Wandering Boy?" With religious assemblies the first is a popular favorite, while the sweet yet sad strains of the last have wooed many a wanderer back from the paths of sin to righteousness. It is sung in every rescue mission in the United States, and is familiar also in Canada and England. On these three Gospel songs alone, Dr. Lowry's fame as a composer might rest secure; although many of his other productions have also attained wide popularity.

At the request of the editor of this journal, Mr. Hubert P. Main, a fellow-composer and for many years an intimate friend of Dr. Lowry, has prepared the review of his career which appears below.

. . .

Rev. Robert Lowry, D.D., the son of Mr. Crozier Lowry, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., March 12, 1826. He received a common school education. At the age of seventeen years he became a follower of Christ. His parents were members of the Associate Presbyterian Church, but his study of the Scriptures led him to cast in his lot with the Baptists, and, having been baptized by Rev. Geo. B. Ide, D.D., he united with the first Baptist Church in Philadelphia. He at once devoted himself to Christian work, especially in connection with Sunday Schools. Encouraged by Dr. Ide to prepare himself for the work of the Christian ministry, he entered Lewisburg, now Bucknell University, where he was graduated with valedictory honors in 1854. The same year he was ordained and became pastor of the First Baptist Church in Westchester, Pa., where he remained for five years. In 1858 he accepted a call to the pastorate of the Bloomingdale Baptist Church, New York. In 1861 he became pastor of the Hanson Place Baptist Church, Brooklyn. Here he remained until 1869, when he accepted the professorship of belles-lettres in his alma mater, together with the pastorate of the Lewisburg Baptist Church. This double service he performed six years, and then removed to Plainfield, N. J.

Here a new church was organized, and Dr. Lowry, the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity having been conferred upon him by Lewisburg University, was called to the pastorate of what has since been known as the Park Avenue Baptist Church. In 1880, Dr. Lowry took a rest of four years, and visited Europe. In 1885 he felt that he must have a longer respite, and after nine years of labor with a people to whom he was tenderly attached, he resigned. For a time he traveled in the South and West, and subsequently in Mexico. Reinvigorated in health, he returned to Plainfield, where he resided until his death.

Successful as Dr. Lowry has been as a pastor and preacher, the Christian world knew him better as a writer of hymns and composer of sacred music. On the death of William B. Bradbury, the music publishing business which he had built up in New York was continued by Biglow & Main. The new firm made a proposal to prepare a book for use in Sunday Schools. In 1868 Dr. Lowry edited "Chapel Melodies," with S. J. Vail, and in 1869 "Bright Jewels," with Wm. F. Sherwin and Chester G. Allen, the latter book reaching a sale of 500,000 copies. In 1871 he commenced the series of Sunday School Hymn Books with W. H. Doane, of Cincinnati, O. "Pure Gold" appearing in 1871, "Royal Diadem" in 1873, and "Brightest and Best" in 1875, the sale of which were over 2,000,000 copies. Then followed "Welcome Tidings," with W. H. Doane, Ira D. Sankey and P. P. Bliss in 1877, also by Lowry and Doane, "Fountain of Song," 1877; "Gospel Hymn and Tune Book," 1879; "Good as Gold," 1880; "Our Glad Hosanna," 1882; "Joyful Lays," 1884; "Glad Refrain," 1886; "Bright Array," 1889, and "Royal Hymnal," 1898, with Ira D. Sankey. He also wrote many "Services" for Christmas and Easter; Christmas and Easter Carols.

Where is my wand'ring boy to-night—The boy of my fond'rest care,
Shall we gather at the river, Where bright angel feet have trod;
PHOTO BY PARKINSON, NEW YORK

THE LATE REV. ROBERT LOWRY, THE FAMOUS HYMNOLOGIST

In these various works are many popular hymns composed by Dr. Lowry, among the best known besides "Shall We Gather at the River," 1864, are:

"Shall We Know Each Other There," 1864; "One More Day's Work for Jesus," 1873; *"They Are Going Down the Valley," 1869; *"Weeping Will Not Save Me," 1867; "The Rifted Rock," 1871; *"Where is My Boy To-night," 1877; *"Jesus is My Saviour," 1878; "I Need Thee Every Hour," 1872; "Something for Jesus," 1871; "Chime on," 1860; *"I'll Away to the Sabbath School," 1847; "We're Marching to Zion," 1867; "Follow on," 1880; "Bless Me Now," 1873; "The Mistakes of My Life are Many," 1871; "Blessed River," 1871; "My Life Flows on in Endless Song," 1869; "All the Way My Saviour Leads Me," 1875; "When the Comforter Came," 1875, &c., &c., &c.

Dr. Lowry some years since gave the story of his hymn, "Shall We Gather at the River," as follows:

"One afternoon in July, 1864, when I was pastor of Hanson Place Baptist Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., the weather was oppressively hot, and I was lying on a lounge in a state of physical exhaustion. I was almost incapable of bodily exertion, and my imagination began to take to itself wings. Visions of the future passed before me with startling vividness. The imagery of the Apocalypse took the form of a tableau. Brightest of all were the throne, the heavenly river, and the gathering of the Saints. My soul seemed to take new life from that celestial outlook. I began to wonder why the hymn writers had said so much about the 'river of death,' and so little about 'the pure water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.' As I mused the words began to construct themselves. They came first as a question of Christian inquiry, 'Shall We Gather?' Then they broke out in chorus, as an answer of Christian faith, 'Yes, we'll gather.' On this question and answer the hymn developed itself. The music came with the hymn."

In the following spring forty thousand children sang it on their May anniversary parade and in their churches. Then it went everywhere. It was sung in conventions, in churches, in Sunday Schools, and at the bedside of the dying. It crossed the ocean and became known in Great Britain and on the continent. At some of the most distant missionary stations in Asia it was translated and sung. It found its way to the Sandwich Islands and soon encircled the globe. It is probably the one hymn by which its author is best known.

Dr. Lowry leaves a wife and three sons. The latter are all married, and one is pastor of a Baptist church in Rahway, N. J.

*Both words and music by Dr. Lowry. The dates given are generally the year of publication.

BECAUSE HE PROMISES ME

WHEN I must pass through the deep waters so chill,
When sorrow and darkness I see,
I know Christ is with me upholding me still,
Because he promises me.

Chorus—Because he promises me,
Because he promises me;
Whatever o'ertakes me, he never forsakes me,
Because he promises me.

In times of temptation, when Satan entices,
He hears and he answers my plea:
So good is my Saviour, so willing to bless,
Because he promises me.

Whatever my troubles, I come to my Lord;
My help ever-present is he; [all—
I know he will lead me safely through
Because he promises me.

'Tis blessed to know I am safe in his love,
To rest from anxiety free;
To give him my care who careth for me,
Because he promises me.

—MRS. FRANK A. BRECK.

Please Do Not Wait

Subscribers, whose term expires with the present month, should not wait for a special expiry notice, but should send in their renewals at once, especially so if they intend to take advantage of any of our unprecedented Premium Offers. We should be sorry to have to disappoint them in the timely delivery of premiums, but as our stock may prove inadequate, owing to the enormous increase of business this season, we cannot guarantee to fill orders that are not sent in promptly. Our subscribers may, however, depend on it that we shall leave no stone unturned to meet their every demand.

The Memorial Church at Spires

A number of contributions in aid of the Memorial Church project at Spires, Germany, have been received. Among the letters are several expressing hearty sympathy with the proposed memorial which will adorn the historic cradle of Protestantism. One of the letters received by Rev. Albert Beyschlag, the representative of the Spires committee, now in this country, says:

Find enclosed a mite towards the Memorial Church—a noble and grand idea to perpetuate the glorious stand and protest of our devoted Christian friends in the cause of truth—for which we can never be sufficiently thankful. Doubtless, your efforts will be crowned with success here, for Americans, too, participate in this great blessing.

New York City. AN INVALID.

This letter from a very young reader is interesting:

I have seen your picture and that of your church in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and as we read what its purpose is and those who it commemorates, my sister and I emptied our little banks, and I spoke to my Sabbath School teacher, and he gave me twenty-five cents. So hoping you will accept our little gift, we enclose $2.25.

Jersey City. LESTER MURRAY (six years old).

These are only a few of many similar letters received by Mr. Beyschlag, whose present address is 235 Harrison street, Brooklyn, N. Y., and who is authorized by the committee to accept contributions for the Memorial Church project.

FOR THE FINAL OPPORTUNITY

To Get OUR HOME SUNSHINE CALENDAR FOR 1900, with an Exhaustive Chronology of Leading Events of the 19th Century Arranged According to DAYS

See Page 962

An Ideal Christmas Present

Is a $30 set of the World-Wide Encyclopedia, which THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Book Department offers at half price—$15. One dollar down and one dollar a month, or 10 per cent. discount for spot cash. Nothing better, nothing more useful. Ask your pastor how he would like a set for Christmas! Ten thousand large pages, 96 maps. Brought up to date, including the Spanish-American War. Address to-day: The Christian Herald Book Department, Bible House, New York.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Fruits of Right and Wrong

International S. S. Lesson for Dec. 17
Mal. 3 : 13 ; 4-6 Golden Text, Gal. 6 : 7

SOCIETY [illegible] elements which existed in Jerusalem in the days of Ezra and Nehemiah. If such a writer as the author of the book that we know as Malachi, appeared in these closing days of the nineteenth century, he would have the same message to give, with little change of detail. As we explained, in this journal of November 29, the book was probably the work of Ezra, who chose to write anonymously under the title of Malachi or God's messenger. He addresses three kinds of people: The openly wicked, who oppressed the poor, divorced their wives and married heathen women, and acted as if they did not believe any God existed; second, people who kept up the forms of religion, but secretly defrauded God by withholding offerings, and bringing the poorest and least saleable animals for sacrifice; and third, good people who were puzzled by God's apparent indifference to character. These last evidently could not understand how it was that a righteous God allowed the wicked to prosper, and let the good lose by their goodness. Representatives of all three classes might easily be pointed out in our own cities at this day. The writer cautions his readers against presuming on God's silence. He is patient, but he is not indifferent. He knows who is really serving him, and who is merely pretending to serve him. God has not changed. As surely as the harvest is of the same nature as the seed, so will those who live righteously reap the fruits of righteousness. The day was coming, the prophet declared, when God would send a messenger who, like Elijah at Carmel (II. Kings 18: 21-46), would demand that the people declare themselves, and range themselves either on the side of God or of the devil. Perhaps, he hinted, in that day, some of those who were then professing to be longing for such a manifestation, would find it not so agreeable as they supposed; for that coming would try all hearts, and only those who were true to the core, would be able to bear the test that would be applied.

Turn the hearts of the children. The turning was needed, for the children were forgetting the lessons their fathers had learned and were inclined to despise the principles which had been the mainstay of the nation. The result of evil ways is inevitably misery. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap." It is a law of nature, which pays no heed to repentance. "I mean to enjoy myself while I am young," said a college graduate, "and when I reach middle age I shall clean up and be a decent, respectable citizen. His room-mate, a young man who had not the other's advantages of fortune and high connections, said: "Better begin with the cleanliness, otherwise some of the dirt may stick." "I shall take care of that," said the other. But no man is able to defy natural law. The two met twenty years later, and the man who had boasted that he would "take care," was prematurely old, suffering from diseases induced by dissipation, and in abject poverty, resulting from gambling. The seed he had sown in his youth had come to the harvest, and as is always the case, the fruits were of the nature of the seed.

It is vain to serve God. A very impatient short-sighted person it must be who comes to that conclusion. As a clergyman once said to an infidel who challenged him to show what rewards had ever come from serving God, or evils from not serving him: "You must not expect that God will settle up accounts with men every Saturday night. An employer may do that because of the necessity of his workmen, but God may be expected to take a longer view." Two young men were working in a country store. One of them was the only son of the proprietor, and the other was a hired clerk. The son became discontented when he saw the money the clerk received at the end of the month. He had never had so much in his pocket to do as he liked with in his life. "Father," he said, "it seems to me Daniel has the better of me, you give me only a little pocket money and see how much money he has to spend." The father looked at his son in surprise. "Do you want to be paid for your services, like Daniel?" he asked. "I thought my boy understood his position better. You are not working for money; you are working to get knowledge and experience. Your reward will be in becoming a good business man, with a thorough knowledge of business methods, so that when this business comes to you, you will know how to manage it and make it a better success than it has ever been." A Christian must not be dissatisfied if God does not pay him for his services in money.

When I make up my jewels. In that charming work of Mr. Ruskin, Ethics of the Dust, he points out that crystals have two qualities which go to make up their value. One is their shape and the other is their purity. The shape is determined by the crystal's surroundings, the quick or slow process of cooling, or outward pressure. "But," he says, "it seems as if it had in itself the power of rejecting impurity if it has crystalline life enough. Here is a crystal of quartz, well shaped in its way; but it seems to have been languid and sick at heart; and some milky substance has got into it, and mixed itself up with it, all through. It makes the quartz quite yellow, if you hold it up to the light, and milky blue on the surface. Here is another, broken out of all traceable shape, but as pure as a mountain spring. I like this one best. Purity is in most cases a prior if not a nobler virtue. The crystal must be either dirty or clean. So it is with one's hands and with one's heart—only you can wash your hands without changing them, but not hearts, nor crystals. On the whole, while you are young, it will be as well to take care that your hearts don't want much washing; for they may perhaps need wringing also, when they do." It is a great help to any girl or boy who is striving to resist evil, to remember that the pure soul is as precious to God as one of his jewels.

"WHATSOEVER A MAN SOWETH THAT SHALL HE REAP"

Christ's Coming Foretold

International S. S. Lesson for Dec. 24.
Isa. 9 : 2-7. Golden Text, Luke 2 : 11.

CLEAR proof is furnished by this passage from Isaiah that Peter was right when he intimated (I. Peter 1:10, 11) that the prophets did not themselves understand the truths that they wrote. They, doubtless, applied a certain meaning to them, but there was a far-reaching significance in the words that they penned, of which they had no conception. In this instance, when King Ahaz replied to Isaiah with the contention that it was useless to look to God for deliverance, seeing that God had not interposed to prevent the invasion, Isaiah consistently urges him not to let go his trust in God. God, he says in effect, still loves and protects his people and would surely show that he did. So certain was this fact, that a young mother might confidently name her child Immanuel, which means, "God with us." The time would come when such a name would express the jubilant feeling of the nation. Then the king would be the representative of God, and his whole policy and principles of government would be based on God's law. The nation would then lose sight of the king and recognize as the real ruler, the Counsellor, the mighty God, the Prince of Peace. No such ruler ever came. Isaiah's ideal was never fulfilled. But when Christ came and proclaimed the Kingdom of God, then his followers began to see that Isaiah's words had a deeper meaning either by Isaiah or by the people to whom he spoke. Such a King has come, not to [illegible] spirituality, and by love." This is no [illegible] is at this day no ruler on earth who has so many subjects as Christ has. There are no subjects so loyal, so devoted as those who have sworn fealty to Him, whose birth in the stable of Bethlehem all Christendom is about to celebrate. Thus, in a better way than Isaiah ever dreamed, his prediction has been fulfilled.

Garments rolled in blood. In that way all the empires of the world have been built up. Alexander, Cæsar, Charles XII., Napoleon—all adopted the same principles to extend their empires. To add a province, they would enter it and fight and kill and destroy, till it was subdued. To this day, the rulers of the world show, by their vast armaments, that they rely on the same methods. But the prophet foresaw a new way, which was not only more beneficent, but more effectual. The kingdom of God, founded on peace and love, would not only be more extensive, but it would do what none of the others had done—it would endure. This is true of the individual soul as it is of the empire. One of the most beautiful of the novelist's creations is that one, so true to nature, of the reformation of a soldier. The man had been punished in every conceivable way, but he would drink and would be guilty of breaches of discipline. Punishment hardened him and made him worse. At last his captain took him aside and tried the effect of a loving talk upon him. The man who had resisted harsh measures, broke down under affection and became a good, brave and distinguished soldier. He was permanently changed by the power of love.

Fuel of fire. The prophet foresaw that in the end all that is evil must perish. It is not in its nature to endure, though it may appear strong and imposing. Thirty years ago the French empire was so brilliant and gay that it dazzled the eyes of all the world. Those who saw the court functions in the palace of Tuilleries marvelled at their magnificence. The Emperor and the Empress, with their young son, walked through the halls amid a host of admiring courtiers, and their power seemed to be enduring. But it was a wicked court in which vice was rampant and the statesmen and generals on whom the state depended were corrupt. When the day of trial came in the conflict with Germany, it was seen that its strength had been eaten away, and like a hollow tree it was swept away by the storm. The secular historian and the Christian observer had no dispute about the cause of the collapse. The judgment of God is against wickedness, but those who did not recognize God in worldly affairs, averred that wickedness brought the empire to its fall.

Unto us a child is born. Who can measure the influence of a little child? The prophet saw this all-conquering everlasting empire starting at a cradle. The weakest and most helpless of all things is a new born babe. But is that helpless creature destitute of power? Ask its father and mother. No power on earth could make them do the things they will do for love of their babe. It ought not to have surprised the world, which for centuries had witnessed this power in its homes, that the conquest of the world should begin with a Divine Child. A rough, stalwart man, who was foremost in every disturbance, who was always ready for a fight and was the terror of the neighborhood, went home one night and found a new born little girl in his home. A new feeling he had never known before filled his heart as she was put in his arms. The next night he did what he had never done before—went straight home from his work without a drink. It was amazing to see the rough man with that babe in his arms and the astonishing thing was that the infant loved him. There was no mistake about it. Its wailing would cease when he took it and it nestled on his shoulder. As it grew older its love for him increased. Every night the little golden haired girl waited for him at his door and he dare not drink lest he do her an injury. He quitted all his evil ways that he might be a true father to his little girl, and it was her influence that took him to the house of God and finally made him a Christian.

In Santa Claus' Workshop

The Making of Toys—How Dollies, Tin Soldiers and Horses Grow . . .

IF there is ever a month in the year when the subject of toys is interesting to big and little, young and old, it is the month of December. Parents, mission workers, preachers, Sunday School teachers, and even ministers of state, presidents of great republics and rulers of European empires have been known to give themselves considerably to the study of dolls, toy engines, wagons, horses and the like during this magic month in which Christmas comes. Nobody more than gray-haired grandmamma finds the problem of bisque, rag or wax babies a lively issue, and her aged fingers busy themselves with a needle, that has not lost its cunning, in fashioning lilliputian costumes out of enchanting scraps of blue and pink silk. As for Miss Toddlekins, no questions seem of so very much importance as those of "blue eyes or brown," "black hair or golden," "eyes that open or shut," "a real natural cry," and power to "say mamma and papa," while Master Toddlekins, her brother, dreams of hobby horses, engines that run of themselves, sailors that climb a string or a pole, and similar marvels in toy construction. Since so many folks, of all sorts and sizes, are thinking about toys at the present moment, a goodly company will doubtless be interested in our pictures, showing some of the things which go on in that world where toys are made—it would be hardly courteous to Master and Miss Toddlekins, Lady Doll and Captain Tinsoldier to call such a place a "factory," would it? In one room, two workmen and a workwoman—or shall we say "three good fairies"?—are endowing numerous vehicles with power of locomotion, and clever hammers make merry music on gay tin coaches and spirited steeds that never break out of harness. In another apartment, the "good fairies" find evident entertainment while painting complexions on funny-looking, baldheaded babies. A whole brigade of benign beings, abundantly provided with glue-pots and other mysteries of their art, are putting the finishing touches on drums, railway coaches, tin horns, and other delights in another corner of the world where toys are made.

Still, toymaking is prosaic work, and our little readers will not be sorry that this is so when we whisper that a host of men and women, boys and girls, earn their living by it. For such good reason they will even suffer the use of the word "factory" in connection with the creation of their doll families and tin batalions. The most of the toys manufactured in the United States are made in New York, particularly the dolls. Until seven years ago there was not a doll made in the United States, except those that were fashioned at individual homes. To-day, they are turned out from factories by the thousand. What is more, they are better dolls than those which come from abroad, and they sell for less money. We make more tin toys in this country than are imported, but in iron toys Germany still holds the lead and furnishes the bulk of our supply. The modern doll is made of a patented composition. This is made in liquid form, and then poured into moulds, the moulds being in the shape of the various parts, which, when put together, form a complete doll. The moulds are allowed to stand for a day, and then they are removed, and what will eventually, perhaps, be the head of a doll has assumed shape. This is only the beginning. The doll in the rough, or rather the parts of it, go from the moulder to the polisher, who uses both an emery wheel and sandpaper, very fine, to bring about that smoothness which all well-made dolls have. Then the head is turned over to another workman, who puts in the eyes and paints on the eyebrows and eyelashes; that is, unless the doll is one of the very expensive kind, when the eyebrows and eyelashes are of real hair. These latter are the luxuries, however, and only a few of them are made. After this the doll heads are turned over to the wig-makers, and the wigs are glued on. Then the doll is put together and sometimes dressed.

In the manufacture of tin toys the process is more mechanical. Machines do much of the work, such as shaping them, putting on the general coloring and embossing them. The hand-work consists of painting the horses, cars and locomotives, putting the two halves of the tin horses together and soldering them, fixing the wheels on carts, wagons and cars, stringing drums, etc.

Fifty per cent. of the employees who do these things are girls, and their wages vary from fifty cents to one dollar a day. They are not paid by the day or week, but by the piece, and the girl who paints the medium-sized tin horse has to paint three gross in a day to make a dollar. The busiest months are June, July, August and September, for in the early part of January, the salesmen start out to sell goods for Christmas.

1. "WHEELING" TOY CARTS, CARS AND LOCOMOTIVES ... 2. GIVING DOLLS A ROSY COMPLEXION ... 3. GIRL WORKERS IN A TOY FACTORY

Found Christ in a Cell

Ben Roberts was born in one of the British Provinces. His father, who was a member of Parliament, was able to give his son a good start in life. Soon after leaving home he came to the United States. Here he led a wild and godless life. After a while he reached "the end of his rope" and wound up in the New York Tombs prison. In his new quarters he had time to think over his past life and it did not take him long to reach the conclusion that thus far he had been a rank failure. He had tried many times to reform and had made good resolutions, but all had failed. He believed he had sinned away the day of grace.

On New Year's day, 1899, during the morning service, while Chaplain Munro and his helpers were on the bridge of the second tier, Roberts dropped on his knees and made a full surrender of himself to his Lord Jesus, and then and there found pardon and peace. His repentance was sincere, for with tears in his eyes he confessed himself a poor ungodly sinner, and from the hour of his surrender took pains to warn those around him, and especially his cell mate, to shun the life which in the end would only bring sorrow and shame. A few days afterwards he sent a letter to Chaplain Munro, in which he said: "Sitting in my cell I am changed from being a sinner to a Christian. In proof of this, through earnest prayer, God has forgiven me my sins, has taken the weight of the sin off me and sent me to work for him, and fight against the devil who caused me to commit the sins that blighted my life. When on New Year's morning, during the services, the words of God's Gospel came upon me, 'Though your sins be as scarlet they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson they shall be as wool,' I knew that God was speaking to me for the last time. I then asked him in sincere prayer to forgive me my many sins and start me, that New Year's day, 1899, on the road to eternal happiness. God answered me. I felt at once relieved, newly made, in fact, altogether different from my past feelings—as though a sudden brightness came into my soul. I continued to ask God to keep me forever in his own way, praying for strength, grace and guidance in his path of duty. I also thanked God for causing me to be put in prison, that I might have time to reflect on my past life, and choose whether or not I would follow Christ the remainder of my life or follow the devil. Whatever is my fate in the future I know that I am safely anchored in Christ's harbor of eternal rest."

♣ ♣

The Lord a Preferred Creditor

From Mr. John Henderson, of St. Louis, a reader of this journal, comes this letter, relating a personal experience that cannot fail to interest many.

Some ten years ago I was overwhelmed with debt, and saw no hope of ever being able to pay. It was my most earnest desire so to do. For three years I struggled along with my affairs growing worse rather than better. I was offered a position from a gentleman whom I had never seen. This position realized for me an income more than sufficient to make my necessary expenses, and I was greatly troubled about my duty in the premises, whether to pay all to my creditors or give the Lord his share. I finally concluded to give the Lord one-tenth of my gross income first, making him a preferred creditor. This course I have pursued since, and I have been singularly blessed. My income has increased and my debts are paid.

Another Cry From Far-Off India!

Bishop Thoburn Writes of the Present Famine A Glowing Tribute to "The Christian Herald"

THE ways of God with individuals and with nations are past finding out. Prosperity comes to one and adversity to another, at times and seasons which are no doubt chosen, but they seem very mysterious to mortals on earth. India has been very sorely afflicted during the past few years. The pestilence which began to make itself felt nearly four years ago continues to spread among the towns and villages, and thus far there seems no prospect of its early abatement. The sore famine of three years ago had given place to better times, copious rains had fallen all over the great empire, and people of all classes had taken new-hearted hope; but the failure of the usual rainy season this year became the signal for another sore visitation of famine. Usually, with the regularity of the clock, the rainy season sets in all over the Indian Peninsula, beginning with the extreme south, in the closing weeks of May, and gradually working northward until it reaches the extreme points of North India in the closing days of June. During three summer months refreshing rain falls almost daily all over the vast region of Southern Asia. These rains bring life and health and beauty to three hundred millions of people and to the very landscape itself.

This year, however, the rains, which are the very life of the people, have failed over large tracts in different parts of the empire. Strangely enough, the worst failure has taken place in the district of Gujarat, on the west coast, in a region where the people had not been afflicted with a famine for one hundred years. It seems probable that this exceptional district will suffer most severely of all during the present visitation. People are reported as already dying. Thousands upon thousands of cattle are being hurried to the jungles of Central India in the hope of finding pasturage enough to save their lives, but already these poor creatures are dropping exhausted by the way and perishing by hundreds daily. Half starved oxen can be purchased for half a dollar apiece. Hungry families, like the hungry cattle, are also seen pursuing their sorrowful way in hopes of finding refuge in some unknown quarter, but in large numbers these poor creatures must simply become exhausted and lie down to die.

In other parts of India, some of them more than a thousand miles distant from Gujarat, the rains have utterly failed, and equal misery seems to stare the people in the face. I mention the one district because my most recent information has come from that quarter, but wherever famine shows its gaunt form the painful story is, in its chief outlines, the same. The highways become covered with people, some of whom are mere walking skeletons, vainly seeking a region where bread can be found, but for the most part wholly without the thought of any special destination in their minds. Beggars are seen everywhere. Children without parents wander on the highways. The spectacle of half-starved human beings is one most painful which is not very strange that missionaries found on the earth. The sight of a skeleton stalking along the highways could hardly be more startling than that of a skeleton which is simply covered with skin and animated by a life which is only another name for weariness and pain. The cry of the orphan, if it could only enter into the ears of all good people in distant lands, would stir the Christian world to such a movement of sympathy and help as has never been witnessed on earth.

Christian Herald" has become known throughout the world as the helper of those who chance to be in sore need.

DISTRIBUTE "THE CHRISTIAN HERALD" FAMINE FUND

of India remember that in one form and another "The Christian Herald" sent Four Hundred Thousand Dollars to aid the famishing millions of India during the recent visitation of famine in that stricken country. I do not forget that it may seem inconsiderate on the part of our missionaries to ask for more help from those who came so nobly to the rescue only a few years ago, but it is those who have once helped the starving, and who have shown by their generosity that they are followers of Him who "had compassion on the multitude because they had nothing to eat," who are most likely to help in this new emergency. I do not believe that they have become weary in well-doing.

ORPHAN FAMINE GIRLS IN RAMABAI'S INSTITUTION

It is not strange that, as the dark shadow of this impending calamity begins to come over us again, the hearts of all connected with the suffering districts turn towards THE CHRISTIAN HERALD as if prompted by a natural instinct "The

I do not wish to become importunate, and above all I should be sorry a thousand times to leave the impression upon any mind or heart that I have not fully appreciated, in the fullest sense of the word, all that was done by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and by its energetic managers in sending us the magnificent sum which was collected during the recent famine. It is because I appreciate that effort that I venture to appeal once more. In a few weeks I shall be on my way back again to India. It would be more than a joy to me if I could carry with me a message of encouragement and hope from THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and from the great army of its enthusiastic supporters. May God move upon the hearts of all who read these lines to do that which shall be acceptable to Him, remembering the special promises which are given to those who not only help the needy everywhere, but particularly in their times of special need.

J. M. THOBURN.

Met Death in Prayer

A MINISTER of the Gospel who is a regular reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD sends us the following account of the death of a good man and a prominent physician. Dr. [illegible] F. Cooper, of Anaheim, Cal. Dr. Cooper was a prominent man in his profession, and was at one time connected with many leading hospitals. As a member of [illegible] he was widely known. At the time of his death he was seventy-six years old, and had found it necessary of late to somewhat circumscribe his activities. He appeared in excellent health and spirits, when, on the evening of his death, after he had made his usual professional [illegible] night. At nine the next morning, when his assistant, Dr. Ella B. Goff, came to the office and heard that the doctor had not come down for his breakfast, she was uneasy, went to his room, rapped, received no answer and looked in to perceive the aged physician kneeling by his bed apparently in prayer. She withdrew, not wishing to disturb his devotions. The stillness of the figure, and the peculiar hue of the side of his face exposed, troubled her, however, and she returned to the room to discover that the good old man was dead. If it were left to us all to choose the way in which we would meet "the Angel of Death," is there one who would not say: "While holding communion with God?" We do not believe there is even an infidel but would find comfort in the thought that the dread messenger should find him voicing to his Maker the prayer of simple faith.

A Y. M. C. A. on a Warship

A LETTER received by Mr. F. L. Smith, Naval Secretary of the International Young Men's Christian Association, from Chaplain Helms of the U. S. S. Brooklyn, dated Gibraltar, announces that a Young Men's Christian Association is in process of formation on the vessel which will include about all of the officers and men. Chaplain Helms is exceedingly anxious that the tedium of the long three years' cruise may be relieved by ample supplies of current literature, and requests Mr. Smith to forward a supply to Manila by the earliest United States transport. The Chaplain has also organized on board the vessel an excellent band of twelve pieces, and wishes a supply of band music and popular songs. Our readers who wish to make it pleasant for the jackies on board the Brooklyn can forward any good religious literature to Mr. Smith, at the Naval Branch, 167 Sands Street, Brooklyn, and he will see that it reaches the proper destination.

China Persecuting Missionaries

ON this page is a picture of Cowloon, the scene of the recent outrages on Christian missionaries. Full details of the attacks have not been received: but it seems clear that the animosity, which was directed chiefly against the French missionaries, was of the usual character. The more educated classes of Chinamen appear to take no part in these attacks; but it is suspected that they are in a large measure responsible for them. There is reason to believe that the ignorant classes are incited to riot by people who know how to work on their prejudices. Charges are made against the missionaries, which are utterly baseless, but which arouse the mob to fury and hatred. In nearly every instance of outrage the open attack is preceded by the circulation of illustrated handbills in which the missionaries are represented as practising barbarous cruelties on Chinese children. This literature does its malign work, and when the time is ripe and the Chinese magistrate is conveniently absent from his post of duty, the mission house is surrounded by an angry mob intent on destruction and murder. Chinese converts suffer with the missionaries and have been known to imperil their own lives in aiding the missionaries to escape. It is now as it was in the days of old:

The dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty (Ps. 74: 20).

Slanders Disproved

The doubt implied in a paragraph in this journal on October 18, as to the veracity of the charges against the matron of the State Industrial School for Girls, at Trenton, N. J., appears to have been well-founded. An official investigation of the charges has been made, and it has been proved that the allegations of cruelty referred to, had no foundation in fact. In the one instance in which death occurred, the autopsy showed that the girl had died from natural causes, resulting from her manner of life and that the matron was in no way responsible for the fatality. The majority of the inmates of the institution are sent there for reformatory purposes, and belong to a class whose statements cannot be accepted without corroboration. Some of them appear to have conspired to injure the character of the matron; but she was fortunate in having friends who were able to secure her official vindication. It is evident that now, as in olden time, those who endeavor to reclaim the erring, are likely to be slandered and maligned by the very persons whom they are trying to redeem.

False witnesses did rise up: they laid to my charge things that I knew not; they rewarded me evil for good (Ps. 35: 11).

An Adopted Daughter's Status

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has handed down a decision in the suit of an adopted daughter for a share in a large estate. The owner of the estate died about three years ago, leaving a will in which he bequeathed all his property to his wife, or in the event of her dying before him, "to her children, share and share alike." His wife did die before he did, so when he died the children were entitled to their inheritance. There were two of them, but there was a third claim, from a lady twenty-five years of age, who had been adopted by the testator in 1875. The adoption had been by a regular legal deed in which it was provided that she should sustain the relation of a daughter to her foster parents and should be clothed, reared and educated in all respects as their own child. The question arose whether under the terms of the will the deed of adoption gave her the right of inheritance. The Appellate Court has now passed on the case by deciding that she is entitled to the same share as if she had been a natural child of the testator. Doubtless, the court's decision is in accordance with the wishes of the lady's foster-father, though it will reduce the portions of his own children. It is a comfort to the Christian that his portion as a child by adoption is similarly secure to him through his Heavenly Father's love to him:

How shall I put thee among the children and give thee a pleasant land, a goodly heritage of the hosts of nations? And I said, Thou shalt call me my Father and shalt not turn away from me (Jer. 3: 19).

The South African Conflict

Cable dispatches from the seat of war in South Africa show that the Boers are making a desperate and determined struggle to prevent the relief of Ladysmith on the East, and Kimberley on the West. Lord Methuen, who is advancing toward Kimberley has had to fight a battle at every stage of his progress. At Belmont he encountered a stubborn resistance, which was overcome only by hard fighting, in which the British losses were heavy. The Boers made another stand near Graspans. Another battle was fought there, officially called the battle of Enslin. The Boers occupied the hills with long range artillery, with which they opened a murderous fire on the British troops below. Being unable to dislodge them with his artillery, Lord Methuen ordered the infantry to charge. The troops climbed the hills in the face of the deadly fire and drove the Boers from their positions, but were unable to capture their guns. After resting a day to obtain reinforcements and ammunition, Lord Methuen resumed his march and reached the Modder River, twenty-two miles from Kimberley, on November 28. There another fierce battle was fought, which is described by Methuen as one of the most trying in the annals of the British army. His troops fought for ten hours under the blazing sun, without food or water. Eventually a small part of his force succeeded in crossing the river and the Boers retreated to Spytfontein, halfway between the Modder River and Kimberley. Methuen was unable to follow them, as they had partially destroyed the bridge over the river. It will have to be repaired before he can get his guns across, without which it would be madness to go on to Spytfontein, where the Boers occupy a strong position. A decisive battle will probable be fought there. If Methuen is in communication with the garrison at Kimberley, as is reported, the Boers will doubtless be attacked by Methuen in front and Col. Kekewich in the rear. On the Natal side, little progress appears to have been made by the British. The chief obstacle to the advance of the column for the relief of Ladysmith is the Tugela River, which flows between Colenso on the south and Ladysmith on the north. It is reported that the chief bridge over that stream has been destroyed, which will involve a long delay, while repairs are being made. There, too, every step will probably be disputed by the Boer army, and a large force will be needed to protect the long line of communications. There is as yet no sign on either side of yielding or concession, though on both sides the slaughter has been awful. In spite of our boasted civilization and the propagation of the Christian spirit, war has lost none of the hideous cruelty that characterized it when the prophet wrote:

Thy cry hath filled the land: for the mighty hath stumbled against the mighty, and they are both fallen together (Jer. 46: 12).

COWLOON, CHINA, SCENE OF THE RECENT OUTRAGE

Sixty-five Days of Darkness

A thrilling story was told recently by Dr. Frederick Cook of Brooklyn, N.Y., of his journey in the Antarctic. The Belgica, on which the exploring party sailed, was in the desolate unknown seas from January 1898 to March 1899, and during more than two months of that period was in total darkness. Dr. Cook exhibited a series of photographs which had been taken during the voyage, showing the weird scenes through which the vessel passed. A dreary monotony characterized all the pictures. In the foreground was the bleak water. In the background were ice peaks over which hung a reddish haze. Other views of this land portrayed groups of penguins, cormorants, specimens of seals, sea lions, and red leopards. Passing on day after day the Belgica's explorers found they were traveling through a heretofore undiscovered strait leading to the Pacific. They saw innumerable small islands, and promontories, all sheathed in ice and snow. The vessel was caught in the ice-pack and drifted helplessly for about a year. Finally the crew, with pick and axe, succeeded, after weeks of hard work, in cutting a canal in the ice through which the vessel passed into open water. Dr. Cook describes the region as one of terrible loneliness and oppressive silence, especially dreary during the long period of utter darkness. It is such a region as the patriarch referred to:

He hath compassed the waters with bounds until the day and night come to an end (Job 26: 10).

A Sister Repudiated

The Immigration Commissioners in New York had a curious case to decide in examining the arrivals by the North German Lloyd steamer Trave last week. Two passengers, a girl and a young man from Galicia, presented themselves for examination. In reply to the questions, they said they were brother and sister and gave the names, residence and occupation of their parents. Their answers being satisfactory, they were passed, and were leaving the depot when a lady from Brooklyn who had been waiting to meet her sister whom she expected on the Trave, met the couple. She immediately greeted the girl as her sister; but the girl replied: "You must be mistaken; I have no sister." The Brooklyn lady, however, persisted and wept bitterly at being repudiated. She called one of the Immigration Inspectors and begged him to interfere. Her story was so clear that the girl was detained at her request. The next day she appeared again, with a photograph of her sister, which was evidently that of the newly arrived immigrant. Then the girl confessed that the young man whom she had claimed as a brother was really her lover. Fearing that she might not be admitted if she told the truth she had tried to pass as his sister and would have succeeded but for the arrival of her sister whose interference she resented. Finally she was allowed to go with her sister. She must have seen then that her prevarication was as useless as it was wicked. There can, however, be no question of her devotion to her lover, since she was ready to repudiate her sister for his sake. Such love as this, without sin, Christ delights to receive from his followers:

He that loveth father and mother more than me, is not worthy of me (Matt. 10: 37).

COURTESY OF FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY

REV. G. CAMPBELL MORGAN

Recommended by the Session of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, as successor to the late Dr. John Hall.

BRIEF NOTES

Mr. Chester Birch, the singing evangelist, has been holding successful meetings at Cameron, Mo.

Mr. Loomis, writing from Japan, reports that a famous Buddhist priest named Watanabe, has been converted to Christianity, and is now preaching the Gospel throughout the country.

There are fourteen American missionaries in Syria and twenty-four women, besides the fifteen or more Americans in the college. Protestant missions in Syria were commenced eighty years ago.

An American tourist, who recently visited the house of John Milton, was shown the quaint wooden stools on which the daughters of the poet sat while their father dictated to them the Paradise Lost.

The Y. M. C. A. of Cape Town, South Africa, is doing valuable and efficient service in meeting soldiers arriving there for the war and in holding religious services and doing personal work in the camps.

The new moderator of the Scotch Presbyterian General Assembly is Rev. Norman McLeod, D.D. He is the fifth member of his family to hold that high office. His father, uncle and two cousins were among his predecessors.

Rev. L. G. Broughton's services in the Hanson Place Baptist Church, Brooklyn, have been well attended. Dr. A. C. Dixon, the pastor of the church, reports that nearly two hundred persons have resolved to make profession of faith.

The Board of Control of the Epworth League, has elected Dr. Wilbur P. Thirkield, for sixteen years President of Gammon Theological Seminary, at Atlanta, Ga., and Professor of Pastoral Theology in the same institution, as General Sec'y, in the place of Rev. Edwin A. Schell D. D.

THE TOUCHSTONE

A NEW SERIAL STORY

BY HELEN SHIPTON

SUMMARY OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

Douglas Lingard, a young civil engineer, who is superintending the construction of a railroad boards in the country town of High Ashes. There he That lady, the daughter of the late squire of the neighborhood, is then living in a small cottage with her brother Martin, their late father having lost nearly all his money before he died. Miss Hamerton, affectionately known to the villagers as "Miss Ceelie," is a friend to them all. Martin Hamerton recognizes Douglas as an old schoolfellow and gives him a cordial welcome to his cottage. Douglas learns, during his visit, that his brother Caryl, from whom he is estranged, is coming on a visit to Mr. Allardyce, the gentleman who has bought the Hamerton estate and is now squire of the village. The cause of the estrangement between the two brothers is the will of a rich uncle, by whom they were brought up. Douglas fully expected that when their uncle died, he and Caryl would be joint heirs; but the old man left all his property to Caryl. Douglas was not so much surprised at this, the old man being eccentric, as he was at Caryl's accepting the bequest. He thought his brother should have divided with him. But Caryl took the whole and left his brother to earn his own living. Douglas wondered what could have occurred to poison his uncle's mind against him and still more what was the reason that Caryl, who as a boy, loved him tenderly, now did not care to see him. While he pondered on this subject Mrs. Locke, his cousin, and his late uncle's housekeeper, came to the village. From this point, the story proceeds:

CHAPTER VII.

THINKING [illegible] his side. Mrs. Locke professed herself very glad of the meeting with Douglas Lingard, and quite indifferent which way she went.

"I daresay you are surprised to see me here, and no one can be more surprised than I am myself," she said. "But I have been rather out of sorts ever since your poor uncle's death, and the doctor prescribes change and country air. So I thought I might as well look out for country lodgings here as anywhere else. Possibly, I may be able to help Caryl a little; and, at any rate, I shall be at hand to enjoy his triumph when it comes off."

"And what kind of triumph is Caryl expected to achieve?" asked her companion gravely.

"Why! haven't they told you? That dear old Mr. Allardyce does like to make a mystery of it; but, as I tell him, really the more it is talked of now the better. Don't you know that he wants Caryl to stand for this division in this forthcoming election?"

"And does Caryl intend to become a member of Parliament?"

"Why not? Of course, Mr. Allardyce takes all the expense. He wants his son to represent the division eventually, but the young fellow is far too young at present; so in the meantime——"

"In the meantime, Caryl is to be a warming-pan?"

"Hush! That isn't at all a nice way to put it. Caryl gratifies Mr. Allardyce infinitely by allowing himself to be put forward. The old man has the greatest admiration for him, and thinks him likely to make a most valuable member. He will get an entry into Parliament, and a chance of making himself known. And, of course, he will be able to befriend Frank Allardyce, and give him a great deal of help when the right time comes."

"Always supposing that Caryl is willing to retire gracefully, or rather make himself a mere stepping-stone for the young fellow's advancement."

Mrs. Locke turned and looked in the young man's eyes rather oddly.

"Do you think," she said, "that we have any right to suppose that Caryl would not be willing to stand aside, according to agreement, even to the detriment of his own career?"

"It is more than some men would be ready to do," answered Douglas dryly. "Happily, I am not bound to answer for any one."

"You are inclined to be bitter, and under the circumstances I cannot wonder at it," said Mrs. Locke with marked gentleness. "But during the last few months of your uncle's life, you can have no idea how impossible it was to reason with him. I used to try it before, but I had to give it up. He was never really himself after Caryl came back."

Douglas was not prepared to resent the implication that he was thinking of the wrong that seemed to have been done to himself. It was true enough, he had been thinking of it. But another man—one not so thoroughly convinced that least said was soonest mended—might have inquired whether Caryl had ever made the attempt that might have been useless, or why Caryl had not taken the simple and obvious course of himself putting right the wrong that had been done. Instead of which he said after a moment:

"Have you heard what they think of the chances of success in the election?"

"Oh! Mr. Allardyce is very sanguine. Caryl says less—you know he is never a great talker—but he means to try his uttermost, and I think he means to succeed. We must not wonder if he seems a little—a little self-absorbed just now. Ever since he came home I have noticed that he has grown very reserved. I suppose with being so much among strangers, and now, of course, he is very anxious to be settled—prospects in life and career and everything."

"And why is he specially anxious just now?"

"Oh! why is a young man ever specially anxious for the prizes of life? And Caryl is not such a very young man now; it is natural if he begins to think of settling down."

The words were vague enough, but the speaker's tone and manner pointed them, and Douglas's private feelings gave them an even sharper point.

"Caryl can afford to marry, I suppose," he said, after another momentary pause. "I should not have thought he would have found it necessary to become an M. P. in order to get a wife."

"Perhaps the wife may help him toward becoming an M. P.," answered his companion with a little girlish laugh.

Douglas understood the inference. Celia Hamerton's influence was worth a good deal in this district where she was "our Miss Ceelie." He had never heard her express any opinion on politics, but no doubt like other women she would interest herself in the career of the man who was her suitor.

"Are you staying in this neighborhood long?" he asked abruptly.

"I am quite undecided as to my future plans. Probably I shall stay here as long as I am likely to be of any use to Caryl. You and he are my nearest connections now living, and the years I spent with your poor uncle make me feel as though you belong to me and I to you; it is natural that I should like to remain in the neighborhood that holds you both."

The words were kind and so was the glance that went with them. Douglas felt himself ungracious in having no acknowledgment ready, but somehow in old days he had never quite felt that Mrs. Locke—or Cousin Dora, as she preferred to be called—was really fond of him, and he could not now quite grasp the idea.

"I have always felt," she went on, "that you might perhaps be blaming me for the injustice done you in your uncle's will. It did seem as though, being so much with him at the last, I ought to have been able to persuade him to do what was right and reasonable. But the older he grew the more obstinate he was, and the more he resented advice and interference. He had taken that unreasoning dislike to you, and I knew that if I said anything it would most likely only make matters worse; but his will when it was read at last was as great a surprise to me as to you."

She spoke rather breathlessly and hurriedly, but with pauses between, as if willing for the young man to interrupt or question her. But when she came to a definite stop, he only said in a final tone.

"My uncle had a perfect right to do what he chose with his own."

"I don't know! Not altogether, I think. But tell me, did you and Caryl have any quarrel after he got back, or by letter before he came?"

"Certainly not."

"I beg your pardon; perhaps I had no right to ask. But it seemed so strange: I wanted Caryl to go and see you after that day at your uncle's funeral—I could not feel that you had been kindly treated—and he would not, but I could not make out why."

"Caryl was quite right. He and I never quarrel now. But to insure that good result we had better remain apart when there is any burning question, such as a share of an old man's fortune, that might be discussed between us. I had nothing to ask of him, and there was certainly nothing to gain by his making any statement to me."

The young man picked his words carefully as young men will when their hearts are sore and angry and they are striving hard after calmness and dignity. He had a sort of conviction that what he was now saying would be repeated to Caryl, and he was more anxious to appear unmoved than he would have been had he been much older.

"Well, I thought it was a pity and I said all I could. But Caryl is very reserved, you know, even with me."

Douglas made no reply. It was not pleasant to think that Mrs. Locke had, as she implied, pleaded for him with Caryl and pleaded in vain. Perhaps he ought to have thanked her for doing so, but he had not the heart.

"I think I must be turning back now," she said presently. "I am so glad we met. It has been like old times to see you again. I daresay we shall often be meeting now. You must try and let bygones be bygones, and help Caryl with his election."

"Thank you. Good afternoon," said the young man by way of response, just touching the slender, well-gloved hand that she held out to him, and noting with an irrelevant twinge of repulsion what a much younger and better-looking woman she was than he had supposed.

She had left one or two little things to rankle in his mind as he went on his way. That was nothing new. She had always been most kind when he came to see his uncle, and yet he had never left the house without feeling it natural and inevitable that his uncle should not like him, or wondering whether men ever cared to hear from their brothers when half a world lay between them.

He had been walking slowly, suiting his pace to that of his companion, but now he pressed on.

A CHRISTMAS EVE SERVICE AT THE BOWERY MISSION

A Blessed Opportunity

CHRISTMAS is drawing near, and we are making generous preparations to gladden the hearts of the homeless men and women that gather with us in the Bowery Mission throughout the year, but specially on festive occasions. Many of these unfortunates have come from homes in the country, which they left full of hope, with a view to bettering their circumstances in the great bustling city. Disappointed in their hopes and ambitions, they gradually fell, step by step, until to-day no roof shelters them, no friend cheers them, no bright prospect encourages them. Then they turn to us. They have heard that God's people are kind and sympathetic, that God himself invites them, and thus far we have been able to befriend them, in a practical manner; and many a poor soul, destitute and discouraged, has found the Bowery Mission a city of refuge and of rescue. But the number is growing. The stories of great prosperity has this year, more than in any other, resulted in a large influx, and as a result, there are more men and women now on the Bowery than in many a year. They are struggling bravely, many of them, but as yet they have not succeeded: they hope to, and no doubt will. They are too proud to write home, or perhaps they have no home to write to. We are straining every nerve to be really helpful to them, but we need more assistance, and we now appeal to you and to others to come speedily and bountifully to our relief, that we may continue to lend them a helping hand until they are able to help themselves.

With Christmas coming on rapidly, and the increased demands owing to the need of clothing adapted to the colder weather, we feel that unless help comes quickly many must be turned away and but few will be privileged to partake of our Holiday Dinner, which heretofore has always proved a ray of sunshine to desolate hearts. Will you not kindly give something toward this most beneficent work? We shall need nearly $2,000—and we shall surely get it, for we are confident that our many friends to whom we so very rarely appeal will not turn us away empty-handed. Give what you can—deal with us as generously as your circumstances will permit—and believe us that God, who knows all things, will according to his promise reward you a hundredfold. Indeed, he will bless you in basket and in store, in body and in soul; and we shall never cease to bear you in grateful remembrance for whatever you may do for the poor, discouraged, homeless men and women of the Bowery. Every remittance will be promptly acknowledged in the columns of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and later on, in Heaven (Matt. 25: 40).

... Under the Evening Lamp ...

Conducted by Margaret E. Sangster

IN THE... Shadow of Sorrow

HOME life is made of many experiences, and shadow and shine are mingled in its warp and woof. I think the very saddest hour which ever comes to a family, is that in which serious and possibly fatal illness attacks father or mother. The innocent little ones, as yet too young to fully realize how much they are losing, move about the house with hushed voices and wondering faces. They know there is a great deal amiss, they are forlornly aware that the household machinery is all out of gear, they do not know what to do, they cannot play nor study their lessons, they are wretched and crushed, and there is nobody to comfort them. If a father is taken in his young manhood, the mother has a hard battle before her, to keep the wolf from the door, and bring up her children well, but, with a dauntless courage, and with wonderful adaptability, she usually takes up her heavy burden and carries it on. A man left with a handful of helpless children is more at sea as to how to care for them than is a woman in similar circumstances.

To the pleasant home of Abner Fairchild came one winter's morning, with sudden and terrible alarm, that Messenger whose step across the threshold brings grief and dismay, and the swift pangs of unutterable heartache to those who stay. Often to those who go, he is so gentle and tender that they feel that their Lord has sent them an arrow sharpened with love. Softly he loosens the silver cord, this quiet angel of life everlasting, whom we call death, and in arms of exceeding kindness, he carries them through the golden portals into the city of the King. We cannot hear that minstrelsy, but as they enter in, all "the bells of the city ring for joy," that another of God's dear children has reached home at last.

Mrs. Fairchild had been weak and worn when her baby came, but nobody thought of danger, till the unexpected chill and fever brought the death pang. The good doctor stepped from her chamber to tell her anguish-stricken sister "no human aid can save her." Kneeling beside her bed, her husband was draining to the dregs earth's bitter cup of loss and agony. Her mother, ever unselfish and ever strong in the hour of need, came tenderly to call the little ones in, and even the dog, his mistress' pet, was troubled and seemed to know that a blow was falling. Only the tiny baby, who should never know his mother, was unconscious of the calamity impending.

One day last summer a little laddie of twelve was laid on a bed of pain, and bye and bye his life began to ebb away. "He will go out with the tide," said the watchers, as night wore on, and the clock struck the hours solemnly and sadly.

The child's mother had died in giving him birth. He had never seen her face nor heard her voice. Lovingly his motherless childhood had been tended, and dearest love watched his sinking strength.

"How shall I know my mamma?" he asked in feeble, gasping words. "How shall I know my mamma in heaven?"

"Darling," said one at his side, "never fear. Mothers always know their little boys. She will know you when you get to heaven."

Thus assured and consoled, the little fair soul faded into the eternal day, out of our darkness and tumult into that light and peace.

There will be affection and solicitude in the Fairchild home when the mother is no more, but oh, how deep will be the shadow cast by this grief; how lonesome will the days be for a long, long time!

Dainty Gifts for the Holidays

Gifts which we make ourselves are always very much appreciated by those who receive them. Few women are not pleased with a piece of embroidery: and a pretty centre piece for the table is a present which confers enjoyment for many months. We are not all equally clever and deft in our handling of the needle, but some young ladies attain to skill and grace which lifts embroidery into the same rank with painting. I saw not long ago at a friend's home, a set of doilies embroidered on bolting cloth, which is very sheen and thin—a fabric for the fairies—they were exquisitely delicate and dainty, and while too fine for daily use, were beautiful as a possession.

Of all nice gifts to mother and aunty, nothing surpasses a soft, white shoulder cape. One Christmas, I found one beside my plate at the breakfast table, and a note pinned fast to it, said it came to me with love in every stitch. Don't you suppose I feel happy and warm when I slip that dear shawl around me, and sit down at my desk on a cold morning when the wind is raving outside and a storm is coming fast? The shawl speaks of that inner world of home and love into which storms never penetrate.

Golf stockings make an acceptable present for a golf playing brother. Mittens are useful to the little fellow going to school. The nursery toddler likes a pair of knitted horse reins.

One of the elements of Christmas pleasure is in the mystery with which we invest our gifts. We are planning surprises for our beloved, and our effort is to make the surprise as complete as possible.

I remember my first doll, and the delight with which I held her in my arms; and to-day I am touched at the thought of my busy mother and the hours in which she sat up at night, long after childish heads were safe on their pillows, that the doll's wardrobe might be finished to the last detail of shoes and stockings, and little frilled bonnet and ruffled cape.

A Mother's Tribute

She was four-score years old and over. The sands of her life were almost out, and it seemed very unlikely that she could live many days. I sat at her side and held her thin hand in mine. It was hot and dry. She was suffering a good deal of pain. Rheumatism had laid its vice-like grasp upon her veins. I shall not soon forget the radiant smile she gave me, when I asked her about her son. Her answer was:

"There never was another man so good as my Harry. He sends me a postal card every morning when he is on the road. I always know just where he is. He gets everything he can for me to make me comfortable, and wherever he is Harry has me on his mind. I wish he would marry; he'd make somebody a good husband, but Harry says, 'No, mother, I'll not bring a wife here; you are all I want.' When I'm gone, I hope God will send him a very sweet wife, for he deserves the best God can give."

Our Letter Box

YOUNG AND PUZZLED GIRL. Have nothing whatever to do in the way of friendship with an habitual drinker. If you marry him you will surely be very sorry.

—BERTHA. You must confess your fault to your mother and ask her forgiveness. Then you will be at peace.

—WILLIAM. Do not offer your arm to a lady unless she is old or feeble. A girl prefers to walk beside a man without taking his arm.

—ELLEN JANE. Learn to carve. It is a simple art, and there is no reason why you should sit down helplessly in the presence of your roast when your husband is away from home.

—CHARLES D. A gentleman's visiting card is of oblong shape and very small. White note paper of square shape and moderate size is in the best taste. Avoid anything eccentric and odd in stationery.

—ROSE. Try rubber plants for the corner of your drawing-room. They grow rapidly and require very little care. Do not let your canary bird suffer from the sun. There is such a thing as leaving a poor bird in a blaze of sunlight which he finds uncomfortable.

—W. A. As a rule the question of amusements must be settled by the individual conscience. It is very natural and quite innocent for young people to like parties, but church members should not attend a party on the prayer-meeting night.

—EMILY D. You wish to become a journalist, and think it is easy work. No, my dear, it is hard, unremitting work, by no means easy. You will need pluck and perseverance. Luck has nothing to do with success. Be careful of your spelling and grammar.

Pumpkin Pie

THROUGH sun and shower the pumpkin grew,
When the days were long and the skies were blue.
And it felt quite proud when its giant size
Was such that it carried away the prize,
At the county fair where the people came,
And it bore a ticket, and wore a name.

Alas, for the pumpkin's pride! One day
A boy and his mother took it away.
It was pared and sliced and pounded and stewed,
And the way it was treated was harsh and rude:
It was sprinkled with sugar and seasoned with spice,
And the boy and his mother pronounced it nice.

It was served in a pastry, baked and browned,
And at last on a pantry shelf was found;
And Johnnie, Melissa, Frank and Mabel,
Will see it, a feature, on Sunday's table.
For the pumpkin grew, in sun and shadow,
From green to golden, hour by hour;
Grew round and big 'neath a summer sky,
When snowflakes came to be changed into pie.

"NO HUMAN AID CAN SAVE HER"

WEDDING PREPARATIONS

WE used to fancy that a bride must go to her husband equipped with an outfit large enough to fit her for life in the desert, and for several years. At least a dozen pieces of each set of underclothing, very elaborately made, trimmed with embroidery, fluted, puffed, ruffled, tucked, must go into the bride's wardrobe, and some mothers were not satisfied to send a daughter into the world with less than eighteen of each needed garment. This clothing of the bride is very ancient, and in the forty-fifth psalm, "The King's daughter within the palace is all glorious. Her clothing is inwrought with gold. She shall be led unto the King in broidered work." In Revelation, the mystic writer sees the "New Jerusalem coming down out of Heaven from God, made ready as a bride adorned for her husband." The happiest times a family ever have are when the joyful preparations are going on to fit the daughter of the house to enter upon her life work in a new home. How many jests and pleasant witticisms, how much merry laughter are entwined with sewing on the wedding raiment.

A girl does not need so much more for her bridal than for her every-day provision, and simplicity is as desirable as elaboration. The materials and fabrics should be fine and dainty. Too much trimming is a superfluity. But a bride's mother should give her a setting out of household linen, of sheets and table napery. If these are worked with the bride's initials they will be a possession of which she may well be proud.

Those who wish to make suitable wedding presents will make no mistake if they send the bride something in linen. A Sunday School class might unite in presenting a dear teacher with a linen chest, or with a table-cloth, napkins, doilies and centre piece. For birthday or holiday gifts nothing surpasses linen. It is exquisite in itself, this product of the flax, which grew in the open fields and knew the sunshine and the dew, and it is the choicest result of the modern loom, often as smooth as satin and as fine spun as if the fairies had woven it. Very few women indeed can resist the fascination of this useful household belonging.

The Hireling and his Wages

One of the evident obligations in life is to pay very promptly all persons who serve us. When the dressmaker sends home the dress, when the carpenter presents his bill, when the man who does odd jobs comes for his money, do not keep these persons waiting. It is much better to do without service than to defer its payment to a season which suits your own convenience.

"WE GOT TO NEW YORK THAT EVENIN' AND I WUZ GLAD"

CHAPTER II.
Our Trip Abroad

AS the the snortin' and skornful actin' engine tore my body away from Jonesville, I sot nearly bathed in tears for some time till I wuz aware that little Tommy wuz weepin' also, frightened I spoze by his grandma's grief, and then I knew that it wuz my duty to compose myself, and I summoned all my fortitude, put my handkerchief in my pocket, and give Tommy a cream cookey, which calmed his worst agony. I then recognized and passed the compliments of the day with Miss Meechim and Dorothy and pretty little Aronette, who wuz puttin' away our wraps and doin' all she could for the comfort of the hull of us. Seein' my agitation, she took Tommy in her arms and told him some stories, good ones, I guess, for they made Tommy stop cryin' and go to laughin', specially as she punctuated the stories with some chocolate drops.

Dorothy looked sweet as a rose and wuz as sweet. Miss Meechim come and sot down by me, but she seemed to me like a furriner. I wuz dwellin' in a fur off realm Miss Meechim had never stepped her foot in, the realm of Wedded Love and Pardner Reminiscences, what did Miss Meechim know of that hallowed clime? What did she know of the grief that wrung my heart? Men wuz to her like shadders: her heart spoke another language.

Thinkin' that it would mebbe git my mind off a little from my idol, I asked her again about Robert Strong's City of Justice: sez I, "It has run in my mind considerable since you spoke on't: I don't think that I ever hearn the name of any place I liked so well, City of Justice! Why the name fairly takes hold of my heart-strings," sez I, "has he made well by his big manufactory?"

"Why, yes, fairly well," sez she, "but he has strange ideas. He says that he don't want to coin a big fortune out of other men's sweat and brains. He wants to march on with the great army of toilers, and not be carried ahead of it on a down bed. He says that he wants to feel that he is wronging no man by amassing wealth out of the half-paid labor of their best years, and that he is satisfied with an equal and reasonable share of the labor and capital invested. He has the best of men in his employ and they are all well-paid and industrious; all well-to-do, able to live well, educate their children well, and have time for some culture and recreation for themselves and their families. I told him that his ideas were utopian, but he says that they have succeeded even better than he expected they would. But there will come a crash some time, I am sure. There must be rich and there must be poor in this world, or the Scriptures will not be fulfilled."

Sez I, "There's no need to be such a vast army of poverty marching on to the almshouse and grave, if it wuzn't for the dram-shop temptin' poor human nater, and the greed of the world, and the cowardice and indifference of the Church of Christ. Enough money is squandered for stuff that degrades and destroys to feed and clothe all the hungry and naked children of the world."

"Oh," sez Miss Meechim, "I don't believe all this talk and clamor about prohibition. My people all drank genteelly, and though of course it was drink that led to the agony and divorces of three of my sisters, and my father's first downfall, yet I have always considered that moderate drinking was genteel. Our family physician always drank genteel, and our clergyman always kept it in his wine cellar, and if people would only exert self control and drink genteel, there would be no danger."

"How duz Robert Strong feel about it?" sez I.

"Oh, he is a fanatic on the subject; he won't employ a man who drinks at all. He says that the city he is founding is a City of Justice, and it is not just for one member of a family to do anything to endanger the safety and happiness of the rest; so on that ground alone he wouldn't brook any drinking in his model city. It is, I must confess, working admirably; there are no very rich ones there, and absolutely no poor ones; he is completely obliterating the barriers that always have, and I believe, always should exist between the rich and the poor. Sez I, 'Robert you are sacreligiously setting aside the Saviour's words, "the poor ye shall always have with you."'

"And he said that there was another verse that our Lord incorporated in his teachings, and the whole of his life-work that he was trying to carry out: 'Do unto others as ye would have them to do unto you.' He said that love and justice was the foundation and cap-stone of our Saviour's life and work and he was trying in his weak way to carry them out in his own life and work. Robert talked well," sez she, "and I must confess that to the outward eye his City of Justice is in a happy and flourishing condition, easy hours of work, happy faces of men, women and children as they work or play or study. It looks well, but as I always tell him, there is a weak spot in it somewhere."

"What duz he say to that?" sez I, dretful interested in the story.

"Why, he says the only weak spot in it is his own incompetence and inability to carry out the Christ idea of love and justice as he wants to."

"I wish I could see that City of Justice," sez I dreamily, for my mind's eye seemed to look up to Robert Strong in reverence and admiration. "Well," sez she, "I must say that it is a beautiful place: it is founded on [illegible] a broad, beautiful, green plain, flashing rivers run through the valley, and back of it rises the mountains."

"[illegible] Jerusalem," sez I.

"Yes, a beautiful clear stream rushes down the mountain side from the melting snow on top, but warmed by the southern sun, as it flows through the fertile land, it is warm and sweet as it reaches Robert's place. And Robert says," continued Miss Meechim, "that that is just how old prejudices and injustices will melt like the cold snow and flow in a healing stream through the world. He talks well, Robert does. And oh, what a help he has been to me with Dorothy!"

"What duz she say about it?" sez I.

"She does not say so, but I believe that she thinks as I do about the infeasibility as well as the intrinsic depravity of disproving the Scriptures."

"Well," sez I, "Robert was right about the mission of our Lord being to extend justice and mercy, and bring the hearts of the world into sweetness, light and love. His whole life was love, self-sacrifice and devotion, a[illegible] believe that Robert is in the right on't."

"Oh, Robert is undoubtedly following his ideas of [illegible] but they clash with mine," sez Miss Meechim, sh[illegible] her head sadly, "and I think he will see his error in ti[illegible]

Here Miss Meechim stooped abruptly to look a[illegible] hensively at a young man that I knew wuz a Jone[illegible] husband and father of twins. He was lookin' admi[illegible] at Dorothy, and like [illegible] em, and Tommy come and set with me agin.

Tommy leaned up aginst me and looked out o[illegible] car window and sez kinder low to himself:

"I wonner what makes the smoke roll and roll [illegible] and feather out the sky, and I wonner what my [illegible] and my mama is doin' and what my grandpa will do-

AT THE TOMB OF GENERAL GRANT

AUNT SAMANTHA [illegible]

my heart anew, and he begun to kinder whimper [illegible] and Aronette, good little creeter, come up and [illegible] an orange out of the lunch-basket she had.

Well, we got to New York that evenin' and I wuz glad to think that everybody wuz well there, or so as to [illegible] about, for they wuz all there at the deepo, except [illegible] that wuz in the street, but we got safe through the [illegible] and confusion to a big, high tarven, with prices [illegible] as its ruff and flag-pole. Miss Meechim got [illegible] and Dorothy what she called "sweet rooms," this [illegible] in a row, one for each on 'em and a little one for ette. But I d'no as they wuz any sweeter than mine, gh mine cost less and wuz on the back of the house e it wuzn't so noisy. Tommy and I occupied one ; he had a little cot-bed made up for him.

99, BY MARIETTA HOLLEY

ndeed, I groaned out as I sot me down in a big chair, wuz here, the pardner of my youth and middle age, om Miss Meechim ever looked on wuz so sweet as would be. But alas! he wuz fur away. Jonesville on to my idol and we wuz parted away from each But I went down to supper, which they called din- nd see that Tommy had things for his comfort and nthin myself, for I had to support life, yes, strength o be got to cling to that black string that I had n, and vittles had to supply some of that strength, and my nose is a big one anyway and could accommodate a good many tears.

But I controlled my agony of mind. I walked round with Tommy for a spell and showed him all the beauties of the place, which wuz many, sot down with him for a spell in the big, richly-furnished parlors, but cold and lonesome lookin' after all, for the love-light of home wuz lackin', and looked at the glittering throng passing and repassing; but the wimmen looked fur off to me and the men wuz like shadders, only one man seemed a reality to me, and he wuz small boned and fur away. And then we went to our room. I read to Tommy for a spell out of a good little book I bought, and then hearn him say his prayers, his innocent voice askin' for blessin's from on high for his parents and my own beloved lonely one, and then I tucked him into his little cot and sot down and writ a letter to my dear Josiah, tears dribblin' down onnoticed while I did so.

For we had promised to write to each other every day of our lives, else I could not, could not have borne the seperation, and I also begun a letter to Philury. I laid out to put down things that I wanted her to 'tend to that I thought on from day to day after I got away, and then send it to her bime by. Sez I:

"Philury, be sure and put woolen sheets on Josiah's bed if it grows colder, and heat the soap stun for him and see that he wears his woolen-backed vest, takin' it off if it moderates. Tend to his morals, Philury, men are prone to backslide; start him off reg'lar to meetin', keep clean bandannas in his pocket, let him wear his gingham neckties, he'll cry a good deal and it haint no use to spile his silk ones. Oh, Philury! you won't lose nothin' if you are

OR ENTRAL PARK

A VISIT TO THE GODDESS OF LIBERTY

ous religion and principle supplied the biggest heft. ss Meechim and Aronette wuz in splendid sperits, and e up—dinner went out to the theatre to see a noted y acted, and they asked me to accompany and go n, for I spoze that my looks wuz melancholy and p ted in extreme, Aronette offerin' to take care of m if I wanted to go.

I sez, "No. I have got all the tragedy in my own s that I can 'tend to." And in spite of my cast-iron o ion tears busted out under my eyeleds and trickled w ny nose. They didn't see it, my back wuz turned, good to that dear man. Put salt enough on the pork when you kill, and don't let Josiah eat too much sassage. And so no more to-night, to be resoomed."

The next morning I got two letters from my pardner. He had writ a letter right there in the deepo before he went home, and also another on his arrival there. Agony wuz in every word: oh, how wuz we goin' to bear it!

But I must not make my reader onhappy; no I must harrow them up no more, I must spread the poultice of silence on the deep gaping woond and go on with the sombry history. After breakfast Miss Meechim got a big, handsome carriage, drawed by two prancin' steeds, held in by a man buttoned up to his chin, and invited me to take Tommy and go with her and Dorothy up to the Park, which I did. They wuz eloquent in praises of that beautiful place; the smooth, broad roads, bordered with tall trees, whose slim branches stood out aginst the blue sky like pictures. The crowds of elegant equipages, filled with handsome lookin' folks in galy attire that thronged them roads. The Mall, with its stately beauty, the statutes that lined the way ever and anon. The massive walls of the Museum, the beautiful lake and rivulets, spanned by handsome bridges. It wuz a fair seen, a fair seen, underneath beauty of the rarest kind, and overhead a clear, cloudless sky.

MISS MEECHIM AND DOROTHY GO SHOPPING

Miss Meechin wuz happy, though she didn't like the admiring male glances at Dorothy's fresh, young beauty, and tried to ward 'em off with her lace-trimmed muff, but couldn't. Tommy wuz in pretty good sperits and didn't look quite so pale as when we left home, and he wonnered at the white statutes, and kinder talked to himself, or to Carabi about 'em, and I kinder gathered from what he said that he thought they wuz ghosts, and I thought that he wuz kinder reassurin' Carabi that they wouldn't hurt him, and he wonnered at the mounted policemen who he took to be soldiers, and at all the beauty with which we wuz surrounded. And I—I kep' as cheerful a face as I could on the outside, but always between me and Beauty, in whatsoever guise it appeared, wuz a bald head, a small-sized figger. Yes, it weighed but little by the steelyards, but it shaddered lovely Central Park, the most beautiful park in the world, and the hull universe for me. But I kep' a calm frame outside; I answered Miss Meechim's remarks mekanically and soothed her nervous apprehensions as well as I could as she glanced fearfully at male admirers by remarkin' in a casual way to her "that New York and the hull world wuz full of pretty women and girls, which made her look calmer, and then I fell in to once with her scheme of drivin' up the long, handsome Boolevard, acrost the long bridge, clear up to the tomb of Our Hero, General Grant.

Hallowed place! dear and precious to the hull country. The place where the ashes lie that wuz once the casket of that brave heart. Good husband, kind father, true friend, great General, grand Hero, sleeping here by the murmuring waters of the stream he loved, in the city of his choice, sleeping sweetly and calmly while the whole world wakes to do him honor and cherish and revere his memory.

I had big emotions here, I always did, and spoze I always shall. But, alas! true it wuz that even over the memory of that matchless Hero riz up in my heart the remembrance of one who wuz never heroic, onheeded and onthought on by his country, but—oh! how dear to me!

"I BEGUN A LETTER TO PHILURY

The memory of his words, often terse and short specially before meal-time, echoed high above the memory of him who talked with Kings and Emperors, ruled armies and hushed the seething battle-cry, and

Continued on page 975

Modern Judaism

Mr. A. Benjamin Describes the Peculiarities of the Social, Religious and Educational Life of the Jew at the Present Day

MANY readers of this journal take a deep interest in the efforts that are being made in New York and other cities for the conversion of the Jews. Few, however, understand what is the attitude of the Jew toward the missionaries who are sent to him, or what is his religious practice now that he has no longer a temple, sacrifices or priests. It has often been observed that he makes no effort analogous to Christian missions to convert other people to his faith, and that while Christians are anxious to persuade Jews to become Christians, the Jew simply goes his own way and never tries to induce a Christian to become a Jew. This disposition explains how it is that so little is known of the Judaism of our day, which necessarily differs in marked degree, both in ritual and observance, from the Judaism of the Old Testament. It will therefore interest many readers to know how the Jew regards his own faith and what measures he takes to perpetuate it. Mr. A. Benjamin, a prominent member of the Jewish community in New York, has given us the following information on these questions:

While the Jew has no machinery or organization for the propagation of his faith, it must not be supposed that he is indifferent to the condition of the world. His method is not to proselyte but to show by his daily life the glory and beauty of his creed. He believes in truth, love, justice, liberty, equality, and fraternity, and his highest aim is to show those qualities in his own life. The Jew who lives up to his creed is anxious to set an example of rectitude, of personal righteousness which shall be a living expression of the purity of his faith. It is not necessary for him to translate his sacred books into foreign languages and send missionaries abroad to preach the truth as he believes it. His books remain in the original language in which they were written by the fathers, the poets and the prophets. Wherever he may be he is taught to read them in that tongue and he is impressed with the duty of making them the guide of his life, so that whoever comes in contact with him shall learn by his conduct the high moral principles which govern him. These men may become Christians in one land or Mohammedans in another. About that the Jew does not concern himself. He is content to have every man who longs after righteousness adopt that faith which in his case conduces to that end.

It is true that this high ideal is not found in every Jewish family. The Jew has often had to live in uncongenial environment, and has brought from the ghetto much that is unsavory and defiling. Some of his religious observances are hidden under the dust of ignorance and evil association, but it is a matter of common observation that when he leaves the ghetto and comes out into the free air of American life, then he cleanses himself and his ceremonies and adapts himself to the better conditions. The gratifying result is that the synagogue in our day so closely resembles a Christian church that there is no obstacle to the Messianic idea of universal brotherhood, but the Christian's insistance that the Jew shall be excluded from the pale of the blessed in this life and the next unless he accepts a dogma, in which he cannot and will not believe.

There are, however, one or two peculiarities of Jewish religious life in which it differs from the church life of the Christian. One of these, which is probably a survival of Oriental origin, is seen in the relation of the rabbi with the ladies of his flock. In the congregation of the synagogue there is none of the pastoral visitation that obtains among Christians. The orthodox rabbi would never be found chatting familiarly with some female member of his congregation in a religious or social gathering, nor would he even stay to greet her on the street. The Talmud emphatically forbids him to gossip with women, and so earnest are its admonitions on the subject, that many a rabbi would shrink from making a pastoral call or seeking, even on religious matters, an interview with a lady not of his own household. This does not imply that the visits of a religious teacher would not be welcome, or that the Jew is so irreligious that he does not desire the society of his rabbi. On the other hand, as Reformed Jews think, it implies that the rabbi's weekly sermon is all that is necessary for the spiritual safety of the members of his flock.

In the matter of education there is also a difference. The Jew expects more from parents than the Christian does in the religious instruction of children. It is the duty of every Jew to see that his children are thoroughly instructed in Judaism, not by sending them to a Sunday School to be taught, but by teaching them himself at home. The pious orthodox Jew, indeed, carries this principle to an extreme. I remember that in my own case I was drilled so thoroughly from morning to night in Rabbinical lore from my fourth to my eighteenth year, that the only time and opportunity left to me for the acquisition of secular knowledge came from a private tutor who spent two hours in the week in teaching me. That system is now generally reversed in America. The Jewish child now attends the public schools and receives a scant two hours of religious instruction. To remedy this defect Hebrew free schools have been established where children are taught in their faith daily after school hours.

I may be permitted a word or two as to the Jewish temperance. Total abstinence as practised among Christians would be impossible among Jews. The Jew is familiar with the taste of strong drink from the cradle to the grave. He tastes it when, only a week old, he is admitted to the Abrahamic Covenant; on the attainment of his religious majority at the age of thirteen, he must sanctify the Sabbath by thrice drinking from the wine cup, and at the prolonged feasts and festivals, notably at Purim, he must always indulge in wine. But, mark you, this is a religious observance. He must pronounce a benediction before and after drinking, and his mind is so directed by religious ideas that he is not in the mood to over-indulgence, and so you never find him in the police courts charged with intoxication. In a word, he is taught temperance, not by abstaining, but by the religious use of the wine-cup. In conclusion, may I say that the Christian has no reason in the Jewish creed or in Jewish conduct for holding aloof from the Jew, who aspires after righteousness.

A. BENJAMIN.

HEART DISEASE

Some Facts Regarding the Rapid Increase of Heart Trouble.

Heart trouble, at least among the Americans [illegible] largely due to the excitement and worry of American business life, it is more often the result of weak stomachs, of poor digestion.

Real organic disease is incurable; but not one case in a hundred of heart trouble is organic.

The close relation between heart trouble and poor digestion is because both organs are [illegible] thic and Pneumogastric.

[illegible] the form of poor digestion which causes gas [illegible] is a feeling of oppression and heaviness in the chest caused by pressure of the distended stomach on the heart and lungs, interfering with their action; hence arises palpitation and short breath.

Poor digestion also poisons the blood, making it thin and watery, which irritates and weakens the heart.

The most sensible treatment for heart trouble is to improve the digestion and to insure the prompt assimilation of food.

This can be done by the regular use after meals of some safe, pleasant and effective digestive preparation, like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may be found at most drug stores, and which contain valuable, harmless, digestive elements in a pleasant, convenient form.

It is safe to say that the regular persistent use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at meal time will cure any form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

Full sized package of these tablets sold by druggists at 50 cents. Little book on stomach troubles mailed free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

When the Blood is pale, then your lips and cheeks are pale, your nerves weak, and your whole body greatly debilitated. The doctors say "You have anæmia." There's just one thing you need—something to make the blood rich and red.

Scott's Emulsion

will certainly do this. It will make the most happy changes for you, and soon your old strength and activity will return.

50c. and $1.00, all druggists.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, New York.

"He Laughs Best Who Laughs Last."

A hearty laugh indicates a degree of good health obtainable through pure blood. As but one person in ten has pure blood, the other nine should purify the blood with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Then they can laugh first, last and all the time, for perfect happiness comes with good health

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure [illegible] and other [illegible] to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla

Send Only One Dollar and this WATCH will be sent to you for examination. Ladies' size, stem wind. Hunting case watch Waltham Diamond, a chain 18 inches long with Diamond slide.

gentleman's size heavy gold double stock Waltham watch

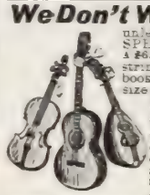
$15.

should be examined before being paid for, and will send

$1

KEENE'S (G140 Fulton Street, New York City. (G1301 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

We Don't Want Your Money



unless we can please and satisfy you. SPECIAL OFFER FOR 6 DAYS. A $6.00 Violin for $3.00, complete with strings, bow, Violin box, instruction book and resin; fine tone, perfect full size model, never equalled. A Great Bargain. A $6.00 Mandolin for $3.00 Italian model of beautiful shape, ribs, maple and walnut guard-plates, inlaid around sound hole, ebonized finger board, position dots, perfect in finish and appearance, price, boxed. A $6.00 Guitar for $3.00, 3-rounded solid back, standard size, mahogany finish, imitation cedar neck, position dots, mach. head, metal tail piece, fully guaranteed, nicely boxed. A $6.00 Banjo for $3.00, 9 inch shell, wood lined, cherry finished neck, 9 nickel brackets, marked frets, 5 inch calf head, complete, nicely boxed. Any of the above instruments sent C. O. D. upon the receipt of 5 cents as evidence of good faith. THE BEST WAY is to send cash in full with order, as by so doing you save the expense of the C.O.D. and return charges on money to us. Complete catalogue of Organs, Pianos, Graphaphones, Gramophones and other Musical Instruments Free. Address Dept. A 15, VICTOR MFG. CO., 161 to 167 Plymouth Pl., Chicago, Ill.

SHOPPING BY MAIL: highest grade goods no commission. References— MRS. E. F. JOSSELYN, 959 BEDFORD AVE., BROOKLYN, N. Y.

COFFEE THE CAUSE of Heart Trouble.

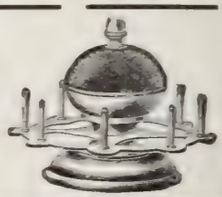
[illegible] palpitation and irregularity of the heart. My [illegible] when I took up Postum Food Coffe in its place, the heart trouble was soon entirely cured, and I find the Postum to be just as the doctor said, 'not only harmless, but very ben- [illegible] trouble with his heart. I suggested that he try Postum. After the first cup at breakfast, he said, 'I don't want any more of it.' Inquiry proved that it had not been properly boiled, so I prepared a cup for him, strictly according to directions, and he pronounced it 'delicious' and 'better than coffee.' Mrs. ——, of Paducah, suffered much the same way, and has had the same experience in recovering from [illegible] and taking up the use of Postum. For private reasons, I request that you withhold my name from publication." ——, Princeton, Ky.

RUBIFOAM

is an exquisite dentifrice. Please try it. Your teeth deserve the best care you can give them. Health, happiness, and comfort depend upon them.

A Useful Christmas Gift

50 Cents by Mail



50 Cents by Mail

This [illegible] SPOOL HOLDER [illegible] Agents wanted. Stamps (coin) orders, or coin taken, but coin or bills preferred.

C. T. ORTOV, 292 Graham St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

TEACH YOURSELF MUSIC

DURING LEISURE MOMENTS AT HOME, Piano, Organ Guitar and Voice.

[illegible] Tunes, Notes, Chords, Accompaniments and the Laws of Harmony [illegible] It is the cheapest, easiest, most rapid and correct way on earth to learn music. [illegible] the strangest kind of technical terms. Every lesson is [illegible] music; makes it clear to the beginner; creates a fondness for music before you proceed from the start. A few days practice and you play perfect Accompaniments in all keys. Circulars Free. Write for them. Warmly recommended [illegible] Music Lessons 10c. U. S. RICE MUSIC CO., C-241 Wabash Ave. Chicago

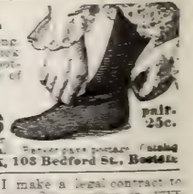
DO NOT STAMMER YOU CAN BE CURED

Hundreds of stammerers have been cured at the Philadelphia Institute, which has won a world-wide [illegible] It has no branch anywhere, and at no time has had any connection with any other school. Send for new illustrated book to the Philadelphia Institute 1033 Spring Garden Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Edwin S. Johnson, Founder and Principal.

RESTFUL

and healthful foot-covering for chamber, bathroom, sick room. Warm feet and foot-ease are assured wearers of

PARKER'S Arctic Socks



pair, 25c.

All sizes. Best thing in rubber boots, shoes, sneakers by mail. Parker pays postage. Catalog free. J. H. Parker, Dept. K, 103 Bedford St., Boston.

STAMMERING I make a legal contract to cure stammering in FIVE DAYS or get my fee. Free Pamphlet. Gaddess's Stammering School, Room 50 Mass. Bldg. Kansas City, Mo.

YOU would like the lamp-chimneys that do not amuse themselves by popping at inconvenient times, wouldn't you?

A chimney ought not to break any more than a tumbler. A tumbler breaks when it tumbles.

Macbeth's "pearl top" and "pearl glass"—they don't break from heat, not one in a hundred; a chimney lasts for years sometimes.

Our "Index" describes all lamps and their proper chimneys. With it you can always order the right size and shape of chimney for any lamp. We mail it FREE to any one who writes for it.

Address MACBETH, Pittsburgh, Pa

INDIAN SHAWLS

Basement Salesroom.

Real Antique Long India Shawls, Suitable for gowns, or the fashionable Oriental draperies.

$25.00, $30.00, $35.00.

These shawls are of exquisite make and design,—similar importations have been priced at $200.00 to $400.00.

Real India Decca Squares, $10.00, $12.00 and $15.00

Former value $100 to $200.

Real India Chudda Shawls,—white, Oriental blues, and reds. Long or square. $12.50, $15, $20, $25, $30.

JAMES McCREERY & CO.
Broadway & 11th St.
NEW YORK.

For Christmas

49 other positions

and all year 'round, nothing is more appreciated than a luxurious reclining chair. The famous "Bloch" and the elegant "Imperial" are marvelous Chairs—each with more than fifty changes of position; so simple a child can adjust it.

Bloch Chair. $14.70

Highly-finished Oak Frame, upholstered in Corduroy or Velours

Write for Illustrated Chair Book

Imperial Chair

Oak Frame, with outer frame of Japanned and Ornamented Iron

Corduroy or Velours Cushions, $26.25
Cane Back or Seat, . . $15.75

Doll Go-Carts and Doll Carriages

Write for Catalogue

Representatives Wanted

We pay freight east of Mississippi.

PHILADELPHIA BABY CARRIAGE FACTORY

713-715 Spring Garden Street, Philadelphia

WILL CARLETON'S

MAGAZINE "EVERY WHERE"

Only Magazine for which Will Carleton, "Josiah Allen's Wife" (Marietta Holley), Fanny Crosby (World's greatest hymn-writer) and other famous authors write in every number. Best of additional literature

50 Cents a Year. SPECIAL OFFER 3 Mos. for 10c.

if you mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Address Every Where Pub. Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.

STAMMERING. Most Speedy, Perfect, Permanent Educational Cure Guaranteed. Least Expense. Address, Voice School, Salem, W. Va.

Around the World with Aunt Samantha

(Continued from page 973.)

the nation's clamor with "Let us have peace."

But I will not agin fall into harrow, or drag my readers there, but will simply state that, in all the seens of beauty and grandeur we looked on that day—and Miss Meechim wanted to see all and everything, from magestick meetin' houses and mansions, bearin' the stamp of millions of dollars, beautiful arches lifted up to heroes and the national honor, even down to the Brooklyn Bridge and the Goddess of Liberty—over all that memory rained supreme.

The Goddess of Liberty holdin' aloft her blazin' torch rousted up the enthusiastick admiration of Dorothy and Miss Meechim. But I thought as I looked on it that she kinder lifted her arm some as I had seen my dear pardner lift his up when he wuz a-fixin' a stove pipe overhead; and that long span uniting New York and Brooklyn only brought to me thoughts of the length and strength of that apron-string to which I clung and must cling even though death ensued.

Well, after a long time of sight-seeing we returned to our hotel, and, after dinner, which they called luncheon, I laid down a spell with Tommy, for I felt indeed tuckered out with my emotions outside and inside. Tommy dropped off to sleep to once like a lamb, and I bein' beat out, lost myself too, and evening wuz almost lettin' down her mantilly spangled with stars, when I woke, Tommy still sleepin' peacefully, every minute bringin' health and strength to him I knew.

Miss Meechim and Dorothy had been to some of the big department stores where you can buy everything under one ruff from a elephant to a tooth-pick, and have a picture gallery and concert throwed in. They had got a big trunk full of things to wear. I wondered what they wanted of 'em when they wuz goin' off on another long journey so soon; but considered that it wuzn't my funeral or my tradin' so said nothin'.

Anon we went down and had a good supper, which they called dinner, after which they went to the opera. Aronette tended to packin' their clothes, and offered to help me pack. But as I told her I hadn't onpacked nothin' but my night-gown and sheeps' head night-cap I could git along with it, specially as sheeps' head night-caps packed easier than full crowned ones.

So I took Tommy out for a little walk on the broad beautiful sidewalks, and it diverted him to see the crowds of handsomely dressed men and women all seemin' to hurry to git to some place right off, and the children who didn't seem to be in any hurry, and in seein' the big carriages roll by, some drawed by prancin' horses, and some by nothin' at all, so fur as we could see, which rousted up Tommy's wonder, and it all diverted him a little and mebby it did me too, and then we retired to our room and had a middlin' good night's rest, though hanted by Jonesville dreams, and the next morning we left for Chicago.

(To be Continued)

FOR THE FINAL OPPORTUNITY..

To Get OUR HOME SUNSHINE CALENDAR FOR 1900, with an Exhaustive Chronology of Leading Events of the 19th Century Arranged According to DAYS

See Page 962

THE RED LETTER TESTAMENT

THE Testament of Christ, our Lord,
Whose every gracious, loving word
Is here set forth in letters plain
That none may search for them in vain.
Thanks for the gift that now we hold,
More precious than its weight in gold.
Daily we read and daily pray,
That God may bless your work alway.

Florence, Colo. J. H. and M. A. WILSON.

All rights secured.

We Send This $6.00 HOT AIR Stove For $1.99

The ALBANY hot air stoves will burn chips, straw, wood, sawdust, cobs, in fact anything used for fuel except coal. The Albany is made with beautifully polished steel bodies smooth as a mirror and handsomely ornamented, with full nickel trimmings, lined with heavy sheet steel, and, if desired, are furnished with nickel plated foot rails. No. 26 is 26 inches long, 18 1-2 wide, 24 in. high; fuel opening 12 1-2 inches. No. 20 is 20 inches long, 14 1-2 in. wide, 20 in. high; fuel opening 10 1-2 inches in diameter. Will heat your parlor, sitting room, dining room, bed room or office from zero to 100 degrees above in fifteen minutes. Draft can be regulated perfectly. Heats a room 20 feet square in less time and with less fuel than any other stove. Will positively hold fire the year round if fuel is added every ten or twelve hours. Will save one-half your fuel, consequently one-half the cost and labor of chopping, splitting and lugging. The cleanest, cheapest and safest stove in the world. TO INTRODUCE this new wonder hot air stove into your town we will for the next 15 days send you a No. 20 Stove on receipt of only $1.99 and 3 monthly payments of $1 each, or a No. 26 Stove on receipt of $3 and 4 monthly payments of $1 each. Payments may be made regularly to any responsible merchant you name in your own town or to our own agent if we have one. If you prefer, send spot cash and 10 names of persons you think might buy and we will send you No. 26 for $5.50, and No. 20 for $3.75. Nickled foot rails, 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Granite State Evaporator Co. Mfrs. Sap Evaporators and Feed Cookers), ALBANY, N. Y.

THE IDEAL SIGHT RESTORER

IN WHAT DISTRESS WE NOTE THIS LASS IS DISFIGURED WITH HER HIDEOUS GLASSES

WE RESTORE SIGHT!

GLASSES RENDER DEFECTIVE VISION CHRONIC.

Write for our ILLUSTRATED TREATISE mailed free.

THE IDEAL COMPANY
239 Broadway,
New York.

SEE NOW THE FACE BRIGHT AS AURORA DUE TO USE OF THE SIGHT RESTORER.

A Christmas gift of Sight to Father, Mother, Uncle, Aunt, Sister, Brother or Friend.

$3 FOUNTAIN PEN FOR $1

To introduce our regular $3 Acme Fountain Pen we are making this wonderful bargain offer, which enables you to secure for lady or gentleman a most appropriate . . . XMAS PRESENT

A solid gold 14 k pen engraved holder. Ink always runs down and never drops. Postpaid for only $1.00. Money back if not satisfactory.

ACME PEN CO., 150 NASSAU STREET, NEW YORK.

STEREOPTICONS MAGIC LANTERNS and SLIDES CONDENSED CATALOGUE FREE RILEY BROS. 16 BEEKMAN ST. NEW YORK

Give

"Silver Plate that Wears"

for your

Holiday Presents

Tea Sets, Tureens, Waiters, etc

If they bear these Trade Marks nothing can be better.

Spoons, Forks, Knives, Etc. "1847 Rogers Bros."

Known throughout the world as the Standard of Quality.

Sold by leading dealers.

Send for illustrated Catalogue S.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA COMPANY,

Meriden, Conn.

New York Chicago San Francisco

An Art Gift

"THE SOUL'S AWAKENING" is a beautiful picture in colors and an exquisite gift. It is a work of art with a deep and beautiful meaning. It carries its spiritual message to every heart—and one never wearies of it. It is a picture that should hang in every home for the good influence it exerts. It is a constant source of pleasure and a silent force for good. We send a copy of "THE SOUL'S AWAKENING" in colors exactly the same size as the picture, which is sold for $1.00 in art stores, to each person who sends 75 cents for a year's subscription to a bright, helpful, enthusiastic Christian paper which wins the hearts of the young and exerts all the time a helping message for every member of the family, and is a fascination to the old as well as to the young. Sample copies, which will be sent free to inquirers, will make you accept a three months' trial without the picture for 25 cents.

Young People's Weekly

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO.,
36 Washington St., Chicago.

FARMS in Piedmont Valley Virginia, Stock and Grain Farms, Mineral Lands, Timber Lands, Manufacturing Sites, Residences, Business Openings. Send for free catalogue. Mention this paper. PIEDMONT REALTY EXCHANGE, Charlottesville, Va.

A Golden Jubilee

A HALF century in the service of the Lord's house is surely a record of unusual and blessed opportunity. How many comforting words a minister of Christ may utter in that time; how many broken hearts he may help to bind up; how many faithful hands he may join in the sacred institution of marriage; how many little ones he may lead to Christ; over how many dear ones does he utter the last prayer when "dust returns to dust"; how many differences which might otherwise sunder kindred or friends does he help to heal, and how many wayward wanderers does he lead back to the Heavenly Father!

The celebration of a golden jubilee of Christian ministry is a golden jubilee, and we give with pleasure the following account which has been sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of how the friends of one servant of God rejoiced with him at such a time.

[illegible] and other counties, representative members of various associations, and many friends beside, was recently held in Savona, to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the settlement of Rev. J. C. Mallory as pastor of Savona Baptist church. Sermons were delivered by the following ministers: Rev. H. W. Barnes, of [illegible]; Rev. C. W. Brooks, of Watkins; Rev. W. F. Benedict, of Prattsburg; and Rev. J. E. Wil[illegible] by the following: Rev. J. S. Brown, of the M.E. [illegible]; Cole, Deacon C. D. Davis, A. F. Burt, Prof. A. D. Miller, of the High School; T. C. Wall, editor of Reveal; Rev. D. J. Allen, of How[illegible]; C. Davis, of Bath; Rev. Robert Duncan, of Towlesville; Rev. A. B. Chase, of Cameron; Rev. D. Van Fradenburg, of Bradford. A roll call of the church was conducted on the second day by Rev. L. C. Davis, of Bath. Abundant refreshments were served by the ladies, in Grange Hall. Reminiscences of old time ministers and evangelists, especially of Rev. T. S. Sheardown, one of the pioneers, were given by Rev. C.W. Brooks, of Watkins. A purse of $65, contributed by friends, not members of the church, was presented to the pastor, in a neat speech by Deacon C. E. Cole. The meetings were intensely interesting [illegible].

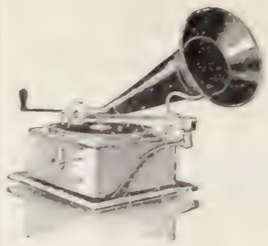
The following letter from Rev. Mr. Mallory to the proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will be read with interest by many friends of the paper to whom his expressions of appreciation belong equally with ourselves:

[illegible] N. Y. [illegible]

I have taken THE CHRISTIAN HERALD from its beginning, and have all the volumes neatly bound, making a valuable library in itself. I prize THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for its beautiful illustrations, its brilliant editorials, and as containing the cream of Christian literature and intelligence. As our pastorate stands almost alone in our denomination, as to its Providential duration, so THE CHRISTIAN HERALD stands quite alone, among all other papers in its having received and expended over a million dollars in Christian benevolences, feeding the hungry and clothing the naked. It has also placed Teachers' Bibles in many thousand homes. Growing better and better along the years of its past history, may it continue to do so during all the coming years! The Red Letter Testament is the latest and one of the brightest jewels in its coronet.

Deaconesses in the Orient

German deaconesses have now Homes in Jerusalem, Constantinople, Smyrna, Beirut and Alexandria. Their last established Home is the Victoria Hospital in Cairo. According to Der Kirchenbote, it has an income of $15,000. It is supplied with [illegible] charge of deaconesses from Kaiserwerth.



JUST THINK OF IT!

Dr. Talmage's Voice

Gram-o-phone

lots of money for you, your church, [illegible]

1	CORNET SOLO	Seraph
2	SONG	Marching Thro' Georgia
3	BANJO DUET	Enjoy Yourselves
4	KAISER MARCH	Wagner
5	RECITATION	A Negro Funeral Sermon
6	CLARINET SOLO	La Sonambula
7	SOPRANO SOLO	Home Sweet Home
8	TROMBONE SOLO	Love Thoughts Waltz
9	"A Flag Without a Stain"	Stars and Stripes"
10	ORCHESTRA SELECTION	Sousa's Band
11	THE CRACK REGIMENT
12	THE LORD'S PRAYER AND 23RD PSALM	Rev. T. De Witt Talmage

The "pouna-punk of [illegible] es of Dr. Talmage

All as natural as life itself—these performances being nothing less than ACTUAL RE[illegible]

It is already an acknowledged feature in the homes of the wealthy and refined. Hon. Chauncey M. Depew writes: [illegible] or to entertain one's family and friends."

Do not confound the Berliner Gram-o-phone with the unnatural noises you may have [illegible]

In its construction everything has been subordinated to its one object—Entertainment of the best and most varied kind. All our records are made in our own laboratories on FLAT INDESTRUCTIBLE DISCS from genuine performances by the most celebrated instru[illegible]

Special Concessions to Christian Herald Subscribers

The $18.00 Gram-o-phone will, for a short time, be sold to Subscribers to Christian Herald on the installment plan—$3.00 cash, $3.00 a month for five months; records, as wanted, 50 cents. Money refunded, less express charges, if instrument is not satisfactory and is returned immediately. Descriptive Circulars and full particulars sent free.

National Gram-o-phone Corp., 874 Broadway, New York

THIS GREAT BOOK SENT FREE!

"Come, Buck-ah!"

The Hoosier Schoolmaster

By Edward Eggleston.

This novel [illegible] French, Dutch and [illegible]

A Private Lesson from a Bumpkin	At Work in the Fields
A Quiet Evening	Fishing
Ned Brackenridge Master	Interior
A Walk Home	Pioneers
A Typical Farm House	A Log Cabin
Old Time Recreation of Men	The Wedding
The Spelling Match	A Log Cabin and its Occupants
The Quilting Party	A Log Cabin a Gone
Mode of Travel	Interior
Interior	Pioneers
A Primitive Farm Machine	Interior
A Log Cabin	The Spinning Wheel
The Log Cabin	Interior
The Primitive Mower	How it is Done

Over 100,000 sold, never at less than $1.50 per copy, now [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

WON AN INDIAN TRIBE TO CHRIST

YEARS ago there lived at Newton, Mass., a Christian family named Henderson. Mary A., a ten-year-old daughter, was a child who had already begun to show rare spiritual traits of character. It is related that one day she decided to induce her schoolmates to become Christians. At recess she said to them: "Why can't we have a prayer-meeting and give our hearts to Jesus?" Her companions were quickly interested. In a loft over the workshop of James Smith, a machinist, one Friday afternoon, the first meeting was held, and the ten-year-old spiritual leader read a few verses from the Bible and prayed.

MRS. SAGATOO

For several weeks these gatherings were continued, and the young hearts were impressed. One day the school-teacher said to Mary:

"How is it the scholars are learning to behave so orderly and quietly? It pleases me very much." One of the children answered: "Oh, don't you know? Little Miss Henderson is having prayer meetings after school hours, and is trying to make us Christians." The teacher turned to Mary and said, "God help you and bless you in doing so much good."

When Mary was about twenty years of age, she became interested in mission work, and was fully converted to the Master's cause. She was soon widely known as a missionary worker in the slums of Boston.

At the Bromfeld street church she met Joseph Cabay, a young educated Indian student from Baldwin University, Ohio, who had come to finish his studies at Harvard. He addressed the congregation and Sunday School, and also preached in various churches. He asked the young mission worker to go to Michigan and give the Gospel to his people, the Chippewas, and, she consenting, the two were married and set out for Michigan. With the tribe she became a great favorite.

Joseph Cabay, the young missionary chief, however, was not destined for long service on earth for the Master he loved so well. He had contracted consumption, and died shortly after returning to Michigan. Before dying he asked his wife to take his place as the head of his people and lead them to Christ. She promised, and a formal ceremony, adopting her as a daughter of the tribe, was performed, the name of Wah-Sash-Kah-Moqua, ("The one whose coming brought light in the darkness") being conferred upon her. After her husband's death the tribe continued to show her the greatest kindness. She afterward married Peter Sagatoo, a cousin of Joseph, he being chosen, according to tribal usage, as the chief's successor. It was explained to her by a Chippewa patriarch that a year after a husband died the nearest relative selected another husband for the widow, and the man selected would take a load of wood to her. If she refused to burn it, still another husband would be selected for her; but if she burned the wood and refused to marry, she would be put to death. "Now," said the patriarch, "you have burned Peter's wood—what are you going to do?" She was surprised and frightened, but conformed to the tribal custom, and they were married.

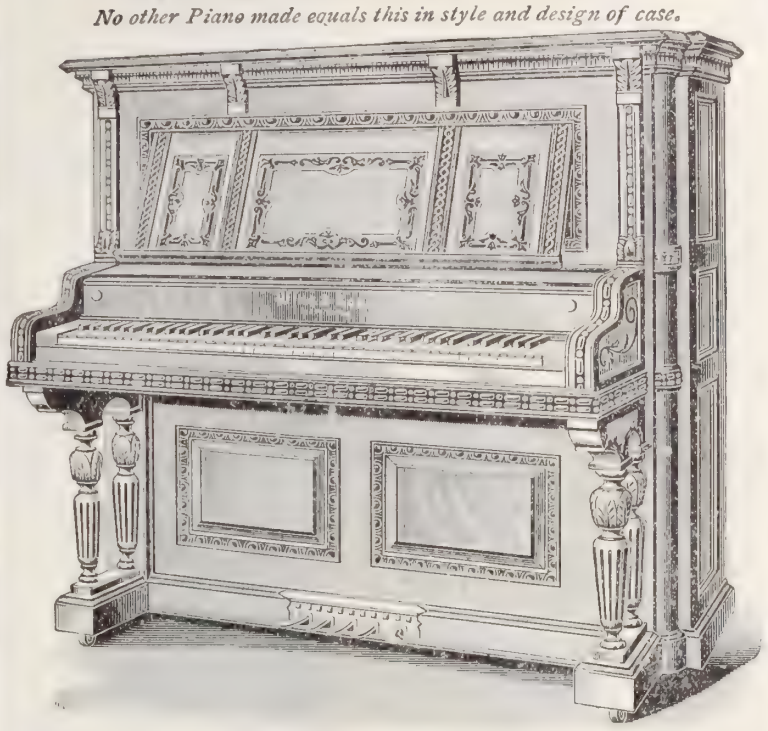
Mrs. Sagatoo now began to work among the Indians harder than ever. After learning the language, she preached and taught an Indian school among them for many years. Mr. Sagatoo frequently comes to Boston, and his wife, now a mature woman, goes East nearly every year to visit her friends. A fine church has been erected for the Chippewas through her efforts. Nearly the whole tribe in her vicinity has been reclaimed from heathendom and converted to Christianity.

"Honesty is the best policy." Change "policy" to "principle" and the world will like you better. In the medicine world there is one medicine honest for principle's sake—and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The Wing Piano

STYLE 29. CONCERT GRAND UPRIGHT.

No other Piano made equals this in style and design of case.



We aim to make the best piano possible and to sell it at the lowest price possble. If you wish to buy a fine piano at a low price, write us.

DESCRIPTION OF STYLE 29.

7⅓ octaves.

Double lever, grand repeating action.

Grand scale, overstrung bass; three strings to each note in middle and treble registers.

The scale is the same as in grand pianos, with the largest size of sound board and strings of greatest length, thus giving the greatest volume and power of tone.

Case.—Double veneered inside and outside.

Choice of superior Circassian walnut, rich figured mahogany, genuine quartered oak and ebonized.

Keys.—Of best ivory and ebony.

SPECIAL INFORMATION

Tone.—The one great object for which a piano is made is its tone. The Wing Piano possesses magnificent tone-qualities, durability, sweetness, richness, power, singing quality and evenness.

Action.—The Wing action is patterned after the perfected double lever grand repeating action, to secure the greatest strength and power and greatest repeating qualities. Every note acts instantaneously and recovers promptly, ready for the repeat, so that after a note is played the same note may be sounded again immediately without taking the finger from key.

Improvements.—Wing Pianos have the following improvements, viz.: "Built up" wrest plank construction. "Dovetail" top and bottom frame case construction. Full metal plate, with metal depression bar and metal supports for key bed. Improved noiseless direct motion pedal action. Improved practice attachment. Full length duet music desk. Carved panels. Instrumental attachment.

THE INSTRUMENTAL ATTACHMENT

imitates perfectly the tones of the Mandolin, Guitar, Harp, Zither and Banjo. Music written for these instruments, with and without piano accompaniment, can be played just as perfectly by a single player on the piano as though rendered by a grand orchestra.

Every Wing Piano is guaranteed for twelve (12) years against any defect in tone, action, workmanship or material . .

SENT ON TRIAL

FREIGHT PREPAID. We will send this piano or your choice of four other styles, to any part of the United States on trial (all freight paid by us), allow ample time for a thorough examination and trial in the home, and, if the instrument is in any particular unsatisfactory, we will take it back at our own expense. No conditions are attached to this trial. We ask for no advance payment, no deposit. We pay all freights in advance. Our object in offering these terms is to give everyone an opportunity to examine the Wing Piano free of expense or risk.

Over 18,000 Wing Pianos Manufactured and Sold in 30 Years (since 1868).

We will send free on request "The Book of Complete Information about Pianos," 118 pages, handsomely bound in cloth. Everyone who intends to purchase a piano should have this book. Sent free on requst, with twelve (12) pieces of music.

OLD INSTRUMENTS EXCHANGED—EASY PAYMENTS.

WING & SON.

205-207 EAST 12th STREET, NEW YORK.

1868—31st Year—1899

Do You Want a Home IN FLORIDA?

The Italy of America.

In a temperance settlement of northern people, in a Delightful Southern clime!

To safely invest $1,000 in installments to yield an income of $1,000 a year for life and an annuity for your children as safe and regular as the interest on a first class mortgage?

To emancipate yourself from the four prison walls and slavery of office, shop or store to engage in a congenial, profitable occupation!

On a piece of the richest prairie land, unsurpassed for profitable farming, stock or poultry raising, or of the richest hammock land for nut and fruit growing, or lands for berry growing, where crops and profits are big and sure.

Delightful, healthful climate; sea breezes; pure, soft water; best markets; good transportation facilities; cheap building material; free fuel; fruits, flowers and vegetables fresh from orchard and garden all the year. The Rural Press Settlement No. 7 affords all these. Low prices and easy terms.

LOW RATE EXCURSIONS EVERY MONTH. We court fullest investigation. Maps and circulars free. Send 10 cents for profusely illustrated 64 page Fruit Bulletin telling how to secure an income of $1,000 a year from $1,000 invested, in installments. Address, JAS. W. WILSON, President and Manager,

"NATIONAL RURAL" Homeseekers' Department, Unity Bldg., 79 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

"A Perfect Food,"

"Preserves Health,"

"Prolongs Life."

BAKER'S BREAKFAST COCOA

"It is at once a delightful food and nourishing drink, and it would be well for humanity if there were more of it consumed and less tea or coffee."—The Homeopathic Recorder.

Walter Baker & Co. Limited.

DORCHESTER, MASS.

Established 1780.

Libby's Plum Pudding

A delicious dessert for

HOLIDAY DINNERS

Just as good and pure as the choicest fruits, fine seasoning and our 40 years experience can make it.

Put up in convenient size key opening cans — ready to serve. Ask your grocer.

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago.

Free, New edition "How to Make Good Things to Eat."

Dr. Bull's COUGH SYRUP

cures while the baby sleeps. Mothers, your helpless babies confide in you. Beware of impure medicines! A little mistake will clog their brains and may ruin their lives forever.

Get a Doctor's Prescription!

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup was used in his great practice for years and never failed. He saved thousands of lives. It's pure—quick—sure. Buy a bottle today—delay is dangerous. It's good for the whole family. The standard physicians' remedy for over half a century—millions of bottles sold—it must be good. Refuse Substitutes.

My family has used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for about ten years for [illegible] colds, and they [illegible] ed them. I always keep a bottle in the house. W. H. MORRIS, Lansdale, Minn.

A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Bull's Pleasant Purgative Pills. Trial, 20 [illegible]

MONEY IN IT Splendid chance to make money without risk. Prospectus free. Address, FIDELITY INVESTMENT CO., SEATTLE, WASH.

Securing Subscriptions

TO

The Ladies' Home Journal

AND

The Saturday Evening Post

is not like securing subscriptions to any other publications. If you have been unsuccessful with other publications, it was not necessarily your fault. It does not prove that you can not be very successful with better publications.

These two high-class publications of ours do not have to be "introduced," as a rule. They are well known through their great circulations and through an immense amount of advertising.

We want an agent in every town and city.

Liberal commission for every subscription. Special rewards for large clubs, and in addition to this $[illegible] will be distributed among the 764 most successful agents.

All of your time, or your spare time, can be profitably utilized all Winter.

Write to-day for particulars.

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

NEW EDITION.

IN HIS STEPS

"What Would Jesus Do?"

By Rev. Charles M. Sheldon.

[illegible]

5 CENTS PER COPY, BY MAIL, PREPAID

[illegible] profusely illustrated [illegible] enameled paper covers with handsome en[illegible]

Also, a Library edition, on extra heavy paper, cloth back and corners, ornamented sides. By mail, prepaid, 25 cents per copy.

Either of above editions sent by mail, prepaid, to any address, on receipt of price.

DAVID C. COOK PUBLISHING CO.,
36 WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO.

$3.00 $1

Bagster Bible for

To Christian Herald readers. Carefully packed in a box to any address.

Formerly sold for $3.00

[illegible]

This is the famous genuine Bagster [illegible] Bible, [illegible] and [illegible] readers, [illegible] Index.

Don't hesitate or you may miss getting one of the wonderful $1.00 [illegible]

Send your $1.00 now. Add 20 cents [illegible]

JAMES POTT & CO., 283 and 285 Fourth Ave., New York

FREE Sample

"OUR FAVORITE" GOLD ENAMEL

(Washable)

to gild a small frame, also a brush to apply it with, to any one mentioning this paper and enclosing a two-cent stamp for postage.

As brilliant and smooth as gold leaf. Ready for use. A child can apply it. Shows no brushmarks. Can be washed without tarnishing. Gilds everything.

Also made in Aluminum Silver.

Sold by dealers generally, or we will send 25-cent full-size box, or large size (three times the [illegible]

Gerstendorfer Bros.,
NEW YORK, 17 G Barclay St. CHICAGO, 67 G Lake St

Do you want to secure this handsome $10.00 combination desk and book case Absolutely Free? If so, write for particulars. A few hours of your spare time is the service we ask.

DOUBLEDAY & McCLURE CO., 141-155 East 25th St., N. Y.

Our Royal Brother

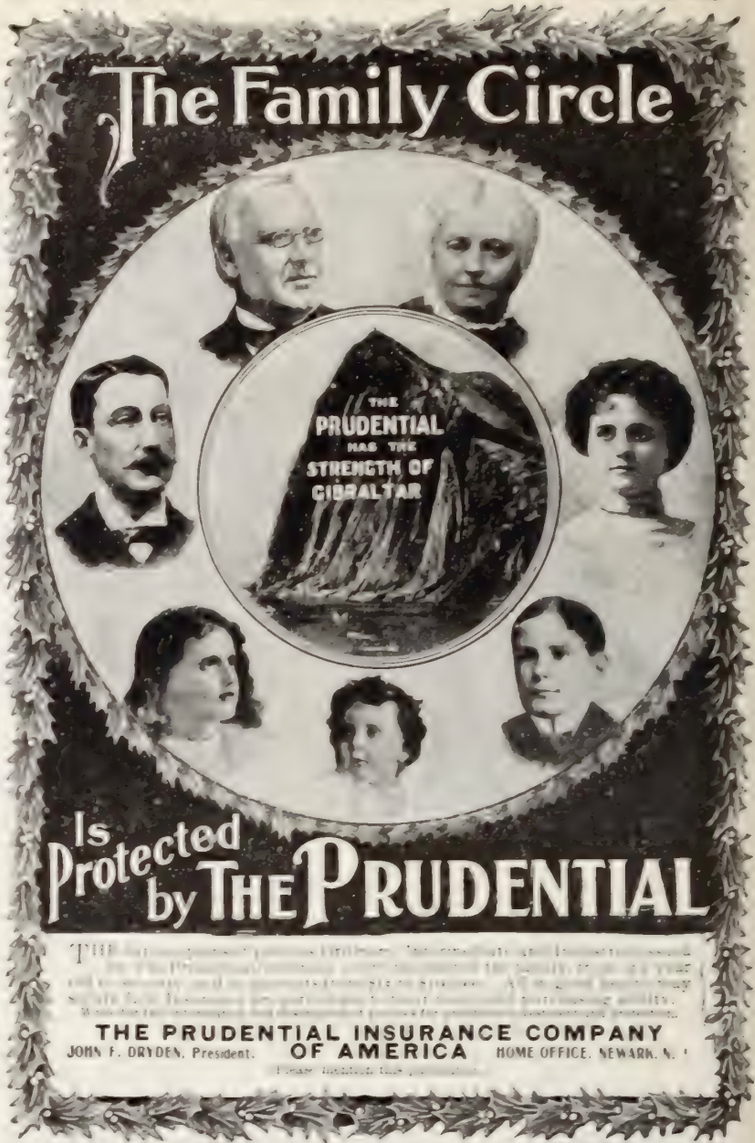
Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for Dec. 24. Heb. 1:1-9.

WHEN we celebrate the birth of our Lord, we naturally dwell on the human side of his nature. It is difficult to keep in mind the Divinity, as we think of him a helpless babe lying in the manger at Bethlehem. In his after years, healing disease, quieting the raging tempest, feeding the multitude, we recognize the Deity; but in thinking of his infancy, it is his humanity that impresses us. But we cannot conceive of such a manhood, without being prepared to hear that there was a difference of quality in the nature of the Infant. Such a manhood as that of Christ could not have developed in that little Syrian village, unless there had been some supernatural quality to begin with. It was no ordinary babe that lay in the manger. Mysterious as the Incarnation must ever be, inconceivable to the finite mind as is the union of the Divine with the human, the difficulty of believing it is less than that of supposing that the Babe of Bethlehem, who grew to become Jesus of Nazareth, was an ordinary human child. That he was human, there can be no doubt. He called himself the Son of Man, and we see the human physical frailties in many incidental allusions in the Gospels. He knew what hunger and thirst were; he was weary when he sat on the well; he could weep with the mourner and he felt the yearning for human sympathy in the hour of his distress.

Jesus was a man; but what man has there ever been like him? In all the centuries of the world's history, no other man of his quality has been produced. His personal character compels the admiration even of the detractors of Christianity. To this day, the enemies of the Church have no assaults to make on the character of its Founder. Indeed, they pay him the tribute of respect, by reproaching the Church for not being like him. It is an extraordinary thing, too, as eminent writers have pointed out, that his example inspires members of all classes. Kings, statesmen, judges, soldiers, merchants, working men, wives, mothers, children—all seem to see in him some qualities which they appropriate and imitate. Knowing absolutely nothing of such a life as we lead in this nineteenth century; walking from village to village in that far-off Oriental land; with surroundings as different from ours as can be conceived; he yet remains the model for every life; and we can give a man or woman no higher praise than to say, he or she is like Christ. How could a character so universally admired, so eternally admirable, have been produced if there had not been in him a Divinity which permeated and transformed his human nature? It is as Phillips Brooks so aptly says: "As when the sunlight fills a jewel, the jewel throbs and glows with radiance. All its mysterious nature palpitates and burns with clearness. But it is the jewel's self that we see. The sunlight has made us see what it is, not turned it into something different from what it was."

Thus, we are brought to the idea of brotherhood. In Christ we see what this nature of ours is capable of being. As a block of marble may be hewn by some clumsy operator into the semblance of a man, or under the hand of a master may become a statue full of beauty, so human nature full of Divinity becomes a being of glorious loveliness. It is our nature, but how it is transfigured! God was manifest in the flesh. It was as if God had said: "You men undervalue your nature; you do not know what may be made of it; I will show you how transcendently good and beautiful it may become." So we had an Ideal that all men may admire and copy. We could not understand the nature of God. He is a Spirit, and we cannot know what pure spirit is; but when we see Jesus, we see what the nature of God in a human environment can be. This is nearer to us, this is man and he is our Brother. As Matthew Arnold says:

> Was Christ a man like us?
> Ah, let us see, if we can be
> Such men as he!



The Family Circle
THE PRUDENTIAL HAS THE STRENGTH OF GIBRALTAR
Is Protected by THE PRUDENTIAL
THE PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE COMPANY
JOHN F. DRYDEN, President. OF AMERICA HOME OFFICE, NEWARK, N. J.

New Graded Helps
in
The Sunday School Times
Appearing in Every Week's Issue

FOR SENIOR BIBLE CLASSES
Prof. F. K. Sanders, Ph.D., of Yale University

FOR THE INTERMEDIATE TEACHER
A. E. Dunning, D.D., Secretary of the International Lesson Committee

FOR THE JUNIOR TEACHER
A. F. Schauffler, D.D., of the International Lesson Committee

FOR THE PRIMARY TEACHER
George H. Archibald, in conference with Bertha F. Vella, Mrs. R. B. Preuszner, Annie S. Harlow, Mrs. George H. Archibald, E. P. St. John, Minnie Allen, Lucy G. Stock

Nine other articles of general lesson comment are given in each issue, including [illegible] by Alexander Wilder, [illegible] by Bishop Warren, CRITICAL NOTES by Professor Isaac Flagg, ORIENTAL LESSON LIGHTS, by Professor Long, of Robert College, Constantinople; SCRIPTURE READINGS, selected by B. F. Jacobs, etc. The noted special contributors for 1900 include Canon Tristram, H. Clay Trumbull, Dr. Hilprecht, Francis E. Clark, D.D., Edward Bok, Annie T. Slosson, Hezekiah Butterworth, Amos R. Wells etc.

Yearly Subscription Rates

60 cts.—Five or more copies in a package to one address, 60 cents each.
75 cts. [illegible]

A free copy given with every ten copies paid for at club rates.

$1.00.—[illegible] and more than one [illegible] separate addresses, $1.00 each.
$1.50.—One copy. To ministers, missionaries, and theological students, $1.00.

SPECIMEN COPIES FREE.

John D. Wattles & Co., 1031 Walnut St., Phila., Pa.

A TIMELY ACROSTIC

While the great discussion of the saloon keeper's money is going on, this acrostic, forwarded to us by Mr. R. C. Gill, of Washington, D. C., will be read with general appreciation.

Insidious spirit, whose ignoble name
Nature's accomplished sons have borne with shame,
Talents which listening Senates might admire,
Ensnared by thee, are quenched in Moloch's fire.
Man, once the image of his Maker, lies
Prostrate before thee, impotent to rise:
Each power of thought, each high-bred purpose gone;
Reason, disordered, leaves her tottering throne;
And he whose lofty genius might have trod
Nature's sublimest heights to nature's God,
Cursed by thy withering touch and fetid breath,
Ends a dishonored life in shame and death.

Baltimore, Md. J. THOMAS SMITH.

The Bowery Christmas Tree

The Bowery Mission Christmas tree is to the East Side children, who have seen it, the great event of their lives, and stories are told by them of its wonderful possibilities, which seem to listeners very much like fairy tales. As we meet the children in the street, their faces are beaming with the joy of anticipation, and all manner of questions are asked. One little girl hailed me, and told me with a most distressed look on her face that her doll couldn't be hung on the Christmas tree this time for "her head is all boke."

Already eight letters printed by little hands have been given me to send to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, where the Christmas tree grows. Their requests are as varied as they are earnest. For instance, one child asked for a tooth-brush, and said: "We have only one in our family, and everybody uses it, and it's all worn out." We have great hopes for that family! As I was telling a group of children in Hester street about the Christmas tree which would be covered with beautiful gifts, a little girl with a wondering, doubtful look, said:

"This ain't no bluff, is it?"

When I asked her, "What is a bluff?" she replied quickly, "Don't you know it's lies the peoples tells us." It was evident that her little life thus far had been full of disappointment and deceit, and that a promise meant very little to her.

This annual Christmas tree opens up a new world to these little waifs. We do not tell them that a Santa Claus brings these gifts, but that Christ's friends send all this happiness to them; and that he tells them that if they give joy to his little children, it is doing him service. This throws a new light upon the Christmas spirit, and shows them that there are some who find it their pleasure in giving, rather than receiving. We have been asked which we prefer, money or other gifts, and would say the money is more acceptable; for parents or older sisters often tell us that the little ones in the home, when they are saying their evening prayers, ask God to fill some definite want; and if we can buy this one thing to gratify their childish hearts we are really strengthening their faith in prayer, and we are acting as God's agents in giving them their desire. SARAH J. BIRD.

The White Heron's Passing

A "Friend of the Birds" sends us the following, with a request for its reprint: "The scale on which the massacre of the beautiful white heron is being carried on is almost incredible. An idea of it may be gained from the fact that one egret will furnish only one-sixth of an ounce of plumage feathers, and yet at a public sale in London less than a year ago, more than eleven thousand ounces of osprey plumes were offered for sale. This means that more than sixty-six thousand egrett had been put to death for the sake of their plumes, that some fair dame might be more gayly decorated! The most lamentable feature of the slaughter of the beautiful and innocent birds is that the feather's grow at the time when the egrets are nesting. An egret is shot, the few coveted feathers are torn from its back, its body is left to rot on the ground and the young ones perish of starvation. The species must soon become extinct."

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

(OF PHILADELPHIA)

FOR THIS WEEK

Contains the third paper in Thomas B. Reed's notable series, which is now running in the POST. In this article the former Speaker of the National House will describe in detail some of the most famous breaches of parliamentary discipline that have occurred in the halls of Congress.

Rows in Congress

Mr. Reed's papers on National affairs are an important contribution to our political history. They deal strenuously and authoritatively with certain of the lesser-known phases of public life, and they are fraught with a deep and absorbing interest for every American who would be well informed as to the affairs of the Nation. The busiest man can well afford to devote a half hour to reading Rows in Congress.

By HON. THOMAS B. REED

No effort is being spared to secure for the POST the best fiction, the best articles, the best editorial and humorous matter written. Indeed, none but the best is considered good enough for readers of the POST. No week passes without giving the publishers an opportunity to announce some of the POST's new features: Among them is a group of short stories and serials by some of the foremost writers of the day—men whom the reading public have assigned to the highest places in the world of letters.

RUDYARD KIPLING

Will contribute to the Christmas number of the POST one of the best short stories that have come from his pen for a long time. In Garm: A Hostage, Mr. Kipling returns to India and his soldier friends.

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS

Will have in a January number of the POST a story that will appeal with equal force to both men and women. It is characterized by that distinction of style and subtle charm which pervade all of Mr. Davis' work.

To be had of All Newsmen at 5 Cents the Copy, or sent by mail 5 months, on trial, for $1.00

THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

"I cannot refrain from saying that it is equal to any $5.00 Teachers' Bible that I have ever seen" —E. H. Van Hoeren, 82 Spencer Street, Brooklyn.

Have You a Good Bible?

Why Not When You Can Get One Worth $5.00 for $1.00.

Nelson's Popular Teachers' Bible

contains New Helps, with 68 illustrations, New Concordance to the Authorized and Revised Versions, combined with a Subject Index and Pronouncing Dictionary of Scripture, Proper Names, etc., all in one a, b, c, list, a great achievement and facility. The Dial says: "The concordance is the most complete yet produced."

12 maps, beautifully colored, carefully revised and specially engraved are from the latest surveys with complete index.

Minion type, bound in flexible leather, with overlapping covers, red under gold edges. Size, 7 3-4 by 5 inches.

☞ If You Wish One of Those Wonderful Bibles Do Not Delay. Thumb Index, 35 Cents Extra.

Add 20 cents if to be sent by post. MONEY REFUNDED IF NOT SATISFACTORY.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS, . . . Publishers, . . . 41 East 18th Street, New York.

Our Little Namesake

THIS letter from a father and a mother in Iowa (whose hearts have a warm corner for their favorite journal), will be read with interest and appreciation by our friends:

[illegible] herewith a photograph of our little [illegible] be proud to keep the little souvenir for him until he is old enough to value it as he should. [illegible] richest bless- [illegible] each issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, so that [illegible] and carry salvation to many perishing souls. We have been constant readers of it for nearly four years and wonder how we ever got along without it.

Christian Herald Sandell

Yours sincerely,
MR. and MRS. CHAS. SANDELL.

The bright little fellow (whose portrait is here reproduced) is THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S first namesake. We hope he may be spared to a gracious and useful manhood, and to deliver by word of mouth the same message which this journal, whose name he bears, has been giving to the world for the last twenty years.

♦

Countess Schimmelmann's Work

Countess Adeline Schimmelmann, founder of the International Mission, who has traveled all over the world in her beautiful yacht, Duen, is now in New York City. It was the intention of the Countess, on account of poor health, not to accept any engagements to speak until she had had several months' rest. But she decided to make an exception and speak at the demonstration against the saloon on December 10th, at Carnegie Hall. The Countess will stay in New York for a few months during the coming winter. Her mission work consists in training young sailors and boys, holding Gospel meetings and distributing food to the poor and needy. She [illegible] Gospels and tracts, and holds meetings in lodging houses and sailors' homes. She maintains a Seamen's Home at Rugen for Baltic fishermen; also the mission boat Taube for the fishermen and sailors in the Baltic Sea.

♦

Books Received

A Gentleman in Waiting. By Cornelius V. V. [illegible] M. Harrison. Verses. Pp. 90. Publishers, Robert Clarke & Co., Cincinnati, O.

NEW HOME RUPTURE CURE

Remarkable Method that Heals Any Rupture Without Pain or Danger

No Operation or Detention From Work —Is Cheap, Safe and Sure.

Dr. W. S. Rice has backed up with convincing facts his statement that rupture can be cured at the patients' home without pain, danger, operation or detention from work. He has invented a cheap and reliable method that has met with marvelous success and thousands of people ruptured for years have been permanently cured. It cured R. M. Wilsie, of Brandon, Wis., who had been ruptured 20 years. Mrs. M. E. Smith, Rockingham, Vt., was badly ruptured and cured herself by Dr. Rice's method. Wm. Bigford, Bishop Mills, Ont., tried various trusses with no success and finally cured himself by the Rice plan. Jacob Lindner, Drums, Pa., owes his cure to Dr. Rice. G. Nilson, Sogn, Minn., has a double rupture and calls Dr. Rice's method a God-send.

Several thousand cases are reported cured by this remarkable method and as it is very low in price, easily used, adapted to either sex, adults or children, every ruptured person should at once investigate it. Write to Dr. W. S. Rice, 392-D, Main St., Adams, N. Y., and he will send you a full description, so you can cure yourself in a few weeks, long before the heavy work of the springtime begins. Do not fail to write to-day and if you know of others afflicted, send their names for this wonderfully valuable information. They will appreciate your kindness.

No. 05130

ENAMELED BED

[illegible] 40 in. high at foot.

ROYAL SPRING

[illegible] wood or steel frame. Has a perfect, easy

BARCALO & BOLL MFG. CO.,
Buffalo, N. Y.

Complete Set Delivered at Once.
32 volumes, only 50 cents each, payable $1.00 a month for 16 months.

These thirty-two interesting volumes provide the way for all to become acquainted with the makers of the world's history. They are not dull-hard-to-read books, but, on the contrary, most instructive, and written in an exceptionally entertaining style.

That these are books whose ownership is appreciated is best evidenced by their unequalled sale of over . . . .

650,000
VOLUMES

This publication, Abbott's Biographical Histories, has been adopted by Boards of Education in many states, and no library can be termed complete without this work.

The complete set, thirty-two volumes, well printed upon extra quality of paper, illustrated, durably and artistically bound in buckram, with appropriate design in two colors on cover, will be forwarded for inspection upon request. If, upon examination, you decide to retain the work, remit us one dollar a month for sixteen months. We prepay delivery [illegible] satisfactory you return at our expense.

Alfred the Great
Margaret of Anjou
Richard I.
Richard II.
William the Conqueror
Alexander the Great
Cyrus the Great
Darius the Great
Genghis Khan
Peter the Great
Xerxes
Hannibal
Julius Caesar
Nero
Pyrrhus
Romulus

Charles I.
Hortense
Josephine
Madame Roland
Marie Antoinette
Henry IV.
Hernando Cortez
Joseph Bonaparte
King Philip
Louis XIV.
Louis Philippe
Charles II.
Mary Queen of Scots
Queen Elizabeth
Richard III.
Cleopatra

HARPER'S HISTORY CLUB, 142 Fifth Ave., New York

MAKERS of HISTORY

Sacred Songs No. 2.

By Sankey, McGranahan and Stebbins. A large majority of the pieces in this book are entirely [illegible] before published. [illegible] "The Story that Never Grows Old," "I'm A Pilgrim," "A Little While," "Be Thou Exalted," etc., [illegible] Mr. Sankey.

Same styles and prices as "SACRED SONGS No. 1," of which over 685,000 copies have already been sold. Price $25 per 100. Sample copy, post free, 20 cents. Phonograph Records [illegible] Ira D. Sankey of the above songs may also be had.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

STEREOPTICONS, Moving Picture Machines & Films [illegible] for Sale or Rent.

Send for Bargain List and New Illustrated Hymns and Songs. Lantern slides made and colored.

Williams, Brown & Earle, 919 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

[illegible] THE CELEBRATED BELLS OF BLYMYER MFG. CO. [illegible] CHURCH, SCHOOL, FIRE ALARM, [illegible] CHIMES AND PEALS. [illegible] CATALOGUE FREE.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

$5.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working [illegible] your own team. Applicants must furnish satisfactory ref- [illegible] B. F. Johnson, 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

EVERYTHING TO EAT, WEAR AND USE

Mammoth 304-Page Catalogue of Everything you buy. FREE. Address,

JULIUS HINES & SON, Baltimore, M. D. Dept. 218.

The Force behind the force is the controlling mind which plans and directs the work of others. You can rise to a higher position without interrupting your work or leaving home. You can get

A Technical Education BY MAIL.

Mechanical & Architectural Draughtsmen, Electrical Steam Engineers, Architects, Surveyors, Chemists, Correspondents, Stenographers and Bookkeepers.

The International Correspondence Schools, Box 881, Scranton, Pa.

CRAZY WORK 125 Velvet [illegible] Embroidery, Chenille, [illegible] 100 Beautiful Heavyweight Silk Remnants, [illegible] quilt patterns [illegible] rise Woolen Remnants, [illegible] Ice Wool, [illegible] All [illegible] 10 cts. [illegible]

DITMAN'S SEA-SALT

TONIC. STRENGTHENING. INVIGORATING

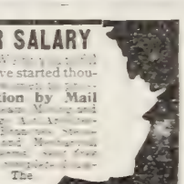
Address Ditman, 1 Barclay Street, New York

TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS, [illegible]

1000 MENUS

[illegible] Cook Book Calendar Co. 383 West St., New York.

INCREASE YOUR SALARY



[illegible] the highest places. We have started thousands [illegible] perity through Education by Mail [illegible] Mechanical Engineering, Steam Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Mining, Architecture, Plumbing, Sanitary Engineering, Mechanical Drawing, Chemistry, Assaying, Metallurgy, Architectural Drawing, Bridge Engineering, Surveying, Telegraphy, Telephony, Electric Lighting, Electric Railways, Steam Engineering, Locomotive Engineering, Stationary Engineering, Textile Manufacturing, Mechanical Drawing

THE LATEST WRINKLE

Hyomei Antiseptic Skin Soap.

A PERFECT SKIN AND TOILET SOAP, MADE WITHOUT FATS, GREASE OR DANGEROUS ALKALI

Unlike any other, HYOMEI ANTISEPTIC SKIN SOAP is made from the fresh, green leaves of the Tasmanian Blue Gum Tree only, and contains all its healing, cooling, refreshing and invigorating properties.

No greace or fats to fill the pores and cause Pimples, Blackheads, etc. . .

No dangerous alkali to dry up the skin and prevent circulation . . .

A perfect skin food, from Nature's own laboratory, and one that is proving a revelation to soap users.

Sold by all druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price, 25 cents.

THE R. T. BOOTH CO.,
No. 10 Avenue D, Ithaca, N. Y.

SAMPLES MAILED FREE.

Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure Has Merit, or This Offer Could Not Be Made.

Dr. Blosser, the great Catarrh Specialist and discoverer of the method of curiug Catarrh by medicated smoke inhalation, has such confidence in the virtues of his remedy, that he offers to send a three day's trial treatment, absolutely free, by mail, to any person suffering from Catarrh, Bronchtis, Asthma, Catarrhal Deafness, or any other catarrhal affection of the respiratory tract.

This remedy is sold upon its merits, and you will be dealt with honestly and liberally. Write at once, giving a brief statement of your case, and receive by return mail a free sample and all needed advice. Address: Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 50 Broad St., Atlanta, Ga.

70 HOUSE PLANS FOR $1!

If you are thinking about building, don't fail to get the new book, Palliser's American Architecture, containing 104 pages, 11 by 14 inches in size, consisting of large 9 by 12 plate pages, giving plans, elevations, perspective views, descriptions, actual cost of construction; no guess work, and instructions how to build 70 Cottages, Villas, Double Houses, Brick Block Houses, suitable for city, suburbs, town and country, costing from $300 to $6,500, together with specifications and form of contract. Sent in paper cover, by mail, postpaid, on receipt of $1.

400 Recitations and Readings. We will send to any address on receipt of 35 cents, a handsome book bound in paper cover, and containing 400 of the best recitations ever issued. Address all orders to J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 57 Rose St., New York.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample, write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

BRONCHIAL CONSUMPTION

From Dr. Hunter's Lectures on the Progress of Medical Science in the Treatment of Lung Diseases

Of the many forms of Bronchitis, the one most alarming of all is that in which the symptoms closely resemble those of consumption, and hence called consumptive bronchitis, or bronchial consumption. You must not, however, understand from its name that it is really tuberculous in character, or produced by the bacilli which cause true consumption.

In all lung cases, I require a portion of the expectorated matter coughed up by the patient to be brought to me, or sent in a small bottle by express, before giving a definite opinion of the disease. If on examination, I find the tubercle bacilli present, the case is consumption; and if no bacilli—Bronchitis. A large percentage of those who die of a lung disease, supposed to be consumption, are really deaths by chronic bronchitis resembling consumption.

A remarkable instance in verification of this recently occurred. A lady was brought to me in what appeared the last stage of consumption. Her physicians had told her husband that she could not live a week. She had a bad cough, puriform expectorations, night sweats, and was wasted almost to skin and bone. Judging by her symptoms and appearance, it was impossible not to fear that she had come too late. On sounding her chest, however, I was surprised to find no solidification by tubercles, and on examing her sputum a total absence of the bacilli. The history, too, of her sickness revealed that it had followed an attack of whooping cough and grippe. So, although her pulse was 120 a minute, and so feeble as to be hardly perceptible, and the wasting of her body so extreme that she could not stand without support, I did not hesitate to pronounce the disease bronchial, and give it as my opinion that, if we could sustain her strength long enough for remedies to act, she would be saved. She was immediately placed under medicated air treatment, with tonics to impart appetite and digestives to help the enfeebled stomach to transform nourishments into chyle and blood. Within a week she showed signs of amendment. Her progress was necessarily slow, as the healing powers of the body were nearly exhausted before the first inhalation was given, but she gradually acquired more and more strength, and within six weeks was able to take short walks in the open air. She recovered perfectly in about six months, and is alive and well to-day.

This case shows the importance of a correct diagnosis and proper adaptation of the treatment of the conditions to be remedied. Had the true nature of her disease not been discovered just when it was, she would have lost her life through wrong treatment, and been recorded as another death by consumption.

Every form of bronchitis is curable by local antiseptic and healing remedies applied directly to the lungs by medicated air inhalation, but none of them by stomach treatment. The stomach is not the part affected. The air tubes and cells of the lungs are the seat of every bronchial disease, and unless remedies capable of changing their bad secretions and healing the inflamed tubes are applied to them, cure is impossible. To treat bronchial and other lung diseases through the stomach and hold out a hope of cure by that treatment is malpractice, and ought to be punished as a crime against the sick.

(Signed) ROBERT HUNTER, M. D.,
117 West 45th Street,
New York.

In order to obtain Dr. Hunter's book, "The Lungs and their Diseases," free, it is necessary to mention this paper, and address Dr. Robert Hunter Association, 117 W. 45th street, New York.

Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict, 327 Broadway, New York

ONE HUNDRED

copies of a letter, piece of music, drawing, or any writing can be made on a Lawton Simplex Printer. No washing. No wetting of paper. Send for circulars and samples of work. Agents wanted.

LAWTON & CO., 30 Vesey St., New York.
59 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

MAKE MONEY EVENINGS.
Men employed during the day can make money evenings giving public exhibitions with Magic Lantern or Stereopticon. Little capital needed. Write for particulars. 256 page Catalogue FREE.
McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y.

$18.00 a Week and expenses to good parties to travel. No canvassing. Permanent position. Also local workers and managers can find profitable employment for part time. Give references. R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP for children teething should always be used for children while teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrnœa.

You Can Play Them Without Learning

NEW YORK CHURCH CHOIR ZOBO BAND

This band has been organized over a year, and has given many successful concerts, by the M. E. Church Choir and Organist, Mr. C. Diehl, of 125th Street, New York City, as a means of raising money for church purposes. They find it a pleasant, profitable variation from routine work, especially valuable in concerts, and of great use in church services. Many Church Choirs have these Zobo Bands, and find them of great value. As a means of earning money for church purposes, a "Zobo Concert" invariably draws full houses. Zobo Bands can play any piece of music in all parts by ear or by note as preferred.

READ WHAT PASTORS AND ORGANISTS SAY ABOUT OUR INSTRUMENTS.
Rev. C. Mekeblun, of East Grand Fork, Minn., says: "I am pleased with Zobo instruments, and have organized a boy's brigade with big success." Wm. F. Miller, organist and director of church choir of Park Ave. Baptist Church of Paterson, N.J., says: "I find the Zobo Brass Band Instruments to be first class, and just what we needed, as we have a very small organ. We have a fourteen piece Zobo Band, and intend to enlarge it. We have had one Zobo Concert, and would say that it was a complete success." Rev. W. H. Sampson, of St. John, West New Brunswick, Canada, says: "I am sending you express money order, as those I have are very satisfactory, and suited for giving church entertainments." Also refer you to Rev. Jas. J. Seder, of Menomonie, Wis.; Rev. Robt. R. Clelland, of Pablo Beach, Fla.; Rev. W. H. Mahaffie, Ph.D., Burlington, Ia. Had we space, we could quote you thousands of such letters from pastors who have had our goods, but we believe that we have quoted enough to satisfy any reasonable person that we are perfectly reliable and that our goods are as represented.

CAN BE PLAYED BY ANYONE WHO CAN HUM A TUNE—NO LEARNING. We do away with the long tedious labor of practice. It is the most extraordinary musical instrument ever produced, so constructed that the human voice comes out so wonderfully as to make it melodious beyond all imagination. It seems impossible for it to accomplish so much. It gives you the vocal power of giants, yet its music may be softened to the cooing of a dove, or the thrilling song of the nightingale. It is a money and music making feature for Church Choirs and all other concerts. These instruments open up new possibilities to the Vocalist, and develop the vocal cords. The Cornet is an elegant accompaniment to Organ, Piano or any string instrument, and affords unlimited pleasure to the individual, suited for all in and outdoor entertainment.

WITH A FULL BAND A GRAND PIPE ORGAN EFFECT CAN BE OBTAINED. Those that have no pipe organ, the Zobo supplies the want at a minimum cost. Every church without a pad choir should organize a Zobo Church Choir Band. Sing into the mouth piece. Zobo does the rest.

$1.00. SPECIAL THIRTY-DAY OFFER. To introduce the Musical Marvel of the Age, we will send the Zobo Cornet, solid brass, highly polished and lacquered, 12 inches long, 6 inch bell, with full instructions how to play, and illustrated catalogue, by mail postpaid for $1.00. This is a grand offer and you should not miss it. We warrant each instrument just as represented or money refunded. Send money by registered letter, post office money order, a bank draft payable to our order, or have your store-keeper order for you.

Strauss Mfg. Co. (Dep't. 8), 369 Broadway, New York City.

Vapo-Cresolene
Cured while she slept
...FOR...
Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Colds, Bronchitis.
For twenty one years the most successful GERMICIDE in contagious disease
Send for descriptive booklet, containing physicians' testimonials and price list.
Sold by Druggists Generally.
Vapo-Cresolene Co.,
69 Wall St., New York,
SCHIEFFELIN & CO.,
N Y U S Agts.

THE NATURAL BODY BRACE

CURES AILMENTS PECULIAR TO WOMEN
COSTS YOU NOTHING TO TRY IT.

Thousands of letters like this prove our assertions:

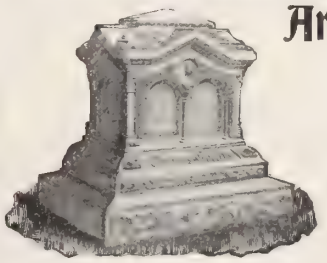
"Curtis, Miss., Sept 1st, 1898. The brace I bought of you two years ago did all you claimed for it. It cured me of the worst forms of illness peculiar to my sex. Before using the Brace I suffered with prolapsus, periodical cramps, inflammation, constipation, headache and other things of 20 years standing. I had spent hundreds of dollars for medicines and doctors before trying the Brace.

"Mrs. Susie Woodard."

Send for full information with booklet, mailed free in plain, sealed envelope. Address

THE NATURAL BODY BRACE CO.,
Box , Salina, Kansas

SIMPLE IN CONSTRUCTION—COMFORTABLE
ADJUSTABLE TO ANY FIGURE



Artistic Monuments...

COST NO MORE THAN PLAIN ONES in White Bronze

Marble is entirely out of date. Granite soon gets moss-grown, discolored, requires constant expense and care, and eventually crumbles back to Mother Earth. Besides it is very expensive. White Bronze is strictly everlasting. It cannot crumble with the action of frost. Moss-growth is an impossibility. It is more artistic than any stone. Then why not investigate it? It has been adopted for nearly one hundred public monuments. We have designs from $4.00 to $4,000.00. Write at once for free designs and information. It puts you under no obligation. We deal direct and deliver everywhere.

The Monumental Bronze Co., 70-90 Howard Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.

Library ..of the.. World's Best Music

$200.00 Worth of Sheet Music at One Tenth Value!

Bound in 8 Volumes 2,200 Pages

350 best old and new songs, 300 instrumental selections, 400 greatest composers ABLY EDITED, SUPERBLY ILLUSTRATED. Prices, cloth, $18; half leather, $21; no advance payment. $1 to be paid 15 days after receipt of books and $1 per month thereafter. Indispensable in every home where there is a piano. A most desirable holiday gift. Sent free for examination. We pay transportation. Books may be returned at our expense if not satisfactory.

THE UNIVERSITY SOCIETY,
78 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK

OUR OFFER IN DETAIL IN THE CHRISTIAN HERALD OF NOV. 29

...IN HIS STEPS...

By Charles M. Sheldon. We will send this wonderful book, bound in paper cover, for 15 cents each or $1.50 per dozen, bound in cloth, 35 cents per copy. Address J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., 57 Rose St., New York

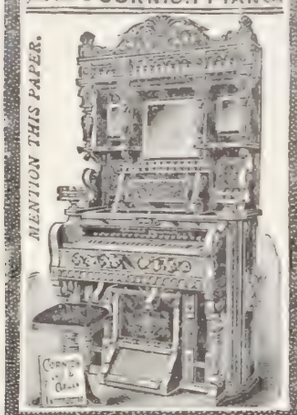
REAL OLD VIOLINS
About Genuine Ones Sent

ONE YEAR'S FREE TRIAL

BRIGHTEN YOUR HOME WITH THE CELEBRATED CORNISH AMERICAN PIANOS & ORGANS.

A prompt response to this advertisement will secure a DISCOUNT of $[illegible] on the [illegible] our low introductory price for a CORNISH ORGAN or $[illegible] on the latter you have a CORNISH PIANO.

MENTION THIS PAPER.



WE WILL ship a Cornish Piano or Cornish Organ anywhere upon the distinct understanding that if it is not satisfactory to purchaser after 12 months' use, we will take it back [illegible] money, freight charges both ways to be paid by us. THE ORIGINAL CORNISH PLAN. [illegible] INSURING THE PURCHASER OF A CORNISH PIANO OR A CORNISH ORGAN AGAINST ANY RISK. [illegible] THE CORNISH AMERICAN PIANOS AND ORGANS are warranted for twenty-five years and every warrant is a personal guarantee endorsed by [illegible] business reputation of fifty years, and placed in every home [illegible] There are over a Quarter of a Million satisfied purchasers of the CORNISH PIANOS and CORNISH ORGANS, and [illegible] months that we have quite [illegible]

FOR FULL PARTICULARS of the WORLD FAMOUS CORNISH PLAN and for a complete description of the instruments made by us, see new Jubilee Catalogue for 1900, HANDSOMELY ILLUSTRATED in Colors—the most [illegible] ever published in the trade. The first [illegible] a magnificent [illegible] Cornish Concert Grand Piano and the Angelic Choir [illegible] FREE. [illegible] "THE HEART OF THE PEOPLE." and our latest [illegible] free. WRITE TO DAY.

REFERENCES.

Our [illegible] bank, any bank, or any of the multitude of patrons who have purchased millions of dollars' worth of instruments from us during the past fifty [illegible]

Send for particulars of the Cornish Co-operative Plan, showing how YOU CAN SECURE a CORNISH PIANO or ORGAN FREE.

ORGANS FROM $25.

CORNISH & CO.
ESTABLISHED 30 YEARS
WASHINGTON, N.J.

PIANOS FROM $155.

EUCALOL Cures Catarrh,

[illegible]

Rev Morrell Mackenzie says

[illegible]

FREE OFFER

[illegible]

THE EUCALOL COMPANY, 108 Fulton St., New York.

Catarrh...

and the [illegible] kidney troubles, are all largely due to retention of uric acid in the system. Hence the value of a uric acid solvent and diuretic remedy which regulates and stimulates the action of the kidneys.

Tartarlithine...

[illegible] endorsed by [illegible]

Mr. F. J. Mosher, New York City, writes: I am now 55 years old, and have had [illegible] I was [illegible] I knew enough of my case to believe that my catarrh was connected [illegible] and as your Tartarlithine was stated to be a specific for [illegible] I purchased a supply. After using one bottle my bronchial cough left me entirely, and the catarrh secretion was considerably less. After the second bottle I find that I am entirely free from catarrh.

Regular package $1.00,
Of all druggists or post-free by mail.
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

McKESSON & ROBBINS,
91 Fulton Street, . . New York.
SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

There are none so deaf as those who won't buy

Wilson's Common Sense Ear Drums

The only scientific sound conductors. Invisible, comfortable, efficient. They fit in the ear. Doctors recommend them. Thousands testify to their perfection and to benefit derived.

Information and book of letters from many users, free.
WILSON EAR DRUM CO.,
223 Trust Bldg. Louisville, Ky.

BUY THE BEST.

[illegible] of the best material: the [illegible] other wood parts of the wood. Well painted in red and varnished. Extra [illegible] Illinois, for their new catalogue which fully describes this wagon, their famous Electric Wheels and Electric Feed Cookers.

ELECTRIC

Turkish Baths for 3 Cents.

THE best of all bath cabinets is now sold at maker's prices direct to the user. Sold even lower than the inconvenient affairs that are advertised for this service. A tight, double walled room, rubber coated inside and outside, and fitted with a door. Made so that merely tipping folds it into a six inch space. Handsome, convenient and strong.

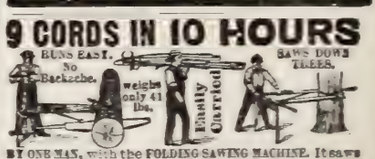
The Racine Cabinet is guaranteed to be the best one on the market. We sell on approval, to be returned at our expense if not satisfactory. Sold direct to users at from $5. to $12., express or freight prepaid; alcohol stove, vaporizer and face-steaming attachment included. Send today for our handsome illustrated catalogue, and order from that.

Racine Bath Cabinet Co., Box J, Racine, Wis.

REDUCED TO $4.50.

To [illegible] at least $10.00 TOLEDO BATH CABINET in every home, we send it complete for 30 days with best [illegible] stove, directions [illegible] and address upon receipt of $4.50. Face Steamer [illegible] Order today. Ours best of all Cabinets, [illegible] Sent [illegible] frame, top curtains rainbow lined for [illegible] that I in. space. Money refunded after 30 days use if not just as represented. It's a home necessity. Turkish and vapor baths 3c each prevent disease, cure [illegible] drinks habits, [illegible] rheumatism, [illegible] and [illegible] WRITE FOR CATALOGUE FREE. We make Cabinets from $2.25 up. Agents Wanted. Easy terms. Exclusive territory. TOLEDO BATH CABINET CO., 614 Cherry St., TOLEDO, OHIO.

9 CORDS IN 10 HOURS



BY ONE MAN, with the FOLDING SAWING MACHINE. It saws down trees. Folds like a pocket knife. Saws any kind of timber on any kind of ground. One man can saw MORE timber with it than 2 men in any other way, and do it EASIER. 10,000 in use. Send for FREE illustrated catalogue showing latest IMPROVEMENTS and testimonials from thousands. First order secures agency. Address FOLDING SAWING MACHINE CO., 35-37-39 No. Jefferson St., H-20, Chicago, Ill.

FREE FOR TRIAL.

To prove that Kremer's Dyspepsia Powder [illegible] dyspepsia, I will send a large box for 50c. postage, the price (50c.) to be [illegible] after a week's trial. Otherwise return powder by mail.

Ind.: "Have taken four boxes with great success for catarrh of the stomach."

JOHN KREMER, Druggist, 428 7th Ave., N. Y.

The WOODEN HEN

A high-class self-regulating incubator on a small scale. Fifty egg capacity. Heat, moisture and ventilation automatically and perfectly controlled. Price only $5.

Send for the Wooden Hen Book; mailed free, together with a book about the EXCELSIOR INCUBATOR, to those who name this paper.

GEO. H. STAHL, Quincy, Illinois.

GOOD LITTLE INCUBATORS

Many [illegible] water [illegible] and other [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Reliable 50 EGG BANTLING SPECIAL [illegible] $5 Send for 20th Century Catalogue and Poultry Book. [illegible] ever published.

RELIABLE INCB. & BROODER CO Box P 16 Quincy, Ill.

SEWING MACHINE $13.95

No money in advance. A new 40 High-Arm Drop-Head Machine at $13.95 [illegible] months' trial, guaranteed 20 years. [illegible] equal of any $40 machine. [illegible] our Big Free Catalog [illegible]

THE G. LOUIS VEHON CO., 157 W. Jackson St., Chicago, Ill.

ASTHMA SURE CURE

[illegible] sure, safe and speedy [illegible] asthma [illegible] trial package free.

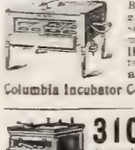
F. G. KINSMAN, M.D., Box 824, Augusta, Me.

Money Maker

And saves [illegible] Print your [illegible] cards, [illegible] book, [illegible] paper, with our $5 or $18 printing [illegible] Typesetting easy, printed rules sent. Factory [illegible] Send for catalog, presses, type, paper, to factory.

The Press Co., Meriden, Conn.

LIFE PRODUCERS
SUCCESSFUL INCUBATORS.
LIFE PRESERVERS
SUCCESSFUL BROODERS.



All about [illegible] in our [illegible] page catalogue, [illegible] Illustrated [illegible] Sample [illegible] DES MOINES INCUBATOR CO., Box 71 Des Moines, Ia.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES!

Buy no Incubator and pay for it before giving it a trial. Those [illegible] will not sell on trial, save [illegible] faith in their machine. We [illegible] PREMIER INCUBATOR ON TRIAL. Address [illegible] Simplicity. Catalogue and Poultry Helps, 5c.

Columbia Incubator Co., 12 Adams St., Delaware City, Del.

SAVE ½ Your FUEL

wasted up chimney.
BY USING THE ROCHESTER RADIATOR.
COST $2.00 AND UP.
Money refunded if not satisfactory. Write for booklet on economy in heating homes.
ROCHESTER RADIATOR CO.,
15 Furnac Street, Rochester, N. Y.

SHOEMAKER'S BOOK on POULTRY

and Almanac for 1900, [illegible] pages, [illegible] illustrations of [illegible] Poultry Houses etc. [illegible] Diseases with [illegible] Incubators, Brooders and [illegible] Foods, [illegible] Poultry Supplies, [illegible] Poultry Helps. Price only 10 cents.

C. J. SHOEMAKER, Box 943, FREEPORT, ILL.

$75 MONTH AND EXPENSES

[illegible] Manufacturing [illegible] Permanent [illegible] Mfrs. Co., P.O. Box 1, Cincinnati, O.

310 First Premiums

Awarded to the PRAIRIE STATE INCUBATOR. Guaranteed to operate in any climate. Send for catalogue.

PRAIRIE STATE INCUBATOR CO. Homer City, Pa.

HENS LAY double the eggs when fed on Green Cut Bone.

MANN'S NEW BONE CUTTERS [illegible] bone in the best and cheapest way. Cut fast. Save [illegible] Many [illegible] Cutters, newest, fastest. $5. & $10. Mann's Swinging Feed Tray and Grit & Oyster Shell Guard make the business profitable. Catalog free. F. W. MANN CO., Box 29 Milford, Mass.

A REMARKABLE INVENTION

BY AN OHIOAN.

A genius of Cincinnati, Ohio, has placed on the market a new Bath Cabinet that is of great interest to every man, woman and child.

This Cabinet is a rubber-walled room, an air-tight enclosure, in which one comfortably rests on a chair, and, with only the head outside, enjoys all the cleansing, curative, beautifying and invigorating effects of the most luxurious Turkish Bath, Hot-Vapor or Medicated Bath at home for three cents each, with no possibility of taking cold or in any weakening the system.

THESE ARE THE BEST OF ALL BATHS, far superior to soap and water; celebrated for producing glowing faces, fair skin, bright eyes, elastic figures, and perfect health to all men and women who make them a weekly habit, and this invention brings them within the reach of the poorest person in the country.

Clouds of hot vapor or medicated vapor surround the entire body, opening the millions of sweat pores, causing profuse perspiration, drawing out of the system all the impure salts, acids and poisonous matter of the blood, which, if retained, overwork the heart, kidneys, lungs and skin, causing colds, fevers, disease, debility and sluggishness.

Astonishing is the improvement in health, feelings and complexion by the use of this Cabinet, and it seems to us that the long-sought-for method of securing a clear skin, a good complexion, of retaining good health, curing and preventing disease without drugs, has certainly been found.

The makers inform the writer that more than 72,386 of these Cabinets have been sold since August, and showed letters from thousands of users who speak of this Cabinet as giving perfect satisfaction.

Since this invention Bath Tubs have been discarded, for it gives a better bath for all cleansing purposes than soap and water, and, as there are millions of homes without bathing facilities, this would be a good article to get the agency for, as millions will certainly be sold.

All our readers should have one of these Cabinets in their homes. The makers agree to send it on thirty days' trial and refund the money paid for it if not just as represented.

Thousands of remarkable letters have been written the inventors, and to our knowledge persons who were full of drugs and nostrums and had been given up to die were restored to robust health, to the astonishment of their friends and physicians.

Dr. E. M. S. Marble, No. 1433 R. I. Avenue. Washington, D. C., says: "This Cabinet is the best of all, and the only one I could recommend. It should be in use in every home."

Dr. E. L. Eaton, of Topeka, gave up his practice, for he said he could do more good for humanity with this Cabinet than his medicine, and has already sold several hunreds of them.

Congressman John J. Lentz, Mrs. Senator Douglas, Rev. James Thoms, Ph.D., pastor of First Baptist Church, Centerville, Mich.; Rev. R. E. Peale, Una, S. C.; John T. Brown, editor of "Christian Guide;" James M. Hamlin, editor of the "Christian Advocate," and a host of our most eminent people use and recommend it.

John A. Hagan, Richfield, Mo., afflicted fifteen years with rheumatism in its worst form, was cured in six days. Mrs. Anna Woodrum, Thurman, Ia., suffered for sixteen years with Nervous Prostration, Headaches, Indigestion, Kidney Trouble and Female Ills. The best doctors were unable to benefit her. This Cabinet cured her in four weeks, and she says it is a God-sent blessing to every woman.

Mr. L. B. Westbrook, Newton, Ia., afflicted forty-five years, was cured in three weeks of Catarrh, Asthma, Heart and Kidney Troubles. O. P. Freeman, Sparta, O., afflicted seventeen years, unable to walk, was cured of Kidney Troubles, Piles and Rheumatism. Thousands of others write praising this Cabinet.

This invention is known as the "New 1902 Style Square Quaker Folding Bath Cabinet." We find it to be a genuine Cabinet, with a real door; opens wide; handsomely and durably made of the best materials, rubber-lined; has a strong, rigid steel frame; top curtains to open for cooling off; in, fact all the latest improvements, and should certainly last a lifetime.

It folds flat in 1-inch space when not in use; can be easily carried; wheighs but 10 pounds.

IT IS IMPORTANT TO KNOW

That the makers guarantee results and assert positively (as do thousands of users) that this Cabinet will clear the skin, purify and enrich the blood; cure nervousness, weakness, that "tired feeling," and the worst forms of Rheumatism. They offer $50.00 reward for a case not relieved. Cures Women's Troubles, Malaria, Sleeplessnes, Gout, Sciatica, Headaches, Piles, Dropsy, Liver, Kidney and Nervous Troubles.

It cures the worst Cold in one night, and breaks up all symptoms of La Grippe, Fevers, Pneumonia, Bronchitis, Tonsolitis, and is really a household necessity, a blessing to every family.

To please the ladies, a Head and Face Steaming Attachment is furnished if desired, which clears the skin, beautifies the complexion, removes pimples, black-heads, eruptions, and is a sure cure for skin diseases, Catarrh and Asthma.

ALL OUR READERS SHOULD

Have one of these remarkable Cabinets. The price is wonderfully low, only $5.00 for Cabinet complete, with heater, formulas and directions. Head Steamer, $1.00 extra, and it is indeed difficult to imagine where one can invest that amount of money in anything else that guarantees so much genuine health.

Write to-day to the World Mfg. Co., 935 World Building, Cincinnati, O., who are the only makers, for full information; or, better still, order a Cabinet. You won't be disappointed, as the makers guarantee every Cabinet, and will refund your money, after 30 days' use, if not just as represented. We know them to be perfectly reliable, capital $100,000.00, and to ship promptly upon receipt of your remittance.

Don't fail to send for booklet, anyway.

This Cabinet is a wonderful seller for agents, and the firm offers splendid inducements to both men and women upon request, and to our knowledge many are making from $100 to $150 per month and expenses. This is certainly an opportunity not to be neglected.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
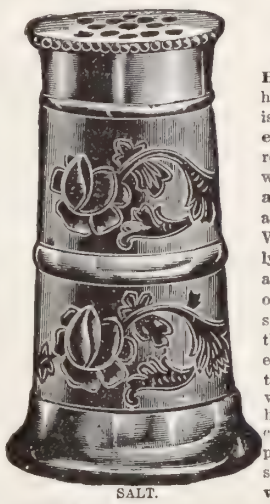
Shine comes quick—looks best and lasts longest—always was and is the best polish—never cakes on the stove.
ALSO IN PASTE FORM—"SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH."

For Both 25 cents For Both



SALT.

If you are looking for a Great Bargain in Fine Silverware never heard of before and that will astonish you, here is one of the Greatest Bargains ever offered by any reliable Manufacturer. For 25 cents we send Prepaid Both the Salt and Pepper Shakers. They are Quadruple Coin Silver Plated. Warranted to wear ten years. Finely engraved and useful as well as ornamental to any table rich or poor. If on receipt of the same you do not think or find them the Greatest Bargain you ever have seen or heard of, return them at once to us and we will refund you your m ney. We have been doing business in Chicago since 1865. Any Bank or Express Company can tell you our standing. Our Bargain Silverware Catalogue Sent Free.

PEPPER.

LEONARD MFG. CO., D5 & 7 MONROE ST., Cor. Michigan Ave., CHICAGO

The best Cod Liver Oil that fifty years of continued scientific research has produced is Moller's. It is not sold in bulk, but passes in a sealed and dated oval bottle direct from the manufacturer to the consumer; adulteration is impossible. It is free from disagreeable taste and odor. Free pamphlets of Schieffelin & Co., New York.

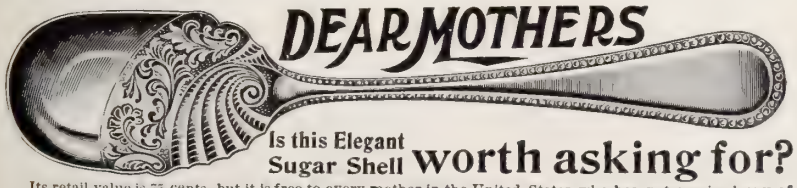
WE'LL PAY YOU HANDSOMELY FOR BUYING YOUR GROCERIES FROM US.

We mean it—we have a new plan of doing business. We manufacture 37 different household utilities, such as soap, baking powder, perfumes, toilet articles, bluing, groceries, etc. All we make is of the finest quality, absolutely guaranteed. We sell our products direct to the user, saving the profits of the jobber, the wholesaler and the retailer, in addition to the expenses of traveling men, etc. This saving, amounting to at least 50 per cent. of the ordinary retail prices, we give to our customers in the form of premiums, to repay them for their kindness in buying from us. We offer you choice of 150 different premiums, such as furniture, cameras, baby buggies, graphophones, etc., or we'll GIVE YOU the difference in CASH if you prefer. I nderstand, our prices are lower than you'd pay at retail without the premiums—our goods are better value than you'd get at retail and we give you the premium in addition ABSOLUTELY FREE.

YOU NEED NOT PAY US A PENNY

In advance—we'll ship the goods on 30 DAYS' CREDIT, so you can try them and make sure they are the best—if not fully as guaranteed, you need not pay us at all. If you wish, we'll send you a shipment on credit to sell to your friends and you'll get the premiums in return for a few hours' work without paying a penny yourself. Write to-day for our catalogue—we send it FREE—it is worth its weight in gold to you. We want canvassers in every town. Liberal compensation. Easy work.
HOTALING & HEFFRON CO., SYRACUSE, N. Y.



DEAR MOTHERS
Is this Elegant Sugar Shell worth asking for?

Its retail value is 75 cents, but it is free to every mother in the United States who has not received any of our other souvenir gifts. Best sterling silver plate; beautifully engraved; full size—much larger than illustration—a gift that will, we hope, establish an enduring friendship for Quaker Valley people in every home in the land. We will also send, every month, free of charge, a copy of the HOME-FURNISHER, our own publication, wherein we illustrate our latest designs in high-grade silverware and household furniture, and quote lowest factory prices to everyone. Please write to-day and enclose one 2c stamp to pay postage. But one gift to a family. Send your own name only. This is too expensive a gift to send to persons who don't ask for it themselves.
QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO., 313 W. Harrison Street, Chicago.

SILK REMNANTS FOR CRAZY WORK
A 15c package of BEAUTIFUL SILK REMNANTS, 100 to 125 pieces, all carefully trimmed, selected from large accumulation of silks especially adapted for all fancy work. We give more than double any other offer; remnants are all large sizes, in beautiful colors and designs. Sent for 25 cents in stamps or silver. Address
PARIS SILK CO., Box 3045, New York City, N. Y.

RUPTURE CURED
The Improved Elastic Truss is the only truss in existence that is worn with [illegible] night and day, and it retains the rupture under the hardest exercise or severest strain, and effects a permanent cure in from [illegible] able Belts made to reduce corpulency. The use of these belts reduces your size and leaves no loose flesh to accumulate. They can be used after any operations. Our goods are not sold by agents or [illegible] pamphlets to the Improved Elastic Truss Co., 768 Broadway, N. Y. Established 18[illegible]

ALUMINUM AND AGENTS SPECIALTIES
Write for particulars and CATALOG FREE.
G. VINING NOVELTY CO., 60 Wabash Av. CHICAGO.

OPIUM MORPHINE and Liquor Habit cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Book of particulars free. Address Dr. J. L. Stephens, Dept. R. 5, Lebanon, Ohio.

Bear in mind that "The Gods help those who help themselves." Self help should teach you to use SAPOLIO

Ask your dealer for the H. & I. goods. If he can't supply you send us 25 cts. and give us your size and the style and height Collar you prefer and we will send you two of the most satisfactory Collars you ever wore.

If they do not perfectly please and satisfy you, you are welcome to have your money back.

Send for our free "Style Book for Men," or our "Style Book for Women and Children," or both if you wish. They show just what Collars ought to be worn—the very latest and best.

HOLMES & IDE
Department H.
Troy, N. Y.

HOLMES & IDE COLLARS

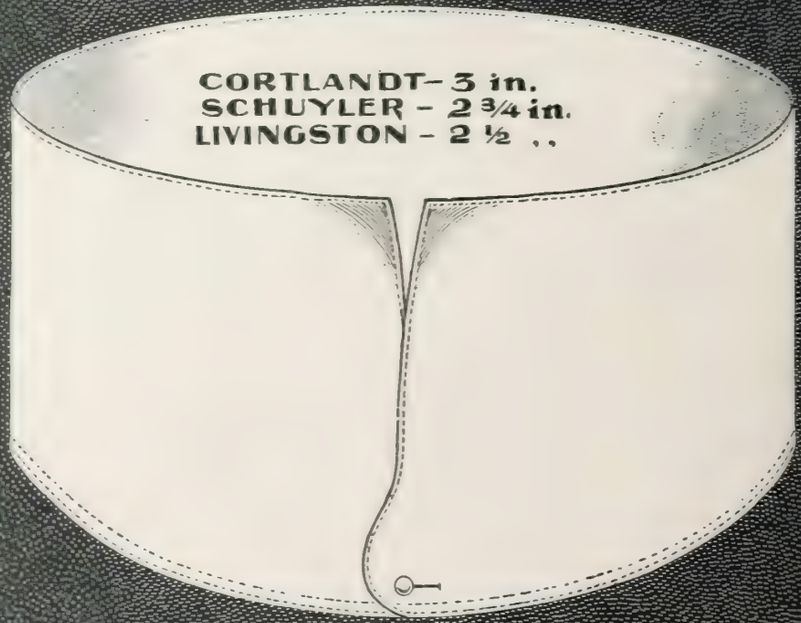
These pictures show a neat, stylish and very popular H. & I. Collar for morning or business wear, and the latest and most popular evening Collar.

These are but two of our many styles and widths.

Whatever your desires in Collars and Cuffs may be we can supply them. We make a very large assortment of stylish, durable and serviceable Collars and Cuffs for men, women and children.

The H. & I. goods will cost you no more than inferior makes, and you will be assured in getting the latest and best made Collars and Cuffs that can be produced.

H&I COLLARS



CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

VOLUME 22—NUMBER 51

COPYRIGHT 1899, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor

NEW YORK, DECEMBER 20, 1899

PRICE FIVE CENTS

The Angels' Song at the Manger

"We rejoice in the light, and we echo the song, That comes thro' the night from the heavenly throng.
We shout to the lovely evangel they bring, And we greet in His cradle our Saviour and King."

OUR MAIL-BAG

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

1. These questions are printed Four weeks in advance so as to afford all our readers an opportunity to answer them.
2. For answers to the questions which appear below, when accepted, we will allow compensation for the matter used at the rate of One Dollar a hundred words.
3. Answers must be received at this office two weeks in advance of the date for which they are intended.
4. The editor reserves the right to condense accepted answers when necessary, and compensation will be based on the matter as printed.
5. Do not write inquiring if your material has been accepted. If it appears on this page, you may know that it has been accepted.
6. We cannot return any MSS. sent to the [illegible] not even when stamps accompany them.
7. Write only on one side of the sheet and never send on the same sheet anything intended for any other department of the paper.
8. Address all communications intended for this department.

EDITOR THE MAIL-BAG,
The Christian Herald,
[illegible]

Questions to Be Answered Dec. 27

7. Wh[illegible] nineteenth century?
8. Is [illegible] services on Sunday and the weekly prayer meeting?
9. Which is the oldest Protestant [illegible]
10. W[illegible]
11. W[illegible]
12. Is marriage a help to success in [illegible]
13. What event of the nineteenth century must be regarded as having resulted most beneficially to mankind?
14. What nations have made the [illegible]
15. W[illegible] France among the nations of the earth?
16. W[illegible] bution ever made to charity?

Questions to Be Answered Jan. 3

1. What [illegible] learning in the more prominent nations represent, respectively?
2. [illegible] to do so through the medium of an organized charity?
3. Who may be considered the leading religious character of the nineteenth century?
4. Since the beginning of the Christian era, who lived the longest?
5. Which is the most deserving of the foreign mission fields at the present time, and why?
6. Ought a Christian to insure his life, or to insure his premises against fire? Is such a course in violation of Christ's injunction to "Take therefore no thought for the morrow"?
7. [illegible] coming true, or directing the mind and waking energies to any practical results?
8. Ought a man to contribute to the Lord's work when [illegible]
9. Is a Christian woman justified in wearing jewelry, other than her watch and wedding ring?
10. Is there any real reason, physiological or religious, why cousins should not marry?

Questions to Be Answered Jan. 10

1. At what age may a young person be properly ad[illegible]
2. [illegible]
3. [illegible] Battle of Manila Bay?
4. [illegible] elude the pleasure of a walk in the woods, field or garden between services, for those who have no such [illegible]
5. [illegible] State of the Union? if so, in what States and when?
6. [illegible] sure of their moral and spiritual welfare?
7. What five (or seven) hymns in the English language [illegible]
8. [illegible] states?
9. Is the breaking of a solemn engagement of mar[illegible]
10. Is a church justified in holding a fair to raise [illegible]

Questions of the Week

1. What historical event of the nineteenth century is entitled to be considered the greatest, and why?

The Emancipation Proclamation, by Abraham Lincoln, January 1st, 1863, whereby 4,000,000 slaves in America were made free: First, because slavery degrades man, who was made in the image of God, to the level of a beast; second, because no nation can become truly Christian and highly civilized that upholds slavery in its midst, or which sets an example to other nations that must have a morally injurious effect upon them.

2. Since the days of the Apostles, what one man has exerted the greatest influence in behalf of Christianity?

Luther, the apostle of the Reformation, that great turning-point in modern history. That Reformation was a great revolution, intellectual as well as religious, and marks the boundary line between the Middle Ages and the modern period. Deep and loud was the call for regeneration. The clergy, from the papacy down, were corrupt, and the common people were purposely kept in ignorance. In the hour of supreme need, Luther appeared, with his heroic spirit, his organizing genius, his fervent faith. The result of his bold protest and his self-sacrificing toils is seen in that vast and aggressive sisterhood of Protestant churches which exists to-day in all the advanced countries of the world. AMELIA HOYT.

3. What book is next in importance to the Bible?

The book next in importance to the Bible is The Pilgrim's Progress. It has pushed its way to the front rank of book-making, and holds its place by the common consent of Christendom throughout the world, for it has been translated into many languages, and has than any other book extant, save the Bible. As an allegory it is true to life; by its charming style it captivates the hearts of its readers, and holds them tenaciously till the Pilgrimage is completed. It appeals to the experience of all alike—to those in the higher walks of life, the rich and the great, the student and the philosopher, as well as to the most lowly. The peasant in his cottage, the laborer and the mechanic, have wept and smiled over its simple eloquence and enchanting pages, as over no other book. It has no peer in the realm of book-making to dispute the first place with it in the estimation of the religious world.

H. STORY.

4. At what age may a child be considered accountable to God for its actions?

No rule can be laid down that would apply in all cases, as much would depend on a child's conception of right and wrong. Some children consciously realize the effect and nature of sin at a much earlier age than do others, and their accountability would, consequently, start at an earlier age. But to state a specific age, applicable to all, is impossible. A child's accountability, speaking broadly, would begin with the dawning of moral consciousness, when it knew itself a sinner in the spiritual sense, and had theoretical knowledge of Christ as a Saviour. R. HOLMES.

5. If a burglar breaks into my house at night and I find him there, am I, as a Christian, justified in trying to kill him?

No, unless he attempts to kill you; then in self-defense you are justified in killing him. You are justified in taking life only to save life; but to save your property you are not justified, for you would not be hired to kill a person for the amount the burglar is after, therefore you are not justified in killing a person to save it. D. MCCONE.

6. Is the taking of human life ever justifiable?

Under the ancient laws, yes; under the Christian law, no. The Christian has no right to destroy that which he is powerless to restore, and the taking of life, except in absolute self-defense or to save the lives of others, while it may be justified by human statute, is in the sight of God a crime which nothing can justify. "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord; I will repay." This is an explicit prohibition against meting out the extreme measure of punishment or revenge. Besides, to usher a soul into eternity unprepared is a responsibility the assumption of which is logically indefensible. GEO. JENNINGS.

7. What is the greatest depth ever reached by bore or excavation?

The deepest excavation in the earth is at Schladebach, near Ketshau, Germany. It is 5,735 feet in depth, and is for geologic research [illegible] deeper. This hole was expensive, as its cost [illegible]

8. Does a person who compounds a felony to shield a friend, offend God?

[illegible] sudden temptation, robs his employer of a sum of money. This a[illegible] least in the State of [illegible] for according to the statute [illegible] any crime is regarded as felo[illegible] able by death or by a term of imprisonment. A friend, we will suppose, in consideration of the fact that it is the boy's first offense, and wishing to save a mother from heart-break, pays the employer a sum sufficient to induce him to waive prosecution. Surely this friendly act can hardly be displeasing to God—the God who bears and forbears with his erring creatures [illegible] judgment is "his strange work." Of course, the criminal ought not for a moment to be allowed to think that money can atone for crime; and should he repeat the offense, it might be as well to let the law take its course.

AMELIA HOYT.

9. The Lord's prayer teaches us to pray, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us." Can a father who dies, deliberately disinheriting his son because of disobedience, himself expect divine forgiveness?

It is possible for a father to disinherit a son through love for the son. The father, knowing the son to be a spendthrift, who will spend the [illegible] act in disinheriting him, and God will reward the father for a good deed done. But if a father disinherit the son through vindictiveness or because he hates him, he must not expect divine forgiveness, for a father should never cease to love his offspring.

D. MCCONE.

10. How can a million dollars be best expended to accomplish the greatest good?

Much light may be thrown on this question by considering our Lord's final commission: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." [illegible] comparative importance of the various agencies and institutions designed to bless mankind, He evidently thought the evangelization of the world to be the one object of supreme importance. "Go!" but if you cannot go, then with your million, send; send an army of delegates, substitutes, as it were; multiply your own personality a hundred-fold, a thousand-fold. A missionary society is in reality a thousand societies in one; it is a temperance society, an industrial society, a home-making society, an educational society, a Bible society, a peace society, a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, a society for the prevention of cruelty to children, and I know not what besides, for all good things follow in the wake of Christianity. Do not give all to any one mission, but distribute your million among the various missions of the Evangelical churches and thus hasten on the glad millennial days—Messiah's reign of peace. AMELIA HOYT.

A CHRISTMAS MORNING LESSON IN THE SOUTH

Among no people is the anniversary of our Lord's birth more heartily celebrated than among the negroes of the South. Merriment, beginning Christmas eve, is kept up more or less as circumstances permit, till New Year's Day. Pickaninnies are up betimes Christmas morning, hiding in out-of-the-way corners and ready to spring upon white friends, their elders or each other, the greeting: "Christmas gift; give to me!" During the happy season friends interchange visits; little companies of young people gather at hospitable cabins: the banjo is heard: the pine-knot blazes on the hearth: folk-lore stories are told. Of course, the celebration takes on many pious features, and city churches and missions have their special services and their Christmas trees. Such a Christmas observance as our picture illustrates will be witnessed this season in many an humble dwelling in the country. The kind older sister, possibly at home from the college where she is learning to be a teacher, is reading aloud the beautiful Christmas story from the Book of Life: and her young auditors are trying at once to listen and to see the pictures. No one in the group is receiving more comfort from the precious words than the good old "mammy," who surely deserves a portion in the promises of him who said: "I am among you as one that serveth."

In Great Demand

Mrs. Sangster's "Art of Home Making," and Hon. Wm. M. Thayer's "Onward to Fame and Fortune," are growing in popularity, and the demand is at least ten times greater than at any time during the year. Glorious books are these two volumes! and no one will ever regret the investment. We have not the space to describe their contents in this issue, but we will simply say that they contain each over 450 pages, are beautifully illustrated, elaborately bound in rich cloth, and go with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for one year, all charges prepaid, at only $2.00. So far as the contents go the reader will get ten times the value in personal good. You cannot go astray in choosing these two volumes.

Many subscribers have asked us for the photograph of Mrs. Louis Klopsch, wife of the proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. They will find an accurate picture of her, and her daughter, Mary, in Mrs. Sangster's "Art of Home Making."

A Countess at the Bowery Mission

Countess Schimmelmann Speaks to Unfortunate Men—Prayer, the Wireless Telegraph to God

THE first address made in New York City by the titled evangelist, Countess Adaline Schimmelmann, who has recently come to New York from Chicago, was at the Bowery Mission, to an audience composed principally of earnest, hungry and destitute men. When the Countess' carriage drove up, many who could not find room within the crowded hall, lined up on either side of the entrance, making respectful way for her; baring their heads or touching their ragged caps in homage to the gentle, sweet-faced lady, who had given up rank and wealth to labor for unfortunate and erring men.

COUNTESS SCHIMMELMANN

As she passed up the aisle, care-worn, desperate and weather-beaten faces lit up in pleased response to her kindly glances.

At the platform, Mrs. Sarah J. Bird, the beloved "Mother of the Bowery Boys," greeted her with a warm hand-clasp, and introduced her to the assembly as "One who has given up a diadem for Christ." Superintendent J. Greener Hallimond called upon the audience to sing: "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name;" and the old Mission rang with the inspiring hymn. The eyes of hardened men grew moist as they saw standing before them on that platform those two sweet faced, motherly women, each of whom had turned aside from all that the world can give of pleasure, profit and honor, for the love of Christ and in the desire to win from ruin such as themselves. Rarely has such contrasts been seen anywhere as in that mission. On the benches sat a motley crowd: honest workingmen in toil-worn garments; sailors and long-shoremen in a safe haven for awhile at least; men in hard luck, out of work, seeking it, and finding it not; men, who through drink, had lost work, home, friends, kindred, occupation, and faith in themselves, unlettered men and college men; on the platform, the gentle-looking ladies and the superintendent; and behind them, on several tiers of seats, a company of saved men, clothed, and in their right minds, repossessed of home, kindred, work and friends, and devoting whole-souled energy to the salvation of others who are as they were once. Saved men were acting as door-keepers and as ushers.

Countess Schimmelmann said:

"Dear friends, I feel more at home here in your Mission than I have felt anywhere else in all New York. I have talked to such struggling, suffering men as I see here; and I have worked among them on the shores of the Baltic Sea, in foreign cities, and in Chicago. In every one of you, I see my dear brother—a soul for whom Jesus Christ died, a soul precious to God. I know how many of you feel. In your poor tired faces I can see the question: 'If I am precious to God, why am I here, hopeless and forsaken.' My friends, the answer in that text on the wall of your Mission, says. 'Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all other things shall be added unto you.' Have you sought that first? My dear brothers, come to my Saviour, Jesus Christ, and all things you need will come to you. I speak of knowledge and from seventeen years of personal experience. Twice have I had a fortune and twice have I given a fortune away to clothe the naked and feed the hungry; I am praying for another that I may use it in the same way. If I receive it, I shall come again bringing gifts in my hands to you who need help so. Seldom have I been so sorry that fortune was not now at my command as when I entered your mission and looked into your faces, Many of you are desperate, many are out of work, many are looking starvation in the face. My friends, you know about the wireless telegraph that has been used in your city. Prayer is the wireless telegraph between your soul and God. Use it, and God will send the answer back. I have tried it, and I know."

She told of her girlhood at her father's castle; her renunciation of a gay life at the Imperial Court of Germany for evangelical work among the sinful and unfortunate; and of how God's voice had called her across the seas to America. When the customary Sunday lunch of coffee and sandwiches was served, she expressed anew her thankfulness that such a work as that of the Bowery Mission was carried on in New York for the benefit of the homeless and hungry.

COUNTESS SCHIMMELMANN AND MRS. BIRD CONDUCTING A "CONVERTS' MEETING" AT THE BOWERY MISSION

The Volunteer Organist

A Notable Gospel Trophy of the Bowery Mission

It was five years ago. Mrs. Bird's Sunday morning meeting in the Bowery Mission was about to commence. The "Mother of the Bowery" had greeted her boys in her usual hearty fashion, but there was a puzzled look upon her kindly face. "Boys," said she, "we are going to sing, but we have no pianist. Is there any one who will volunteer to help us out?" Then there came a pause, followed by a movement in one of the distant seats. Anon, amid many smiles of wonderment and curiosity, a dirty, uncouth, ragged tramp, with unwashed face and a wealth of uncombed, unruly black hair, strode down the aisle and seated himself at the piano. His face bore the hopeless, dejected look so sadly characteristic of Bowery men, until, the tune-book having been placed before him, his fingers fell with a crash upon the chords of the first hymn. Then a new light flashed from his dark eyes; he was no longer an aimless, hopeless tramp; he had suddenly been transported to another world.

Strange music came from the old piano that Sunday morning. It was the sweetest music the old room had ever heard; while in the hymns and choruses such wondrous harmony blended with the voices of the men, such power throbbed through the sub-tone of the stranger's accompaniment, such pathos dwelt on the sad face, to heaven upturned, that the inspiration of that memorable meeting will not soon be forgotten.

Since that day Victor H. Benke has been connected with the Bowery Mission, and for the last five years has been the officially appointed organist. When, through the generosity of the proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the great pipe organ was brought from Princeton University and placed in the beautiful Mission. Mr. Benke entered upon a new and delightful field of labor, and his playing, and the singing of the men under his inspiration and direction, have given that peculiar tone to the meetings which distinguishes the Bowery Mission from all other missions.

Victor H. Benke, although his father was a Pole and his mother a Frenchwoman, was born in Austria, the home of so many musicians. While still a young man, he gave way to drinking and dissipation, with the invitable result—loss of position, home and friends. He came to this country in August, 1893, determined to reform, but the effort was in vain, and he fell lower and lower. He spent all his money in the saloons; his restless spirit drove him from one city to another; he went through all the downward stages in the evolution of a tramp. He returned to New York City in 1894. Wandering down the Bowery, sick of life and its burdens, he heard the singing in the Mission and was drawn within its doors, and shortly afterwards realized that not only pardon, but power, would come to him through accepting Christ.

SUPT. J. G. HALLIMOND

The influence of this Bowery Mission trophy has not been confined to the Mission itself. Whenever Mr. Moody comes to Greater New York, Mr. Benke is always selected as his organist and accompanist, while he has acted in a similar capacity at evangelistic meetings in over thirty city churches. As a composer, he will doubtless in the years to come exert a wide-spread influence on evangelistic work.

Fanny Crosby was present in the Bowery Mission when, to Mr. Benke's music, her poem, "God Cares," was first given to the public. The clasped hands of the consecrated poetess, and the tears that fell from her poor blind eyes, as the pathetic words interpreted with such exquisite sweetness by the tune of this once forlorn and friendless tramp fell on her ears, betokened how much she appreciated the efforts of her new expositor, and how well the sentiment behind the song fitted the lives of both poet and composer.

J. G. HALLIMOND,
Superintendent Bowery Mission.

The Mission's New Superintendent

On the evening of November 20th a largely attended meeting was held at the Bowery Mission, and, amid great enthusiasm, the new Superintendent, Mr. J. G. Hallimond, was installed. Many of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD have probably met Mr. Hallimond in other spheres of religious activity. He is a thoroughly consecrated, earnest Christian, and has been engaged throughout the whole of his life in aggressive religious work. Nine years ago, he was connected with the great West London Mission, England, of which Rev. Hugh Price Hughes is Superintendent. On his arrival in New York he became private secretary to Commander Ballington Booth of the Salvation Army, and was intimately concerned in the social work of the Army. In 1885 he became assistant to Rev. Amory H. Bradford, D.D., of Montclair, New Jersey, and had charge of the Pilgrim Mission in that town. When, eighteen months later, Ballington Booth launched the Volunteers of America, Mr. Hallimond became National Secretary, and in that capacity visited nearly all the large cities in the Union, establishing and organizing the work and holding meetings in the churches under the auspices of the Volunteer Evangelistic Department. His experience has been such as would pre-eminently qualify him for the practical rescue work that has made the Bowery Mission known throughout the whole world.

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT.

Pillars of Smoke

A Sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text, Solomon's Song 3: 6 . . . Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness like pillars of smoke?

THE architecture of the [illegible] whether God with his finger curves it into a cloud or rounds it into a dome, or points it in a spire, or spreads it in a wing, or, as in the text, hoists it in a pillar. Watch it winding up from the country farmhouse in the early morning, showing that the pastoral industries have begun; or, see it ascending from the chimneys of the city, telling of the homes fed, the factories turning out valuable fabrics, the printing-presses preparing book and newspaper, and all the ten thousand wheels of work in motion. On a clear day this vapor spoken of mounts with such buoyancy, and spreads such a delicate veil across the sky, and traces such graceful lines of circle and semi-circle, and waves and tosses and sinks and soars and scatters with such affluence of shape and color and suggestiveness that, if you have never noticed it, you are like a man who has all his life lived in Paris and yet never seen the Luxemburg, or all his life in Rome and never seen the Vatican, or all his life at Lockport and never seen Niagara. Forty four times the Bible speaks of the smoke, and it is about time that somebody preached a sermon recognizing this strange, weird, beautiful, elastic, charming, terrific and fascinating vapor. Across the Bible sky floats the smoke of Sinai, the smoke of Sodom, the smoke of Ai, the smoke of the pit, the smoke of the volcanic hills when God touches them, and in my text the glorious Church of God coming up out of the wilderness like pillars of smoke.

In the first place, these pillars of smoke in my text indicate the suffering the Church of God has endured. What do I mean by the Church? I mean not a building, not a sect, but those who, in all ages, and all lands, and of all beliefs, love God, and are trying to do right. For many centuries the heavens have been black with the smoke of martyrdom. If set side by side you could girdle the earth with the fires of persecution. Rowland Taylor burned at Hadleigh; Latimer burned at Oxford; John Rogers burned at Smithfield; John Hooper burned at Gloucester; John Huss burned at Constance; Lawrence Saunders burned at Coventry; Joan of Arc burned at Rouen.

Protestants have represented Catholics as having a monopoly of persecutors, but both Protestant and Catholic have practised infamous cruelties. It does seem as if when any one sect got complete dominancy in any land, the devil of persecution and cruelty took possession of that sect. Then see the Catholics after the Huguenots. See the Gentiles after the Jews in Touraine, where a great pit was dug and fires lighted at the bottom of the pit, and one hundred and sixty Jewish victims were consumed. See the Independent Parliament of England, more tyrannical in their treatment of opponents than had been the criminal courts. Persecution against the Baptists by Pædo-Baptists. Persecution of the Established Church against the Methodist Church. Persecution against the Quakers. Persecution against the Presbyterians.

Witness the sufferings of the Waldenses, of the Albigenses, of the Nestorians. Witness St. Bartholomew's massacre. Witness the Duke of Alva driving out of life eighteen thousand Christians. Witness Herod, and Nero, and Decius, and Hildebrand, and Torquemada, and Earl of Montfort. No wonder John Milton put the groans of the martyrs to an immortal tune, writing:

Avenge, O Lord, thy slaughtered saints, whose bones
[illegible]
Lie scattered on the Alpine mountains cold.

The smoke of martyrs' homes and martyrs' bodies if rolling up all at once would have eclipsed the noonday sun, and turned the brightest day the world ever saw into a midnight. "Who is this that cometh up out of the wilderness like pillars of smoke?"

Has persecution ceased? Ask that young man who is trying to be a Christian in a store or factory, where from morning to night he is the butt of all the mean witticisms of unbelieving employees. Ask that wife whose husband makes her tondness for the house of God, and even her kneeling in prayer by the bedside a derision, and is no more fit for her holy companionship than a filthy crow would be fit companion for a robin or a golden oriole. Compromise with the world and surrender to its conventionalities and it may let you alone, but all who will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution. Be a theatre-going, card-playing, wine-drinking, round-dancing Christian, and you may escape criticism and social pressure. But be an up and down, out and out follower of Christ, and worldling will wink to worldling as he speaks your name, and you will be put in many a dog gerel, and snubbed by those not worthy to blacken your oldest shoes.

For a compromise Christian character an easy time now, but for consecrated behavior, grimace and caricature. For the body, thanks to the God of free America, there are now no swords or fiery stakes, but for the souls of thousands of the good, in a figurative sense, rack and gibbet and Torquemada. The symbol of the domestic and social and private and public suffering of a great multitude of God's dear children, pillars of smoke.

But as I already hinted in the first sentence of this sermon, nothing can be more beautiful than the figures of smoke on a clear sky. You can see what you will in the contour of this volatile vapor: now enchanted castles, now troops of horse men, now bannered procession, now winged couriers, now a black angel of wrath under a spear of the sunshine turned to an angel of light, and now from horizon to horizon the air is a picture gallery filled with masterpieces of which God is the artist, morning clouds of smoke born in the sunrise, and evening clouds of smoke laid in the burnished sepulchres of the sunset.

The beauty of the transfigured smoke is a divine symbol of the beauty of the Church. The fairest of all the fair is she. Do not call those persecutors of whom I spoke, the Church. They are the parasites of the Church, not the Church itself. Her mission is to cover the earth with a supernatural gladness, to open all the prison doors, to balsam all the wounds, to moss all the graves, to burn up the night in the fireplace of a great morning, to change iron handcuffs into diamonded wristlets, to turn the whole race around, and whereas it faced death, commanding it, "Right about face for heaven!" The most beautiful organization the world ever saw or ever will see is the much-maligned church, the friend of all good, the foe of all evil, "fair as the moon and clear as the sun." Beautiful in her Author, beautiful in her mission, the heroine of the centuries, the bride of Christ, the queen of the nations!

Men may desecrate it, or plot its overthrow, as do some in every community whose pride, and hate, and debauchery are reproved by the Ten Commandments which it thunders, and the Sermon on the Mount which it breathes. But it will stand as long as the earth stands, the same unique, and wonder-working, and beatific, and miraculous thing for which God decreed it. Small wits tax their brain to say things that will put her at disadvantage, but many of them will send for its condolence when dying, and their children will be gathered up under its benedictions after the parental curse has been removed. Through her gates will march all the influences for good that shall ever reach our world. Take her membership as a mass, not speaking of the acknowledged exceptions, they are the noblest, grandest, kindest, best men and women of the ages. But for them, the earth would long ago have been a burned out volcano. They have been the salt that has kept the human race from putrefaction insufferable either to human or angelic olfactories.

You lying and hypocritical world, shut up those slanders about the Church of Christ, an institution which, far from being what it ought to be, and never pretending to be perfect, is five hundred times better than any other institution that the world ever saw or ever dreamt of. The highest honor I ever had, and the highest honor I shall ever receive, and the highest honor I ever want, is to have my name on her records as a member. At her altars I repented. At her sacraments I believed. In her service let me die. From her doors let me be buried. O, Church of God! Thou home of the righteous! Thou harbor from tempest! Thou refuge for the weary! Thou lighthouse of many nations! Thou type of heaven! I could kiss thy very dust with ecstasy of affection.

For her my tears shall fall,
[illegible]
To her my toils and cares be given
Till toils and cares shall end.

"Perfumed smoke," says Solomon, in the words following my text. Not like the fumes coughed up from the throat of a steam pipe, or poisoned with the gases of chemical factories, or floating in black wrath from the conflagration of homesteads, or sulphurous from blazing batteries, but sweet as a burning grove of cinnamon, or jungle of sassafras, or the odors of a temple censer. "Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness like pillars of smoke, perfumed with myrrh and frankincense?" Hear it, men and women everywhere, that the advance of the genuine Church of Christ means peace for all nations.

Victor Hugo, in his book, entitled. [illegible] than smoke, but nothing more startling. There are peaceful smokes, and there are evil ones. The thickness and color of a line of smoke make the whole difference between war and peace, between fraternity and hatred. The whole happiness of man, or his complete misery, is sometimes expressed in this thin vapor which the wind scatters at will." The great Frenchman was right; but I go further, and say that as the kingdom of God advances like pillars of smoke, the black volumes belching from batteries of war and pouring out from porthoies of ships will vanish.

A distinguished general of our Civil War told me that Abraham Lincoln proposed to avoid our civil conflict by purchase of all the slaves of the South and setting them free. He calculated what would be a reasonable price for them, and, when the number of millions of dollars that would be required for such a purchase was announced, the proposition was scouted, and the North would not have made the offer, and the South would not have accepted it if made. "But," said my military friend, "the war went on, and just the number of millions of dollars that Mr. Lincoln calculated would have been enough to make a reasonable purchase of all the slaves, were spent in war, besides all the precious lives that were hurled away in the two hundred and fifty battles." In other words, there ought to be, and there will yet be, some other way for men to settle their controversies without butchery.

The church of God will yet become the arbiter of nations. If the world would allow it, it could to-day step in between Germany and France and settle the trouble about Alsace and Lorraine, and between England and her antagonists, and between all the other nations that are flying at each other's throats, and command peace and disband armies, and harness for the plow the war horses now being hitched to ammunition wagons, or saddled for cavalry charge.

I hang on to my Bible, which tells me that the blacksmith's shop shall yet come to its grandest use when the warrior and the husbandman shall enter it side by side, and the soldier shall throw into its bank of fires his sword, and the farmer shall pick it up a ploughshare, and the straightest spear shall be bent into a crook at each end, and then cut in two, and what was one spear shall be two pruning hooks. Down with Moloch and up with Christ! Let no more war horses eat out of the manger where Jesus was born.

Peace! Forever roll off the sky the black pillars of smoke from the Marengos, and Salamancas, and Borodinos, and Sedans, and Gettysburgs of earth! And right after them, roll into the heavens the peaceful vapors from the chimneys of farmhouses and asylums and churches and capitals of Christian nations, and, as the sunlight strikes through these vapors they will write in letters of jet and gold all over the sky from horizon to zenith: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill to men!"

While thinking of these things I looked out from my window, and the wind was violently blowing. And I saw from many chimneys the smoke tossed in the air, and whirled in great velocity, volume after volume, fold after fold, and carried on the swift wind were the great pillars of smoke. And helped by Solomon in the text, I saw the speed of the church symbolized. Do you realize the momentum the Church of God is under? Why, the smoke of a chimney on the top of Mount Washington, when the wind is blowing sixty miles the hour, is slow as compared [illegible]

Nearly all the missionary movements have been started within the century, and see what one century has done to recover the world from fifty-nine centuries of devastation. What great revivals! What mighty churches! What saved millions!

[illegible] be no infidels left except libertines and harlots and murderers. Millions of Christians where once there were thousands, and thousands where once there were hundreds. What a bright evening this, the evening of the nineteenth century! and the twentieth century which is about to dawn, will, in my opinion, bring universal victory for Christ and the Church, that now is marching on with step double quick, or, if you prefer the figure of the text, is being swept on in the mighty gales of blessing, imposing and grand and majestic and swift, like pillars of smoke.

Oh, come into the Church through Christ the door, a door more glorious than that of the Temple of Hercules, which had two pillars, and one was gold, and the other emerald! Come in to-day! The world you leave behind is a poor world, and it will burn and pass off like pillars of smoke. Whether the final conflagration will start in the coal mines of Pennsylvania, which, in some places, have for many years been burning and eating into the heart of the mountains; or whether it shall begin near the California geysers, or whether from out the furnaces of Cotopaxi, and Vesuvius, and Stromboli, it shall burst forth upon the astonished nations, I make no prophecy; but all geologists tell us that we stand on the lid of a world, the heart of which is a raging, roaring, awful flame, and some day God will let the red monsters out of their imprisonment of centuries, and New York on fire in 1835, and Charleston on fire in 1865, and Chicago on fire in 1872, and Boston on fire in 1873, were only like one spark from a blacksmith's forge as compared with that last universal blaze, which will be seen in other worlds. But gradually the flames will lessen, and the world will become a great living coal, and that will take on ashen hue, and then our ruined planet will begin to smoke, and the mountains will smoke, and the valleys will smoke, and the islands will smoke, and the seas will smoke, and the cities will smoke, and the five continents will be five pillars of smoke. But the black vapors will begin to lessen in height and density, and then will become hardly visible to those who look upon it from the sky galleries, and after a while from just one point there will curl up a thin, solitary vapor, and then even that will vanish, and there will be nothing left except the charred ruins of a burned-out world, the corpse of a dead star, the ashes of an extinguished planet, a fallen pillar of smoke.

But that will not interfere with your investments if you have taken Christ as your Saviour. Secure heaven as your eternal home, and you can look down upon a dismantled, disrupted, and demolished earth without any perturbation.

When wrapped in fire the realms of ether glow,
And heaven's last thunders shake the earth below,
Thou, undismayed, shalt o'er the ruins smile,
And light thy torch at Nature's funeral pile.

Hunger in India

Thirty Million Natives in Danger of Starvation
Reports from Rev. R. Winsor and Rev. J. E. Abbott

URGENT appeals for help are being made by the missionaries in India. Every mail from that afflicted land brings the most pathetic and thrilling pleas that the people who came to the rescue in the former famine, will once more, for the sake of Christ, save the perishing. Dr. J. E. Abbott, of Bombay, has made a personal call at the office of this journal, to urge the need of the people. Tracing on the map of India, the area in which the famine is pressing most sorely, he showed that it included almost all of the Central provinces, the Berars, North Deccan, and Gujirat in the Bombay Presidency, besides the Southeast and Central Punjab. It also includes the native States in Central and Western India, the large group of native States north of Bombay, Baroda, Indore, and virtually the whole of Rajputana. The population of these States is thirty million persons. Dr. Abbott calls attention to the ominous fact that so early in the famine, emaciated people on the verge of death by starvation are already being met on the public highways, and that children, reduced to mere skeletons, are found deserted of their parents, who fled rather than see them die before their eyes. If in December such sights are witnessed, what may be expected before July, when at the earliest the rains may be looked for? Rev. R. Winsor, the American Board's missionary at Sirur, who is now on furlough in this country, writes: "In a few weeks I return to my field of labor, but I cannot, I dare not, go back empty-handed. I remember the scenes of 1897 when, through the generosity of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, I was able, as was many another missionary, to meet the hundreds of hungry men, women and children with food in my hands to relieve their immediate necessity and was able to find them work by which their wants were met during the weary weeks of waiting for harvest. We told them then, that the followers of Him whom we preached, had taken compassion on the hungry people and for their love of him had bade us feed them in his name. No sooner will they hear of my return, than in their dire emergency they will crowd around my dwelling, longing, hoping for help. What must I tell them? God forbid that I should have to say to them that I can do nothing for them, that the Christian people of my beloved land have sent them nothing. I could not bear to see the agony of disappointment in their pleading eyes. I believe I shall be spared that heart-breaking experience. I believe that the love of Christ which prompted the munificence of 1897 has not grown cold, but that once again we may have the joy of feeding the starving in Christ's name.

"The question may be asked: 'What is the cause of such widespread calamity? Are the people so improvident that they do not sow their seed at the proper season?' I answer, No—oh, no. I have lived nearly thirty years among these people, and have been astonished at the patience with which, after the failure of a crop, they sow again, and even sell an ox to buy seed to put in the ground. But now and again the monsoon, which brings the rain to the parched ground, fails, and then there is no harvest. It is not the fault of the people. They hope on, sow in faith, and when the rain comes not their hearts break.

"Some may ask, 'Why does not the government provide for such sufferers?' I witnessed the Herculean efforts of the government in 1897, and as an impartial observer I bear the government witness that every official did his utmost, even to risking health and life, in trying to relieve the suffering of the people. I served on the local committee for the relief of the destitute, and I know whereof I speak when I testify to the unsparing devotion of the government to its duties. But the government can do so little in the face of such widespread calamity. Hundreds of miles of irrigating canals have been cut in Bombay and other sections, but where the canals depend on the rains they are dry.

"I am more than ever convinced that the real hope of permanent relief from such calamities lies in industrial education. Anything which will save the people from depending exclusively on the produce of their little holdings for subsistence is a promise of hope. Every boy who becomes a carpenter or a mechanic, or who learns some trade, is raised, to some extent, above the risk that his brother, who tills the soil, must run every year. It is this training which we are giving in our schools. The industrial work that in Providence I had been led to inaugurate and carry on, is a most beneficial one for the training of these youth, and it has been my aim to have this institution furnish employment in such direction and quantity as to make it a financial help right along from year to year. It is successful, as visitors from the United States, and well-known, testify. We need two implements more to complete our plans and purposes to furnish employment, and now, especially to the orphans for whose training we are responsible. These children are increasing in numbers, but with such training as we give them, both in our Christian Vernacular School and Industrial School, we are, with God's blessing, able to give them a good outfit for life.

"And this is the very thing I am asking the readers of this paper to help us do. And more than this which is of immense help to me as a missionary I am enabled, when a heathen comes to me and says he wishes to become a Christian, to say to him, when I find he has no visible means of support, 'here is an opportunity for you, come among our Christians, attend their prayer meetings and religious services, see how they live and at the same time work on our industrial lines and furnish your own bread by these means we supply to you.' "I beg, I pray the readers of this article to send us out with means to help these distressed people. What can be said, what presented, that would lead every single reader to send something, and now let me ask, let me beseech every one who sees this, to take a share in this help. I ask every reader who is able to give one dollar to do it, and to do it immediately, and that every reader who can give no more than fifty cents to give that fifty cents, every one who can give no more than twenty-five cents to give that twenty-five cents and that those who can afford no more than ten cents to send that ten cents. The sums total will be helpful but do please do it immediately and I hope that all will do something."

"These words come to you from an eyewitness; from one who has been among the people nearly thirty years, and who has seen their sorrows and their suffering. I plead with you by the love you bear to Christ, give us the means of saving their lives and may the blessing of Him who said: 'Inasmuch as ye did it unto them, ye did it unto me,' be upon you for ever."

NATIVE BOYS IN REV. R. WINSOR'S INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL AT SIRUR, INDIA

Porto Rican Relief Work

In a statement from the Porto Rican General Relief Committee, the following interesting showing of the relief work on that island is given by Mr. W. R. Corwine, Secretary of the Committee:

"The grand total deposited in the National Bank of North America as the official depository of the Central Porto Rican Relief Committee is $81,746.45. Among the largest contributions received by the Relief Committee was:

The Christian Herald	$16,833
Catholic Church of the Diocese of New York	5,000
Catholic Church of the Diocese of Philadel'a	3,000
Catholic Church of the Diocese of Baltimore	2,000
Citizens of Chicago	10,000
James Speyer, New York	1,000
City of Davenport, Iowa	1,000
Harvey Fiske & Sons, New York	1,000
City of Buffalo	1,000
Lazard Freres	1,000
Through the Providence Journal, R. I.	1,600
H. B. Hollins & Co	1,000
Stock Exchange	1,592
City of Newark	1,331
Citizens of Baltimore	1,089

"The other subscriptions are all under $1,000. WM. R. CORWINE, Sec'y."

The New Secretary

ONE of the most responsible positions in the gift of the Methodist Episcopal Church is that of General Secretary of the Epworth League. It became necessary, through the resignation of Dr. Edwin A. Schell, who has held office since the organization of the League, to elect a successor. The selection of a fit man for the office was a most responsible duty, as the Board of Control upon whom the duty rested, doubtless realized. Its choice appears to have been a remarkably happy one, and in making it the Board has paid a notable tribute to a distinguished teacher. It has elected Professor Wilbur Patterson Thirkield, the Dean of Gammon Theological Seminary at Atlanta, Ga., a man in cordial and hearty sympathy with Epworth League principles and methods, and with young people.

DR. WILBUR P. THIRKIELD
The New Secretary of the Epworth League

Dr. Thirkield has been for sixteen years at the head of the Atlanta institution, and has succeeded in developing its usefulness and gaining for it the respect and confidence of the whole community. He is forty-five years of age, and has retained beyond most men of his years the vigor and energy of youth, and the capacity for understanding young people. His early years were passed at Franklin, O., and when he realized that he was called to the work of the ministry, it was to the Ohio Wesleyan University that he went for an education. He graduated there with honors in 1876, and then proceeded to the Boston University of Theology for his special theological studies. At the conclusion of his course he connected with the Cincinnati Conference, and was at once recognized as one of the most able and brilliant of the new generation of Methodist preachers. He was assigned to an important church in Cincinnati, and entered upon a successful ministry. His work, however, had scarcely begun to bear its full fruit when he was called to the difficult and delicate task which he has so ably performed during the past sixteen years. This was to be the head of the new institution of learning that Elijah Gammon was founding at Atlanta, Ga. Mr. Gammon had erected his building and endowed it, but there were no students nor any definite plans for its development. The founder's hope was that it might be a place of training in which young men of piety and talent, principally of the colored race, might receive such an education as would fit them for the ministry. In calling so young a man as Mr. Thirkield, who was at that time only twenty-nine years of age, to take charge of the work, he showed a confidence in his administrative ability which has been amply justified by the results. There have been more than a hundred graduates, many of whom have brought credit to their college by distinguished work, and all showing the benefits of their college training. In the development of the institution, the extension of its faculty and the guidance of its management, Dr. Thirkield has had the help of a wife peculiarly fitted to be the helpmeet of such a man. She was the daughter of Bishop Gilbert Haven, from whom she has inherited that love of the colored race which characterized her distinguished father.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Review of the Quarter

International Sunday School Lesson for Dec. 31. Golden Text, Psalm 103 : 2

HISTORY records few undertakings more interesting than the attempt to re-establish the Jewish people in their old home, after their long exile. More than a century was occupied with the struggle, and at the end of that period the success of the enterprise was still doubtful. Our lessons, during the past quarter, have been concerned with the latter part of this period, and they have shown how numerous and formidable were the difficulties which had to be overcome.

"ALL THE PEOPLE WEPT"

It is a gloomy picture of national life that is drawn by the historians, the psalmist, and the prophet, as we have studied it week by week. The people were divided. By far the larger number remained in Babylon and the other cities of the empire, though they were free to return to their own land. Doubtless, Cyrus expected when he issued his decree in 536 B.C., giving them permission to return, that all, or nearly all, would go back. But only fifty thousand persons—scarcely one-fifth of the exiles—availed themselves of his permission. They had set out full of joy and enthusiasm, and had reached Jerusalem in safety. But once there, the influence of the pervading desolation, or other causes, had produced depression and social deterioration. Seventy-eight years after their departure, another contingent of seventeen hundred persons followed them, under Ezra; but there was no semblance of national existence until 445 B.C., when Nehemiah secured the appointment of governor and went out armed with viceregal authority to set matters in order. It is mainly with his efforts, which were seconded by Ezra, that our lessons for the past quarter have been concerned.

We obtain a glimpse in the two lessons from Esther, of the kind of government under which they had lived during the period of exile. The capricious rule of the autocrat, who was liable, under the influence of some favorite statesman, to issue decrees which would almost exterminate the race, must have rendered their existence one of continual peril. Yet they were preserved and they maintained their separate existence, resisting alike the friendliness which would have absorbed them, and the hostility which would have annihilated them. The Jew in Babylon was becoming the Jew as we know him—a man who could adapt himself to his surroundings and could make for himself a home and a fortune, while maintaining an exclusiveness in his religious and social relations which the people among whom he lived could not penetrate.

It is significant that the people who had returned to Palestine showed less of the national characteristics than those who remained behind. There was less of national vigor, less of religious and moral principle among them, than among the exiles. The movements which successively toned up their moral life, had their origin not among themselves, but in the land of exile. The reformers who were to bring them to a consciousness of their deterioraton and to purge them of the evil that was corrupting their lives, were Ezra and Nehemiah, two men who had retained in exile and amid the enervating influences of foreign life, the religious principle that the Jews in Palestine had lost.

It was the reforming zeal of Ezra which produced the social and religious renovation of the nation, and it was the energy of Nehemiah which stimulated them to the rebuilding of the walls of the ancient city, which were necessary to their safety. But for the public spirit of these two men, the attempt to restore Jewish nationality must have failed. Their work is a remarkable illustration of the power of leaders to influence a whole people to shape the destinies of a nation. But there must have been, beneath all the carelessness and laxity of the people, a soundness of principle and a latent conscientiousness, forming a material on which the reformers could work. In the lesson on "the reading of the law," there are signs of this inbred reverence for righteousness which responded when an appeal was made to it.

"THE HAND OF OUR GOD WAS UPON US AND WE CAME TO JERUSALEM"

Another significant fact in the history of this period is that the political and social reformation was the result of a religious revival. The national decadence was checked and the social corruption healed, not by edicts, so much as by spiritual activity. Nehemiah and Ezra began their movement by recalling them to their allegiance to God. Malachi proceeded on the same lines, inculcating personal religion as the basis for political and civil duty. The times have not changed in that respect. No nation is ever reformed by legislation. The only reform that is genuine and permanent begins in the conversion of individuals.

The silver is given to thee and the people also (Esther 3 : 11). How marvelously the people had been preserved in their exile! It seemed when Haman plotted against them that they must be destroyed, but God delivered them. A singular instance of divine interposition is quoted by a German historian. A certain Chancellor of Bohemia, Joachim, by name, went to Vienna and besought the Emperor Maximilian to grant him a decree of persecution against the Waldenses. The Emperor refused at first, but being long importuned, yielded, and Joachim departed on his fell mission. But on his way home, he had to cross a bridge over the Danube which had long been out of repair. As he and his long retinue passed, one of the arches gave way and Joachim fell into the river. One of his servants, who was with him, held him up, but before they could be rescued, Joachim died. The box containing the decree sank to the bottom of the river and was not found for several months.

I was ashamed to ask of the king (Ezra 8 : 22). Ezra showed more regard for consistency than some men do. There would be danger in their journey to Palestine. A troop of soldiers would be a protection worth having, but if he asked the king for it, the monarch would think, if he did not say, that Ezra did not believe his own doctrine: for he had told the king that God protected those who trusted him. The story is told of a Christian in India who lived in a plague-stricken town, that he resolved to take his departure to a more healthy place. The man who was to drive him to the station was in tears when he came out of the house, and his employer thought that the man was grieving over parting with him. He asked the man why he wept, and the reply was that there was now no hope for the people, since the Christian's God had deserted the town. "Do not think that," said the employer. "God never deserts any town or people." The man asked, "Why, then, is the sahib going away if his God is here?" The question went home, and the Christian remained in the town to help the afflicted people.

Caused them to understand (Nehemiah 8 : 8). Queen Mary met the reproof of Knox with the remark: "You interpret the Scriptures in one way and the Pope and the Cardinals in another: whom shall I believe and who shall be judge?" Knox replied: "You shall believe God, who plainly speaketh in his Word; and further than the Word teacheth you, you shall believe neither the one nor the other—neither the Pope nor the reformers. The Word of God is plain in itself: if there be any obscurity in one place, the Holy Spirit explains it more clearly in other places, so that there can remain no doubt but unto such as are obstinately ignorant." That is the essential principle of Protestantism, and every [illegible] go for direction to his Bible and not close his Bible and look to the priest for instruction and guidance.

Pour you out a blessing. (Mal. 3 : 10). He assures the people that they would lose nothing by paying God what is due him. He would bless them abundantly. This is the lowest kind of motive to appeal to, but there are some people who have no higher motives. Of course, no one in this age would make the naive proposal to God that Jacob made (Gen. 28 : 20–22) in which he practically offered God a commission on all that was given him. But there are some who have an idea of that kind in their hearts. They agree to give because they expect that their gifts will propitiate God and bring them prosperity. That is not the right spirit. God does bless the liberal giver, but he does not enter into a bargain, otherwise there would be no merit in giving. In a widely read story there is an instance in point. It is that of a banker who secured a mortgage on a widow's farm and having her completely in his power, she goes to his house fully expecting that he is about to foreclose and turn her into the street. But to her amazement the banker takes the mortgage and thrusts it into the fire. Then he tells her that the farm is free and clear and when she wants to know the reason of such generosity, he produces a dime carefully wrapped in paper. That dime was given to the banker when he was a poor boy by the widow's husband, whose kind words and little gift had never been forgotten. The giver had never expected any return for his kindness, but his widow received it after many years in more than a thousand fold.

With the other hand held a weapon (Nehemiah 4 : 17). This was for a sudden onslaught, and behind them stood men with spears, shields, bows and the coats of mail, called habergeons, which in a regular pitched battle they might need. Everything was in readiness for fighting while the work went forward. Much of the Christian's work is done in the same way. When a good man is trying to do a good work, there are sure to be some people trying to hinder him. In a recently published story there is an account of a man who took up the case of some poor people whose children had been made ill by drinking bad milk. The man who supplied the milk had strong political influence, and he took advantage of every loophole of the law to keep the case from coming to trial. The champion of the poor people groaned over the delay, but he did more. He studied the law and found a forgotten statute which enabled him by the governor's help to force a trial, and the case was pushed forward on the calendar and justice was done.

"I FASTED AND PRAYED BEFORE GOD"

"HARK TO THE ANGELS SINGING IN HEAVEN: 'TO GOD IN THE HIGHEST, ALL GLORY BE GIVEN'"

The Manger in Song and Story

The Babe of Bethlehem

Away in a manger, no crib for his bed,
The little Lord Jesus lay down his sweet head.
The stars in the heavens looked down where he lay,
The little Lord Jesus asleep in the hay.
The cattle are lowing, the poor baby wakes,
But the little Lord Jesus, no crying he makes.

THUS wrote the great reformer, Martin Luther, of a scene and an event that has been the inspiration of the world's spoets, sculptors, and painters for nearly twenty centuries. Truly, no story so pure, so tender, so altogether lovely has ever been told as that of the little Babe of Bethlehem; it bears within itself, as does the whole life of the Master, witness of Divine origin. The Scripture narrative is simplicity itself—it gives not one word more nor less than is needed. To this, where scholarly research has sought in vain to contribute attested facts, poetic tradition has added many a fair and reverent fancy. It is said that Herod, if he had known, might easily have tracked the Holy Family by the Rose of Jericho, that blossomed wherever they went. From the time of the early fathers of the church through medieval history, when crusaders wore her colors and wandering minstrels sang her praises, the influence of the Virgin Mother, the type of pure and pious womanhood, may be traced by

Faire floures of kindlye charitie,
And deeds of knightlye chivalrie,
And all sweete wayes of courtesie.

Easy it was for adulation to run to extremes, and reverence to degenerate into idolatry; especially as the character of Christ was misunderstood, and he was commonly represented as judge rather than intercessor.

. . . .

Mary's parents were deeply pious. We are told that their names were Joachim and Anna, and that Joachim was a Nazarene shepherd; that they gave a third of their substance to the temple, a third to the poor, and kept a third; that they prayed for years to God to give them a child, and when he sent Mary, they dedicated her to his service, as Hannah did Samuel. When at three years of age, they brought her to the temple, it is related:

"Mary was in the temple as if she were a dove that dwelt there, and she received food from the hand of an angel." We are told that she was skilled in spinning, needlework and all womanly industries, and this we may well believe (Prov. 31: 13, 19). She was a student of God's Word, knowing, as a Jewish maiden should, its prophecies, as her song, "My soul doth magnify the Lord," witnesses; prayerful, meditative, devout was the daughter of pious Joachim and Anna. "She must have been used to the converse of angels," they say in Bethlehem, "for she was neither astonished nor frightened when Gabriel appeared." What must have been her thought when told that the honor for which every woman of her race for ages had hoped and prayed was to be hers? She said, with the meekness that characterizes her in sacred history. "Behold the handmaid of the Lord!"

. . . .

"Here, Jesus Christ was born of the Virgin Mary," is the English reading of the Latin inscription on the silver star in the marble floor of the Grotto of the Nativity, at Bethlehem. The inscription may be the literal truth, for the place answers to the description given by Justin Martyr, who was living when St. John died, and who may have talked with the beloved apostle. The Grotto is a natural cave, as were many stables of that time. Its present furnishings, the church standing above it, and the elaborate ceremonials performed here at Christmas seem hardly fitting memorials of an event which in God's ordering was absolutely bare of all worldly pomp and circumstance. We love to think of the manger somewhat as a great artist presented it in a picture, which is reproduced on our front page. The Virgin wears no robes of purple and gold; she is just a mother of the people, the wife of Joseph the carpenter, bending above her first-born. All the glory that surrounds the manger is of the heaven heavenly, and neither Mary nor Joseph see the attendant angels hovering about the divine child. Such a lowly mother as this might well have felt the sentiments Elizabeth Barrett Browning attributes to her in the inspired poem: "Mary to Jesus."

O Centuries, say of me as the Heavenly said:
"Thou art
The blessedest of women!"—blessedest,
Not holiest, not noblest, no high name
Whose height misplaced may pierce me like a shame
When I sit meek in heaven.

On Christmas eve now, as in Christ's time, Bethlehem's market-place is crowded with camels, asses, shepherds bringing lambs to sell, and with folk who will not find room at the inn. Twenty centuries ago, camels of star-guided Magi kneeled there; and out on the hills were shepherds to whom angels sang of Christ. In many beautiful pictures of the Nativity, patient kine and faithful ass bear part. There may be a significance in the fact that Jesus was "born among the beasts" which some of us have not thought over very deeply. Let us be sure that we are kind to our dumb burden-bearers, for of Jesus and Mary on the night of the nativity it has been written:

The Ox is host in Juda's stall,
And Host of more than onelie one,
For close she gathereth withal
Our Lorde, her littel Sonne.

Fallen on the Field

Death of Mrs. L. H. Pierson in Japan After Twenty-eight Years of Continuous Service

A BRIEF cable message from Yokohama, Japan, conveys the sad intelligence that a veteran missionary who has labored with marked success for twenty-eight years, has laid down the burden of life and has left a vacant place in the foremost ranks of the Lord's army. Details of her death have not yet been received, but there is no doubt that the call of Christ to her to come and receive her reward was obeyed with the same cheerful alacrity with which she responded to his call to service.

THE LATE MRS. L. H. PIERSON

It was in the year 1871 that the Woman's Union Missionary Society received a letter from Mrs. L. H. Pierson, offering herself as a missionary. In her modest application, she said that she was a graduate of the Rochester Female Academy, to which she had gone from Flint, Mich. She explained that death had robbed her of husband and children and in her young widowhood she desired to consecrate the remainder of her life to Christ's service. She was willing to go to any land in which such services as she could render were needed. The testimonials which she furnished from her pastor, a Protestant Episcopal clergyman, and other Christian friends, showed that she was a woman of remarkable loveliness of character, who had endeared herself to all with whom she came in contact, by her unselfishness and kindly affection. The Society accepted her offer and sent her to Japan to begin a work among the women and girls of that country.

Her first work after acquiring the language was the opening of a girls' school at Yokohama. The Japanese at that time were beginning to appreciate the superiority of Western civilization, and educators for men and boys were cordially welcomed; but the people were apparently unable to comprehend the value of a work for women. Mrs. Pierson, however, soon had a number of little girls under her care and her efforts were so successful that several Japanese ladies came to share in the advantages. None of them were allowed to be under any delusion as to the missionary's object or motives. She was willing to impart secular knowledge, but they all understood that her chief desire was to lead them to Christ. That was a much more difficult matter, for at that time there were penalties prescribed by the government against any native who professed Christianity. But Mrs. Pierson worked on in faith, and she was privileged to live to see the fruits of her labors. Twenty-five years after she opened school, a number of Japanese ladies who had been her pupils in their childhood came to the school to hold festival in celebration of the anniversary. They had become mothers of families and had their own little girls under her care. They acknowledged that much of the secular knowledge they had gained had been forgotten amid their household cares, but the knowledge of Christ that she had inculcated was still their most treasured possession.

Mrs. Pierson had not been content with school teaching. She had visited in the homes of Yokohama and had made periodical journeys, at the cost of much discomfort and with no little peril to life and limb, to the regions beyond the mountains, where she had preached Christ to women who had never heard his name, and had won many souls for him. There are to-day in connection with the Mission a Bible readers' school with one hundred and thirty members and seventeen preaching stations in and around Yokohama, at three of which chapels have been built. Hers was an intensely busy life. "There is so much to do, so many opportunities constantly opening," she wrote, "that I cannot leave even for a visit home." She stayed on, spending and being spent for Christ, until at the close of her twenty-eight years of uninterrupted service, her Master has called his faithful servant to her eternal rest.

THE SHEPHERD AND HIS FLOCK

...The Christmas Song...

Come sing the song of Christmastide
That told a Saviour's birth;
No song in all the world beside
So fits a sin-worn earth.

Ah! never since the world began
Had such sweet sounds been heard:
The news of God's good will to man—
What wonder heaven is stirred!

What wonder that the angels sing,
And shining hosts reply,
When Christ, the world's redeeming King
Is born for man to die!

What wonder that a new-lit Star
The sapphire sky should gem,
To guide the seekers from afar
To Christ of Bethlehem!

R. M. Offord.

IN THE MARKET-PLACE OF BETHLEHEM

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR.
T. DeWitt Talmage
EDITOR.
B. J. FERNIE. G. H. SANDISON.

The Christian Herald
Subscriptions may commence
Remittances
Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.
Register your letters when you remit by cash.
Foreign Postage
ico. foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.
Renewals.
before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted Back Numbers.
by tardy renewals.
Change of Date.
the date, after your subscription is renewed.
Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.
Change of Address.
The Name
live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name
The Christian Herald
to it with a view to publication.
Letters
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,
Bible House, New York City.

The Gifts of the Magi

WITH Christmas joys we Christmas gifts. If what we do for the poor is done to the Lord, and the poor we have always with us, we may share with the Magi the privilege of coming with gold, frankincense and myrrh, and kneeling to our King. The Babe of Bethlehem is also the King of Glory. We are not required to make a long journey from the Orient, asking "Where is He, that is born?" We know where He is. We know that gifts are acceptable to Him. Let us make ourselves happy, as we distribute to the poor, as we have opportunity, and especially to the poor who are of the household of faith.

A Homeless Babe

THE Saviour was born a homeless Babe. He borrowed bedding and a manger from the beasts of the field. No poor child in all the earth, in all the world's history was humbler born. The contrast between the overture of the angels, and the actual advent in that Bethlehem stable, shows how the human and the divine were blended in that advent. Why so humble? He was to be touched with the feeling of our infirmities. No poor mother, the earth around, but can see that the Babe of Bethlehem had no better welcome than her own little one. Only a little higher than the beasts of the stall! Only a little lower than the angels!

Plague Marching Westward

THIS enemy that mounts no guns, that has no navies, or sharp-shooters, that marches to no bugle-call, is on the way Westward. It has reached the New York quarantine. In the British dominions in India, its progress has been very destructive. It is to be met only by good food, airy quarters and cleanliness. It is what is called a filth-disease. Grasping landlords should be held to the strictest sanitary regulations.

The dread disease in Bombay, spreads rapidly through rats and fleas. The British troops are forbidden all unsavory quarters. Thus far in that city only two or three genuine Europeans have suffered, and the suffering has been mainly among the poor. In England and Germany precautions against it have been already taken. America is regarded comparatively safe. But vigilance may be needed here; especially in our large cities.

Admiral Dewey's House

NEVER has the world had a more vivid illustration of the vanity and uncertainty of human favor than in the contrast between the uproarious welcome of the hero of Manila at the opening of October and the scurrilous abuse of him at the close of November. Could he have changed so wondrously in seven weeks? No! He is the same man, the same character, the same in looks, the same in reality. But every age has had specimens of the same tendency, now to approve and now to condemn. If we go far enough back, we find the people who greeted Christ with "Hosanna, Hosanna," and soon after shouted, "Away with him; Crucify him!"

When Wellington came back from Waterloo, what arches of triumph, what rendering of martial airs, what banquets, stretching their tables across England; what ovations, what cheers of excited millions! But afterward Wellington did something that displeased the people, and then they stoned his house and tried to kill him, and broke down the fence around his home—the fence that the Duke would not allow during his lifetime to be repaired, because he wished the ruins to remain as a perpetual evidence of the fickleness of the world's opinion.

Our observation has been that the person who gives ten cents towards an object, secular or religious, is apt to reserve the right to do fifty dollars' damage of blame. The unparalleled national welcome given our great Admiral excited enough jealousy among politicians to kindle a very hell of defamation and abuse. One of two things is certain: either many of our American people made fools of themselves in October or are making fools of themselves now.

Let young men decline to make the favor of the world their chief aim. Let them do their whole duty, inspired by desire of practical usefulness and the fulfilment of one's earthly mission, and there will be a "well done" ringing down the sky worth more than the adulation of a hemisphere.

Discipline of Housekeeping

NINE hundred and ninety-nine households out of the thousand are subject to economy — some under more and some under less stress of circumstances. Especially if a man smoke very expensive cigars, and take very costly dinners at the restaurants, he will be severe in demanding domestic economies. That is what kills tens of thousands of women—attempting to make $5 do the work of $7. How the bills come in! The woman is the banker of the household; she is the president, the cashier, the teller, the discount clerk, and there is a panic every few weeks. This thirty years' war against high prices, this perpetual study of economies, this lifelong attempt to keep the outgoes less than the income, exhausts millions of housekeepers.

Oh, my sister, this is part of the divine discipline. If it were best for you, all you would have to do would be to open the front windows and the ravens would fly in with food; and after you had baked fifty times from the barrel in the pantry, the barrel, like the one at Zarephath, would be full; and the shoes of the children would last as long as the shoes of the Israelites in the wilderness—forty years. Besides that, this is going to make heaven the more attractive in the contrast. They never hunger there, and consequently there will be none of the nuisances of catering for appetites. And in the land of the white robes they never have to mend anything, and the air in that hill country makes everybody well. There are no rents to pay; every man owns his own house, and a mansion at that. It will not be so great a change for you to have a chariot in heaven if you have been in the habit of riding in this world. It will not be so great a change for you to sit down on the banks of the river of life if in this world you had a country seat; but if you have walked with tired feet in this world, what a glorious change to mount celestial equipages; and if your life on earth was domestic martyrdom, oh, the joy of an eternity in which you shall have nothing to do except what you choose to do!

The Red Letter Testament

FOR the next eighteen months, and until July 1, 1901, the International Sunday School Lessons will be confined to the Life of our Saviour. To know just what he said will be a matter of considerable import. The possessor of a Red Letter New Testament will have no doubts on the subject, for in this work every word the Master uttered is printed in Red, while the balance is all in black. The same type—large and clear-faced—is used throughout, the distinction being only in the color. Hence, whenever a word appears in red, the reader will know that Christ said it.

Thousands of letters full of unstinted praise have been received, and leading clergymen and Sunday School workers have written that they will use it as their "working Testament." It is beautifully printed, absolutely free from errors, and bound more handsomely than any other Testament in existence. Rich American Levant Leather covers it—overlapping so as to protect the edges which are in red and gold—and a Thumb Index facilitates the finding of any particular book.

A special feature of this splendid work is that it has on each page on the upper outside corner in large bold-faced type, the Book and Chapter, so that any particular chapter may be found as readily in this book as any particular page in other books.

Never has a book sprung more quickly into universal popularity, and many people write us that, although never before active Bible readers, they now feel impelled to read the New Testament from cover to cover. The printing cannot be surpassed, and although in our various prospectuses, which were produced on lightning presses in enormous quantities, some of the lines were printed askew, nothing of the kind appears in the Red Letter New Testament itself. There everything is correct, as the book was printed in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Press Rooms, and over four months' continuous careful work were devoted to its production.

The second edition is now out, and the publisher of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD offers a reward of five dollars to anyone first discovering any typographical error that may have accidentally been overlooked.

The Red Letter New Testament, although sold at $1.75, is sent all charges prepaid, with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for only $2.00, but we cannot guarantee that this offer will be open after December 31.

Will our friends who were instrumental in securing Coupon subscribers please finish their good work by making a personal effort to secure their renewal. A word from you may do the work, and now is the time to speak it.

Mr. Moody's Condition

Evangelist Dwight L. Moody is still quite ill at his home in Northfield, Mass. It is not expected that he will be able to resume platform work for months to come. His physicians who, some time after his seizure, took a favorable view of his condition, have been somewhat disturbed by the evidence of other troubles which have given cause for renewed anxiety. It is still hoped, however, that these may be overcome.

The prayers of the readers of this journal are requested for Mr. Moody's complete recovery, if it be the Divine will.

Advance Announcement

IN next week's issue we shall submit to our readers a proposition concerning THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Concert Organ, especially designed for use at cottage prayer-meetings, and adapted to the requirements of persons who have no musical education, but who would enjoy well-played sacred music at home. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is always on the lookout for pleasant surprises, and this is one of the best we ever arranged for them. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Concert Organ can be accurately played even by a child who has not yet learned the difference between one note and another. In fact, it plays itself, and the music can be repeated over and over again without any intermission whatever. One thousand of these organs have been manufactured for us, and the very first announcement will sell them all. Hence, when the description and terms appear in next week's issue, do not delay but act immediately. The price is absurdly low and the terms are so easy as to bring this marvelously attractive instrument within the reach of even the poorest. This organ will help the cause of sacred music, and it will bring sunshine into many homes, and as it is part of the mission of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD to diffuse sunshine and happiness and to make the world brighter and happier, we are as glad of the opportunity to make this offer as our subscribers will be to embrace it. No CHRISTIAN HERALD Concert Organ will be sold outside of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD family.

Read this First

To Our Every Coupon Subscriber

DEAR FRIEND:

Last summer we concluded that if people could only see and read THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for a reasonable length of time, they would soon discover that a religious family paper need not necessarily be dull, heavy and stupid. So we planned to introduce, at great financial sacrifice to ourselves, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD into as many new homes as possible, and succeeded in adding 130,000 to our subscription list. We considered the experiment one well worth trying, and we are happy to say that, even at this early date, the number of renewals already received demonstrates that we made no mistake. We now have a circulation of over 300,000, and every day thousands of new names are being added to our list.

Your own subscription is about to expire, and unless you have already renewed it will cease with the last issue in this month. We are encouraged to believe that our efforts to make a bright, clean, interesting, and exceedingly attractive family paper have met with your approval, and that your prompt renewal will demonstrate that you appreciate the value of clean, pure, literature.

No paper in the world, at the price, can compare with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, whether viewed from a literary or an artistic standpoint. Religion is not dull, sombre, or gloomy. It irradiates every life with which it comes in contact, it beautifies everything it touches, and it makes THE CHRISTIAN HERALD what it is—the brightest and best paper in the world.

We would esteem it a privilege to have your company for another year, and we feel confident that you will never regret the investment. Never have we perfected more extensive arrangements for the best that selected talent can afford, and a beautiful, healthy, and satisfactory production 52 times during 1900 is absolutely assured.

Please Renew To-day, and thus avoid interruption of the service.

Louis Klopsch

Fighting Still Goes On

NEWS from the seat of war in South Africa shows how desperately the conflict is being waged on both sides. In the West Lord Methuen has succeeded in getting his bridge across the Modder River completed and is transporting his artillery to the northern bank. When that operation is completed, it is assumed that he will resume his march toward Kimberley, which has maintained its resistance to the Boer forces. The garrison there reported at the close of last week that it still had provisions for thirty days. The most formidable obstacle to the relief of the town is at Spuytfontein, where the Boers are reported to occupy an almost impregnable position. As Spuytfontein is about half-way between the Modder and Kimberley, Lord Methuen will probably be compelled to fight a severe battle before reaching the latter place. In the meantime, he is likely to have some difficulty in protecting his communications. Already the Boers have destroyed a section of the railroad in his rear. It was speedily repaired; but the fact that the Boers were able to effect the destruction indicates the necessity of constant vigilance. On the East, Gen. Buller has been preparing for an advance from Frere to Colenso, for the relief of Ladysmith, where Gen. White has succeeded in holding out in spite of severe bombardment. His troops appear to have kept their vigor notwithstanding their long inaction. On December 7 a force made a sortie from the town, on Lombard's Kop, a hill on which the Boers had placed guns that had harassed the garrison. The British force succeeded in destroying three heavy guns and capturing a Maxim. In Cape Colony, Gen. Gatacre, who is in command of the British forces in that district, has met with a reverse. Misled by his guides as to the Boer position and strength, he made an advance toward Stormberg. The Boers were evidently prepared for his coming. He was suddenly assailed by a deadly fire from the front and the right and was compelled to retreat, losing, besides dead and wounded, one gun and six hundred prisoners. It is expected that this repulse will encourage the Boers in Cape Colony to rise against British rule and make common cause with their brethren of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. If such a movement became general, the task the British have undertaken would be greatly complicated and the area of the struggle would be widely extended.

The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water: therefore, leave off contention before it be meddled with (Prov. 17: 14).

Tagged for Recognition

The attention of an officer in the waiting room of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Jersey City, N. J., was called one day recently to a man, who had a piece of white cardboard in the band of his hat. "He has forgotten to remove the price tag," said the passenger who had addressed the officer. "That is not a price tag," said the officer, "wait and you will see what it is for." The passenger waited and watched the man with the tag. In a few minutes the Southern express rolled into the station. Among the passengers who alighted was a young woman who wore a white satin bow conspicuously pinned on her dark clothing. The man with the tag saw her and went to meet her. Her eyes looked up to his hat and seeing the white cardboard, she put out her hand which the man grasped; a few cordial words were uttered and the two walked away together. The officer, who had been looking at them, said such occurrences were common in the station. The two were probably relatives, who had never met before. Frequently people from the South and West who came to visit friends in New York, whom they do not know by sight, adopt such means of identification. When they see on each other the sign previously agreed upon, they know that they are related and they trust one another as kinsmen. The Christian wears no such sign; but his conduct ought to be sufficiently clear for his identification so that when men see his kindness and helpfulness they may know him, as the early followers of Christ were known.

They marvelled and took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus (Acts 4: 13).

A Victim to Science

A medical journal publishes a pathetic story which it has received from its correspondent in Lisbon. He gives details of the death of Dr. Camara Pestana, a famous Portuguese physician who recently died of the plague. He was dissecting the body of a patient who had died from plague, and, in order to extract the virus more thoroughly for analysis, he put aside his instruments and worked with his fingers. The poison entered his system under the finger nails, and he was struck down with the terrible disease which he was investigating. He was at once moved to an isolated ward set apart for plague sufferers, and there he set himself to study his own case and to record for the benefit of humanity his own symptoms and the course of the disease. He refused to see his brother for fear of infection, and in every way, even in making arrangements for his own funeral, he took precautions to prevent the spread of the plague. His mind and will conquered his bodily sufferings until the very end, and even as he died he was still trying to indicate to those around him the lessons of his own case. He doubtless hoped to escape infection when he performed the autopsy which led to his death; but when he found that he was to be a victim, his concern was for the welfare of others, not for himself. Doubtless the physicians learned from him, while they were watching his case, facts which they could have learned from no other patient, and so may be better able to cure others. Every one admires such devotion, but how few comparatively realize how much humanity owes to Him who voluntarily yielded himself a sacrifice for the world.

ARRIVAL OF BRITISH REINFORCEMENTS AT SIMON'S TOWN, SOUTH AFRICA

He hath made him to be sin for us who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him (II. Cor. 5: 21).

Roberts Not Admitted

By an overwhelming majority of more than ten to one, the House of Representatives has decided to investigate the charges against Brigham H. Roberts before admitting him to a seat. Mr. Tayler, of Ohio, led the debate against the admission of the Mormon member. He presented a memorial which he said was signed by more than seven million men and women, against allowing him to take his seat. He proceeded to show by transcripts of the proceedings of the courts of Utah, that in 1889 Mr. Roberts had confessed himself a polygamist and, by affidavits, that since that time he has continued his polygamous relations. These facts, Mr. Tayler contended, showed that Mr. Roberts was ineligible for membership, and he therefore proposed that they should be investigated by a committee of nine members who should render a report before the House to decide whether Mr. Roberts shall be sworn in. The accused man was heard in his own defense, but as he did not categorically deny the charges, the House voted by 302 to 30 to refer his case to the committee, as Mr. Tayler proposed. The Speaker then appointed a committee, of which Mr. Tayler is chairman, with power to summon witnesses and call for papers. It is thought that if Mr. Roberts persists in denying that he still maintains polygamous relations, the committee may have to go to Utah to obtain the evidence to prove or disprove his claim. There is no question as to Mr. Roberts having three wives. He has admitted that fact, but he contends that his offense was condoned by the amnesties which have been issued to such offenders. As, however, these amnesties applied only to polygamists who put away their plural wives and lived with one wife only, the real question is whether Mr. Roberts has complied with that condition. If he has not done so he is still under the ban of the law and would be out of his place as a lawmaker. He would be in the position which the apostle condemned as it appeared among the Jews:

MR. BRIGHAM H. ROBERTS

Thou that makest thy boast of the law, through breaking the law dishonorest thou God (Rom. 2: 23)?

Wanted the Flag Saved

A patient in a hospital at Cumberland, Md., recently gave evidence of his love for the flag, at a time when his thoughts might naturally have been engrossed with other matters. He was a sailor, who had met with an accident on the railroad. While on his way to Baltimore to join his ship, his foot had been caught between two cars and badly crushed. He was carried to the hospital, where the injured member was examined by the surgeons. They decided that amputation was necessary. The patient made no objection, but asked them as a special favor to spare the flag. On his leg, just above the crushed foot, was a well-executed tattoo mark, representing the Stars and Stripes. The patient's first words on recovering consciousness, were an inquiry whether the flag had been saved, and when he was told that it had, he seemed consoled for the loss of his foot. There can be no doubt of his patriotism. It would be well if the Christian had always the same concern about his own proof of service to Christ, so that whatsoever was said against him, none would challenge his claim to be his servant.

Henceforth let no man trouble me: for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus (Gal. 6: 17).

A Divorce Set Aside

A Washington (D.C.) journal reports a curious coincidence in one of the law courts of that city. A few days ago, Justice Barnard, sitting in a Court of Equity, set aside a decree he had himself pronounced in the same court, earlier in the week. It appears that a young couple, well known in Washington society, had a dispute. The trouble increased until at last the husband left his home and went to live in Colorado. The wife made no effort to find him, but two years after his departure, applied for a divorce, on the ground of desertion. The evidence was heard and the case stood over for the justice's decision. Then the wife's sister interested herself in the case and succeeded in reconciling the estranged couple. The husband telegraphed to his wife to join him in his new home and she set off at once. The justice, knowing nothing of this reconciliation, pronounced a decree of divorce. But when the decree was published, the lady who had acted as peacemaker acquainted him with the facts and assured him that neither of the parties then desired a divorce. Thereupon the decree was set aside. Few divorce cases have so satisfactory an ending, but as with other quarrels, that is because so few people try to prove themselves worthy of the blessing Christ pronounced on peacemakers.

Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God (Matt. 5: 9).

COPYRIGHT, 1899, BY MARIETTA HOLLEY

CHAPTER III.

Samantha Visits Chicago

DOROTHY had never seen Niagara Falls or Saratoga, so we went a few milds out of our way that she might see Saratoga's monster hotels, the biggest in the world; and take a drink of the healin' waters of the springs that gushes up so different right by the side of each other, showin' what a rich reservoir the earth is, if we only knew how to tap it, and where.

We didn't stay at Saratoga only over one train; but drove through the broad handsome streets, and walked through beautiful Congress Park, and then away to Niagara Falls.

It wuz a bright moonlight night when we stood on the bridge not far from the tarven where we had our sup—dinner. And Dorothy and Miss Meechim wuz almost speechless with awe and admiration, they said "Oh, how sublime! Oh! how grand!" as they see the enormous body of water sweepin' down that immense distance. The hull waters of the hull chain of Lakes, or inland Seas sweepin' down in one great avalanche of water.

I wanted dretfully to go and see the place where the cunning and wisdom of man has set a trap to ketch the power of that great liquid Geni, who has ruled it over his mighty watery kingdom sence the creation, and I spoze always calculated to: throwin' men about, and drawin' 'em down into its whirlpool jest like forest leaves or blades of grass.

Who would have dremp chainin' down that resistless, mighty force and make it bile tea-kettles; and light babys to their trundle beds, and turn coffee mills, and light up meetin' houses, and draw canal boats and propel long trains of cars. How it roared and took on when the subject wuz first broke to it. But it had to yield, as the twentieth century approached and the millennium drew nigh; men not so very big boned either, but knowin' quite a lot, jest chained that great roarin' obstropulous Geni, and has made it do good work. After rulin' the centuries with a high hand nobody dastin' to go nigh it, it wuz that powerful and awful in its might and magesty, it has been made to serve, jest as the Bible sez:

"He that is mightiest amongst you shall be your servant," or words to that effect.

But it is a sight, I spoze, to see all the performances they had to go through, the hard labor of years and years, to persuade Niagara to do what they had planned for it to do.

But as I say, this great giant is chained by one foot, as it were, and is doin' good day's works, and no knowin' how much more will be put on it to do when the rest of its strength is buckled down to work. All over the great Empire State, mebby, he will have to light the evenin' lamps, and cook the mornin' meals, and bring acrost the continent the food he cooks, and turn the mills that grinds the flour to make the bread he toasts, and sow the wheat that makes the flour. And talk for all the millions of people and play their music for them—I d'no what he won't be made to do, and Josiah don't, but I spoze it is a sight to see the monster trap they built to hold this great Force. We wanted to go there, but hadn't time.

But to resoom backwards a spell. Miss Meechim and Dorothy was perfectly awe-struck to see and hear the Falls, and I didn't wonder.

But I had seen it before with my beloved pardner by my side, and it seemed to me as if Niagara missed him, and its great voice seemed to roar out: "Where is Josiah? Where is Josiah? Why are you here without him? Swish, swash, roar, roar, Where is Josiah? Where? Roar! Where?"

Oh, the emotions I had as I stood there under the cold light of the moon, cold waters rushin' down into a cold tomb; cold as a frog the hull thing seemed, and full of a infinite desolation. But I knew that if Love had stood there by my side, personified ifi a small-sized figger, the hull seen would have bloomed rosy. Yes, as I listened to the awe-struck, admirin' axents of the twain with me, them words of the Poet come back to me: "How the light of the hull life dies when love is gone."

THE FALLS SEEMED TO ROAR: "WHERE IS JOSIAH?"

"Oh," sez Miss Meechim, as we walked back to the tarven, takin' in the sooveneer store on the way, "Oh, what a immense body of water! how tumultous it sweeps down into the abyss below!" I answered mekanically, for I thought of one who wuz also tumultous at times, but after a good meal subsided down into quiet, some as the waters of Niagara did after a spell.

And Dorothy sez, "How the grand triumphal march of the great Lakes, as they hurry oneards towards the ocean, shakes the very earth in their wild haste."

I sez mekanically, "Yes indeed!" but my thoughts wuz of one who had often pranced 'round and tromped, and even kicked in his haste, and shook the woodhouse floor. Ah, how, how could I forgit him.

And at the sooveneer stores, ah, how I wuz reminded of him there! how he had cautioned me aginst buyin' in that very spot: how he had stood by me till he had led me forth empty-handed towards the tarven. Ah well, I tried to shake off my gloom, and Tommy waked up soon after our return (Aronette, good little creeter! had stayed right by him), and we all had a good meal, and then embarked on the sleeping car. I laid Tommy out carefully on the top shelf, and covered him up, and then partially ondressed and stretched my own weary frame on my own shelf and tried to woo the embrace of Morphine, but I could not, so I got up and kinder sot, and took out my pad and writ a little more in my letter to my help.

Sez I, "Philury, if Josiah takes cold, steep some lobely and catnip, half and half: if he won't take it Ury must hold him and you pour it down. Don't sell yourself short of eggs. Josiah loves 'em and they cost high out of season. Don't let the neighbors put upon him because I went off and left him. Give my love to Waitstill Webb and Elder White, give it to 'em simeltaneous and together, tell 'em how much I think on 'em both for the good they're doin'. Tell Aryilly I often think of her and what she has went through and pity her. Give a hen to the widder Gowdey for Christmas. Let Josiah carry it, or no, I guess Ury had better, I am away and folks might talk. The ketch on the outside suller door had better be fixed so it can't blow open. Josiah's thickest socks are in the under draw, and the pieces to mend his overhalls in a calico bag behind the clothespress door. Guard that man like the apples in your eyes, Philury, and you'll be glad bime by. So no more. To be resoomed."

Agin I laid down and tried to sleep: in vain, my thoughts, my heart wuz in Jonesville, so I riz up agin as fur as I could and took my handkerchief pin offen the curtain where I had pinned it and looked at it long and sadly. I hadn't took any picture of Josiah with me. I hadn't but one and wuz afraid I should lose it. He hain't been willin' to be took sence he wuz bald, and I knew that his picture wuz engraved on my heart in deeper lines than any camera or kodak could do it. But I had a handkerchief pin that looked like him, I bought it to the World's Fair, it wuz took of Columbus. You know Columbus wuz a changeable lookin' critter in his pictures, if he looked like all on

DOROTHY AND TOMMY AT THE SPRING

'em he must have been fitty, and Miss Columbus must have had a hard time to git along with him. This looked like Josiah, only with more hair, but I held my thumb over the top, and I could almost hear Josiah speak. I might have had a lock of his hair to wep' over, but my devoted love kep' me from takin' it. I knew that he couldn't afford to spare a hair with winter comin' on. But I felt that I must compose myself, for my restless moves had waked Tommy up. The sullen roar of the wheels underneath me kep' kinder hunchin' me up every little while if I forgot myself for a minute, twittin' me that my pardner had let me go away from him. I almost thought I heard once or twice the echo, Grass Widder! soundin' out under the crunchin' roar and rattle of the wheels, but then I turned right over on my shelf and sez in my agony of spirit: Not that—not grass."

And Tommy called down, "What say, grandma?" And I reached up and took holt of his soft, warm little hand and sez: "Go to sleep, Tommy, grandma is here."

"You said sunthin' about grass, grandma."

And I sez, "How green the grass is in the spring, Tommy, under the orchard trees and in the door-yard. How pretty the sun shines on it and the moonlight, and grandpa is there, Tommy, and Peace and Rest and Happiness, and my heart is there too, Tommy," and I most sobbed the last words.

And Tommy sez, "Hain't your heart here too, grandma? You act as if you wuz 'fraid. You said when I prayed jest now that God would watch over us."

"And he will Tommy, he will take care of us and of all them I love." And leanin' my weary and mournful sperit on that thought, and leanin' hard, I finally dropped off into the arms of Morphine. Well, we reached Chicago with no further coincidence and put up to a big hotel kep' by Mr. and Miss Parmer. It seems that besides all the money I had been provided with, Thomas J. had gin a lot of money to Miss Meechim to use for me if she see me try to stent myself any, and he had gin particular orders that we should go to the same hotels they did and fare jest as well, so they wanted to go to the tarven kep' by Mr. Parmerses folks, and we did

I felt real kinder mortified to think that I didn't pay no attention to Mr. and Miss Parmer; I didn't see 'em at all whilst I wuz there. But I spoze she wuz busy helpin' her hired girls, it must take a sight of work to cook for such a raft of folks, and it took the most of his time to provide.

She is about as handsome a woman as they make, and is aunt on her own side to she that wuz Julia Grant, a real pretty girl she is, and I wuz glad to think that I happened to see her and the young chap she had just married, Prince Michael—sunthin' or ruther—I can't to save me think of his last name, it sounds some like cantankerous, but hain't that, so I'll call him Prince Michael.

It happened jest right that I passed through the lobby of the tarven (I spoze that it is lobely, but they call it lobby for short), well, I wuz jest passin' through the lobely, leadin' Tommy, and I see that there wuz a big crowd and a excitement ragin', and I asked a bystander what wuz the matter, and she sez, pintin' to a handsome young couple:

"That is Prince Michael C—— I won't say what—and Princess Julia."

Sez I, "You don't say that that is she that wuz Julia Grant?"

"Yes," sez she.

I said not a word back but advanced right towards 'em, a smilin' in warm welcome. The crowd fell back, they recognized the nobility of my mean. My head wuz held up in a sort of a magestic way, my green braize veil hung down one side of my bunnet graceful, the tabs of my mantilly hung most to the floor in front, and my umbrell was grasped in one hand, whilst with the other I held Tommy. The crowd fairly smiled, they admired me so, as I advanced onward, and sez I to 'em both, a holdin' out my hand—a shaking hands with her first:

"I want to wish you joy, lots of it, the best of earth's happiness and a long useful life," sez I, "the hull American nation feels that we have a right to take a warm interest in you, Juley, on account of your grandpa on your own side, and to wish you every blessin' that Heaven can shower down onto your happy heart."

"WHAT SAY, GRANDMA?" TOMMY CALLED

For she did look happy and sweet; anybody could see that she had married the man she loved. And he looked fairly blissful in his glad and proud content. "And you, Prince Michael," sez I, as I shook his hand, "the best wish that I could wish you has come to pass. You have won the heart and hand of a real American princess, a sweet girl who will be a honor to Rushy or any other nation, big or little."

They both bowed and thanked me real sweet and pleasant. A manly good lookin' chap he would have been if he had been Mr. John Smith, from Smith's Corners, and looked just as well and no better because he wuz a prince from Rushy. Sez I, "One by one our sweetest and prettiest girls go over the big waters into the older world and some on 'em hain't used well by them that takes them there, and," sez I, "now I warn you, Prince, that if you don't do well by Juley, not only the hull American nation will be up in arms about it, but you will bring down onto your head the just indignation of Josiah Allen's wife and Josiah."

He looked awe-struck, as well he might, and sez he in a earnest, tender way, "I will do well by her, I promise you, Josiah Allen's wife." And he put out a manly, straightforward hand, which I grasped and said:

"Well, so do. But you're takin' her to a kind of a dangerous place; the air 'round the Rushen throne hain't never been called over and above healthy, and I want you to watch over her like the apples in your eyes, and if you see dynamite and fire-crackers liable to bust out under her feet I want you to take her up and bring her home out of danger."

He looked kinder grave, as if he didn't really like what I had said about Rushy and dynamite. And I see in a minute that I had put the wrong foot forrerd, I ortn't to have said a word against his country, specially when I felt that our own nation had its weak spots—yes, indeed! So I spoke up to once and sez:

"Mebby you think that she wouldn't be out of danger here, mebby you think that our nation is layin' up a lot of dynamite to bust out before long in a conflict between Capital and Labor. I can see," sez I, "the growing luxury and wealth of the few, and the poverty and discontent of the many, and the mistakes of the old world that is being repeated in the new. But," sez I, "Jonesville is a oasis of safety—Labor and Capital has never sot up a conflict on our doorsteps, Josiah works most as hard as his help, and Ury and Philury has the same things to eat we do. You can bring her to Jonesville any time, safety is there and a warm and proud welcome for you both."

He smiled real pleasant, and the bystanders did too; they wuz tickled to see such good manners combined with such a powerful intellect.

And then I turned and sez to her, "Don't you forgit, Juley, when you're in a foreign court with Kings and Zars and Emperors makin' you all day's visits, and walkin' round you with their crowns on, and leanin' on their septers, don't you forgit, not once, that you too come of a royal line, that your grandpa on your own side wuz a king in his own right, and your pa is walkin' right in his pa's footsteps, and the hull American nation is behind you, for you to lean upon if you git tired. Some of our American Princesses and Countesses git dretful tired over here, and though I hope you won't, still you may."

She gently said that she wouldn't forget. She felt deeply every word I had said, and sez I in conclusion:

"If I had mistrusted that I should see you, I should have brought you a nice weddin' present, I have got a bed-quilt that I pieced up myself, flag pattern, red, white and blue. How appropriate it would have been, and I would have loved to had you shown it off in Rushy. It would have looked well for years to have used for your best, or to have thrown it sort o' careless like over your throne when you two sot down on it every day. But it is in Jonesville," sez I, "and can't be helped, and I presoom that you have had bed-quilts gin to you in all patterns, and so good bye, and God bless you," sez I, and parted away from them.

"OH! THE BELLERIN' OF THEM CATTLE"

Well, we all took a long ride round Chicago; Miss Meechim wanted to see the most she could in the shortest time. So we driv through Lincoln Park, so beautiful as to be even worthy of its name, and one or two other beautiful parks and boolevards and Lake Shore drives. And we went at my request to see the Woman's Temperance Building; I had got considerable tired by that time, and, oh, how a woman's tired heart longs for the only true rest, the heart rest of love. As we went up the beautiful, open-work alleviator, I felt, oh, that this thing was swinging me off to Jonesville, acrost the waste of sea and land. But immegiately the thought come "Duty's apron-strings," and I wuz calm agin.

But all the time I wuz there talkin' to them noble wimmen, dear to me because they're tacklin' the most needed work under the heavens, wagin' the most holy war, and tacklin' it without any help as you may say from Uncle Sam, good-natered, shiftless old creeter, well meanin', I believe, but jest led in blinders up and down the earth by the Whiskey Power that controls State and Church to-day, and they may dispute it if they want to, but it is true as the book of Job, and fuller of biles and all other impurities and tribulations than Job ever wuz, and heaven only knows how it is goin' to end.

But to resoom backwards. Lofty and inspirin' wuz the talks I had with Mrs. Stevens and Miss Gordon and Miss Frye, and all the other noble ones on whom it seems as if the shinin' mantilly of the risen Leader has fell, whose names are on the list of temperance here and the Lamb's Book of Life. How our hearts burnt within us, and how the "blest tie that binds," seemd to link us clost together; when, alas! in my soarinest moments, as I looked off with my mind's eye onto a dark world beginnin' to be belted and lightened by the White Ribbon, my heart fell almost below my belt ribbin, as I thought of one who had talked light about my W. T. C. U. doin's, but wuz at heart a believer and a abstainer and a member of the Jonesville Sons of Temperance.

A little later we stood and looked on one of the great grain elevators, histin' up in its strong grip hull fields of wheat and corn at a time. Ah! among all the wonderin' and awe-struck admiration of them about me, how my mind soared off on the dear bald head afar, who had so often sowed the spring and reaped the autumn ears on the hills and dales of Jonesville, sweet land! dear one there, when should I see thee again?

"HISTIN' UP HULL FIELDS O' WHEAT AND CORN"

And as we walked through one of the enormous stock yards, oh! how the bellerin' of them cattle confined there, put me in mind of the choice of my youth and joy of my middle age. Wuz he too bellerin' at that moment, shet up as he wuz by environin' circumstances from her he worshiped.

And so it went on, sad things put me in mind of him and joyful things, all, all speakin' of him, and how, how wuz I to brook the seperation? But I will cease to harrow the reader's tender bosom. Dry your tears, reader, I will proceed onwards.

The next day we sot off for California, via Salt Lake and Denver.

(To be Continued)

The Christian Herald for 1900

Never have we made more elaborate arrangements for the best the land affords than for the coming year. If THE CHRISTIAN HERALD was worth $1.50 a year in the past, it will be worth double the amount in 1900. With a largely increased circulation—now 316,000—we are enabled to give a largely improved paper, and we mean to do it. You cannot afford to be without THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for 1900.

Many Views on Saloon Money

PROFITS ON DRINKS
PRICE OF DRUNKARDS GRAVES
COST OF LOST SOULS
DIVIDENDS ON BROKEN HOMES
RETURNS ON PAUPERIZED FAMILIES
VALUE OF CONFISCATED BEDDINGRINGS AND BABIES SHOES

The Problem on the Frontiers—Voices From the Mines and the Cattle-Camps—A "Distress Fund" Discussed

AS WIDE a variety of opinions seem to exist on the all-absorbing question: "Shall the church accept the saloon-keeper's money in aid of its spiritual work?" as exists in the character, culture and occupation of the writers of the hundreds of letters that come to us upon the subject. This discussion has certainly demonstrated the fact that God's people, from Hudson's Bay to the Gulf of Mexico, are thoroughly alive to the importance of the tremendous issues involved in the attitude of the church toward the saloon-keeper.

A Miner's Opinion My life is isolated, and I am somewhat deprived of church advantages, but I'm interested in this question. Listen, men! do not take it. The church's acceptance makes younger men look on rum-sellers as friends of the church. I live among a people generous to a fault and who respond to every appeal; and I see saloon-keepers give, and give freely to good causes. But I think: "Ah, the cost of such gifts to the families of wretched drunkards!" Better is a little from the Lord than much help from the devil. MINER.
Cook's Peak Mining Camp.

What a Cowboy Says Some kind soul remembered us sent us THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and that is how I know of the discussion about saloon money. We have no church or Sunday School here, as we are very few, and people call us toughs; still, I thought you would like to hear what we think about the saloon. We live far from any town. Sometimes we see not a visitor's face in two months. Bacon, coffee and beans are our rations, three times a day. We go to town from this dead place maybe once every three months, and stay over night. Do you think that we want to spend that one night in a church, hearing a preacher tell us how wicked we are? Now, I am a temperance man, though not a prohibitionist, and I like not to make my home in a saloon, but I need something that is bright and cheerful. If you could but see the hunger for good entertainment and good reading matter in our lonely cattle camps, you would better understand the temptation the saloon presents to us. I've seen saloon-keepers do kind things. Last winter, when I was in town, a shivering, barefoot boy walked in front of me. A man clapped him on the shoulder, asked his story, took him into a store, dressed him up and said: "Light out!" That man was a rumseller. You will find among them and among us cowboys some noble hearts—if we are toughs. The money won't hurt the church, and it will help drunkards' widows and orphans, if the church will give it to them.
Sexton, Kan. COWBOY.

Converted the Saloon-keeper When I became pastor in a town, I learned that my predecessor, by not saying much against the saloon, had received two dollars from one of the saloon-keepers. I worked and talked freely against the saloon. I did not get the two dollars. But with another preacher I visited him, and talked about religion and giving up the saloon. He said he had a mother in glory, and when he died he wanted to go there, too. He confessed the saloon was wrong, and said he was going to quit it. He did, inside of four months, preach against the saloon. Do not court their money; but if they offer it freely, accept it and turn it refuse the saloon-keeper's money, refuse the money of everybody who helps to make the saloon business possible.

Chemawa, Ore. J. B.

Built by Saloon-Keepers and Gamblers In 1856 my father, a built a church in the mines of California that cost $1,500. The money was contributed by saloon-keepers, gamblers and the public generally to defray resulted in over forty conversions, besides reclaiming many backsliders; over sixty accessions to the church, all told. Was God with him in the work? Such soul-stirring meetings as were held in that church I do not see now. What we do, let us do for the glory of God. How can we reach a man if we insult though his soul was more precious than a hair-splitting opinion. God permits him to live, "perhaps for a purpose." Take the money and use it in trying to save his soul.

McMinnville, Ore. E. C. HEATH.

Saloon-Keepers Would Abandon the Business I think many saloon-keepers would quit the business if they found their money could not enter into any benevolent enterprise.
Jersey, Ohio. MELLA E. P. WHITEHEAD.

How Shall Most Good Result? Christians, can we do more good with his money than ... doing? If so, accept and use it for the ... or charity and for ... laws harder than ever. W. A. SWIFT.

St. Clair, Mo. Presiding Elder.

As a Personal Question Let ... ally, "Can I ... supported in part by the price of the soul of my father or husband or brother or son?"

A Pagan's Good Example The saloon-keeper's money is no worse than the $132,000,000 of revenue received by the government from the manufacture of spirits and fermented liquors in 18... vast sums anterior to that date ...

THE TWO STREETS

I

TWO streets there are in many towns a foul one and a fair
In one good cheer and peace abound in one a dark despair
In one the light of love is shed in one grief's bitter tear
The name of one of these is Bread the name of one is Beer

II

In Bread Street there are busy men and happy homes and wives
In Beer Street the degraded den and sad and broken lives
In Bread Street, Plenty sings her song and Labor chants his rhyme
In Beer Street Want is joined with Wrong and Idleness with Crime

III

O men and mothers, strive to do all in your power to make
The children shun the ones who brew but love the one who bak.

One street there is their feet should tread
And one their feet should fear:
The name of one of these is "Bread."
The name of one is "Beer."

Christ and the Money-changers When Christ drove the money-changers out of the temple, he did not ask them if it would wound their feelings to go out; he chastised them for wrongdoing. Would the ... made better by our sharing their spoils with them? Would it not encourage them to steal or gamble more? The saloon-keeper ... sympathy. How much feeling has he for the wives and mothers of the men he ...
York, Mont. S. E. D.

Accept the Money to Fight the Traffic I would accept ... We cannot do otherwise and follow in the footsteps of our Master. We are taught in God's Word to hate the sin but love the sinner. I solicited fifteen dollars from three saloon-keepers last year for church work, informing them that it was to be ... I accepted fifty cents on my salary from a saloon-... reason to believe it would have been a spiritual death-blow to this noble Christian woman, and the height of discourtesy on my part to have refused it.
REV. B. E. S.
M. E. Church,
Clinton, Minn.

Buy Out the Saloon-keeper Take it by ... Thanks be to God, we have no saloons in Perry, but any kind of money would be acceptable in our Y. M. C. A. and church work. Nothing will draw a man closer to God than to learn to give cheerfully. We can buy out the penitent saloon-keeper, start him in some honest business, and then, by votes, compel others to give up the business.
W. A. FISH.

His Gift Shows the Church's Weakness Accept the saloon-keeper's money. But the very fact that he is willing to give indicates that the church is not making an aggressive fight against the saloon and kindred wrongs. C. R. KIMBALL.
Aberdeen, S. D.

Question Implies Doubt The very question implies doubt, and the church cannot ... How can any man hope that his little gifts may do good while he continues in his business of death and destruction?
Statesville, N. C. C. M. STEELE.

A Salvation Army Captain Speaks Yes, take all you can get. We often hold our meetings in front of the saloons, in the street, and always denounce the business, not the saloon-keeper. We warn people not to enter the saloons, telling them that that way leads to destruction. Still, some saloon-keepers—not all, by any means—will give their money to help us in our work.
Vancouver, Wash. FRANK S. GILLETTE.
Captain Salvation Army.

Redeem the Money from Evil Use ... but in the evil uses made of it, and the quicker it is restored unto the Lord, if it has been used wrongfully, the better. The sooner it is turned into the Lord's treasury the quicker its ...
Indianapolis, Ind. Mission Worker.

Glad of the Discussion ... of the church's relation to the saloon—is being thoroughly considered. I am an old man, but I would fain live to see an impassable barrier between the two.
Branchton, Can. W. TAIT.

How the Rum-Seller Withdrew His Aid I belonged to a Congregational Mission church at Chippewa Lake, Mich. We organized with seven members; the Missionary Society sent us a minister, but we had to try and raise part of his salary. Most of us being poor, we had to solicit help outside the church, and not wishing to miss or favor any, the saloon-keeper was asked to help us, and he gave one dollar a month. So it went on until a temperance wave struck the village, and the good people and the minister did all they could to keep the saloon-keeper from re... made war on the church and cancelled his subscription. Let the church declare war against the traffic and I believe there will be no money coming from the saloon or the church. C. L.
Bullrun, Ore.

Approved One Minister's Acceptance Several years ago, an old and highly respect... if the minister had refused it, that it would ... been like a slap in the face to the saloon-... I any sympathy with the business, but I ... known saloon-keepers that were not ... bad, just as I have known professed ... that were not wholly good.
Ludington, Mich. F. C. EWING.

Pray for the Giver I am an old lady of ... years, an inmate of "H... have been much inter... Christian life. MRS. MELINDA TWADDELL.
Old Ladies' Home, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

The amount received from saloon-keepers ...

Total number of drunkards buried during last fiscal year ..... Ten

Enclosed please find our treasurer's check for $5.50, your portion of the Distress Fund.
Duluth, Minn. L. A. M.

The Drunkard's Responsibility I have not seen one word of censure of the men that spend their money at saloons and so starve their families. I think that is as bad a crime as the saloon-keeper's. If you

Saloon Money as Distress Fund Many say: Take it all, and relieve those who have suffered by his business. Suppose one had just buried in a drunkard's grave a brother, father or husband, and a committee comes from the church and says: "We have heard of your sad affliction and have come to offer substantial aid," slip an envelope into your hand and depart. You open it and find ... A Christmas Talk at Home ...

By Margaret E. Sangster

IN my childhood it was not uncommon in Presbyterian households to pass Christmas by as if it were an ordinary day, giving the holiday prominence to the first of January. We kept New Year's Day in our home—my father being a Presbyterian elder—with great ceremony and distinction; having our gifts on New Year's morning, and devoting the entire time from waking to sleeping to a happy domestic festival. I had reached my twelfth birthday before as a family we swung into the Christmas whirl of joy and gladness, and felt in our hearts the intensity of pleasure which is the very core of Christmas. The children did it; for the mother, bless her gentle soul, could never long refuse their reasonable requests; and they convinced her that when the whole world was celebrating the coming of the Christ-Child to this old earth of ours, there was something out of gear when any set of people remained outside the procession. From the time when we began to celebrate Christmas until now, the strange, deep sweetness of it has more and more been growing; more and more is it the wide world's holiday, ushered in with peal of songs and greetings and hand-clasps, with spice and myrrh, and interchange of gifts; while the flame of the Yule-log is lighted on palace hearths and by peasant firesides around the globe.

. . .

I SAY, from the time when we began; not forgetting that the world has been keeping Christmas ever since the early centuries of church life and love. But we live in a very wonderful century and the latter half of it has been marked by an amazing onward march, especially in the advance of Christian missions. The Christmas tapers will twinkle this year in Japan, in Korea, in Bombay, in Madura in Madras, in South Africa, in Northern China; and "Merry Christmas." will be lisped and chanted and shouted in many dialects and tongues, for, thank God! the words of the familiar hymn is being fulfilled in our sight that

> Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
> Doth his successive journeys run.

Christmas, annually returning, marks a higher and higher ascension in the onward and upward march of the Master's conquering host.

. . .

THE CORE, the very central meaning of Christmas, is the joy of childhood around the Child of Bethlehem. "Except ye become as little children," said the Lord, "ye cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven." What are the characteristics of children? They are simple-hearted. They take no anxious thought for the morrow. They are loyal. They are forgiving. They are obedient. A small thing gives a child great happiness. A large thing would give him or her no greater joy than a small thing. Your small daughter will be far gladder over her new doll on Christmas morning, your little son will be happier over his new skates, than either would be if assured that a thousand or two dollars had been placed, to roll up interest for them, in the savings bank. For to childhood the doll and the skates are tangible playthings, and childhood time is playtime. Mere money to a child is as valueless as were the sticks and straws which the man with the muck rake heaped together in Bunyan's dream, and the child cares as yet only for what is worth while.

. . .

I ALWAYS feel that we defraud the children of a part of their Christmas joy when we present them with stockings and shoes, overcoats and new frocks, and other articles of necessary daily use as Christmas gifts. Intelligent children understand that their parents will provide food and raiment for them if they can, and so when the number of their presents is augmented by wearing apparel they are brought face to face with a sort of lowered Christmas. We defraud them too, and this in a baser way, when we so train them that their most prominent sentiment about the dear holiday is that it will bring them new possessions. "What did I get?" is not the question which should live in any memory after Christmas has come and gone; but rather, "What did I give?"

The core of Christmas is not alone in the joy of childhood. That is one very beautiful part of it. Another bit of its innermost meaning is in the universal brotherhood of the season, and this grows naturally from our standing closer than ever before about our Elder Brother. The grudging spirit is out of harmony with Christmas songs; the churl must feel especially solitary when everybody else is expressing kindness and gladness, and laughter ripples like the waves of a dancing brook, and each is thinking how he can most please and best satisfy the other.

. . .

WE SHOULD guard against any temptation to selfishness when the keynote of the great swelling carol which the angels taught us first, is wholly unselfish love. Our homes with their Christmas trees, their Christmas dinners, their merry hearted children, their closer drawing together of the dear ones, have Christ in them, the centre and source of our joy. But for Christ there would be no Christmas. It is because he has said, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock," and we have heard his voice, and opened the door, that our houses are overflowing with love.

The kindred naturally come first; but do not let us forget the lonely and unfriended, the strangers in the pew; the girl away from her people, earning her bread in the shop or the office: the man who cannot afford a journey to his far away home. Every one who has a home should take care that at certain joyful seasons it is for a meal, or for an evening, sufficiently elastic to admit within its charmed circle somebody who is homeless. The homeless people are not all vagrants. Many of them are hard-working men and women, who are the more desolate when joyful times come around, that they have no right to be in them.

The angels ushered in that first gray Christmas morn in Judea. We have read this, and said it so often, that it does not impress us as it should. For

> Still through the cloven skies they come
> With peaceful wings unfurled,
> And still celestial music floats
> O'er all the weary world.

Just fancy what it would be if our eyes were opened, and we saw, in the soft and trembling dawn, over our smoky cities, over our dreaming hills, over our farm steads in their white peace, the sudden unfolding of radiant wings, the bending down of angels in tender brooding care. Suppose our dull ears could hear them again, singing from out the rifted skies: "Glory to God in the Highest!" I believe they are ever near us, these ministers of God. I believe they are always doing his errands, and whenever Jesus shall need them to herald any coming of his to any saint, to any believer, I am sure there are angels waiting to do the Lord's bidding. We must wait to see and to hear, till the day break and the shadows flee away.

The core of Christmas is our sincere acceptance, after all, of the dear Christ who took our flesh upon him and came to Bethlehem and to Calvary. He is always coming to us, though now he dwells beside his Father, and no longer, weary and burdened, walks our earthly ways. In many experiences, in the hour of prayer, in our study of the Word, in our bliss at the altar and the hearth, in our Christmas rejoicing, Jesus comes to us, and we may know of his presence, and have communion with him, for having loved his own, he loves them to the end.

Only they who love the Lord may fully enter into the blessedness of a Merry Christmas.

> Oh Bethlehem! Oh Bethlehem!
> We'll hear thy choirs again.
> 'Glory to God on high! on earth
> Peace and good will to men.'
>
> The countless peoples of the skies
> Shall seize the uplifted song,
> And ages over ages pass
> The tidal psalm along.

"WE FASHION DAINTY RAIMENT"

WE fashion dainty raiment
For the dearest of our band,
Who pledges to her true love soon
Her golden heart and hand.
Pure gold she is, our darling,
Our treasure and our pride;
We fashion dainty raiment
For the wearing of the bride.

A very pearl of girlhood,
So sweet and fair she seems;
Her face is like an angel's,
Her hair with sunlight gleams;
Her foot across the threshold
Brings ever joy and mirth;
She brought her parents blessings
From the hour of her birth.

For her we set our stitches,
So fairy-like and small;
For her we plan and 'broider,
And our tender wishes fall
Like dew upon the garments,
In frill and puff and lace;
Our thoughts of gentlest kindness
In their snowy folds we trace.

We fashion dainty raiment
For the dearest of our band,
Who soon unto her true love
Will plight her heart and hand.
O God go with and bless her,
Our darling and our pride;
God give her every precious gift;
Our sweet and winsome bride.

ALICE MAYNARD.

'Tis Love

'TIS love that makes the world so bright
And takes away life's care;
It plants the blooming roses, too,
On cheeks to make them fair;
And bids the lustre in the eye
To shine with wondrous light,
And drives the coldness from the heart,
To warm it with delight.

It clothes the criticising tongue
With words of mercy sweet,
And little faults will be unseen,
When loving hearts shall meet.
The whole world brighter seems to grow
When love appearing speaks,
And love-warmed hearts find peace and rest
For which mankind e'er seeks.

—MARTHA SHEPARD LIPPINCOTT.
Moorestown, N. J.

Our Letter-Box

—JAMES JONES. A man does not offer his arm to a woman in the daytime, nor when walking with her in the evening, unless she is old or infirm. Of course a husband may always give his arm to his wife. Even married people do not walk arm in arm by daylight at present.

—CHILDLESS MOTHER. Why not adopt a little one? Not to take your own child's place; but to give to a small, homeless baby love, and kindness, and a good home; and to soothe your own heartache and relieve the desolation of your hearth. Think the matter over, and pray for direction.

—AMANDA R. G. A nice dessert, and one which may be made in a hurry, is called "Fruit Surprise." Take oranges, bananas, dates, figs, and citron. Leave the dates whole, cut the other fruit into small pieces and pile in a glass dish, stirring all together with a spoon; sift sugar over it and serve with whipped cream.

—DOROTHY. Your own pretty name would surely suit your baby girl. If you do not wish to repeat it, however, why not call her Gladys, or Margaret, Elizabeth, Frances, Helen, Jessie, or any pretty name. Mary is a beautiful name and always a favorite. I would not give my daughter her grandmother's name if I very much disliked it, but Anne seems to me both stately and sweet.

—JENNIE P. I sympathize with you in the death of your pet. One becomes very much attached to a dog, which is of all animals most companionable. You know Sir Walter Scott's feeling—that the worst of loving a dog was that his life was so short, and it was such a heart-break to lose him. I do hope you will soon have another dog, which will take its place, even if you do not love him as you did the one you write about.

—MOTHER. At present little children are instructed to say Mother and Father rather than Mamma and Papa. Pa and Ma are not in favor. Daddy is, however, promoted to a favorite position among elegant and well-bred people. Mammy the same. Children say, Yes Mother, No Father, rather than Yes Ma'am and No Sir. If a child does not understand [illegible] not "What" when [illegible]

THE TOUCHSTONE

A NEW SERIAL STORY

BY HELEN SHIPTON

THE ascent of the steep hill was a little trying for a young man just recovering from an illness. Douglas Lingard was obliged to halt to get his breath when he was about half-way to the summit.

Just before him was a traveling tinker's wagon, brought to a standstill by the same cause. It looked a ponderous affair enough with its roof and chimney like a tiny dwelling-house, and the steps by which the owners climbed into it, with various other impedimenta, slung underneath.

The miserable little horse—hardly more than a pony—between the shafts, was manifestly incapable of the task to which it had been set. It stood resting, its sides shaken by its panting breath, its knees bent and its gaunt head hanging forward. A gipsy-looking woman stood beside it, patting and talking to it in encouraging tones; and half-a-dozen ragged children skirmished about the roads.

As the young man came up the woman seemed to decide that it was time to make another effort, and at a word from her the children gathered round the cart and lent their small strength to push it forward, while she for her part clutched the shaft by which she stood and shouted mingled threats and encouragement.

The poor beast did its willing, feeble best, straining against the stony hillside; but gained only about a yard and a half before it was obliged to stop again. At that rate the top of the long hill seemed as far off as the summit of Mount Blanc.

Instinctively Douglas looked round for some man who might be remonstrated with; but if there was a male owner of horse, cart, and family he was not in presence. Douglas turned to the thin, wild-looking woman, and spoke more gently than he would have done to her husband.

"I'm afraid you've got more here than you'll manage."

"I reckon we can do it, if we take our time," she answered, wiping her forehead. "We've got to, anyhow! We're going up over moor to Darley wake, and my master 's to meet us up yonder, and if we're not there as soon as he is, it'll be the worse for all of us."

She gave another half-desperate shout, and the children echoed her like young sea-gulls answering the cry of the old ones. The pony strained and tugged, but the wagon did not move; and Douglas, looking rather ashamed of himself, went 'round behind it and lent the force of his broad shoulders to the pitiful performance.

With his help, and with the fury of encouragement which the woman, seeing his action, threw into her voice and gesture, the procession got started again, and actually moved ten or twelve yards before it came perforce to a stop. A few more such efforts and the top of the hill would be gained, and then, as he knew, there was nothing more in the way of a real ascent in the four miles of winding road that led to Darley village.

Another combined push and strain, and another start was made that carried them another dozen yards. Manlike, Douglas was warming to the task he had begun half-heartedly, and threw all his strength into it, as if credit and living depended upon getting this tinker's equipage to the top of Brentwood Hill.

A man climbed the stile at the top of the high bank and sprang lightly down into the road. Douglas could not turn to look, but he was aware that the newcomer stopped short and then drew nearer, and a well-known voice said, "Gently, Earl! You'll do yourself a mischief."

The tone was so simple and ordinary that it seemed to bridge over the gulf of five years and more. And as he spoke Caryl stepped beside his brother, and without more words began to push also.

Douglas's heart gave a leap. For the moment he pushed on more strenuously than ever, but it was not on that account that he had not breath enough to speak. And by the time the power of speech had come back the instinct of reserve had come also. If Caryl had anything to say he was free to say it. If not, at least for this moment they were friends again.

Their united strength behind the wagon made a good deal of difference to the feeble knees in front of it. It rolled on, slowly indeed and painfully, but still it rolled, and the woman's thin shoulders were no longer bent so low on the shaft at which she still pulled.

"The writ of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals does not run apparently in these wilds?" said Caryl, glancing aside at his brother as their shoulders almost touched.

"So far as I can see, it is the man who should be run in," said Douglas in an undertone, "for cruelty to wife and children as well as beast. But even if he were here one could hardly stop to argue with him half-way up a hill like this."

"Well, no. However, here is the top, and what is to become of your friends, in the next place?"

"They will manage to reach their destination to-night, I think; there are no more hills in their way, at least. Look here! your sleeve has been against the wheel."

Douglas could not well avoid brushing the sandy soil off his brother's coat, and after that brusquely familiar gesture they could do no less than walk on together.

The pony was resting after the exertion of surmounting the crest of the hill, and they passed on and left the little group there, the woman stroking the pony's nose and looking silently after them.

It seemed absolutely necessary to say something, but perhaps neither wished to enter upon any really vital subject. Certainly both began at the same moment to make some obvious remark upon the beauty of the evening, and then both laughed and stopped short. And that instant, turning 'round a bend of the road, they came upon a sight that distracted the attention of the younger brother effectually enough, whatever it might do for the elder.

A little brown-gray stone cottage stood there, close upon the road; only parted from it by a strip of garden about a yard wide, bounded by a low stone wall.

On the flat top of this wall sat Celia Hamerton, with a baby in her arms, and a little child leaning against her knee and playing with some flowers that it seemed to have just laid upon her lap. Behind her stood the buxom young cottage-mother with arms akimbo, looking down with a fond and proud smile.

It was a pretty homely travesty of the lofty vision of more than one great painter of old-time. Caryl, as the two young men paused and lifted their hats, glanced at his brother with a little smile as if to bespeak his appreciation of the resemblance; but Celia turned and quietly put the baby into its mother's arms, and came forward to speak to them; carefully gathering up the somewhat dusty and faded nosegay with which she had been presented.

There are certain commonplaces that come first to the lips, but as Celia spoke them her eyes turned a little wistfully from one to the other, as if asking whether she might attach any special meaning to this meeting of theirs; and it seemed so natural to Douglas that she, who was always in his thoughts, should know what troubled him, that he forgot to wonder how she could have guessed that it was years since they two had walked together.

The tinker's wagon creaked slowly past them as they stood talking, and Caryl asked whether Miss Hamerton was going back to the village, and whether he might accompany her. So after another moment or two they wished Douglas good-night, and strolled down the road together, while he went on alone towards High Ashes. It meant nothing; it was a mere geographical fact that Caryl's way led towards the Dower House and his own in the opposite direction; but it was not soothing to the young man's jealous fancy.

Worrying, however, would do no good, and Douglas had that resource in his work that the busy man always has, of an occupation which keeps the mind from dwelling on a disquieting subject, when there is no practical step to be taken to solve the difficulty. He went about his work industriously, but now and again the thought of Celia would recur.

All unknown to him a discovery had been made in the little Dower House which was working in his interest. It came about one day when Celia was busy with her "houswyfe skep," those little dainty operations that had seemed to Douglas so adorable when he had watched her coming and going amongst them. To the man who longed for a home and had never had one, it seemed the very quintessence of home that pervaded the little Dower House drawing-room, when Celia's soft hands dusted and arranged the pretty trifles that had been her grandmother's, or set a great "beau-foot" in the empty fireplace; and he had much ado not to thank the little housemaid for taking her "afternoon out," when Celia herself carried in the tea.

Grosser tasks being finished, the young mistress of the garden was making potpourri, and the air was full of the musk of roses as she spread out the crimson and pink and creamy petals in a sunny window-seat.

She was singing under her breath as she did so "Go, Lovely Rose," which might have been originally suggested by her occupation; but by the time she reached

(Continued on next page.)

"Keep to Your Place and Your Place will Keep You."

Without good health we cannot keep situations or enjoy life. Most troubles originate in impure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood rich and healthy, and will help you "keep your place."

Built Up—"Was tired out, had no [illegible] It built me right up and I can eat heartily." ETTA M. HAGER, Athol, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints.

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

In California

[illegible]

HEMET LAND CO., Dept. F.
Hemet Riverside County, California.

MRS. MARY J. HOLMES' [illegible] books by mail, postpaid for 60 cents, or 15 cents for either of them. Stamps taken. Address J. S. OGILVIE PUB. CO., 55 Rose St., New York.

CARPETS FROM THE MILL
Our [illegible] Carpets, Rugs, Art Squares, Draperies, Etc. Address
JULIUS HINES & SON, Baltimore, M. D. Dept. 218.

OPIUM MORPHINE and Liquor Habit 10 to 20 [illegible] Dr. J. L. Stephens, Dept. R. 5, Lebanon, Ohio.

STAMMERING I make a legal contract to cure Stammering in FIVE DAYS or get no pay. Dixon Permanent Institute of Stammering, School, Room 50, Mass. Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

$18.00 a Week and expenses to good parties [illegible] Permanent position. Address [illegible] can find profitable employment for part time. Give references. L. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore.

Consumption, Bronchitis and Bronchial Asthma

Diseases which Cause Almost as Many Deaths as Consumption

A cold settling on [illegible]

[illegible] ly trifling cough in the morning, [illegible] feelings, followed by a sense of [illegible] or going upstairs can [illegible] chest.

[illegible] consumption and yet [illegible] tion extending through many years, I am confident that fully two-fifths of all the deaths charged to co[illegible] neither tubercles nor the bacilli germs that are [illegible]

This is a most important fact, for bronchitis is [illegible] than consumption, every case [illegible] properly treated. It is only a [illegible] as such inflammation in any other part of the boc[illegible]

Consumptive bronchitis is not curable by medicine given by the stomach, nor by those hyperder- [illegible] is only by the direct [illegible] lining of the bronchi[illegible] is ever effected. The[illegible] nor in the blood, but [illegible] there the remedies m[illegible]

Nothing but a direct application of healing medicines, antiseptics and germicides to the very seat of the disease will effect the cure of this or any other lung case, and they [illegible] ing them in a gaseou[illegible] an air cavity and ca[illegible]

perfected and first successfully applied by me. It [illegible] scientific and common-sense [illegible] s. If it fails, nothing else could [illegible]

TESTIMONIALS.

Mr. L. A. Peer, [illegible]

Edward J. Raynor, [illegible] up lumpy, yellow matter, had fever and night sweats, and was brought to my bed from which I never expected to rise again. I am now strong and able to do my work, all shortness of breath is gone, I have gained my flesh back, and can eat and sleep as well as ever. From being a perfect wreck I have been rebuilt by Dr Hunter's [illegible] wishes further particulars of my experience of this wonderful treatment, can write or call on me. I know I owe my life to it, and believe all who suffer ought to know of it."

In order to obtain Dr. Hunter's book, "The Lungs [illegible] this paper, and address Dr. Robert Hunter Associates, 417 W. 45th Street, New York.

EARN A TOILET SET

By selling 15 lbs. Baker's Teas, Etc., or sell 25 lbs. for Tea Set; [illegible] for Dresser Set; [illegible] for Silver Watch or Man's [illegible] or Bicycle; Lamp, [illegible] lbs. for Couch, [illegible] Box, Case or Peek-a-Boo Camera; 10 lbs. Gold Ring, Foot Ball or Crescent Guitar. [illegible] prepaid. W. G. Baker Dept. [illegible] Springfield, Mass.

A NEW AID FOR THE DEAF

[illegible] FREE [illegible] Address S. 6. Tiemann & Co. 107 Park Row, N. Y.

We furnish samples free to agents. [illegible] Lasts Longer Than Others. Write for Catalogue, new goods and offers. RICHARDSON MFG. CO., 6th St., Bath, N. Y.

CONTINUED FROM LAST PAGE

THE TOUCHSTONE

the last verse "Then die—" came so trippingly off the tongue that it was plain that her thoughts had wandered far away. So, indeed, they had, being now occupied with the school treat, which the old Vicar always left to be arranged by his "right hand," as he called the girl whom he had known and loved from her cradle.

Celia was wondering with a spice of malice, whether there would be any limit to Mr. Allardyce's liberality this year, considering the near approach of the election, and whether it would be quite fair to play upon that and other secondary motives to obtain the loan of the Home Close for the children's games, and other privileges to which the urchins were hardly entitled.

The cogitations came suddenly to an end, and the song with them in the middle of a bar. She had been unfolding some old newspapers, on which to spread her rose-leaves; and folded inside one of them was something that at once attracted her attention.

It was a sheet of letter paper, written closely on three sides in a hand she did not know—a square, peculiar hand, of the kind that is full of character, and yet as legible as print. It did not seem to be a letter, for it had neither opening nor concluding phrase; and Celia had read more than half of it before she came to a name she knew, or anything like a clue to its meaning.

". . . I have held my tongue, I have tried to think I did not care, but it is no use; and I am fool enough to find it hard to believe that you have quite left off caring. There are only us two left in the world; it is not natural that we should be nothing to each other. When you went to India I could have sworn that you did care for me, and I—there was no good in talking, but I thought you knew what it cost me to part. I don't claim to be more constant than other men, but I didn't forget and I can't believe that you forgot either. I wonder sometimes whether anybody said or wrote anything, whether you believed that I had done anything. If it was so, you ought to have told me. We used to be afraid, I know, to thresh out any awkward question; but we are men now, and to quarrel even would have been better than this that we have done, it seems to me. God knows I don't grudge you my uncle's money! I cannot think that he treated me kindly, but if you have held off from me because you think I grudged it, you have done me a greater wrong than even he did. If you get this it will be because I am ill enough to frighten Hamerton into insisting on writing to you. Don't come, even if he asks it. There may be risk. I don't want you to come. But take my word, as you would take it on my death-bed, that I never knowingly said or did or thought anything that should have cost me my brother. If I get over this let us be friends again. If I don't, think of me as you did when we were at school together. I believe I shall know of it——"

That was all. The writing grew larger and less clear towards the end, and the last sentence did not seem to be finished. There were two or three false starts, and then a mark as though the pen had fallen on the paper, and the fourth side of the sheet was blank.

Celia laid it down, and sat deep in thought, absently turning over the rose-leaves with her finger-tips.

She knew now who had written it, though she had not guessed until nearly at the end. And she could guess when it had been written, and why it was so confused and incomplete. What she was wondering was whether it had been forgotten, or whether anything like it had ever been sent, and if so what had been the effect of it.

Celia had been aware of Martin's fancy that there might have been a quarrel between the brothers. She knew now that there had been a quarrel, or an estrangement which was worse. Had this put an end to it? or had the appeal been disregarded or perhaps never really made at all?

Surely, she thought, if Caryl Lingard had read this or anything like it, he would not have met his brother afterwards as she had seen them meet—with a greeting that might serve as being warm enough for two who had never parted, but was ice-cold when regarded as a possible reconciliation.

But no; she remembered that the letter had only been meant to go if Douglas Lingard had found himself really in for a serious illness. Probably when the doctor came and made light of their alarms, he had meant to destroy it and had not been able to find it. And now Fate had brought it into her hands.

Celia folded it carefully, and looked at it doubtfully and avoidingly. It seemed to her that she had seen a part of a man's very soul, something which in existing circumstances he had not meant to reveal to anybody. Generally speaking, one would restore MS. accidentally found to the writer; but it was very evident to her that Douglas Lingard did not want this unfinished letter of his, and she could not give it to him without letting him know that she had—however blamelessly—read what was never meant for her eyes. There was but one other person who had any possible right to it, and that was the person to whom it had been written. Celia felt a great desire to convey it somehow to Caryl Lingard, and was by no means sure that both brothers would not have reason to thank her if she did so. But on the whole she could not feel sure that she had any right to deliver a letter that the writer of it would certainly suppress if it were now in his hands. Nor could she ask advice, even from Martin.

She ended by re-reading the letter, and laying it by amongst her own most private and treasured possessions, making up her mind to write and see whether Irnie would not tell her what to do with it.

Necessarily it affected all her thoughts of Douglas Lingard. Not merely did she think of him far oftener than she would have done but for this find of hers, but she seemed to herself to know him so much better. He had not meant, perhaps, to confide in her, but he had confided the very inmost thought and desire of his heart.

Celia was sorry for the young man; for his lonely lot and his baffled yearnings towards the brother he seemed to have lost; she was interested also, fascinated by a hint of mystery. Was there no explanation but the vulgar and obvious one? was Caryl Lingard simply cold-hearted and self-interested, or had there been some mischief-making, some misunderstanding?

(To be Continued)

Your::: Trip to Paris

has not yet reverted from a possibility to an impossibility.

Many energetic agents can earn enough money this Winter to pay for a trip abroad by securing subscriptions fo

The Ladies' Home Journal
AND
The Saturday Evening Post
and perhaps a good deal more.

At the end of the season (April 15th) we are going to divide $18,000 among 764 of our best agents.

This is in addition to liberal commissions on all subscriptions, and special rebates for large clubs.

The best agent will get $1,000, the next best will get $750, and so on.

Don't let 764 people outstrip you. But, if you should, the pay will be ample for all the work you do for us.

Write for particulars.

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

O'NEILL'S

We Sell Books Now!

THE NEW BOOK DEPARTMENT NOW OPEN, and we invite you to call and look over the big new stock that we have just unpacked and placed at your disposal. Thousands of volumes, comprising books of Fiction, Poetry, Travel, Biography, History, Books for the Young People, Religious Books, Cook Books, Holiday Books, Dictionaries, Encyclopedias,—in fact, almost anything you can mention in the book line, will be found upon our shelves, including a fine line of Bibles, Hymnals, and Prayer Books.

As an opening attraction
we offer to readers of The Christian Herald

The Four Leading Books of Fiction

David Harum, by Westcott
Richard Carvel, by Churchill
When Knighthood was in Flower, by Caskoden
Janice Meredith, by Ford

95c. EACH
Regular Price, $1.50

Postage 15 cents extra on each book.

Write us. We will supply you with any book you desire at a liberal discount from publisher's prices.

H. O'Neill & Co., Sixth Ave., 20th to 21st, St. N. Y.

White Dress Shirts.

DECEMBER SALE.

The "True Merit."

Made of New York Mills Muslin, recommended for excellence of cut, make, and finish. Open front and back. Open back only or open back with short bosoms for short, stout men. Sizes, 13 1-2 to 19 inches. Five sleeve lengths. Unlaundered.

50 cents each. By mail 12 cents additional. | $2.95 per half dozen. By mail 75 cents additional.

The "Perfection."

An unlaundered garment, made of finest quality material, with York Street, Belfast linen bosoms. Designed and cut to insure perfect fit. Reinforced. Open back or front and back. Sizes, 13 1-2 to 18. All sleeve lengths.

85 cents each. By mail 12 cents additional. | $5 per half dozen. By mail 75 cents additional.

James McCreery & Co.,
Broadway and 11th St.,
New York.

Edwd. Ridley & Sons,

Millinery, Ribbons,
DRESS GOODS, GLOVES,
Holiday Goods,
TOYS! DOLLS!! BOOKS!!!
Mail Orders Solicited.
309 to 321 GRAND Street, NEW YORK

DOUBLE ENTRY BOOK-KEEPING
BUSINESS-ARITHMETIC
Approved System. Taught Thoroughly by mail.
Send for particulars.
HENRY VON DEYLEN, 314 Clifton Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Natural Body Brace advertised in this paper in the first issue of this month, is a delightful, certain cure for ailments peculiar to women and girls. It makes walking and work easy; gives good figure and light step. Write the Natural Body Brace Co., Salina, Kan., for free illustrated book.

NINETEEN HUNDRED YEARS AGO. Beautiful Christmas song and music. 30 cents. Satisfaction, or money refunded. Oliver Music Co., Chatsworth, Ill.

THE EDISON
PHONOGRAPH

The Edison Phonograph reproduces clearer, louder and more naturally than other talking machines because the diaphragm is held in a rigid frame and must transform all the mechanical vibrations into sound. All others have for the diaphragm a movable support, which absorbs the vibrations (thus reducing the clearness and volume of the result).

NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THIS TRADE Thomas A Edison MARK

$7.50 up. Catalogue from phonograph dealers.

National Phonograph Co., N. Y.

Sacred Songs No. 2.

By Sankey, McGranahan and Stebbins, A large majority of the pieces in this book are entirely new, and never before published. It contains the new solos, "The Story that Never Grows Old," "I'm A Pilgrim," "A Little While," "Do They Know?" etc., now being sung by Mr. SANKEY.

Same styles and prices as "SACRED SONGS NO. 1," of which over 685,000 copies have already been sold. Price $25 per 100. Sample copy, post free, 20 cents.

Phonograph Records made by Ira D. Sankey of the above songs may also be had.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

The Gem Embroidery Machine

SOMETHING NEW!!

This little machine does the finest grades of embroidering now done by hand. Embroiders on any fabric; uses embroidery silk or cotton; a child can operate it; an independent stitch can be made with that heavy [illegible] A 32-page illustrated [illegible] and send a sample machine work, [illegible] set of stamping patterns and a beautiful sample of embroidery, together with full instructions teaching how to use machine, for [illegible] A 50-page book of [illegible] wards of 200 [illegible] Agents wanted. GEM MFG. CO., Dept. X, St. Louis, Mo.

Rheumatism, Pneumonia & Grip

cured and prevented by wearing Dr. Arthur's Sulpho Antiseptic Insoles. Indorsed by the medical profession as being the best preventative of disease.

Colds, Grip and Pneumonia you cannot get while wearing them. Mailed to any address on receipt of price, 50 cents per pair. Send size of shoe—fits any shoe.

The Sulpho Insole Co. 158 Hartford Bldg., Chicago

10 Beautiful [illegible] Doilies, [illegible] 50c.
[illegible] IMPORTERS' INTRODUCTION CO., 11 Mercer Street, New York City.

Porto Rico's Children

The Excellent Sunday School Work that is Going on in the Little Island Under Devoted Missionaries

MOST encouraging letters have been received from Rev. Dr. Jamieson, the missionary superintendent of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Sunday School in Porto Rico. He writes:

"The Herald's Sunday School is in a comparatively flourishing condition and [illegible]

A CLASS IN "THE CHRISTIAN HERALD" SUNDAY SCHOOL AT SAN JUAN

school is divided into four classes, viz., Miss Hayes, a most zealous worker, class of boys, Miss Dodds' class of girls, the Rev. Dr. McKim's class of Spanish adults, and the Rev. Mr. Young's class of U. S. soldiers. The Rev. Mr. McCormick, the Baptist minister at Rio Piedras, and a man of large experience in the missionary field, takes a deep and kindly interest in the welfare of this Sunday School and Mission station, and does all he can to promote its well-being. Besides THE CHRISTIAN HERALD School there are three others in San Juan, all doing a grand work, viz., the Lutheran, under the supervision of the Rev. Mr. Swenson, the Christian Brethren, under the superintendence of the Rev. Mr. Erwin, and the Episcopal, under the care of the Rev. Mr. Pratt. There is also a good school in Catano, a suburb, in connection with the Lutheran Mission in the capital. In addition to these, there are flourishing Sunday Schools at Rio Piedras, Ponce, and Mayaguez, all doing most efficient work for the good of man and the glory of God.

"THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Sunday School is steadily growing in numbers. All over the island the spiritual interests of the people are receiving every attention from the ministers of religion. These devout and godly men and women, who have come here to spend and be spent in behalf of suffering humanity, deserve the praise and thanks of every lover of Jesus Christ.

"Occasionally I meet persons here who take gloomy, pessimistic views of existing conditions and are disposed to ridicule the value of the efforts that are being made to deliver these benighted people from their intellectual and spiritual bondage. When one reflects that from the earliest colonial times the poor people of Porto Rico have been rigorously kept in a state of mental and spiritual slavery, surprise at their present low development seems entirely out of the question."

The first Sunday School in San Juan was organized in December, 1898, by what was known as the Christian Colonial Association. The Baptists have been most energetic in Sunday School work. They have had one Sunday School since May last, two since July and four since September. There are at the present time at least five other Sunday Schools on the island of Porto Rico.

Our photograph shows a class in the new Gospel hall, in which THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Sunday School is held, in San Juan. Readers will observe the distinctively American style of the auditorium, with its Gospel texts upon the walls, and the arrangement of the seats, indicating that the modern form of evangelistic work is carried on. The class of Porto Rican children gives a very fair index of the general characteristics of the people; and, as in our own land, the American flag holds the place of honor. The little children of Porto Rico are learning to love the flag, and also to love and respect the gentle teachers who are bringing them to the light and knowledge of the blessed Gospel.

These contributions to the Porto Rican Sunday School work have been received:

Previously acknowledged	$599 08
C. M., Somerville	1 00
Linnie B. Larson	2 00
N. C. M., Nunda	1 50
Friends, Topsfield	2 50
[illegible]	[illegible]
Mrs. L. Frink	50
Mrs. Mary J. Hammond	50
Beth Rust	1 00
C. E. Mission Club, S. Lima	12 25
[illegible]	[illegible]
I. H. N., Haydenville	1 00
Through Miss M. J. Davis	1 00
Total	[illegible]

COFFEE EYES

Diseased and Weak Eyes Helped by Leaving off Coffee

"Father would never let his two daughters drink coffee, so until I was married I never learned to like it. When baby came, some of my lady friends advised me to take up tea and coffee, which I did, on their advice. Shortly after, I became extremely nervous, and my eyes began troubling me. This grew until I could neither read or sew, and the inflammation and pain was great.

"Our good doctor was baffled, and advised a shaded room. For a month I lived in darkness. My appetite failed; yet to keep up I still took the tea and coffee. Finally I went to visit in a family that used Postum Food Coffee instead of common coffee. I began to improve daily, and at the end of four weeks returned home, taking with me a package of Postum, and told the cook to prepare it for breakfast, but not one of us could drink the flat, insipid stuff, as served that morning.

"Suddenly we remembered poor Bridget could not read. I had the Postum prepared then according to directions, and found we could make it as well as my friend had. When the package gave out, it was so far from our ranch to the store, that we began to use some old-fashioned coffee we had in the house. At once my eyes began to inflame and pain. I naturally concluded that coffee was the cause of it; just why or how, no one could say, but I immediately discontinued the coffee, and as soon as some new Postum could be secured, began to use it again.

"This was four years ago, and since that time my eyes have given me no trouble but once; then I visited some friends, and rather than appear fussy, drank coffee whenever they did, anticipating no bad results, for my eyes had been strong so long, but in a day the head began to ache above the eyes and the eyes became bloodshot, and before the end of the week were so bad I was obliged to go home. No temptation since has been enough to make me touch coffee, and whenever I find a listener, I sing the praises of Postum Food Coffee. My father, who had been a coffee-user so many years, died while yet in his prime. 'Stomach and heart trouble,' the doctor said. Poisoned by coffee, I absolutely know." Mrs. Lena Austin, Placerville, Idaho.

The Life of Christ
in
The Sunday School Times

FOR eighteen months from the end of 1899 the International Lessons will be on the Life of Christ from the four Gospels. The Sunday School Times will provide ample general comment and a new system of graded helps for teachers,—the helps, both general and graded, to appear only in The Sunday School Times itself week by week.

Dr. Cunningham Geikie will write a serial on The Life Story of Jesus to appear each week in The Sunday School Times exclusively, and based on the new International Lesson series.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

60 cts. [illegible] per year
75 cts. [illegible]
$1.00 [illegible] per year.
$1.50 [illegible]
$1.00 [illegible]

Free Copies. [illegible] at either the 75 cent or 60 cent rate.

SPECIMEN COPIES FREE.

John D. Wattles & Co., 1031 Walnut Street, Phila., Pa.

..HEALTH..

Trade marks Registered Nov. [illegible]

At any reasonable age, every form of disease is [illegible] sleep. This is not theory nor mere claim. It is demonstrated by the thousands of cures made by this wonderful instrument.

[illegible] hundreds of letters from those who have been re-[illegible]

A 48-page [illegible] Oxydonor, and we instruct our patrons in the proper [illegible]

RHEUMATISM, COLDS.

Rev. Henry L. [illegible] Presbyterian Pa. writes: "[illegible] and Rheumatism. I am Confident a [illegible] family. As a tonic after Sunday's hard work and [illegible] to simply invaluable."

Reverend Palmer to Rector of [illegible] Protestant Episcopal Church, Philadelphia.

Caution:—Imitations of Oxydonor are dangerous to use. Refuse to accept them. Dr H Sanche is the inventor and originator, and has obtained final decision in Supreme Court, in Washington, D. C., against imitators. Also on Oct. 16, 1899, the United States Court granted us an Injunction restraining agents from selling an imitation of Oxydonor.

We will send full particulars of Oxydonor when requested.

DR. H. SANCHE & COMPANY,
61 Fifth Street, Detroit, Mich.
261 Fifth Avenue, New York City.
57 State Street, Chicago, Ill.
Canada Office: 2268 St. Catherine Street, Montreal, Quebec.

THE TREATMENT OF RHEUMATISM BY TARTARLITHINE.

Mr. Hunt, of Knoxville, Tenn. writes: "I was a great sufferer from chronic rheumatism, having to go around in crutches. Your Tartarlithine was recommended to me so highly that I gave it a trial. In a short time I discarded my crutches and am now a well man. I will recommend the Tartarlithine to others."

Regular package $1.00,
Of all druggists or post-free by mail.
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

McKESSON & ROBBINS,
91 Fulton Street, . . New York.
SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

ENTERTAINMENTS
For CHURCHES and SUNDAY SCHOOLS
Powerful Magic Lanterns, Stereopticons & views; [illegible] with Jewels [illegible]
McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., New York

$75 MONTH AND EXPENSES; no experience needed; position permanent; self seller. PEASE MFG. CO., P.O. BOX A, Cincinnati, O.

WE SAVE HALF YOUR MONEY ON
VIOLINS, GUITARS, MANDOLINS, BANJOS ETC.
GET OUR BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED
CATALOGUE IT'S FREE WRITE TO-DAY
SYNDICATE MUSICAL INSTRUMENT CO.
356 FULTON ST. BROOKLYN, N.Y.
IN BUSINESS 20 YEARS

RUPTURE CURED
The Improved Elastic Truss is the only Truss in existence that is worn with absolute comfort night and day, and it retains the rupture under the hardest exercise or severest strain, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure. Comfortable Belts made to reduce corpulency. The use of these belts reduces your size and leaves no room for surplus flesh to accumulate. They can be used after any operations. Our goods are not sold by agents or druggists. Send for free pamphlets to the Improved Elastic Truss Co., 768 Broadway, N. Y. Established 18 years.

SILK REMNANTS FOR CRAZY WORK
A large package of BEAUTIFUL SILK REMNANTS, how to [illegible] trimmed, selected from large accumulation of silks, especially adapted for all fancy work. We give more than double any other offer; remnants are of large size, in beautiful colors and designs. Sent for 25 cents in stamps or silver. Address PARIS SILK CO., Box 2045, New York City, N. Y.

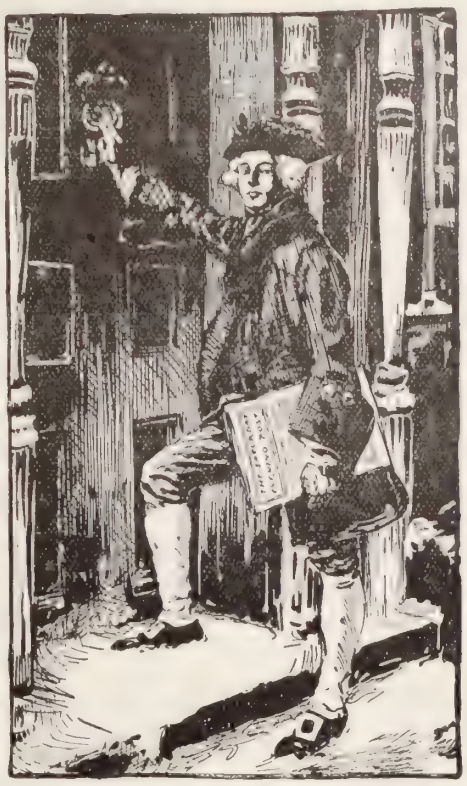
The Heavenly Record

Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for Dec. 31. Rev. 3:1-5.

MEN struggle at a disadvantage when their hearts are oppressed by a sense of loneliness. No matter what the conflict may be, no matter how unambitious the soul engaged in it may be, there is a better prospect of victory if it believe that its courage and valor are recognized by some one. We have a craving for sympathy, a satisfaction in knowing that some one is watching the battle and hoping that we shall be victorious. Mr. Gough used to describe his sensations on the day after he signed the pledge. He wanted a drink that morning worse than he had ever wanted it in his life. He was cold and miserable, and shivered from head to foot. Any doctor would have said he should have a drink—just one, to steady his nerves. But he had solemnly pledged himself never to touch it again. He could not work, could not settle to anything. His whole nature seemed to have turned to one all-consuming thirst. How could he resist? No one knew what he suffered. He must have just one drink. But just then a man whom he knew, shook him by the hand and told him how glad he was to hear that he had signed the pledge last night. "I suppose you are suffering badly this morning," his friend said. "But you will make a brave fight, I am sure. You have a hard lot before you for a day or two, but you will conquer in the end." Mr. Gough said: "Thank God, I think I can, now." That word of kindness and sympathy turned the tide and enabled him to win his battle with his mighty foe.

In the struggle that every man has to make with sin, he has the same need. Very often he is unable to speak of it to his most intimate friend. If he does speak of it, he may be misunderstood, or the difficulty may not be appreciated. His friend, who has not that particular propensity to evil, or not the propensity to the same form of evil, does not realize the intensity of the conflict, cannot see why the temptation should not be easily put aside. He does not know how strong a craving can be. So the poor, weary combatant fights on in darkness and loneliness. To such a man, how comforting is that assurance from One who reads the heart and knows how fierce the conflict is: "I know thy works;" and the certainty that the effort he is making is recorded in heaven! If he holds fast to that consciousness, there is hope of victory. His struggle is no longer solitary, but is carried on under the eye of One who watches it with keen interest and ardent desires for his success.

That is the real benefit that the promise of the record brings. He will, however, miss the benefit if he thinks of the record as a mere registration, a settled and completed transaction, which holds good in all circumstances. A famous writer describes a man who declared that he had never had any doubt of his salvation, after having a dream, in which he saw an open Bible and the words, "Calling and election sure," standing by themselves on the open page. This man afterwards committed grievous sin without compunction, satisfied that no matter what he might do, his name would never be blotted out of the Book of Life. Such a conception of the heavenly record is as false as it is mischievous. The record is a register of daily aspiration, of continuous effort after Christlikeness. It may be marred by faults; there may be failures, backward steps; but it is a record of struggle, in which desire and ardent longing count for something, even when achievement is lacking. To all who are misunderstood and are misjudged, this consolation is given. The real facts are known, the real motives are appreciated and the heavenly record bears witness to the sincerity and intensity of the effort. It is a record such as would not be kept on earth, nor, perhaps such as we ourselves would keep; for Christ has a standard of appreciation of his own. In his description of the final judgment, he represents himself as quoting from it, and rewarding his people for deeds that they had done but had forgotten—deeds of love done to him in the person of his people.



THE SATURDAY EVENING POST'S

Christmas Number

(DOUBLE NUMBER)

On All News-Stands

DECEMBER 21

No Increase in Price. Five Cents the Copy

RUDYARD KIPLING'S

New Story—GARM: A HOSTAGE

Reintroducing Private Ortheris; the first short story written by Mr. Kipling since his illness.

Christmas Stories, Poems and Special Articles in this number by

JUSTIN McCARTHY, M. P. — MARY E. WILKINS
IAN MACLAREN — FRANK L. STANTON
EDWIN MARKHAM — MAJOR J. B. POND

WHY THE CONFEDERACY FAILED

Toward the end of the Civil War papers containing the plans of campaign, whereby Grant and Sherman were to coöperate, were mysteriously stolen from the War Department at Washington, and a trusted member of the Confederate Secret Service Bureau was deputed to put them into the hands of Jefferson Davis' Cabinet. This daring attempt and how it failed—an almost unknown chapter of history—are the subjects of an intensely interesting short story.

By JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST was established in 1728 by Benjamin Franklin, and has been regularly published as a weekly paper for 171 years. It is an illustrated magazine published weekly.

To be had of All Newsmen at 5 cents the Copy, or sent by mail 5 months, on trial, for $1.00

THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

A FREE SAMPLE.

Trial Packages of Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Cure will be Mailed Free To Sufferers.

Dr. Blosser, the great Catarrh Specialist and discoverer of the method of curing catarrh by the inhalation of medicated smoke, has such confidence in the virtues of his remedy that he offers to mail a three-day's trial treatment, absolutely free, to any one suffering from any catarrhal affection.

Write at once, giving a brief statement of your case, and you will receive the sample and full particulars. Address: Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 50 Broad St., Atlanta, Ga.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD OF CHURCH FURNISHINGS
OPERA AND ASSEMBLY CHAIRS.
SCHOOL FURNITURE WORKS
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

CANCER, SALT RHEUM, RHEUMATISM, PILES and all Blood Diseases Cured by fluid and solid extract of Red Clover Blossoms.

Best Blood Purifier known, not a patent medicine but PURE RED CLOVER. Our preparations have a world-wide reputation. Send for circular. D. NEEDHAM'S SONS, 10 Inter Ocean Building, Chicago.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE

More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Color greatly improved. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO MOSS GROWING. NO CRUMBLING CLEANING. NO CRACKING.

THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO, 70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

Magic Lanterns

Our catalogue of Stereopticons, Lanterns, Apparatus and Slides will interest you. For the home, church, society, Sunday school or public lectures, they never fail to attract and please.

C. T. MILLIGAN, 726 Chestnut St., Phila., Pa.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS

The ex-King's Christmas

THE Christmases of ex-King, or "Citizen" Joseph Bonaparte, at Bordentown, were events that were remembered for a generation. Mother Lucy had heard that ex-King Joseph had in his grand house a very mysterious iron box which was full of Christmas gifts. "Citizen Joseph," said she, "you have an iron box in your house. Is it full of gifts and has it a strange story?"

The children gathered around and Bellemere, the candy-man, stood listening. Said Citizen Joseph:

"If you and the candy-man and the schoolmaster and all the children in the school and out of it will visit me on Christmas night at my house, you shall all be welcome; and I will show you the gifts that I keep in the box."

Christmas eve brought a curious procession to the great mansion: the children, Lady Lucy and Bellemere; with them came the selectmen, the squire's wife, and the minister. Joseph Bonaparte's door seemed to open itself and to receive the rustic visitors. How splendid was the long hall with the solemn portraits and the gleaming gold of its chandeliers! There were great fires in all the rooms.

Mallard brought the box in. "You may open it," said Citizen Joseph to Mallard. The lid flew back. There were gems in the box. They burned. Gems were set in gold that burned. The people present had never dreamed of such beautiful jewels. Joseph Bonaparte lifted a golden star.

"I wore that when I stood by my brother Napoleon in his coronation robes. It was a gift to me; all the jewels were gifts to me—gifts of statesmen, princes, and kings. I well remember that day of the coronation, my friends. We were left alone for a moment—we two brothers who had lovingly wandered the beach together in Corsica—and what do you think the Emperor said to me? He said: 'What would father say if he were to see us now?' I said to Napoleon in those great days: 'The glorious Emperor will never replace to me the Napoleon I so much loved.'

"Napoleon! O Napoleon!"

The children began to cry and even the chin of Lady Lucy began to quiver.

He lifted a crown, a rim of gems, and said: "That was given to me in Spain. Friends, Napoleon gave me the crown of Spain. Here is his letter; let me read a word of it to you:

"'King Charles, by his treaty surrenders the crown of Spain to me. The nation asks for a king. I destine the crown of Spain to you.

'NAPOLEON.'

"Brother Napoleon came to write me: 'You are no longer king of Spain.' It was a letter of reproach. And what, then, were all these jewels? I replied: 'During your whole life I shall be your best friend.' In July, 1815, a courier announced in Paris: 'Our army is overwhelmed. It is night at Waterloo. Armies of men are dead and dying. We know not where the Emperor has gone.' My friends, his heart turned to me. He rode back to Paris and my heart sought his.

"'Brother,' I said to him, 'I offer to you all that I possess.'"

The room was still. The children looked frightened; they were not accustomed to hear such a Christmas call as that.

Playing Santa Claus

LIVINGSTONE had not had such a drive in years. The little form snuggled up against him, closer and closer; and the warm half sentences of childish prattle, as the little girl's imagination wove its fancies, came to him from amid the furs and made him feel as though he had left the earth and were driving in a new world. It was like a dream. Had youth come back? Was it possible?

The sleigh stopped in front of a great long building.

"You have to ring at the side-door at night," said the driver. He appeared to know a good deal about the hospital.

Livingstone sprang out, rang the bell and then stepped back.

"When they open the door you are to do all the talking," he said to Kitty as he lifted her down.

"Who shall I say rang?" she asked.

"Santa Claus's partner."

"No. You are not to mention my name. Remember!"

Before the child could reply the door opened a little way and a porter looked out. "Who's there?" he called to the sleigh, rather overlooking the little figure in the snow.

"Santa Claus's partner," said Kitty.

"What do you want?" He peered out at the sleigh. He was evidently sleepy and a little puzzled. "We don't take in anything at this hour except patients." He looked as though he were about to shut the door, when a woman's voice was heard within speaking to him, and the next moment the door was opened wide and he gave way as a matronly figure came forward and stood in the archway.

"Who is it?" she asked in a very pleasant voice, looking down at the little figure in the snow before her.

"Santa Claus's partner," said Kitty, gazing up at her.

"What do you want, dear?" The voice was even pleasanter.

"To leave some presents for the children."

"What children?"

"All the good children—all the sick children, I mean—all the children," said Kitty.

"Come in," said the matron, and the little figure enveloped in the shaggy cape and hood walked in under the big arch followed by the sleigh, whilst Livingstone withdrew a short distance into the shadow.

It was some time before the doors opened again and Kitty reappeared, but Livingstone did not mind it. It was cold, too, but neither did he mind that. He was warm.

Just then across the town the clocks began to sound the midnight hour, and as they ceased, from somewhere far-away church bells, mellowed by the distance, began to chime the old Christmas hymn:

While shepherds watched their flocks by night,
All seated on the ground,
The angel of the Lord came down,
And glory shone around.

Suddenly in the snow before him stood a little figure muffled in a shaggy cape with hood half thrown back. The childish face was uplifted in the moonlight. With lips half parted she too was listening, and for a moment Livingstone could hardly take in that she was real.

"He that is warm thinks all so." Thousands are "cold" in that they do not understand the glow of health. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives all who take it the warmth of perfect health.

OLD POINT COMFORT.

Six-Day Tour via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The first of the 1899-1900 series of personally conducted tours to Old Point Comfort via the Pennsylvania Railroad will leave New York and Philadelphia on Thursday, December 28.

Tickets, including luncheon going trip and one and three-fourths days' board at Old Point Comfort, and good to return direct by regular trains within six days, will be sold at rate of $15.00 from New York; $13.50 from Trenton; $12.50 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to Ticket Agents: Tourist Agent, 1196 Broadway, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or Geo. W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

The Bordentown Story-Tellers, or Little Lady Lucy and the Merry Berry Pickers.* By Hezekiah Butterworth. Pp. 251; price $1.25. Publishers, A. I. Bradley & Co., Boston, Mass.

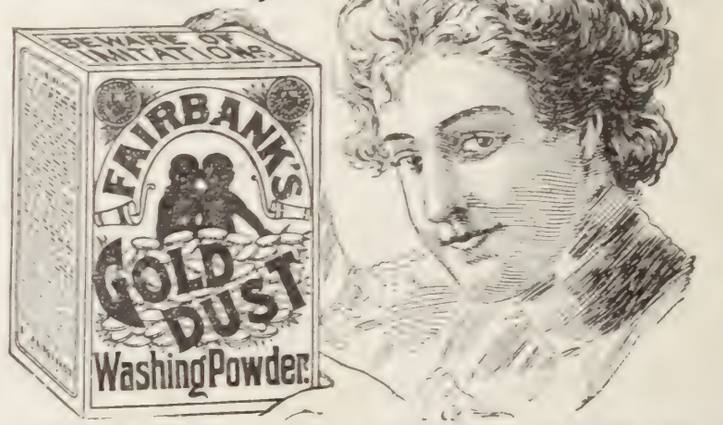
†From Santa Claus's Partner, a very neat and interesting book, by Thomas Nelson Page, well bound in cloth and gold, and handsomely illustrated with colored plates; pp. 177, price $1.50. Charles Scribner's Sons, publishers, New York City.

Why Still More?

The use of Van Houten's Cocoa as a daily beverage in family life is continually increasing. Why? The explanation is simple enough. Because the highest Medical Authorities recommend it as a food drink, and because experience teaches that Van Houten's Cocoa ought to be chosen before all other drinks. It is refreshing and strengthening, without the pernicious after-effects peculiar to Tea and Coffee. It is a good nourisher and flesh-former. In addition, Van Houten's Cocoa is not expensive, as a 1-lb. tin will furnish from 100 to 120 cups. You cannot take too much of this healthy, easily-digestible drink; and even after the fullest use, the flavor never palls on the taste, but comes both fresh and refreshing.

HAVE YOU TRIED
VAN HOUTEN'S Eating CHOCOLATE?

Woman's Best Friend
Dirt's Worst Enemy



BUY THE BEST.

If you want the best low down wagon you should buy the Electric Handy Wagon. It is the best because it is made of the best material; the best broad tired Electric Wheels; best seasoned white hickory axles; all other wood parts of the best seasoned white oak. The front and rear hounds are made from the best angle steel, which is neater, stronger and in every way better than wood. Well painted in red and varnished. Extra length of reach and extra long standards supplied without additional cost when requested. This wagon is guaranteed to carry 4000 lbs. anywhere. Write the Electric Wheel Co., Box 136, Quincy, Illinois, for their new catalogue which fully describes this wagon, their famous Electric Wheels and Electric Feed Cookers.

ELECTRIC

THE "CLEAN CUT" CAKE TIN

prevents cakes from sticking and produces a perfect cake. It is made of best quality tin with a flat, thin knife, securely riveted in center and at ends. Simple and durable. Sample sent prepaid on receipt of 15c. Agents send 6 cents postage for free samples. We are the largest manufacturers of Pure Aluminum, Scotch Granite and Tin Ware in the world. Address Dept. T.

HOUSEHOLD NOVELTY WORKS, 25 Randolph St. Chicago, Ill.

LOTS OF EGGS

—The sure result of feeding Green Cut Bone. You get it fast, fine and easier with the original MANN'S NEW BONE CUTTER than in any other way. Increases the egg crop winter and summer. Next to this and ahead of all others is Mann's Clover Cutter, that does cut—not a plaything. Grit and Feed Trees too. Catalogue Free. F. W. MANN CO., Box 29, Milford, Mass.

310 First Premiums

Awarded to the PRAIRIE STATE INCUBATOR. Guaranteed to operate in any climate. Send for catalogue.

PRAIRIE STATE INCUBATOR CO. Homer City, Pa.

ARE YOU WITH US?

THE DEALER IS AGAINST US

because we sell you wire fence direct from the factory at wholesale prices.

The dealer does not give you a better fence than we do, but he charges you more for it. You can buy the direct from us just as cheap as the dealer can. That makes a saving that will amount to something nice. A postal card will bring you circulars and prices.

ADVANCE FENCE

ADVANCE FENCE COMPANY,
149 Old Street, Peoria, Ill.

50 CHICKS From 50 EGGS

The BANTAM Does it.

$5 30 DAYS' Trial

45 to 50 chicks from 50 eggs

Before you pay a cent Hot Water or Hot Air

Send 4 cents for No. 69 Catalog of valuable information and testimonials. BUCKEYE INCUBATOR CO., Springfield, Ohio.

DON'T WORRY

The Petaluma Incubator

Beats 'em all.

Catalog free. Petaluma Incubator Co. Box 709 Petaluma, Cal.

FENCE! STRONGEST MADE.

Chicken-tight. Sold to the Farmer at Wholesale Prices. Fully Warranted. Catalog Free. COILED SPRING FENCE CO. Box 47. Winchester, Indiana, U. S. A.

$3.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working for me. People preferred who can furnish their own team. Apprentices must furnish satisfactory reference as to character and standing. B. F. Johnson, 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

Our Calendar

NEVER did we make an investment for the benefit of our subscribers that made more friends for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD than when we ordered 100,000 Home Sunshine Calendars. Tens of thousands of letters gratefully acknowledging its receipt have reached us, and we are more glad than words can express that the members of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD family who have thus far taken advantage of our offer are perfectly delighted. One subscriber writes us that he placed it under glass that he may retain it unsoiled "forever." Another says that its bright colors have made the parlor more cheerful and more atttactive.

Everybody is pleased and we are happy. Our new lot is going fast. We charge only ten cents, which just about pays for handling, tubing, and postage. It is only a nominal charge which, of course, will not begin to compensate us. But we delight in contributing to the happiness of our subscribers and we endeavor to take advantage of every reasonable opportunity to bring within their reach real bargains such as this.

The chronology of important events arranged according to days, showing just what took place during the past 100 years on any one day, was a happy idea and cannot be found anywhere else. As each calendar sheet—six in all—represents two months, each sheet has all the important events of the century which occurred during those particular two months on the reverse, and thus the progress of the world can be conveniently followed day by day. Take for instance the ninth day of September. We read on the back of our Home Sunshine Calendar that the following events occurred on that day. Please note that the years run in chronological order:

9 Duchy of Holstein is declared part of Danish monarchy, 1806.
9 Russia, Austria, and Prussia become allied by treaty of Toplitz, 1813.
9 King William IV., of Great Britain, is crowned, 1831.
9 California is admitted into the Union, 1850.
9 New Mexico is organized as a territory, 1850.
9 After storming the Malakoff and Redan, the Allies capture Sebastopol, 1855.
9 Garibaldi proclaims Victor Emanuel King of Italy, 1860.
9 President Johnson proclaims general amnesty, 1867.
9 Great Britain pays United States the "Alabama" claims award, 1873
9 Spain lands 15,000 more troops in Cuba, 1895.
9 Spanish army in Philippines is reinforced, 1896.
9 Joint American and Spanish Military Commission for Porto Rico meets in San Juan, 1898.

And thus the history of events is given for a hundred years day by day. The Chronology is worth dollars—but it goes with the calendar at ten cents to members of The Christian Herald family exclusively.

Every one of the six sheets has a different design printed in twelve colors on Eggshelled Cardboard, and each sheet is about the size of a CHRISTIAN HERALD page. The six sheets are neatly gathered with a silk ribbon, as a hanger.

We cannot get another lot until the end of February. Hence, you must positively act immediately if you desire a Calendar. Add 10 cents to your subscription, or 20 cents for two, and should the Calendars be exhausted when your order reaches us, we will extend your subscription one month beyond the term for every ten cents received. Of course we shall send you a postal advising you that you are too late, but this method will avoid the expense and the risk of returning your ten cents, and yet give you full value for the money paid. Act today and you will be in time.

A Grand Confession

I remember some meetings being held in a locality where the tide did not rise very quickly, writes Mr. Moody, and bitter and reproachful things were being said about the work. But one day one of the most prominent men in the place rose and said: "I want it to be known that I am a disciple of Jesus Christ, and if there is any odium to be cast on his cause, I am prepared to take my share of it."

It went through the meeting like an electric current, and a blessing came at once to his own soul and to the souls of others.

TRY IT FREE!

Wonderful Results from Gloria Tonic the New Cure for Rheumatism—Cured Many Cases that Doctors and Hospitals Failed to Cure.

Recent Tests on Persons Between 70 and 80 Years Discloses the Wonderful Fact That Aged Persons Are Almost as Quickly Cured as Younger Ones.

A Trial Package of This Marvelous Remedy Free to All Who Will Take the Trouble to Write—Write To-Day, for It Is a Wonderful Remedy.

A man never grows so old that he can get accustomed to the pains of rheumatism. Four old people, whose addresses are given below, went through years of constant suffering until they tried the new remedy, Gloria Tonic. It cured them so completely that they were anxious that their recovery be published in order that other afflicted persons may profit by their good fortune. Owing to their advanced age they considered their condition very critical, especially so after having exhausted every known remedy. They heard of Gloria Tonic, tried it, and the result was glorious indeed as shown by the following extractions from their letters. Mr. John Mesel, of Okarche, Okla., a gentleman of 70, wrote the maker of Gloria Tonic in a recent letter as follows:—"I am 70 years of age, and since using Gloria Tonic I feel healthier than I did for many years for which I am very thankful." Miss Emily Kreuter, of No. 339 North Winchester Ave., Chicago, Ill., expresses herself as follows:—"My mother, who is 75 years of age, was cured through Gloria Tonic after everything else failed." Mr. Michael Muth, of Perrysburg, Ohio, a gentleman 77 years of age, reports equally as favorable, saying:—"My right arm was totally lame, could only sleep two hours a night and expected to remain a cripple. I could not even dress myself, but thanks to the Lord Gloria Tonic cured me completely." Mrs. Catharine Muller, of Meggers, Wis., an old lady of 80, declares that Gloria Tonic cured her when all other remedies failed. This remedy enabled her to plant and work her vegetable garden as in former years. In thousands of other instances the results have been the same. It might interest the readers that Mr. Smith has been a sufferer from rheumatism himself, and by a lucky chance hit upon a combination of drugs which completely cured him after his case had baffled every doctor that treated him. Mr. Smith will send a free trial package to any reader having rheumatism who will send their address. His full address is John A. Smith, 530 Summerfield Church Building, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

One Years Free Trial.

FREE: We will ship a Piano or Organ anywhere upon the distinct understanding that if it is not satisfactory to purchaser after twelve months' use, we will take it back.

Our Catalogue tells you all about it. We have ORGANS FROM 25 DOLLARS. PIANOS FROM $155.00. Our Catalogue, A WORK OF ART, is

FREE

AND IT EXPLAINS EVERYTHING. It illustrates and describes all the Famous Cornish American Organs and Pianos, and will convince you, as it has convinced a quarter of a million before you, that we are the right people to buy from, if you wish to get a strictly High Grade Piano or Organ at factory cost and thus Save Half. You can buy for CASH or on An Easy Payment Plan, to suit Your Own Convenience.

Write for our Souvenir Catalogue, 1900 Edition, ready to-day, and sent FREE to any address, all charges paid. Get it now and take advantage of our extra Cash Bonus on immediate sales. All special offers now ready. Address:

CORNISH & CO. Estab'd nearly 50 years Washington New Jersey.

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE THINK A SALAD IS NOT A SALAD UNTIL DELICIOUSLY SAVORED WITH

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE

THE ORIGINAL & GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE

WHEN BUYING, NOTE THE SIGNATURE—LEA & PERRINS ACROSS THE WRAPPER.

JOHN DUNCAN'S SONS, AG'TS., NEW YORK.

FREE COSTS NOTHING

But the asking to get our new 1900 Catalogue of either

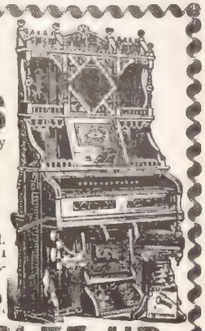
PIANOS OR ORGANS

At wholesale prices, thus saving you every penny usually pocketed by agents and dealers.

SEND TODAY FOR OUR NEW

1900 Coupon { It saves you $10.00 on an ORGAN. " " " $20.00 on a PIANO.

CASH OR INSTALMENTS.



30 days' trial. No money in advance. Safe delivery at your depot insured. Instalments. Easy payments. Our new due bill certificate shows you how to get an Organ or Piano for little or nothing. Remember, our Catalogue costs you nothing, and will positively save you money.

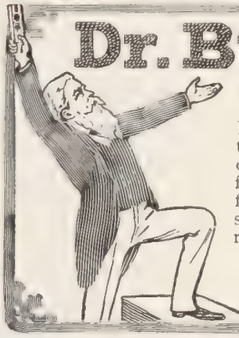
PIANOS, $155 UP.
ORGANS, $21.75 UP.

We furnish with each Piano a $10 hard wood Piano Chair free, also Plush Scarfs and $10 worth of the latest sheet music. Complete Organ outfit, free. Our factory, with its enormous capacity, enables us to sell you a high-grade instrument at a figure much below that of any other company in the world.

INCORPORATED FOR 50 YEARS.
WE LEAD, OTHERS FOLLOW.

Beethoven Piano and Organ Co.,
BOX 741 WASHINGTON, N. J

Dr. Bull's COUGH SYRUP



IS WHAT YOU WANT

Don't be imposed upon! If some one tells you that another cough mixture is "just as good," don't believe it! Dr. Bull's cures—it never fails. It is a Doctor's prescription made of the finest ingredients, and is a wholesome, honest, sure and quick cure. Ask any mother what she recommends—she knows.

Refuse Substitutes.

A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Bull's Pills cure Constipation without pain. Trial, 20 for 5c. At Dealers or by mail.

A RARE BARGAIN AT TWICE THE PRICE!

THIS $15.00 VALUE COUCH AT $7.50

We have just 1000 at this figure.

You Can't Beat this Value!

In order to get our catalogue more thoroughly introduced into every home we offer as an inducement to get it to you without delay this elegant Extra Size and Extra Quality Couch shown in illustration at the low price of $7.50. We bought these couches before the raise in the price of furniture, and offering them at cost, we are able to assure you of a tremendous saving. The couch is upholstered in three-toned tapestry plush, hand deep biscuit tufted, buttons guaranteed not to fly out. Stuffed with fine long fibre. Full set of springs on head, edge and seat. Sample of material and colors FREE.

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL.—This luxurious couch will be sent free on 30 days' trial to all entire large purchasers who will send us their freight address and give us satisfactory references as to their responsibility. After thirty days' trial, if not satisfied that the couch is worth every cent of $15.00 or if not all we represent return it to us at our expense. We cannot do more than this to show our belief in the quality and price of our goods. We have couches at all prices. A postal card will secure our new catalogue of couches and upholstered furniture. Established 1857.

C. LOUIS SCHULTZE'S SONS, 1051-1053 Milwaukee Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

NO ADVANCE IN PRICES

$15.50 IN SPITE OF RECENT ADVANCES IN RAW MATERIAL.

Will buy our beautiful latest model Arlington Gem Drop Head Sewing Machine possessing all the known improvements, such as Self Threading, Vibrating Shuttle, Self Setting Needle, Automatic Bobbin Winder, etc.; adapted to light and heavy work. Full set of attachments free. A better machine than some sold at from $25 to $30. Shipped direct from factory at wholesale prices C. O. D. or on 30 days free trial in your own home. No agents or dealer's large profits to pay. A positive saving of $10 to $20. WARRANTED 20 YEARS. Money promptly refunded if not found as represented. We have over 50 different styles including some as low as..... $8.50

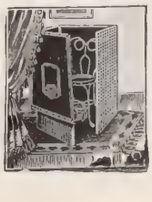
A Good High Arm Machine at $9.75.

Our New Ball Bearing Kenwood Sewing Machines are the easiest running machines on earth. A child can operate them. A $65.00 Kenwood, with decorated wood work, piano finish, $22.00. A $55.00 Ball Bearing Arlington, $19.00. 50 CENTS DISCOUNT ALLOWED ON ALL MACHINES FOR CASH WITH ORDER. As to our reliability we refer to the First National Bank of Chicago or any other Chicago Bank, and Dun's or Bradstreet's Commercial Reports. Write at once for our Large Illustrated Catalogue and Special Free Offer.

Address CASH BUYERS' UNION, 158-164 W. VanBuren St., Dept. B-18, CHICAGO, ILL.



Healthful Refreshing Invigorating

Turkish, Vapor and Medicated Baths for 2 cents.

THE HETTRICK VAPOR BATH CABINET is guaranteed by the manufacturer, is made of the best material, has all the latest improvements, is light and strong, CURES RHEUMATISM and COLDS, PURIFIES the BLOOD, STIMULATES the action of the KIDNEYS and LIVER, and CORRECTS all FEMALE DISORDERS; is QUICK and POSITIVE IN ACTION and PERMANENT IN RESULTS. Price $5.00. Face Steaming Attachment, $1.50 extra. Agents wanted in every town and city. Write us for circulars and particulars. THE HETTRICK BATH CABINET CO., 2020 Monroe St., TOLEDO, OHIO.

To Christian Herald Readers:

The 8th of last month, on this page, we told you our story of MAYWOOD COLONY, CALIFORNIA: and, so far as we could, we illustrated and proved the story by the introduction of views made from photographs taken on the Colony. This time others tell their stories. Read and see if their statements do not corroborate our claims.

Edward Cook, of Deadwood, So. Dak., says: I had invested in ten acres before visiting Maywood Colony. There were two features connected with your proposition I wished especially to investigate for myself. The first was in regard to the Fruit Association, the kind of stock planted, and the care given the orchards. The second was, whether fruit could be raised without irrigation. On both points I was fully satisfied. The association seemed to be doing their work honestly and thoroughly. The orchards were as thrifty, and loaded with as fine fruit as I saw in Southern California. I am fully satisfied with my investment, and can heartily endorse your proposition.

M. P. Graves, of Corning, says: Maywood Colony is the liveliest place that I have struck in all my travels, and when you look over the country, it is plain that it is the coming fruit center of California. It makes the eyes of a tenderfoot bulge to see the fruit that went through the colony drier this season.

Prof. John Alcock, of Baltimore, Wis., says: My experience and observation are that the healthfulness of Maywood is most excellent. Nature has bountifully provided two essential elements of good health — pure air and pure water. In many cases the water has cured bad cases of rheumatism and kidney troubles, while the air is exceedingly beneficial for all throat and lung diseases. A friend of mine recently had to leave Wisconsin on account of asthma and an incessant cough. He went to Maywood and inside of a week after getting there the asthma and the cough had both left him. To sum up Maywood Colony in a few words, it is greatly superior to most other parts of California in the productiveness and variety of its fruits, in the richness of its soil, in its health-giving climate, in its beautiful scenery and nearness to mountain resorts, in its school and church privileges, and in the intelligence and excellence of its society.

Rev. W. W. Percival, of Aspen, Colo., says: I visited Maywood during the past summer. Having purchased twenty-two acres of land there some time before, I thought I would go and take a look at it. I found it to be just as represented, and am well pleased with it. While there I contracted with the Fruit Association to plant my land this winter, and I expect in the course of time to make Maywood my future home.

J. R. Russell, with Deering Harvester Co., of Chicago, says: I paid Maywood Colony a visit about two months ago, and after remaining there several days and looking the ground well over there was no doubt left in my mind that Maywood Colony is not only an assured success, but soon will be one of the prettiest and most profitable colonies in California. I found everything just as represented by the owners, Foster & Woodson.

F. W. Waite, of 371 Connecticut St., Buffalo, N. Y., says: Maywood Colony has as fine a climate as can be found anywhere in the state. The soil is of the very best, producing anything that grows in a semi-tropical climate. The religious, social, educational and amusement conditions are much more advanced than in many a place twice the population of Corning. I saw with my own eyes, also made photographs of trees from four to seven years old loaded with fruit which had never been irrigated. I spent the greater part of last July and August on my Western trip, visiting a great many fruit-growing sections from Southern California as far north as Seattle, Wash. After seeing the best sections, I made a second visit to Maywood and selected a piece of land.

J. A. Bennett, Agent C. St. P. M. & O. Ry., Ellsworth, Wis., says: The tree growth and the crop of fruit I saw were simply wonderful, and I found every statement made by Foster & Woodson regarding Maywood Colony was correct in every detail. In fact, what one sees when visiting Maywood far exceeds what is claimed for it. I am well pleased with my lot and its growth of olives. I am of the opinion that in a few years Maywood will be one of the most beautiful spots in California; and the climate is certainly all that heart could desire. I believe as an investment —if properly handled—for fruit raising, the returns will far exceed what its promoters claim for it; and as a home—simply a Garden of Eden with the unlimited privilege of partaking of any and all its delicious varieties of fruit, granted to all the Eves therein, waiving all restrictions and penalties. What more could we desire?

E. T. Eichner, Merchant, Oil City, Pa., says: Since my visit to the Colony in the spring I am very restless here, as I feel sure the proposition has a great future, and I hope to see a population of 10,000 or more in and around Corning; which, by the way, should be "Maywood," and when I move to the Colony I will see to having it changed. I had read of Maywood Colony for a long time before going to see it, and was delighted with the plan of same, but hesitated about investing in a farm "on paper," as, no doubt, hundreds of others are doing to-day. I wish to say here, however, that I was entirely satisfied to put my money into it after a personal investigation, and I think I have as nice a twenty acres as there is in the Colony. Through the courtesy of your people, I visited every portion of the Colony; saw the fruit trees growing and full of fruit,—remarkably so, considering the age of the trees, —and found every statement of F. & W. verified by the actual conditions and results.

Dr. B. G. Arnold, of Downington, Pa., says: I have read the colony literature pretty thoroughly since 1894. Recently I had the pleasure of a trip through California, spending two days on Maywood Colony, and I cannot recall a statement of fact that I did not find absolutely true. I believe Maywood Colony to be an honest proposition throughout, conducted by honest men. The orchards looked as thrifty and fruitful as any I saw in the State.

R. E. Boyns, with Southern Pacific Ry., San Francisco, Cal., says: My visit to Maywood Colony convinced me that the land is worth many times the price asked for it. It is a rich friable garden loam, and there seems to be miles of it in all directions. The rainfall averages twenty-seven inches, making it possible to grow the finest fruit without irrigation, which is a great advantage on account of the quality being so much better. If water is needed, however, a well of from twelve to twenty-five feet will reach it anywhere. Four-year-old orchards last year yielded $110 per acre, and the same orchards this year reached $180. This result has been attained by the expenditure of about $130 per acre, which includes the price of the land, and the care and cultivation of the orchard for four years. There cannot be the slightest doubt in the world about the natural advantages of Maywood Colony. The only other question is: Is the management in honest hands? I am bound to say I believe it is. From a long experience of men and things—including several years practice as a barrister in the largest criminal court in the world—my judgment of Foster & Woodson is that they are not only very honest, but very capable men, and well worthy of any trust that may be reposed in them. I bought some land from them, leaving the selection of it entirely to them, and on personal examination since I have found it to be as good as there is in the Colony, without a waste inch on it.

John Henry, of 3511 Comly St., Philadelphia, says: I was very much taken up with the fine orchards, and the fine fruit grown there without irrigation. I also found everything just as represented in your Advocates. Maywood Colony certainly has a bright future, and I hope to have a share in it. I fully expected to be a resident of the Colony by this time, but circumstances will not permit, as I have not yet succeeded in selling my business here. Just as soon as I can sell you can count me in at Maywood. I have no objection to giving any one interested the benefit of my investigation, for I think a man has a better chance to save money there than he has here.

James Murdock, of Evans, Montana, says: "After spending about a week visiting Maywood last summer, I was so much impressed with the splendid fruit crop, the healthy condition of the trees, the class of people that were resident colonists, and the kindness of Mr. Foster and employees, that I became a Colonist, and intend to make my home there in the near future. Judging from the present conditions, I have not the least hesitation in endorsing your Colony proposition as being one that a man with small means can take up, and in a few years find himself and family in comfortable circumstances, in a good climate, surrounded by desirable neighbors, handy to church, schools, post-office, stores, etc., and will have himself to blame if he is not happy 'under his own vine and fig tree.'"

Hiram Confer, of Yellow Springs, Ohio, says: "I visited Maywood Colony last summer and was well pleased with what I saw. Indeed, so much so, that I came home and immediately put my farm on the market, and would have been there ere this had I succeeded in selling. We further say I [illegible] your Maywood Colony Advocates. We expect to go to Maywood and make it our home as soon as arrangements can be made."

Doctor Frank Dunlap, of Brunswick, [illegible] Maywood Colony the first part of last April, and while there I looked into your proposition. I was so much impressed with it that I made a purchase of ten acres. I [illegible] and in my opinion the town of Corning will be a city of 20,000 people in [illegible]

C. D. Smith, Agent S. P. R. R., Corning Cal., says: "All that is necessary to convince the most skeptical person in the country that Maywood Colony is a success, is a personal inspection. The orchards of four and five years of age are loaded with fruit of good quality—loaded till trees are being wrecked from the load they carry. This [illegible] good for fruit, and that the promoters plant and develop orchards that bear fruit of salable quality. As to the reliability of Foster & Woodson, I have never heard a word against them. Energetic, successful years they have worked diligently, conservatively and squarely, with the result that about 12,000 acres of land, in a contiguous body, have been sold in ten-acre sub-divisions. If success be the reward of merit, then surely a success they are. Their buyers come from every State in the Union, and they even reach buyers in Europe, Asia, Africa, South America, Mexico, Canada and the Hawaiian Islands."

W. R. Bathrick, Court Reporter of Norwalk, Ohio, says: I went to maywood Colony and found that what I had heard and read of it was literally true. The picture has not been overdrawn. I also found that in every instance that came under my observation—where intelligent care, and proper cultivation had been bestowed—orchards were in a thrifty, and, where old enough, in a bearing condition.

1. Pear Orchard. 2. Peach Orchard. 3. Prune Orchard

at Maywood Colony, California

Especially was this true in regard to pears, prunes and peaches. The apricot crop had already been harvested before my visit to Maywood.

To my eye, it made a most enchanting view to look down the long line of shapely, highly cultivated, and perfectly pruned trees in the orchards of apricots, pears, peaches and prunes. My memory yet retains the vivid impress of a glorious living picture viewed from the summit of a hill overlooking the town of Corning—a varied picture with a background of mountains keeping sentinel over the vine-clad and verdant valley at their feet. It was a glorious panorama not soon to be forgotten: and while not as rugged and sublime as other scenes in the state present, it was [illegible] inspiring I saw there.

In short, I was so well pleased with Maywood and its environments that I purchased ten acres of land there, and have had the most of it planted to olives and deciduous fruits. I fully expect to make Maywood my home as soon as practicable.

God's richest blessings be upon Maywood is the prayer of one who is deeply interested in its welfare.

Geo. A. McNeil, of Centralia, Kan., says: "I spent a very pleasant week or ten days in and about Corning and Maywood Colony last summer. I was pleased with Maywood Colony and vicinity; so much so, that I told my folks when I got home that, if spared, I intended to make Corning my future home. I became acquainted with quite a number of the colonists, and found them almost without exception, satisfied and happy. As to the firm of Foster & Woodson I have entire confidence in their responsibility and integrity, and I consider the proposition they offer as liberal as can be made on sound business principles. Since I have seen the Colony, and am acquainted with the workings of the company, I shall own land in Maywood Colony as soon as I can dispose of my interests here."

John Alden, of Cando, No. Dak., says: In reading your Advocate last winter I became very much interested in the settlement at Corning, and while making a trip West this summer, I made it a point to stop off at Corning to see for myself what there was to it. I found it all you represent it to be, and a little more. There is no [illegible] one of the first fruit-producing sections of the United States, and that is saying a good deal. The climate is all you claim for it, and for those wishing to settle where there is perpetual summer, they [illegible]

R. M. Glazbrook, of Las Vegas, New Mexico, says: I went to Corning and went thoroughly over the Colony, and made a very thorough investigation of the whole proposition, and can honestly say that I did not find that Foster & Woodson had misrepresented anything in any manner whatsoever. In fact, things were even more in my favor than they do. I was very agreeably surprised, and I consider one of the best proofs of my satisfaction is that I bought a lot of ten acres before returning home, and have just made arrangements to have it planted this season. I consider any one lucky who gets into Maywood Colony on the ground floor, as it were, for they will, without a doubt, in a few years, reap the benefit of a judicious investment."

W. F. Bartsch, of Corning, Cal., says: I have investigated, and found things just about as represented, and nothing misrepresented. Everything seems favorable to fruit raising; soil is of good quality, and can be adapted for all kinds that grow readily in Southern California. Irrigation for deciduous fruits is not necessary as the water is [illegible] the surface, keeping the soil around the roots moist. There are no insects or pests to kill trees. I bought a beautiful orchard, with trees all five years old, and bearing heavily this season. My candid opinion is that Maywood Colony is a coming success, and if a person does not become a millionaire in several years, one can find a good living, be independent, and have a good climate and community to live in. I found a bright and enterprising lot of people on the Colony, all happy and [illegible] I found a great many homes already there and [illegible] preparations to build.

C. M. Woodland, of Corning, California, says: Standing on one of the [illegible] and looking over the broad, fertile panoramas spread around, one is simply astounded at the vast work that has been accomplished in five short years. Olives almonds, oranges, apricots, peaches, prunes and nectarines in almost [illegible] where five years ago not a house, barn, or tree of any description gladdened the eye; full-grown orchards; half-grown orchards and yearling orchards, houses finished, half-finished, and just [illegible] as far as the eye can see. To-day it is not a question of whether or not peaches can be made profitable, but one that has already been solved, and a question whether the reader can get carpenters to complete his houses. It is not a question with the lumber yard as to whether their sales will pay them enough to warrant their carrying a stock; it is whether they can get enough lumber to supply the demand. It is not a question as to whether there is work for some of us caring for our fruit, but whether we shall be able to secure help enough to gather and care for it as it ripens. It is not a question any longer of whether a man can find work during our pruning, planting, and cultivating season, but whether men, teams and trees enough can be had to do the work. Few even of our own people realize the wonderful work that is going on here. Few have stopped to think of the number of acres covered by the Maywood Colonies, of the amount of fruit raised; of the number of houses built, of the orchards that have been planted; of the number employed on the Colony, and of the amount of money paid out for labor on orchards alone. In the past seventy days there has been an average of one house started each day. We have a beautiful new hotel, large and commodious, but not large enough to accommodate the number of guests constantly arriving, and an annex is to be built at once. The hotel is piped for gas, and is lighted by electricity. We have telephonic connections all over the State. Very many of our private houses are supplied [illegible] Electric power is used for raising water, and for such other purposes as power is needed; and the cost for such lighting and power is very reasonable. You will find no idle men here. Every one who wants to work can usually find work to do. The system here employed has worked [illegible] and it is to be the [illegible] understood that this is not a place for a man to come hunting a job. The work is all for [illegible] and prosperous hire. If more labor is needed the [illegible] is then given a chance. But Maywood County for Maywood Colonists. First last and all the time has been and is the watchword of Foster & Woodson; and the result has been successful beyond the understanding of most of us.

W. A. Fish, County Recorder of Tehama County, Red Bluff, Cal., says: Since 1892 hundreds of deeds have been filed for record in this office by Messrs. Foster & Woodson, covering lots in their several Maywood Colonies, and as yet the first defect in title made by them is to be found. The land of the Maywood Colonies has been transferred but few times since coming from the U. S. Government, and the title to said land is easily traced. My opinion is that no one contemplating the purchase of land in the Maywood Colonies should be deterred by the fear of questionable title. Messrs. Foster & Woodson are fixtures in this county, and their business policy is evidently that which will enable them to continue to enlarge their enterprise indefinitely. Official duties are too onerous to enable me to enter into general correspondence with the inquiring public relative to Maywood Colony, but I cheerfully say that to this land good and perfect titles are made.

Bank of Tehama County, Red Bluff, California, says: For eight years Foster & Woodson, owners of "Maywood Colony," in this county, have carried an account with this bank, and during that time we have attended to many commissions in the way of holding payments in escrow pending the execution and delivery to us of Deeds conveying property in said Colony to Eastern buyers. In all such cases perfect Deeds have been made, and in the mutual interest of Messrs Foster & Woodson and those who would avail themselves of our services, we will, in all cases of cash transactions, receive such remittances, and proceed to secure deeds to such lands as may have been arranged for between the buyer and the sellers. When it is desired that deeds be recorded before being forwarded to the buyer, the recording fee of $1.00 should accompany the purchase price of the property. Our service charge in such transactions is made against the account of Messrs. Foster & Woodson. We say in advance, and positively, too, that our regular banking business precludes the possibility of our entering into general correspondence with the public concerning "Maywood Colony." We can, as before stated, be used only as an agent through which to transact the business specified, but in no other capacity in connection with the "Maywood Colony."

If your health is not good the climate and outdoor life at Maywood may be just what you need. If you're not doing well where you are, Maywood, with its many opportunities for prosperity, may be the place you're looking for. If you'd like to correspond with former residents of the East, but now colonists, write to C. M. Woodland, N. G. Kent, or G. H. Flournoy, all of CORNING, CAL. If you think you'd like to move to or invest in California, yet don't know how to go about it—don't know what such a move costs—send for our prospectus. It arranges the whole plan, and is FREE.

If you care to read up on the fruit industry of California, from the planting of the tree to the sale of the fruit; if you want to learn of the effect of climate on ill-health; if you want to know of the labor or business opportunities in California, you can get all this information, and more, too, in a twice-a-month paper we publish. Send 24 cents in stamps and receive 24 nicely illustrated numbers. WATCH FOR OUR ANNOUNCEMENT IN THIS PAPER OF JAN. 17, 1900.

FOSTER & WOODSON,

Eastern Office, Corner Broadway and 26th St., NEW YORK CITY.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES

OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

VOLUME 22 NUMBER 52

COPYRIGHT 1899, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

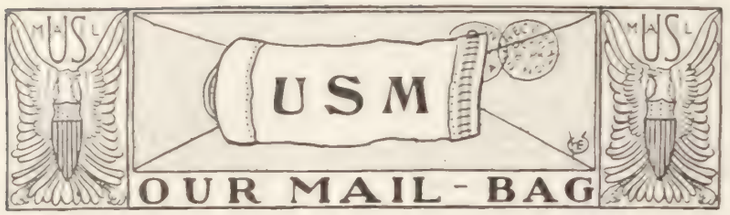
Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor

NEW YORK, DECEMBER 27, 1899

PRICE FIVE CENTS

Returning from the Last Service of the Dying Year

"The winter winds are wearily sighing; Toll ye the church bells, sad and slow; And tread softly and speak low, for the Old Year lies a-dying!"



QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

1. These questions are printed Four weeks in advance so as to afford all our readers an opportunity to answer them.
2. For answers to the questions which appear below, when accepted, we will allow compensation for the matter used at the rate of One Dollar a hundred words.
3. Answers must be received at this office two weeks in advance of the date for which they are intended.
4. The editor reserves the right to condense accepted answers when necessary, and compensation will be based on the matter as printed.
5. Do not write inquiring if your material has been accepted. If it appears on this page, you will know that it has been accepted.
6. We cannot return any MSS. sent to the Editor of THE MAIL-BAG—not even when stamps accompany them.
7. Write only on one side of the sheet and never send on the same sheet anything intended for any other department of the paper.
8. Address all communications intended for this department.

The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York.

Questions to Be Answered Jan. 3

institutions of learning in the more prominent nations

4. Since the beginning of the Christian era, who lived

Christ's injunction to "Take therefore no thought for

7. Is there any well-authenticated instance of dreams an to contribute to the Lord's work when should he first pay his creditors?

9. Is a Christian woman justified in wearing jewelry, other than her watch and wedding ring?

10. Is there any real reason, physiological or religious,

Questions to Be Answered Jan. 10

1. At what age may a young person be properly admitted to all the privileges of church membership?

2. Is it possible for a backslider to be lost?

tive strength of the Spanish and American fleets at the

4. Should Sabbath observance be so strict as to pre-

5. Has capital punishment been abolished in any

6. May it not be considered as possible for Christian parents to so train their children as to make absolutely sure of their moral and spiritual welfare?

7. What five (or seven) hymns in the English language

8. Name the verse of Scripture which most explicitly states the doctrine of Christ's substitution.

9. Is the breaking of a solemn engagement of mar-

10. Is a church justified in holding a fair to raise money for church purposes?

Questions to Be Answered Jan. 17

1. Is godliness profitable in this life? That is, are the temporal affairs of a righteous man prospered through his

2. Which of America's poets, living or dead, is entitled to be considered her leading bard?

in the United States still in existence?

heard to attend church with her?

Christianity warrant our claiming that the cause of by reason of service rendered to the public, to be con-

person who has not been converted or who has not pub-

10. What measure passed by our national legislature

Questions of the Week

1. Who may be justly considered the most important character of the nineteenth century?

Abraham Lincoln. Rare, indeed, was the mingling in him of genius and of common sense; wonderful the power of presenting the most difficult thought in phrase so homely, as to make the truth appreciable by all. But he was a man of works as well as words. The Emancipation Proclamation which he issued, sweeping away as it did the institution of American slavery in the United States, after an existence of more than two centuries, was certainly one of the most important documents of modern times.

> The kindly, earnest, brave, far-seeing man:
> Sagacious, patient, dreading praise, not blame;

Thus sings the poet, but thus also must speak the sober, impartial historian. Lincoln seemed the typical American with the royal quality of genius added. Many great men understand only men of their own kind; but Lincoln understood men of all kinds and from every section of the land; seemed himself, as one has said, "to be all men by turns as mood succeeded mood in his strange nature. He came to his national task with a self-trained capacity which no man could match." AMELIA HOYT.

2. Is it right to keep the house of God closed all the week, except for services on Sunday and the weekly prayer meeting?

The location of a church must be considered in deciding whether it should be opened except on Sunday and for the week-night services. The plan of opening a church, situated in a crowded locality, merely as a place for temporary retirement, is a good one, as it offers an opportunity for quiet retreat for weary and freely than they are. The success of institutional churches where tried, demonstrates the fact that the usefulness of our houses of worship can be extended. In many more of the churches, gatherings not distinctly religious, though certainly not irreligious, could be held with advantage. Given a live pastor and an aggressive church membership, a church building could be made a centre of attraction and usefuln[illegible] least diminishing the spi[illegible] increase true spirituality. D. S. BROWN.

3. Which is the oldest Protestant church in the United States?

On October 15, 1898, a delegation of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which was holding at that time a general convention in the city of Washington, visited the site of the first Protestant Church in America. It was built in the old colony of Jamestown, in 1610, by command of Lord Delaware, of bricks brought from England, and furnished with a bell (likewise from England), the ringing of which, twice a day, admonished the people to address themselves to prayer, in what place soever they might be. Of this building, only the tower remains standing at the present time. This church had been preceded by a barn-like structure of wood, hastily constructed in 1607, by the first settlers, under Sir Walter Raleigh's stout old captain, Christopher Newport, who landed here May 14, 1607. Their first act on landing was to gather under the shelter of an old sail suspended from the trees, a company of one hundred and five souls, and join in a service of thanksgiving, conducted by Rev. Robert Hunt, in accordance with the forms of the English national church. M. E. BEAUCHAMP.

4. What is the status of the dead between death and the Judgment Day?

The statements in the Bible on the subject are not direct or explicit. Any opinion we may form or any doctrine we may hold in the matter must therefore be based on inference. The passage most frequently referred to, is that of Christ's parable of Dives and Lazarus (Luke 16:19-31). This implies that at a time when the brothers of Dives were still alive, and therefore before the resurrection, both Dives and Lazarus were in a state of conscious existence, the one in misery and the other in happiness. It may be doubted, however, whether Christ intended this parable to be accepted literally in all its details; especially as he represents the persons as seeing each other and conversing across "the great gulf." A more direct statement is that of St. Matthew 22:32, where Christ, speaking of the declaration of God that he is the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, says that he "is not the God of the dead but of the living;" implying that the three patriarchs were then alive. Paul appears to have had the same belief. In comparing his condition with that on which he expected to enter at death (Phil. 1:23), he says the latter would be "far better." A man so intensely active and energetic as he, would not have regarded it as "far better," if he had expected to lie unconscious in the grave until the resurrection. From all these and other passages, we are, in my opinion, justified in hoping that at death we enter into a state of conscious existence, [illegible] will be still further developed on that [illegible] scribed in I. Cor. 15:35-45, when God [illegible] l body. J. INFREE.

5. What was the religious belief of Abraham Lincoln?

Although Lincoln lost his mother when he was only nine years old, he had imbibed from her teachings a strong faith in a divine overruling Providence, which served him in good brother, bidding him tell father "to call upon and confide in our great and good and merciful Maker, who will not turn away from him in any extremity," and adds, "He notes the fall of a sparrow and numbers the hairs of our heads, and he will not forget the dying man his best-known speeches. In the memorable Bateman interview, prior to his inauguration as President, he declared his faith that God hated injustice and slavery, and added, "I know I am right, for Christ teaches it, and Christ is God." In leaving Springfield to assume the Presidency Lincoln acknowledged the aid of divine providence, and asked his friends to pray that he might have divine assistance in his task. Acknowledgments of God are found in many other speeches. His reliance upon God's guidance and blessing were frequently expressed. A. R. ROBERTS.

6. Is marriage a help to success in life?

Yes. It is a matter of common observation in every grade of society, that the married man is the successful man. By success, I do not mean mere money-getting. Of course, we must start on the basis that one is favorably married. If one seeks social or political preferment, a good wife will be a source of ways of gambling. If he seeks fame through literature, art, or the kindred vocations, he needs the stimulus of the intuitive mind of a woman. He needs a wife to help him meet the reverses, incident to every success.

G. W. STEPHENSON.

7. What event of the nineteenth century must be regarded as having resulted most beneficially to mankind?

The application of steam to transit on land and water and to manufacturing purposes. There were steam engines prior to the present century, but steam transit was only in the experimental stage when the eighteenth century closed. By the use of steam, distances have been practically diminished, the various parts of the earth have been brought into contiguity, commerce and the arts and sciences have been mightily developed, while the cause of the Gospel has received an impetus pentecostal in its effect. G. C. CRANS.

8. What nations have made the greatest advance, during the present century, in the arts, sciences, and national and material progress?

The United States, Great Britain and Germany. The advance of the United States during the century has been stupendous, and includes increased area, increased commerce and wealth, higher education, literature, science and the arts. Her growth recalls the old prophecy: "A nation shall be born in a day." One important step in advance has been the emancipation of the slaves. Great Britain is a worthy second, and has shown remarkable progress in colonial administration, as well as along the lines credited to the United States. In Germany, scientific study has reached a wonderful stage. During the past few decades Japan has made remarkable progress.
J. HEYWOOD.

9. What is the present rank of France among the nations of the earth?

In art she is easily first; in material prosperity and as regards the diffusion of physical comfort among the people, third, coming after England and the United States; in education and matters of intellectual excellence, the place she occupies is difficult to state. We might perhaps place her third or perhaps fourth in regard to general education among the people, after the United States, Germany and England, and first in rank in that department of literature which, like criticism, consists rather in appreciation than in creation. In natural and applied science, though surpassed in results by the United States and Germany, her position is not to be despised. In military affairs, France, which at the beginning of the century occupied the first place, must now be contented with the third or fourth; while in colonization, if we may judge from Tonquin and Madagascar, her efforts have absolutely failed. H. C. UNDERHILL.

10. Which was the largest contribution ever made to charity?

The gift of ten million dollars, for the purpose of Jewish colonization, made by the late Baron de Hirsch. The aggregate of his gifts for charitable, educational and benevolent purposes generally, exceeds fifty million dollars.
S. HOLMES.

Miscellaneous Questions

humane people generally. The reason for on o). Kiyam (accent on last syllable and i as before).

No one heeded him or offered him a seat, so he went out and brought in a stone, which he bore up the aisle and placed in front to use as a seat. Thereupon the entire body of worshippers grew ashamed, and, as if by magic, fifty doors opened instantly and as many hymn books and seats were offered. The incident gave character to the sermon that followed.

about the ancestors of Elizabeth Hutchinson, and how was he educated?

Very little seems to be known further than that she came of a family of linen weavers in Ireland. She and her sisters, a number of whom (and perhaps all) emigrated to this country, were weavers of linen in the "Old Country." They were very industrious and thrifty. "The grandchildren of these Hutch-the night, and sometimes all night, in order to produce the right quantity of linen." 2. Andrew Jackson's parents were Presbyterians. [illegible] mother sent him to schools taught by clergymen.

Several Readers. The New York Journal, great Anti-Polygamy petition against the admission of Roberts, the Mormon Congressman, is nearing completion. The names will nearly seven million names, collected in every State of the Union. All who desire to aid in this important fight should send in their names and addresses to the Journal without delay.

Reader. It is pronounced U-art.

only a few reached the Pacific.

Subscriber, Courtney, Pa. All these inquiries have been answered in previous issues.

A. R. S., Stowe, Vt. All the letters are pro-

Subscriber, Jarvis, Canada. 1. Scotch. 2. Ironmaster. 3. New York City. 4. Irvington, N. Y.

Subscriber, Gonzales, Tex. Write to U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C., for full instructions.

Mrs. M. A. M., Greeley, Neb. 1. Yes. 2. It is tianity.

called and await your opportunity, the Lord will Reader, Elkhart, Ind. Mrs. Sarah J. Bird's address New York.

Olive D., Lewis, N. Y. 1. Dutch. 2. The control of the gold and diamond mines, primarily. 3. The encyclopedia.

A. S. N., New Phila., Ohio. It is impossible to demonstrate the truth of the supposition. According to the theory of gravitation, the professor's Mary W. B., Barnet, Vermont. It may not be wrong but it would be very inexpedient and not likely to succeed. The better plan is to try to own reach.

Mrs. C. C. J., Newburgh, Ala. The Greek word, which in Acts 12:4 is translated "Easter," is else-

T. D., Franklin, Mass. "Boer" is pronounced as if spelled "Boor," the "oo" sounding as in "cool."

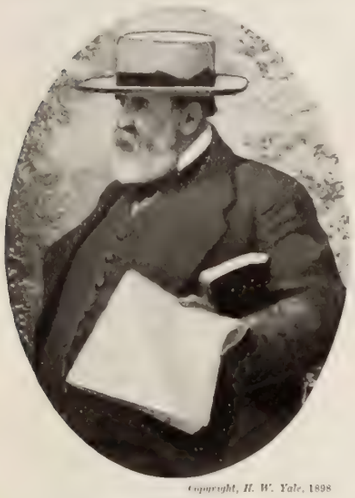
M. E. L., Hannibal, Mo. 1. It is true that for Moses" was written by Mrs. Cecil Frances Alexander, and first appeared in the Dublin University

Mrs. O. J. Hains, Tonganoxie, Kan., writes: "We are trying to get up a library to help interest the members are too poor to give much; and would be glad to receive from a more prosperous Sunday School any good books they have finished using.

A. R. N., Mascot, Tenn. The Armenian Church crept in, obscuring the truth, and lessening the

Evangelist Moody's Illness

The Grand Old Christian an Invalid at His Northfield Home —A Nation's Sympathy



Copyright, H. W. Yale, 1898

DWIGHT L. MOODY

His Splendid Lifework for Christ

FIGHTING a brave battle against disease, and bearing all his sufferings with Christian fortitude, Dwight L. Moody, whose lifelong work for the redemption of fallen humanity has won him the love and admiration of countless multitudes, lies upon his sick-bed at East Northfield, Mass. Suddenly attacked by heart trouble in Kansas City, several weeks ago, in the midst of a great spiritual movement which had already resulted in many conversions, the great evangelist's first wish, after the seizure, was to be taken home. Home he went accordingly, by special train and in a physician's charge. He was weak as a child, but bright and hopeful; for there had been a promising rally, and it seemed as though the remarkable vitality of the patient would again be able to throw off the disease, as it had done on several previous occasions, when cardiac troubles manifested themselves. As long ago as 1892, he had known of the presence of heart affection; and though it had been latent, at times it gave unmistakable evidence of danger in the future. Sir Andrew Clark, one of the world's most renowned physicians, had told him that he was suffering from organic heart disease; but the warning passed unheeded. The evangelist had long before wholly given himself to God's work, and the divine "passion for souls," so thoroughly controlled his life, that all considerations of physical comfort or well-being were forgotten. He labored for the Master unceasingly, and with greater love and zeal than ever.

After his return to Northfield invalided, he steadily continued to improve, until the second week in December, when an unfavorable change took place. His physicians were disturbed by the evidences of kidney and stomach trouble, accompanied by a swelling of the lower limbs. This condition, while it undoubtedly caused alarm for a time, was happily overcome, and the patient again began to improve. His physicians and family are greatly encouraged and entertain strong hopes of his ultimate recovery. Meanwhile the prayers of God's people on two continents are ascending to the Throne in his behalf, supplicating for his complete restoration to health, if it be the Divine will.

Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, thousands of whom have repeatedly heard Mr. Moody's powerful preaching of the Gospel, while all are more or less familiar with the simple, direct and convincing contributions that have appeared from his pen in these pages—will recall with loving appreciation, many passages in the career of the world's greatest evangelist. To no other man in the present century has the spiritual power been given to move the human heart as Dwight L. Moody has done. His labors have been marvelously blessed, and it is probably not an exaggerated estimate to say that, either directly or indirectly, he has been the means of leading a quarter of a million souls to Christ! Speaking always from the heart rather than the head, the later "Apostle to the Gentiles" has been wonderfully gifted with sanctified skill to touch the hidden chords of human nature and to arouse the souls of the simple and the indifferent to a realization of the awful actualities of life, death and eternity, heaven and hell, happiness or misery in the hereafter. With a mind well stored with pregnant phraseology and apt illustration, and a style of address that compelled attention, while its terrible earnestness and truthfulness swept aside all adverse criticism, he appealed with equal force to the cultured and the simple. He struck both at individual sins and the vices of society, and his slightest touch reached to the quick, rankling like a barb in the breast of the unbeliever and carrying conviction to the hardened heart. No man could more relentlessly castigate sin and none could open up brighter vistas of hope and spiritual encouragement. Knowing well the way to the Cross, he was a safe guide for others, and to-day a great army of redeemed men and women date the hour of their spiritual birth to the time when they first listened to the Gospel invitation from his lips. During a great part of his career Mr. Moody has associated with himself in his work Ira D. Sankey, whose glorious singing has emphasized the message delivered by the great evangelist. It was in 1871, at a National Y. M. C. A. convention in Indianapolis, that the two first became acquainted. On conferring together, they found that their love of mission work and their desire for extended spiritual usefulness were mutual, and they agreed thereafter to labor in company. Their first great joint work was when they visited England together in 1873, their efforts resulting in bringing over 20,000 souls to the mercy-seat. Since that time they have visited many lands, and almost every American city has heard the earnest preaching of the one and the sweet singing of the other from the same platform. Some of the most fruitful revivals the country has ever witnessed were begun under their united auspices.

Speaking to large and generous audiences, raising vast sums for many philanthropies, coming constantly in touch with men and women of large means, and with eager publishers outbidding each other for the privilege of giving his addresses to the world, it was in the power of Mr. Moody to become a rich man. But he has remained comparatively poor and is so to-day; because, as a faithful steward, he has employed his opportunities wholly for the advancement of Christ's kingdom. Churches, Y. M. C. A's., home and foreign missions, charities, rescue work, educational institutions, and the wide dissemination of religious literature have absorbed his means, and he has been content with the most frugal manner of life. Money to him had but one use and that a consecrated one. The Moody Bible Institute in Chicago, which he founded, has trained, educated and sent forth to the home and foreign mission field a glorious battalion of Christian workers. At East Northfield he has founded, established and maintained a splendid system of institutional education on spiritual lines, which has sent forth hundreds of well-equipped workers to many fields. Northfield has become a religious Mecca, a source of inspiration to Christian workers of all denominations. Its Bible schools, summer conferences and conventions are of world-wide fame, and every year great multitudes of Christian workers there seek and find new power and unction for their future labors.

MR. MOODY'S STUDY AT NORTHFIELD

THE MOODY HOME AT NORTHFIELD

An Evangelistic Visitor

Rev. E. P. Telford Returning to the United States for Gospel Work

REV. E. P. TELFORD

MANY churches in various States will be glad to hear that Evangelist E. P. Telford is now on his way here, to labor for a few months. There were so many invitations sent to him during his former visit that he was unable to accept, that he promised an early return. The exigencies of the work on the other side the Atlantic, however, prevented his coming so soon as he hoped. Mr. Telford was in Bristol for twenty weeks, during which more than three thousand persons made profession of faith. A very successful work was done in Glasgow, where Mr. Telford preached every day for four weeks. The additions to the churches at the close of his stay numbered over one thousand. The Methodist churches of the great manufacturing city of Birmingham, had sent him urgent requests to labor with them, and, as soon as the way was open, Mr. Telford went to that difficult town, the centre of radicalism in politics and scepticism in religion. He conducted meetings for eight successive weeks and the blessing surpassed his most sanguine hopes. The list of converts contained over twelve hundred names. Many missions in less populous centres were held in which earnest and successful work was done. Altogether, the two years which have elapsed since Mr. Telford was among us last, have been a very busy time with him and have resulted in the revival of many churches.

To many of our readers Mr. Telford needs no introduction, but for the benefit of those who have not had the pleasure of hearing him, we may say that he is a typical English evangelist—earnest, vivacious, convincing; a man who knows by long experience how to talk to working men and to press the truth home with power to their hearts and consciences. In the Methodist churches of Great Britain he has done exceedingly valuable work from one end of the country to the other. There are few towns where he has not labored, and where there are not large numbers in the membership of the churches who date their conversion to the time when they listened to his stirring appeals. He has never limited his services to the church buildings. In a mining district he secures permission to descend into the pits to preach to the men in the noon hour; in some localities he has held very successful meetings for weeks in succession in the open air, and one of his greatest in gatherings came from a series of services in a theatre. Mr. Telford begins his work on this side the Atlantic on Dec. 31, in Boston, Mass., where he will hold meetings in various churches. He has promised to visit several other New England cities, after which he goes to Cincinnati to fulfil a long-standing engagement. We sincerely trust that his tour may be blessed of God to the quickening of the churches and the conversion of many souls.

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT.

Shadows and Sunshine OF THE CRADLE

A CHRISTMAS SERMON
By Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., on the Text, Matt. 1: 17, . . .

So all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations; and from David until the carrying away into Babylon are fourteen generations; and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are fourteen generations.

FROM what many consider the dullest and most unimportant chapter of the New Testament I take my text, and find it full of practical, startling, and eternal interest. This chapter is the front door of the New Testament, through which all the splendors of evangelism and apostolicity enter. Three times fourteen generations are spoken of in my text; that is, forty-two generations, reaching down to Christ. They all had relation to him. And at least forty-two generations past affect us. If they were good, we feel the result of the goodness. If they were bad, we feel the result of their wickedness. If some were good and some were bad, it is an intermingling influence that puts its mighty hand upon us. And as we feel the effect of at least forty-two generations past, we will in turn influence at least forty-two generations to come, if the world shall last a thousand years. So you see the cradle is more important than the grave.

I propose to show you some of the shadows upon the Christic cradle of Bethlehem, and then the sunshine that poured in upon the pillow of straw. Notice among the shadows on that infant's bed that there was here and there a specimen of dissolute ancestry. Beautiful Ruth his ancestress? Oh, yes! Devout Asa one of his forefathers? Oh, yes! Honest Joseph his father? Oh, yes! Holy Mary his mother? Oh, yes! But in that genealogical table were idolatrous and cruel Ammon and oppressive Rehoboam, and some men whose abominations may not be particularized. So you see bad men may have good descendants. One of the most consecrated men I ever knew was the son of a man who lived and died a blasphemer. In the line of an oppressive Rehoboam comes a gracious and merciful and glorious Christ. Great encouragement for those who had in the forty-two generations that preceded them, however close by or however far back, some instances of pernicious and baleful and corrupt ancestry.

To my amazement, I found in those parts of Australia to which many years ago felons were transported from England, that the percentage of crime was less than in those parts of Australia originally settled by honest men and good women. Some who are now on judicial benches in Australia, and in high governmental position, and in learned and useful professions, and leaders in social life are the grandsons and granddaughters of men and women who were exiled from Great Britian to Australia for arson and theft and assault and fraud and murder. So you see it is possible for the descendants of those who do wrong to do right. Perhaps we make too much of the doctrine of heredity. While those of us who can gratefully turn in our family record to healthful and virtuous pedigree, let not those who have had abhorrent natures in the ancestral line despair of usefulness and happiness and heaven.

Since we are all more or less affected by our ancestry we ought to be patient with those who go wrong, remembering that they may be the victims of unhappy antecedents. How lenient it ought to make us in our judgments of the fallen! Perhaps they had forty-two generations back of them pushing them the wrong way. Five hundred years before they were born there may have been a parentage of iniquity augmented by a corrupt parentage two hundred years ago. Do not blame a man because he cannot swim up the rapids of Niagara. Do not blame a ship captain because he cannot outride a Caribbean whirlwind. The father of this man who does wrong may have been all right and his mother all right, but away back in the centuries there may have started a bad propensity which he now feels. One of the Ten Commandments given on Mount Sinai recognizes the fact that evil may skip a generation, when the commandment speaks of visiting "the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation," but says nothing about the second generation; and if evil may skip one generation, why not two and three and four and five generations, making a mighty leap and alighting very hard upon the head and the heart of some poor victim? Better be a little merciful toward the culprit, lest after a while some hereditary evil born in the year sixteen hundred or seventeen hundred, having skipped the centuries, alight just as heavily upon you.

Meanwhile keep carefully your family records. The old place for the family record in the Bible, between the Old and New Testaments, is a most appropriate place. That record, put in such impressive surroundings of chapter, bounded on one side by the prophesies of Malachi, and on the other side by the Gospel of Matthew, will receive stress and sanctity from its position. That record is appropriately bound up with the eternities. Do not simply say in your family record, "Born at such a time and died at such a time," but if there has been among your ancestors some man or woman especially consecrated and useful, make a note of it for the encouragement of the following generations. Two family records of the Bible: the one in Matthew reaching from Abraham to Christ, and the one in Luke beginning with Joseph and reaching back to the garden of Eden, with the sublime statement "which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God." I charge you to this duty of keeping the family record by the forty-two generations which are past and the forty-two generations which are to come. It is a good thing—the new habit abroad of seeking for one's pedigree. The old family records hardly ever went back further than the grandfather and grandmother. Not one of us knows anything about our great grandparents, although they may have been indescribably better than their children or grandchildren.

Another shadow on the Christic cradle was that it stood under a depraved king. Herod was at that time ruler, and the complete impersonation of all depravities. It was an unfavorable time for innocence to expect good treatment. So dark was the shadow dropping on the cradle from that iniquitous throne that the peasant mother had to lift her babe out of it and make hasty flight. Depraved habits of those in authority are apt to be copied by subjects, and from the immorals of the Herodic throne I judge of the immorals of a nation. There was a malaria of sin in the air when the infant Christ first breathed it. Thickest shawl could not keep the babe warm when in that wintry month with his mother he became a fugitive.

Historians say that it was at a time of peace that Christ was born, but his birth aroused an antagonism of which the Bethlehem massacre was only a feeble expression. War of the mightiest nation of the earth opened against that cradle! The influence that came forth that night from that surrounding of camels and sheep and oxen challenged the iniquities of all the centuries, and will not cease until it has destroyed them. What a pronunciamento went forth from that black and barbarian throne! practically saying, "Slay all the babes under two years of age, and that wide slaughter will surely include the death of the one child that most threatens my dominion." Awful time was it for the occupant of that cradle! If he escaped the knife of the assassin, then the wild beast's paw, or the bandit's clutch, or the midnight chill between Bethlehem of Judea and Cairo, Egypt, will secure his destruction. All the powers of earth and all the powers of hell bombarded that cradle.

Another shadow upon the cradle was the obscurity of the place. Bethlehem was an obscure village. David, the shepherd boy, had been born there. But after he became general and king he gave it no significance, I think never mentioning it but to ask for a drink of water out of the old well to which he used to go in childhood. The village so small and unimportant that it had to be separated in mind from another Bethlehem then existing, and so was called Bethlehem of Judea. There was a great capital of Jerusalem; there were the fifteen beautiful cities on the beach of Galilee, any of them a good place to be born in; there were great towns famous at that time, but the nativity we to-day celebrate was in a village which Christ intimated had been called by some "the least among the princes of Juda." Christ himself was to make the town famous for all time and all eternity. So heroes in later days by their deeds have given celebrity to neighborhoods that would never otherwise have been heard of beyond the radius of a few hundred miles. What a place for Christ to arrive at and to start from! The hero of the eternities!

O, men and women of Messianic opportunity! why do you not make the place of your nativity memorable for your philanthropies—by the churches you build, the free libraries you open, the colleges you endow? Go back to the village where you were born, as George Peabody went back to Danvers, Mass., and with your wealth bless the neighborhood where in childhood you played, and near by where your father and mother sleep the last sleep. There are scores of such villages in America being generously remembered by prosperous men during life, or helped in their last will and testament, and there are a hundred neighborhoods waiting for such benediction from their prosperous sons. By some such charity invite the Bethlehem angels to come back again, and over the plain house of your nativity ring out the old anthem of "Good will to men." Christ, born in an obscure place, made it so widely known by his self-sacrifices and divine charity that all round the earth the village of Bethlehem has its name woven in garlands, and chanted in Te Deums, and built in houses of prayer.

But it is time we see some of the sunshine breaking through the shadows on that cradle. For we must have jubilance dominate the Christmas festival. That was Walter Scott's opinion when in "Marmion" he wrote:

A Christmas gambol oft would cheer
A poor man's heart through half the year.

It was while the peasant and his wife were on a visit for purposes of enrollment that Jesus was born. The Bible translators got the wrong word when they said that Joseph and Mary had gone to Bethlehem to be "taxed." People went no farther then to get taxed than they do now. The effort of most people always has been to escape taxation. Beside that, these two humble folk had nothing to tax. The man's turban that protected his head from the sun was not worth taxing. The woman's sandles which kept her feet from being cut by the limestone rock of which Bethlehem is mostly made up, were not worth taxing. No: the fact is that a proclamation had been made by the emperor that all the people between Great Britain and Parthia, and of those lands included, should go to some appointed place and give their names in, be registered, and announce their loyalty to the Roman emperor. They stood up before the officer of the government and answered the questions: "What is your name? Where were you born? When were you born? Where do you live now? Lift your hand and swear that you will support the empire of Cæsar Augustus." During that patriotic and loyal visit the first cry of the Divine Boy was heard.

They had walked eighty miles over a rough road to give in their names and take the oath of allegiance. Would we walk eighty miles to announce our allegiance to our King, one Jesus? Cæsar Augustus wanted to know by the record on which that man and that woman wrote their names, or had them written, just how many people in his empire he could depend on in case of exigency. How many men would unsheathe sword for the Roman eagle, and how many women could be depended on to take care of the wounded on battle-fields? The trouble is that in the kingdom of Christ we do not know how many can be depended on. There are so many men and women who never give in their names. They serve the Lord on the sly. They do not announce their allegiance to the King who, in the battles to come, will want all his troops. In all our churches there are so many half-and-half disciples, so many one-third espousers. They rather think the Bible is true—at any rate, parts of it—and they hope that somehow Christianity will disenthral the nations. They stay away from church on communion days, and hope when they have lived as long as they can in this world, they can somehow sneak into heaven. O, give in your names! Be registered on the church record down here, and in the Lamb's Book of Life up there. Let all the world know where you stand, if you have to go as far as Joseph and Mary walked, if you have to go eighty miles before you find just the right form of worship and just the right creed. Start in this modern December, as those villagers started in an ancient December, and amid the congratulations of church militant and church triumphant give in your names. It was while Joseph and Mary were on a visit of duty, and obeying a reasonable command of Emperor Augustus that the star pointed to the place of nativity.

Another gleam of sunshine striking through the shadows above that Christic cradle was the fact of a special divine protection. Herod was determined upon the child's destruction. The monster put all his wits together in stratagem for the stopping of that young life just started. He dramatized piety. He suddenly got religious. He would leave his palace, and take chariot, and have steeds whipped up, so that he could kneel at that cradle. We have to smile at what the imperial villain said when he ordered: "Go and search diligently for the young child, and when ye have found him, bring me word, that I may go and worship him also." Dore's picture of the "Massacre of the Innocents" at Herod's command—a picture full of children hurled over walls and dashed against streets, and writhing under assassin's foot—gives us a little impression of the manner in which Herod would have treated the real child if he could once have got his hand on it. But Herod could not find that cradle. All the detectives he sent out failed in the search. Yet it had been pointed out by flashlight from the midnight heavens. All the neighborhood knew about it. The angelic chorus in the cloud had called musical attention to it. No sentinel guarded it with drawn sword, passing up and down by the pillow of that Bethlehem caravansary. Why, then, was it that the cradle was not despoiled of its treasure? Because it was divinely protected. There were wings hovering that mortal eye could not see. There were armed immortals whose brandished sword mortal eye could not follow. There were chariots of the Omnipotent, the rumble of whose wheels only supernaturals could hear. God had started through the cradle to save our world, and nothing could stop him.

You cannot reasonably account for that unhurt cradle, except on the theory of a special, divine protection. And most cradles are likewise defended. Can you understand why so many children, with all the epidemics that assault them, and all their climbing to dangerous heights, and all their perilous experiments with explosives, and their running against horses' hoofs, and daring of trolleys, and carts fast driven, yet, somehow, get through, especially boys of high spirit and that are going to amount to much? I account for their coming through all right, with only a few wounds and bruises, by the fact that they are divinely protected. All your charges of "Don't do this," and "Don't do that," and "Don't go there," seem to amount to nothing. They are the same reckless creatures about whom you are constantly anxious and wondering what is the matter now. Divinely protected! The most of your children would have been dead long ago, but for that. They can go through more perils, and fall from more heights, and stumble into more holes, and cough with more influenzas, and endure more earaches, and suffer with more runrounds, and burn with more fevers, and yet get through not permanently damaged. How many children go through all the accidents of childhood without an eye dimmed, or a limb fractured, or a finger broken? Every healthy boy is a miracle of divine protection. Be thankful all parents, that it is so; and trust your darlings under what the Book of Ruth calls the "wings of the Almighty." Nearly all cradles pass under six old-fashioned ailments. It always has been so. They may be called by different names, but we all had them, and we got through; and yours, I hope, will get through. Young mothers, be not affrighted. Through the clouds of invalidism hovering over your cradles, catch a little of this sunshine of consolation.

Another gleam of light scattering some of the gloom of that Christic pillow in Bethlehem, was the fact that it was the starting-place of the most wonderful of all careers. Looking at Christ's life from mere worldly standpoints, it was amazing beyond all capacity of pen or tongue or canvas to express. Without taking a year's curriculum in any college, or even a day at any school, yet saying things that the mightest intellects of subsequent days have quoted and tried to expound. Great literary works have for the most part been the result of much elaboration. Edmund Burke re-wrote the conclusion of his speech against Warren Hastings sixteen times. Lord Brougham re-wrote his speech in behalf of Queen Caroline twenty times, but the Sermon on the Mount seemed extemporaneous. Christ was eloquent without ever having studied one of the laws of oratory. He was the greatest orator that ever lived. It was not an eloquence Demosthenic or Ciceronic, or like that of Jean Baptiste Massillon, or like that which William Wirt, himself a great orator, was overcome with in log-cabin meeting-house of Virginia, when the blind preacher cried out in his sermon "Socrates died like a philosopher, but Jesus Christ died like a God."

Christ's oratory was unlike anything that went before or came after. Even the criticism of the world said: "Never man spake like this man." Dramatic? Why, he took up a child out of the audience, and set him on a table, and by the embarrassed look of the child taught humility. He sent the prosecutors of a poor, sinful woman, blushing and confounded out of the room by one sentence of sarcasm. Notice his power of emphasis and enunciation when he revealed himself after his resurrection by the peculiar way he pronounced the one word "Mary." His power of look shown by the way Peter, the great Apostle, wilted under it. The Book says: "The Lord turned and looked upon Peter." It was an omnipotent facial expression. He looked upon Peter. Power of distinct utterance, so that everyone could hear. "He opened His mouth, saying." No mumbling and indistinct utterance. He opened his mouth. His voice, which had been developed by open-air speaking, was a resonant and sonorous voice, or he would not have taken the top of the rocks of the Mount of Beatitudes for a pulpit; for that pulpit is so high, as I declare from observation, that no speaker that I have ever known could have from that point made any audience hear one word of a sermon. His power of hyperbole: A camel trying to crowd its hump through the eye of a sewing-woman's needle, and all that learned talk about a gate called the "needle's eye," only belittling the hyperbole. Power of sarcasm: The hypocrites styled by him "the whole who need not a physician." His power of peroration: The crashing of the timbers of the poorly-built house on the beach of the Mediterranean. Power to take advantage of circumstances: When an auditor asked him whether they ought to pay taxes to Cæsar, Christ practically said, "If any gentleman in this audience has in his pocket a Roman penny, I wish he would just hand it up to me;" and some one handed him a penny, such as you can now find in some of the museums, the obverse of it bearing the face of Tiberius, the emperor, and the reverse the words "Pontifex Maximus," the other title of the emperor, and then came the overwhelming answer of Christ: "Render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's." Magnetic and epigrammatic this inspired peasant! Useless attempts he declares as "pearls cast before swine." Unimportant results he describes as the attempt to "gather figs of thistles." Allegories! Why, the parables are all allegories, and how he flung them out upon his audiences, whole armfuls of amethysts, and emeralds, and diamonds, and rubies!

But we must not only look at him from a worldly standpoint. How he smote whirlwinds into silence, and made the waves of the sea lie down, and opened doors of light into the midnight of those who had been born blind, and turned deaf ears into galleries of music, and with one touch made the scabs of incurable leprosy fall off, and renewed healthy circulation through severest paralysis, and made the dead girl waken and ask for her mother, and at his crucifixion pulled down the clouds until at twelve o'clock at noon it was as dark as twelve o'clock at night, and starting an influence that will go on until the last desert will grow roses, and the last weak lung make full inhalation of air, and the last case of paresis take healthful brain, and the last illness become rubicund of cheek and robust of chest and bounding of foot, and the last pauper will get his palace, and the last sinner taken unto the warm bosom of a pardoning God! Where did all this start? In that cradle within sound of bleating sheep and bellowing cattle, and amid rough bantering of herdsmen and camel-drivers. What a low place to start for such great heights! O artists! turn your camera obscura on that village of Bethlehem. Take it all in—the wintry skies lowering, the flocks shivering in the chill air, Mary, the pale mother, and Jesus the child. No wonder that Paul Veronese and Cuyp and Rubens and Tintoretto and Correggio and Perugino and Ghirlandajo and Raphael put their best pencils in that scene. Lord God! by thy gracious Spirit, fix that Madonna in all our souls! So these thoughts come in upon us at this gladdest part of the year.

KINDERGARTEN TOTS

Swing softly, bells, on Christmas moon,
Wake not the King of Glory!
Swing soft and swift across the snow,
The old Judean story.

So I have shown you the shadows and the sunshine of that Christic cradle of Bethlehem. In these Christmas times I realize that there are many cradles under shadows. Oh, the story of empty cradles all up and down the earth, in cabins and in palaces! There are standing in garrets or in store-rooms cradles that will never rock again. "Rachel mourning for her children, and will not be comforted because they are not." But through all the shadows break gleams of sunshine, as the clouds of the Christic cradle were cleft by glorious light. Escaped from the struggles through which we have all passed, and must yet pass, those little ones took heaven at one bound. Instead of an earthly career, it is a heavenly career, with capacities, with velocities, with opportunities beyond our comprehension. Instead of celebrating on earth the Saviour's birth, they stand in the Saviour's presence. Instead of the holiday celebrations of the old homestead, it is to them eternal jubilee, at a table where the angels of God are the cup-bearers, and amid festivities that resound with a laughter and a music and blaze with a brilliance and a glory "that eye hath not seen nor ear heard." No use in wishing them a Merry Christmas, for the merriments of heaven ring out upon them from temples that are always open, amid pleasures that never die. Oh, it is not a dull heaven, but a lively heaven, for there are so many children there. They throng the streets. They look out of the "House of Many Mansions." They stand on the beach to see the fleets cast anchor within the vale. They crowd the gates with greetings when the old folks come in. They clap their hands in an eternal gladness. They dance in an eternal glee. See you not the sunshine that pours into the shadows of that cradle until they are all gone? But shadows have their uses. There must be a background to every picture. Turner always put at least a fleck of cloud on his canvas, and the clouds of earth will be the background to bring out more mightily the brightness of heaven. And will it not be glorious if, after all this scene of earthly vicissitude we meet again in our Father's house and talk over the past in an everlasting holiday. But meanwhile, look out for the cradles. How much they decide for this world and the next! When Wellington was born at Mornington, England, that decided Waterloo and saved Europe. When Handel was born in Halle, Saxony, that decided the oratorios of "Judas Maccabæus," and "Esther," and "Israel in Egypt," and "Jephthah," and "Messiah." When Eli Whitney was born at Westboro, that decided the wealth of all the cotton fields of the South. When Gutenberg was born at Metz, Germany, that decided the libraries of all Christendom. When Clarkson was born in Cambridgeshire, England, that decided the doom of human bondage. When Morse was born at Breed's Hill, Mass., that decided that the lightnings of heaven should become galloping couriers, or stretch a throbbing iron nerve clear under the sea. When Washington was born at Westmoreland, Va., that decided American independence. When Christ was born at Bethlehem, that decided the redemption of the world. Oh, look out for the cradles! May a Bethlehem star of hope point down to each one of them, and every hovering cloud be filled with chanting angels of mercy.

A SEWING CLASS AT MISS CHENEY'S MISSION

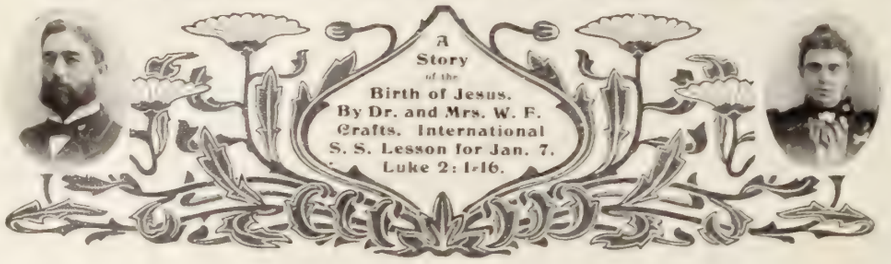
A Light in Little Italy

Miss Cheney's Ministry to Our Foreign-Born Citizens

"LITTLE ITALY" is the name given to that part of New York which lies chiefly between 104th and 116th street, and east of Third avenue. Some 30,000 Italians live here, speaking their own language, adhering to their own customs, and clinging to their old superstitions. Our readers, who are familiar with many of the good works conducted by Christian missionaries for the uplift of "Little Italy," will be pleased to read the following account of another.

Since 1892, Miss Emily H. Cheney has given all her time to the advancement of these people, spiritually, morally and physically. Her work, commencing with a sewing-school, developed gradually the following additional features: A Sunday-School, a regular Sunday service, and mid-week meeting, varied industrial classes, an evening school for girls, under the direction of the Board of Education, and a penny provident fund. Our illustrations are from photographs taken of classes in Miss Cheney's mission hall at 313 E. 111th street, where classes are held weekly. The Italian physicians have become interested in cooperating with existing charities in their efforts for the improvement of sanitary conditions in "Little Italy." A course of lectures on health and good citizenship has been inaugurated. Last summer hundreds of mothers and their sick children were helped to day excursions on board the new St. John's Floating Hospital boat. Besides, the sick and the poor have been visited in their homes; encouragement has been given, work has been secured for the unemployed and needy; many destitute children have been placed in institutions of relief; and clothing, food and literature have been distributed. Different clergymen have kindly opened the doors of their churches, so that the work has always found a resting-place. It is unsectarian, yet none the less spiritual, and its every educational and humanitarian activity is formed with the purpose of leading these strangers within our gates to know Christ as we know him. The work is supported entirely by voluntary contributions.

Fireside Talks About Jesus



Christmas at the Cross Roads

"FARM life has always had its compensations," said Uncle Will, as he finished reading the story of the Bethlehem shepherds to the [illegible] farmers and their families gathered as usual on Sabbath evening for home discussion of the lesson that had been taught in Sabbath Schools all around the world earlier in the day. "American farmers," he continued, "ought generally to learn from those social Oriental shepherds the lesson we have learned at this cross-roads to avoid the unnecessary loneliness of farm life, that drives so many farmers' boys and girls into the moral perils of the cities. One way to do this is by concentrating farmhouses in farm villages, as they do in the Orient and Germany."

At this cross-roads, four farmers had each preempted one hundred and sixty acres of adjoining land, and had built their houses on the four contiguous corners. Three houses had since been added for married sons and daughters. By means of a book club, each book and magazine and paper going the rounds, they were even better supplied with reading than city folks usually are, and had less to attract them from books in the evening, especially in winter.

"In this Bible story," continued Uncle Will, "we find a whole fraternity of shepherds together, as I have seen them in social groups in those same fields, their flocks mingled but not mixed, for when a shepherd calls his own sheep 'they know his voice,' and every one of his flock quickly lifts its head and follows him to the fold or to another field."

Mr. Selah Brown, a rotund farmer who seasoned his farming with humor, said: "Another more remarkable agricultural sociable of Bible times is that plowing bee which Elijah interrupted to call to the ministry Elisha, one of the twelve farmers that were plowing together. The farm has in all ages proved a good preparatory school for the preacher. Those twelve farmers were not hired men, but twelve independent farmers, who, for sociability and protection, lived together and worked together; plowing one farm after another in an order determined by lot. I have heard Uncle Will say that he has seen eighteen farmers plowing together in Samaria, like soldiers keeping step, brightening their toil by telling each other the riddles in which the Oriental delights, and the news, in the absence of newspapers. I have always planned to have these boys of mine work with each other or some others of us, for sociability and stimulus alike. Therefore, they don't take farm work as a dose, but find it a delight. It is not alone the paternal, but also the patriotic and Christian duty of farmers to check this mad rush of country youth to cities, by taking a hint from the usually overlooked sociability of the Bethlehem shepherds."

Divine Voices in Fields and Sky

"This Bethlehem story also reminds us," said Uncle Will, "that God made the country, while Cain made the town. The country has its temptations, especially wherever the city can reach, with its Sunday papers and its Sunday wheels and Sunday trolleys and Sunday excursions, and its Midway street fairs and carnivals; but in the country nearly everything speaks of God, while in the city it is mostly man's work that we see. If the undevout astronomer is mad, not less is the undevout farmer, with every growing plant and animal reminding him of the ever-present Creator. The city manufacturer may easily forget that God is his partner, on whom he must depend for raw material; but not so easily the farmer, who is daily made to feel his dependence on God-given seed and soil and sun and shower. Every rosebush is a burning bush out of which God speaks, and every growing field is holy ground in which God is at work. Every sunrise is a new outburst of that glory of the Lord that drove the night out of Bethlehem's sky."

How the Shepherds Talked

"Mother has been telling me recently," said Mabel, Uncle Will's grandchild of sixteen years, "about the talk of the shepherds of Bethlehem that night before the angel came. How El Nathan, to whom they all looked up as their chief, said: 'This is the very rock where David sat with his harp when he made the shepherd Psalm, 'The Lord is my Shepherd,' and where he translated the starlit sky into that other song, 'The heavens declare the glory of God.' God told him that of his sons should arise the glorious Messiah, who had been called a star because he was to be so glorious and so heavenly in character.

"'Once I heard a rabbi read from the prophet Micah,'" continued El Nathan, "'that Messiah would come from our little Bethlehem, but the priests and doctors think that he must come from great Jerusalem. They are heart-weary of waiting for him. At this very time the sceptre is passing from Judah by a new Roman enrolment. Why does [illegible] come to deliver his people? Am I d[illegible] or is that a new star that has blazed [illegible] denly and is settling down toward the v[illegible] yonder?'"

"Just then it was," said Mabel's brother, Frank, breaking in, "that the Jehovah angel suddenly came on them in a burst of heavenly light that turned midnight into morning and made them fall on their faces in fear."

"Uncle," said Uncle Will, "[illegible] needed to hide his glory in a body like ours. The glory of God always made men afraid. This same 'angel of Jehovah,' often called 'Jehovah,' who seems to have been the Son of God in his Old Testament form, the visible person of God, had at this time come to earth to hide his glory in the babe of Bethlehem, after this one last dazzling revelation of his majesty. When God should become man, then indeed, we should 'fear not.'"

"That reminds me of what I read," said Mrs. [illegible] Will, as his wife was [illegible] called. "How Hector's [illegible] Troy cried out in terror at the approach of its father in his glistening helmet and armor, but sprang into his arms when he laid his weapons by. When we learn that the King Eternal is not only our Father but, in Christ, our brother, our fears flee away, and we lean in our sorrows upon his bosom."

"THE FIELD OF THE SHEPHERDS," NEAR BETHLEHEM

What the Gospel Really Is

Thomas Brown, Selah's son, a youth of fourteen, who was suspected of ambitions for the ministry, said: "Is not the 'good tidings' the angel brought the same as the Gospel? And is not this angel message the first New Testament Gospel? And is it not a joy-bringer? How strange that religion should have ever been thought to be gloomy! It takes away no pleasure that is pleasant to remember. It brings the good times that don't go off with the having." His sister Agnes, just graduated from a musical college, who was sitting at the piano, struck up and all joined in the song:

There is sunshine in my soul to-day
More glorious and bright
Than shines in any earthly sky,
For Jesus is my light.

"And let us not forget," said Uncle Will, "that the Gospel—that is, the good news—includes not only the pardon through Jesus the Saviour, but protection and direction through Christ the King. The angel proclaimed a 'Saviour' who is also our 'Lord.' The individual is to be saved by his Cross, but society is to be saved by his crown; that is, by the application of his teachings to all our associated life, to the home, the school, the shop, the Church, the State."

"If we would feel what the angel's message really meant to the shepherds," said Rev. Amos Sanders, a preacher, son of a Scotch farmer, who was home for the holidays, "we should translate the angel message, 'Unto you is born a Saviour, which is Messiah Jehovah.' The long-expected Messiah had come, who was none other than the Jehovah who so lovingly visited man in human form in Old Testament times, and who is now to hide himself in a Saviour [illegible] woman, a [illegible] 'sign' or badge is that he is swaddl[illegible] just like every other child, initiated thus into the fraternity of humanity. He differs only in greater lowliness, having only a cattle-trough for his cradle."

"Do you note," said Mrs. Brown, "that it was when the Jehovah angel uttered that climax of Christ's humiliation, the 'manger,' that the angel chorus burst in on his solo with the shout, 'Glory to God in the highest.' For Christ to become lowliest for the sake of service, that was to heaven's public opinion the highest glory. How [illegible] the old ideals of honor as seen in the new words 'minister' and 'public servant' as names [illegible]"

"How strangely mistranslated in the old version," said the preacher, "is the angel's song of 'peace on earth among men of good will.' There is no contradiction in the Christmas motto, rightly translated, to that solemn warning, not to be forgotten even at Christmas time, especially by those revelers who decorate only to desecrate, 'There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked.' To wilful sin, even at Christmas time, Christ and true Christians will bring 'not peace but a sword.' We may often fall and fail, but the message is 'peace to men of good will.' 'He that willeth to do his will shall know of the doctrine,' and shall know of his peace. In the words of Browning:

Aspire, break bounds! I say.
Endeavor to be good, and better still.
And best! Success is naught, endeavor's all.

Mrs. Sanders, a sweet-faced Quakeress, said: "When Jesus spoke of bringing not peace but a sword, I do not think he meant duels, whether by individuals or nations. We have learned to go to law in place of personal quarrels, and the same reasons hold for putting law in place of war in national quarrels. Even when the two most Christian nations are at war, I hold to Whittier's faith:

The world may run its old mad way,
With needle gun and ironclad;
But truth at last shall reign;
The cradle song of Christ was never sung in vain.

Bringing Rich and Poor Together

"I cannot forget," said Mr. Sanders, the Scotch farmer, "that all this angel Gospel was revealed to workmen while at their tasks. We are so prone to think that we must wait until we can retire from business, or at least until the work or business of day is over, before we can listen to God. The Psalmist was wont when he said 'In the multitude of my thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my soul.' All through the Bible God talks with busy men at work: to Joseph, Moses and David, shepherding; to Gideon at [illegible] to Peter and Andrew, James and John, at their nets; to Matthew, at the tax office. The monks and [illegible] activities to find God often lose him instead."

"The [illegible]" said Mrs. [illegible] "[illegible] him went the shepherd, but found no glory-lit cave such as the artists picture. They saw in a cattle-[illegible] that by becoming a child of poverty he might win the love of the children, even the children of the poor-[illegible] Gentile magi, wise and powerful, were alike attracted to Christ, who could have said, and every Christian should also be able to say, "earth's every man my friend."

"The magi kneeling before Christ," said the preacher, "which should in our thoughts lie beside the shepherd picture like a companion panel, recalls the remark of Charles Lamb [illegible] a group of friends who had been discussing how they would feel and act if one of the greatest of the dead should appear to them suddenly in flesh and blood. 'And if Christ entered the [illegible] Lamb [illegible] spare entered we should all rise; if He appeared we must kneel.'"

Living Christmas Over Again

"In our day the rich and learned who live for months or years in social settlements among the poor in cordial neighborliness, follow the Christward steps of the wise men; ay, in some human degree, the 'steps' of him who came down from heaven to uplift men. In the words of Edwin Markham:

'Our hope is in heroic men,
Star-led to build the world again.
To this event the ages ran:
Make way for [illegible]
[illegible]

"We must, indeed," said Uncle Will, "translate this story into action. In the words of Angelus Silesius (1620):

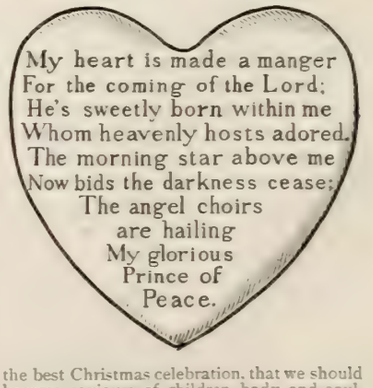
'Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born.
If He's not born in thee thy soul is still forlorn.'"

"Our strong impulse to give at Christmas time," said Mother Manson, "is no doubt a Christ-birth in us. Last year, from immigrants in New York City alone, there went abroad in Christmas week more than a million dollars in more than seventy thousand money orders addressed to kin beyond the sea. When our Christmas gifts go beyond our own family to little ones as poor as Jesus was, we are still more doing it for him and unto him. A touching scene in one family last Christmas was the hanging of a stocking for a little child who had been called from the earthly to the heavenly home. But his memory was kept green by having the remaining brothers and sisters give their gifts just the same as if the dear one were still with them, and then sending the overflowing sock to some needy child, with a note explaining the manner in which it was filled."

Christ, the King of Chronology

January 1, 1900, the first day of the last year of the century, reminds us that every date, and especially a century date, is a mighty argument for the divinity of Christ. No infidel can put in any book any argument against Christ that is not more than answered by the date he must put upon the title-page. Let this new year be indeed a "year of our Lord," not in the Lord's day only, but in every day, every hour, every moment, let us be loyal to the Lord of time and of eternity.

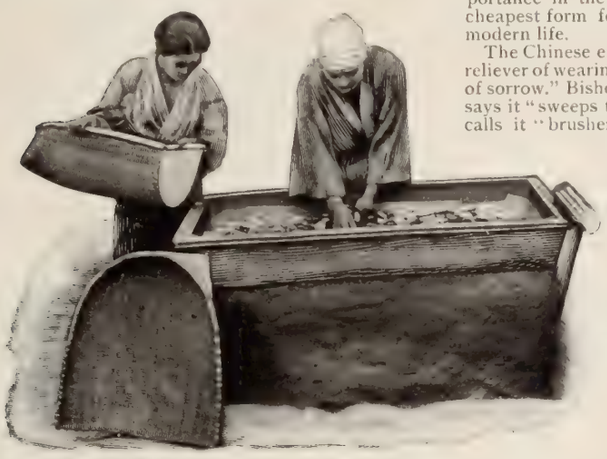
"Let us close with this little heart song to the tune of Webb," said Uncle Will. "Let the child Saviour of Bethlehem suggest as the best Christmas celebration, that we should become saviours of children, body and soul. They can never be safe until they are saved."



The Moral Value of... Tea-... Drinking

BY AMELIA E. BARR

THE singular connection between coffee and the growth of liberal ideas, is not more remarkable than that between tea and theology, and also tea and taxation. This curious union between tea and taxation extends even to the pagan records, for the first notice of it in Chinese literature is that of its taxation A. D. 780.



SIFTING THE NEWLY PICKED TEA

The Dutch East India Company sent their first embassy to the Grand Tartar Cham in 1655, and three years later tea was being sold at the Sultan's head coffee house; but its real history begins with its taxation in 1670, during the reign of Charles II. The tax was then eighteen pence on every gallon made and sold. But inconvenient as it must have been for an excise officer to stand watching the preparation of a gallon of tea, in order to get eighteen pence, this tax continued for seventeen years; then heavy custom dues were substituted, and from 1688 to 1745 was an epoch of excessive taxation on tea. Yet it forced itself into domestic use even when it was sold for thirty shillings a pound. In 1745, the last year of this epoch, England drank only 730,000 pounds of tea; but the duty being then lowered, the next year the consumption reached 2,358,589 pounds. As late as 1806, tea paid an excise of 90 per cent., and yet tea drinking had become so fixed a habit that washerwomen and laborers refused to give it up for any duty.

. . .

THERE is reason for this apparent obstinacy. The laborer did not often buy through the government. Tea which sold in England at twelve shillings a pound, could be bought in Hamburg for twenty pennies a pound, or even less. Smuggling tea was then a profitable business. It was not in human nature to resist 600 per cent., and the smuggler, the seller and the buyer made a three-fold cord of interest not easily managed by the law.

The progress of tea in America was fettered by the same bonds of taxation; and yet it was only a tax of six cents a pound which caused the memorable infusion in Boston harbor. Any other commodity would have done as well "to make room for liberty" but there was a singular fitness in this much-taxed article brewing the cup of retribution.

During its two centuries or more of American life, tea has not found the favor that coffee has done. In the northeastern states it is perhaps the favorite beverage, but in the West it is much less drank than coffee, and as we go South its use constantly diminishes. Still, it requires nearly 100,000,000 of pounds yearly to supply the national tea-pot.

THE virtues of a plant which has won such universal favor in spite of crushing taxation are not by any means negative ones. Liebig proves scientifically that the taste of whole nations for tea and coffee is an infinitely wise instinct, as both supply a principle of vital importance in the easiest and cheapest form for our complex modern life.

The Chinese extol tea as "the reliever of weariness and soother of sorrow." Bishop Huet in 1670 says it "sweeps the brain" and calls it "brusher to the understanding." Dr. Kane speaks gratefully of its unspeakable comfort among Arctic ice, and one of Sydney Smith's charms against melancholy is "to always keep a tea kettle simmering on the hob." This genial soul discovered another merit in a boiling tea-kettle for one evening when taking tea with Mrs. Austin a servant entered the crowded drawingroom with a boiling tea-kettle in his hand. From the steaming kettle the crowd receded on all sides. Mr. Smith among the rest, though he carefully watched the man's progress to the table. "I deciare," he said, "a man who wishes to make his way in life, could do nothing better than go through the world with a boiling tea-kettle in his hand."

It may be safely said that tea has contributed more to the sobriety of nations than the severest laws, or the best moral treatises; and it is certain, that the alliance between coffee and literature is not more close than that between tea and theology. The progress of dissent, especially of Methodism, has been blended with the tea cup; and though there is no intention in this paper to trace the connection between different drinks and dogmas, the fact is one patent to all. Every one has heard of the division of Oxford divines into Arian Tractarian, and Nortwinian Schools, and there are people living who can remember the scornful contempt with which the "three bottle orthodoxy" regarded the Methodist and Independent Church tea meetings. But the theology whose censer is the teapot has now nearly cast out the orthodoxy of the wine cellar.

Tea is the friend of the student, and tea-drinking always accompanies the diffusion of books, and the growth of sedentary habits in a community. Tea drinkers are writers of books, workers at looms, patient watchers of machinery. Tea-drinkers represent the thoughtful, quiet workers of the world, and the tea-table is the kindliest and best beloved of our household altars. The very names of tea and tea-time, stand for whole systems of national industries, and virtues.

Amelia E. Barr

TEA-WEIGHING IN JAPAN

♣

Evangelists on Bicycles

An English exchange relates the following interesting incident: Eighteen ministers of the Wesleyan Church in England repeated an experiment a few weeks ago, which some of them had ventured upon several times in other years. They are all lovers of "the wheel"; they possess an evangelistic spirit; and they desired to mingle the invigoration and recreation of an outing with something like an evangelistic plan and spirit. Under the leadership of the chairman of the district, they made a tour lasting nearly one week, between Sundays, on their wheels, through a delightful rural section of England. By cooperation in advance in certain communities, they were welcomed by the local bicyclists, and a parade was had through the town, ending in the evening hour with a Gospel meeting in the marketplace. To these meetings hundreds of people came, hymn sheets were distributed, the music was inspiring, and the Gospel preaching homely, simple, and direct.

♣

For the "Boys in Blue"

Nearly one thousand soldiers, wearing the blue, keep watch day and night, by storm or shine, at the sea-gate of New York City. They are without home influences and exposed to the temptations of a great city. A committee on Army work of the Y. M. C. A., recently opened in the fort on Governor's Island, a home-like resort with library, games, piano, etc.; and it is much appreciated and liberally patronized. Three evangelistic meetings a week are held; and many soldiers have been encouraged to lead a Christian life. Permission to start a temperance canteen at another point has been secured by the committee. Questions concerning the work will be answered by Secretary H. M. Orne, 3 W. 29th St., New York City.

The Kuzzel-bash Koords

THE Anti-Taurus Mountains, to the north of Harpoot, Armenia, are inhabited by a peculiar race of Koords, called "Kuzzel-bash," or redhead. I never understood the significance of the name. It is not used by the people themselves, as it is a term of reproach. They number, perhaps, 50,000 souls, possibly more. They are divided into tribes, and they owe only a nominal allegiance to the Turkish government. Physically, they are the finest race in the empire. They have not the vices which have made the Turks effeminate; still they are noted brigands. Brigandage is not a crime in their eyes, but something of which to be proud, when it is successful. The most interesting peculiarity of this people is their religion. They are Moslem only in name. They do not accept the Koran, and they do not observe the Moslem prayers, ablutions, pilgrimages and fasts. A people "without a book" hold the lowest rank among Mohammedans, so these Koords claim to have a book; but I have been unable to find a man outside their ranks who has seen it. It is probably a false claim. They undoubtedly had a Christian ancestry. This is the tradition among themselves. They claim to be followers of Ali, son-in-law of Mohammed, but they have told me that this was a name which they used originally for Christ in order to deceive the Turks. There are ruins of churches and monasteries among them, and some of their villages still bear Christian names. There is an organization among them something like a church; that is, the members are carefully chosen; they are excommunicated for serious offences, and they have secret meetings in the evening at which bread and water are passed around—probably as a relic of the communion. Their religious teachers are called Seids. The office is hereditary.

KOORDISH CHIEFS OF HARPOOT

Some of the Kuzzel-bash believe in the transmigration of souls, while others say that at death the soul returns to its original source, that is, God. This means that they are Pantheists. All this means that although they may have had a Christian ancestry, there is nothing of the spirit of Christianity left among them. They are more susceptible to Christian influences than are the Turks, and they have sometimes asked for Christian teachers. This, however, was more in the hope of some political gain than through a desire for the truth; and, besides, the government would resent any attempt to introduce Christianity among them, although if they were to be brought under the influence of the Gospel it would be a great boon to the government itself, for they are a source of constant trouble and anxiety.

The accompanying photograph represents some of the leading men among the Kuzzel-bash. The one on the left is Seid Ibrahim, the most influential religious teacher among the mountains. Our Governor honored him with a gay, heavily embroidered red cloak, in recognition of his promise of allegiance.

HERMAN N. BARNUM.

Harpoot, Turkey.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES
LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR.
T. DeWitt Talmage
EDITOR.
B. J. FERNIE, G. H. SANDISON.
Associate Editors.

The Christian Herald is published every Wednesday. Price [illegible] per year; [illegible]

Subscriptions may commence with any number.

Remittances should be made by check, draft, or money order, or in the manner available to the remitter. Post-office and Express Money Orders are always safe and may be sent at our own risk.

Register your letters when you remit by cash.

Foreign Postage. [illegible] outside the United States, the Canadas, and Mexico, foreign postage at the rate of one dollar a year should be added to the regular subscription price.

Renewals. It is always best to notify us [illegible] before the date on your wrapper, to ensure uninterrupted service.

Back Numbers. We cannot undertake to supply back numbers, nor to make good omissions caused by tardy renewals.

Change of Date.—It takes two weeks to change the date after your request [illegible]

Expiration of subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your paper will be stopped unless promptly renewed.

Change of Address.—Always give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

The Name of your Post-office and of the State you live in should always follow your own name when writing to this office. We cannot find your name on our books unless this is done.

The Christian Herald will not be responsible for the return of unsolicited manuscripts forwarded to it with a view to publication.

Letters should be addressed

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD,
Bible House, New York City.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York as Second-class Matter.

The Newsboys

THERE is no class of persons, juvenile or adult, in our communities who earn their living more honestly than the newsboys. Many of these boys sell both morning and evening papers. At work at four o'clock in the morning; and at half past three in the morning, by unnatural vigilance, awake themselves, or pulled out sometimes by rough hands. In the dawn of the day standing before the folding-rooms of the great newspaper offices, taking the wet, damp sheets over their arms and against their chests, already shivering with the cold. Around the bleak ferries and up and down the streets on the stormy days, singing as merrily as though it were a Christmas carol; making half a cent on each paper, some of them working fourteen hours for fifty cents; nine thousand of these newsboys applied for aid at the Newsboys' Lodging House, on Park Row, New York, in one year. About 1,000 of these boys laid up in the Savings Bank connected with that institution more than $3,000. But still this great army marches on, hungry, cold, sick, toward an early grave.

There is nothing that so moves my compassion on a cold winter morning as to see one of these newsboys, a fourth clad, newspapers on his arm that he cannot seem to sell, face or hands bleeding from a fall, or rubbing his knee to relieve it from having been hit on the side of a car as some "gentleman" with furs around his neck and gauntlets lined with lamb's wool, shoved him off saying, "You miserable rat!" Yet hawking the papers through the streets—papers full of railroad accidents and factory explosions and steamers foundering at sea in the last storm, and yet saying nothing about that which is to him worse than all the other calamities and all the other disasters, the calamity that he was ever born at all. To-night, at 11 or 12 o'clock, look at these poor fellows for a little while unconscious of all their pains and aches, and all the storms and the darkness, once in a while struggling in their dreams as though some one were trying to take the papers away from them. Standing there, you wonder if it would be right to wish that for their own sakes they might never wake up.

God pity them! They are immortals struggling for bread. Many of these newsboys are not only earning their own livlihood, but are supporting a sick mother or invalid father. When you can afford it, buy their wares and do not begrudge them the money. And in these holiday times, so far as you can, make them happy.

The University a Microcosm

THE University is a microcosm, a world in miniature. Some of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD are in a university. You will find it all here; just as it is in the greater world. And here you may learn that self-mastery, that independence of character, that honorable individuality, which will fit you for the larger community, of which this community is the type. Such schools have fostered the virtues and accomplishments of the past. The school you attend is ready to be to you an Alma Mater; a generous and bountiful mother. Take pride in its name and achievements. Make your contribution to its larger and larger successes. Your teachers allow you a sufficiently wide margin for the play of individuality. Be yourselves, your better selves; assured that what you here become, will be of use to your generation. You are a part and parcel of this community. You cannot be dishonorable, without dishonor comes to it. You cannot be noble, without ennobling it.

When Socrates was asked, "Of what country he professed to be a citizen?" he said, "Of the world." You and I cannot say a less thing than that; we cannot say a greater. It is not for men of our period to see visions on the isle of Patmos. It is to help realize the visions seen there by the beloved disciple, when he wrote: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting Gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred and tribe and people." And if men ask, "Who follows in his train?" let us answer, "Here am I, send me." Wherever our lot may be cast, in whatever station, whatsoever our employment or profession, when we go forth, may our day and generation find us girded for our part in the great struggle, which shall give the kingdom to our God and his Christ, that we may reign with him forever!

Sermonic Vocabulary

ONE of the mightiest hindrances to the progress of the Gospel is the usual sermonic vocabulary. It has for the most part been inherited from the ages past. Certain styles of phraseology were adopted by the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries which the nineteenth century has appropriated. Why should we put our thoughts for pulpit address in modes of expression belonging to other times? As well adopt for our day the cocked-hat and knee-buckles, and hair twisted into a cue, common in seventeen hundred and seventy-six. Clergymen sprightly, and interesting on platforms, and at literary banquets, and in social circles are often dull in the pulpit. It is a fact that everybody knows, although it may be hazardous to state it, that the phraseology in sermonic delivery is often soporific. People who are troubled with insomnia on Saturday night when they want to sleep, the next morning nod their heads in somnolence at the Sabbath service whenever they want to keep awake.

Some of the greatest efforts of all our lives have been the efforts to keep attentive while seated under some able and learned sermon on "Fore-ordination," and "The eternal generation of the Son." The themes of the Gospel which are the sublimest and most stirring themes in the universe, when put into phraseology which we have heard and read all our lives, act as a lullaby, a religious narcotic, a holy anodyne. What right have we to shut ourselves up to a few hundred words of utterance when out of the more than 114,000 words of our language, we might make an entertaining and a rousing selection? What a glorious legacy Noah Webster left us in his Dictionary, although his friend Trumbull said of him, "Webster has returned and brought with him a very pretty wife. I wish him success; but I doubt in the present decay of business in our profession whether his profits will enable him to keep up the style he sets out with. I fear he will breakfast upon Institutes, dine upon Dissertations, and go to bed supperless." Fortunately the prophecy failed. When with such opulence of words we confine ourselves to a worn-out, threadbare diction, we are like misers who have fifty thousand dollars in bonds and mortgages, and yet live on ten cents a day.

In the whole religious vocabulary, oh, the enfeebled adjectives, and the conjunctions that do not conjoin, and the verbs that fail to express action, and the words that have so long rung through churches and religious circles that they have no power to arrest attention! The most effective ministers of the Gospel in the past would not consent to be bound. When Jonathan Edwards preached his renowned sermon on "The Sinner in the Hands of an Angry God," and Thomas Chalmers his famous sermon on "The Expulsive Power of a New Affection," and Merle d'Aubigne his sermon on "The Three Onlys," and Doctor Candlish his sermon on "The Universal Doom," and John Cumming his sermon on "The Great Tribulation," and Francis Wayland his sermon on "The Moral Dignity of Missions," and George W. Bethune his sermon on "Victory Over Death and the Grave," and Tholuck his sermon on "Christ the Touchstone of Human Hearts," they chose an independent and therefore potent phraseology. Rufus Choate in his profession of the law, used 11,693 unrepeated words: John Milton in literary production, employed 8,000 unrepeated words: Shakespeare in his dramas wielded 15,000 unrepeated words: but the majority of preachers of the Gospel employ less than 3,000.

"Oh!" I hear some one exclaiming, "words are nothing!" My reply is that the Holy Bible is nothing but words inspired, and words under God will yet redeem all nations. What we, the preachers of the Gospel, most need to-day is, first, more Holy Ghost power, and next, an enlarged, and enriched and regenerated vocabulary.

Correspondence that Explains Itself

To the Editor: ST. LOUIS, MO.

Don't you think that your new serial, "Around the World with Aunt Samantha," is [illegible] for your readers to appreciate? The odd spelling and [illegible] of grammar, the queer [illegible], and the rather free-and-easy way the author has of handling matters generally, seem to be out of harmony with the rest of the paper. We who have been accustomed to find so many good things in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD hardly know how to regard "Samantha" and her ways. J. C. R.

We thank you for the frank expression of your opinion. We think, however, that if you will bear with us a little, you will soon find that we have an object in publishing that particular serial. You will find discussed in it questions which, if published on our editorial page or in the ordinary reading columns, would not attract the attention, or make the impression which their discussion in this form will insure. Miss Holley's writings, as a reform agency, have been a great influence in the past. We believe the present serial to be her supreme effort in the interests of temperance, justice, humanity and religion.

But we must not anticipate to such an extent as to eliminate the charm of novelty and surprise. Before many weeks, those of our readers who now differ from us will be inclined to change their views, and all will appreciate "Samantha" as cordially as anything they have ever read.

WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA

SOME years ago we offered 5,000 sets of the World Wide Encyclopedia and hundreds of orders could not be filled. Since then the World Wide Encyclopedia has been enlarged by about 3,000 pages, making nearly 10,000 in all, and brought down to this year, including the Spanish-American War. It has been printed on heavier paper, with larger margins, and put up in twelve Substantial Volumes, beautifully bound in drab T cloth. It is sold elsewhere at thirty dollars, but as we purchased a very large edition on a cash basis, we can afford to cut the price in two, on monthly instalments of one dollar, with ten per cent. off for spot cash. Every set is accompanied by a "Key to Systematic Reading," enabling the possessor to pursue any given course of study.

Abraham Lincoln was a poor boy, but while a rail-splitter he spent his evenings in study and fitted himself for a life that made him immortal.

Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, could not read when he married. His wife taught him, after which he devoted himself to self-culture, becoming a man among men; Governor, Senator, Vice-president and President.

Peter Cooper was a self-made man, as was Hiram Sibley, who left his father's farm destitute of ordinary schooling, but later in life achieved fame and fortune; and Henry Wilson, the Natick cobbler, became Vice-president of the United States.

With the knowledge of the alphabet, a World Wide Encyclopedia will open to you all the avenues to literature, science, mechanics and invention, and with reasonable application, guided by the "Key," any one can obtain the knowledge of that which will fit him for greater usefulness and enable him to win the admiration and respect of his fellow men.

You cannot make an investment of a dollar a month that in the end will enable you to accomplish grander results than will the purchase of a set of the World Wide Encyclopedia, provided you apply yourself with reasonable diligence to its study.

The set weighs forty pounds and is sent securely boxed, by freight, at the purchaser's expense, on receipt of only One Dollar and a pledge of one dollar a month for fourteen months.

BRIEF NOTES

The receipts of the Board of Missions of the Reformed Dutch Church for November were $[illegible] in advance of the corresponding month of last year of $1,086. For the seven months from May 1 to December 1, the total receipts were $37,[illegible], being $[illegible] more than for the same months of 1898.

Rev. Louis Bryde, a missionary of the Church Missionary Society, who is laboring in the south of Hunan, China, finding that no one dare rent a house to him, has bought a boat which he has moored to the shore. He preaches as Christ did to the people on the beach, and is heard with attention.

The friends at the Central Union Mission in Washington, D. C., were able to give an excellent dinner on Thanksgiving Day to a number of homeless people. Dr. Talmage sent the managers of the Mission a check for a hundred dollars to pay for the dinner and to aid in the religious work of the Mission.

Madame von Finkelstein Mountford, who was born and brought up in Jerusalem, and who has lectured in all parts of the world, has been giving a series of interesting lectures on "Life and Scenes in Palestine," illustrated by Oriental customs and costumes, before the Art and Science Institute, Brooklyn.

Rev. Thomas Harrison is holding services in St. Louis, Mo. The meetings are held in the Centenary Church, of which Dr. Young is pastor. Among the most enthusiastic of Mr. Harrison's helpers are men and women who were converted under his preaching at a revival held in the same church fourteen years ago.

Rev. Dr. George H. Hepworth, of the New York Herald, who is in Utah studying the Mormon problem, announces that polygamy is rampant, that plural wives perjure themselves to save their husbands, believing it a religious duty; and, that in his opinion, the best remedy is an amendment to the constitution of the United States giving jurisdiction to the Federal courts.

In Memory of Washington

IMPOSING ceremonies marked the one hundredth anniversary of the death of George Washington. At Mount Vernon, the President delivered an oration, and elaborate Masonic rites were celebrated at the present tomb and at the tomb in which the body of the First President was originally placed. As Washington was a Freemason of high degree, the Grand Masters of the original thirteen States honored his memory by reciting the quaint ritual with which the death of illustrious members of the Order is commemorated. Later in the day the Order of Red Men held observance. In New York, the celebration centred about St. Paul's church, which Washington usually attended, and the Jumel Mansion, where his headquarters were after the Battle of Harlem Heights. The front of the church was decorated with the national flag and festoons of red, white and blue bunting. Within, the pulpit was wrapped in the Stars and Stripes and the galleries were decked with the Colonial Colors, the flag of the Order of the Cincinnati and of the Sons of the Revolution. The pew in which the Father of his Country used to sit, has been carefully preserved. It was decked with flags which were grouped around the National Coat of Arms. Solemn services were conducted in the church by the rector, assisted by Dr. Dix, rector of Trinity Church, and other eminent clergymen. In the Jumel Mansion, the services were held in the room which had served Washington as a council chamber. Memorial exercises were held also in the public schools of the city and in the chief Masonic lodges. It is well that such an anniversary should be celebrated, so that the rising generation may perceive what is the kind of man whom a whole nation holds in reverent esteem.

The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance (Ps. 112:6).

Check to British Arms

Not within the memory of the present generation have the people of Great Britain received in one week news of three such disasters as those reported from South Africa. The repulse of Gen. Gatacre, mentioned in these columns last week, was followed by the defeat of Lord Methuen at Magersfontein, and that by a still more humiliating disaster to Gen. Buller's force at the Tugela River. In the case of Lord Methuen, whose object in his march northward, is the relief of the beleaguered town of Kimberley, the disaster appears to have been caused by his underestimating the strength of the Boers' position. They had protected their trenches with barbed wire, to ward off a bayonet charge and they allowed their assailants to approach within rifle range, instead of disclosing their position by artillery fire early in the engagement. The Black Watch, one of the most famous regiments in the British army, led the attack and was supported by the Guards. Both regiments suffered severely, when the Boer riflemen opened fire from the trenches. It was impossible to carry the position by assault, and after an ineffective artillery fire, Methuen retreated to his former position on the Modder River. He lost 963 in killed, wounded and missing, seventy of whom were officers. Among the killed was the famous Gen. Wauchope, an officer greatly beloved, who had won distinction in other campaigns. Gen Buller's repulse at the Tugela was a still heavier disaster. He had selected two places on the river, two miles apart, at which a passage appeared possible. That on the left was attempted first, but it was clear, early in the day, that it was impracticable. The force on the right was then pushed forward; but a blunder at the outset prevented the attempt to cross being made. Col. Long, who commanded the artillery, with which the way was to have been opened, ran his guns to the edge of the river, to bring them into effective range. He was instantly assailed by a deadly fire from riflemen concealed in the river, which killed the horses and drove the men from their guns. A gallant attempt was made to drag the guns back, but the effort involved so fearful a sacrifice of life that Gen. Buller would not allow it to continue. The guns were therefore abandoned to the Boers, and the force withdrew to the position it had occupied before the engagement. The losses in killed, wounded and missing were 1,097 men and eleven guns, one of which had been rendered useless. The disaster increases British anxiety for the safety of Ladysmith, to the relief of which Gen. Buller was marching, when it occurred. Sorrow in Great Britain is intense and a day of humiliation and prayer is to be appointed. Every one, from the Queen to the humblest subject, feels the situation acutely; but as yet there is no disposition manifested to withdraw from the disastrous undertaking. More officers and men are to be sent out, and Lord Roberts, England's greatest Field Marshal, is to have supreme command, with Gen. Kitchener, the hero of the Soudan, as his chief of staff. This means a prolongation of the war and more of the hideous carnage, which is causing anguish and heartbreak in many a home in the Transvaal, as well as in England. Even the men whose blundering diplomacy led to the war and the unthinking multitude who clamored for it, must surely see by this time how horrible a thing war is. The Christians of both lands need to give themselves to prayer to God, who alone can bring the conflict to an end.

He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth: he breaketh the bow and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire (Ps. 46:9).

A Dog Maligned

A New York policeman saved the life of a dog a few days ago, much to the joy of its owner. The policeman, who is a lover of dogs, was stationed near one of the ferries. Among the passengers who had crossed over from Jersey City was a young man who was leading a collie dog by a chain. He had scarcely emerged from the ferry-house, when the dog began to tug at the chain and to froth at the mouth. A crowd gathered around, and some one called out, "Mad dog!" The crowd quickly dispersed, and the policeman came up. The dog was uttering short yelps, snapping viciously and struggling at his chain. His owner said, "I suppose, Officer, you will have to shoot him, though I shall be sorry to lose him." The policeman looked the dog over carefully, and then declared that he was not mad. A pail of water was flung over the animal, and in a few minutes he recovered. "There is not more than one dog in a hundred," said the officer, "that are shot by the police of the city who is really mad. Ninety-nine of them might be saved by such treatment." Doubtless there are some men who have suffered through a similar mistake. When society gets better knowledge, it will cease to administer punishments which makes the wrong-doer a hardened criminal, and adopt remedial measures which will restore him to his place in the world, a reformed man.

Make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed (Heb. 12:13).

An Offer of Pedigrees

A foreign nobleman, now in New York, is said to have come to this country on a curious mission. Under his supervision and with the facilities that his standing in European society gives him, an elaborate history of the noble families of Europe is being prepared. Their origin, their matrimonial alliances, their achievements in politics, war and the church are duly chronicled, and their descendants traced as far as is possible to the present time. The cost of this work is $2,750, but single volumes may be bought for two hundred dollars. The aristocratic compiler is here to trace the American descendants of these families so as to include them in his history. It is currently reported that he has already found numerous purchasers in spite of the extraordinary price of the books. It is a pity that such people do not look forward instead of backward. The honor of having their names inscribed in the record of the noblest family on earth is trivial compared with that honor which God promises to the followers of his Son.

In this rejoice not, but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven (Luke 10:20).

Wicked Wills Upheld

The Surrogate of New York, in admitting a will to probate last week, took occasion to express his regret that his court had no power to prevent such wills as the one then under consideration being executed. He said: "Probate of a will cannot be refused merely because the court considers that the will is absurd, unjust, unnatural, cruel, immoral or improper, and that the testator was wicked or unjust. We have seen many cases of men, miserly, parsimonious, neglectful and perhaps cruel, to those of their own family and household, who expend the money which should be applied to the support and maintenance of the natural objects of their bounty, either in reckless extravagance, dissipation, gambling or illicit relations. And yet we all recognize the fact that a man has an absolute legal right to do what he will with his own property so long as there is no actual violation of the civil or criminal law. The same right may be exercised as to testamentary disposition of the property and the court is bound to respect it even when the wickedness of it is obvious." It is a pity that it should be so, but it will easily be seen that the courts would exceed their rights if they interfered with the rights of the individual. The same principle needs to be recognized in considering the government of God. He does not put a summary end to sin, but allows it to work out its legitimate results that men may see what an evil thing it is.

WASHINGTON'S PEW IN ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, NEW YORK, DECORATED ON DEC. 14

GENERAL SIR REDVERS BULLER

Though a sinner do evil a hundred times and his days be prolonged, yet surely I know that it shall be well with them that fear God (Eccles. 8:12).

Daring Rescue at a Fire

The presence of mind and undaunted courage of a citizen of New York prevented the death of a woman at a fire last week. She was asleep on the third story of a tenement house, when the cry of fire was raised and she awoke to find her room full of smoke. The fire had started in the basement and had reached the upper floors without being discovered. On opening her door she saw with consternation that the staircase was burning furiously. She ran to the window and opened it. The people in the street below called to her not to jump, as the firemen were coming; but the flames were close behind her and she dare not stay. She climbed out and stood on the sill covering her eyes with her hands. Then the crowd below held their breath in intense emotion. They saw the figure of a man crawling along a narrow ledge which ran underneath the window at which the woman stood. He came from the adjoining house and was going to her rescue. As he put out his hand to help her to the ledge, she fainted and fell forward. Her weight nearly carried them both to the street below, but fortunately, the man's hand caught a projecting rod and steadied him. With his helpless burden on his shoulder he crept cautiously back to his own window where the inmates of the room took hold of the woman and lifted her in, while the crowd cheered the brave man. Everyone honors a man who would thus deliberately imperil his own life to save the life of another, but how few there are who are moved by the story of that divine sacrifice by which the way of escape from eternal death was opened to the whole human race:

I am the Good Shepherd: the Good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep (John 10:11).

AROUND THE WORLD WITH AUNT SAMANTHA

COPYRIGHT 1899 BY MARIETTA HOLLEY

CHAPTER IV.

Samantha Greets Phila Ann

JEST as we left the tarven at Chicago our mail wuz put in our hands, forwarded by the Jonesville postmaster accordin' to promise; but not a word from my pardner, roustin' up my apprehensions afresh. Had his fond heart broken under the too great strain? Had he passed away callin' on my name?

GETTING READY FOR DEPARTURE

My tears dribbled down onto my dress waist, though I tried to stanch 'em with my snowy linen handkerchief. Tommy's tears, too, begun to fall, seein' which I grabbed holt of Duty's black apron-strings and wuz agin calm on the outside, and handed Tommy a choclate drop (which healed his woond), although on the inside my heart kep' on a seethin' reservoir of agony and forbodin's.

The next day, as I sot in my comfortable easy chair on the car, knittin' a little, tryin' to take my mind offen trouble and Josiah, Tommy wuz settin' by my side, and Miss Meechim and Dorothy nigh by, Aronette, like a little angel of Help, fixin' the cushions under our feet, brushin' the dust offen her mistresse's dresses, or pickin' up my stitches when in my agitation or the jigglin' of the cars I dropped 'em, and a perfect Arabian Night's entertainer to Tommy, who worshiped her, when I hearn a exclamation from Tommy, and the car door shet, and I looked round and see a young man and woman advancin' down the isle. They wuz a bridal couple, that anybody could see. The blessed fact could be seen in their hull personality—dress, demeanor, shinin' new satchels and everything, but I didn't recognize 'em till Tommy sez:

"Oh, grandma, there is Phila Henzy and the man she married!"

Could it be? Yes it wuz Phila Ann Henzy, Philemon Henzy's oldest girl, named for her pa and ma, I knew she wuz married in Loontown the week before. I'd hearn on't, but had never seen the groom, but knew that he wuz a young chap she had met to the World's Fair, and who had courted her more or less ever sence. They seemed real glad to see me, though their manners and smiles and hull demeanors seemed kinder new, somehow, like their clothes. They had hearn from friends in Jonesville that I wuz on my way to California, and they'd been lookin for me. Sez the groom, with a fond look on her:

"I am so glad we found you, for Baby would have been so disappointed if we hadn't met you."

Baby! Phila Ann wuz six feet high if she wuz a inch, but good lookin' in a big sized way. And he wuz barely five feet, and scrawny at that; but a good amiable lookin' young man. But I didn't approve of his callin' her Baby when she could have carried him easy on one arm and not felt it. The Henzys are all big sized, and Ann, her ma, could always clean her upper buttery shelves without gittin' up in a chair, reach right up from the floor.

But he probable had noble qualities if he wuz spindlin' lookin', or she couldn't adore him as she did. Phila Ann jest worshiped him as I could see, and he her, visey versey. Sez she, with a tender look down onto him:

"Yes, I've been tellin' pa how I did hope we should meet you."

Pa! There wuz sunthin' else I didn't approve of; callin' him pa, when the fact that they wuz on their bridal tower wuz stomped on 'em both jest as plain as I ever stomped a pat of butter with clover leaves. But I didn't spoze I could do anything to help or hender, for I realized that they wuz both in a state of delerium or trance. But I meditated further as I looked on, it wouldn't probable last no great lenght of time. The "honeymoon would be clouded over anon or before that. The clouds would clear away agin, no doubt, and the sun of Love shine out permanent if their affection for each other wuz cast-iron and sincere. But the light of this magic moon I knew would never shine on 'em agin. The light of that moon makes things look dretful queer, and casts strange shadders onto things, and folks laugh at it, but no other light is so heavenly bright while it lasts. I think so and so duz Josiah.

"THEY WUZ A BRIDAL COUPLE—THAT ANYBODY COULD SEE"

But to resoom forwards. The groom went somewhere to send a telegram, and Phila sot down by me for a spell, their seat wuz further off but she wanted to talk with me. She wuz real happy and confided in me, and remarked "What a lovely state matrimony is."

And I sez, "Yes indeed! it is, but you hain't got fur enough along in marriage gography to bound the state on all sides as you will in the future."

But she smiled blissful and her eyes looked fur off in rapped delight (the light of that moon shin' full on her) as she said:

"What bliss it is for me to know that I have got sunthin to lean on."

And I thought that it would be sad day for him if she leaned her hull heft, but didn't say so, not knowin' how it would be took.

I inquired all about the neighbors in Jonesville and Zoar and Loontown, and sez I, "I spoze Elder White is still doin' all he can for that meetin' house of hisen in Loontown, and I inquired particular about him, for Ernest White is a young man I set store by. He come from his home in Boston to visit his uncle, the banker, in East Loontown. He wuz right from the German university and college and preachin' school, and he wuz so rich he might have sot down and twiddled his thumbs for the rest of his days. But he had a passion for work—a passion of pity for poor tempted humanity. He wanted to reach down and try to lift up the strugglin' "submerged tenth." He wuz a student and disciple of Ruskin, and felt that he must carry a message of helpfulness and beauty into the starved lives of the poor. And, best of all, he wuz a follower of Jesus, who went about doin' good.

When his rich family found that he would be a clergyman they wanted to git him a big city church, and he might have had twenty, for he wuz smart as a whip, handsome, rich, and jest run after in society. But no: he said there wuz plenty to take those rich fat places: he would work amongst the poor, them who needed him.

DOROTHY AND TOMMY

East Loontown is a factory village, and the little chapel was standin' empty for want of funds, but twenty saloons wuz booming, full of the operatives, who spent all of their spare time and most of their money there. So Ernest White stayed right there and preached, at first to empty seats and a few old wimmen, but as they got to know him, the best young men and young wimmen went, and he filled their hearts with aspiration and hope and beauty and determination to help the world. Not being contented with what he wuz doing he spent half his time with the factory hands, who wuz driven to work by Want, and harried by the mighty foe, Intemperance. A saloon on every corner and block, our twin American idols, Intemperance and Greed, taking every cent of money from the poor worshipers, to pour into the greedy pockets of the priesthood, the saloon-keepers, brewers, whiskey men and the Government, and all who fatten on the corpse of manhood.

Well, he just threw himself into the work of helping those poor souls, and helping them as he did in sickness and health they got to liking him, so that they wuz willing to go and hear him preach, which was one hard blow to the Demon. The next thing he got all the ministers he could to unite in a Church Union to fight the Liquor Power, and undertaking it in the right way, at the ballot-box, they got it pretty well subdued, and as sane minds begun to reign in healthier bodies, better times come.

Elder White not only preached every Sunday, but kep' his church open every evening of the week, and his boys and girls met there for healthful and innocent amusements. He got a good library, all sorts of good games, music; and had short, interesting lectures and entertainments and his Church of Love rivaled the Idol Temples and drew away its idol worshipers one by one, and besides the ministers, many prominent business men helped him; my son, Thomas J, is forward in helpin' it along. And they say that besides all the good they're doing, they have good times too, and enjoy themselves first-rate evenings. They don't stay out late—that's another thing Elder White is trying to inculcate into their minds—right living in the way of health as well as morals. Every little while he and somebody else who is fitted for it gives short talks on subjects that will help the boys and girls along in Temperance in all things. The young folks jest worship him, so they say, and I wuz glad to hear right from him. Phila is a worker in his meetin' house, and a active member, and so is her pa and ma, and she said that there wuz no tellin' how much good he had done.

"When he come there," sez she, "there wuz twenty saloons goin' full blast in a village of two thousand inhabitants and the mill operatives wuz spendin' most all they earnt there, leavin' their families to suffer and half starve; but when Elder White opened his Church of Love week day evenin's as well as Sunday, you have no idee what a change there is. There isn't a saloon in the place. He has made his church so pleasant for the young folks that he has drawn away crowds that used to fill the saloons."

"Yes," sez I, "Thomas J. is dretful interested in it; he has gin three lectures there."

"Yes, most all the best citizens have joined the Help Union to fight aginst the Whiskey Power, though" sez Phila, "there is one or two ministers who are afraid of contaminating their religion by politics. They had ruther stand up in their pulpits and preach to a lot of wimmen about the old Jews and the day of Pentacost than take holt and do a man's work in a man's way—the only practical way, grapple with the monster Evil at its lair, where it breeds and fattens—the ballot-box."

"Yes," sez I, "a good many ministers think that they can't descend into the filthy pool of politics. But it hain't reasonable, for how are you a goin' to clean out a filthy place if them that want it clean stand on the bank and hold their noses with one hand, and jester with the other, and quote scripter? And them that don't want it clean are throwin' slime and dirt into it all the time, heapin' up the loathsome filth. Somebody has got to take holt and work as well as pray, if these plague spots and misery breeders are ever purified."

"Well, Elder White is doin' all he can," sez Phila. "He went right to the polls 'lection day and worked all day; for the Whiskey Power wuz all riz up and watchin' and workin' for its life, you may say, bound to draw back into its clutches some of the men that Elder White, with the Lord's help, had saved. They exerted all their influence, liquor run free all day and all the night before, tryin' to brutalize and craze the men into votin' as the Liquor Power dictated. But Elder White knew what they wuz about, and he and all the earnest helpers he could muster used all their power and influence, and the election wuz a triumph for the Right. East Loontown went no-license, and not a saloon curses its streets to-day. North Loontown, where the minister felt that he wuz too good to touch the political pole, went license, and five more filthy pools wuz opened there for his flock to fall into, to breed vile influences that will overpower all the good influence he can possibly bring to bear on the souls committed to his care."

"But," sez I, "he is writin' commentaries on ancient sins, so he won't sense it so much. He's jest carried away with his work."

Sez Phila, "He had better be actin' out a commentary on modern sins. What business has he to be rakin' over the old ashes of Sodom and Gomorrah for bones of antediluvian sinners, and leave his livin' flock to be burnt and choked by the fire and flames of the present volcano of crime, the Liquor System, that belches forth all the time."

"Well, he wuz made so," sez I.

"Well, he had better git down out of the pulpit," sez Phila, "and let some one git up there who can see a sinner right under his nose, and try to drag him out of danger and ruin, and not have to look over a dozen centuries to find him."

"Well, I am thankful for Ernest White, and I have felt that he and Waitstill Webb wuz jest made for each other. He thinks his eyes of her I know. When she went and nursed the factory hands when the typhoid fever broke out he said that 'she wuz like a angel of Mercy.'"

"They said he looked like a angel of Wrath 'lection day," sez Phila. "You know how fair his face is, and how his clear gray eyes seem to look right through you, and through shams and shames of every kind. Well, that day they said that his face fairly shone and he did the work of ten men."

"That is because his heart is pure," sez I, "like that Mr. Gallyhed I heard Thomas J. read about; you know it sez:

"'His strength is as the strength of ten
Because his heart is pure.'

"And oh!" sez I agin, "how I would love to see him and Waitstill Webb married, and happy."

"So would I," sez Phila. "Oh, it is such a beautiful state, matrimony is."

"And he needs a wife," sez I. "You know he wouldn't stay with his uncle but said that he must live with his people who needed him, so he boards there at the Widder Pooler's."

"Yes," sez Phila, "and though she worships him, she had rather any day play the part of Mary than that of Martha—she had rather be sittin' at his feet and learnin' of him—than cookin' good nourishin' food and makin' a clean, sweet home for him. But he don't complain."

"What a companion Waitstill would be for him?" I sez agin.

"Yes," sez Phila, "but I don't believe she will ever marry any one, she looks so sad."

"It seems jest if they wuz made for each other," sez I, "and I know he worships the ground she walks on. But I don't know as she will ever marry any one after what she has went through," and I sithed.

"She would marry," sez Phila warmly, "if she knew what a lovely, lovely state it wuz."

How strange it is that some folks are as soft as putty on some subjects and real cute on others. Phila knew enough on any other subject only jest marriage. But I spozed that her brain would harden up on this subject when she got more familiar with it—they generally do. And the light of that moon I spoke on liquifies common sense and a state, putty soft, ensues; but cold weather hardens putty, and I knew that she would git over it. But even as I methought, Phila sez, "I must go to my seat, pa will be lookin' for me." I see Miss Meechim smotherin' a smile on her lace-edged handkerchief, and Dorothy's eyes kinder laughin' at the idee of a bride callin' her husband "pa."

But the groom returned at jest that minute, and I introduced 'em both to Miss Meechim and Dorothy, and we had quite a good little visit. But anon, the groom mentioned incidentally that they wuz a goin' to live in Salt Lake City.

"Why!" sez I in horrow, "you hain't a goin' to jine the Mormons are you?"

And as I said that I see Miss Meechim kinder git Dorothy behind her, as if to protect her from what might be. But I knew that there wuzn't no danger from the groom's flirtin' with any other female or tryin' to git 'em sealed to him, for quite a spell I knew that he felt himself as much alone with Baby as if them two wuz on a oasis in the middle of the desert of Sarah. I knew that it would be some months before he waked up to the fact of their bein' another woman in the world. And oh, how Phila scoffed at the idee of pa jinin' the Mormons. They had bought part of a store of a Gentile and wuz goin' to be pardners with him and kinder grow up with the country. I felt that they wuz a likely couple and would do well, but rememberin' Dorothy's and Miss Meechim's smiles I reached up and stiddied myself on that apron-string of Duty, and took Phila out one side and advised her not to call her bridegroom pa. Sez I, "You hain't but jest married and it don't look well."

And she said that "Her ma always called her father pa."

"Well," sez I, "if you'll take the advice of a old Jonesvillian and well-wisher, you'll wait till you're a few year's older before you call him pa."

And she sez, lookin' admirin'ly at him, "I spoze I might call him papa."

Well, you can't put sense into a certain bump in anybody's head if it wuzn't made there in the first place there are holler places in heads that you can't fill up, do your best. But oh! how her devoted love to him put me in mind of myself, and how his small sized devotion to her—how it reminded me of him who wuz fur away—and oh, why did I not hear from him! my heart sunk nearly into my shues as I foreboded about it.

"ERNEST WHITE THREW HIMSELF INTO THE WORK OF HELPING THOSE POOR SOULS"

It seemed as if everything brung him up before me, the provisions we had on the dining car wuz good and plenty of 'em, and how they made me think of him, who wuz a good provider. The long, long days and nights of travel, the jar and motion of the cars made me think of him who often wuz restless and oneasy. And even the sand of the desert between Cheyenne and Denver, even that sand brought me fond remembrances of one who wuz sandy complected when in his prime. And oh! when did I not think of him? Christmas had gone by, but how could we celebrate it without a home to set up a Christmas tree, or set out a table with good Jonesville vittles. How I thought on him who made a holiday in my heart by his presence, and always helped me put the leaves in the extension table.

Tommy wanted to hang up his little stockin', and did, hangin' it out like a little red signal of distress over the side of his top shelf, and we filled it with everything good we could git hold on.

Dorothy put in a little silver watch she had bought on her travels, not bigger than a warnut, and Miss Meechim put in some of the toys she had bought for children of her acquaintance. I got a good little picture book for him in Chicago, and a set of Authors, and Aronette gin him two little linen handkerchiefs, hemstitched by herself, and his name, "Tommy," worked in the corners. He wuz real tickled with 'em all. I told Miss Meechim that I had hoped to spend Christmas in Salt Lake City. Knowin' that it wuz a warm climate, I thought that I could have a Christmas tree out doors; I thought tha I could take one of them big pine trees I'd read on, and invite Brigham Young's wives, the hull on 'em, to my party, bein' out doors I thought there would be room for 'em all, poor creeters!

"HE LAID UP AGINST ME AND CRIED"

But Miss Meechim is very cautious, and she said that she wuz afraid that such a party given by folks in my high position might have a tendency to encourage polygamy.

And I said, "I would rather give a dollar bill than do that, and mebbe I had better give it up, for we shant git there in time, anyway."

And so I did, and spent the Christmas holidays on the cars, and tried to keep my heart and mind in a Christmas mood, but don't spoze I did, so many fond recollections and sad forebodin's hanted me as the cars swep' us on, on through the valley of the Platte river on to Denver. Miss Meechim, who is a power on dates, said that Denver wuz five thousand two hundred feet above the sea.

And Tommy wonnered, wonnered who measured it, and if they did it with a yard stick as his ma measured cloth, and then he wonnered if his ma missed her little boy, and then he laid up aginst me and kindered cryed a little, evanescent grief soon soothed.

We stayed in Denver two days, sallyin' out to different points of interest about it, and here I see irrigation carried on, water carried into the channels around the crops and trees some as I've dug little holes round my house-plants to hold water; only of course Denver wuz carryin' it on, on a bigger scale. It is a handsome city with the water of the Platte river brung in and running along in little streams by the curbstones. We rode out to Idaho Springs on a narrer railroad but easy goin', through Clear Creek Canon. I liked the looks of the Springs first-rate (they made me think of Josiah).

All the way we see Chinamen workin' hard and patient, as is their wont, and their long frocks they had on made me think of him I mourned for, and their hair hangin' in long braids down their back. So would his hair look if he let it grow.

We had to go a little out of our straight way to visit Salt Lake City but felt that it paid.

(To be Continued.)

Quarter-Millennial Anniversary

Another church has celebrated its quarter-millennial anniversary. It is the Copley Square Church in Boston, Mass. Two large memorial windows were presented in honor of the occasion. One of them was in memory of the late Mr. W. W. Warren, and the other in memory of the ministers who have served the church during the past two hundred and fifty years, the most distinguished of whom was Ralph Waldo Emerson.

... Under the Evening Lamp ...

By Margaret E. Sangster

The Home Princess

WHO should be princess royal in every American home, but the beautiful daughter of the house? There comes a time to every young girl when she plucks a rose of Eden, and wears it in her breast; and that time is when she is sought and returns the loyal love of the prince. The prince may have hard hands and a suit of home-spun cloth; he may work on the farm or in a factory, or instead he may have a great revenue, be a money-king, and fare sumptuously every day. Manhood—not its mere accidental circumstances—is the thing which counts; well did the poet say, "A man's a man for a' that."

Bonny Marion is waiting in happy, though pensive musing for the well-known step on the floor, after the familiar ring at the outer door. Nobody has a step, a voice, a laugh, a look like Jack; and Jack is coming presently. The mandolin is waiting for him, and he will pick it up and play; but the sweetest tune of his life is being softly played now on the chord of a maiden's pure heart.

♦

The Choice of a School

In the old days girls' schools were called seminaries, or academies for young ladies, both of which designations have now gone out of fashion. Though the name is altered, the thing itself remains the same; and among the most important decisions which a mother is called upon to make, is the choice of a school for her daughter, who has reached what may be called the preparatory stage for a high school or college by and by. Notwithstanding the advanced courses open to girls in colleges and the careers which begin there, there is still a place for the unassuming and modest school for girls which is practically this and nothing more.

The best thing such a school ever does for its pupils is not in the initiation it gives in various branches of polite learning, in its thorough teaching of Latin, science or mathematics, but in what it gives girls, as they are growing up, in forming their ideals and showing them some woman's beautiful life. The teacher is more than the school.

IN SELECTING a school for girls, the character of the principal and her associates should first be borne in mind, and the next most important thing is to discover what sort of companions the girl will have. The friendships of life are sometimes begun in the school-room. Our children are very much affected by those with whom they associate on familiar terms. Specially quick to take impressions are girls from thirteen to fifteen with their womanly nature just awaking and the tides of life beginning to rush towards them. They have already received in the early training of the home a certain stamp, but with them nothing is fixed or permanent. Here and there one finds a young girl of marked individuality, born to be a leader, and not too readily influenced by her roommate or the girl next her in the class-room. This is the exceptional girl; the large majority of girls are very easily influenced by example and association. It almost seems at times as if even girlhood shared to-day the lack of earnestness which distinguishes this period, and as if only heedless gayety of youth could be expected of our young girls.

COMPARISONS are invidious and not always trustworthy as indicators of an existing state. Yet who can look back to the records, for instance of that old Ipswich Seminary, which was the predecessor of such great schools as the Emma Willard at Troy, and the school founded by Mary Lyon at South Hadley, to-day world-famed as Mt. Holyoke College, without being convinced that the girls of a former day at a very early age were far more responsible than ours. Doubtless the home training was more rigid and a child grew up from the first with a keener sense of the constant presence of God and of his direct dealings with men, which may account for the difference. The work done in those schools was thorough and fine, and the resultant womanhood which came from them was a vital force in the life of our country. When choosing a school for girls the mother should insist not only on thorough scholarship, but on a refined atmosphere and the continual practice of small courtesies. Manners must not be an extra. A needful requirement in the education of girls is elegance. That ease of good breeding which makes the lady equal to any situation will never be gained unless implanted in the home and the school. In the old days much stress was laid upon polite accomplishments, and the girl was sent to school that she might become proficient upon the piano, or learn to sit gracefully at the harp and draw the tinkling sweetness from its strings. We no longer expect that every girl shall spend precious hours in studying music, when perhaps she has no special aptitude in that direction, and besides, our standards are less easily satisfied than once.

IT IS gratifying to know that the claims of the body will not be neglected and that the girl going to school will be seated day by day at a generous table where the physical life will be nourished, and that instruction in physical culture will be as carefully given as that which belongs to intellectual lines. A completely furnished gymnasium is now found in connection with most girls' schools, and the pupils are not only encouraged, but expected to take regular exercise there. Quite as needful in every college is the provision made in most schools for a silent time every day—a period in which the girl may be by herself and have an opportunity for private devotion. This habit early formed will never leave the woman, and in later years will be her strength and comfort in many a time of need.

♦

Prudence Payson's Catch-All

MRS. J. H. Many thanks for your dear letter and the lovely picture of yourself.

WIDE AWAKE. You would greatly enjoy John Fiske's new book, The Dutch and Quaker Colonies in America. I recommend this book, in two volumes, to your book club.

MARGARET DAY asks what presents a girl may receive from a young man. Aunt Prudence thinks that girls like candy, and a man may give a girl a box of that; and flowers if he chooses, and now and then a book. But he may send her no rings, or pins, or trinkets of that sort, and never anything to wear.

BLESS my soul, Melissa Ann, did you suppose you could make pie crust without taking pains? You have to be careful, child, or your pastry will be as heavy as lead. All the good housekeepers will tell you that, and as Aunt Prudence's hand is rather out, she will be glad of some directions from those whose pie crust is just right. Also a good receipt from somebody for old-fashioned and toothsome crullers is in order.

WILLIAM HENRY asks Aunt Prudence how to gain a person's love. Does he mean a child's, or a girl's, or that of another man? The only way I know, William Henry, is to be kind and thoughtful. Do you split the kindling wood for your mother, and see that she has all the water she needs brought in from the well? Do you ever offer to hang out the clothes for her in this cold weather? Do you take your sister's baby up when she cries and walk the floor with her till she goes asleep in your arms? If you do such things as these, William Henry, you need never fear but that you will gain all the love you want in this world.

♦

Good-Morning

The new day begins with a clarion call to duty. Awake, thou that sleepest! Let not the sluggard hug his pillow. There is work to be done, and we must be up and about it.

"Awake, my soul, stretch every nerve
And press with vigor on.
A heavenly race demands thy zeal
And an immortal crown."

THE HOME PRINCESS

A Chat About Letters

AMONG the graceful courtesies which all those who are habits of congratulation form part of the social service of society. If we hear of a piece of good fortune which has befallen a friend; if an engagement is announced, or somebody's ship comes in laden with treasure, it is quite in order to send a letter of congratulation. It may be couched in formal phrase, or may be quite informal. In either case it is chiefly valuable because it is the medium of a spontaneous expression of regard. To rejoice with those who rejoice is [illegible] and [illegible] only as we [illegible] are days when the first obligation is to go to the house of feasting and take one's place there with every evidence of appreciation and gratitude. The letter of congratulation does not need to be long, but it should be fittingly expressed and go directly to the point.

For instance, you may hear that your friend's son has just taken honors in a college contest, that he has carried off some coveted prize in Latin or mathematics, or has covered himself with glory in a debate with a rival college. The time is one of rare delight to your friend and you will add a leaf to her bouquet by sending a little note telling her that you have noticed the triumph of her son. If his laurels are gained on the athletic field it is equally in order for the friend of the family to send the word of cheer and sympathy in behalf of the young man, whose brilliant success on the football field, or the boat race has won him distinction. Whatever the occasion of a letter of congratulation, it should spring from the heart and should not sound perfunctory.

One of the most desirable accomplishments is to be able always to say the right thing in the right place in the right way, and it may be added, to send it while the news is fresh. The letter which would be appropriate and pleasing if sent to-day may be flat and insipid if delayed for a week, and in a month would be so completely an anachronism that it would have no worth whatever. Most things, if worth the doing should be done properly. Delays are nowhere more dangerous than in the give and take of correspondence.

Akin to the letter of congratulation, though necessarily different, is that of acknowledgment of favors rendered. A bride, for example, must write a personal letter of thanks for every present she receives. If unable to do this before her marriage she must as soon as possible send her acknowledgments after the change of her name. Usually the bride's last writing of her maiden name, or almost the last, is in sending short but appreciative letters to those who contributed to her pleasure on the occasion of her wedding. As we must never be economical of thanks, it is permitted to be effusive in sending one's gratitude for a present. The truly courteous person is very careful to be prompt in response when the matter is one involving the acknowledgment of a gift. If a person has taken any trouble on your account or has incurred any expense, the necessity is incumbent that a letter of acknowledgment shall not only be written, but shall carry the means to reimburse him or her, and it is needless to say this can never be postponed, but must be attended to by the earliest possible mail. Any request of a personal character should be speedily acknowledged and always with grace. A few specimens of the letter of congratulation may be in order:

HAZEL DELL, Orange, N. J.

MY DEAR HELEN: [illegible] your engagement to Mr. Arthur Sinclair arrived this morning and was not entirely a surprise, as I had observed the growing friendship between you. Mr. Sinclair should be a very happy man as he has won a real prize and will be envied by all his acquaintances. From what I know of him I feel sure that you have made a wise choice, and I send you my loving wishes [illegible] happiness in the new relation. Affectionately yours,

ELINOR BROWN.

December fourteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine.

A bride's letter of thanks may read as follows:

MY DEAR MRS. ROBERTSON: How very kind you are to send me the beautiful inlaid writing desk with its dainty and complete furnishing, just what I most wanted. I thank you for it with all my heart, and shall take great pleasure in its use. Jack admires it as much as I do and we both send you our love. Very sincerely yours,

SUSAN ARCHER.

December sixteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine.

A letter of congratulation on the birth of a little child might be written in this way; indeed the following is an exact copy of one which was sent by a courtly lady to a young mother on the birth of her first-born.

MY DEAR JENNIE: I received with great satisfaction the tidings of the arrival of your son in this country. I hope his stay upon our shores may be long and prosperous; that every wind may be full of health and pleasure and that he may have, both now and in days to come, the desire of his heart as you and his father have yours in him.

Affectionately yours, ELIZABETH DIX.

Such a letter is perhaps more ceremonious than it is the fashion to send in these days. A letter of congratulation should always be sent in return for that dainty little snowflake of a card which some mothers send out when a new claimant enters their homes and a new heir arrives to share the fortunes of the family.

Don't Shoot the Old Minister!

A Plea for the Superannuated Veterans of the Pulpit

By Rev. W. H. POPE, New Haven, Conn.

IN ONE of our Western mining towns, in those lawless times when opinions were expressed as freely by bullets as with words, it is said that the organist of a church, as he sat with his back to the audience playing a wheezy old instrument with very uncertain touch, was accustomed to hang on the wall for self-protection a placard containing, not the customary list of hymns but, the following significant words, "Don't shoot the organist; he is doing the best he can." I feel like uttering the same protest to the recent question: "Shall the old minister be shot?" No, don't shoot him. In many cases he is doing the best he can, and that is well enough. In some instances he can do better if the church will give him a more hearty support. In cases where it is really best for him to retire from the pulpit, he can take up other forms of ministry which are less crowded, but which are no less important or less useful.

. . .

Old Age a Variable Quantity Let it be remembered that old age is a variable quantity with ministers. Some are born old and have no youth. Such ought never to enter the ministry. Others whose silver crown suggests three score and ten show no other marks of age, and it would be hard to make their young people believe that they are past middle life. At the close of an address on "Work among Boys and Girls," an aged pastor said to the young minister who gave it, "My friend, I doubt if you will ever live to be an old man." "What do you mean?" was the reply. "I mean," said the veteran, "that one who is so fond of children as you evidently are will never grow old, however long he may live." There was a profound truth in that remark, and many a minister may do much to retain his youth by keeping his heart warm toward his young people. Personally I do not think that ministers grow old so fast as other men because they have so much to do with young people. The Bible intimates that the angels are ministering spirits, but all the angels of whom we have any definite information were "young men." So ministers, who are the "angels of the churches," will tend to keep young if they are true to their ministry and feed the lambs as well as the sheep.

A preacher, passing out of church one Sunday, heard some one say that his sermon was too long. A little piqued at the remark, he repeated it to one of his admirers, and asked if she shared that opinion. "No," said the lady, "I do not think the sermon was long, it only seemed long." It makes but little difference whether a minister is really too old to preach acceptably, or whether he only seems too old; in either case he had better retire gracefully, but not with the feeling of humiliation or even regret, as if his work were done and his usefulness at an end. If God has called him to the ministry his work will never end, though its form may change with changing conditions.

. . .

House to House Ministry Let me quote from a little sketch of what one man did after he was eighty years old. "Father," said his children, "you have done enough already. It is time you gave yourself up to rest. Come, live with us. All we have is yours. But work no more and live no longer by yourself." This was kind and right. The father loved his children and appreciated their offer, but he could not consent to it. For two years more he remained in his own house. Meanwhile, he visited every family, prayed in every house, and talked personally with every man, woman and child of suitable age in a circle of five thousand inhabitants; and many were awakened by his words. He established and maintained a weekly union prayer-meeting, changing from house to house in a circuit as large as he could extend it. And this was the beginning of a revival which embraced all the churches and almost every family in the town in its blessed sweep. And all this after he was eighty years old, and so infirm that his own children thought it unsafe for him to keep up his home and live apart from them.

At eighty-two they prevailed. He closed his house and went to live with his children in a town about forty miles away. Looking around him he saw a population of twenty-five hundred or more, with all the usual church privileges, to be sure, but without any one really in the spirit of Jesus, to care for their souls. So, in the faith of an ever-present Saviour, he filled his pocket with tracts, refreshed his spirit at the foot of the Cross, and started out on foot and alone. Trembling with age he went from house to house, as he had done before in his former abode, until he had entered every home and left his affectionate warnings and supplications upon the ears and the hearts of every soul.

In this instance he was not permitted to see the fruits of his work in a general revival of religion, as in the other. Not, however, because it did not occur, but because he was taken home to heaven before the seed, so abundantly sown by his hand, had ripened into the harvest. His last visit made, his last prayer offered, in the last house of the whole, he went to his daughter's to rest for the night; to enter next day, as he supposed, upon a course of revisiting such families as he thought most needed his services. But his work of going about, like his Master, to do good, was done. He lived many weeks, but went abroad no more.

. . .

The Ministry of Intercession In the sixth chapter of Acts, we read that the apostles appointed seven deacons to look after the business of the church, in order that they might be free for more important matters. "We will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the Word." Notice that they place prayer before the ministry of the Word, as if it were a matter of even greater importance; and indeed I believe it is. What a sphere of usefulness is this for aged ministers, the ministry of intercession? Suppose a man who could no longer preach acceptably should devote himself to the ministry of prayer. Let him set apart regular hours for it as one would for study. Let him search the Bible to see what things God has to give away, and study the condition of the world to learn what it most needs, and then, in a systematic way, present before God the wants and woes of humanity, and plead the promises in their behalf.

. . .

Just What I Mean About two years ago I received a letter from a retired minister in California, an entire stranger to me, saying that he was praying for me daily, and, in fact, he had missed only one day in a whole year. It appeared that I had helped a pastor in a certain Connecticut town where he was brought up, and thus he came to hear of me, and becoming interested in me as one who was visiting many towns in his native State, he had begun to pray for me daily, and after a year of this kind of fellowship, he wanted a personal acquaintance so that he might know more about my work. Since that time I have received a long letter from him about once in three weeks. He wishes to know all about my work and my appointments for weeks ahead, so that he may pray for me intelligently. He enters into all the details of the work with an interest and sympathy that seem impossible to one whom I have never seen. And such letters! Never in all my life have I received so much inspiration from any living being as I receive from this unseen friend across the continent. He is eighty-five years old. He spends practically all his time in prayer and correspondence. What he is doing for me, he is doing also for many other ministers and missionaries in this and other countries. If others are indebted to him as much as I am, he is laying many people under tremendous obligations, and through their preaching doubtless is winning many souls to Christ. I have a letter from him to-day in which he says, "The Lord is helping me greatly in prayer. The answers become more and more manifest. I am in good health, peaceful, hopeful, happy, as becomes one so near the Father's House. There is glory on the morrow." Has that dear old man passed the dead line? No, and he never will. Though he is no longer able to supply a pulpit regularly, yet he has a ministry far wider, much more needed, and more abundantly useful—the ministry of intercession.

No, brethren; when God called us to the ministry it was not for a period of thirty years or fifty years or even for life. He has called us to an eternal ministry, to an everlasting priesthood; and I fully expect to be preaching the Gospel ten thousand years hence in some of the myriad worlds where they still need to know of the Crucified One.

ROSY COLOR.

Produced by Postum Food Coffee.

"When a person rises from each meal with a ringing in the ears and a general sense of nervousness, it is a common habit to charge it to a deranged stomach.

"I found it was caused from drinking coffee, which I never suspected for a long time, but found by leaving off coffee that the disagreeable feelings went away.

"I was brought to think of the subject by getting some Postum Food Coffee, and this brought me out of the trouble.

"It is a most appetizing and invigorating beverage, and has been of such great benefit to me that I naturally speak of it from time to time as opportunity offers.

"A lady friend complained to me that she had tried Postum, but it did not taste good In reply to my question she said she guessed she boiled it about ten minutes. I advised her to follow directions and know that she boiled it fifteen or twenty minutes, and she would have something worth talking about. A short time ago I heard one of her children say that they were drinking Postum now-a-days, so I judge she succeeded in making it good, which is by no means a difficult task.

"Tom O'Brien the son of a friend who lives on Bridge St., was formerly a pale lad, but since he has been drinking Postum, has a fine color, There is plenty of evidence that Postum actually does 'make red blood,' as the famous trade mark says." Jno. Chambers, 9 Franklin St., Dayton, Ohio.

Growing Time

Children must have just the right kind of food if they are to become strong men and women. A deficiency of fat makes children thin and white, puny and nervous, and greatly retards full growth and development. They need

Scott's Emulsion

It supplies just what all delicate and growing children require.

50c. and $1.00, all druggists.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, New York.

Free to Bad Stomachs.

To prove that Kremer's Dyspepsia Powder is the most meritorious remedy for all forms of dyspepsia, I will send a large box for 50c. postage, the price (50c.) to be sent only in case you are benefited after a week's trial. Otherwise return powder by mail.

J. RITCHIE, Durant, I. T., writes: "It relieved exceedingly aggravated dyspepsia with which I have suffered for years."

Mention this paper.

JOHN KREMER, Druggist, 428 7th Ave., N. Y.

"Honor is Purchased by Deeds We Do."

Deeds, not words, count in battles of peace as well as in war. It is not what we say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that tells the story of its merit. It has won many remarkable victories over the arch enemy of mankind—impure blood. Remember

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Send $1.00 and we will (for 30 days) send you our best $10.00 TOLEDO BATH CABINET complete with best alcohol stove, directions, formulas by express C. O. D. subject to examination. If you find it the best Cabinet you ever saw, worth a dozen of the cheap affairs pay express agent $3.50 more and express charges. Ours is the best of all Cabinets, has a real door, opens wide, strong steel frame, galv'd, rubber lined, top curtains, folds flat 1 in. space. Face Steamer 75c extra. Order today. Provides Turkish and vapor baths at home 3c each, beautifies complexion, prevents disease, will benefit every ailment. Money refunded after 30 days use if not just as represented. WRITE FOR CATALOGUE FREE. We make Cabinets from $2.25 up. Agents Wanted. Big wages. Exclusive territory. TOLEDO BATH CABINET CO., 612 Cherry St., TOLEDO, OHIO.

ONE HUNDRED

copies of a letter, piece of music, drawing, or any writing can be made on a Lawton Simplex Printer. No washing. No wetting of paper. Send for circulars and samples of work. Agents wanted.

LAWTON & CO., 30 Vesey St., New York. 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

A Home Treatment for Eyes

Write for Circulars

For ABSORBING CATARACTS
For GRANULATED EYE-LIDS
For SORE EYES
For WEAK EYES
For all kinds of SICK EYES

H. A. Pardue, Dr. of Optics,
Suite 1115 Masonic Temple, CHICAGO, ILL.

NO CASH REQUIRED. 30 DAYS FREE TRIAL. WE TRUST YOU. WE PAY FREIGHT.

$9.00 Buys a High Victor Sewing Machine with full set of best attachments. Adapted to light or heavy work. Guaranteed for 20 years. We make 50 DIFFERENT STYLES AT ALL PRICES.

$22.00 Buys a First Class Victor CHURCH OR PARLOR ORGAN. Guaranteed for 25 years. Free Trial. WE MAKE 24 STYLES AT ALL PRICES.

$120.00 Buys a Great VICTOR Upright PIANO.

We also deal in all kinds of Musical Instruments. ALL CATALOGUES FREE. VICTOR MFG CO., Dept. P51, 161-167 Plymouth Pl., Chicago, Ill.

MONUMENTS

DON'T buy marble or granite till you investigate WHITE BRONZE

More artistic and enduring; less expensive. Prices to suit all. Work delivered everywhere. Color greatly improved. Write for designs and information. Costs nothing to investigate.

NO MOSS GROWING. NO CLEANING. NO CRUMBLING. NO CRACKING.

THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.,
70-80 Howard Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn.

Money Maker And saver. Print your own cards, circular, book newspaper, with our $5 or $18 printing press. Type setting easy, printed rules sent. For man or boy. Send for catalog, presses, type, paper, to factory.

The Press Co., Meriden, Conn.

MAKE MONEY EVENINGS.

Men employed during the day can make money evenings giving public exhibitions with Magic Lantern or Stereopticon. Little capital needed. Write for particulars. 256 page Catalogue FREE. McALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y.

The Natural Body Brace advertised in this paper in the first issue of this month, is a delightful, certain cure for ailments peculiar to women and girls. It makes walking and work easy; gives good figure and light step. Write the Natural Body Brace Co., Salina, Kan., for free illustrated book.

ALUMINUM AND AGENTS SPECIALTIES Write for particulars and CATALOG FREE. G. VINING NOVELTY CO., 60 Wabash Av. CHICAGO.

OPIUM MORPHINE and Liquor Habit cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Book of particulars free. Address Dr. J. E. Stephens, Dept. R. 5, Lebanon, Ohio.

PLAYS Dialogues, Speakers for School, Club and Parlor. Catalogue free. T. S. DENISON, Publisher, Chicago, Ill.

Gospel in Porto Rico

Native Teachers at Work on the Island Sunday School Progress

IN a letter from an American now in Porto Rico, to Rev. W. J. Peck, of New York City, some interesting facts are related in connection with an independent evangelical mission established in San Juan. The first meetings were held in a little room on Sol Street, and were marked by a simple faith in God for ways and means. The [illegible] was Mr. Joseph

J. W. JARVIS

J. C. P. BROWNE

W. Jarvis, who had associated with him in his work J. C. P. Browne. The latter was able to read and explain the Word in the Spanish language. Soon they were obliged to leave the building on account of the bigotry of the owner. In the hall of the Economical Sociedad they had more room and better attended meetings, and there they began a native Sunday School. The children were mostly Spanish. The teaching was in that language. Bigotry and lack of financial support ultimately closed the mission at San Juan; but a door was opened for them at Sabana Llana, in the district of Rio-Pieras, where Joseph Jarvis is holding Gospel services, Sundays and week nights, and is making a canvass with the Bible and tracts. Mr. Jarvis writes:

A NATIVE FUNERAL IN PORTO RICO

"Spirituality is not lacking in the meetings. We have many precious times of refreshment—this not only at the mercy-seat, but in giving and applying the Word of God to the lost. But who will help in this thing? Who will go up to the help of the Lord."

Rev. James Jameson, Superintendent of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Sunday School at San Juan, writes that he is arranging to begin work on the same lines in Porta Tierra, a populous section of the capital, in which there are hundreds of neglected children roaming the streets.

♦

Home Sunshine Calendar

THIS is the last week of 1899, and our 1900 Calendar, beautifully lithographed on six eggshelled art cards in twelve different colors, each card almost the size of a "Christian Herald" page, is rapidly being bought up. We charge for handling, tubing and postage only ten cents, and the Calendar is sold exclusively to "Christian Herald" subscribers. The chronology of notable events of the closing century makes the Calendar invaluable. As we are the owners of the copyright, this calendar cannot be secured elsewhere; hence, if you expect to get one you must order before our stock is out. If you are a subscriber, and wish one, enclose ten cents, and if our stock is exhausted we will add a month to your present expiry date and send you a postal to that effect.

♦

Our Concert Roller Organ

FOR home-worship, for cottage prayer-meetings, for country Sunday Schools and for Young People's Meetings there is no other instrument in existence that will give equal satisfaction. Any one can play any tune and repeat it over and over again without interruption, and one tune can be changed to another inside of fifteen seconds. The organ costs only $12 on instalments, or $10 spot cash, and the tunes, which are practically indestructible and in the shape of music box rollers with steel pins, cost only thirty cents each, delivered free. A catalogue of nearly a thousand tunes goes with every instrument. We have only 1,000 organs—and these will go within ten days. The instrument, which weighs about thirty pounds, is shipped by freight, at your expense. Order to-day.

♦

Our New Consul to Mexico

Mr. Philip Hanna, who will be remembered by readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD as consul to Porto Rico, and who so promptly assisted in organizing the hurricane relief fund last summer, while on his vacation in this country, has been appointed Consul-General of the United States in Northern Mexico. He has already left his Iowa home for the field of his new labors. There are over thirty large cities, each having a local consular representative; in his district, which is thus the largest in point of territory and in commercial importance on the American continent. His headquarters will be in Monterey, Mexico, where the government provides an official residence.

THE continual breaking of lamp-chimneys costs a good deal in the course of a year.

Get Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass." You will have no more trouble with breaking from heat. You will have clear glass instead of misty; fine instead of rough; right shape instead of wrong; and uniform, one the same as another.

Our "Index" describes all lamps and their proper chimneys. With it you can always order the right size and shape of chimney for any lamp. We mail it FREE to any one who writes for it.

Address MACBETH, Pittsburgh, Pa.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY. Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

School Teachers

and High School students can make their Saturdays and their Winter vacation exceedingly profitable by securing subscribers to

The Ladies' Home Journal
AND
The Saturday Evening Post

An agent does not have to convince one against his will in order to secure a subscriber to either of these unique, high-class periodicals. There is no argument against them. There are innumerable arguments in their favor.

Liberal commissions on all subscriptions. Liberal rebates for large clubs. The larger the club, the larger the rebate.

And in addition to these inducements we are going to give $25,000 to the 994 most successful agents.

Write for particulars

The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia

WILL CARLETON'S

MAGAZINE "EVERY WHERE"

Only Magazine for agents. Will Carleton, "Josiah Allen's Wife" (Marietta Holley), Fanny Crosby, Wealth's greatest home writers and other famous authors write in every number. Best of addressing literature.

50 Cents a Year. SPECIAL OFFER 3 Mos. for 10c. If you mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

Address Every Where Pub. Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Sacred Songs No. 2.

By Sankey, McGranahan and Stebbins. A [illegible] of the pieces in [illegible] lished. It contains the new solos, "The Story That Never Grows Old," "I'm A Pilgrim," "A Little While," "Do They Know?" etc., [illegible]

Same styles and prices as "SACRED SONGS NO. 1." [illegible] Paper, $25 per 100. [illegible] 20 Phonograph Records [illegible] Ira D. Sankey of the above songs may also be had.

BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

STEREOPTICONS Moving Picture Machines & Films 20,000 Lantern Slides for Sale or Rent. [illegible]

Williams, Brown & Earle, 919 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

REAL OLD VIOLINS WHITE TO SUIT CUSTOMERS. August Gemünder & Sons ESTD. 1838. 42 East 23rd St. N.Y.

HIS STEPS, [illegible] devoted to practical Christianity at 25c a year. A sample [illegible] and particulars to canvassers. Sells at sight. Address HIS STEPS, Lawrence, Kansas.

$5.00 to $10.00 a day can be easily made working for us. [illegible] Address B. F. Johnson, 901 E. Main St., Richmond, Virginia.

$18.00 a Week and expenses to good par[illegible] Permanent position. Also local workers and managers [illegible] references. E. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP [illegible] children teething, [illegible] to gums, reduces inflammation, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa.

ONLY 25c. [illegible] W. T. TEMPLE & CO., Boston, Lynn, Mass.

MONEY IN IT Splendid chance to make money without risk. For particulars, address FIDELITY INVESTMENT CO., SEATTLE, WASH.

Try a 'Wonder' Washing Machine

WITHOUT ONE PENNY OF CHARGE

to prove that it is just what you want. That a child can run it. That it cleans the most soiled clothes perfectly, without hard rubbing, as fast as six women can wash at the tub. That it saves clothes. That it has not a single point you can find fault with. We urge you to do this, as one [illegible] in your house will welcome it more. As a further inducement, we make a special introductory offer at less than one-half price of actual value.

The Proprietor of "Ivory Soap" says:

"I am using your 'Wonder' Washer in my family. It is entirely satisfactory. I have highly recommended it and [illegible] of them to others among my friends. — WM. A. PROCTOR, [illegible] & Gamble Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, Proprietors of the famous 'Ivory' Soap.

Our Marvelous FREE Offer.

Send us your name and address for full particulars, and we will send you, charges prepaid to Mississippi River, one "Wonder" Washer, at our special introductory price of $7. You may use it for thirty days' washing FREE. If after this trial you don't want it, for any reason whatever; if you don't think it washes clothes cleaner in one-quarter the time and with one-tenth the labor; if you don't think it will pay for itself in one year by saving your clothes—SEND IT BACK. No questions asked.

Write us fully—we answer every inquiry. Don't lose this chance. Good agents get rich. Don't let to-day pass without at least writing us.

WHIPPLE BROTHERS CO., Mfrs., 32 Post St., Westerly, R. I.

REFERENCES: Washington Nat'l Bank, Westerly, R. I.

CRAWFORD TOURS TO THE HOLY LAND

Under most agreeable conditions.

PARTIES LEAVE NEW YORK Feb. 17th and April 18th, 1900, on modern Steamships "Aller" and "Trojan Prince."

ITALY, GREECE, CONSTANTINOPLE and EGYPT visited en route. Return via SWITZERLAND, BELGIUM, GERMANY and FRANCE, taking in the PARIS EXPOSITION.

BOTH PARTIES LIMITED. STRICTLY HIGH CLASS. All cost included in price of ticket. Full particulars in beautifully illustrated pamphlet, free.

CRAWFORD & FLOYD, Tremont Building, Boston, Mass.

Crawford & Floyd, HOME OFFICE: Tremont Bldg., Boston. BRANCH OFFICES: 220 Broadway, N. Y. 1011 Chestnut St., Philadelphia. Marquette Bdg., Chicago

FREQUENT TOURS TO Paris, London, Ober-Ammergau, And all parts of the world

Christian Cleanliness

Why do you permit a custom at the communion table which you would not tolerate in your own home? Would you like to know where Individual Communion Cups are used? Send for our free book—it tells all about it. A trial outfit sent free.

SANITARY COMMUNION OUTFIT COMPANY, Dept. 22, Rochester, N. Y.

NEW HOME RUPTURE CURE

Remarkable Method that Heals Any Rupture Without Pain or Danger

No Operation or Detention From Work —Is Cheap, Safe and Sure.

Dr. W. S. Rice has backed up with convincing facts his statement that rupture can be cured at the patients' home without pain, danger operation or detention from work. He has invented a cheap and reliable method that has met with marvelous success and thousands of people ruptured for years have been permanently cured. It cured R. M. Wilsie, of Brandon, Wis., who had been ruptured 20 years. Mrs. M. E. Smith, Rockingham, Vt., was badly ruptured and cured herself by Dr. Rice's method. Wm. Bigford, Bishop Mills, Ont., tried various trusses with no success and finally cured himself by the Rice plan. Jacob Lindner, Drums, Pa., owes his cure to Dr. Rice. G. Nilson, Sogn, Minn., has a double rupture and calls Dr. Rice's method a God-send.

Several thousand cases are reported cured by this remarkable method and as it is very low in price, easily used, adapted to either sex, adults or children, every ruptured person should at once investigate it. Write to Dr. W. S. Rice, 392-D, Main St., Adams, N. Y., and he will send you a full description, so you can cure yourself in a few weeks, long before the heavy work of the springtime begins. Do not fail to write to-day and if you know of others afflicted, send their names for this wonderfully valuable information. They will appreciate your kindness.

Peter Moller's Cod Liver Oil

now prepared by an improved process which is the result of years of scientific investigation, may be confidently relied upon as being of

Absolute Purity and Free From Disagreeable Taste and Odor.

MOLLER'S OIL always gives satisfactory results because of its perfect digestibility and the fact that it may be taken continuously without causing gastric disturbance.

In flat, oval bottles only, dated. See that our name appears on bottle as agents. Explanatory pamphlets mailed free.

Schieffelin & Co., New York.

The Force behind the force is the educated mind which plans and directs the work of others. You can rise to a higher position without interrupting your work or leaving home. You can get

A Technical Education BY MAIL.

We have prepared successful Mechanical or Architectural Draughtsmen, Electrical or Steam Engineers, Architects, Surveyors, Chemists, Correspondents, Stenographers and Bookkeepers. Write for circular. Mention the profession you wish to enter.

The International Correspondence Schools, Box 861, Scranton, Pa.

AN EXPERT'S INCOME

is within easy reach of anyone who will study "between times" Thousands of young men and women, prepared by us, cannot endorse too strongly our unequaled course of

EDUCATION BY MAIL

in Electrical, Mechanical, Steam, Mining and Civil Engineering; Metallurgy, Art, Architecture, Practical Newspaper Work, English Branches, Stenography, Machine Design and Mechanical Drawing. Low price; easy terms. Sent free to those who enroll now, a complete drawing outfit worth $11.10. Mention subjects you are interested in when writing to

The United Correspondence Schools,
154-56 Fifth Avenue, New York,
for catalogue No. 30

HOME STUDY

of BOOK-KEEPING, SHORTHAND, BUSINESS FORMS, PENMANSHIP, Etc. with our Private Lessons BY MAIL open up to Young Men and Women good paying positions. We give just the training needed for success in business. No interference with work—only spare time required. The cheapest and best method of study. Highly endorsed. national reputation, established 46 years We also teach English, Civil Service and other courses by mail. Trial lesson 10c. A fine Catalog free BRYANT & STRATTON, 175 College Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.

CRAZY WORK 125 Velvet Remnants assorted colors, with Embroidery, Chenille, 42 cts.; 400 Beautiful Heavyweight Silk Remnants, all colors, enough for a large quilt, 50 cts.; big package, with floss and quilt patterns, 10 cts. 50 Fine Woolen Remnants, with Ice Wool, 28 cents. All post-paid LEMARIE'S SILK MILL, Little Ferry, N. J.

The Story Must be Told

"IT IS THE POWER OF GOD UNTO SALVATION."—Rom. 1: 16

F. J. CROSBY IRA D. SANKEY

1. O the pre-cious gos-pel sto-ry, How it tells of love to all,
2. O the bless-ed gos-pel sto-ry, Of His meek and low-ly birth,—
3. O the wondrous gos-pel sto-ry, There is life in ev-'ry word;
How the Sav-iour in com-pas-sion, Died to save us from the fall;
And the wel-come of the an-gels When they sang good-will to earth;—
There is hope and con-so-la-tion, Where the mes-sage sweet is heard;
How He came to seek the lost ones, And to bring them to His fold;—
Of the cross on which He suffered,—As by proph-ets seen of old,—
Let us tell it to the wea-ry, And its beau-ties all un-fold;
Let us hast-en to pro-claim it, For the sto-ry must be told.
Of His death and res-ur-rec-tion, Let the sto-ry now be told.
'Tis the on-ly guide to heav-en, And the sto-ry must be told.
CHORUS.
The sto-ry must be told, The sto-ry must be told,
be told,
That Je-sus died for sin-ners lost, The sto-ry must be told.

Copyright, 1899, by the Biglow & Main Co.

Books Received

SELECT NOTES: A commentary on the International Sunday School Lessons for 1900, by F. N. and M. A. Peloubet. Several improvements will be noticed in this well-known annual. One of the most important is a system by which the Authorized and Revised renderings are shown at a glance. This is done by printing the two in small type wherever they diverge. Another improvement is a Lesson plan, which, like a preacher's skeleton notes, supplies the teacher with a framework for his teaching. The comments and suggestions are fully up to the usual high standard of former years. Pp. 368. Price, $1. Published by the W. A. Wilde Company, Boston, Mass.

One of Those Coincidences; and Other Stories. This volume, consisting of eleven complete and exceedingly interesting stories by popular writers, among who n are Count Leo Tolstoi (the famous Russian philanthropist), Julian Hawthorne, Chas. G. D. Roberts, Florence M. Kingsley, Myrta Lockett Avary, and others, give pen-pictures at once pathetic and amusing, of life among Russian mujhiks, life among Canadian Indians in 1754, life in Cuba and Porto Rico when the fight was on—of home-coming soldiers and pretty, sick nurses. One of the stories, "Romance of a Tin Roof and a Fire-Escape," in narrating some of the struggles and trials of two young working women in New York City, reveals (as do other stories in the book) conditions that pious readers would heartily wish otherwise. Beautifully illustrated and bound; pp. 315; price $1. Pub. by Funk & Wagnalls, New York.

"Honor is purchased by deeds we do." It is not what we say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that tells the story of its merit. It wins remarkable victories over impure blood.

Dr. Bull's COUGH SYRUP

is above all others in the good opinion of those who have used it. Colds, sore throat, coughs and lung troubles—that's usually the program. What excuse is there for anyone staying sick when Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will cure them? It's the little acorn that makes the oak and the little cough that makes Consumption. Don't neglect that cough! Dr. Bull's is good for young and old. A sure cure in all cases.

Violet Peterson, Chicago, Ill., writes: "Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has always cured members of my family whenever they have had any trouble with their throat or lungs. My brother had a bad cough. His lungs were affected. When he had taken three bottles he was well.

Refuse Substitutes.

A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Bull's Pills aid Digestion and cure Constipation. Trial, 20 for 5 cts. Dealers or mail

GOUT AND RHEUMATISM...

A prominent physician writes:

DEAR SIRS:—Replying to yours on the use of TARTARLITHINE as a remedy in the treatment of gout, I will say that I have used it in the treatment of about a dozen cases with results that are a little less than wonderful. The characteristic feature of its action is the rapidity with which patients improve under its use. An improvement is noticeable within 24 hours. One of the most striking cases was that of a physician suffering from gout, muscular rheumatism and frequent bilious headaches. I prescribed Tartarlithine, and in one week there was absolute disappearance of all of the uric acid manifestations. The nervous irritability disappeared, and he stated that he had done the best week's work which he had accomplished in years.

Regular package $1.00.
Of all druggists or post-free by mail.
Pamphlets with Testimonials FREE.

McKESSON & ROBBINS,
91 Fulton Street, . . New York.
SOLE AGENTS FOR
THE TARTARLITHINE CO.

You Hear!

when you use

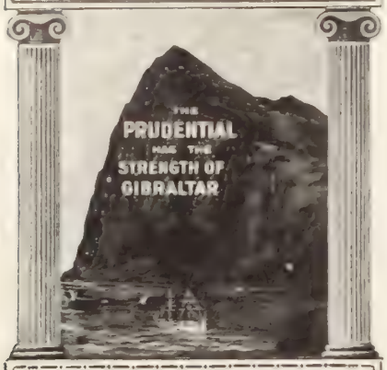
Wilson's Common Sense Ear Drums

The only scientific sound conductors. Invisible, comfortable, efficient. They fit in the ear. Doctors recommend them. Thousands testify to their perfection and to benefit derived.

Information and book of letters from many users, free.

WILSON EAR DRUM CO.,
223 Trust Bldg., . Louisville, Ky.

THE PRUDENTIAL



Business Sense

discourages a man's taking chances when he can easily assure the end desired.

No good business man takes chances with his houses and barns; he insures them so that in the event of loss he may not suffer.

You should make such arrangements that in the event of your death your family will not suffer financially. This is what Life Insurance accomplishes.

Write for Information.

HOW TO INVEST $100 A YEAR.

The Prudential Insurance Co.

JOHN F. DRYDEN, President. of America HOME OFFICE NEWARK, N. J.

Factory of the Uwanta Mattress

Cotton Down Snow White and pure—is the best mattress material on earth, never packs, lasts a lifetime, moth never attack it, soft as down, all but with the privilege of return at any time, if not all out of thousands said not one has ever been returned; freight prepaid if not too distant; send width of bed between siderails. Send for catalogue. In sections $6.50; in one piece $6.

FORT WAYNE FURNITURE CO., Fort Wayne, Ind.

ROLL-TOP DESK FREE!

Solid Oak, polished, antique finish. A small order among your friends for our Tea, Coffee, Spices, Extracts, Perfumes, Soaps, Etc. No money required with your order. We pay the express.

Illustrated Catalogue FREE.

G. A. FOLSOM & CO., 192 Hanover St., Dept. S Boston, Mass.

HENS LAY BEST

—in fact they lay double the eggs winter and summer when fed Green Cut Bone.

Mann's New Bone Cutters

cut all hard and soft bones, meat, gristle, &c., fine, fast and without choking and run easy. Also Mann's Mammoth Clover Cutters help wonderfully. Mann's Champion Crystal Grit and Feed Sprouter too. Catalogue FREE.

F. W. MANN CO., Box 29, Milford, Mass.

$5 50 EGG SIZE

A MILLION TESTIMONIALS are all in favor of the 30 DAYS' TRIAL FREE we make. Every machine guaranteed. Thousands in use. BANTAMS are hatching chicks from eggs. Send 4 cents for Nos. 40 catalog.

Buckeye Incubator Co., Springfield, O.

DON'T BUY AN INCUBATOR

and pay for it before giving it a trial. We will send the celebrated NEW PREMIER INCUBATOR on trial. The only automatic self-ventilating incubator made. Guaranteed to hatch more chicks than any other machine. Write for our Free Illustrated Catalogue. Also the most successful of Simplicity Incubators. Catalogue and Poultry Helps, 5 cts. Tells how to make Poultry Houses, 25 cts.

COLUMBIA INCUBATOR CO., 242 Adams St. Delaware City, Del.

310 First Premiums

Awarded to the PRAIRIE STATE INCUBATOR. Guaranteed to operate in any climate. Send for catalogue.

PRAIRIE STATE INCUBATOR CO. Homer City, Pa.

THE TOUCHSTONE

A NEW SERIAL STORY

BY HELEN SHIPTON

CHAPTER IX.

The Political Campaign

POLITICS had been so settled a matter in the neighborhood for many a year that the movement inaugurated by Mr. Allardyce and Caryl Lingard caused more excitement than in other districts which were more accustomed to contests. A Conservative representative had always been elected as a matter of course, the aristocracy in a rural district being all-powerful. But Mr. Allardyce proposed to change all that. He was a Radical and he meant his son to be the Radical member of Parliament for that division of the county: as his son was not old enough to sit in the House of Commons, he would like to have his protege, Caryl Lingard, elected, who would hold the seat for a few sessions and then retire in favor of young Allardyce. That was his programme.

The aristocratic families were amazed at the audacity of such a project. They were not alarmed. They felt sure that the voters would vote, as they and their fathers had done, for the Conservative candidate and they regarded the failure of Mr. Allardyce and Caryl Lingard as a foregone conclusion. Of course, the Conservative candidate and his friends were annoyed at the expense and trouble of the contest; but the majority felt that the excitement would lend a little spice to existence during the rather dull time before the shooting began, and only hoped that this unknown young sprig of a barrister would make a sufficiently good fight of it to warrant a little eagerness.

Mr. Allardyce talked confidently enough in public, though in strict privacy he might admit that it was uphill work at first, and that they might only be paving the way for success on the next opportunity. As for Caryl Lingard, it was not easy to make out what his anticipations were—he was so very reserved, except when actually making a speech at one or other of the small hamlets at which meetings had been arranged; and even at these he said more of what his party intended than of what he himself might hope to do.

In this "Conservative division" there proved to be a good sprinkling of Radicals, who hailed with joy the prospect of a contest, and in almost every cluster of houses some village Hampden was discovered who undertook to canvass his fellows, and bring them to the meetings. Mr. Allardyce attended them all with boyish zeal, and so did his son Frank; and Miss Locke was usually there also; while sometimes the Hamertons were drawn into being present, though Martin declared that a literary man had no business with politics, and Celia professed that they were beyond her understanding.

Only Douglas Lingard, who might so naturally have been heart and soul in the struggle, held aloof from it, as it were perforce. The little world of the county, having its attention called so forcibly to the name of Lingard, could not fail to become aware that while one brother was coming and going, with money and influence at his back, and aimed at no less than a share in the government of the nation, another was not very lucratively employed upon their district railway; and perhaps some people saw something rather anomalous in the position. Douglas saw the anomaly of it himself; and one evening suddenly resolved to conquer his shrinking from the sight of Caryl and the hearing of his affairs, and go to the little cottage meeting that was to be held that night in the hamlet of Brentwood.

The days were still so long, and the work in the fields so pressing, that the meeting had not been called till nine o'clock. The sunlight had departed, and the shades were falling as Douglas entered the hamlet, and looked round for the place of meeting, which was not, so far, indicated by the stream of the audience flowing towards it.

One door was distinguished from the rest by a placard on each side of it; and close by, two half-grown lads waited sheepishly. The young man glanced at the house a second time, and saw with an odd little thrill that it was the house at the door of which he had first met Celia.

"I did not take small-pox then," he said to himself with a half-rueful smile, "but I think I took something harder to cure. And I don't know that I want to have it cured, either."

He was lingering outside, not feeling much drawn to enter, when voices were heard in the road by which he had come—a merry little Babel of talk, as though one detachment of speakers had just been overtaken by another and most welcome contingent.

It was Celia's voice that Douglas first distinguished: fine and delicate like her handwriting, and therefore "carrying" a good way, though she did not speak loud.

"Oh no!" she was saying. "I am not a promising convert: not a convert of any kind! I have no political convictions, and no faith in politicians' promises. I have only come to watch over my people and take care that you and Mr. Allardyce don't delude them with sophistries."

"I wish I could think there would be any one to delude," answered Caryl's soft penetrating tones. "You cannot help being valuable, simply as an addition to our numbers, however unbelieving you may be. Nothing is so hard as to speak to empty benches."

"Not even benches full of sound sleepers? What else can you expect when you convene the men after a long day in the hay?"

"You must blame the wisdom of our rulers, who chose this time for a general election," answered Caryl, while Mr. Allardyce was heard explaining that in most places the hay was already gathered in, only these people here were always so behindhand. And with that they arrived at the place of meeting, and Martin Hamerton recognized Douglas through the twilight, and greeted him cordially but very quietly: and then Mr. Allardyce spied him out, and began to rally him with ponderous jocosity upon having been so remiss that this was actually the first meeting he had graced with his presence. Everybody upon that began to talk at once, and in the next moment Douglas found Celia standing beside him.

"You recognize the house?" she said, under cover of the general buzz.

"Yes . . . I had meant before to ask you what became of the poor woman I saw here—the widow?"

"She is gone back to her own people—near Leeds. Mr. Allardyce was very good: he helped her a great deal. Perhaps it is by way of a reward of virtue that the new tenant turns out to be an ardent Radical, and lends his cottage for to-night's meeting."

"Meeting? Is the audience usually so small?" asked Douglas, glancing round.

"No: but I daresay a few more will appear presently. Village folks are always half-an-hour behind time on these occasions."

"Do they listen?—and seem to comprehend at all?"

"Pretty well. Your brother speaks beautifully: but I could teach him, and so I daresay could you, how to make himself better understanded of the people."

"I suppose Caryl knows how to persuade a jury."

"Yes: but I have taught a class of big boys, and you have directed a gang of workmen, and perhaps we know better than he does what his audience here is likely to understand."

There was a little movement as she spoke. Two or three men had come up, and the candidate and his supporters set them a good example by leaving the cool summer twilight for the warm, dimly-lighted cottage room.

Naturally, Douglas and Celia passed in

(Continued on next page.)

"A Perfect Food,"
"Preserves Health,"
"Prolongs Life."

BAKER'S BREAKFAST COCOA

"It is at once a delightful food and nourishing drink, and it would be well for humanity if there were more of it consumed and less tea or coffee."—The Homeopathic Recorder.

Walter Baker & Co. Limited.
DORCHESTER, MASS.
Established 1780.

A Dainty Breakfast

The morning meal is apt to set the pace for the day. If dainty simple and sufficiently nutritious one leaves the breakfast table with a feeling of well being that fortifies for the day's duties.

Cream of Wheat

contains, in greater proportion than any other cereal food, the elements necessary to brain and muscle making.

Ask your grocer to show you our gravures. High class works of art, entirely devoid of advertising matter.

Cream of Wheat Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

Libby's Plum Pudding

A delicious dessert for
HOLIDAY DINNERS

Just as good and pure as the choicest fruits, fine seasoning and our 40 years experience can make it.

Put up in convenient size key opening cans — ready to serve. Ask your grocer.

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago.
Free, New edition, How to Make Good Things to Eat.

ASTHMA SURE CURE

I have a sure, safe and speedy cure for that distressing disease, asthma. Send me your name and address and I will send you a trial package free. Don't suffer another day when you can get relief so easily. Write me to-day.

F. G. KINSMAN, M.D., Box 824, Augusta, Me.

MRS. MARY J. HOLMES'

Address, S. [illegible] Pub. Co., 57 Rose St., New York

CONTINUED FROM LAST PAGE

THE TOUCHSTONE

together, and by an almost imperceptible gesture she made it evident that she meant him to sit beside her. Mrs. Locke sat down at the back of the room near the door, murmuring something about being cooler there; and after an instant's hesitation Celia drew back from the seat of honor to which Mr. Allardyce was trying to conduct her, and took a seat near the door also, her companion taking the corner of a rickety bench just behind her.

The door that led into the inner room was open, and Douglas could not help watching it, and thinking of the day when he had seen it last, and of Celia's face bent over the open coffin. How different she looked now! Her pretty eyes full of interest and amusement, crossed now and then by a twinkle of playful malice, when the speaker uttered some sentence rather above the heads of his audience. Douglas said to himself that he had loved her ever since that first day; which was, perhaps, not absolutely the case, but quite near enough for a working theory. And now and again, when the speaker made a good point, it was at him she glanced with a quick smile of appreciation, as though confident of his sympathy.

Douglas was not more interested in politics than an intelligent man must needs be, and, seated where he was, there was perhaps no other political orator in England to whom he would have paid the compliment of attention.

But he must listen, since it was Caryl. And he recognized, with what would in other circumstances have been a thrill of gratified pride, that Caryl spoke very well, without glibness and without hesitation, in a simple manly fashion that even an opponent would have found it hard to criticize.

One thing was very noticeable, and that was the distinct confession of high principles and unaccommodating scruples. He was not preaching a sermon—in fact, his remarks were put with so much care to avoid a didactic and hortatory tone that possibly the less educated among his hearers were not very sure what he meant; but Caryl Lingard went a long step beyond the average Parliamentary candidate with his profession that he is not coming forward in his own interest, but in that of his constituents.

Caryl confessed frankly that under certain conditions the ostensible good of a constituency, or even of the country, might have to give way to higher considerations; and he confessed in a gentle matter-of-course fashion, as though equally sure that none of his hearers would wish him to act otherwise, that it would make no difference to his own conduct if they should.

It was so exactly what Douglas himself would have wished to have said if it had been possible for them to change places that he could not help listening with pleasure, oddly dashed with doubt and pain.

Presently there was a pause, while Caryl, who had invited questions, waited to see if any would be put, and Mr. Allardyce looked over the notes of an oration that he intended to make presently, and Frank Allardyce was obviously bursting to deliver one of those boyish, good-natured, stammering repetitions of what they had just heard, by which his father and he hoped that he was training himself to become an eloquent speaker.

Douglas was dreamily wondering what would be the effect if he got up and inquired whether their honorable friend really meant all that he had just said, or whether this night's speech was merely part of an extraordinary clever piece of acting? The room was very dark now; he could only distinguish a face or two here and there, but he could imagine them; the open-mouthed astonishment of the villagers; Mr. Allardyce's stuttering surprise and indignation; Caryl's—but no! he could not imagine what Caryl would say or do, any more than what Celia would think.

A working man got up and began very deliberately to put some question. But before he had uttered six words of circuitous preface another voice broke in, though no one else had risen—a peculiar voice, with a very strong countrified twang which was not quite that of the Brentwood and Sudbrook countryside.

"Tell us what became of all your old uncle's money!" it said.

There was a sort of simultaneous gasp of surprise, almost of dismay. Though this was a political meeting, personalities had not been expected at it, any more than at a dull, decorous, parochial gathering.

Then, after a momentary pause, Caryl rose. He had been pale before, perhaps from the strain of speaking in that close, low-ceiled room, but he was just a shade paler now.

"I do not think," he said, "that that question concerns either my political convictions or my personal character. If the gentleman who spoke will give us any reason why it should be answered now, I will endeavor to satisfy him."

There was another pause. Douglas could hear his own heart beating, and the quick panting breath of some one near him, quick and irregular, like that of some terrified animal; but no one spoke.

Then a sudden impulse brought him to his feet, his face in the dim light looking startlingly like that of his brother, with the same pale tense passion in both.

The rustic audience stared wonderingly from one to the other, but without having opened his lips Douglas sat down again. He had meant to say that it was by no wish of his that this question had been put, and that no word that he had ever said to any one there present could have given rise to it.

And then he remembered that no one there but himself and Caryl knew that he had any interest in a question relating to their uncle's money—he had for the moment forgotten Mrs. Lock—and very characteristically he decided that silence was best; that there was no good in connecting himself in these people's minds with the bombshell that had been flung into the midst.

He felt shaken and wrathful, as though some one had dealt him a heavy blow in the face; he felt as though the insult had been flung at him and not at Caryl; but he was glad that he had been able to control himself sufficiently not to speak.

There was an awkward silence, which no one seemed disposed to break, till Mr. Allardyce rose with an air of a man who feels that some one must do something.

His speech was more labored and less genial than usual, but it passed the time on; and when it was ended, since his son Frank was obviously too excited and indignant to be trusted to speak, and Mr. Lingard would not, the meeting was declared at an end.

Douglas went away by himself in the soft summer darkness, not feeling in the humor for sociability, even could he have hoped that he would be welcomed by the group that had come up from Sudbrook so merrily without him. But, angry and puzzled as he was, he could spare a thought or two to wonder whether Celia and Caryl were walking back together, and whether she was teaching him—as half in jest she had professed that she could teach him—how to talk to the people she loved.

(To be Continued.)

South America's Missionary

Rev. Emilio Olsson, the South American missionary, expects soon to return to his field of Gospel labor among the natives of the "Neglected Continent." He will probably spend the remainder of his life in the service of Christ, in the land where he has already been so wonderfully used by God. From time to time his letters of travel and Gospel work, and describing the progress of his missionary movement, will appear in the columns of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. His permanent headquarters will be at Buenos Ayres. Many readers of this journal have already become warmly interested in the work of this self-sacrificing and devoted missionary. It is a work entirely dependent upon faith and supported by the voluntary free-will offerings of those who are interested in the evangelization of the South American races, thousands upon thousands of whom have never yet heard the name of Jesus. All contributions for the Olsson Mission will be received and acknowledged by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH

Up-to-date—its shine comes quick and lasts long—applied with a cloth—makes no dust—it's easily done—a great labor saver.

MADE BY PROPRIETORS OF "RISING SUN STOVE POLISH."

...FOR...
Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Colds, Bronchitis.

For twenty-one years the most successful GERMICIDE in contagious disease. Send for descriptive booklet, containing physicians' testimonials and price list.

Sold by Druggists Generally.

Vapo-Cresolene Co., 69 Wall St., New York, SCHIEFFELIN & CO., N Y U S Agts.

BUY THE BEST.

If you want the best low down wagon you should buy the Electric Handy Wagon. It is the best because it is made of the best material; the best broad tired Electric Wheels; best seasoned white hickory axles; all other wood parts of the best seasoned white oak. The front and rear hounds are made from the best angle steel, which is neater, stronger and in every way better than wood. Well painted in red and varnished. Extra length of reach and extra long standards supplied without additional cost when requested. This wagon is guaranteed to carry 4000 lbs. anywhere Write the Electric Wheel Co., Box 136, Quincy, Illinois, for their new catalogue which fully describes this wagon, their famous Electric Wheels and Electric Feed Cookers.

ELECTRIC

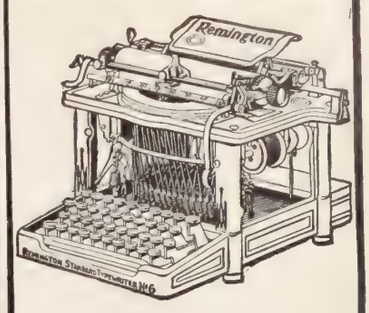
9 CORDS IN 10 HOURS

BY ONE MAN, with the FOLDING SAWING MACHINE. It saws down trees. Folds like a pocketknife. Saws any kind of timber on any kind of ground. One man can saw MORE timber with it than 2 men in any other way, and do it EASIER. 165,000 in use. Send for FREE illustrated catalogue showing latest IMPROVEMENTS and testimonials from thousands. First order secures agency. Address FOLDING SAWING MACHINE CO., 55-57-59 No. Jefferson St., H-20, Chicago, Ill.



This machine will work as no other typewriter works: more easily, more swiftly, longer and better; because it's a

Remington

WYCKOFF, SEAMANS & BENEDICT, 327 Broadway, New York.

EUCALOL Cures Catarrh

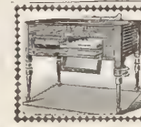
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE says:

Moisture of the mucous membrane of the nose is as essential to the sense of smell as that of the tongue is to taste.

EUCALOL is a treatment that is based on antiseptic cleanliness. It has cured thousands of cases of catarrh, grippe and colds.

FREE OFFER To prove its merit we will send free on request a large package of Eucalol. Don't delay. Write to-day.

THE EUCALOL CO., 108 Fulton Street, New York.



SUCCESSFUL INCUBATORS.

Standard machines, neat, handsome, perfect regulator, trayacmustes safety lamp, nursery, all improvements. Low prices and fully guaranteed. Plans for poultry and brooder houses. Catalogue in four languages 6c.

DES MOINES INCUBATOR CO., Box 71. Des Moines, Ia.

TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS,

102 Fulton st., New York, sell all makes under half price. Don't buy before writing them for unprejudiced advice and prices. Exchanges. Immense stock for selection. Shipped for trial. Guaranteed first class. Dealers supplied. 52-page illustrated catalogue free.

RUPTURE CURED

The Improved Elastic Truss is the only Truss in existence that is worn with absolute comfort night and day, and it retains the rupture under the hardest exercise or severest strain, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure. Comfortable Belts made to reduce corpulency. The use of these belts reduces your size and leaves no room for surplus fat to accumulate. They can be used after any operations. Our goods are not sold by agents or druggists. Send for free pamphlets to the Improved Elastic Truss Co., 768 Broadway, N. Y. Established 18 years.

SILK REMNANTS FOR CRAZY WORK

A big package of BEAUTIFUL SILK REMNANTS, 100 to 125 pieces, all cut and trimmed, selected from large accumulation of silks especially adapted for all fancy work. We give more than double any other offer, remember all large sizes, in beautiful colors and designs. Sent for 25 cents in stamps or silver. Address ARIS SILK CO., Box 3015, New York City, N. Y.

WANTED.—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. R·I·P·A·N·S 10 for 5 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples of one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce Street, New York.

STEREOPTICONS MAGIC LANTERNS AND SLIDES CONDENSED CATALOGUE FREE RILEY BROS. 16 BEEKMAN ST. NEW YORK

"To save time is to lengthen life." Do you value life? Then use SAPOLIO

HEART DISEASE

Some Facts Regarding the Rapid Increase of Heart Trouble.

Heart trouble, at least among the Americans is certainly increasing and while this may be largely due to the excitement and worry of American business life, it is more often the result of weak stomachs, of poor digestion.

Real organic disease is incurable; but not one case in a hundred of heart trouble is organic.

The close relation between heart trouble and poor digestion is because both organs are controlled by the same great nerves, the Sympathetic and Pneumogastric.

In another way, also the heart is affected by the form of poor digestion which causes gas and fermentation from half digested food. There is a feeling of oppression and heaviness in the chest caused by pressure of the distended stomach on the heart and lungs, interfering with their action; hence arises palpitation and short breath.

Poor digestion also poisons the blood, making it thin and watery, which irritates and weakens the heart.

The most sensible treatment for heart trouble is to improve the digestion and to insure the prompt assimilation of food.

This can be done by the regular use after meals of some safe, pleasant and effective digestive preparation, like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may be found at most drug stores, and which contain valuable, harmless, digestive elements in a pleasant, convenient form.

It is safe to say that the regular persistent use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at meal time will cure any form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

Full sized package of these tablets sold by druggists at 50 cents. Little book on stomach troubles mailed free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

RUBIFOAM

appeals to all good people that give cleanliness a careful consideration. As a cleansing and preserving agent

FOR THE TEETH

RUBIFOAM is perfect.

Price, 25 cents. At Druggists. Sample vial of Rubifoam mailed free on receipt of postage, 2 cents. Address F. W. Hunt & Co., Lowell, Mass.

The Christian Herald in Ceylon

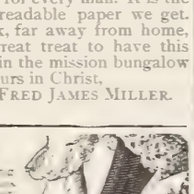
HAPPY VALLEY, HANTANE, CEYLON.

DEAR EDITOR:

My wife and I unite in expressing our entire satisfaction with the premium Bibles sent; they are perfection. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is eagerly looked for every mail. It is the brightest and most readable paper we get. After the day's work, far away from home, friends, etc., it is a great treat to have this bright paper to read in the mission bungalow in the evening. Yours in Christ,

REV. FRED JAMES MILLER.

RESTFUL



and beautiful for covering for mother, baby, room. Warm feet and Feet-ease are assured wearers of

PARKER'S Arctic Socks

pair, 25c.

At store. Best dealers handled boots. Send by mail. Parker pays postage. Catalog free. J. H. Parker, Dept., E, 108 Bedford St., Boston.

DITMAN'S SEA-SALT

TONIC, STRENGTHENING, INVIGORATING

Ditman, 1 Barclay Street, New York

E TO ORDER CLOTHING

High BBLS

Sam[illegible] FREE. We pay expressage. Address JULIUS HINES & SON, Baltimore, M. D. Dept. 218.

$75 MONTH AND EXPENSES; no [illegible] Peare Mfg. Co., Box A, C[illegible]

Prayer that Obtains

Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for Jan. 7. Luke 11:5-13.

ONE of the most important petitions presented to Christ by his disciples was that which elicited the parable connected with the topic: "Lord teach us to pray." Christ being what he was, the disciples would have been grievously neglectful of their opportunity if they had failed to present that petition. Who could tell them so well as he, how to approach God? Who could explain so clearly as he, the conditions of successful prayer? Whether Christ laid down rules in his answer, that Luke does not report, we can never know; but we do know that the answer given by Luke does not contain conditions which Christ regarded as essential. On other occasions, he mentioned characteristics essential to successful prayer, that are not enforced in this passage of St. Luke's Gospel. From Christ's answer, as it is recorded here, we might infer that only importunity was essential. The man in the parable got his loaves because his friend realized that he would lose a night's rest if he did not give them to him. The inference would be that a man could get anything he wanted by persistence in begging for it. Such an inference we know is false. Every Christian knows by experience that mere persistence in pleading will not be sufficient to bring the blessing.

A petitioner so distinguished as Paul could not get his "thorn in the flesh" removed, though he besought it thrice of the Lord; and Christ himself could not escape "the cup," though he pleaded that it might pass from him. Evidently, God does not resemble the man in the parable, who rose and gave his friend as many loaves as he needed. There are some prayers that will never be answered, howsoever earnestly they are pressed. It is well that it is so, for if it were not, men would often get answers that would be injurious to them. Men must not place faith in their own prayers. People who ask their friends to pray for them, "to pray as they never prayed before," show that they do not understand the character of God. A mere clamoring for a boon, a persevering pressing for it, cannot alone secure it. Every wise father knows that there are times when he ought to refuse requests that his child makes, and not to yield to teasing and coaxing. For his child's own sake, he must say "No," and must persist in his refusal. The physician in a critical case must veto his patient's desire for some food or drink that the patient craves, or some indulgence that he desires. For the patient's own sake he must be firm and turn a deaf ear to his pleading. The Christian may surely place as much confidence in God as the child places in his father and the patient in his physician, and acquiesce in a decision dictated by love as well as by superior wisdom.

If God answered prayer in an audible voice, we should often hear him say, as Christ said to his disciples: "Ye know not what ye ask." The proper attitude of the suppliant is one of complete submission. It is only when Christ's words abide in him and he abides in Christ (John 15:7) that he can be trusted to receive the boons that he asks. When he is in that condition, his prayers are the presentation of requests such as the Father is pleased to grant; and are even then, offered subject to his will. Why, then, it may be asked, should prayer be offered at all, if only such prayers are answered as God approves. But the reply must be that God invites and encourages prayer and expressly promises that he will answer. Besides, the Christian surely does not desire any gift that God, who loves him, would withhold! "The prayer that obtains," is the prayer that is in accord with his will, the prayer of one whose supreme desire is that God's "will be done on earth, as it is in heaven," and whose profound conviction it is that no better condition can ever come to him as an individual, or to the human race as a whole, than the operation of that will. Thus in approaching God, it becomes us to realize his character and to place in him complete and absolute trust.

Good Causes Helped

The following sums have been contributed by our readers for the support of the worthy causes mentioned below:

Door of Hope.

[illegible]	$[illegible]
H M M [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Total	$4

Foreign Missions.

[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
I H N, Troy	50
R K [illegible]	[illegible]
Total	$183 55

Mrs. Rose H. Lathrop.

[illegible]	[illegible]
2 Friends, Long Hill	1 00
Mrs. Neil McVicar	5 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Total	$[illegible]

Jerry McAuley Mission

Prev. ack	$31 00
S R, Local	50
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Total	$[illegible]

Gospel Work in Philippines.

Prev. ack	$[illegible]
B P, Waupaca	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Total	$[illegible]

Miss Emma Nason's Missionaries.

Prev. ack	$18 50
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
J A R, Summit	50
[illegible]	[illegible]
Lizzie Ratcliff	1 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Cash, Paterson	2 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Total	$50 10

Rev. Jos. Norwood.

[illegible]	$[illegible]
W B Brown	5 00
L M Brigham	5 00
Total	$[illegible]

Rev. Jos. Norwood.

Prev. ack	$6 30
Mrs J M Parmley	2 50
Total	$8 80

Miss Anna C. Ruddy

[illegible]	[illegible]
Hattie B Brown	3 00
Total	$8 00

Abanyarra Redemption Fund.

Prev. ack	$[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Total	$[illegible]

Texas Flood Sufferers

Prev. ack	$409 34
O R Wilson	2 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Miss Ellen Walker	10
—, Riegelsville	20 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
Marina Lane	1 00
Total	$441 [illegible]

Mrs. Almira S. Steele, Home for the Friendless.

[illegible]	[illegible]
H [illegible] W [illegible]	$2 00
Mary McKee	1 00
Total	$3 00

Miss Curry's Day Nursery

Prev. ack	$3 00
Hattie B Brown	3 00
Total	$6 00

Miss Reed's Mission to Lepers

Prev. ack	$45 60
J A R, Summit	50
Wesley Hughes	1 00
J A W, Telluride	2 50
Mrs. [illegible] D Bradford	1 00
Belle Rust	1 00
Total	$51 60

Berlin Home.

Prev. ack	$951 94
[illegible] W [illegible]	25 00
Mrs Rose Griffin	12 00
Lillie T Smith	1 00
Mary A Sherman	50
M [illegible]	4 00
P A F, Albion	2 00
A [illegible] and Annex	23 57
Mrs E L Payne	4 00
—, Lamar	3 00
Hattie B Brown	3 00
—, Lansing	2 00
Mrs. C F W [illegible]	25
Carrie B Pine	2 00
L E B, Salem	75
Wm Hastie Smith Jr.	1 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
Mary A Sherman	50
M [illegible]	2 00
Martha Borland	3 00
Cash, Paterson	5 00
A Friend, B B	2 00
O W K, Mt Vernon	1 00
Mrs H B Payne	4 00
C M, Somerville	1 00
N [illegible] M [illegible]	2 00
Friends, Topsfield	2 50
S C Burnham	2 00
Belle Rust	1 00
Mrs Wm Hendricks	1 00
J Hannibal	1 00
Mrs J B Campbell	1 00
Total	$1057 31

Tombs Chaplain's Mission

Carrie B Pine	$2 00

Any Good Cause.

Prev. ack	$244 27
L J Conkey	2 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
C Christiansen	25 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Henry Wyse	1 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Mrs [illegible]	[illegible]
Mrs M Bigelow	2 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
Mrs A Deeds	1 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Wm Luck	1 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
E M Logan	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
A friend, Monrovia	5
H W M	1 00
Mrs Thos Rowland	[illegible]
Wm Turner	[illegible]
Y B Group	[illegible]
Geo A Connolly	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]

A Revolution in Home Music!

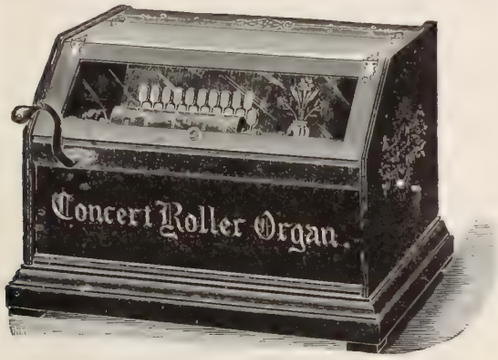
An Organ that Can be Played by any Child.
No Break Between Verses. A Musical Marvel.

$12 ON INSTALMENTS

ONLY A DOLLAR DOWN
AND A DOLLAR A MONTH

Or, TEN DOLLARS SPOT CASH

Five Indestructible Tunes Go with Each Instrument and Others of Your Own Selection May be had, Express Charges Prepaid, at Only 30 Cents Each



CONCERT ROLLER ORGAN
Weight, Boxed, 30 lbs., Length, 19 in., Width, 16 in., Height, 14 in.

These Beautiful Instruments are the result of many years' experience in the manufacture of organs, and are confidently offered to the public. These musical wonders use no paper, but music is obtained from a roller furnished with pins. These pins operate upon valve keys, made of hard steel. All the working parts of the instrument are easily accessible, and are made of solid metal, the rollers and keys being mounted on metal castings. Nothing has been omitted to give these grand instruments their crowning qualities of extreme simplicity and durability. There is no limit to either kind or quality of music. They will play Hymns and Popular Airs, with a clearness and accuracy, and degree of execution which but few performers can equal. A mere child can play them. They have the carrying quality of a Large Pipe Organ, and are the only instruments that will render slow and sacred music with a powerful, sustaining organ tone. They will play tunes as long as desired, without any break, instead of stopping to change the piece, as must be done with organettes. They are beautifully finished in solid walnut. The reeds are organ size, and the volume of tone will fill a hall. They are Genuine Musical Instruments, which anyone can play, without teacher or practice, and which good musicians can recommend. The price is nothing compared with their intrinsic value. They are equal in every way to a $50 Music Box, so far as the quality of the music is concerned, and also in point of construction, finish, and decoration. This organ is the most simple, perfect, marvelous, instructive, enjoyable, and amusing musical instrument in the world. FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS, it is just what is wanted. It will play all the sacred music, and as many verses as desired, without stopping to replace the music roller. This great advantage no other instrument has. By this means, a result is attained that was never reached before.

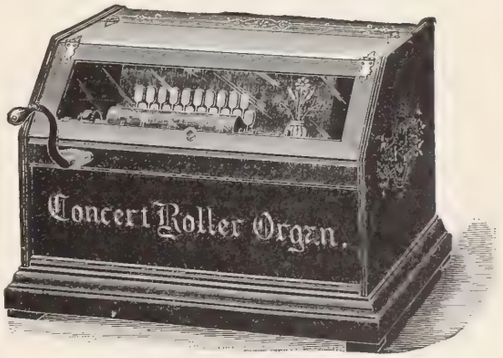
Make Your Evenings at Home Cheerful and Musical

No Other Automatic Instrument in the World Can do it Better than This

LIST OF SACRED TUNES

Rollers for the following Sacred Tunes can now be supplied at 30 cents each, delivered:

1 The Sweet Bye-and-Bye
2 Nearer, my God, to Thee
3 I need Thee every hour
4 From Greenland's Icy Mountains
5 Duke Street
6 Onward, Christian Soldiers
7 Ariel
8 Sweeping through the Gates
9 I'll stand by until the morning
10 The Shining Shore—Nelson
11 Sicilian Hymn
12 Hold the Fort
13 Just as I am
14 America
15 Antioch
16 O to be over yonder
17 What hast Thou done for me
18 He leadeth me
19 I love to tell the story
20 The home over there
21 Is my name written there
22 Almost Persuaded
23 Where is my boy to-night
24 Bringing in the Sheaves
25 Let the lower lights be burning
26 Only an armor bearer
27 I will sing of my Redeemer
28 He will hide me
29 Pull for the Shore
30 Precious Name
31 Christmas
32 Hark, the herald angels sing
33 Harwell
34 Hendon
35 Manoah
36 Pleyel's Hymn
37 Zion
38 Warwick
39 Abide with me
40 Dennis
41 I hear Thy welcome voice
42 Even me
43 Watchman tell us of the night
44 St. Martin's
45 Federal Street
46 Hursley
47 Mozart
48 Webb
49 Bowen
50 Geneva
51 St. Catherine
52 Luton
53 Brownell
54 Hummel
55 Paradise
56 Wilson
57 Repose
58 In the silent midnight-watches
59 Portuguese Hymn
60 Wellesley
61 Rathbun
62 Come ye disconsolate
63 Belmont
64 Finnish National Hymn
65 What a friend we have in Jesus
66 Church
67 Rock of Ages
68 Sweet Hour of Prayer
69 Beautiful Valley of Eden
70 Greenville
71 Old Hundred
72 Pass me not
73 Jesus, lover of my Soul
78 Beulah Land
79 I'm a Shepherd of the Valley
80 Shall we meet beyond the river
81 We shall meet beyond the river
82 Fisk
83 Mendebras
84 Aletta
85 I am praying for you
86 More love to Thee, O Christ
87 Go bury thy sorrow
88 Whosoever will
89 Softly and tenderly
90 All the way my Saviour leads me
91 Rescue the perishing
92 Follow on
93 Come, Great Deliverer, come
99 Onward go
100 We're marching to Jesus
601 To the work
602 Only a step to Jesus
603 Knocking, Knocking
604 Thy Servant I will be
605 From Heaven I am coming
606 Be Joyful O my soul
607 It is now time
608 Thank Almighty God
609 Carried by the Angels
610 Move Forward
611 Some sweet day
612 Somewhere to-night
613 Wait and murmur not
614 Come, Spirit, come
615 Hiding in the Rock
616 When my Saviour I shall see
617 God be with you
618 Anywhere with Jesus
619 Trust and obey
620 Draw me closer to Thee
621 Seeking for me
622 Lebanon
623 The Garden of the Lord
624 Duane Street
625 Saul
626 Walk in the light
627 Sabbath
628 Balerma
629 Marlow
630 The Prodigal Child
631 Autumn
632 Leighton
633 When Jesus comes
634 Shall we gather at the River
635 Happy day
643 Coming to-day
644 Come to me
645 In the shadow of His Wings
646 Safe to Land
647 Will you meet me
648 The Story Never old
649 Stand on the Rock
650 My Sabbath Home
651 At the Door
652 Little children, you may come



CONCERT ROLLER ORGAN
Weight, Boxed, 30 lbs., Length, 19 in., Width, 16 in., Height, 14 in.

653 Pilgrim's Song
654 The Bright Forever
655 They gather one by one
656 Gathering Home
657 Hold on
658 The Beautiful Vale
659 Glory to Jesus
660 Silver Street
661 Sicily
662 Migdol
663 Louvan
664 Cambridge
665 Lanesboro
672 St. Bride

The Concert Roller Organ has a fuller volume of tone, and far more sustaining power than any two pianos. At the same time it is so fully under control, by means of a swell attachment, that the softest passages can be rendered with exquisite delicacy. For evening entertainments, etc., it is most admirable, and when otherwise musicians would have to be engaged, it will save its cost in one night; and is, upon the whole, the most perfect mechanical instrument in design, operation and effect, that has yet been produced.

The case is strongly made of solid black walnut, and is elegantly finished, forming a handsome parlor ornament.

By means of new and automatic machinery, the manufacturers are enabled to produce music rollers in large numbers so that we can offer them to the public at a price not exceeding the average cost of music paper; and a roller will give a very much better performance, besides Outlasting a Thousand Paper Sheets.

There are now ready over Eight Hundred sacred and popular tunes which have been arranged for the Roller Organs.

REMEMBER, ONLY

$1.00 DOWN

And One Dollar a Month for Eleven Months, or Ten Dollars Spot Cash, purchases this Organ and Five Music Rolls of your own selection from above list. Full list of Sacred, Secular and National Airs accompany each Instrument. Extra Tunes, delivered, only 30 cents each.

We send the Instrument by Freight, charges collect at your end. ADDRESS TO-DAY

The Christian Herald Book Department, Bible House, New York City

A LIBERAL EDUCATION NOW PLACED WITHIN EASY REACH OF EVEN THE POOREST!

Unprecedented Unparalleled Only One Dollar Down Almost Incredible Yet Absolutely True

SECURES THE TWELVE LARGE VOLUMES (NEARLY 10,000 PAGES) CONSTITUTING THE WONDERFUL

World-Wide Encyclopedia

The Greatest Compendium of History, Geography, Science, Biography, Art, and Literature ever Offered to the American Public.

REGULAR PRICE $30=CUT IN TWO AT A NET SAVING TO YOU OF $15

Thousands of commendably ambitious men and women now literally hungering and thirsting for knowledge, but prevented by circumstances from attending the higher institutions of learning, will hail with delight this exceptionally liberal proposition by which, on the payment of ONLY ONE DOLLAR down, they may secure this Treasure-House of Knowledge, and henceforth eat and drink to their heart's content. This golden opportunity will surely prove the turning-point for the better in the life of many who read this offer.

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA treats of every subject, great and small, within the range of human knowledge. It contains all the information required for the Statesman, the Scholar, the Student, the Professional and Business Man, the Farmer, the Manufacturer, the Mother, the Wife, and the Housekeeper.

The Rich Store-House of World-Wide knowledge has, with infinite labor, been thoroughly overhauled; its treasury of facts conserved; its wealth of material utilized.

12 Extra Large Volumes

9,689 Large Pages—96 Colored Maps

Over 15 Million Words—Measures Open 9½ x 15 Inches.
Whole Set Measures on Shelf 26 inches long by 9½ inches high.
Enlarged and Revised—Including Spanish-American War.
Superbly and Substantially Bound in Rich Cloth and Gold.
Every Set Accompanied by a Key to Systematic Study.

This May be the Last Chance

You will ever have to Purchase a Work of this Grade at so low a Figure. Remember, you Pay Only One Dollar Down and then a Dollar a Month until Paid, or ten per cent. Discount for Spot Cash.

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA brings the history of Science, Literature, Invention, Commerce, Geography and Discovery, and the Mental and Moral Development of the Race practically down to date. All the Recent Discoveries and the Gigantic Growth of Commerce and Manufacture, are Intelligently and Faithfully Recorded.

In dealing with the Great Commercial Centres of this Country, the editors of THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA have with great care, and at enormous expense, obtained the Statistics of the Growth and Development of Population and Manufacture, direct from the Civic Authorities, the Board of Trade, and the Chamber of Commerce in each city.

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA answers Every Question, however abstruse. A Digest of all Knowledge from the Earliest Time is contained within its pages, and no person, however untutored, provided he can read, need lack for full information on any subject within the scope of human knowledge, once he is the possessor of this great work.

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA is very handsomely and durably bound in modern silk finished cloth with genuine gold stamp.

These Twelve Large Octavo Volumes, aggregating nearly TEN THOUSAND PAGES, make a most imposing array. Attractive enough to Ornament the best and costliest library in the world. No Two Hundred Dollar Encyclopedia can make a better exhibit on the book-shelf, and the ownership of this great work, a Complete Library in itself, will rank its possessor among the intellectually progressive men of the day.

"What Man Has Done Man Can Do"

ABRAHAM LINCOLN at twenty-two simply knew how to read, write and cipher.

ANDREW JOHNSON, President of the United States, NEVER ATTENDED SCHOOL. His wife was his only teacher. She taught him how to read.

HIRAM SIBLEY, formerly President of the Western Union Telegraph Co., left his father's farm at fifteen to learn a trade. After having given away millions of dollars during his life-time, he died worth many millions more a few years ago.

PETER COOPER, whose name will ever be cherished in the hearts of the many thousands of young men and young women who have been graduated, free of expense, from the night school of Cooper Institute, himself never had more than one year's schooling.

Now if these men, under such unfavorable circumstances, succeeded in achieving fame and fortune by dint of industrious application to study and work, why need any of the tens of thousands of young people who have in them the making of great men and great women, despair of reaching the height of their ambition with such an opportunity as this, placing within their easy reach everything necessary for a liberal education?

HOW TO GET

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA: Send us One Dollar, and your full name, with full shipping instructions, and immediately we will send you the Whole TWELVE Volumes of THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA, neatly boxed, freight charges payable at your end.

After that, send us One Dollar each month until paid.

No simpler plan was ever devised. You cannot go astray. The terms of easy payment, which we have adopted, will place within the reach of every man and woman, young and old, who is fortunate enough to act quickly, the most serviceable Encyclopedia for everyday use which the world has ever produced.

Remember, it is ONE DOLLAR DOWN to get the books, and then One Dollar each Month until paid. These Payments are so easy that you will never miss them, and while you are paying for the books, you are enjoying all the advantages which the possession of this great work confers.

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA has the Imprint and Endorsement of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, as a guarantee of its superior excellence and complete reliability.

Address CHRISTIAN HERALD BOOK DEPARTMENT, Bible House, New York